Bereuter Plans Office Change

In a belt-tightening move, 1st District Congressman Doug Bereuter plans to reorganize his full-time Wayne service office by June or July.

The reorganization will bring the Wayne office into a "circuit rider" concept the second-term congressman has been working on for several months.

"My service office is not being closed," Bereuter told The Wayne Herald Friday night during a visit with Farm Bureau presidents from a seven county area in northeastern Nebraska.

"WE ARE GOING to continue with the service office here in Wayne," Bereuter said. "We are looking at a number of alternatives, but the probability is that it will be a part time office by June or July."

Bereuter expects to shut down office operations at space rented from Columbus Federal Savings & Loan Association, 220 West Seventh, after he has found suitable office space on a "shared basis" elsewhere in Wayne.

"We are looking at a number of arrangements for sharing some space," Bereuter said. "I've talked with your new Chamber (of Commerce) manager, Roger Toomey, about the possibility of sharing space."

"I think there are a number of things we could do there that would be of mutual benefit," he added. "But we have to look in to the legal implications of whether or not I can rent that kind of space under the House rules."

BEREUTER said the reorganization is partly due to the pressure of inflation on his administrative office budget. "Inflation hits the congressional budget just as it does any other budget," he said. "We've tried not to increase the budget but inflation has pushed it up, among other things such as air fares."

The congressman said another factor in the planned change involved staff service for his constituency.

"There's been some difficulty in using a person up here as advantageously as I had hoped to," he explained. "For instance we cannot hook up to the FTS (government telephone service) here. And since we do so much of our business by telephone, we need to keep more of a limit on those kinds of costs.

Dan Vodvarka, the congressman's field representative for the northern part of District 1 will continue serving the area, according to Bereuter.

"WE MAY TRY a circuit rider approach, continuing to use Dan Vodvarka in Norfolk, Wayne and South Sioux City," he said. "And though we'll no longer have the same office space, we expect to have the same telephone number and U.S. Postal Service box address here," he said.

Under the plan, Vodvarka would service Bereuter's constituency out of all three offices by traveling to each on a schedule that would put the field representative in each office on a part time basis.

Bereuter said the scheduling and hours have not been worked out yet, but that he hoped it would be designed so that Wayne remained the key office for the northern part of his district.

The Wayne community has been very helpful to us and we want to maintain it as the primary office for northeast Nebraska, he said.

Watching Wayne County's Wild Goose

MOTHER NATURE offers a multitude of artistic creations along the highways and byways of rural America. Sometimes her masterpieces are intricate patterns of gentle wild flowers tossed by a prairie wind. And, at other times, the violence of a passing storm twists the prairie world into shapes that take on the characteristics of other creatures. This "wild goose" was seen landing in the briars and brambles of a newly plowed meadow between Winside and Hoskins. Charred and twisted, the weather-whitened, tree-stump statue stands guard of nearby shelterbelts and rolling farmland.

Congressman: Reagan Farm Bill Faces Cool Reception

The White House's proposed farm bill is expected to get a "cool reception" from the House and Senate agriculture committees.

That's the word northeast Nebraska Farm Bureau officers heard from 1st District Congressman Doug Bereuter Friday night in Wayne.

Not only is President Ronald Reagan's farm bill a "little late" getting to the Hill (Capitol Hill), said Bereuter, but members of the agriculture committees in both houses are coming up with budget proposals well over the White House plan.

BEREUTER told more than 16 Nebraska Farm Bureau officers, including presidents of chapters from Wayne, Dakota, Stanton, Knox, Thurston, Cuming and Colfax counties, he had just testified before the House and Senate Agriculture Committee hearings.

He said he presented testimony that included input from his advisory committee meetings throughout the 1st District — including one in Wayne — and a mail survey of farmers he had conducted earlier this year.

Bereuter said that one of the reasons for the delay in the farm bill was the Reagan administration's difficulty in filling second and third-level positions in Washington D.C. He said it involved senators wrangling over "favorites" and "some White House in fighting."

Background checks on appointees are taking a long time, the former Nebraska state legislator said.

"THE BLOODY time is going to come when the subcommittee and committee proposals reach appropriations," Bereuter told the farmers, who had gathered in Wayne at his request.

The second term congressman shared some information taken from subcommittee reports on loan rates, target prices and the reserve program.

"Of course, it's all wishful thinking if we stay within the spending ceiling," he remarked before sharing the figures with Farm Bureau members.

Bereuter mentioned that one of the proposals involves establishing a farm exports revolving fund — a feature of the farm bill he said he has advocated for some time.

Another feature of the farm bill proposals involves a stipulation that prevents the agriculture sector of the economy from taking the brunt of any future embargoes.

BEREUTER, who was in Norfolk Saturday, said he would be working hard for that aspect of the program. "I hope that will be added," he said. "Then, the ag sector will not have to take the brunt of the cost of an embargo, agriculture could only be a part of a total embargo."

During a question and answer session,

Wayne County's Merle Ring asked about recent reports of big corporation money being invested in Nebraska farm land.

"Some of our sons just don't have a chance to get started," Ring said.

Bereuter said the U.S. Department of Agriculture has a study on that, but that "some things are happening rapidly," before it (the study) gets out. He made reference to Prudential's recent purchase of farmland outside Lincoln.

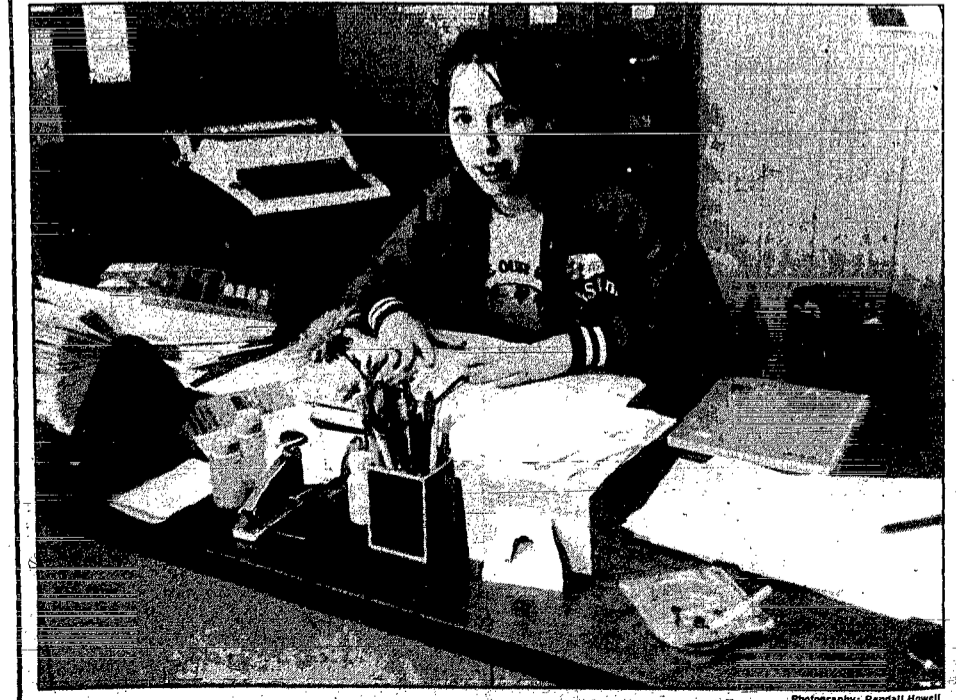

"BECAUSE of the tax structure, I'm afraid that situation may be duplicated many times in the future," Bereuter said, reminding the audience that as a state legislator he was against corporate farming bill for that very reason. "I had few friends then," he said.

Another Farm Bureau member said: "Everything that's moving is to foreign buyers...sometimes you can study too long. The damage is done and how do you undo it."

Bereuter agreed. And, in response to another question, he said the soil conservation budget was not undergoing an "absolute cut" but that its increase would not match the rate of inflation.

The congressman said that one area of "real budget increases" for agriculture is in the area of research — spending he said he approves of.

Lynne Wylie, clerk-treasurer for the Village of Winside, works at her desk in an office on the east end of Main Street.

Young Winside Woman Wears Several Hats While Working for Her Clerk's Certificate

By Randall Howell
Lynne Wylie is going for it.

The 22-year-old Winside native has her sights set on being the youngest certified municipal clerk in Nebraska.

Already, she's clerk-treasurer of the Village of Winside, a post she has held since October of 1979.

WYLIE ADMITS the road to her goal is not going to be easy, but then, she's no stranger to rough roads.

The daughter of Bruce and Bonnie Wylie, Winside, Lynne's a young, single mother making it in a work-a-day world geared — more often than not — to couples handling family budgets, jobs and child care.

With help from grandfather Bruce, a village trustee, and grandmother Bonnie, Lynne's 5-year-old Jason gets the care he needs while she's at work.

And, when the 5 o'clock whistle blows, the 1976 graduate of Winside High School heads for her mobile home in the village's east end.

There, Wylie tends to "Jason, the most important thing in my life."

Working in her own kitchen, which she frequently turns into an art studio, Wylie designs, makes, shapes, fires and paints the ceramic figures ordered by her customers.

She's been into art since her junior year in high school, but "didn't get going seriously" until after her graduation (salutatorian) during this country's bicentennial celebration.

Wylie has her own kiln and gathers her supplies from art stores throughout northeastern Nebraska. Like any serious artist, she does a lot of her work for herself, but manages to work in anniversary and baby plaques for friends and relatives.

WYLIE ADMITS she has trouble parting with some of the ceramic figures she makes, but a broad smile crosses her face when she recounts the number of pieces she has made for Winside area people.

"Oh, they're hard to part with sometimes," she said. "But then I don't make any money." Her favorite — one she refuses to part with — is her "fox pot," a planter she designed and made.

"It's a planter with little foxes, mice, bugs and flowers in a scene around the outside," she explained. "It's a ceramic tree stump."

In her mobile home kitchen-turned-art studio, Wylie glazes, stains and antiques her work after her 40 hours "plus" at the village clerk's office, after tending to the needs of her son, and after the demands of another part-time job as bartender at Lee & Rostle's in Winside.

That leaves her precious little time for her "huge garden" and for being "outdoors doing anything" in all kinds of weather. "I need the money," she said.

THE OLDEST — and only girl — of four, Wylie attended grade school in Winside and was active in high school clubs and earned a letter for her work as manager of the boys' track team and the Wildcat football squad.

A member of the high school annual staff, Wylie also worked on the school newspaper while taking "mostly business courses and helping in the high school office."

Her father, in addition to being a village trustee, drives truck for Weible Transfer. Her younger brothers are 20-year-old Gary ("Pete"), Greg, 16, and Doug, 12.

Wylie's first job fresh out of high school was with Schmode's Inc., and International Harvester truck dealer in Norfolk, where she worked as a secretary.

JASON WAS born Aug. 2 of that summer, and Wylie returned to work in October, this time at Providence Medical Center in Wayne. She worked with the kitchen staff and then moved to the hospital's housekeeping crew.

With a desire to get back into the business world, Wylie joined Sherry Bros. Wayne, as a bookkeeper in late summer of 1979. Also, See WINSIDE, Page 2

Bonus Bucks Winners

KEITH AND FERN ERICKSON of Wayne get $1,000 worth of bonus bucks after winning the Grand Give-A-Way prize at Bill's G.W. Thursday night. Bill Lueders Jr. was on hand to distribute the bonus bucks, since the lucky winners were shopping in his grocery store when their names were announced. The Ericksons brought the Grand Give-A-Way contest back into the winners column after last week's drawing of Robert Holtgrewe's name. Holtgrewe was not a participating store, so there was no winner that night.

Winside

wanting to be closer to home for Jason's sake, she applied for the village clerk's post in September. She got the post in October and has been working at it ever since. She got the post in October and has been working at it ever since. She got the post in October and has been working at it ever since.

Self-taught, except for a short course on it in Wayne, Wylie bakes, decorates and sells cakes for birthdays, showers and anniversaries. That's my hobby, she said with a grin that leaves the freckles on her angular face.

WITH A QUICK laugh and prep work sense of humor, the Winside clerk treasurer gets very serious when she speaks of her son. When you've been through as much as he and I have, well, he's really special.

It's after 5 and the T-shirt and jeans clad mother wraps up the day's work on her desk. A last minute customer arrives to pay a light bill, approving for her ruffing.

Wylie's fingers race over the adding machine keys, mark the village ledger and hand the villager her receipt.

Already the "youngest" at all those municipal employee conferences, she's earning credit toward her certification while on the job in Winside.

She needs a total of 100 hours in certification to get her certificate. She gets 50 of those credits by attending workshops sponsored by the League of Nebraska Municipalities for three years. Wylie's attended two of them.

That plus her on the job experience, and an opportunity or two to attend other municipal workshops, may give her the boost she needs for certification in the next year or so.

THAT'S IF she finds enough time in her busy schedule, and the village Board of Trustees cooperates with additional training opportunities.

There's no lack of on-the-job training experiences, she said. Under Kenny Brockmoller, who's chairman of the village Board of Trustees, Wylie works in a liaison role among municipal departments, in addition to attending the board's meetings, recording the minutes, posting and paying all bills, collecting accounts for village services — lights, water, garbage and sewer — and handling correspondence.

The full-time post puts her on the front line as coordinator for village projects. She keeps them moving on schedule by preparing specifications for bids and meeting the deadlines for public notices.

AS SHE PUTS on her red and white Winside Wildcats athletic jacket for a brisk end of the clerkday walk home, Wylie checks around the office to see that things are in order.

They are. From the old oil stove near her desk to the coffee cups at the rear of the meeting table. With filing cabinets neat and orderly plants, the office brighteners, tended to and the desktop organized, she heads for the door of the little brick building on the east end of Main Street.

Locking it on her way out, she heads for home, interrupted on the way by a few moments of business, conducted through a pickup window in the middle of the street.

Then it's onward on to Jason's ceramics, cakes, the coming days of village business and the ever present goal — Lynne Wylie's certification.

Godfather's Pizza Picks New Manager

Remodeling of the Wayne Train Depot is underway for a fast-food franchise — Godfather's Pizza — opening in early June.

Wayne's newest eatery will be number nine of 11 owned by Larry Smith of Columbus. The 10th and 11th operations are under construction in Grand Island and Hastings.

The Nebraska pizza franchise owner has signed a long-term lease with depot property owners Bob Carhart and Roy Christensen of Carhart Lumber.

Ken Kwapioski

MANAGER for the new restaurant, which is part of a nationwide chain with 550 stores operating through headquarters in Omaha, is Ken Kwapioski, 19, of Columbus. Kwapioski, son of David and Loretta Kwapioski of Columbus, has been in training as an assistant manager in his hometown Godfather's Pizza for over three years.

Kwapioski will be moving to Wayne soon to hire staff, prepare the restaurant for a June 1 opening and a grand opening party slated for later that month.

The new manager, who attended Platte Technical Community College part-time for two years while with the Columbus operation, has scheduled interviews in Wayne for May 9. While in Wayne this week he said more interviews would be conducted at the restaurant once it opens.

KWAPIOSKI said he plans to hire about 25 Wayne area residents to help operate the restaurant, which will feature a redecorated interior designed to preserve the flavor of the old train depot.

Godfather's Pizza colors of brown and gold will accent the renovation. "We've saved the old wood, the bricks and fixtures to try to preserve the character of the building inside and out," Smith said.

Carhart said he and Christensen were pleased with the efforts to preserve the building. They bought the property in January.

The 2,400 square foot restaurant is expected to seat 90 with ample parking space on lots around the building, Smith said. Fencing will be torn down to accommodate customer parking, he said.

THE RESTAURANT will feature a menu of pizza and sandwiches, soda pop and, eventually, beer — if the application for a license is approved.

Under Nebraska law the license must be held by a person over 21 years of age who is a resident of the county Kwapioski is neither, to date, according to Smith, who said plans are to hire an assistant manager from the community.

Smith said Kwapioski, who had a business administration major at Platte, will be here long enough to train the assistant manager to take over the restaurant manager's post.

Godfather's Pizza originated in Nebraska. The chain opened its first store in Columbus in 1974 and has grown to the current 550 units.

Corrections

A two-vehicle, rear end collision on Wayne's Main Street on Saturday, April 25, resulted in property damage to vehicles driven by Charles Schultz and Douglas Jaeger.

According to Wayne City Police Department reports, the Jaeger car was stopped in the traffic lane behind other vehicles at a red light about 8:34 p.m. The Schultz vehicle struck the Jaeger vehicle from behind, police report.

Thursday's Wayne Herald report inadvertently reversed the identity of the car drivers involved in the accident. The error is regretted.

Also, the businessman who owns Wayne's theaters is Jack March.

In Thursday's newspaper, March's first name was incorrectly published as Jim. The error is regretted.

randall howell . . .

I'd like to talk with you today about some people who are near and dear to me. They are all members of The Wayne Herald staff...and, frankly, I'm darn proud of them. You, no doubt, heard that your community newspaper won first-place honors in its class — 2,500 circulation and above — at the recent 1981 Nebraska Press Association's Better Newspaper Contest. Staffers here last year worked hard enough to win eight individual awards in statewide competition to sweep its class and place fourth against all non-daily newspapers in the state.

AND, THOUGH I certainly had nothing to do with it, I'm proud to be associated with them. They're winners, all...from the gals and guys who deliver it to the homes of our readers to our publisher, J. Alan Cramer, himself.

Getting to know them these past few weeks as, I set the into Wayne, has been a refreshing experience. Chances are you know many of them personally and can vouch for the dedication they show each and every week. Like you, they work some pretty long hours in some pretty thankless situations sometimes. But, you know, they just don't give up. They love it.

I'VE RIDDEN them hard and put them away wet quite a few times already in the four weeks I've been aboard. They bounce back with the resiliency of knee-high corn in the heat of early July.

Like those special people you have working for you, they have a stick to it that sometimes goes beyond their own common sense. Eager to do more than their share, they sometimes get so exhausted producing the newspaper that we make silly mistakes.

But, quick to learn from them, the troops trudge on. They've made my adjustment to a new town and a new job much easier because they care. They care about how I'm doing and they care about our customers — readers, advertisers and merchants alike. And, they've got enthusiasm...just an awful lot of enthusiasm. You know, the kind that rubs off...the kind that keeps you going during the toughest hours.

I LIKE THEM as individuals and as members of a professional crew that's working hard to be better every day.

Right now you're going to have to forgive me for my little salute to their accomplishments. They may not — in their modesty — forgive me, but I ask that you do.

The human quality of this crew comes right through. And, like those people you work with in and around northeast Nebraska, they are all a little crazy in their own way.

Take Ray "Ramondo" (Really, that's what they call him.) Murray, for instance. Best press foreman in these parts, bar none. He's the only guy I know who eats razor blades without chewing them first. He's sort of the backshop guru...the guy everyone goes to when things just gotta get done.

Then, of course, there's "Skinny Linda" Granfield. She's good at bookkeeping and telling raunchy stories about almost anything. And, there's Alyce "Alley Cat" Henschke, the backshop traffic cop. She hammers away at setting type to keep us all on schedule.

FROM THE FRONT counter — where Nancy "Nanny Goat" Neal waits on our customers, handles the circulation, classified and a hundred other things — to the back door — where a dedicated part-time crew puts up with the pounding of the press and black ink over everything to catch, count and bundle newspapers — they all work for you.

There's Bill "I've-got-a-deal-for-you" Carlson pounding the street with advertising services for our merchants, and "Super Newsmen" Randy Hascall who frequently confuses the photo darkroom for a telephone booth and second home. Both claim to understand sports, but only Hascall writes about it.

LaVon "Bubbles" Beckman, who has the fastest keyboard north of the Platte, churns out the local society news with electronic speed (She's worn the point of her computer terminal just below the "home keys.") and accuracy.

Of course, when the going gets tough in the backshop, Brenda "Squeaky" Wittig, Judi "Tuesday" Topp and Trudy "Toofie Fruitt" Muir come to the rescue. They're the paste-up crew and advertising artists all in one package.

AND, IF YOU really want to know what's going on, just ask Dorothy Aurich. She helps on books, sells story tips for next to nothing and allows "Sundowner" Cheryl Erickson to keep a green golf ashtray on their shared desk.

Working with "Ramondo" on the press crew is Alan "Playboy" Pippitt and "Silent Dave" Diediker. Pippitt and Diediker get some help from Mel "Lefty" Baumgardner, who's usually found feeding one of the hungry job-shop presses. He's got a sidekick who does a little bit of everything. She's Doris Claussen.

And, I even heard that Betty Ulrich's coming back to work after arguing with a cast for weeks. And, of course, there's "Marshmallow," and "Spilker" and a host of other part-timers, who just never get their names in the paper.

Maybe this column has given them some recognition they'd just a soon not have, but recognize them I must. They're great and I'm proud of them. I hope you are, too.

Catch you next week

One Viewpoint Bring on the Benches

Boy Scouts and businessmen are, once again, coming to the rescue for downtown Wayne. Irritated, but undaunted by the vandalism that has destroyed over $1,000 worth of trees in the business district, the city's Downtown Improvement Committee is going ahead with a program to replant.

And, this time the committee is working on a plan that would put a protective barrier between the new trees and the vandals. Plans call for the barrier to double as a sidewalk seat for shoppers.

A sample of the barrier can be seen in front of Peoples Natural Gas Co., 208 Main Street. It is an attractive metal-and-wood bench-like barrier that encircles the tree with room for tired shoppers and packages.

There could be a problem, however. There is a city ordinance on the books that apparently prohibits anything from being on the sidewalks of Wayne's business district — except people, of course.

Technically, merchants placing protective bench barriers around the downtown district trees would be a violation of the law, should someone insist that it be enforced to the letter.

The trees are to be planted Monday — 17 of them — and the bench barriers should follow.

Since the barriers must be built, there is plenty of time for the Wayne City Council to amend the ordinance to allow the attractive and protective benches around the trees.

If that does not come to pass, let's hope the spirit of the law is enforced to the extent that unwanted clutter is kept from the streets, but the desirable tree-protecting benches are allowed on the sidewalks.

Perhaps Lisa Christensen of Laurel put it best last week when she said the benches were "the best idea Wayne's ever had" for downtown shoppers.

Another Viewpoint Nebraskans and Arthritis

May is National Arthritis Month. Over 31 million Americans suffer from arthritis, more than from any other disease. It affects one in seven people, one in three families. There are some 240,000 victims in our state alone.

The suffering primarily affects patients and their families, but the economic impact of arthritis touches everyone. Lost wages and lost taxes, together with medical and workman's compensation payments, total some $14 billion each year. Arthritis is the leading cause of industrial absenteeism and second only to heart disease in cause of disability payments. Nebraska's economic impact includes 216,000 working days lost, and $52 million in lost Nebraska wages.

Despite such staggering statistics and prevalence, arthritis remains widely misunderstood. Perhaps, the very fact that arthritis is so wide-spread contributes to the abundance of misconceptions about the disease. Nearly everyone, for example, has heard of some home remedy or new "miracle" treatment for arthritis. However, how many people know that arthritis can be treated, and how to seek out those proper treatments?

It's true that there is no cure for arthritis. Recent years, however, have seen tremendous advances in the treatment and control of the disease. The key is early diagnosis and prompt, proper medical treatment. People who wait for their symptoms to "go away" are often irreparably damaging their chances for successful control of their disease.

Too many advertising messages tend to portray arthritis as the inevitable minor aches and pains which accompany old age. In reality, arthritis can strike at any age, from infancy onward. There are as many as 250,000 children with arthritis, and other forms of the disease — such as rheumatoid arthritis, lupus and ankylosing spondylitis (spinal arthritis) — frequently strike young adults between the ages of 20 and 40. It isn't just a disease of the old, and it isn't just minor aches and pains.

Ralph Nader Bounces Back — Needed or Not

Richard L. Lasher, President
of the United States

It's been so long since I've heard anything about Ralph Nader that frankly I was getting a little concerned something might have happened to America's favorite super-consumer. When we last looked, Ralph was busy organizing what he probably thought would be his most definitive assault yet on American corporations — Big Business Day. Unfortunately, despite all his personal efforts, and sacrifice and pleading and propaganda, the big day was something of a fiasco. It fizzled and flopped.

The good news is Ralph apparently emerged unscathed from that disaster and is busy preparing a brand new venture. In fact, this time around he is going to turn the tables and actually do something for business. I gleaned this little piece of intelligence from a special dispatch in "The New York Times," which announced Nader will be holding a special conference in Washington on May 18, to teach corporations how to hold down their legal fees, because, in his words, "they have gone through the ceiling."

HOW TOUCHING! The very individual who has single handedly pushed for so many of the regulations that caused companies to hire more and more lawyers will now instruct any executive — for only $150, mind you — how to cut the fat from his or her legal expenses. In his interview with the Times, Nader revealed the stunning sweep of his economic insights by pointing out that business "passes the buck to the consumer" every time it raises prices to make up for the billions of dollars it spends in legal fees. Well, I'll be darned!

His solution? I certainly wouldn't want to let the cat out of the bag and risk spoiling Ralph's conference, but I think I have a pretty good idea what he won't be telling his paying corporate guests. Chances are no one will hear Ralph support the President's plan to terminate all federal funding and authority for the Legal Service Corp. (LSC).

That's the organization which supposedly pays some 9,000 professionals in over 300 offices around the country to provide legal counseling to poor people who want to sue or are being sued.

In reality, however, the organization functions as a kind of an enormous CETA program for aspiring young lawyers determined to wage ideological war on private enterprise. As Donald Lambro noted in his excellent book "FAT CITY: How Washington Wastes Your Taxes," "legal services in government... paternalism at its worst... (LSC) assumes the poor will always remain in their disadvantaged state in order to provide employment for a corps of government-paid attorneys who are ready to litigate at the drop of a tort."

Some examples: In Massachusetts, LSC attorneys lobbied for a state income tax and challenged the state's interviews of 15,000 welfare recipients, the purpose of which was to root out fraud. In California, LSC lawyers lobbied to prevent research intended to improve agricultural productivity, as it might have meant a loss of jobs for migrant fruit pickers.

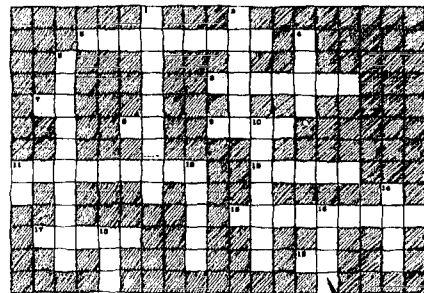

UNFORTUNATELY, Ralph Nader and friends are very supportive of legal services, so his prospective corporate guests shouldn't look for much relief from that particular headache. Nor, come to think of it, should people hold their breath waiting for Nader to denounce any of the regulatory boondoggles he supports that have created so much litigation for corporations over the years. That includes his unremitting defense of one of his favorite toys, the automobile air bag.

But you see, while systematically denouncing any of us who question the cost or value of certain regulations, Nader has invariably accepted the most expensive estimates of their benefits himself. That's why I predict his upcoming conference will ignore the real causes of mushrooming corporate litigation fees, and instead, concentrate on convincing his guests to increase their own regulation of their own legal activities.

Governor Wants to Reduce Elevator Explosion Rates

"Nebraska is number one in the nation in frequency of grain elevator explosions. This is one tragic high ranking statistic that I'm determined to change."

"Nebraska has suffered six explosions at grain elevators in the past few months. A task force — composed of State Fire Marshal Wally Barnett, Jr., State Agriculture Department Director E. Mickey Stewart and State Environmental Control Department Director Dan T. Drain — has been appointed by me to seek ways of preventing future similar losses.

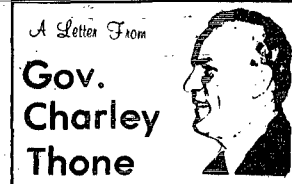

"The task force will study information about each of the recent explosions to see if the same conditions were present at several of the sites and to recommend ways to prevent future tragedies.

"A factor involved in elevator operation in recent years has been federal requirements mandating that dust which in earlier days was vented outside now must be collected and held within elevators. Certainly, it would be preferable to have a little dust in the air than to have deaths, injuries and expensive destruction of property.

"If the Nebraska task force concludes that federal dust collection standards are a principal cause of elevator explosions, we will push hard for change in the federal regulations.

"We don't know for certain how big a factor the federal dust regulations are. We do know that this is only one of several factors that has changed elevator operation.

"Of the nearly 1,000 elevators in the state, a high percentage was built in the 1940's or 1950's. Those elevators were built when the practice was to bring grain directly to the elevator from harvest. Most grain stayed close to a year in an elevator.

A Letter From

"Now, most grain is first stored on the farm. Farmers have their own drying equipment so that the grain coming into an elevator has less moisture than in past years. It also has been handled at least one more time than was the case in years past.

"Today, most grain in an elevator is there only for a relatively short time. That means that much more grain goes through an elevator in a year than in times past.

"These changed conditions make it imperative that each grain elevator practice very strict good housekeeping procedures, safety and fire prevention practices and regular and thorough maintenance.

"We are going to do whatever it takes to make certain Nebraska ends its terrible record for grain elevator explosions, and we're not going to let federal regulations or any other impediments stand in our way of providing better protection for Nebraska lives and property."

Plastic Surgeon Speaks

DR ALF JORDAN, a Sioux City plastic surgeon, spoke to a small group of concerned citizens in Wayne last Monday evening during the second in a series of three CanSurmount meetings planned for the public. The Sioux City surgeon spoke about breast reconstruction for mastectomy patients. Dr. Jordan said breast reconstruction is a two-team concept — first, the doctor addresses the question of cancer and gets rid of it, and, second, the doctor reconstructs the patient. Dr. Jordan pointed out that cancer — or any other serious illness — is not just an illness of an organ, but of the entire body, family and community. "We also need to 'reconstruct' our lifestyle and values," he pointed out. Pictured visiting with Dr. Jordan following his talk in Wayne are, from left, CanSurmount coordinators Joanne Kubik, Mave Middendorf and Ann Barclay. # Speaking of People and she encourages others to become involved in the volunteer program. Thursday was Lynne's last day as a volunteer at the center. Before leaving she says good-by to 10-year-old Joey Schulte.

WAYNE STATE COLLEGE student Lynne Larson feels her volunteer work at the Region IV Children's Developmental Disabilities Center in Wayne was as enjoyable as it was educational.

'Tis a Fine Thing You've Done, Lynne'

"Lynne's the type of person who took it one step further."

Staff of the Region IV Children's Developmental Disabilities Center echoed Val Wagner's sentiments when they said good-by Thursday to Lynne Larson, a volunteer at the children's center since January. Miss Wagner, area director for Region IV Services, Wayne, praised Lynne for her dedication and "excellent working relationship with all the children."

"Lynne's been a godsend," added Kathy VonEhwegen, children's center coordinator.

LYNNE's volunteer time spent with the 10 youngsters currently residing at the center, located on the east edge of Wayne, included three hours each Tuesday and two hours each Thursday.

She plans to graduate from Wayne State College this August. Most of her studies are geared toward recreation for handicapped children and she hopes to find a job working with handicapped youngsters — specifically in developing recreational programs designed to strengthen them mentally as well as physically.

Although her decision to leave Region IV was due in part to her upcoming graduation, Lynn also is busy planning for her wedding later this summer. She and her new husband will be residing near Harlan, Iowa — an area which offers services to the mentally handicapped similar to those in the Wayne area.

LYNNE's time at the Children's Developmental Disabilities Center was mainly spent assisting the five regular instructors, Joan Drake, Rose Marie Peterson, Sandy Brudigan, Jeanette Geiger and Marge Portwood.

Those five instructors, along with part time instructor Deb Lindstedt, work daily with the youngsters, who range in ages five to 18. Their goal, said Miss Wagner, is to keep the children as close to their family and environment as possible. Their greatest excitement comes when a youngster no longer needs the types of services provided by Region IV and can be "mainstreamed" into his or her local school system or community.

STAFF TIME is limited, said Miss Wagner, taking the opportunity to point out that Region IV does have a volunteer program and would like to see more persons, like Lynne, donate some of their time to the youngsters.

BEFORE leaving Thursday, Lynne was honored during a picnic with youngsters and staff at the center. She also was presented a small gift — a token of their appreciation — and a Certificate of Merit which credits her for her outstanding services to the clients of Region IV while involved in Region IV's volunteer program.

"I have a lot of respect for the Region IV staff," said Lynne, adding that she never considered her time spent with the youngsters as work.

"It's difficult to describe the feeling of fulfillment they (the youngsters) give you."

THE Children's Developmental Disabilities Center was established in Wayne in 1974 and provides programs and services to youngsters who are mentally or both mentally physically handicapped.

Wayne Junior High Wins Husker Triangular

Records Broken

Records fell as the Wayne junior high track teams swept boys and girls titles in the West Husker track and field meet, held Thursday at the Wayne High track.

The Blue Devils defeated rivals Madison and Emerson-Hubbard for the team championships. Those were the only three schools that fielded teams for the event.

Kevin Koenig was the standout of the three-team meet. He set new school and West Husker meet records in three events while winning three first places.

Koenig threw the shot put 50.0, threw the discus 131.4 and ran the 400-yard dash in 56.6 to sweep first place in all three events.

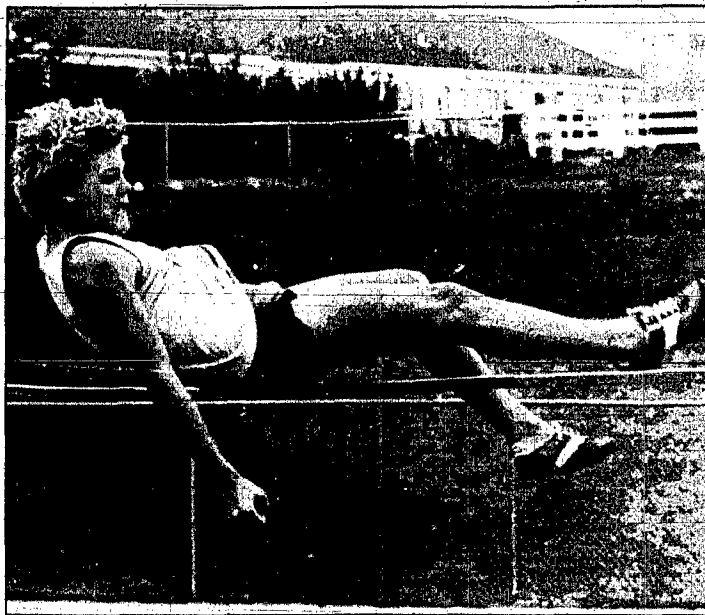

Chris Wieseler, a double winner, set a school and meet record of 14.6 by winning the 110-meter hurdles. The other boys meet and school record to fall was in the 1,600-meter run. Another double winner, Pete March won the race in record time of 5:25.0.

Three new meet records were set in the girls division. Emerson-Hubbard's Lynn Harthett ran the mile in 5:59 and the 400-yard dash in 1:05. Kristi Jensen of Emerson won the high jump with a leap of 4.7 to tie the meet record.

Other Wayne winners were Tim Fleming in the pole vault, Becky Schmidt in the girls long jump, Amy Jordan in the discus, Paula Koplin in the 75-meter low hurdles and the Wayne 400-meter girls relay team.

The Wayne track teams will host the Wayne Junior High Invitational tomorrow (Tuesday). The seven-team field will consist of Wayne, Schuyler, Wisner, Hartington Holy Trinity, Emerson Hubbard, Laurel and Pender. Wayne is coached by Dale Hochstein and Dick Mettler.

Injury Takes Toll

Girls Track Team Second

Wayne's girls had to be content with the runner-up spot Friday in the two team race at the West Husker Invitational track and field meet at West Point.

Columbus Lakeview won the six team meet with 149 points and Wayne placed second with 145 points. Other scoring: Wisner Pilger 56, Hartington CC 36, Emerson Hubbard 32, West Point CC 14.

The Blue Devils were hurt in their quest for a team championship by the loss of Tracy Stollenberg, who sprained an ankle in practice Monday.

Stollenberg has been a consistent medal winner in the high jump, long jump and 100 meter hurdles and a member of the 400 meter relay team for Wayne this season. Wayne won first place in eight events and scored numerous place points.

Leaders were Missy Stollenberg and Lisa Peters. Stollenberg won the 100 meter dash in 12.7 and the 200 meter dash in 26.5.

Peters placed first in the 800 meter run with a time of 2:27.3 and won the 400 in 1:00.6.

Other first place finishers were Jill Mosley with a leap of 16.5 in the long jump, the 3,200 meter relay team (Kris Proett, Julie Wiener, Lynn Surber, Lisa Peters) with a time of 10:15.5 and the 1,600 meter relay team (Surber, Mosley, Stollenberg, Peters) with a time of 4:13.1.

1/2 Point from Title

Wayne High track coach Al Hansen and the members of his track squad had to feel like they had gotten up on the wrong side of the bed, Friday.

The Blue Devils just weren't destined to win the West Husker track and field meet no matter how hard they tried.

Wayne put on a fine performance but it wasn't quite good enough. One more sixth place finish would have been enough to give the Devils the team championship.

Instead, the Blue Devils finished one-half point out of first place. Team standings: 1. Wisner-Pilger 171 1/2, 2. Wayne 171, 3. Col. Lakeview 104, 4. Emerson-Hubbard 31, 5. West Point CC 29 1/2, 6. Hartington CC 15.

Wayne athletes set new meet and school records. However, Wisner was not seriously challenged in the field events and racked up enough points there to offset Wayne's strong scoring in the running events.

Eric Brink set a school and West Husker meet record in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles by winning the race with a time of 41.8. The second place runner finished 1.6 seconds behind. Brink also won the 110-meter hurdles in 15.6.

Pat McCright broke the Wayne High long jump record by hitting an all-time best of 20-10 1/2 for a first place finish.

In the 3,200-meter run, Wayne's three-man combination came through again to sweep the top three medals. Doug Proett won first place with a meet record time of 9:48.4. Steve Monson was second in 9:50.7 and Henric Olsson placed third.

Wayne's 1,600-meter relay team pushed Wisner to the limit but finished one-tenth of a second out of the top position. The second place time of 3:29.6 is a new school record.

Team members are Jeff Baier, John Mosley, Eric Brink and Tod Heier.

Another school record was tied in the 400-meter relay. Wayne placed second in 45.7.

Proett led a one-two-three finish in 800-meter run with a winning time of 2:03.7. Tod Heier finished second with an identical time and Henric Olsson placed third.

The other first place finish for the Blue Devils came in the 3,200-meter relay. Baier, Olsson, Monson and Proett teamed up to win the event with a time of 8:32.6.

Wayne's boys and girls teams will compete in the Wisner Invitational Thursday.

Blue Devils Must Settle for Split Against Lincoln Baseball Teams

Continuing a 500 pace, the Wayne Blue Devils evened their record at 5-5 by earning a split with Lincoln East and Lincoln High Friday at Lincoln.

Wayne edged East 7-6 and then lost a 4-2 decision to Lincoln in the second game. Wakefield, which alternated opponents with Wayne, defeated Lincoln High 4-3 but lost to East 14-0.

The Blue Devils put together one big inning in the first game to down East. The hosts scored the first four runs of the game in the bottom of the second inning but Wayne came back with seven runs in the top of the fifth.

The inning started with Brian Fleming drawing a walk. Fleming moved to second on a passed ball and Todd Pfeiffer followed with a single. Jim Sperry was next batter and came through with a single. Todd Skokan reached first base on an error and Wayne pulled within two runs at 4-2.

A key no-out two run double by Jeff McCright knotted the score. One out later, Kevin Nissen reached base due to an error and Tim Pfeiffer walked to load the bases.

McCright and Nissen scored when the short stop made an error of a ball hit by Todd Schwartz.

East tied the game at 6-6 in the bottom of the fifth on two hits and an error.

McCright scored the winning run with two outs in the top of the sixth. After the first two batters struck out, McCright pounded a base hit. McCright stole second base. Jere Morris moved him to third with a single and Nissen brought him home with another single.

Nissen, who pitched all seven innings, earned the victory for the Devils. He allowed six hits, struckout three and allowed no walks in the game.

Leading hitters for Wayne were McCright with two hits, two runs and two RBIs. Nissen with two hits, one run and one RBI. Schwartz with one hit and two RBIs and Todd Pfeiffer with two hits.

Three consecutive errors in the fifth inning broke a deadlocked ball game and gave Lincoln High a 4-2 win over Wayne in Friday's second game.

The score was tied 2-2 entering the bottom of the fifth and the Blue Devils retired the first Lincoln batter. However, Wayne committed three errors in the next three at bats and the hosts managed to score two runs.

Wayne was held scoreless in the final two innings and wound up losing 4-2. The locals were held to two hits in the game: Brothers Tim and Todd Pfeiffer each had one single.

The Devils scored their two runs in the top of the fifth. Jere Morris and Kevin Nissen opened the inning with walks and Tim Pfeiffer reached base on an attempted fielder's choice. A passed ball scored Morris and moved Nissen and Pfeiffer over one base. A sacrifice bunt by Todd Schwartz brought in Nissen for the tying run.

Tim Pfeiffer pitched the first four innings of the game, giving up three hits and striking out three batters. Jim Sperry went the final two innings, allowing three hits.

Randy's Recap

According to Randy Hascall

THE BIG EVENT at Omaha Burke High School is less than three weeks away.

The combined boys and girls state high school track meet will begin at 9 a.m. Friday, May 22 and continue through late Saturday afternoon.

Ticket prices for anyone who would like to attend the state meet are $3 for adults and $2 for students on Fridays, $4 for adults and $3 for students at Saturday's first round and $3 for adults and $2 for students at Saturday's second round.

Combined boys and girls district track meets—another first in the state—will be coming up over the next two weeks.

Laurel and Wakefield are scheduled to participate in the Class C-3 district meet with Beemer, Emerson-Hubbard, Hartington, Homer, Lyons, Oakland-Craig, Pender, Ponca, Stanton, West Point CC, Winnebago, Wisner-Pilger and the Wynot girls.

Allen and Winside are in the Class D-4 district along with Bancroft, Coleridge, Decatur, Humphrey, Lindsay Holy Family girls, Macy, Monroe, Newcastle, Niobrara, Rosalie, Santee boys, Silver Creek, Snyder and Walthill.

WAYNE STATE COLLEGE gets a small mention in the May 4 issue of Sports Illustrated. In an article concerning female athletics and the names of the teams; the magazine discusses masculine and feminine names and changes in recent years.

As most everyone in the Wayne area knows, the Wayne State women's athletic teams used to be called the Wildkittens. Then, in the age of equal rights, the Wildkittens decided to grow up and become the Lady Wildcats.

Wayne State and Peru State both receive mention in Sports Illustrated for their change in names.

I think the issue is interesting. According to the SI article, several schools refer to their women's teams as Lady Rams, Lady Gamecocks and Lady Bucks. Sounds ludicrous, right? Salisbury State College of Maryland (Sea Gulls) refers to its women as the She Gulls. And at the University of Puerto Rico, the Tarzans have been joined by the Janes.

THE BALL PARK renovation program is in need of some volunteer workers again this spring. Working hours are from 6:30 p.m. until dark on most Mondays and Tuesdays. Work sessions are scheduled tonight (Monday) and tomorrow so if you want to give a helping hand stop by the city ball park. Your help will be appreciated.

Team Seven avenged an earlier loss by nipping regular season champion Team Five 53-51 in Tuesday's championship game.

The winners outscored their opponents 18-12 in the fourth quarter to pull the upset. Three players put points on the board for Team Seven in the final period.

Lynn Lessmann scored nine of his 19 total points. Don Larsen scored six and John Jorde added three. In the final period for Team Five, Ted Ellis and Rod Erwin scored six points each.

Leading scorers for the winning team were Lessmann with 19 points, Larsen with 13 and George Eynon with 10. Jorde scored nine and Fritz Weible added two.

Renovation work on the Wayne ball park is scheduled to continue this week after the spring's first work session was held last Wednesday.

Work sessions are scheduled tonight (Monday) and tomorrow beginning at 6:30. Work will continue on installation of the outfield fence and possibly on the tearing down of the first six rows of the grandstand.

Project director Hank Overin reported that between 15 and 20 individuals attended Wednesday's work session. The turnout was disappointing he said.

Overin said he is hoping the field will be in usable condition for summer ball in June and added that unless more volunteer workers show up, progress will not be advanced enough to allow use of the field.

Volunteers who wish to attend either work session this week are welcome to bring hand saws, hammers, sledge hammers, crow bars or any other equipment. Work sessions are planned every Monday and Tuesday.

Wakefield High School Report

26 Prospective Kindergarteners Register for Classes

Twenty-six children and their parents attended Kindergarten Roundup on April 3 at the Wakefield Elementary School.

Superintendent Derwin Hartman explained school rules, policies, busing and whether to divide the class for the 1981-82 school year.

After Mr. Hartman's talk, the children visited Mrs. Mildred Brownell's kindergarten classroom. Mrs. Brownell read to the youngsters and let them cut out various objects. The parents filled out record forms on their children and then joined the group when vision, speech and hearing tests were given.

A thank you is extended to all parents and children who attended.

STUDENTS ATTEND WSC PLAY

The local Elementary students attended a presentation "Radio Rescue" at Wayne State College on April 6.

The theatre presentation was given by the WSC Drama Department.

PATRIOTS TO IOWA CONTEST

The Patriots from Wakefield High School attended and participated in an Apollo Show Choir contest at Westmar College in LeMars, Iowa, on April 7.

Thirty six schools appeared throughout the day and the evening in the contest. Wakefield and Omaha Bryan were the only Nebraska schools invited to participate this year. Other states which were represented were Iowa, South Dakota and Minnesota.

Judges were Fritz Mountford from Miami University and Almeda Berkey and Jackson Berkey from Omaha.

The Patriots were judged on apparel, facial expressions, choreography, stage presence and audience appeal as well as their singing. Members of the group are Penny Miller, Teri Schwarten, Coleen Neuhaus, Kella Lund, Renee Weststrand, Angie Stout, Randali Barge, Brent Kahland and Jonathan Stelling. Their instructor is Mrs. Diane Trullinger.

HEIDI MUNSON WINS TROPHY

Heidi Munson brought home a second place trophy in the stenography division at the State Future Business Leaders of America convention held in Omaha on April 24.

Other members who participated in competitive events were Kim Greve and Julie Sherer. Miss Maura McCune, FBLA Advisor, accompanied the group to Omaha.

Each year the State Leadership Convention offers FBLA members the chance to enter business competition. Accounting, general business, stenography and clerical typist were some of the events entered by the local FBLA members. The delegates were also given a chance to vote on state leaders for next year. This was the first year that the Wakefield FBLA sent delegates to the convention.

Plans are being made to continue sending students in the years to come.

FAN NEWS

The Future Homemakers of America is a vocational student organization for home economics. There are more than 4,500 members in 165 chapters in Nebraska. Most are involved in community service activities as well as projects to improve themselves and their relationships with people at home and on the job.

"Families: We're Still The One! Past... Present... Future" was the theme of the 1981 meeting, which was held at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, Lincoln, April 6-7.

Nine representatives from our home town chapter attended the 1981 State Leadership Conference of the Nebraska Association of Future Homemakers of America, along with 1,200 other members and advisers from across the state.

JON FREDRICKSON concentrates as he practices a juggling technique.

Students at Laurel-Concord Elementary School toured several foreign countries, became jugglers and aerobic dancers, learned macrame and needlepoint, cooked and put together model cars.

It didn't take months, not even weeks.

In fact, it took only one day as students broke away from the traditional classroom work by enrolling in mini-courses offered last Friday at Laurel's elementary school.

Students had their choice of participating in any of 35 mini-courses offered throughout the day. Most classes lasted one hour each but several lasted two hours. Each youngster in grades kindergarten through sixth participated in three, four or five classes.

The mini-course idea was inflated by two parents and carried out Friday. Therese Logue, elementary principal, said the idea went over real well and added that she hopes to put together a similar program next school year.

Most of the courses were taught by community people. Each instructor had at least one assistant to help with instruction.

A total of 213 students took part in the five-hour session.

When asked for their impressions to the mini-courses, students had such comments as "it was the best day of school ever", "neato", "it was really fun and we learned a lot", "I liked the classes and the stuff we made", "we learned different things" and "it was fun because I learned things I didn't know".

The list of courses and instructors: latchhook, Mary Dahlquist, Dianne Anderson, clown face painting, Caroline Harder, Hyrma Zakahi; decoupage, Kim Dunklau; aerobic dance, Elaine Sanders; square dance, Sue Stingley, Harriet Muntler, Star Smith, Mildred Monk.

Chorus, Sharon Boeckenhauer; England tour, Marge Dybdol; Israel tour, the Rev. Ken Marquardt; Switzerland tour, Lila Stark; Sweden tour, Everett Johnson; grooming, Caroline Peterson, Joyce Helms; nursing home tour, Marsha Halsch; alfalfa mill tour, Charles Paulsen; grocery store tour, Verneal Gade, Maurice Sindelar; juggling, Steve Shanahan; macrame, Linda James.

Needlepoint/embroidery, Barbara Osborne; car models, Sandra Hofart; signing, Solveig Korte; first aid, Mary Ann Christensen, Lynette Joslin; crewel, Vicky Shanahan; clay bank, Tricia Goddard; coin and stamp collecting, Rosemary Mintz, Dick Collins; ecology and conservation, Fenton Crookshank, cake decorating, Marietta Freeman, Marcia Lipp.

Silk flowers, Jane Relfenrath, Jean Winkiebauer, Coleen Qualls; car maintenance, Brad Harder, Tim Hanson, Curt Mathiason; cooking, Sandy Chace, Karen Crookshank; chess, Therese Logue; math puzzles, Barbara Osborne; roots, Hannah Purdue; photography, Archie Lindsay; electricity, Ole Mallatt; structures, Dwight Iverson; gems, Joan Adkins.

STEVEN HURST sits patiently as he gets a clown face painted on by an instructor. Students were given the choice of a happy face or a sad face. Steven obviously chose the sad face. Clown face painting was one of many mini-courses offered last Friday.

SEVERAL STUDENTS learn sign language in this mini-course. By recess-time, these girls were well-enough acquainted with the signs to communicate without fellow classmates understanding their signals. Students enjoyed the courses and said they were a good learning experience.

Wayne, Hoskins Residents Participate

Power Line Session a Shocker for Some

By Randall Howell

It was a shocker. Not a bad one, but, nonetheless, a shocker. The Minneapolis speaker was shocked, and the Wayne area audience was shocked.

Jay Franklin, a traveling public relations specialist with the Mid-Continent Area Power Pool, made his point several times with hands-on demonstrations about power-line safety.

WITH AREA farmers and power company employees watching, listening and participating, Franklin spend two hours discussing and demonstrating the impact of power lines on their immediate environment.

While his audience sat on folding chairs beneath an east-west power transmission line just a few miles southeast of Wayne, Franklin described, measured and personally tested — that's when he was shocked — electrical charges coming from the overhead cables.

In Wayne County for four such demonstrations in two days, Franklin's Monday afternoon session was the second of the day on the Bernhard Koch farm.

Friday, Franklin repeated the double feature on land owned by Walter Fenske just a few miles southwest of Hoskins.

WITH ONLY ABOUT a dozen area residents in the audience, the Monday afternoon session was punctuated by a series of demonstrations that produced field-strength electrical charges felt by those willing to participate.

In the middle of a pasture about a quarter mile south of the Koch farmstead, several audience volunteers — mostly employees of the Wayne County Public Power District — felt the bite of electrical discharges from the 320-kilovolt, three-phase power lines "crackling between steel towers.

A kilovolt is a unit of electromotive force equal to 1,000 volts.

Basically it was a lesson on power-line discharges, electrical safety and the characteristics of electricity — all produced through MAPP's own brochure describes the association as "an organization of independent power suppliers who have joined together to work for increased reliability and adequacy of electric supply in the Upper Midwest."

ALTHOUGH IT WAS never mentioned specifically, the in-the-field, utility-sponsored demonstration came at a time when the proposed MANDAN power-line corridor is stirring landowner and farmer protests in Manitoba, North and South Dakota and Nebraska.

In fact, Nebraska Public Power District, which hopes to tap into a power exchange via the 680-mile power line that is to run from Winnipeg to Hoskins, was visibly represented at the afternoon session by camera-swinging public information representative Wayne R. Jacobsen, Columbus.

Several members of the Wayne County Public Power District, including Sam Schroeder, district manager, and Charles Denesia, office manager, attended.

The proposed MANDAN corridor is within 20 miles of Wayne to the west.

SPEAKING AGAINST the wind in the hot mid day sun,

Franklin opened the two-hour session with a basic course of the types of power lines, their size in kilovolts and some power company philosophy, plus the design and engineering.

The upshot of his presentation was that scientific research is unable to conclusively substantiate harmful biological or environmental effects from power transmission lines as they are engineered and built in the upper Midwest.

Franklin, a tall, lanky animated speaker, thoroughly explained and demonstrated conditions under which people, particularly farmers, should exercise caution.

Surrounded by gadgetry, meters, insulating pads, and umbrellas in his outdoor pasture laboratory, Franklin showed volunteers how to pick up an electrical charge from the overhead transmission lines.

HANDING OUT a half-dozen brightly colored umbrellas, he encouraged the volunteers to hold them open under the power line, a style that's been used commercially since the 1930s, while lightly touching a sharp point near the plastic insulated handle.

Most got results — that's when they were shocked — that felt like a tiny pin prick, sometimes crackling faintly between finger tip and steel point.

It was a small electrical charge current existing within the line's electrical field. Franklin explained that amperage is the dangerous part of electricity. He likened the flow of electricity to that of water through a pipe, equating voltage with pressure and amps with current, that provides power to do work.

"work" done and the customer pays for that, he said. He said the pressure (voltage) creates an electrical field, a field common to any electrical gadgetry in the home.

CURRENT CREATES a magnetic field, he said, adding that the power aspect can produce what is called a corona — often seen as a blue flame-like discharge — under certain weather conditions (storms, mostly).

"The electric field is very intense near the source, but falls off rapidly at any distance from the source," he said. "The electrical fields are around any electrical device."

Franklin explained how engineers measure the intensity of the fields to protect consumers, noting that federal and state regulations put a ceiling on the amount of electrical field discharge any source can have.

On a power line, he said, electric field strength measures strongest in the middle where the line sags (between the towers). That's where he set up his demonstrations, among them a series of posts running parallel to the power line. The posts supported an electrically charged wire.

AGAIN FRANKLIN made his point when volunteers, checking the wire by fingertip, took what he called an "induced charge." The induced charge was small, certainly not painful, but nonetheless real.

The induced charge is measured in kilovolts per meter, a formula that gauges the strength of the electrical field in proportion to the distance away from the power source. Directly below the line, the field strength measured 2.7 kilovolts per meter. But, half the distance across the right of way, it measured 1.2

kvm. And, at the edge of the 200-foot right of way, it measured .6 kvm.

During the demonstration Franklin explained that the three power-carrying lines on the towers are phased. He likened it to the pistons in a three-cylinder engine. He reminded the audience that at any given time one of the pistons (power lines) is charging up, one is charging down and the third is somewhere between the power stroke and the free stroke.

AFTER THE umbrella test, Franklin had everyone's attention. He asked for and got volunteers for a number of other experiments. Several volunteers were power district employees.

Refreshments — soda pop and cookies — were served to the small crowd during a break in the demonstrations. During the break and after the session, Franklin chatted with many of them, often mentioning power-line and nuclear power professors.

A current measurement on the umbrella test turned up 48 microamps going through the volunteer. A micro-amp is equivalent to one-millionth of an amp. Franklin says a portable toaster can give off up to 500 microamps under regulations established by electrical engineers for product safety.

And, a stationary appliance — refrigerator or electric stove — can produce as much as 750 microamps and be within the regulatory ceiling.

DURING ANOTHER test of the field force, one volunteer took a 400 volt "bite" in the leg from a grounded wire beneath the power line. After standing on a carton, which took him closer to the power source, he took a 2,000 volt bite, according to Franklin.

Testing the charge — with fingertips — on a single-wire fence running parallel to the overhead 230-kilovolt line, several volunteers took a 250-micro-amp charge that snapped louder than it hurt.

Franklin explained that most power companies offer farmers a "filter" that can be attached to electric fences, particularly those running parallel within a power-line right of way, that takes off the induced charge. That's so the fence and induced charge don't double up for a potentially dangerous shock to livestock or people.

USING HIS VAN as a piece of equipment under the powerline, Franklin metered the induced charge at 700 volts. The van was insulated from the ground by rubber tire pads. When he grounded the van, the induced charge — which does not accumulate — dissipated almost instantly.

Franklin then demonstrated how the induced charge any vehicle might pick up on a run beneath the lines is taken off through carbon-black tires. Carbon-black, a substance used in tires for the past 20 years, is an excellent electrical conductor. It grounds electrical charges picked up by farm machinery and other vehicles, he said.

Franklin explained that people pick up the induced charge "shock" on the sharp points of a good conductor. "That's where the charge is concentrated," he said. "If you touch the side of the van, you would not feel a thing. The surface is flat with a great deal of area to reduce the charge."

However, he said, the small charge could be picked up on bolt ends and other sharper objects found on the frames of vehicles or machinery.

MAPP Rep Demonstrates Ways Of Living with Lines

Though Mid-Continent Area Power Pool works hard to sell the concept of living with electrical transmission lines, it does offer a few words of caution.

Jay Franklin, a traveling MAPP salesman based out of Minneapolis, cautioned farmers, businessmen and Wayne area power company representatives this past week about some of the potential dangers.

Delivering a hands-on demonstration in the middle of farmer Bernhard Koch's pasture, a spot MAPP rented from the retired Wayne farmer and his son, Marilyn, for the one-day, two-session event, Franklin advised farmers near power transmission lines to have their building, particularly steel shed and barns, grounded.

HE ADVISED against parking the long, multi-sectioned irrigation units in the power line's right of way. And, he made it clear that the water guns on the units be aimed so the stream doesn't hit the lines.

"The spray cannot conduct electricity," he said. "But the stream can."

Franklin said that if an irrigation unit must be parked or operated beneath a power line, it should be working or parked at right angles to the line. Parallel parking picks up induced electrical charges.

And, of course, he warned against coming in direct contact with the lines. "That's the most dangerous thing you can do with these lines," he said.

FRANKLIN SAID the electricity travels down the outside of the above-ground transmission lines. In underground cables it travels inside, because the lines must be sealed in protective, non-conductive materials.

He said the major problem with underground lines is heat dissipation. The atmosphere does the job in above-ground lines, he said, explaining that it is a problem with buried cables.

Also, he added, the underground cable is not perfect. "Furthermore, it costs about seven to eight times as much as the above-ground transmission line," he said.

Franklin warned his audience to avoid building a bonfire under the lines, since smoke particles and impurities provide excellent electrical conduction.

ON REFUELING, Franklin told the group that under ideal laboratory conditions engineers can get ignition 20 percent of the time in simulated field situations.

He advised against it, but did say that a contact wire securely fastened to the refueling can or nozzle and placed on the vehicle first should eliminate the problem.

Furthermore, he said earlier,

Photography: Randall Howell

JAY FRANKLIN, a traveling representative of Mid-Continent Area Power Pool, checks a filter on an experimental electric fence he set up below power lines last week to demonstrate the induced electrical charge the fence picked up.

electronic medical devices, such as pacemakers, could be triggered by the electrical charge from the wires. Most modern pacemakers have been designed to eliminate the problem, he said.

Franklin discussed a number of research projects that have concluded that the biological and environmental impact of power lines presents a problem. He discounted or flawed them all.

HE DID GIVE some credence to an ongoing research project involving hogs. The project, stopped when the hogs got sick from another cause, is being repeated, he said.

Franklin cautioned those in his audience to take research on the matter with a grain of salt. He indicated that people needed more knowledge about power lines before they could understand the research involved in measuring the biological and environmental impact.

"We are not building torture chambers," he said. "There are effects from power lines, and those we know of have been brought to an acceptable level."

Franklin says the Soviets have been at the research much longer since they have lines carrying much higher voltage.

They have abandoned that research, he said. "Now they are studying how the environment screws up the power line... They've come full circle."
