Contract Impasse Near For School Board, WEA

Contract talks between the Wayne-Carroll School Board and the Wayne Education Association appear to be headed for impasse and factfinding.

That was the upshot of the district negotiating committee's report to the board Monday night.

Dale Stoltenberg, the board's negotiating committee chairman, reported that the WEA had voted to reject an offer the board kept open until April 24.

NONE WEA negotiating team members were present during the board's regular meeting Monday at Wayne High School, but Stoltenberg said an offer made on April 13 was rejected on April 23.

Key points in the apparent disagreement involve the $11,400 base salary offer, career experience steps and education credit, according to Superintendent Francis Haun.

Haun told board members that if those points could be resolved, in his judgment, the remaining items under negotiation would fall into place.

Stoltenberg said that though the WEA rejected the board's offer, no counter proposal was forthcoming from the teacher's unit.

ACCORDING TO Stoltenberg, the board's negotiating team has had four meetings with WEA negotiators starting March 5.

The board's final offer came April 13, and with it a note explaining that "it represents what the board considers to be the approximate limit of its fiscal resources in the area of teachers salaries."

Though the board took no official action to declare an impasse at Monday night's public meeting, the offer made to the WEA indicated that would be the next step.

"If the WEA chooses to reject this offer, then the board will declare official impasse in negotiations, design a news release to that effect and take action to go into fact finding," the statement said.

THE BOARD'S final offer included a 10-point package that outlines the $11,400 base salary.

Among other items in the package is an offer to fund health and accident insurance at the same relative dollar amounts in the present plan.

Other insurance proposals include an offer to pay long-term disability insurance premiums in the amount of up to $5 per teacher, and group life insurance at $10,000 per teacher at full premium.

And, the board has proposed leaving the sick leave policy, the education index (5 percent for 9 hours) and the experience index (4 percent for each year) as is. Furthermore, no additional education columns were proposed for the current salary structure.

Finally, the board said it would study the district's extra-duty schedule.

NEIL SANDAHL, board president, said "if they (the WEA) wish to go to impasse and fact finding they can initiate it."

After some discussion at Monday night's meeting there seemed to be a consensus that the board should wait for a WEA counter offer before moving to impasse.

However, Haun did discuss factfinding procedures with board members. Becky Keidel, a member of the board's negotiating team, said the WEA negotiators "never really said" what the problem was with the offer. "They were asked and given an opportunity to address it, but they've never really pinpointed the problem," she continued.

MEANWHILE the board delayed action on salary settlements for some district employees not represented by the WEA.

Sandahl appointed a three-member committee to work with Haun on computing salaries for Doris Daniels, secretary to the board, Marjorie Summers, head cook, Richard Powers, superintendent of buildings and grounds, David Luff, elementary principal, Richard Metteer, middle school principal, Donald Zeiss, high school principal, and the superintendent himself.

Haun's salary is $32,300 per year. Zeiss' salary, based on a 10 1/2-month contract is $25,764. Metteer, who is on a 10-month contract, earns $22,464, which include special education responsibilities. Luff, also on a 10-month contract, earns $22,656.

Powers, who is full time, earns $14,310 from the school district. Summer earns $7,815 per year as head cook and Daniels makes $11,820 -- prorated during the summer.

BOARD MEMBER Wilbur Giese and Sandahl discussed what they formed as a problem in setting the administrator's salaries. They said it is often used by the teachers as another bargaining level.

Giese said he felt it should not be that way.

Sisters Change Convent Site; Conditional-Use Permit Ok'd

In another special session, the Wayne City Planning Commission has approved another conditional-use permit for another Benedictine Sisters convent site.

The first site's been scratched. All the players are the same, but the location changes from a tract of land just south of Providence Medical Center to two lots north and east of the hospital at the corner of 14th Street and Linden Street.

Meeting with Andy Minicz, a designer with the Norfolk architectural firm of Charles Beardslee Inc., the commission Wednesday approved set-back features and the requested conditional-use permit for the new location.

SISTER GISELINDE Schaut, procurator of the Missionary Benedictine Sisters of Norfolk and business manager for the project, refused to discuss the reasons for the change of location.

However, Beardslee said the last-minute change of plans was largely due to a concern on the part of the sisters that language in the original contract for the first construction site might have put the project in jeopardy from litigation.

Beardslee said terms of the covenant specifically prohibit the construction of a convent on the land site picked by the sisters.

He said advice the Benedictine Sisters received from their attorney, Tom Brogan of Norfolk, was that building on the site could place the project in legal jeopardy. Brogan worked with attorneys representing Wayne State College and Wayne Hospital Foundation.

Apparently some concern was expressed over resale value of a structure on the hospital grounds.

THE CLAUSE in the contract that specifically prohibits the construction of a convent on the site dates back beyond the terms between the sisters and the Wayne Hospital Foundation.

Beardslee said the covenant prohibiting the convent construction is found in terms set forth in the land grant for Wayne State College.

"It would probably take legislation to change those terms, and that can become a real problem," Beardslee said.

According to Beardslee, the sisters decided not to put the project in that kind of legal limbo and selected two lots owned by Pat Gross in the Marywood Subdivision northeast of the hospital.

The plans have already been modified to fit the new site, according to Beardslee, who said the basic residential character of the building remains the same.

FUNDED IN its entirety by the Missionary Benedictine Sisters of Norfolk, the project will utilize the two lots at the corner of Linden and 14th streets, about a 3-minute walk from the hospital.

Schaut did say the site change has set the project back several weeks. It was to have been under construction by mid-April. Now, construction is expected to begin next week, according to Schaut, who said the contractor, Town & Country Builders of Wayne, has

Wayne State College Grads Urged to Manage Destiny

As long-awaited rain fell on parched northeast Nebraska farmland Sunday, Wayne State College graduates received long-awaited parchment.

Few complaints were heard — only from those with a sentimental attachment to the Willow Bowl — as afternoon spring commencement exercises were moved to the Rice Bowl.

And, as Denmark businessman Espoor Boel spoke to a sea of caps and gowns, the afternoon cloud bursts dumped 0.75 inches of water on Wayne County farms and gardens.

Sheltered from the welcome weather, graduates heard Boel, a trustee of the Wayne State Foundation, challenge them to manage their own destiny.

"WE MUST learn that through our work we are really worth our wages," the Danish cattleman said. "And, that we, ourselves, manage our own destiny and our basic requirements for security."

Boel, who owns a fishing fleet that operates off the coast of Norway, continued: "We must also learn to elect legislators who are not only nurses to us in all respects, but who should look on things realistically."

Touching again and again on realistic theme, Boel said, "Finally, we must understand that it is not possible for us to live at the expense of our neighbor."

He urged the graduates to be realists and to understand that it is the key to better times. He used Japan as an example of a nation that has set and attained realistic goals, noting that many leading countries are now trying to learn from the Japanese experience.

IN HIS 35-minute speech, Boel offered the United States a cautious salute. "The present (economic) crisis requires a meaningful national effort," he said. "The first country to change course and to create a new and less inflationary growth during the next years will probably be the U.S.A., but it will hardly become a locomotive to pull through the rest of the world."

In a reference to West Germany, France and England, Boel said the three are becoming aware that the resources have to be moved and that wealth is created by people who are motivated for sale and production. "Probably the 80s will not be called the decade of poverty, but rather the decade of economizing and the decade of truth," he continued.

"WE MUST educate people in the areas of research, development, production, international marketing, finance, computer technology and languages," he said. "And, people must learn to become familiar with the rest of the world."

Boel, who owns a cheese business, has ties to Nebraska that date back to the late 1950s

Super Mom! Marge McCright Sure Fills the Bill

By LaVon Beckman

ASSIGNMENT: Find a mother who symbolizes all (at least most) of the thoughts and feelings conjured up on Mother's Day.

Well, first and foremost, she should be able to bake chocolate chip cookies. Then she should be capable of cutting the kids' hair with scissors in one hand and a telephone in the other, attend Susie's dance recital while, during Intermission, running across town to watch Junior hit his first home run, and, of course, love children.

MARGE McCright seems to fit the bill perfectly. Her petit frame, boundless energy and spirit, seem to deny the fact that she's been a mother — 16 times!

The 53-year-old mother and wife no longer throws quite so many potatoes in the pot. Most of the McCright children have left to begin lives of their own. However, for the five youngsters remaining at home — ranging in ages 12 to 18 — Marge continues to bake the cookies, cut the hair and attend the ball games.

She also holds down a full time job at Wayne State College, working as a custodian for five days a week from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"I'm a janitor if you want to know the truth," laughs Marge. "But I love it because I'm with children, and I love children, everybody's children."

RECENTLY, Marge took a few minutes to talk about her life as a wife and mother.

She stops scrubbing the floor, pours a cup of coffee, and apologizes for the way the house looks. "What gets done, gets done," she laughs. "I'm always doing and never get anything done."

The McCright home, a neat white frame structure which sits on the edge of town, is filled with pictures and mementoes of the 15 children (daughter Kathleen died a crib death at the age of five weeks) who all at one time or another greeted their mother at the kitchen door with "What's to eat, mom?"

MARGE is darn proud of her kids and doesn't hesitate to show it. Her home is decorated with furniture the boys have made in shop class and Marge, jumping up from her chair, points out which son made what.

There's a coffee table that son Patrick, who will graduate this month from Wayne High School, brought home recently. The

Marge, Tom & the Kids

Pamela Lathrop, the oldest child of Marge and Tom McCright, at age 30 is married and resides in Omaha, where her husband is an attorney-at-law. They have one daughter.

Mary Ellen McCright, 29, is an insurance adjuster in Pueblo, Colo., and Susan Cover, 28, is married and works as a secretary in Omaha. Her husband is a food broker.

Tom Jr., 27 and the oldest son, resides in Wayne with his wife, Sheri, and their baby daughter. Tom drives a semi-truck and Sheri works as a part-time secretary at St. Mary's Church.

Another son, 26-year-old Dan, is a deputy sheriff in Seward. He and his wife, Val, have three daughters: Randy, 25 years old and single, is a salesman for a food company in Omaha. Dustin, 22 years old, also is single and resides in Yankton, where he works as a dry waller.

Two of the McCright sons, 20-year-old Jamie and 19-year-old Mark, are in the service. Jamie is a Corporal with the military police in Germany, and Mark is Lance Corporal with the marines in Okinawa. Neither is married.

Still residing at home are Patrick, 18, who will graduate this month from Wayne High School and plans to attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln; Jeff, 16 and a sophomore; Paula, 15 and a freshman; John 13, in seventh grade; and Ted, 12, who attends sixth grade at St. Mary's Catholic Church.

chest of drawers, end tables, lamps, goblets and clocks are the handiwork of sons already graduated from high school.

CLAD in blue jeans and a t-shirt — "A habit I picked up when I used to wear 14 diaper pins down the front of my blouse" — Marge says her favorite pastime is following her kids' through their many sports activities.

Just last week I attended a baseball game and track meet in one day — at the same time, I went back and forth from one game to the another. The pickup was smoking, but I made it, she chuckles.

She also enjoys reading and currently has three novels waiting to be finished. "Now that the kids are grown I have more time," laughs Marge. "Time was when the only opportunity I had to read while I was waiting in the doctor's office

Area Artists, Craftsmen Perform at Festival

High winds Saturday kept many persons away from the third annual Spring Arts Festival at the Wayne city auditorium.

The festival was sponsored by the Wayne Regional Arts Council with support from the Nebraska Arts Council and featured many performances and displays by musicians, artists and craftsmen from throughout the region.

THE MOST popular attraction during the daylong show was an afternoon performance by The Pied Piper Family Comedy Theatre.

The show, which was entertaining to adults as well as youngsters, was held inside the auditorium and included a revue of comedy sketches, fairy tales, jokes, folklore, magic, music and audience participation fun.

Original stories by the Pied Pipers were alternated with their own versions of familiar fairy tales, parodies of popular film and television programs, magic acts and songs.

A group of Hastings College students started the Pied Pipers in the summer of 1969 as a children's theatre. Since then it has grown into a company of professional actors with a yearlong touring program serving the entire Midwest.

DISPLAYS and demonstrations during the day featured painting by Dianne Pollard Luff, Mike Luff, Ted and Peter Brown and Linda Modlin, crafts by Turina and Cynthia Walde, Mary Guszak, Jackie Perry, Ron Jungbluth and Evelyn Cermin; wood carvings by Cindy Fitter; weaving by Gail Korn; stained glass by Marle's Art Studio and Maurice Anderson; a plant display by the Kilck and Klaffer Home Extension Club; drawings by Celeste Torczon, Julie Dorcay and Robert Lewis; photography by Carl Swanson, Bill Mellor, Earl Echtenkamp, Dr. Dave Cooley and several Pender High School students; macrame by Diane Brandstetter; quilting by Elaine Anderson; straw craft by Anita Fuetberth; and Kid's Art from Marla McCue.

Curt Hunter, puppeteer, also delighted youngsters and adults throughout the daylong show.

Featured on stage were members of the Wayne Senior Citizens Center's Bobbles and Bubbles band.

SPECIAL entertainment in the Woman's Club room featured Doyle Anderson, baritone; Jed O'Leary, piano; Raymond Petersen, accordion; Wayne Lorenzen, tenor; Ralph Olsen, violin; Wayne Gilliland, harmonica; Clarence May, accordion; Susan Sorensen, piano; Dorothy Kabisch, whistling and roller organ; and musical selections by the Rev. Eddie and Ruth Carter.

WINNERS of drawings during the day were Pat Gross, a painting by Marla McCue; Connie Vopalonsky, glass work mirror by Marle's Art Studio; and Les Torczon, weaving by Gail Korn.

YOUNG KATIE McCue, 21 months old, finds security in her mother's lap during a performance of The Pied Pipers Family Comedy Theatre Saturday afternoon at the Wayne city auditorium. Katie is the daughter of Marla and Robert McCue of Wayne. The Pied Pipers' performance was held in conjunction with the third annual Springs Arts Festival sponsored by the Wayne Regional Arts Council. Among the many area artists and craftsmen who took part in the festival was Maurice Anderson, top left photo, who presented a demonstration on stained glass.

The final deadline for submission was determined at a meeting of the history book committee Monday at the county museum in Wayne.

THE BOOK at the present time will contain over 750 family stories of Wayne Countians both new and old as well as former residents. The book also will include an updated general county history, including histories of the towns, churches, schools, organizations, and other topics of interest to the people of Wayne County.

Book sales will continue for a period of time until the final copy is ready for submission to Taylor Publishing Co. late this year.

BOOK SALES are being made on a pre-sale basis only. This means that persons who haven't purchased a book or wish to buy additional copies for family members should do so as soon as possible.

Gift certificates are available through the Wayne County Historical Society and may be obtained by writing Donna Shufelt.

The new County History Book is scheduled for delivery to the Historical Society in December.

'Extremist Cults' Program Slated at Laurel Church

Carla Pfeiffer, director of the Norfolk Enrichment Center, will present her program on "Extremist Cults" at 8 p.m. Tuesday, May 12, at the United Methodist Church in Laurel.

The program is being sponsored by the Homebuilders.

MRS. Pfeiffer became involved with the issues of religious cults and their use of mind control when her son joined the Moonies, or the Unification Church of Sun Myung Moon.

Her entire family united to investigate alternatives and arranged to rescue and deprogram her son.

SINCE that time, Mrs. Pfeiffer has put a great deal of research and thought into designing a rehabilitation program to meet the problems encountered when trying to re-enter society following a dependent membership roll with a cult.

The "Extremist Cults" program is a slide presentation. Mrs. Pfeiffer explains mind control and describes various cults, how they function, what deprogramming is, and other legal, political and moral issues.

She also invites personal questions from the audience.

THE MAY 12 presentation in Laurel is open to the public.

Lunch will be served following the program and a free will offering will be taken.

Iris Society President Promises Exceptional Mother's Day Show

An exceptional variety of Iris types is expected for a Mother's Day Iris show sponsored on the Sunset Plaza Mall in Norfolk by the Elkhorn Valley Iris Society.

Jim Hummel of Wayne, president of the area club, explained that the unusual spring weather should permit considerable competition this year in Iris classes that are usually not in full bloom until closer to Memorial Day. Those varieties include tall bearded Iris, border bearded, miniature tall bearded and Siberian irises.

"At the same time," pointed out Hummel, "the usual Mother's Day classes are performing quite well and include dwarf and intermediate irises."

VERA Hummel, who co-chairs with her husband the committee for classification and placement of entries at the show, added that this should also provide more interesting competition in the flower arrangement division.

She suggests a visit to the show as a nice addition to Mother's Day activities on Sunday.

THE SHOW will be open to the public from 1 until 4:30 p.m. Membership is not required to enter the show, even though it is officially accredited for awards of the American Iris Society.

The names of Iris varieties is required to enter the individual stalk competition, but not for arrangements. Display containers will be provided for all entries except arrangements, which must include irises.

WAYNE area gardeners interested in entering may obtain more information or arrange to pick up a show schedule by contacting the Hummels or Roger Nelson.

Horticulture judges will be from Omaha and Sioux Falls, S. D.

Patricia Glass is April Bride

St. Mary's Catholic Church in Lincoln was the scene for the April 25 afternoon wedding of Patricia Glass and Mark VanLaningham, both of Lincoln.

The Rev. David Bourek officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mary and Verlin Glass of Wayne and June and William VanLaningham of Lincoln.

DIANE Glass of Wayne served her sister as maid of honor. Richard Glass of Wayne, the bride's brother, was best man.

Seating the guests were Gary Glass of Muscatine, Iowa, a brother of the bride, and Harold Blodt of Omaha.

Doug Boome of Lincoln sang "Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer," accompanied by Catherine Gillespie of Lincoln.

THE BRIDE appeared at her father's side in a long white silesia gown with a sweetheart neckline trimmed in silk Venice lace. The attached chapel train fell from a sunburst pleated skirt.

She carried a silk nosegay of pink roses, yellow daisies, purple violets, mint azalea blossoms, pink miniature carnations, rose bell flower, blue primula and white stephanotis with pink, blue and white satin streamers.

THE MAID of honor wore a floor length pink polyester gown topped with a sheer lace sleeveless jacket that tied at the neckline. She carried a silk multi-colored nosegay with pink and white streamers.

The bridegroom and his attendant were attired in light blue tuxedos with navy blue trim, white ruffled shirts and ties trimmed in blue.

The bride's mother wore a pink polyester dress in full length designed with long sleeves and a draped front and back panel over the bodice. The mother of the bridegroom selected a long sleeved pink dress, also in full length, overlaid with light pink nylon with white Swiss dots. The cuffs, neckline and waistline were trimmed with white lace.

MR. AND Mrs. Gary Glass of Muscatine, Iowa greeted the guests who attended a reception in the church basement following the ceremony.

Guests were registered by Janet Kimm of Lincoln, sister of the bridegroom, and gifts were arranged by Virginia and Jean Koll of Wayne.

The wedding cake, which was baked by Agnes Reda of Lincoln, was cut and served by Phyllis Fischer and Jane Doty of Lincoln. Sharon Glandt of Omaha poured and Patty Payne of Neligh served punch.

WAITRESSES and assisting in the kitchen were Rose Rieken, Fran Poehlman and Marsha Langston of Wayne, and Karen Watts of Lincoln.

The newlyweds are making their home in Lincoln.

Fighting Fire and Wind

STRONG WINDS didn't hamper the Wayne Fire Department too much as the group responded to a call on a farm seven miles south and three miles east of Wayne, Saturday. The grass and tree fire was put under control with no damage. Here, Chris Lueders saws down a large branch so firemen can extinguish a small fire high in the tree.

Board

120 days to complete the $150,000 project.

Town & Country Builders is owned by Wayne's Arnold J. Anderson.

According to Schaut, about $130,000 will be used to construct the convent and the remaining $20,000 will be spent furnishing the structure.

PLANNING COMMISSION members met in special session Monday, April 20, after the architectural firm failed to represent the project at a regularly scheduled April 6 public hearing. A scheduling mixup at Beardlee's office forced the architects to seek a special session for approval of the first conditional use permit for the Providence Road construction site south of the hospital.

Beardlee and Schaut appeared at the April 20 meeting, an informational session in which the commission officially approved the permit and sent the plans on to the City Council, which must make the final decision. At that meeting, Orville Brandstetter, a commission member, questioned Beardlee and other commissioners regarding the original land covenant, which does allow the construction of support services facilities on the site.

BRANDSTETTER argued his point to no avail during the session and was the only member to vote against approval of the conditional use permit.

There was discussion as to whether Dr. Lyle Seymour, president of Wayne State College, had been advised of the request for the permit and the meeting date for its consideration.

Jim Holtgrewe, city planner and building inspector, confirmed that Seymour's office had been notified. No one representing the college appeared at the public hearing or the subsequent special session.

At Monday (May 4) night's regular meeting, Dan Sherry, chairman, reminded commission members of Wednesday's special lunch hour session. The reminder came after Sherry read a thank you letter to the commission from Beardlee.

In the letter, Beardlee again apologized for the earlier scheduling snafu and expressed appreciation for the commission's special effort on the project.

THE CONVENT is designed to provide living quarters for four sisters who work and live at the hospital. They are moving into the convent, which is designed for four bedrooms, two spare bedrooms, a living area, a kitchen and chapel, is expected to free much needed hospital bed space for patients.

The single story wood and brick structure will include a single stall garage within its 3,700 square feet of floor space. The new site is east of Providence Road.

Beardlee said the new site is level and the building was designed for a level area so very few changes had to be made to original plans.

Schaut said most of the changes were minor and "to outsiders" the building would look the same as originally planned.

Candidates List Due in June

ESU Searching for Evaluation Ramrod

Educational Service Unit One is looking for a ramrod to ride herd on its board-inflated, top-to-bottom evaluation.

An effort by the ESU administrator Harry Mills to hire Wayne's Waldo Johnson, former superintendent of Wausa School District, for the job has not been successful.

So, during Tuesday night's ESU Board of Directors meeting in Laurel, chairman William Wiese asked Mills to put together a list (four or five) candidates for the job.

Mills was asked to "sound out" the candidates and present the list along with a report at next month's meeting.

WIESE, indicating he was not willing to give up on Johnson, said: "The way it's going, it'll be fall before we get started. Contact these people (the candidates). We need to get some answers."

Mills ended up with the task, despite the fact that during the April meeting Wiese appointed board members Randy Shaw and Kenneth Olds, both of Wayne, to a candidate search committee.

At that meeting, Wiese indicated that both Shaw and Olds were to work closely with Mills in coming up with names for the evaluation steering committee chairmanship. The board's consensus was that Johnson would be approached first. Neither Shaw, nor Olds offered additional names Tuesday night when it was learned that Johnson was reluctant to take the job.

Mills said Johnson's reluctance stemmed from a concern about his teachers' retirement pension.

ESU'S ADMINISTRATOR told board members he had spent about three hours with Johnson presenting information regarding the forthcoming evaluation.

Johnson received information from the recent evaluation conducted by Education Service Unit 13 at Sidney, according to Mills.

"After reviewing the offer for a couple of weeks, he turned it down," Mills reported.

Mills then told the board he had some reservations about approaching what may end up being a year-long evaluation without some guidelines. Noting that he has served on evaluation teams for school districts, Mills said he was familiar with the ground rules in that context, but was at a loss on how to evaluate an Educational Service Unit.

"There is just no criteria on service units," he said. "I'm at a standstill."

DURING DISCUSSION Wiese told Mills that he certainly did not want to force the job on Johnson. "If he doesn't want it, I don't want to force it on him," Wiese said, indicating that he would make an effort to talk with Johnson.

Board member Dave Hay questioned the direction of the proposed evaluation and wondered aloud about the merits of comparing ESU-1 with other service units across the state.

"What are we looking to do?" he asked. "Show how well we are spending the taxpayers' money...how well we are serving the public?"

Hay said the service unit was different from school boards. "I'm not interested in seeing if everyone is doing his job right," he added. "I'm not going to try to decide if a specific member of the unit is doing his job."

Wiese agreed. "My concern is not to compare us with other units, but how we evaluate our service to schools in the area."

SEVERAL BOARD members then offered steering committee candidate suggestions to Mills in an effort to begin building the list.

Board member Berneal Gustafson asked Mills about the possibility of a unit-wide questionnaire. Mills said he had tried it. "I've done that...basically, we've had good reports," he said. "If we have a squeaky wheel, we go out, find out where it is and fix it."

Olds asked the board if "someone in education" could do the job this summer if they were not "actively engaged in their work." However, Shaw countered with a concern that he felt the board should be looking for someone who could be with the evaluation for the full year, if necessary.

"As we are looking for someone with an educational background, I think we should keep in mind that we may need someone year-round...someone throughout the evaluation," Shaw said.

BOARD MEMBER Claire Hansen said that he felt part of the problem was that board members—since they were not involved in education—did not know the candidate possibilities.

He indicated that the ESU staff would have a better idea of who they are and whether they might be qualified.

That's when Wiese, agreeing with Hansen, asked Mills to come up with a candidates list for the next meeting.

ESU staff member Gary

Vopalensky said he hoped the evaluation would help determine whether "we are followers, leaders or innovators."

He said he felt the ESU was responsible to "everyone" in the unit. "I hope we're innovators," he said. "This may be an opportunity for us to do something other units have kicked around and wanted to do for a long time."

VOPALENSKY ALSO suggested the board meet in executive session to determine the 1981-82 salary schedules for non-certified ESU staff. An executive session already had been scheduled for a report from Vopalensky on negotiations with certified ESU staff members.

ESU negotiators and the unit's professional staff have not reached a contract agreement for the next school year. During the executive session board members decided to make a counter offer to the certified staff.

Board members also approved a 10 percent salary increase for the ESU's non-certified personnel.

Convent

Sandahl agreed, saying: "You've got to dig in your heels and hang tough. They (administrators) should be (given increases) under their own merits."

Haun has been cautioning the board to look at a 10 percent overall budget ceiling with the knowledge that some costs are going to exceed that figure and that others need to come in below it to make the target.

Sandahl appointed Giese, Jim Hummel and himself to the salary committee that's expected to work with Haun and report to the board at its next meeting.

Haun provided board members with a computer data sheet showing salary ranges of administrators and other supervisors serving school districts across the state.

BOARD MEMBERS did approve salary schedules for bus drivers, secretaries, teacher aides, cooks, custodians and housekeepers.

The schedule outlines a 9 percent across the board hike for bus drivers, a 30 cent per hour increase for secretaries, cooks and custodians and jumps the substitute teachers salary to $40 per day, according to Haun. Currently, substitutes get $35 per day.

In the case of substitute teachers, the schedule provides for a jump to $45 per day after 20 days of continuous service.

Bus drivers are, under the new schedule, at $370 per month for nine months of service, plus compensation for additional school activities. The 1981-82 schedules for secretaries and teachers aides begin at $4 per hour and range to $4.50 per hour.

Custodian salaries begin at $4.50 per hour and range to $5 per hour, with housekeepers starting at $3.95 and ranging to $4.45 per hour.

Salary levels for kitchen help begin at $3.95 and range to $4.25. Assistant cooks at Wayne earn $4.35 under the new schedule and the Carroll supervisor's salary was set at $4.45 per hour.

HAUN TOLD board members that his estimates show the salary expenses for instructional staff this year will come in within $2,000 of the estimated budget.

With teacher contracts unsettled by budget time last year, the board had to rely on an estimate for planning purposes. The figure entered was approximately $791,700.

That figure was arrived at in July, well before the WEA settled with the board.

Hartington Tops Laurel for Winside Boys Title

THE FINAL HANDOFF is completed as Pat Onderstal makes the exchange with Leonard Wood for the final leg of the two-mile relay in the Winside Invitational track and field meet held last Thursday.

Allen won the race with a time of 9:06.3. Other members of the relay team are Brad Stewart and Marty Mahler. Hartington won the boys and girls team titles.

Big Sticks Pace Laurel Bears To NE Nebraska League Title

The name of Marquardt kept popping up in the Laurel lineup and Bancroft must have thought it was seeing double.

The Laurel Bears, backed by the hitting of brothers Brian and Dave Marquardt, wrapped up the Northeast Nebraska League championship with an 8-5 win over Bancroft.

It was the seventh consecutive win for the Bears.

Brian Marquardt had two hits in three at bats and scored three runs. One of the lead off batter's hits was a double. Dave Marquardt went three for four at the plate and scored two runs. He blasted a home run and added a double to drive in three runs.

Other key hits were a two-run homer by Bryan Buss and an RBI double by Joe Olsen. Laurel scored three runs in the first inning and added two in the second for a five-run lead. Bancroft closed the gap by scoring four runs in the third. The Bears struck back with two runs in the fourth and one in the fifth to secure the victory.

Phil Martin earned the victory on the mound for Laurel. He pitched seven complete innings, struck out seven batters and walked one.

Ron Hirschman and Mark Herrmann each had one RBI.

First Loss of Year
The Bears suffered their first loss of the season 4-2 to the hands of Lincoln Plus last week. The loss dropped Laurel's record to 7-1.

Academy pitcher Joe Olsen has missed two starts due to a shoulder injury he sustained. According to Laurel coach Bob Weisenberg, Olsen was scheduled to have the shoulder X-rayed and the X-rays would be sent to Minneapolis for analyzing.

Laurel is scheduled to host Bancroft today (Thursday) in its regular season finale. District action will open Monday at the Laurel ball park. The Bears will receive a first round bye.

Wakefield Earns Split Against Lincoln Schools

Pitcher Mark Starzl aided his pitching performance by pounding a two-run triple in the first inning to lead the Wakefield Trojans to a 4-3 win over Lincoln High and a split of their games against Lincoln schools, Friday.

Starzl, who pitched all seven innings, threw a seven-hitter, struck out six and walked four. He also drove in Mike Clay and Jeff Coble in the first inning and scored another run to give Wakefield a quick three-run jump.

"The key to the game was strong pitching by Starzl. He is rounding into shape (recovering from a back injury) and the team showed excellent defense," Trojan coach Joe Coble said. "Our defense was very, very strong, particularly down the middle."

Lincoln outthrew Wakefield seven to four but the Trojans collected the key hits at the right time.

The hosts came back with one run in the bottom of the first inning but Wakefield scored again in the top of the second. Lincoln rallied with one run in the fourth and one in the fifth but could get no closer.

Disastrous Outcome
The second game of the doubleheader was a disaster as Lincoln East bombed the Trojans 14-0. Wakefield was held scoreless on five hits in the five-inning game.

East took advantage of seven Wakefield errors to manage 14 runs and a 10-run rule win on just eight hits. The loss dropped the Trojans to 1-6 for the year.

Coach Joe Coble said that the defense was every bit as bad in the second game as it was good in the first game. "We made too many errors, most in the first two innings," he said.

East scored six runs in the bottom of the first and five in the second. Three runs in the bottom of the fourth were added insurance. Mark Starzl was leading batter for the Trojans with two hits in three plate appearances. Mike Clay, Jeff Coble and Dale Phipps collected one hit each. Phipps was tagged for the pitching loss.

The Trojans finished their regular season in a game at Wayne Wednesday. Wakefield will meet Bancroft in first round of district action at Laurel, Monday. That game is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m.

WANTED: MANPOWER for renovation work at the Wayne city ball park. Recreation Director Hank Overin reports that four nouns for weekly renovation work have been poor.

Numbers of volunteer workers are small and completion of work is falling behind schedule. Wayne, which is required to meet one-fourth of the project cost with in-kind labor, is not producing its share of commitment toward the project.

Volunteer workers are needed at the next work sessions from 8:30 p.m. until dark on Monday and Tuesday. Within a week or so, all in-kind labor should be completed and contracting will begin. If more workers don't show up, the community may not be able to meet its in-kind requirement.

And if the community doesn't meet the in-kind labor requirement, funds must be raised in some other way or from some other source. The worst thing that could happen is use of tax money for the project.

Work at the ball park does not take many hours nor is it extremely hard labor. Every worker helps increase the in-kind contribution and that is badly needed. If you have a couple of free hours or even one hour free hour, stop by the ball park Monday or Tuesday with a hammer, shovel or crow bar. Your help will be appreciated.

Overin points out that more than 200 men participate in the Wayne Men's Softball League and many complain about the area facilities. Softball teams will be able to use the ball park facilities when they are completed yet few softball players have helped with renovation work this spring, he emphasized.

WHERE HAS THE spring sports season gone? Here it is May and baseball, track and golf are reaching the final, critical weeks of the year. Districts are scheduled throughout the upcoming two weeks.

District baseball pairings are drawn up and scheduled to begin at Laurel on Monday. Pairings are listed elsewhere in the sports section. District track and field will be held on Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Wayne's boys and girls are scheduled to participate in the Class B-4 district meet at Columbus, Thursday. Wakefield and Laurel will compete at Lyons in the Class C-3 meet, Wednesday. Allen and Winside are scheduled to participate in the Class D-4 meet at Wayne State College, Thursday.

Wayne's golf team will open district action Monday at Grand Island.

THE WAYNE-CARROLL High School band performed this past weekend at the Worlds of Fun Band Festival in Kansas City, Wayne was awarded two excellent and one superior rating in the competition.

Excellents in Competition

Wayne Band Has 'Worlds of Fun'

The Wayne Carroll High School band earned two excellent ratings and one superior rating at competition held Saturday and Sunday in Kansas City. The individual ratings averaged out to an overall rating of excellent for the band at the Worlds of Fun Band Festival.

Ron, Dalton, Wayne band director, reported that his band competed against 47 bands from Arkansas, Texas, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa and Oklahoma. Wayne participated in the Class A full competition division. Class A is broken down to schools with enrollment of less than 600 students.

THE BAND LEFT Wayne at 5 a.m. Saturday, arrived at Kansas City by 11:30 and was back in Wayne Sunday evening. The group stayed across from the sports complex during its stay in Kansas City.

Dalton said the band learned some valuable things on the trip and spent many hours at Worlds of Fun. According to the Wayne band director, the music played by the Wayne Carroll band was "very difficult." He pointed out that if the band would have played the music real well it probably would have won the contest.

Everyone enjoyed the trip and everyone is tired. The kids showed their real colors and everyone was proud to be a part of this band," Dalton stated.

Sponsors for the band trip were Mr. and Mrs. Jim Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Don Kubik, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Mosley, Mr. and Mrs. Herb Niemann, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Fleming, Mrs. Vicky Skokan and Mrs. JoAnn Proett.

Planners Review City Street Program

The City Planning Commission had its first official look at Wayne's proposed one and six year street program this week several months after it reached the City Council.

under state law for municipalities with street building and improvement projects involving state matching funds was requested by Dr. Ken Liska, a commission member during an April 6 meeting.

Jim Holtgrewe, city planner and building inspector, agreed and was asked to secure copies of the plan for board review despite the fact that any review was academic at that point.

Vern Schultz, Wayne's superintendent of public works, said the plan had been filed without planning commission review, but that it was "merely an oversight."

AT THAT TIME commission members expressed concern that as a group charged with responsibility for reviewing city planning it should have ample opportunity to review the street program.

Commission members Monday night discussed several street projects listed on the proposed street improvement program, which prioritizes resurfacing, widening and building for the coming year and lists priorities for the next five years.

THE EAST 10th Street project recently approved for bids by the City Council was discussed as was Seventh Street reconstruction, which calls for resurfacing and widening from Main Street to Windom, was targeted for 1981 completion.

THE SEVENTH Street project, which involves the possibility of state funding, has been tentatively set for 1983. Liska said he was sure the state Department of Roads would help on the Seventh Street project if the city would widen the street to four lanes.

Wayne-Carroll School Board Hikes Tuition; Commencement Speaker is Robert Shively

Tuition rates for Wayne High School will jump $500 next year. The Wayne-Carroll School Board of Education set the tuition figure at $5,000 Monday night — $500 above the current year's $4,500 level.

In addition, board members approved $400 increases in tuition for educable mentally handicapped and learning disability youngsters, as well as $400 for trainable mentally handicapped students.

THE INCREASES represent about an 11 percent hike in tuition for the 1981-82 school year. Superintendent Francis Haun recommended the board increase the tuition at least 10 percent.

He told the board that the district's tuition is below average when compared with figures across the state.

Wibur Giese, board member, said he felt the district should not be "that low." And, board president Neil Sandahl said he wanted to see the tuition figure "near the median."

Suggestions to raise the tuition even higher were countered by board member Becky Keldel. "We should stay reasonable when we are asking others to do the same with us," she said.

IN OTHER action, the board hired Lisa J. Streff, 24, a graduate of Wayne State College, to replace Ginger Bygland, a first grade teacher at West Elementary School.

Bygland's husband has been transferred from the area, according to Haun. Streff, who has a degree in elementary and special education and is working on her masters degree at Wayne State, did student teaching in the district.

Board members also gave Haun the go-ahead on the purchase of a new 2100 color television camera from Educational Service Unit One. Bids are due on the equipment through ESU next month, according to Haun.

Haun said the old camera is in such bad shape it won't provide a trade-in. He said the camera, which will be used for a number of school activities including instruction and sports events, needed to be ordered now for delivery in the fall.

HAUN REMINDED board members that graduation was set for 2 p.m. Sunday, May 24, at the Willow Bowl, Wayne State College campus.

Keynote speaker for commencement is Robert W. Shively, a WSC graduate, who is director of energy applications for the Nebraska Public Power District. Shively worked in Norfolk for many years, Haun said, and was president of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce. Board members who had completed their superintendent evaluation turned in their report to Haun. No public comment was made regarding the results of the evaluation, nor was there an board discussion regarding the extensive, annual performance rating of the superintendent.

Also approved was a technician for the record agreement that allows the district to acquire surplus equipment which is available at a nominal fee. Haun said the equipment usually involved surplus armed force tools or machinery that can be obtained by the school district to a handling fee. The next board meeting was set for 8 p.m. Monday, June 8.

Advisory Council Sets 1981-82 Goals

The Wayne-Carroll Schools Community Advisory Council is concerned about funding cuts and their impact on the school district for 1981-82.

As a result, the council's official year-end report to the district's board of education Monday night reflected next-year goals that deal with community support in those areas that may be threatened by cuts.

For instance, the council's nutrition committee plans to study the school lunch program — a federal program currently in limbo under proposed Reagan administration cuts — in hopes of becoming more aware of new federal guidelines for nutritional alternatives.

THAT WAS one of many goals outlined to the board by Kathleen Schultz, council chairman, as she told board members the group hoped to become "more of a buffer" for the district when belt tightening threatens a program. Schultz told the board that with the impending cuts in Title I funding, the council's committee hopes to work with the new district budget currently being prepared.

ing the needs of special program students and teachers at the high school level during the 1981-82 year. She also pledged the council's special programs committee to active dissemination of information throughout the community and to the recruitment of volunteers to help as needed.

Schultz, who will be stepping down as president of the council because her husband, a Wayne State College instructor is on sabbatical, said the special talents committee set seven goals for next year.

THEY INCLUDE encouraging visits to schools with programs for gifted students, discussing and clarifying school policies with regard to gifted students, and encouraging the district to develop a comprehensive K-12 plan for meeting the needs of gifted children and involving more parents in the program.

She said other goals include encouraging faculty member participation in in-service training sessions on the education of gifted students, pursuing the possibility of increasing the use of volunteers in the school system, public information and liaison work between the committee and faculty.

Schultz, who gave an overview of goals met during the current year, said "To see the things all the people here in Wayne have been doing to support the school system is really neat."

WITH A newly formed special programs committee, formerly the committee for Project Success, educable mentally handicapped and pre-schoolers, Schultz said goals include assess

YEARS OF EDUCATION will soon pay off for some Wayne State graduates now that their college careers have ended. Spring commencement was held Sunday afternoon in Rice Auditorium. Exercises were originally scheduled in the Willow Bowl but a pleasant rain forced the move indoors. Seniors line up here in preparation for commencement. Speaker for the ceremony was Esper Boel, a Wayne State Foundation Trustee from Copenhagen, Denmark.

McCright

"SHE also loves to bake," says daughter Paula, a freshman who has just returned home from school, rummaging through the cupboards in search for a cookie. "Are all the cookies gone already?"

Marge, throwing up her hands, begins to laugh. "I can't imagine families who have leftover food to throw away. When I bake, it's always gone before it's even had a chance to cool."

There's always fresh baked cookies and cakes in the McCright household and Marge says she's often asked how she managed to cook for so many persons when all the kids were home.

"That's never been a problem," she laughs. "When a kid was born I threw a potato in the pot, and when he left home I took the potato out."

"I ENJOY cooking and caring for my family," says Marge, shaking her head vigorously from left to right when asked if she would have as large of family if she were starting again.

"I've always wanted a big family. Even when there were 15 kids at home we took in a young boy who wasn't getting along with his own family. Hell, what was one more kid?"

EVEN though most of the children are gone, Marge says she still works 12 to 14 hours a day. "I don't need a lot of sleep. I guess that's because I learned to sleep with one eye open for so many years."

Marge pours a second cup of coffee, answers the telephone, and helps daughter Paula let down the hemline on the dress she plans to wear this year to the prom while at the same time reflecting on her years as a mother.

"I guess I've been kind of fortunate," she smiles. They've (the kids) have been pretty good, maybe because I've always been willing to give them a second chance and relied on the fact that they had been taught right from wrong."

"THERE'S no way to tell you how I feel about kids," smiles Marge. "I just love them."

"I get a little wild sometimes, especially when I'm watching them participate in some sport but I can't help it."

Marge says on Mother's Day she expects to receive cards and telephone calls from children away from home, but no gifts. "I don't believe in gifts for every little occasion, and I've never taught the kids to send everyone a gift. A card is enough."

"I'll tell you," says Marge, "when the kids were little their Mother's Day gift was whatever weed they could pull out of the yard. I've never been a material person," reflects Marge. "Maybe it's because I've never been able to afford them. Even at Christmastime the gifts we gave the kids were always something they could use."

Love is a heck of a lot more important than all of the material things. The material things they'll be able to earn themselves when they get older.

"THERE'S been a lot of happiness and some sadness," says the mother of 16, who is quick to point out that the happiness far outweighs the sadness.

In addition to daughter Kathleen, who died at the age of five weeks, son Steven was accidental shot and killed while hunting 10 years ago. He was 14 years ago.

MARGE says children are her life and offers advice to young mothers just beginning their families.

"Don't give up. They'll grow up and go away. And, if you've been a good mother, they'll come back home."

"OH, BY the way," laughs Marge, "maybe we should mention that I do have a husband." Tom works as a salesman for Mike Perry Chevrolet Oldsmobile in Wayne.

Grads

when Val Peterson was U.S. ambassador to Denmark. Peterson introduced Boel to Norman Nordstrand, who was executive secretary of the Wayne State Foundation until his death last January.

In 1967, Boel became a trustee of the foundation. Boel said that his commencement speech, which gave a businessman's overview of common economic interests between the United States and Denmark, was largely shaped by suggestions from Nordstrand.

"IT IS VERY important that people can communicate with each other," Boel said. "But, it is perhaps even more important that nations can speak together."

He said that Scandinavians view the United States with sympathy. "We see your faults, as these are perhaps almost the same as our own faults," he said. Addressing the problem of international inflation and recession, Boel said that, in principle, the problems are the same for all countries.

"We are burdened by high costs from the OPEC countries, which we are not able to cover in our production costs," he said. "Countries which have a public sector of more than 50 percent of the total (economic) activity, such as Scandinavia, have the greatest problem."

Boel said that the priority of problems has reversed in the sense that inflation, although always a concern, was a lesser evil than unemployment for many years. "Today most governments regard inflation to be a greater evil," he explained.

HE SAID THE Danes have built up unemployment subsidies to such a high level that unemployment is no longer a problem for anyone's living standard. "And it seems to be politically impossible to reduce the level of public activity (government programs) so we can 'fit the clothes' (balance the budget)," he continued.

"As we cannot export our marvelous public subsidies and other social support arrangements, we have to stop producing them and use our minds and efforts to produce the things which we can send out of the country," he continued. "In other words, we must export."

Boel said the reductions in the public sector will, at the same time, mean the freezing of taxes and duties, and perhaps even a reduction.

"This will mean a decline in the rate of interest, an increased level of investment, a reduction in the unemployment level, an increased productivity and a sharp decline in the rate of inflation," he said.

The international businessman said the recipe was no secret, but that few in his country dared talk about it or use it.

BOEL SAID the challenge of the '80s will be to meet the demands of a majority of Western world citizens "who wish less influence rather than more influence from the public sector." He insisted that a change of direction is necessary.

Questioning whether people would be poorer for the economizing, Boel asked: "If the Western world were to survive for some years with the living standard of 1979, and perhaps of 1978, and at the same time provide the lesser developed countries with a small step forward, can we really call that poverty?"

"If the government is not so openhanded with all types of social supports to its citizens, is this poverty?" he continued. "I question it."

Continuing, Boel said: "If private initiative will have a chance again, if, again, it pays to do some extra work, well, then this should not be a sign of poverty either."

IN A SOMEWHAT pessimistic forecast, Boel said it will likely be 1983 before Europe will have growth that when combined with U.S. recovery, will lighten the economic situation.

"People think that taxes have become so high that the desire and motivation to work, save and invest has gone," he said. "As a result, the level of economic activity has fallen and likewise the national income."

In a reference to President Ronald Reagan's new approach to economic recovery, a theory called supply-side economics, Boel said: "If we in Denmark are to bring out house in order, we ought to pay more attention to President Reagan's thoughts and ideas."

He said that now the United States, France, West Germany and England are changing course "trying to create a new foundation for a new growth in this decade." Boel noted that little countries, such as Denmark, will likely follow.

Boel warned the United States will be criticized by the rest of the world for the new economic policies and must guard against being arrogant as a result of that criticism.

State's Sunshine Law Works Under Overcast Skies

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association Nebraska lawmakers recently took a close look at the state's so-called Sunshine law, which is supposed to let the "sun shine" on political activities in Nebraska.

But a number of events since the law was first placed on the books several years ago have prompted some citizens and politicians to, in effect, allege that the statute is operating under overcast skies.

One of the most recent events was Neligh Sen. John DeCamp's revelation last year that he had used campaign funds for such things as fish tanks, office furnishings and gold.

DeCamp at the time contended his actions were legal under the law, and he was found innocent of wrongdoing. The Neligh lawmaker also said his use of campaign committee funds pointed out weaknesses in the Sunshine law.

DeCamp's actions prompted some senators to propose statutory changes that would outlaw the types of expenditures he made. DeCamp, however, took a different view.

During recent floor debate, DeCamp offered an amendment to eliminate the state Sunshine Commission — legally called the Nebraska Accountability and Disclosure Commission — and revise the current accountability and disclosure process.

DeCamp's proposal would have delegated enforcement powers to the state attorney general.

But lawmakers rejected DeCamp's 51-page amendment on a 22-22 vote. The split didn't completely eliminate the chance of DeCamp's success in the future, however. With 49 senators in the Legislature, DeCamp could be successful if he could pick up the five outstanding votes.

Lawmakers, nonetheless, prepared for a final vote on a bill — without DeCamp's amendment — that would tighten the Sunshine law. The measure advanced to the final stage of consideration on a 27-11 vote, after nearly a day of debate.

THE ORIGINAL version of LB134 would close the loophole in the Sunshine law that now enables people to use campaign funds for personal expenses. Senators expanded the measure by lacking on numerous other amendments, several of which were prompted by recent campaign-type tactics that lawmakers said showed weaknesses in the Sunshine law.

Although there still appears to be internal squabbling about some portions of the bill, lawmakers appear unwilling to kill it. Sen. George Fenger of Bellevue offered a KILL motion, but it was soundly defeated, 8-23.

There is, meanwhile, one very interesting aspect to the recent legislative debate. When the Sunshine law was new, lawmakers seemed to spend more time fielding complaints from local officials who considered the law burdensome, and even unnecessary.

Frequently officials complained that certain disclosures required under the law — including property disclosures — were unwarranted in small towns because everyone knew everyone else's business.

But, in a sense, the debate has graduated to a more elevated level. Practices by state senators and statewide campaign committees recently have attracted much more attention and public debate. DeCamp's actions, for example, made headlines for weeks and were in the press for several months.

issues is certainly valid, and probably necessary: Even that level of the law covers local officials, campaigns and issues.

But lawmakers cannot forget the complaints that were loudly heard when the law was new. The complaints from the folks in Greater Nebraska also must be examined for a complete and thorough review of the Sunshine law if the sun is to truly shine in Nebraska.

PUBLIC VIEWS SOUGHT — The redistricting plans for Nebraska's various election districts are now ready for public scrutiny.

The Legislature's Miscellaneous Subjects Committee recently drafted some plans that it will put before the public at night hearings in Lincoln this month.

The redistricting plan for congressional districts affects only Thayer and Cass counties, and party officials in those two areas don't seem exactly pleased with the committee's proposal.

Thayer and Cass County officials and residents will have their chance to publicly discuss the proposal at a May 7 hearing.

NEBRASKANS interested in legislative redistricting will get their shot at a public hearing May 12. The hearing on districts for the University of Nebraska Board of Regents, state Board of Education, state judges and the state Public Service Commission will be May 19.

Although redistricting to some may seem unimportant, it is important for all of the state's voters. The district boundaries determine from what district a candidate can run and who you will vote for in each of the district races.

Redistricting proposals are designed to ensure equal population — and thereby representation — among districts.

Wayne's Burning Issue

If you give people an opportunity, a few of them will burn you. That, anyway, seems to be the case with Wayne's brush-burning site on the south edge of town.

The site, just to the west as you head south on state Highway 15 over Logan Creek, is leased from a private property owner. The landowner has agreed to provide city residents with a close to town place for disposing of burnable tree refuse — branches, twigs, brush that is 8 inches or smaller.

Almost anyone driving by can easily see that it is frequently littered with loads of green lawn clippings, leaves, garden clean up garbage, discarded building materials, lumber, pallets and a host of other debris.

Much of the garbage dumped there, despite warning signs to the contrary, won't burn. And, some of the stuff that will burn leaves odd nails, pieces of glass, chunks of tin and other materials scattered in ashes.

That, city residents, is in violation of the agreement and abuse of another man's property if not only leaves the landowner stuck with someone else's unwanted garbage, but also makes the city tended fire difficult, if not impossible — for city crews to control.

Authorized city crews supervise the burning there, which is done by permit only issued by the city fire chief. Burning, which is not started unless there is a north wind, can take as much as seven hours when only the approved tree and brush material is piled at the site.

When unapproved waste material is mixed with the tree refuse, burning takes much longer and is subject to shifting winds that send thick, foul smelling smoke into the city's business and residential districts.

What if boys down town, is that if we keep abusing our privileges there, we're going to lose open access to the burning site.

If violations continue, it is altogether possible that the site will be closed off. Or, available only during restricted hours with a garbage check at the site to catch the careless culprits. That would be unfortunate. But, as so often happens, the carelessness of a few frequently penalizes the many.

Please heed the regulations posted at the site.

Sugar Beet Producers Seek Loan Program

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION
By M.M. Van Kirk,
Director of Information

The nation's sugar beet producers, through their associations, have asked that the 1981 Farm Bill now in the process of being put together in Congress, include a non-recourse loan program for U.S. domestic sugar producers.

Dave Carter, president to the U.S. Beet Sugar Association, testifying before the House Committee on Agriculture's Subcommittee on Cotton, Rice and Sugar, declared such a program is necessary for the survival of a domestic sugar industry by providing stability and he outlined the reasons for the industry request.

Kidvid Comments Due

June 6 is the comment deadline on the Federal Trade Commission's staff proposal to terminate its rulemaking proceedings which would have restricted TV advertising aimed at children too young to understand its selling purpose (the so called "Kidvid" rule).

Although an early 1981 staff report to the commission supports the conclusion that young children place "indiscriminate trust" in televised advertising messages and do not understand the techniques used in advertising, the only way to remedy the situation would be to ban completely all advertisements oriented to young children. Such a ban, the staff report concludes, could not be put into effect.

Another issue the FTC staff report addresses is the fact that advertising for sugared products is centered on children's TV and that this advertising persuades children to ask for these products. Because the evidence on the record is inconclusive on whether this advertising adversely affects children's attitudes about nutrition, the staff report recommends that rulemaking on this issue will be terminated.

Finally, on the subject of dental health, the staff report noted that the record establishes that dental caries is a major childhood disease, and consuming sugar contributes to dental caries, and there is no scientific way to determine the cariogenicity of individual food items. The staff report recommends that rulemaking on this issue also be terminated.

FTC does not want to receive any more evidence on the subject of children's advertising. It wants — and you consider — comments only on the staff's proposal.

If you would like to voice your opinions on this issue, send your comments to Secretary, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20580. For more information write or call Wallace Snyder or Judith Wilkander, Bureau of Consumer Protection, FTC, Washington, D.C. 20580. Telephone 202 724 1499. For copies of the final report and staff recommendations, write to FTC's public reference room (No. 130), Washington, D.C. 20580. Telephone 202 523-3598.

Thone Thanks State Seniors

"We have too many experts telling others what is best for them. Our elders know best in nearly all cases who are the most pressing needs of senior citizens."

The Nebraska White House Conference on Aging held April 27-28 made me very proud because it was the culmination of a truly grassroots sampling of opinion among our state's seniors.

Approximately 4,000 of the state's elder statesmen took part in 140 meetings in Nebraska that sought to identify problems of aging and possible solutions. The state conference distilled this material and will express the wishes of Nebraska's senior citizens in Washington at the White House Conference on Aging November 30-December 4, 1981.

It takes a lot of hard work and know how to obtain the opinions of thousands of people and to get them reflected upward through representatives. Everyone who took part in this process is to be congratulated and particularly the Nebraska conference coordinator, Bruce Davis, and chairman Chuck Powell, both of Omaha, and vice chairman Eleanor Crozier of Lincoln.

"One of the problems that is of great concern to Nebraska's senior citizens is the issue that is regarded as number one among America's citizens of all ages: inflation. Ever-increasing costs are a threat to each of us but are truly a peril to those in retirement. Curing inflation would be a great boon for the aged, the middle aged and the youth.

"Maintaining their independence is perhaps the greatest concern of senior citizens. We've got to find new ways, more effective means and a better combination of efforts to provide the support that the elderly need without compelling them to be in institutionalized. We know that one best answer to this problem isn't going to come from either the federal or the state governments. We will have to obtain more citizen involvement on the local level to provide innovative and caring solutions to provide for the needs of senior citizens without depriving them of their freedom, their individuality and their sense of self-worth.

"Along the same lines, the elderly are asking why we are spending so much to keep the aged in hospitals and nursing homes and so little on the science of aging, early detection of health problems and prevention of health problems prevalent among senior citizens.

"It's been very gratifying to have the input of 4,000 Nebraska senior citizens concerning their problems and possible solutions. It would be great, however, if even more of the elderly would give me their views

FOLLOWING are condensations of some of the points Carter made for the domestic sugar industry which includes the farmer producer.

U.S. sugar beet growers are diversified farmers who produce beets in rotation with other crops. Many of those other crops (feed grains, corn, soybeans, cotton, dry beans, etc.) are now covered by support programs. There is no such program for sugar crops and some argue that none is needed. But sugar farmers need similar assurance in order to make the investments in time and equipment to produce the crop.

Beet sugar is different than other crops in that processors must turn it into a usable commodity. A beet sugar factory has a single use and without the basic raw material, it is useless. The financial return for sugar beets must be attractive to the farmer or he will put his land to other use.

A combination of 22 Latin American and Caribbean sugar exporting countries originated close to 75 percent of all America's sugar imports last year. The U.S. is the world's fifth largest sugar producer but is the single example of a producing nation without a national sugar program to assure stability for producers or consumers.

High-Speed-Chase Bill Offers the Right Idea

The Legislature debated on final reading a bill governing high speed chases by law enforcement officers.

The bill, offered by Sen. John DeCamp, seeks to require mandatory loss of driving privileges for two years for persons convicted of fleeing a law enforcement officer.

The bill will require that law enforcement agencies draft written rules dealing with when chases can be initiated, when they must be broken off, and how they must be conducted. Also required is an ongoing education program of law officers regarding their conduct of high speed pursuits.

FINALLY, THE bill will require that there be a review of the relevant laws dealing with high speed chases in the state's manual and that questions dealing with them be on the drivers' license examination.

The bill was amended on final reading. In addition to the other provisions, the bill had provided for the courts to seize and sell vehicles belonging to motorists who flee of officers. Lincoln Sen. Chris Beutler introduced the amendment striking this section. His argument for doing so was that he felt seizure of a vehicle would be found to be constitutional by the Supreme Court.

This bill was prompted by two very tragic accidents in Nebraska recently, involving high speed chases. One involved Trooper Michael Farber of Aurora who was killed Aug. 24, when a car allegedly driven by Randy Gilbert of Omaha, struck the trooper. State troopers had pursued Gilbert for

by Sen. VonMinden

about an hour after he allegedly failed to pay for $13.40 worth of gas at a service station near the Pleasant Dale interchange on the interstate.

THE OTHER CASE involved James Powell, who died after being struck in the head by a bullet from the service revolver of Trooper Jimmy Burns. Omaha police said Burns observed Powell's vehicle traveling at a high rate of speed on Interstate 80 about 2 a.m., Nov. 23 and gave chase of about 19 miles.

Powell died when Burns was opening the door of Powell's stopped vehicle and Powell started to drive away. Police said Burns was pulled off his feet and as he fell, his gun accidentally discharged.

I feel LB 76 will be an effective bill. It takes a step in the right direction. That is, I feel police should be given the tools to work effectively, yet that should be required to act responsibly and in the best interests of the citizens of Nebraska. I feel LB 76 aids in that goal.

The Wayne Chamber of Commerce sponsored the project, the first of three such tours planned. The annual clean up, paint-up and fix-up campaign for Wayne begins today in an effort to make the community healthier, safer and more beautiful. Mrs. Alice Pfister, Winside, suffered back and shoulder injuries Friday night when she fell down the basement steps at her home. Telephone service for northwest Wayne was disrupted Friday when a cable serving 224 telephones was accidentally cut by a city electrician digging to set a new pole. Cable maintenance men from Norfolk worked all night and had service restored by 6 a.m. Saturday. Open house will be held Sunday at the Wakefield Community Hospital to give everyone a chance to see the hospital since it has been completely furnished.

A 1953 graduate of Wayne High, Miss Wentzel, will finish her three-year training period with her class Aug. 24. Harry Barnett, was honored last Tuesday night by Wayne volunteer firemen in honor of his 43 years service as a member of the department. Barnett celebrated his 88th birthday in April. Fire of unknown origin destroyed a barn on a farm belonging to Mrs. Mary Muller 5 1/2 miles northwest of Wakefield Tuesday morning. The place is farmed by Melvin Meyer. He lost milking equipment and 1 1/2 tons of feed in the blaze.

New officers of the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department were elected at a meeting last Tuesday night at the city hall. They are Kent Hall, vice-president; William Mellor, chief; Walter Woods, president; Norb Brueger, secretary, and Henry Ley, treasurer.

John Aegerter, 16, grandson of Mrs. C.A. Berry, was one of the national winners in the 34th annual Scholastic Art awards for high school students recently. His winning entry was a colored ink drawing.

May 5, 1966: Wayne Herald Publisher Alan Cramer announced this week that the firm has purchased the Lewis property, formerly occupied by the J.M. McDonald company at 114 Main Street, Wayne. Cramer said The Herald will move into the building probably by mid-summer. Leaving for induction Thursday were Leonard Keiler, Kandojan; Neil McClary, Winside; John Manzer, Norfolk; and Charles Thompson, Wayne. The wife of gubernatorial candidate Henry Ley made a 150-mile campaign trip through the Sandhills and Western Nebraska last week. Mrs. John E. Suber, Wakefield, missed out on the Silver Dollar Night prize in Wayne Thursday, because she was not in Wayne, she missed out on $140.

May 6, 1971: Harold Ingalls, Wayne County agricultural agent, and Mrs. Val Damme of rural Wayne were recognized Monday night for having contributed 20 years of service to 4-H activities. Jim Meyer, a senior at Wayne High, Monday night was named the athlete of the year at the annual athletic pep club banquet. Cliff Pinkelman was named to serve another year as chief of the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department. Wayne County feed grain program, showed a total of 1,104 farms signed up 119,495 acres feed grain base and agreed to set aside 23,899 acres. Henry Bruns, a Pender farmer who has done considerable work in the cattle feeding field, was named Saturday night to receive the Outstanding Stockman Award given annually by the Northeast Nebraska Cattle Feeders Association.

One may or may not agree with Mr. Carter's conclusion but nearly everyone would agree that a prosperous domestic sugar industry is in the best interests of the American people and their economy.

In 1929, Western Nebraska sugar beet growers produced 1,400,000 tons of sugar, 6th place in the nation, and their product was valued at $43.3 million. It has historically been a sound, vital crop in the Western Nebraska agricultural and business economy and measures aimed at insuring its future good health and stability should be given every consideration.

Horse Sense Wayne Wranglers Get a Grip on Conformation

There's common sense and then there's common horse sense.

And, Wayne's Wranglers are learning both as part of a 4-H Club project that does more than put them in the saddle.

Recently, with the help of their 4-H leader Kathy Luff and Beemer horsewoman Marlene Linstead, members of the club spent an afternoon demonstrating their horse sense at the Ralph and Beverly Etter ranch just north of Wayne.

ETTERS DONATED their horses for the go-round, which meant several hours of conformation judging and learning.

Club members were given a clipboard, a pencil and a sketch of a horse. Then, in a working exercise that tested their common horse sense, they were asked to fault the horse.

"That means whenever a club member — through observation and hands on judging — found a feature of the horse's anatomy that wasn't up to par, they marked a corresponding spot on the sketch before them.

After each horse was judged — a half dozen Etter horses went through the critical line-up — Luff and Linstead gave club members a running commentary on the conformation of the animal so the 4-Hers could check their own work.

"EVERY HORSE has a fault somewhere," Luff, a former Wyoming cowgirl, reminded the group several times during the exercise.

The rural Wayne horsewoman frequently urged the 4-Hers to "get in closer... take a good look" as Ralph and Beverly Etter held their stock for examination.

Attentive eyes studied the anatomy of the subject at hand, while braver souls ran their hands over hips, withers, necks, leg muscles, fetlocks and hips.

Frequently, when a youngster announced a would-be fault, the expert hands and eyes of Luff or Linstead zeroed in on the feature to describe in relentless detail the characteristics of the fault.

The horsewomen, with additional help from the Etters, often traced the fault to breeding or accident (fence flights, for instance), to give the 4-Hers some perspective on the feature.

THE HORSE anatomy students took notes and checked their own findings against the experts' often-asking questions, but more often getting answers to questions anticipated by the horsewomen.

They searched for splints, ring bones, scars and pigeon toes, overbite and underbite (teeth), plus a myriad of other faults invisible to the untrained eye.

But, it wasn't just faults they were looking for that Saturday afternoon in the Nebraska sunshine. They worked just as hard at the good features, the fine lines, the straight legs, the neat head, the slim neck, the long withers and a host of other solid horse conformation.

"THEY'RE LEARNING a lot of plain, common horse sense," Luff explained, noting that the 10-member club meets once a month to talk, study, saddle, bridle and judge horse flesh.

The club, just over a year old, spent the winter talking and studying horse anatomy, she said. When the weather was right, they learned to groom, saddle and bridle horses correctly.

Linstead, who has years of horse showmanship experience, volunteer to participate in the mid-April meeting at Etters to prep the Wranglers on hands on horse judging.

"It helps when you have two there doing the teaching," Luff said. "The kids learn that no two people look at a horse the same way...they get two points of view." Most horse judging is done by teams.

THE WRANGLERS got instant feedback during the anatomy session, Luff explained. That way any confusion or missed point could be corrected immediately.

She said it was the beginning of a life-long education on horses for the 4-Hers, who will be traveling to Erickson for a judging session in early June.

All Wrangler club members are under 16, which prevents them from entering the judging portion of 4-H shows and county fairs. However, Luff said the kids will be participating in other horse events at the Wayne County Fair later this year.

"The more they know about horses, the better they can compete in the horsemanship events they can participate in," she said. The 4-Hers can ride and show.

Often, Luff said, the judges of such contests quiz the riders and showmen about horse conformation and they must be prepared to answer correctly.

MEMBERSHIP in the Wayne Wranglers is open to any kids in the area interested in horses, according to Luff.

She asked that anyone interested contact her about joining.

The current membership roster includes John and Tom Etter, Jerree and Kelly Dorcey, Jackie Haller, Ann Liska, Connie Hansen, Jay Luff and Kris Wiseman.

Luff said the kids' parents are very active in the club and "that encourages them to learn and compete."

And, compete they did during the recent practice session. They're serious young horsemen and women with a better understanding of their mounts as they face years of competition.

"Even I learned a lot," Ralph Etter, who's worked with horses for years, said after the April afternoon session.

HORSEMANSHIP is a lot of hard, enjoyable work. And, the Wayne Wranglers got a better taste of that recently during a practice session on judging horse conformation at the Ralph and Beverly Etter ranch just north of the city. Ralph Etter and Kathy Luff, top photo, check the teeth of a horse while 4-Hers John Etter and Jerree Dorcey get a better look. Jerree Dorcey and Jackie Haller, top left, take a look at the hips on a horse. And, Jackie's mother, Sharon Haller, steadies "Buddy" as the youngster examines him. The little teller seen under the horse is Lyle "Bear" Luff. Kathy's 3-year-old, Jackie, center, finds the warm grass a good place to work as she and John and Tom Etter, above, got a lesson on legs from Marlene Linstead of Beemer.

Dang Diapers!

EVERY KID in America has trouble keeping his diaper up at one time or another and Joe Mueller, two year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh Mueller of East Fourth Street, is no exception. Joe seems to be having some problems here as he tries to push his three-wheeler up an incline in the sidewalk. Joe, although disgusted with his diapers, was seen having a good time with four year-old sister Jennifer Mueller and buddy Sam Wilson, age six. The three-some found plenty of time to hit the local sidewalks on their vehicles in nice, sunny weather last week.

Dennis Otte Memorial Scholarship Established for Wayne High School

The Dennis R. Otte Memorial Scholarship has been officially established in the Wayne Carroll Schools and the first presentation will be May 24 commencement day.

A tuition only scholarship, the academic assistance amounts to $150 per semester for two semesters to be presented to one graduating senior each calendar year beginning this month.

Superintendent Francis Haun presented details of the scholarship agreement to the district's board of education Monday night.

Under terms of the scholarship agreement, the senior getting the scholarship award must have been officially accepted at a non-profit, post-secondary institution. It will be paid ($150) per semester for two semesters on a tuition only basis to the financial office of the institution selected by the recipient.

THE RECIPIENT will be selected on the strength of these criteria: the absence of other academic scholarships; demonstrated ability and desire to succeed in post-secondary education; and consideration of financial need (not necessarily the major basis).

Wayne High School students seeking the scholarship must apply to their guidance counselor before May 1 of each year. The scholarship recipient is to be announced each spring at commencement exercises beginning with the 1980-81 graduation on May 24.

Pork Field Day June 13

The annual Nebraska Pork Producers Junior Field Day will be combined with the traditional All Breeds Swine Picnic, Saturday, June 13, at Seward, according to Terry Schrick, Pork Producers Association executive secretary.

The contest will consist of eight judging classes in three divisions: junior, age 12 and younger on Jan. 1, 1981; senior, age 14 to 18; and adult, for high school graduates prior to Sept. 1, 1980.

County extension agents and vocational agriculture instructors are eligible to compete in the adult division. Youth who have been in regional or national FFA or Future Farmers of America contests must participate in the adult division.

The University of Nebraska animal science staff will present a seminar following a noon luncheon, according to Bill Ahlswede, extension swine specialist in the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. After the seminar, the judging contest results will be announced.

Registration runs from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Individuals and teams will compete, Schrick said. Teams are limited to four people and the top three scorers will be counted.

Gateway Ag Show May 15

Bob Sahling, general show chairman of the annual Gateway Ag Show has announced some new features at this year's Gateway '81 Ag Expo to be held in Kearney, May 15-17.

"Of course, the biggest news is the fact we're moving to a new location," Sahling said. "This year, and from now on, Gateway will be held at the Buffalo County Fairgrounds."

Gateway '81 will feature agricultural exhibitors from all over the United States. This year's three day show will also have a livestock exhibit area something new for this year.

Exhibitors and manufacturers will display the latest equipment in farming and ranching. Admission to the Gateway '81 Ag Expo is free. Gates open 10 a.m. on May 15.

Dairy Equipment Dealers Meet

A meeting of dairy equipment dealers has resulted in the formation of the Nebraska Milking Equipment Dealers' Association, according to Don Kubik, district extension dairy specialist at the University of Nebraska Northeast Station at Concord.

The meeting was co-sponsored by the UNL mastitis control team and the State Department of Agriculture Division of Dairies and Foods.

Roy Bauermeister, Arlington, was elected president. Ed Hosh, Hartington, vice president and Louie Goossen, Beatrice, secretary-treasurer.

The association's formation is a part of joint effort of Nebraska dairymen, veterinarians, dairy equipment dealers and IANR staff and specialists in controlling mastitis, the number one disease problem in dairy herds. The Mastitis Control Program was launched in December, 1979, as a series of Nebraska Area Dairy Days around the state. The six general meetings covered all facets of mastitis control.

The demonstration herd program began in June, 1980, and will be maintained by team members for another two years.

Ag Workshop Begins June 8

A group of Nebraska elementary and secondary school teachers, school administrators, agricultural instructors and counselors will participate in a unique five week workshop this summer, centering on "Nebraska Concepts and Careers of an Agricultural State."

The workshop, to run from June 8 through July 10, is designed to provide an opportunity for enrollees to study the relationship between Nebraska's resources and resource utilization, along with agricultural career exploration.

Dr. Allen G. Bielek, assistant professor of agricultural education at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the workshop coordinator, said the first two weeks will be spent on NU East Campus, with presentations by agribusiness and industry leaders.

The third week will involve an extensive tour of Nebraska sites, including a turkey processing plant, farm implement manufacturing plant, a dairy farm, a working ranch, cattle feedlot, feed processing plant, grocery distribution center and irrigation system manufacturing plant. The final two weeks will be spent in Lincoln, with participants developing individual projects.

Sheep Producers to Meet May 12

The Northeast Nebraska Sheep Producers Association is scheduled to meet at the Pierce County Fairgrounds, Pierce, on Tuesday, May 12, at 8 p.m. The speaker for the evening will be Duane Ommerman from Farm Technology, Inc. of Council Bluffs. He will speak on the various types of ventilation available for farm buildings.

The NENSPA group has just concluded a "Beginner's Sheep Camp" for interested Northeast Nebraska youngsters in cooperation with the Cooperative Extension Service at which over 70 youngsters had "hands on experience" to learn about lamb selection, lamb nutrition and care, and lamb showmanship. The NENSPA group also held a "4 H Lamb Sale" on Sunday, May 3, at which over 50 lambs were sold.

All interested Northeast Nebraska Sheep Producers are invited to attend the meeting in Pierce.

Farmland Values Increase 9.3%

U.S. farmland values increased an average of 9.3 percent during the year ending Feb. 1, 1981, well below the 15-percent increase of a year ago, and less than the 11-percent rise in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) over the same period.

Since land prices increased more slowly than the CPI, the real value of farmland declined. The last such decline occurred in the year ending March 1, 1971.

The 1980 drop in the real value of farmland reflected a decrease in net farm income from $31 billion in 1979 to $23 billion in 1980. High interest rates and tight credit also affected the farm real estate market.

The largest increases in farmland values occurred in Mississippi, up 27 percent, and California, up 22 percent. Alabama, Louisiana and Washington each showed an increase of 18 percent. Only 11 of 48 states showed increases that matched or exceeded the rate of inflation.

The national average value of farm real estate is now $790 per acre. However farmland is worth an average of almost $3,000 an acre in New Jersey, and the average exceeds $2,000 in four other states.

Transfers of farm real estate number 9 percent fewer in 1980 than in 1979. Voluntary sales of farm real estate declined 14 percent. The rate of foreclosures increased from 1.1 per 1,000 farmers to 1.3.

From February 1981 to February 1982, land values are expected to increase between 11 and 16 percent.

Report Shows 7.8 Million Acres Owned

Foreign Land Investments Less Than Expected

Foreign investors have reported owning less than 1 percent of agricultural land in the United States as of the end of last year, "less than is generally thought by the public," according to Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block.

"As of last December, foreign investors reported they owned about 7.8 million acres of U.S. agricultural land. While that figure is up 2.2 million acres from what USDA reported the year before, about 1.8 million of that increase was due to late-filled 1979 reports being included in this year's report," Block said.

"The actual increase during 1980 was about 414,000 acres out of a total U.S. agricultural area of about 1.25 billion acres," Block said.

Block said next year's report could once again contain late-filled reports, thus raising this year's figure. He also said the total acreage of foreign owned U.S. agricultural land is too small to measure the impact on agriculture at the national level.

Current legislation requires all foreign owners of U.S. agricultural land to report those holdings to USDA. They also are required to report acquisitions, dispositions, leases and land use changes.

Foreign owners who fail to report their holdings and acquisitions or who are late in reporting face possible fines. Block said as of last December, USDA has assessed, 1,950 penalties for late filings, amounting to about $250,000.

Block said while the law does provide penalties for late reporting and non-reporting, it does not provide for an investigations office to detect those who choose not to report.

The yearly foreign land ownership study has been sent to the Congress for evaluation, as required by law. Highlights of the report are available from ESS Publications, room 0054-S, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250. Ask for publication ESS-9.

The following tables give additional details on USDA's recent survey of foreign owned U.S. agricultural land.

Research Center Test

Young Bulls' Mating Success Predictable

Approximately a third of other wide promising yearling beef bulls are not sufficiently aggressive in mating to be effective herd sires. But they can be identified by a mating test devised at the Roman L. Hruska U.S. Meat Animal Research Center at Clay Center.

"We are finding that young bulls can be divided into four groups by the test," says physiologist Donald D. Lunstra. About 30 percent are high in aggressiveness, or libido; 35 percent classify as medium; 20 percent are low in libido - will mate occasionally - and the other 15 percent show little or no interest in mating.

RESULTS OF the mating behavior test are reflected in conception rates achieved. The U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist says. One experiment compared young bulls not differentiated in semen quality but rated high or low in the libido test. The high libido bulls had a conception rate of 54 percent, and the low-libido bulls a rate of 16 percent when each bull was exposed to 50 heifers for 20 days. Lunstra believes the mating behavior test might be used at bull test stations at the conclusion of feeding trials. The test procedure, at its present stage of development, is not well adapted for use in individual herds. In the test, three to five bulls are exposed for 30 minutes to four estrus synchronized heifers from which the ovaries have been removed.

Turning three to five bulls at a time in with four heifers has given a better measure of the bulls' mating ability than testing the bulls individually, Lunstra says. Using the same bulls, 70 to 73 percent mated when tested in groups of three to five bulls but only 47 percent mated when each bull was tested individually.

THE FIRST TWO or three tests serve as a learning period for the inexperienced young bulls, the scientist of the department's Science and Education Administration Agricultural Research says.

Results in the initial tests may be inconsistent, but ratings in subsequent tests are very similar. At least three consecutive libido tests are required for accurate evaluation of sexual aggressiveness. In young beef bulls, Lunstra has found.

Less than 5 percent of young bulls can be eliminated from use as sires on the basis of semen characteristics, Lunstra says. But the third of the remaining bulls that will not mate effectively cannot be identified, except by the libido test, before use in a breeding herd.

Buried in a Bushel of Bins

THIS OLD MASSEY HARRIS three-wheeler (tricycle) was found buried in a bushel of bins behind the Carroll Feed & Grain Co. last week. The gleaming bins tower over the old red-and-yellow tractor which provide power takeoff crank for the grain augers used by elevator personnel for loading. Huge four-wheel tractor with hundreds of horsepower have replaced the smaller, horse-and-buggy days of the Massey Harris, a tractor no longer made.

Soviets Enjoy Bargaining Advantage

Bereuter Wants Better Grain Deal

Congressman Doug Bereuter has urged the administration, in negotiating future grain agreements, to "bargain with the Soviets and not unduly accommodate them as the U.S. has in the past."

In a letter to Special Trade Representative William Brock, Bereuter expressed concern that in previous grain agreements the Soviets have gained unfair advantage.

"TRADITIONALLY, the Soviets have gotten a better deal," Bereuter said in separate remarks before Farm Bureau leaders at a meeting in Wayne.

"The United States must go to the negotiating table recognizing our own position of power as a major world food producer," Bereuter told the farmers. "This is exactly the point I made in my letter to Brock; the United States is in a position of strength and it's time we use it to full advantage and play hardball."

Bereuter said, "Now that the president has lifted the Carter grain embargo, let's not fall into our old habit of unduly accommodating the Soviets in any new trade agreements."

Bereuter said he also asked Brock the status of any trade negotiations with the Soviets. "In addition, I would appreciate knowing which federal agencies may be involved in such negotiations and to what extent Bereuter said in his letter.

BEREUTER ALSO told the farmers, "On a broader scale, we need to make it clear to all of our trading partners that we will negotiate in good faith, and expect the same in return. But the United States has to flex its muscles and take a tougher stance at the bargaining table.

This applies particularly to the Soviets and to any others who have instituted unfair trade barriers to American meat and citrus fruits."

Noting that the end of the embargo was good news for farmers, Bereuter said, "Congress undoubtedly will address the question of grain embargoes in the 1981 farm bill. I hope consideration is given to eliminating embargoes altogether as a foreign policy tool."

Soybeans Grow to World's Major Protein, Oil Crop

Once a relatively minor farm commodity, soybeans have become the world's most abundant source of vegetable protein and oil.

Last year U.S. farmers produced over 1.8 billion bushels of soybeans, about 53 percent of which were exported generating more than $10 billion to the positive side of the U.S. balance of trade.

The growth in popularity of soybeans, much of which has come about in the last 20 years, was made possible in part through soybean research, says Dr. Keith Smith, director of research for the American Soybean Association (ASA).

"THERE'S NO way we could produce the size crop we produce today were it not for the advances made by soybean breeders in adapting soybeans to a wide variety of environmental conditions," says Smith. He points out however, that while researchers have made great strides in improving soybean production, until recently little effort has been made to improve the quality of soybeans.

Although modern soybean processing systems overcome the few quality shortcomings of soy protein and soy oil, Smith says considerable savings could be made by developing varieties that require less processing yet produce higher quality protein and oil.

"While soy protein is an excellent source of the individual amino acids," explains Smith, "one group of amino acids, the sulfur amino acids are marginal. The nutritional value of soy protein could be significantly improved if the sulfur amino acid content of soybeans were increased."

Smith is optimistic that researchers will one day unlock the secret to developing soybean lines with improved sulfur amino acid levels.

"We are entering a new era of genetic engineering which may be more productive than the research conducted during the past 25 years," he says.

ANOTHER nutritional problem for soybeans according to Smith, is the trypsin inhibitor proteins. These proteins reduce the breakdown of digestive enzymes, stimulate protein synthesis in the pancreas and increase pancreatic enzyme secretions. These effects can lead to an enlarged pancreas and slowed growth in livestock.

Fortunately, these proteins are easily broken down with heat processing. Considerable energy savings would result however, if researchers could develop soybean varieties that lacked the trypsin inhibitor.

In experiments, scientists have successfully bred soybean varieties with 30 to 50 percent less trypsin inhibitor activity, leading them to believe that it may be possible to solve the problem through plant breeding.

On the subject of soy oil quality, Smith thinks the problems may be even more challenging.

"THE BIGGEST problem with soy oil is flavor stability," he says. "Linolenic acid has been blamed for most of soy oil's stability and odor problems. Right now we take care of this problem by hydrogenating soy oil. But processors could reduce costs significantly if we could develop a variety of soybeans in which the linolenic acid level was so low that hydrogenation was not necessary."

Reducing linolenic acid in soybeans will be difficult Smith says because the plant's linolenic acid production mechanism is very complex.

"Researchers think linolenic acid levels in soybeans may be controlled by as many as five different genes," he explains. "In addition, environmental factors such as moisture, temperature and length of growing season also have an effect on the plant's linolenic acid production."

"Grower funded research is now underway to attack the problem using a variety of methods from mutagenic treatments such as x-ray or chemical treatment of soybean seed to carefully controlled environmental studies.

"Current research on improving soybean quality is opening the doors to a better understanding of the real potential for this wonder crop," says Smith. "But the popularity of any soybean variety is based on its profitability. Any genetically improved soybean variety must yield competitively with other commercial soybean varieties in order to gain acceptance by growers."

SMITH URGES soybean producers to continue their support of soybean research through "grower investment checkoff programs."

"Last year soybean growers invested more than $3 million in soybean research to reduce production costs and find new uses for soybeans and improve the quality of soybeans and soybean products.

Tight budgets in state and federal governments mean soybean research at universities and government research facilities will continue to have difficulty in obtaining funds for needed research. Other commodities such as rape and sunflowers are beginning to compete with markets for soybeans too.

If producers expect the golden bean to maintain its competitive edge in world markets, they must be willing to invest funds to improve the quality of our product."

It warns all comers of what to expect when the customer gets involved in the deal. Shop owner and operator Dennis Rhode doesn't make a big thing of pointing out the "going rate" but he's been known to remind customers of labor scale when the going gets rough and the customers won't get going.
