AL ROBINSON, Wayne Municipal Airport manager and owner of Al's Air Service, joins Mark Allen, the son of Al and Tess Allen, Warrenton, Mo., for a discussion on airport operations. Mark's father has agreed to purchase Al's Air Service and is awaiting Airport Authority approval for the manager's position. Mark is expected to operate the charter service and handle flight instruction.

Airport Manager Changeover Expected in Wayne by June 1

A new flight service owner and fixed-base operations manager is expected to take over at the Wayne Municipal Airport June 1. That's the date tentatively set for closing a business deal between Wayne's Allen V. Robinson, pilot and owner of Al's Air Service, and Al Allen, 54, Warrenton, Mo., a retired commercial airlines pilot and Air Force veteran. After more than six years as airport manager, Robinson has negotiated the sale of his charter and flight instruction service and purchased a livestock equipment manufacturing and sales company in Tiedford.

WAYNE MUNICIPAL Airport Authority board members, who have interviewed the prospective owner, gave Robinson the authorization Monday night to complete his negotiations with Allen. Allen told The Wayne Herald that he has made a 50 percent downpayment toward the purchase of the air-charter and flight-instruction service from Robinson. Once Robinson completes the sale of his business to Allen, the board is expected to act on a contract with the former Ozark Airlines pilot to manage the fixed-base operations there. A son, Mark Allen, 27, arrived in Wayne a week ago from Iowa City to work with Robinson during the business and airport management transition.

THE PENDING change of ownership and FBO management comes during the airport's 50th anniversary year and in the midst of an extensive renovation project. Robinson put Al's Air Service on the market several months ago in an aviation trade magazine advertisement. And, though the authority members helped screen the prospective candidates, formal approval of the business sale and the contract to manage the airport awaits board action. Action is not likely to come before the airport authority board's June meeting. The board meets on the second Monday of each month at the FBO office on airport grounds.

THE PURCHASE is a combined Allen family effort with Al Allen, who no longer flies, planning to manage the fixed base operation. His son, Mark, is expected to be the top pilot for air charter service and flight instruction. Allen and his wife, Tess, who is working on her private-pilot's license, are St. Louis natives. He was Mark's flight instructor. The couple has another son, Charles, 21. The youngest is stationed in Germany with the U.S. Army. His father said Charles is expected to join the operation after his tour of duty. He's a licensed private pilot. Their daughter, Pamela, is a school teacher in Kellerton, Iowa. She does not fly.

Mark, who is staying with the Robinsons at the airport house, is a pilot licensed in commercial, multi-engine and instrumental flight. He's also a certified flight instructor.

MARK ALLEN says he intends to concentrate on the charter and flight instruction service, an operation that will be renamed Allen Aviation Inc. He said the service expects to continue with the services of pilots Orin Zach and Dennis Calhoun, both employees of Robinson at Al's Air Service. Mark, who attended college at Beloit, Wis., and the University of Iowa, received additional flight training from the Spartan School of Aeronautics at Tulsa, Okla. He's been working at the airport during the past few days, including handling some flight instruction. "It's pretty exciting," he said. "I've learned more in the last week than I did in college." He said Allen Aviation Inc. also may handle aircraft sales. MARK'S FATHER and mother are expected to move to Wayne within the next few weeks after selling a laundromat facility the couple has owned as a retirement investment. Contacted at their home in Warrenton, which is about 40 miles west of St. Louis, Al Allen said that if their Missouri business did not sell soon he would have to make arrangements for someone to manage it so he could be free to be on the scene at the airport here. He's been in Warrenton for about three years after a 28-year aviation career that saw him log over 12,000 hours as a Air Force commercial and corporate charter pilot. Allen said he started out as a flight instructor and was in charge of fixed-base operations several times in his career. JOINING THE Navy at 17, he eventually served as a flight instructor in Georgia, where he finished his high school education after his post-World War II discharge. In 1948 he signed up again; this time as a flight instructor for the Air Force. After the Air Force, Allen worked as a commercial pilot for Ozark Airlines and declined a transfer to Chicago. That took him from commercial flying to corporate charter work. "We've been wanting to do this for a long time," Allen said of his planned move to Wayne to take over the airport. "We want to make it a nice family business." Allen has been in Wayne several times to look over the operation. The Allens are planning to live in the airport housing quarters, a two-story, wood-frame home just east of the FBO office at the airport.

Special-Assessment Improvements Questioned Roosevelt Park's Residents Protest New Water District

Pressure from a group of Roosevelt Park area residents has temporarily shut off a proposed Wayne water improvement project. The pressure to stop the project, as proposed, came in the form of signatures on a petition protesting the Roosevelt Park area plan. Wayne City Council members officially received the petition during a regular meeting Tuesday night. It was signed by more than 50 percent of the front-footage property owners in the proposed water improvement district. According to Mayor Wayne Marsh, legal counsel has advised the city that it is prohibited from establishing Water District 81-1 when landowner protests exceed the 50 percent mark.

FORMER CITY Councilman Vernon F. Russell, 319 South Nebraska, a property owner in the proposed district, appeared before the City Council to explain the concern he and his neighbors have regarding the project, which was designed to improve water pressure and upgrade the delivery system for Roosevelt Park area residents. Russell was careful to explain to City Council members that while the water delivery system improvements were needed and, for the most part, wanted, property owners did not feel they should be faced with special assessments to finance the upgrading. City Administrator Phil Kloster told City Council members the city has "to take a long look at it (the project)." He indicated the city would review the $104,000 project with Russell's comment in mind.

RUSSELL QUESTIONED a number of things about the proposed project, including placement of 6-inch and 8-inch water lines. In a detailed account of the property owners the project was designed to serve, the former councilman suggested some rerouting to save pipeline. He also questioned the fairness of assessing property owners for a 900-foot segment of the line that crossed public property within the proposed district. He made a rerouting suggestion that he said would save 300 feet of 6-inch line. "Using detail after detail to support his case against special assessment funding for the proposed project, Russell contended the project is a general obligation water improvement plan. "This should not be a special assessment," he told the City Council. "The problem is not our fault. The city should update the system." RUSSELL SAID "there's a lot of excess in the project and supported his contention with a running account on the number of houses scheduled for dual pickups, and lines scheduled for what he said are empty lots in some sections of the district. He also questioned the new fire hydrant

Council May Buy New Sirens

The City Council is expected to consider the purchase of at least two — and perhaps three — new Civil Defense warning sirens at its next meeting. During Tuesday night's meeting, Police Chief Vern Fairchild recommended that at least two sirens be purchased and installed to cover areas of the city with inadequate coverage. Fairchild, who prepared a city map with siren sites and proposed sites for City Council study, said he felt a new one was needed at Ashley Park near Oak Drive and on the old water tower. An old siren is on the city water tower, according to Fairchild, but it is rarely used because it has to be operated manually and has switch problems. Fairchild told Council members that he sees a need for a third new siren northeast of Providence Medical Center, near 14th Street and Providence Road, because of new construction in that vicinity. City Administrator Phil Kloster and Fairchild have been working on the Civil Defense siren proposal for several weeks. Fairchild said that federal money was no longer available for warning sirens, which leaves the city in the position of having to leave things as they are or foot the total bill. Fairchild said cost estimates are $2,000 per siren for the hardware. Installation costs, including labor and poles, are in addition to that, he said. The police chief recommended the Council pursue the two sirens, keeping in mind what he saw as a need for a third in the northeast corner of town. Councilwoman Carolyn Filtter said she would just as soon see the Council purchase all three and get them installed. Mayor Wayne Marsh said he felt the Council should be prepared to take some action by the next Council meeting.

Council Plucks Chicken Permit

Wayne's City Council has plucked former Wayne State College professor John Violette's chicken permit. City Administrator Phil Kloster told Council members Tuesday night that a 6 p.m. check of the Violette residence, 110 Douglas, had produced a head count of five chickens. The total was two over the three-chicken limit set in terms of Violette's permit. Councilman Gary Vopalenky quickly introduced a motion to rescind the mouse geneticist's permit. Moments later it was all over, the Council had voted unanimously, with Larry Johnson abstaining, to withdraw the permit. Violette, who conducts research on mouse genetics in his backyard laboratory at 110 Douglas, was urged to clean up his yard recently by city officials who received several complaints from neighbors regarding the condition of his property. Violette cleaned up the property, apparently to the satisfaction of his neighbors, but continued to keep five chickens on his property. Council members could not act on the permit during their last meeting because it had not been placed on the official meeting agenda. That gave Violette another two weeks to comply with terms of his permit. Vopalenky, at the last meeting, requested the matter be placed on the agenda. Kloster said he would have to check out how the city would enforce the Council's Tuesday night action.

plan, telling the City Council there were sites for six hydrants but that he couldn't see where the city would put the seventh one outlined in the plan. "We're not looking for fancy new hydrants," he said, questioning the $104,000 cost estimate on the project. "If it is my feeling you could miss it by $25,000 to $30,000," he said. Furthermore, Russell challenged the City Council to find some way of doing the work locally, rather than putting it out on bid "where it's likely to go to an outside firm." "WE KNOW the city can do the job itself," he said. "This (the prospect of awarding the contract to an outside firm) is ridiculous when our town is suffering from unemployment." Russell contended that all towns are facing the same problem and are learning that "if they have the equipment they have to do the job themselves." He acknowledged that the Roosevelt Park area residents need better water pressure. He explained that a hydrant check he was on with the fire chief last summer indicated 2 lbs. of pressure was all that was available at a hydrant in the extreme southern end of the proposed district. WAYNE LUND, 65, a semi-retired Laurel area farmer, checks the engine on a Cessna 150 Monday morning before taking off on another solo flight. Lund is working on his private pilot's license after soloing on a gift certificate from his son Jerry in Boise.

Take-Off Time Retired Laurel Farmer Solos at 65

By Randall Howell

Sometimes it takes a long time for things to get off the ground. It took semi-retired Laurel farmer Wayne Lund about 60 years. But, today, he's flying a single-engine Cessna 150 around the blue skies of northeast Nebraska thanks to a gift certificate from his son Jerry, a 34-year-old licensed private pilot in Boise, Idaho. Lund's flying — something he's wanted to do since he was 5 years old — at a time when many men are satisfied with just taking off some extra time from work. "IT'S A piece of cake with ice cream on it," the 65-year-old Laurel native said. With his first solo flight logged in mid April, Lund began flight lessons in mid January under instructor and airport manager Al V. Robinson of Al's Air Service. Lund explained that he would have soloed earlier if it had not been for several interruptions. He and his wife, the former Wilma Dahl of Laurel, vacationed in Arizona, California and Idaho after he started flight instruction. "That stretched it out some," he said (just before another take off for a Monday morning solo flight—this week.

LUND'S Christmas gift certificate for the flying lessons arrived just before the holidays last year. His son Jerry, who started flying in Boise a few years back, arranged a flight instruction package with Robinson that would take his father, through the first stages and through his first solo. Lund, a dairy farmer who continues to manage the family business 10 miles northeast of Laurel, liked it enough to continue beyond the first solo flight. He's going for his private pilot's license, a task that will take him somewhere between 40 and 50 hours, plus tests, the 1932 graduate of Laurel High School said. AFTER arranging the instruction package, son Jerry mailed his father's gift certificate, but put his own name on the envelope to be sure it wasn't opened early. "Young Jerry, who's a northwestern U.S. district director for AMPRO products sales, and his wife, Donna — also a pilot, flew home (Laurel) for Christmas in their own plane. With them were Lund's grandchildren, Michelle, 3, and Kristi, almost 1. "I was really surprised... I had no idea they had arranged the whole thing," Lund said, his eyes sparkling as he recalled opening the Christmas gift. See FARMER, Page 9A

Morey Hall Males Face No Charges

Two Wayne State College students face possible suspension after their arrest last week in connection with false fire alarm incidents at the college.

2 Wayne State College Students Arrested In False Fire Alarm Incidents on Campus

Arrested were Joseph Youngman, 18, of Chillicothe, Ill., and Knute Memeely, 19, of Rensselaer, Iowa. Though they were arrested by the Wayne City Police Department and campus security police, no criminal charges have been lodged against the students.

Both have reportedly left the campus as part of the spring recess. But the WSC Student Standards Committee is expected to meet within the next few days to consider their cases within a few days. According to City Fire Chief Dick Korn, the suspects were "caught redhanded." He said it was the first such case in which suspects were apprehended "in the act."

"WE'RE IN the process of trying to get an attorney general's opinion on the matter," Korn said. "We're trying to get Bud's (Bornhoff) decision not to prosecute turned around."

Korn said this was the worst year he knew of for false alarms on campus. He said there were over 20 false alarms at the very start of the school term last fall, but that it subsided over the winter months. "It started all over again just before school was out," Korn said.

He said that, as he understands it, when the state's criminal code was rewritten in 1976 the part dealing with false fire alarms was specifically left out in Bornhoff's opinion.

Also, in Monday's newspaper, a story on Ron Otte, owner and operator of Ron's Steakhouse, Bar and Garage at Carroll indicated the Navy veteran smoked cigarettes. He does not. The error is regretted.

Bornhoff Asked Fire Chief to Get Attorney General's Opinion

Bornhoff asked the fire chief to get him an attorney general's opinion on the matter, according to Korn, who said the state fire marshal's office considers it a prosecutable crime. Korn said he called the attorney general's office and found out the request for an opinion had to be made in writing. So, he wrote.

A reply from the attorney general's office informed Korn that such opinions were given only to state agencies and county officials. Bornhoff then drafted a request, Korn said.

By that time, it was only a day before the students left the campus. Korn explained, insisting that something has to be clarified in the law whether or not the students are here.

KORN SAID he hoped the matter would be cleared up by next year with an attorney general's opinion so violators could be prosecuted.

Campus reports indicate that there were more than 50 false alarms at Wayne State College during this past term, most of them at Berry Hall.

Bowen Hall was second on the list with more than a dozen. The two suspects arrested in the case lived at Morey Hall, about a block away from Berry Hall.

No Injuries Reported In 2 City Accidents

No injuries were reported in two motor vehicle accidents investigated by the Wayne City Police Department late last week.

On Thursday, an automobile driven by Lori L. Wolfram, Madison, collided with two parked cars about 7:50 a.m. in the Bowen Hall parking lot at Wayne State College.

Police reports indicate that the Wolfram car, a 1975 Ford, entered the parking lot making a right hand turn. It struck the left front of a 1975 Toyota owned by Donald E. Fenster, Bellevue.

The impact sent the Toyota into the left front fender of a second car parked alongside Fenster's vehicle. The second parked car is owned by Marlan A. Kraemer of Laurel.

ON FRIDAY, police investigated a motorcycle-car accident along the north side of the Wayne Middle School.

The 4:09 p.m. collision involved a 1978 Buick driven by Lavah Maciejewski, Wayne, and a motorcycle driven by John H. Bahns, Wayne.

According to police, the cycle was eastbound in the 400 Block of West Fourth Street when the Maciejewski auto backed out of a parking place. Damage was reported to the front of the cycle and rear of the auto.

ON SUNDAY, police received a report of vandalism to a 1976 Chevrolet owned by Maria Grovas, Wayne.

Vandals broke the window on the driver's side of the vehicle, but not other damage was reported, police report. Nothing was taken from the car, according to police reports.

'On Golden Pond' Emotional Comedy

After four weeks of rehearsing "On Golden Pond," members of the cast remain enthralled with the characters, the story and the very clever and natural dialogue.

The comedy, which is being produced by the Wayne Community Theatre, will be presented for two evening performances on May 29 and 30 in the Wayne-Carroll High School lecture hall.

Maine where Thompson has spent a portion of every summer, and where his grandparents first settled in 1903.

"What courage it must have taken," wrote Edith Oliver in The New Yorker magazine, "for Mr. Thompson, in the 1970's, to write a play with so much affection in it."

Most plays of the past decade, according to one observer, are filled with angry protest and cynical response.

"ON GOLDEN POND" begins with the return of Norman

Thayer (played by Chuck Barnes), and his wife Ethel (Gwen Brandenburg) to their summer home on Golden Pond in Maine.

It is a quiet place full of memories and fleeting shadows of the past. It will be the couples' 48th summer together at the cottage.

But this year is different. The atmosphere is heavy with a sense of mortality, as Norman, who is approaching his 80th birthday, is convinced that this will be his last summer on Golden Pond.

Ethel, though 10 years younger and still vital and spry, also begins to sense mortality.

NORMAN and Ethel are visited on his birthday by their daughter, 42-year-old Chelsea (Jane March), her new fiancé, Bill Ray (Maurice Anderson), and his son Billy (Ben Cottle), a modern, sassy California boy.

The Thayers agree to take Billy in tow for the summer while Chelsea and Bill go to Europe. Soon, Billy's youthful sprightliness brings Norman to a new relationship with his own life and with his family.

Inspired by Billy's youth and friendship, Ethel forges ahead with a new spirit.

AS MARTIN Gottfried, dramatic critic for the Saturday Review aptly wrote: "On Golden Pond" treats love as it has seldom been treated, in the contemporary theatre; with the seriousness it deserves and fearless of emotionalism. The love that his play is concerned with is between new lovers, between old marrieds, between parents and grown children, parents and young children, parents and grandparents. "On Golden Pond" is just what we need. Go ahead and love it."

TICKETS for both the May 29 and 30 performances may be purchased after May 22 at Griess Rexall Store, Sav-Mor Drugs, and Blake Studio.

Tickets also will be available at the door on performance nights. Admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for senior citizens and children under 12 years of age. Wayne Community Theatre patron tickets will be honored.

Next CanSurmount Program Focusing On Feelings, Spirit

"Dealing With Our Feelings and Our Spirit" will be the subject of the next CanSurmount meeting on Tuesday, May 19, in the dining room at Providence Medical Center, Wayne.

Loreene Gildersleeve is advisor, and members of the advisory board are Sister Gertrude of Providence Medical Center, the Rev. John Jorde, Tame Krause, Dr. Jim Lindau, Marguerite Platner, Ph.D., Marie Thomas and Ann Witkowski.

NEXT Tuesday night's meeting is the third in a series of specially designed programs to provide cancer patients and their families with education, service and empathic support.

'On Golden Pond' Emotional Comedy

After four weeks of rehearsing "On Golden Pond," members of the cast remain enthralled with the characters, the story and the very clever and natural dialogue.

The comedy, which is being produced by the Wayne Community Theatre, will be presented for two evening performances on May 29 and 30 in the Wayne-Carroll High School lecture hall.

The AUTHOR of "On Golden Pond," 32 year old Ernest Thompson, wrote the play in the spring of 1978 in Santa Monica Calif., far from a lovely lake in Maine where Thompson has spent a portion of every summer, and where his grandparents first settled in 1903.

"What courage it must have taken," wrote Edith Oliver in The New Yorker magazine, "for Mr. Thompson, in the 1970's, to write a play with so much affection in it.

Most plays of the past decade, according to one observer, are filled with angry protest and cynical response.

"ON GOLDEN POND" begins with the return of Norman

Thayer (played by Chuck Barnes), and his wife Ethel (Gwen Brandenburg) to their summer home on Golden Pond in Maine.

It is a quiet place full of memories and fleeting shadows of the past. It will be the couples' 48th summer together at the cottage.

But this year is different. The atmosphere is heavy with a sense of mortality, as Norman, who is approaching his 80th birthday, is convinced that this will be his last summer on Golden Pond.

Ethel, though 10 years younger and still vital and spry, also begins to sense mortality.

NORMAN and Ethel are visited on his birthday by their daughter, 42-year-old Chelsea (Jane March), her new fiancé, Bill Ray (Maurice Anderson), and his son Billy (Ben Cattle), a modern, sexy California boy.

The Thayers agree to take Billy in tow for the summer while Chelsea and Bill go to Europe. Soon, Billy's youthful sprightliness brings Norman to a new relationship with his own life and with his family.

Inspired by Billy's youth and

friendship, Ethel forges ahead with a new spirit.

AS MARTIN Gottfried, drama critic for the Saturday Review aptly wrote "On Golden Pond" treats love as it has seldom been treated in the contemporary theatre; with the seriousness it deserves and fearlessness of emotionalism. The love that his play is concerned with is between new lovers, between old marrieds, between parents and grown children, parents and young children, parents and grandchildren. "On Golden Pond" is just what we need. Go ahead and love it."

TICKETS for both the May 29 and 30 performances may be purchased after May 22 at Griess Rexall Store, Sav-Mor Drugs, and Blake Studio.

Tickets also will be available at the door on performance nights. Admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for senior citizens and children under 12 years of age. Wayne Community Theatre patron tickets will be honored.

Nissen's Perfect Game Leads Wayne to Easy Triumph

While professional pitching greats like Francisco Valenzuela, Steve Carlton and Mike Norris were busy exhibiting their fine pitching abilities before thousands of fans, a fine performance at a lower level went nearly unnoticed, Monday afternoon.

KEVIN NISSEN REACHED new heights in his excellent high school athletic career by pitching a perfect game to lead the Wayne Blue Devils to an 11-0 victory over East Butler in district baseball action. No Brainard player reached base.

The game, played before a small crowd at the Laurel ball park, was over in 4½ innings as Wayne racked up enough runs to win by virtue of the 10-run rule.

Nissen was backed in his pitching gem by a strong defensive performance. The Blue Devils committed no errors while making 11 fielding plays. Nissen struckout four of the 15 batters he faced.

WAYNE RETIRED the remainder of East Butler's team on six ground balls and five fly balls. The Tigers really only came close to ruining Nissen's bid for a perfect game on three occasions.

Once was when Nissen reached a 3-2 count on a Brainard batter, coming within one pitch of issuing a walk. The other two threats were thwarted on fine fielding plays. Shortstop Tim Pfeiffer made a play deep in the hole and second baseman Jero Morris backed up to snag a lazy fly ball on the two most serious threats.

The ironic thing is that Nissen started the season as the team's number two pitcher and was forced into the role as the number one starter when Tim Pfeiffer suffered elbow trouble. Pfeiffer is now recovering from mononucleosis.

"IT WAS A SUPER, super effort. It's not often you can see a perfect game. Kevin was continually ahead of the hitters. He threw strikes and never got behind," Wayne coach Mike Mallette said. "He received good defensive help. It's great when a team can play error-free ball and a pitcher can put off a perfect game."

"Kevin was forced into the main pitching role and he's doing well. In his last three starts, he has beaten Lincoln East, Wakefield and now East Butler," said Mallette.

Mallette said that Nissen will be ready to pitch again today (Thursday) in Wayne's scheduled semifinal matchup against Laurel. The game is planned at 4 p.m. in Laurel.

Wakefield will meet Lincoln Plus at 2 p.m. in the other semifinal game. Meanwhile, Pfeiffer is steadily recovering from mono and may soon be ready to pitch again.

WAYNE'S HITTING ATTACK was led by Tim Pfeiffer. Jeff McCright and Nissen. Leadoff batter McCright scored every time he was up to bat. He had a double, single, RBI and stolen base in three at bats.

Pfeiffer pounded a double and single and added a sacrifice fly while driving in four runs. Nissen had three RBIs on a single and sacrifice.

The Blue Devils scored two runs in the first inning. McCright led off with a double, reached third on a passed ball and scored on a suicide bunt by Nissen. Nissen was safe at first on an error and reached third on two passed balls. Pfeiffer's sacrifice fly scored Nissen.

Two more runs by McCright and Morris in the third inning broke the game open. Both players singled and scored on a two-run double by Pfeiffer.

THE FOURTH INNING wrapped up the first round victory for the Devils. Todd Pfeiffer singled and scored on a double by Brian Fleming. Jim Sperry, Todd Skokan and McCright drew consecutive walks to score Fleming.

A fielding error and a two-run single by Nissen accounted for three other runs. Morris and Nissen scored the 10th and 11th runs of the game to put things out of reach.

Trojans Collect Key Hits To Bounce Bancroft Nine

Some bats came alive as the Wakefield baseball season hit its season high, Monday in the Class B district baseball tournament at Laurel.

THE TROJANS, who have struggled this season, collected key hits at the right time to eliminate Bancroft from the district tournament. Wakefield is scheduled to play Lincoln Plus at 2 p.m. today (Thursday) in a semifinal round action at Laurel.

Mike Clay scored what proved to be the winning run in the top of the seventh inning. He reached base on a Bancroft error, moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Jeff Coble and came home on a double by Mark Starzl.

Lee Foote entered the game as pinch runner for Starzl and added an insurance run when Bancroft's infield mishandled a grounder by Jeff Hallstrom.

WAKEFIELD SCORED the first two runs of the game in the top of the third. Keith Roberts singled to lead-off the inning and Jody Sherer moved him to second base with a sacrifice. Mike Clay followed Sherer with a base hit.

Bancroft scored a run in the bottom of the fourth but the Trojans came right back with two in the fifth.

With two outs, Jeff Coble started the attack with a double and Starzl drew a walk to keep the rally alive. Dale Phipps ripped a two-run double down the right field line as Wakefield took a 4-1 advantage.

Bancroft tied the game in the bottom of the fifth by scoring three unearned runs. The seventh inning spree prevented Wakefield from going into overtime and secured a semifinal round matchup with Lincoln Plus.

TROJAN COACH Joe Coble said he was pleased that his team's hitting improved in the critical situations. "Our bats came alive a little bit. We can't seem to do anything easy," Coble said in reference to his team's apparent inability to put Bancroft away.

"Our pitching was better than expected. The turning point was the two-out back-to-back doubles in the fifth," Coble said.

Mark Starzl, who pitched the entire seven innings, limited Bancroft to three hits and struckout 14 batters. The ace threw 127 pitches in the game and Coble said he didn't expect to start Starzl in today's (Thursday's) game.

Freshman Wayne Guy may get the nod as starter in the semifinal game if Starzl is not rested up. Coble said that Lincoln Plus is known as a heavy hitting ball club.

Wakefield's six hits were collected by Clay, Coble, Starzl, Phipps, Hallstrom and Keith Roberts.

Froeschle Nearly Qualifies

Golfers Win Two Medals

They say that close only counts in horseshoes, hand grenades, darts and a few other things.

Wayne freshman golfer Cole Froeschle couldn't have come any closer to qualifying for the state golf tournament than he did, Monday.

Competing in the Class B-2 districts at Grand Island, Froeschle lifted an 81 to tie for fifth place with two other golfers. The top five golfers and top three teams in each district qualify for the state tournament.

UNFORTUNATELY, FROESCHLE lost a three-way playoff for fifth position and lost his state bid. Froeschle was tied with Russ Blaha of Ord and Jay Bolin of Albion for fifth, sixth and seventh places.

Blaha won the fifth place medal and state berth. Froeschle took the sixth place medal and defending Class B state champion Bolin had to settle for seventh place. Fortunately for him, his team finished second and earned a spot in the state tourney.

The Blue Devils finished seventh in the 14-team field. Royce Anderson shot an 88 to finish second among the Wayne golfers. Bill Vrtiska carded an 89. John Meleha shot a 94 and Cedric Ellingson finished with a 95.

Married Couple

Johnson's Like To Run for WSC

By Clark Caco
Attending Wayne State College, working and being married is plenty of work for most young couples on campus, but when you add running track at the same time then you have a unique situation for a family. Such is the case for Arld and Dianne Johnson.

Arld and Dianne may be one of only a few married couples attending college and running on the same track squad.

Arld is a graduate of South Sioux City High School and Dianne attended Papillion High School. Both experienced a great deal of success in their high school track careers. "I was the first person from South Sioux City High School to run in the state cross country meet," stated Arld. "I also had the opportunity to run in the 800-meter open at state my last three years of high school. Track has also given me the opportunity to run in Europe as between my freshman and sophomore years of college I ran in four different countries."

Dianne at one time held five Papillion High School track records, but since that time a couple of them have been broken. However, the memories remain of her success and being voted the best female track athlete of the year at Papillion High School during her senior season.

There are many times that Arld and Dianne have the opportunity to be together as they train at the same time on the weekends and during the summer. "I'm her number one fan and push her as much as I can. She needs to have more confidence in herself," commented Arld.

Arld and Dianne met during her freshman year at Wayne State College and were married the following September. During their first year of marriage, Arld continued to run for WSC but Dianne decided to sit out that year and concentrate on classes and married life. "At first, it was a little bit hard trying to get everything done on time while working, going to school, and being married but Arld helped out a great deal and we've adjusted real well," stated Dianne.

Running track has been very rewarding for both Arld and Dianne as they continued their success from high school to the college level. A couple of weeks ago while the Wayne State track team was participating in the Midland, S.D. Invitational, Arld and Dianne ran away with seven medals between them, five of which were gold.

Dianne is also a member of the spring medley relay team that has qualified for the nationals that are to be held in Houston, Texas in the latter part of May. Arld who is majoring in business management, will graduate from WSC next December and hopes to work for a sporting goods shoe company. He also plans to continue running competitively in fun runs, road races and maybe a marathon or two.

Dianne will continue to work toward her degree in physical education and sociology with a teaching endorsement.

As for starting a family, Dianne commented that she has finally gotten the

Wakefield's Ball Park Construction Will Begin

Construction soon will begin on a long-delayed project in Wakefield. The delay in building a new baseball field was caused by inadequate funding but local volunteers have secured the support of a national fraternal benefit society.

Members of Aid Association for Lutherans Local Branch 1542, Wakefield, have been awarded a $6,000 Community Action Benevolence grant to help purchase materials to build the ball park. Other funding for the $17,000 facility has been committed by local service organizations, businesses, community groups and individuals.

A TRACT OF LAND north of the existing diamond will be leveled and landscaped. The regulation size field will be surrounded by a chain-link fence and a backstop. Dugouts will be erected and portable bleachers will be added to complete the initial phase of the project. Field lights may be added at a later date.

AAL volunteers and others in the community will provide the labor needed to build the facility which will be used for little league baseball and community softball.

The Community Action Benevolence grant program, one of many administered by AAL, is designed to help AAL members provide needed services in their local communities through voluntary action.

AAL is the nation's largest fraternal benefit society, in terms of assets and life insurance in force. There are approximately 51,000 AAL members living in Nebraska.

Carroll's Clarence Morris Gets Plaque

Volunteer Firefighter Honored for 30 Years Service

By Randall Howell

Clarence Morris of Carroll is a man not given to taking a great deal about himself.

He's pleased, but almost embarrassed by the attention he's getting.

You see, Morris has spent some 30 years as a volunteer firefighter.

Tuesday night, in appreciation for his years and years of service, fellow volunteer firefighters of Carroll Rural Fire District No. 1 presented Morris with a plaque.

MORRIS, who resigned from the Carroll Volunteer Fire Department in April, was secretary-treasurer of the unit from 1957 to 1962 after joining as a firefighter in 1951.

In 1970, the Carroll's volunteer village fire department merged with the Carroll-Rural Fire District No. 1. Morris, a Carroll native, was appointed by the village to serve on the district board.

Clarence Morris

Morris served as secretary-treasurer of the district board from 1975 until his resignation this spring.

The 1947 graduate of Carroll High School was among the firefighters who formed the first rural fire district in Wayne County.

THE SON of William and Mary Morris, who farmed northwest of Carroll, the 62-year-old Morris married the former Viola Swanson, daughter of William and Lulu Swanson of Carroll, on Feb. 20, 1943.

"When my wife and I looked up the date, we found we were married on the same day of the month that my parents were married on," he said Monday while on duty as custodian and maintenance man at Wayne's Middle School.

Morris farmed with his parents after high school and worked at odd jobs around Carroll until his marriage to Viola. They continued farming until 1945 when he joined the Army, spending six months in Fort Worth, Texas before his post-WWII discharge.

MORRIS RETURNED to Carroll where he worked as a carpenter and painter until 1948. That year he went to work for Perry Johnson at Carroll Mobil Service.

Johnson retired in 1970 and Morris went to work for Wayne Middle School as a custodian, the job he holds today.

His wife works part time at the Carroll Public School during the lunch hour.

The couple's daughter, Pat Morris, works for Ron Pukley, Oke outlier of Ron's Steakhouse, Bar and Garage in Carroll.

MORRIS remembers the early days of the fire department when, for instance, the equipment was a 1939 Dodge truck.

He also recalls the purchase of a new Chevrolet Fire Truck from what was then Corvallis Auto Co. of Wayne in September of 1959.

Fire truck equipment for the new vehicle was purchased from LaVerne, Minn.

In 1979, the department's Chevrolet tanker truck was purchased. The department also owns a GMC water tanker.

Morris says the worst fire he can remember in Carroll was when the Lem Jones house burned to the ground. There were no injuries in the August of 1957 fire.

Scouts Plant Downtown Trees

BOY SCOUTS Bill Liska, Jaret Olson and Scott Brown dig out an old, dead tree stump near Wayne Cleaners on Main Street early last week. The trio, under the supervision of Scout Leader Bob Carhart, was regrading the sidewalk planting site for one of 18 trees the scouts planted in the downtown business district. The project was part of the Downtown Improvement Committee's effort to restore trees damaged by vandals in the city's shopping district.

Margie Vahlkamp Weds Bob Lamb in April

St. Paul's Lutheran Church of Winside was the scene of the April 25 wedding of Margie Vahlkamp and Bob Lamb.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Vahlkamp of Winside and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Lamb of Wayne.

Guests attending the 5 o'clock double ring rites were escorted to their seats by Norm Brown, Rod Bubke, John Rebensdorf and Brian Lamb, all of Wayne. The guests were registered by Jean Carhart, also of Wayne.

THE REV. John E. Halfermann officiated, and music was "Oh Father, Son and Holy Ghost," "Lord's Prayer" and "Oh God That Casts Out Fear," sung by Nick Sieler of Wayne and Kris Duerking of Winside. Organist was Randy Flier of Wayne.

Candles were lit by Tracy Lamb of Wayne and Cindy Berg of Winside. Flower girl was Liz Hamilton of Lincoln and ring bearer was Kurt Jaeger of Hoskins.

GIVEN in marriage by her parents, the bride was attired in a white floor-length gown fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline, basque bodice beautified with re-embroidered Venice lace, empire waistline and overlay, with an attached chapel train. The long narrow chantilly sleeves were edged in matching lace. Chantilly lace adorned the bodice and full skirt over bridal tulle lining.

A bridal illusion tiered veil and Juliet headpiece cascaded with lace motifs completed her ensemble. She carried a bouquet of pixy carnations, pink roses and a white orchid.

MAID of honor was Carla Berg of Winside, and bridesmaids were Sheri Wiemann of Lincoln, Susan Coulter of Winside and Chris Vakoc of Wayne.

They wore light pink magic knit gowns designed with blouson bodices, jewel necklines beautified with dyed lace lace, and self fabric belts at the natural waistlines. They wore combs with pink roses in their hair and carried pink roses.

Mike Flier of Wayne served as best man, and groomsmen were Pat Dougherty and Jay Davis, both of Wayne, and Eric Vahlkamp of Winside.

The men were attired in ice blue tuxedos.

THE BRIDE'S mother wore a blue floor-length dress with a matching lace jacket, and the bridegroom's mother selected a pink floor-length gown with matching jacket.

MR. AND Mrs. Dave Spangler of Beatrice and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Wurtz of Lincoln greeted the 300 guests who attended a reception in the church basement following the ceremony.

Gifts were arranged by Kim Summers of Columbus and Kim Jaeger of Norfolk.

The cake was cut and served by Jeanie Summers of Columbus and Lillian Knutzen of Charter Oak, Iowa. Judy Hamilton of Lincoln and Sharon Jaeger of Norfolk poured, and Karen Prescott of Dixon and Arvona Jaeger of Hoskins served punch.

Waitresses were Vivian Herzberg of Creslon, Iowa, Kathy Fedde of Hickman, Kathy Fitzgerald of Nickerson, Holly Henry of Fremont, Andrea Mann, Dawn Carlsens and Della Holtgreve, all of Winside, and Shelly Hellholt of Norfolk.

THE BRIDE was graduated from Winside High School in 1979 and attended Midland Lutheran College for one and a half years. She presently is a student at Wayne State College.

The bridegroom, a 1979 Wayne-Carroll High School graduate, is employed at Johnson's Frozen Foods in Wayne.

The newlyweds are at home at 1106 Douglas St., Wayne.

Protest

"There is a real need for fire protection there," he said. "There's new construction down there and I think something has to be done."

He said the line was 40 years old and served only six houses when it was built. "We've known about the problem for at least seven years, yet we allowed new houses to hook up at the head of the line," Russell said, appealing to the City Council to take another look.

IN ANOTHER water related matter Tuesday night, the City Council approved a resolution authorizing the city to contract with HEMCO to modify a control panel for monitoring the municipal water supply.

Dennis Hirschbruner, city engineer from Bruce Gilmore & Associates of Columbus, told the City Council that modifying the control panel at the city's light plant could save thousands of dollars and avoid committing the city to a long-range, high-cost, well monitoring system.

Initial plans called for the purchase of a new control board at a cost estimated to be over $18,000. The board would have controlled water flow to storage tanks and monitored pump performance for four existing city wells and the new east side well being dug this summer.

However, Hirschbruner explained that further study indicates the present panel, which controls water levels in city storage tanks and pump action, can be modified for about $3,850 to handle all five wells adequately.

Council approved the request.

HEMCO installed the present monitoring system. The modifications will provide each well and pump with individual control and monitoring device. It will also change the system from a pulse duration signal to a pulse frequency signal.

Hirschbruner said he felt confident the modified system would work for the city and that he could not justify purchase of the new board in light of the uncertainty regarding water tables and water availability in wells around Wayne.

In another water-related matter, the City Council postponed action of a proposed water-emergency ordinance.

Kloster has drawn up a water rationing ordinance for the city which will, if passed by the Council, outline procedures to be followed in man-made or natural disaster water emergencies.

Council members are expected to review the proposed ordinance at its next meeting.

IN OTHER action, City Council members authorized the city clerk to issue a check to State National Bank and Trust for $215,682 to settle warrants under the approved bond-issue program.

The account with the bank, which has handled interim financing for city projects, was expected to be settled Wednesday as Wayne moved into a long-range financing program at lower interest rates through municipal bonds.

Bidding was authorized for a new city ditching machine at an estimated cost of $13,500. Bids will be accepted until the last Council meeting in May. Kloster said the reason for the short notice was that a June price increase is expected from a major supplier.

The new ditching machine, a budgeted item for this year, will replace an 11-year-old unit that is "pretty well shot," according to a city public works department employee.

BEFORE ADJOURNING, Council members approved a policy that will pay the city administrator 20 cents a mile for use of his personal car on out-of-town trips and provide Kloster with $100 auto-use reimbursement per month for job-related driving.

Part of the plan involves trading in one of two old handed-down police cruisers, currently being used for city business. The police cruiser trade-in will be for a vehicle to be used by the city light department.

Councilwoman Carolyn Eiler, who questioned the proposal during the previous Council meeting, again challenged the $100-per-month reimbursement figure as too high. The policy was adopted. Eiler voted against it.

IN ANOTHER transportation matter, City Council members held a public hearing on funding for the Wayne Senior Citizens Center minibus.

Jocelle Bill, director of the center, appeared before the Council, requesting approval on applications for federal and state matching funds for partial payment of costs incurred in operating the minibus.

No one appeared in opposition to the proposal, which seeks $8,022 in federal funds, $4,011 in state Department of Roads funds and will be matched by $4,011 locally.

Bill said the minibus had traveled 4,493 miles this past year on 3,955 one-way rides. Council authorized Kloster to apply for the matching money.

IN OTHER action, the City Council passed two ordinances to bring city law in compliance with state codes for law enforcement purposes.

The two ordinances, one involving resisting arrest without a dangerous weapon, and the other involving obstructing a peace officer, were passed unanimously by the Council.

And, at Kloster's request, action was postponed on the annexation of Blocks 1, 2, 4 and 5 of Sunnyview Subdivision in the northeast part of the city.

Kloster said he had some questions about the proposed annexation and asked for time to study the matter. The City Council concurred.

Farmer

Jerry knew flying had been a life long dream for his father — a desire postponed by the needs of family and farming.

LUND, who turned 65 on Jan. 8, started his flight instruction nine days later.

He works the lessons around his hectic — for a semi-retired man — schedule, which includes managing the dairy operation (30 head), supervising the hired farmhands and selling in insurance.

Lund refers to his insurance agency business as his hobby, and even admits to have some time left over to play golf once in a while.

A tall, lanky man, Lund crawled over the little Cessna single prop, two seater Monday morning checking the tail, wings and engine with a matter-of-factness that he, no doubt, has used thousands of time with his own farm machinery.

PULLING the red-and-white plane from the hanger into the 8 a.m. sunshine, he rechecked himself on a few points and climbed aboard for one of more than a half dozen solo flights he's logged since mid-April's first venture.

Just over a half-hour later, he was settling down on the runway with another successful flight under his belt.

Retracing his 18 miles to the farm, the home he grew up on, Lund handled a day's work that included shoveling beans, and reaped himself for still more successful solos.

"It's nice, real nice," he said. "You feel free. It's just as much fun as I thought it would be. There's a lot more room up there."

Not easily shaken, Lund said the toughest part was getting acquainted with the airplane, but that he enjoys every aspect of flying.

AND, ONCE he gets that private pilot's license, one of the things Lund wants to do is take his wife for a plane ride. "She rides with me in the car, and that's a lot more dangerous than an airplane ride," he said. "Lund says his wife, who has been supportive of his late-in-life flying lessons, may not join him as a pilot, though."

"I doubt it," he said, when asked if Wilma would take lessons.

Lund says he plans to fly for pleasure and won't commit himself any flight to Boise to see his son, a flight he's taken on commercial air liners up to his point.

Almost nonchalant about his solo experience, the son of Max and Nannie Lund said he "probably wouldn't have done it" had Jerry not sent him the gift certificate.

"WHEN I was younger, I wanted to many times," he said. "But, I just never took the time to do it."

Born in Ida Grove, Iowa, in 1913, Lund and his family moved to the farm near Laurel in time for him to attend country school in District 65. After high school (1932) in Laurel, Lund went to work for a dairy farmer in California.

He returned to the Laurel area farmstead to work with his father in 1938. He and Wilma married on May 28, 1942 and rented several Laurel area farms in several years.

In 1955, they bought his father's farm and moved onto the home place in 1956. The couple has farmed a section of ground there since. They raised three children — Jim, Jerry and Jan along with cows, corn, beans and hay.

Oldest son, Jim, 38, is manager of the Richmond German Store in Grand Island. Youngest son, Tom, 32, works for the Hitch Corp., an agricultural irrigation operation in Moscow, Kans. Lund's sister, Marjorie Oxley, farms with her husband, John, near the Lund farmstead.

THANK YOU to all our friends, relatives and neighbors for their kind thoughts and deeds that were shown to our families during the recent loss of our wife, mother, daughter and sister, Corine Carroll. Also, to all those who brought food to our homes. Sent memorials, flowers, cards, letters and extended sympathy in so many ways. A special "thank you" to PMC and their fine nursing staff, Sister Gertrude, to Dr. Bob, Gary West, the Grace Lutheran Ladies Aid for serving and especially to Pastor's Tom and Jon for all their prayers and services. Words seem so inadequate at a time such as this to tell all of you just how much every thing has meant to us. Your friendship, love and prayers have been greatly appreciated and will be long remembered. Fun in the Mud

Nebraska's State Aid Distribution Formula is Now Law, Finally

CAPITOL NEWS
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

During a constitutional formula for distributing $70 million in state aid to local governments has not been an easy task for Nebraska lawmakers.

But lawmakers, once in the home stretch of this year's 90-day session, finally agreed on a distribution formula. Gov. Charles Thone also signed the bill into law, despite Attorney General Paul Douglas' concerns about the validity of a portion of the legislation.

The whole issue of personal property tax reimbursement has been a tough one from the start. When Sen. Lorán Schmitz of Bellwood several sessions ago won support for a bill to exempt farm equipment, livestock and business inventory from personal property taxes, it at times appeared to be uphill battle.

CONSIDERABLE debate centered around the size of the reimbursement pot. Also at issue were the types of personal property to be exempted.

But, in the end, lawmakers settled on a piece of legislation that the majority agreed to pass into law.

The debate back then about how gradually the property should be taken off the tax rolls seemed to drag on as long as this year's debates about how the money could be distributed constitutionally.

Schmitz's LB518 did go into law, although statutory revisions were on the minds of many lawmakers and other officials, and the legislation never escaped some type of scrutiny.

Lawmakers last year wrestled with the issue again, this time working on the dollar amount and the distribution formula. Last year's bill, perhaps we should call it the Sor of LB518, like its father was passed into law.

BUT THE ATTORNEY general's office, noting the exempted property was no longer on the tax rolls, wondered aloud how counties and governmental subdivisions could be reimbursed for lost revenues if there was no way to know exactly how much the local governments were losing. After all, the property wasn't on the tax rolls anymore.

The Justice Department took the Sor of LB518 to court, and the Supreme Court declared invalid the distribution formula because there was no way of updating it. That froze the $70 million state aid that was to be distributed in seven equal $10 million payments, beginning last December.

Back to the drawing boards for Nebraska lawmakers, who wrestled for months before mixing what a majority of senators thought were the necessary ingredients to create the Grandson of LB518.

The grandson, known by its given name of LB284, like its predecessors has the attorney general raising his eyebrows.

Young LB284 contains one formula for distributing the money for two years, and another plan for distributing payments in the third and subsequent years. The latter provision in the formula is the one being questioned by the attorney general.

THONE SIGNED LB284 into law a day after lawmakers passed the bill. He had said the intensity of Douglas' objections would influence his decision on whether to sign the measure.

Since Thone signed the bill, it could be speculated that the attorney general realizes the lawmakers have another session before the part he questions goes into effect. That means Douglas' concerns could be examined during summer studies and considering during the 1982 legislative session.

But history is bound to repeat itself, and Nebraskans can probably look forward to another generation of the same — although physically different — issue. The next one, if you'd like, could be called Great-Grandson or LB518.

GROUNDWATER PROTECTION — Nebraska lawmakers have set the stage for a final vote on a bill that is aimed at protecting the state's underground water supply.

And, the measure appears headed for passage. It advanced on the second of three debating stages on a 36-0 vote, despite some attempts to substantially amend the bill.

Sponsored by the Public Works Committee, LB416 would permit the formation of a groundwater control area to combat underground water pollution problems. Currently, controls can be imposed in areas where water quantity is a problem.

The lawmaker behind the recent attempt to substantially alter the bill was Sen. Tom Vickers of Farnam. He wants to allow controls if underground development would affect the present or future use of surface water.

VICKERS HAS twice been defeated in his attempt, although the first time he fell only three votes short of approval.

Vickers also proposed an amendment to permit irrigation controls if development — including center pivot irrigation — affected the sub-irrigation area. The Farnam lawmaker said his proposal was aimed at protecting the wet meadows in the Sandhills, but it was defeated on a sound 19-13 vote.

Although Vickers has been unsuccessful to date in his attempts to permit controls that would be aimed at avoiding underground water pollution problems, his proposals might be more attractive down the road.

The Public Works Committee — and the Legislature — have traditionally moved slow on water legislation. It's not entirely uncommon for a proposal that was rejected one session to resurface time and time again, eventually winning approval.

The same might hold true in Vickers' case, and there's always the chance he could get a last-minute amendment through this session. But it would seem more likely for his success to come down the road in a session or two, if the 22 senators who supported his amendment this year stand with him and are joined by like-minded lawmakers.

The Fire Next Time

It's no secret that Wayne State College has experienced a rash of false fire alarm incidents this year.

False fire alarm incidents exceed 50 from the beginning of college classes until spring recess.

Volunteer firefighters rolled out at all times of the day and night to respond to emergency fire situations, only to find out the alarms were the work of some college prankster.

Two students have been arrested in connection with an incident last Wednesday morning. Apparently, they face their own problems with regard to possible disciplinary action by the college's Student Standards Committee.

The suspects aren't here. They left campus with the other students last week without being charged with any crime.

Though Wayne City Police arrested the duo with assistance from campus security police, Wayne County Attorney Budd Bornhoff decided not to prosecute. Essentially, his legal opinion is that there is no state statute that makes the act a crime. He's says he needs an attorney general's opinion.

He seems to be seeking that opinion only after pressure from the firefighters, who were thwarted in their attempt to get the opinion themselves.

It's hard to understand, particularly when the problem has been building all year. Let's hope our firefighters continue to respond much quicker than the county attorney did on the matter.

And, just for the record, it is a crime, statute or no. It's a crime against life and against property.

You don't have to tell that to the firefighters who responded time and time again to no fire. You don't need to tell that to the homeowners who pray volunteer firefighters respond, even though they have been fighting false alarms all year.

Nor do you need to tell that to the college students at Wayne State who are there to get an education and rely on this city to protect them from the danger of fire and the carelessness of lawbreakers.

Apparently, you need to tell it to the county attorney before we fiddle at Wayne State while the city burns.

Emergency Care Credit

During the past five years, care of emergency patients in Nebraska had improved dramatically.

One major reason is the special effort made by ambulance services and rescue squads to upgrade their emergency equipment and the level of training in emergency medical care in which ambulance attendants participate.

Hospital emergency department personnel have helped lead the way to improved patient care by providing constructive suggestions to ambulance attendants and providing continuing education opportunities.

Division of Emergency Medical Services records show that almost 90 percent of the ambulance attendants in Nebraska have completed the emergency medical technician course to become an EMT, the ambulance attendant must attend the nationally standardized EMT A course consisting of 71 hours of class work (lecture, discussion, and emergency skill practice), and 10 hours of in-hospital observation of emergency patient care.

Because the major emphasis of the EMT A training programs coordinated by the Department of Health is proper patient care, the goal of the ambulance services and rescue squads has changed from the "you call, we haul" idea of yesteryear to today's concern for the well being of the patient. Today's ambulance attendants are well trained in life saving procedures and take the time necessary at the accident scene to assure that patients arrive at the hospital emergency department in good condition.

Special praise is due for the thousands of volunteers who donate their time and effort to the improved care of emergency patients.

Without their selfless service, emergency medical care in Nebraska would be delayed or unavailable in many locations.

The improved care of victims of accidents and medical emergencies over the past few years has helped make Nebraska a leader in the field of emergency medical services. Continued recognition and support of EMS in Nebraska is necessary to maintain the current high standing.

Director, Emergency Medical Services

Nebraska Tax Rates Among Lowest

National figures indicate that Nebraska has among the very lowest taxation rates among the 50 states.

In 1980 a married couple with two children and a $15,000 income paid more state income taxes in 37 other states than was paid in Nebraska. This information is from a table published in the May 4, 1981 issue of U.S. News & World Report with data from the U.S. Advisory Committee on Intergovernmental Relations.

The same size family with $25,000 income paid more state income taxes in 46 other states than in Nebraska. The figures assumed that only one spouse worked and that deductions were itemized.

ALSO IN 1980, the state sales tax rate was higher in 29 states, plus the District of Columbia, than Nebraska's 3 percent rate. According to the Council of State Governments, Connecticut, for example, has a 7 percent sales tax.

No property taxes are levied for state purposes in Nebraska. Only local governments collect and use property taxes in our state. The property tax is still a major source of state revenue in some states, and property taxes in Nebraska are too high in my opinion.

A Letter From

Some states have corporate income taxes at least 2 1/2 times higher than Nebraska's. This fact is helping us attract new industry to our state.

Nebraska's low taxation rates for state government have been achieved because since I became governor in January, 1979 the personal income tax rate has been lowered from 18 percent of the liability to the federal government to 15 percent of the liability. The Nebraska state sales tax rate in that same period has been held at 3 percent, while rates were being raised in a number of other states.

THE LOW TAXATION rates since 1979 have been accomplished by holding down state spending. The Nebraska legislature has imposed a spending ceiling on local governments, generally allowing them to increase spending no more than 7 percent a year. I have insisted that the same kind of lids on spending be imposed on our state government.

The 1979 and 1980 legislatures did not far exceed my spending recommendations, thus making possible the sizable cuts in state income taxes now in effect.

The budget I submitted to the 1981 unicameral was designed to permit continuation of those lowered tax rates. There are some bills pending before the legislature that would "bust the budget" and require state tax increases. I passed over my veto. I'm very hopeful that I won't even have to veto any spending proposed by the legislature. I'm somewhat optimistic that the majority in the unicameral want to avoid state tax increases as much as I do.

One way or another, however, I will do my best to defeat proposed increases in state spending that would require hikes in our state sales and income taxes.

Reagan's Program Best for Farmers

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION
By M.M. Van Kirk,
Director of Information

The greatest thing that could happen to U.S. farmers and ranchers would be that the Reagan Administration's four-point economic recovery program would be approved by Congress and would actually bring inflation under control and set an example for future economic policies.

Most farmers and ranchers will admit that their production costs are causing most of their troubles, that they continuously increase at a pace greater than their income. Making "income" exceed "outgo" has always been the name of the farming and ranching game and it has never been easy to accomplish.

ONE NEED NOT be a real "oldtimer" at the farming and ranching game to make his or her own comparisons. Today's average age farmer and rancher at around 50 years has probably been farming for himself at least 20 years, starting back in the late 1950s or early 1960s. They can recall when top prices for slaughter cattle at $23 to $24 per cwt. were considered extremely good and if they could buy feeder cattle at comparable figures they could make a profit finishing them out on $1.30 per bushel corn.

And hog producers about 1970 thought $20 per cwt. for finished hogs was the dividing line between making a good profit or breaking even. The most efficient operators then as now, made more profit, expanded operations and improved their economic stability. They would be the first to say that comparisons are relative, and that the "fewer dollars" of those days would buy more in terms of tractors, pickups, combines, fertilizer, diesel fuel, etc., than today's inflated dollars.

In the early 1970s, farmers were horrified at having to pay over $30,000 for a new combine. Compare that to $60,000 and more. In the mid-70s, an older Nebraska farmer who could remember the 1930s and $4.75 per cwt. hogs, shook his head and said, "Who would ever have thought that I would sell hogs for $50 per cwt."

And now it is 1981 and farmers have been losing money on $40 hogs and earlier this year efficient cattle feeders were losing $100 per head and more on cattle bringing $63 and $64 per cwt. Consider that some of the livestock economic forecasters see an upturn in cattle prices and possibly $80 per cwt. cattle in the last quarter of this year. But it should be remembered that such projected improvement is meaningless in terms of profit returns and retention if inflated production costs gobble up the extra dollars they represent.

BACK IN 1961, the annual rate of inflation was as little as 1 percent per year. Americans complained and inflation became a political issue in the 1970s when it grew to 4 and 5 percent per year. But not enough of an issue to change the course of elections and force government leadership to become serious about it. Former President Carter was elected in 1976 promising to do something about a "horrible" inflation rate of 4.8 percent. But those were "the good old days." Inflation rates surged to 13.3 percent by 1979, 12.4 percent in 1980 and currently exceeds a 13 percent rate.

In early 1960s, farmers and ranchers financed their operations with money at 6 to 7 percent and they complained when that figure grew to 8 and 9 percent. Most would not have believed the 13 to 20 percent levels reached in the last two years.

It is not coincidental that the surge in the nation's inflation rate (and that translates to farm and ranch production costs) corresponds with a growth in spending by the federal government that exceeds the growth of the nation's GNP (gross national product). An increase in federal spending of 16 percent per year (the last two years) and a national debt approaching 1 trillion dollars,

FARMERS LIVESTOCK Auction Inc. of Wayne was presented a plaque from the Northeast Nebraska Pork Producers Thursday in appreciation of the cooperation shown for the collection of the Checkoff Program and support of the Pork Producers Association. Farmland Prices Expected To Continue 1980's Climb

Agricultural land values in Nebraska and the nation will continue their upward trend in the 1980s, but ownership patterns are likely to change.

So long as the economy is inflation prone, farmland appreciation will likely continue, according to Bruce Johnson, associate professor of agricultural economics in the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. Johnson and ownership trends in the May issue of the "Business in Nebraska" publication.

selling for $1,500 per acre would typically return $60 annually to the owner, assuming a 20 percent down payment and a conventional mortgage at 12 percent interest. The annual amortized mortgage payment would approach $150 and the financial obligation would exceed current earnings by nearly two and a half times, Johnson said.

EXAMINED another way earnings from land purchased 10 years ago would equal principal and interest obligations in about five to eight years into the repayment period. Today it would probably take 11 to 15 years to reach that point, Johnson said.

Because of the high price to earning ratio, especially in the early years of a loan, farmland buyers who do not have supplemental income sources may face a cash flow squeeze, Johnson said. "Earnings from the land investment in the short run simply will not cover debt repayment obligations, even though the investment may be profitable in the long run," he explained.

Moreover, the higher the interest rate, the greater the need for income subsidy from other sources in the early years of the repayment period and the longer the subsidy will be needed, he added.

"For beginning farmers with limited earnings, the barriers to entry via land ownership will become increasingly formidable."

"MANY CAN'T handle in debtfulness of the magnitude that is common today. They have to have supplemental income from another source. You can't always count on $4 corn and 180 bushel yields every year to make the payments." The loan officer won't count on high prices and bid yields, either, he added.

Financing arrangements do change in response to market conditions, Johnson said. "Used to be that the longer the period of the loan, the lower the annual payments would be because they were spread over a greater number of years. But now interest rates have hit a new plateau that negates the value of an extended mortgage. There's very little to be gained by extending payments."

A relatively recent development in financing has been variable interest rate instruments, similar to those facing most home buyers today. "These represent a risk transfer from the lender to the borrower. Loan obligations are made for a 25- to 30-year period, but the interest rate is set for only a three- to five-year period and adjusted up or down at the end of each period according to current market conditions," he said.

POTENTIALLY, this could add to already existing cash flow problems for some investors, he added.

Even though fewer new farmers may be in the market, this isn't likely to depress land prices because the factors that are barriers to beginners are incentives to investors with established wealth, he said.

Tax provisions strongly encourage conversion of ordinary income into capital gains. Thus, for investors in higher tax brackets, the earnings distribution mix of farmland investment is ideal.

Land ownership patterns change slowly because of low ownership turnover, but market factors do suggest some movement toward a landed aristocracy," he said.

BROMEGRASS — If there is not too much brome grass in your lawn, it's probably best to dig it out. Dig a couple of inches beyond the size of the plant you want to eliminate.

Another possibility is to put dark plastic socks or something similar over the brome grass spots for a week or so. The heat and lack of light should kill it.

If there is a lot of brome grass, use a grass killer, but be aware that you will have a brown spot in the lawn after a while when it dies.

MUSHROOMS — Mushrooms are the fruiting structures of various kinds of fungi. They grow from an underground network of mycelial that utilizes decaying organic material in the soil as a nutrient source.

Mushrooms are commonly found on tree stumps, dead roots, decaying logs, buried boards, or any area having a high content of organic matter. The caps or fruiting structures develop following a rain and may remain visible for quite some time or at least until hot, dry weather occurs, depending upon the species of mushroom.

Since mushrooms commonly form on decaying or buried organic matter, elimination of these fungi from a lawn is not easy. Complete control is almost impossible until the organic base upon which they are growing has been completely decayed.

In some cases it may be feasible to dig up the pieces of rotting wood or other debris in the lawn or remove tree stumps on which these fungi colonize. If this is impractical, the best method may be to break off any mushrooms. This should be done when the mushrooms are young to reduce further release of their spores.

BROWNE EVERGREENS — Don't be in a hurry to cut down evergreens which turn brown this past winter — give them until the last part of May to see if they will come out of it.

The browned evergreens could recover to some degree. The foliage could stay brown, but the buds may be alive. The buds are the parts of the tree which put out this year's new growth and green foliage. In five years or less the bad effects will not be noticeable.

Reasons for the browning comes from insufficient moisture caused in part by drought conditions. However, if the moisture supply was extremely low, the buds could be killed also and there will be no recovery.

If the tree has not budded out or if new growth is not noticed by late May, removal and replanting may be necessary.

The Carrolliners Girls 4 H Club met April 28 at the Carroll school. Mindy Janssen was acting president.

Members answered roll call with their favorite animal.

The group went roller skating on April 10 at Wakelield and also held a swimming party recently at Wayne State College.

The club donated $25 towards a food sale being sponsored by the Teens Supremes, Junior 4 H Leaders of Wayne County.

Demonstrations were given by Pam Junck on how to make favern sandwich, Heidi Hansen on how to paper wrap a box, Karen Longe on how to mix and match colors in decorations, and Beth Stollenberg on how to bake "Yummy Apples."

Cooking director Mrs. Ron Magnuson reviewed steps in the cookbook.

Next meeting will be May 18 at the school.

Setting Sorghum Irrigation Limit Means Season-Long Restrictions

If you decide to limit irrigation of grain sorghum, a U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist advises restricting water throughout the growing season — not just during one or two stages of crop growth.

The most favorable limited irrigation scheduling for sorghum, in studies led by plant physiologist Charles Y. Sullivan, Lincoln, was one in which water stress gradually increased throughout the season. Restricting water only during one or two of three growth stages — vegetative, flowering or grain-filling — hurt yields more than limited irrigation through all three stages.

Whether corn conditions to increasing water stress was questionable in studies by Sullivan of the department's Science and Education Administration Agricultural Research, Watts and University of Nebraska graduate students Dennis P. Garrity and Roberta E. Mauser.

WATER USE efficiency, for both sorghum and corn, declined whenever evapotranspiration losses were not replaced by irrigation. Limiting irrigation over the entire growing season was less detrimental to water use efficiency than cutbacks during only one or two growth stages, the researchers found.

The studies were at the university's Sandhills Agricultural Laboratory near Tryon. Sorghum or corn was planted in 24 rows 30 inches (76.2 centimeters) apart and parallel to two sprinkler irrigation lines on the long sides of a 62 by 90 foot (18.9 by 27.4 meter) area.

With one sprinkler line operating, the amount of water put on decreased uniformly with distance perpendicular from the line. Thus, the second row parallel to the line received nearly 100 percent replacement of weekly evapotranspiration, as measured with a neutron probe. Rows 52 to 54, feet (16 to 17 meters) from the line received near zero irrigation — termed "gradient irrigation."

Operating both sprinkler lines replaced 100 percent of measured evapotranspiration weekly — termed "uniform irrigation."

In most studies, the researchers combined four combinations of gradient and uniform irrigation in parts of the rows: (1) gradient in all three growth stages; (2) gradient for vegetative and flowering or tasseling; uniform for grain filling; (3) gradient for vegetative, uniform for the other two stages; (4) uniform for vegetative and flowering; gradient for grain filling.

Mercantile Exchange Seminar Set

Cattle producers who wish to know more about Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME) deliveries for slaughter and feeder cattle are invited to attend a CME-USDA cattle evaluation clinic scheduled for Thursday, May 21. The clinic, which is co-sponsored by the CME, USDA Market News, and the Sioux City Stockyards, will begin at 2 p.m. at the Stockyard's feeder cattle auction barn. Live demonstrations of slaughter and feeder cattle evaluations for CME deliveries will be discussed, along with the upcoming changes on both contracts. The program is free and open to the public.

Plant Your Own Wildlife Food Plot

Again this spring, the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission and the Cooperative Extension Service are providing free supplies of seed to help establish food sources for wildlife next winter. This project gives youth groups or individuals a chance to help wildlife find food sources during cold weather. The bags of seed contain milo, millet and sunflower seeds. Each bag will plant approximately one-quarter acre. Instructions for planting comes with each bag. The seed is treated with an insecticide, so it must be planted and not fed directly to animals or birds. If you are interested in putting out a plot or would like more information please call your local extension office.

Bill Revises Storage Laws

First round approval has been given to a bill that would protect farmers who store grain in warehouses by revising present grain warehousing laws. The bill, LB 529, was introduced because of a growing number of bankruptcies by elevator operators last year. LB 529 would require a grain elevator or warehouse to file an annual financial statement by a certified public accountant with the Public Service Commission. That financial statement would cost between $500 and $1,000. This grain warehouse bill would do away with personal surety bonds for warehousemen, and raise bonding requirements for trucking companies in the grain hauling business. The bond would be $12,000 for the first truck and $10,000 for each additional truck, with a maximum of $52,000. The bill also allows the state Public Service Commission to take title in trust and distribute the grain or proceeds whenever there is a shortage of grain in storage in a licensed warehouse.

Pasture and Range Condition Low

Pasture and range condition was reported at 68 percent of normal on May 1. This was 18 points below a year earlier and equal to 1975 which was the lowest for the date since 1956. Even though weather has been warmer than normal, growth has been limited by a shortage of moisture across much of the state. Farmers and ranchers had 1,417,000 tons of hay on hand May 1, 22 percent below a year earlier. A year ago, stocks were the second highest of record for the date. Disappearance during the period January 1-April 30 was 3,754,000 tons, 4 percent below the preceding year. Hay production in 1980 was down 7 percent from a year earlier.

1981 Wheat Crop Down

Nebraska's 1981 wheat crop was forecast at 109.8 million bushels, 7 percent below a year earlier, based on May 1 conditions. Average yield was forecast at 36 bushels per acre, 7 bushels below last year. The 5 year (1975-79) average yield is 33.0 bushels per acre. Nebraska's record crop of 111.4 million bushels was produced in 1958 from 3.4 million harvested acres with yield averaging 33 bushels per acre. Average harvested for grain was expected to total 3.05 million acres, 3 percent above last year. If realized, this would be 95.3 percent of the 3.2 million acres planted or nearly the same as the 95 percent harvested last year. The 5 year (1975-79) average is 89 percent harvested. The Nebraska wheat crop entered the winter in mostly fair condition last fall as dry soil condition allowed early germination in many areas and limited later crop development. Winter kill was minimal this year as a generally favorable winter and an early spring seeded the spring crop growth and development. In many eastern fields, moisture supplies remain short and chinch bugs are causing problems.

LEAD Applications Due

Young agriculturalists with proven leadership potential have until July 1 to apply for acceptance in the two-year Nebraska Leadership Education/Action Development (LEAD) program. The 30 participants — 24 in production agriculture and 6 in supporting agribusiness — will be selected from among men and women applicants 25 to 40 years of age. They will attend seven, three-day seminars each year across the state at university campuses and agribusiness establishments. At the end of each year's seminars, a two to three week study travel seminar will be held. The first year program, to start this fall, will focus on local and national issues; international affairs will be featured next year. The program is sponsored by the Nebraska Agricultural Leadership Council. More information and an application are available from Dr. James Horner, executive vice president; Nebraska Agricultural Development Council, 302 Agricultural Hall, East Campus, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb 68583.

Erosion Rates Threaten Soil Productivity

Each year, more than 6.4 million tons (5.8 billion metric tons) of soil erode from the nation's farmland and other nonfederal lands, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official said today. "In many areas, the rate of erosion seriously threatens long-term agricultural productivity," said Norman A. Berg, chief of USDA's Soil Conservation Service. "We have unacceptable erosion rates on more than 140 million acres (57 million hectares) of cropland." Berg said erosion rates exceed acceptable levels on more than 295 million acres (119 million hectares) of cropland, pastureland, forest land, and rangeland. Scientists consider erosion tolerable when eroded topsoil can be replenished through natural processes. Of the more than 6.4 billion tons of soil losses from wind and water erosion each year, more than 5 billion tons (4.5 billion metric tons) erode from agricultural lands. Some 1.1 billion more tons (1 billion metric tons) erode from streambanks, gullies, construction sites, roads and roadsides. Sediment, the greatest single water pollutant by volume, is an end product of soil erosion.

Auctioneers Win Ad Award

Lonnie Nixon, left, and Merl Nixon from Nixon Auctioneers of Wakefield and Laurel are shown with a copy of the sale bill and plaque they received for winning the advertising first place award in the Antique and Collectible category in a contest held by the Nebraska Auctioneers Association at York last weekend. There were 168 entries in the contest. The sale bill was for a recent Antique and Collectible Auction the firm held at the Wayne Armory. The sale bill will now be entered in national competition.

Fly Species Costing Livestock Producers Millions Each Year

Two species of flies are costing U.S. livestock producers about $225 million annually, according to studies in Illinois and Nebraska. The two species — the stable fly and housefly — are most threatening to feedlot cattle, dairy cattle and swine, says Dr. John Campbell, an entomologist with the University of Nebraska. "Determine where your major fly breeding problems are, and if possible, clean up or reduce breeding areas," Campbell says. He recommends cleaning up any combination of spilled grain, feed, moisture and manure — the ideal fly breeding environment. Also, he says, make certain waterers don't leak and contribute to the breeding environment. "Once you've done this, it's still necessary to use insecticides. Attack the adult population," Campbell says.

THE BLOODSUCKING STABLE

fly reduces weight gains in feedlot cattle and milk production in dairy cattle, Campbell says. Houseflies may contribute directly to animal production losses in dairy cattle and swine, but create most of their damage through disease transmission, the entomologist says. A prudent fly control program is a good investment, according to Campbell. "For insect control, every dollar spent to obtain control will gain you $4 to $8 in return," Campbell says. The best fly control program for stockmen is a two-step approach, he says: Sanitation, first, followed by application of insecticides.

IDEALLY, AN INSECTICIDE FOR

spraying livestock premises would have both knockdown (immediate kill) and residual qualities, Campbell says. The new synthetic pyrethroid insecticides available this year have that combination of qualities, according to the entomologist. A formulation for use as a premise spray, Permethrin 16 Percent EC (emulsifiable concentrate), recently was introduced by Anchor Laboratories. The new synthetic pyrethroid products are "much safer" and "much more efficient" than the ones we've used in the past," Campbell says. When implementing a fly spray program in barns and livestock premises, any spray can be made more effective by knowing where and when to spray the insecticides. "Do your spraying when flies are resting, because it's much easier to control them when they're concentrated in a small area," he suggests. "During the heat of the day, both stable flies and houseflies prefer sheltered shade, Campbell says, but not dark interiors. Stable flies tend to rest on the building fronts and shady areas or vegetation during the hot part of the day. During the heat of the day, both stable flies and houseflies may seek shady areas such as surrounding trees. An application of insecticide in the trees at this time can be an effective control measure, Campbell says.

Spent wisely, the investment in fly control will more than pay for itself, Campbell summarizes.

An Artist He's Not

ALTHOUGH HE DOESN'T claim to be an artist, Bob Hollman of the Wakefield City Street Department did a pretty fair job of sprucing up the city's Main Street last week. Bob, along with Merlin Bressler began re-painting the diagonal parking lines on each side of Main Street and for a half block on each side street last Monday and hoped to have the job completed by Friday. Bob said they worked at the painting project off and on all during the week.
