Head-On Collision Kills Laurel Teen; Hurts Five Others

Three Wayne area residents and a Laurel teenager remain in stable condition, while a Laurel foreign exchange student is in serious condition, following a two-car, head-on collision that killed a Cedar County teenager Thursday night.

Rachelle M. Dahlquist, 18, daughter of Donovan and Betty (Conger) Dahlquist, Laurel, was dead at the scene of the 8:20 p.m. accident Thursday, according to Wayne County Sheriff Don "Butch" Weible. Dahlquist, who was driving a black 1976 Ford Mustang at the time of the accident, and her passengers and classmates, Kathleen E. Stage, 18, Laurel, and Kirsj K. Rindell, a foreign exchange student from Helsinki, Finland, were southbound on a county road 2 miles west and 2 1/2 miles north of Wayne, according to the Sheriff's Department.

Rachelle Dahlquist

to St. Joseph's Hospital, Sioux City, Iowa, is listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit. Rindell was staying with the Wallace Anderson family, rural Laurel.

Randall A. Johnson, 31, rural Wayne, his wife, Lorraine, 25, and their child, Chris, 5, are listed in stable condition at Providence Medical Center.

Johnson, who was driving a blue 1977 Chevrolet northbound on the county road with his wife as a rear seat passenger and son as a rear seat passenger, crawled several hundred yards to the Raymond Florine farmhouse to summon help, according to a truckdriver who was on the scene moments after the accident.

FINDING NO one home, Johnson, who reportedly suffered a broken leg — among other injuries — in the accident broke through a screen door to get to the telephone, the Wayne truckdriver said.

After calling for emergency assistance, Johnson, who works for Wayne area farmer Frederick Janke, reportedly crawled back to the accident scene — just south of a hillcrest north of the Florine farmstead.

The truckdriver, Norm Slama, said he had traveled the county road toward Laurel moments before the accident. He said the highway was clear on his northbound trip, but when he returned — within 10 to 15 minutes — he came onto the accident scene.

Slama said he drove around the two cars, which remained in the center of the road way after the head-on collision, to another nearby farm to be sure help was on the way.

STAGE, a front seat passenger in the Dahlquist vehicle, is listed in stable condition at Providence Medical Center, Wayne, where the injured were taken by the Wayne Rescue Squad ambulance. Rindell, who was flown by air ambulance

Teenager Takes Off for Charter Ticket

Hartington Grad Hits the High Road

By Theresa Wulf
"Have fun. Be back by dark."
You might expect a mother to say this to her six-year-old as he goes to play with a friend. But what if you were a high school senior taking your first solo flight?
That's what happened to Dion Miller during one of his flying lessons at the Wayne Municipal Airport. His instructor, then-manager Al Robinson, jumped out of the plane at the end of the runway and told Dion to take off on his own.
THAT FIRST solo may have been "scary," as he put it. But now he's only a couple of tests away from getting his private pilot's license. This will enable him to take people up in the plane with him, as well as fly solo.
Dion's father once took lessons and flew, and he has also flown with friends of his dad. That, sparked his interest, and he began his flight training in October.
Since then, the tall, lanky high school senior has logged 48 flight hours. He needs 40 of these for his license — 20 hours of instruction and 20 hours of solo flying, he explained.

Three of these 20 instructive hours were spent practicing night landings in Sioux City.
DION HAS flown these 48 hours in a "sink or swim" situation. "During my first lesson, from the moment I got in the plane, I was in control. I had to steer, and Al told me how to take off while I did it," he said.
In succeeding lessons Dion learned and practiced various flying maneuvers. One of these solo practice sessions almost turned into a life-or-death situation.
"I was practicing a stall. That's when you shut off the plane's power and go until the plane won't fly."
"Well, I put the nose down too far and accidentally hit the rudder, and I started going into a spin. It took me five or six seconds to get out of it. Those were six of the longest seconds of my life," he recalled with a heavy sigh.
STRANGE HAPPENINGS like this aren't limited to pilots. Mark Allen, now Dion's instructor and son of the airport's new manager, leaned out the window to spit out his gum while giving a lesson to another student. (Allen is in partnership with his parents for Allen Aviation Inc.) His glasses are now shading a blossoming corn plant in a rural Wayne field.

At the airport, Dion hand-dragged the light blue and white Cessna from the hanger. His dark, longish hair blowing in the breeze, he referred to a prepared checklist and inspected the plane.
Pilot, instructor and passenger climbed into the car-like cockpit. Once again, Dion checked the gadgets and cockpit controls.
The plane made a smooth, gradual climb to 2,500 feet above sea level, or about 1,000 feet above the ground. Dion circled the now toy-like city of Wayne at an airspeed of 95-120 miles per hour.
WHILE LANDING and taking-off again, Dion noted that small planes are "a lot more fun than the big commercial jets. You get the feel of the air better. The big planes ride just like a car."
Allen pointed out that Dion was flying by visual reference. This is the best method to use in clear weather.
Dion turned the plane slowly in a "crosswind lay." This is a traffic pattern where the pilot flies at a 90-degree angle to the runway, Allen explained.

After a smooth landing, Mark logged another hour in Dion's book. One of these lessons costs $50 with an instructor and $30 for an hour of solo flying. An average person spends about $2,500 to get his private license, Dion said.
HIS FLYING ambitions don't land there. He hopes to fly for a commercial charter service someday. This requires a total of 250 hours. With these hours he can be certified to fly with instruments and fly commercial.
But first things first. He plans to take his test within the next week. The first part is a 60-question written examination.
He will be notified within a week if he passes this test. He will then have to take a check ride with a Federal Aviation Administration official to see if he is capable of flying, Dion said.
Dion travels from Hartington to take his lessons. At 18, he is the oldest son of Tom and Darlene Miller.
Brothers and sisters include Darren, 16; Missy, who will be a freshman; Colette, a seventh grader; and 5-year-old Ted.

Cluck! Chicken Show Plans Come Home to Roost

By Randall Howell

It's everywhere. It's everywhere. Word about Wayne's first-of-a-kind tribute to the chicken is scratching and pecking its way across the county.

And, the Wayne Regional Arts Council, the group responsible for the idea, is gearing up for a day long, downtown Wayne celebration July 11. The Chicken Show, an event being planned with the cooperation of the Wayne Chamber of Commerce, will include — but is not limited to — arts and crafts displays, poetry, essays, songs, photography about chickens.

AND, BEFORE Wayne area residents get their feathers ruffled, it is important to know that media representatives from as far away as New York and California already have contacted council representatives about the event.

"I've had calls from the CBS network radio for background information," said Jane O'Leary, council administrator. "And, I've been contacted by radio stations in New York City, Los Angeles, San Diego and St. Louis."

O'Leary said the calls were prompted by a single-page press release she dropped in the mail earlier this week. "On Wednesday we started getting calls from people within a 100-mile radius of Wayne," she said. "Then Thursday, it really took off."

THE CHICKEN Show has become a national event.

"We got a call from a radio station in Ohio...I don't remember the name of the town...and the station in St. Louis said they're going to send somebody up to cover it," she said. O'Leary said the stations — from New York to California — taped interviews with her for broadcast to their listeners.

"A man from Los Angeles, Dave Quinn, called to say he plans to drive out with his chicken art," she said. "He says he's been on network television and is known in California as a chicken artist."

O'Leary said that a number of the radio station people asked if they could send teams to compete in some

July Festival Crowing on a Wing, Prayer

It all started with a brainstorming session in January.

Now it threatens to become a national event, this daylong celebration of the domestic chicken in Wayne, July 11.

"We started throwing out ideas during the session and someone threw out the word chickens," said Janis O'Leary, Wayne Regional Arts Council administrator.

"When we got to chickens, that was it," she explained.

SHE SAID SHE thinks council corresponding secretary Marla McCue and council recording secretary Gail Korn both tossed out the idea at the same time.

O'Leary said the idea got off the ground as an afternoon-only celebration of "everything chicken."

Once the idea started catching on, she said, the council decided to make it a day-long festival called The Chicken Show.

She noted that one of the council members, Pearl Hanson, has worked with chicken art and helped get "the idea rolling."

Country boy. . .

Howdy
My heart is not light today.
No matter how many times I've had to deal with it in my lifetime, I've never, ever, gotten used to being on the scene of a fatal accident.

Thursday night's tragedy northwest of Wayne, where bright, young, Rachelle Dahlquist lost her life, was no exception.
My heart goes out to her parents and family and friends.

I'VE BEEN through the situation dozens of times and each time it hurts more.
It never seems to make any sense.
It's hard to shake the finality of death. And it's harder to understand, sometimes, the hardness of it all.
Young lives, old lives, happy lives and sad lives — they all must end. But, Rachelle had so much to live for.

While returning to Wayne from the scene of twisted metal, injury and death Thursday night, I found myself in tears, once again. I did not know Rachelle. I was thinking of those who did.
A newspaper man sees a great deal of the good and a great deal of the sad side of life. There's an emotional wrenching to it that cannot be easily communicated.
Death is personal. And, no matter what kind of significance you may place on it, including that in the realm of religion, death is difficult to accept.

RACHELLE'S death came only hours before the bodies of three young Dixon County men were discovered in the Missouri River, several days after they disappeared while having fun.
Mark Schulte, David Kuhl and Vaughn Zerbe all died young, with everything to live for.
The Newcastle men were buddies in life and death. Today their families and friends mourn for them and feel the loss — the days, their days, that will be no more.

I did not know them, though I understand they were known in Wayne, particularly at the National Guard Armory.
I do know that there was room for them to live somehow, if I did not work that way.

My heart goes out to their loved ones. It's a heart saddened by the repetition of tragic death. It leaves so many unanswered questions. . . It leaves so many unfulfilled dreams. . .

I ONLY HOPE those who were not touched personally by the deaths of these four young Nebraskans would take a moment to think about the finality of it all.
Youth is so immortal that it is difficult — almost impossible — to be realistic about mortality.
Life is far too short an experience when death comes naturally. And accidental death is not known to be terribly selective.
You are loved. You have a place here. Go ahead and live. Have fun. But be careful. Godspeed.

THE WEATHER has been a bit warm. But, the real question in Wayne is: How warm is it?
If you've been driving around town, you may have noticed that the local bank thermometers fluctuate, much to the same degree found in interest rates.
Anyone way down in the south end of the city, south Main Street Friday found it to be a balmy 88 degrees Fahrenheit. At least, that's what the sign on the front of the State National Bank of Wayne displayed at mid-afternoon.

But, in the far northern reaches of the city, State National's drive in operation swathed under a 91 degree day. People walking and driving in that far flung section of the city were noticeably warmer than those far across town.

AND, IF you had the energy to make the long trip into near downtown Wayne you'd have discovered that Midwest Federal's thermometer sign was sweltering under a 94 degree day.
Blocks and blocks away, at First National Bank's drive in branch, Wayne residents were cooling off a bit with a 92 degree reading.
Though there's infinite variety to Nebraska's weather, the point spread was a bit larger than some Wayne residents could understand.

Figuring the average, though, made it a rather warm 91 plus early June day, quite a change from the early May freeze that is still being felt by farmers.

REPORTS INDICATE that the month ago freeze turned a lot of green fields brown north of Wayne.

Farmers throughout the area are reporting damage to alfalfa.
That, combined with last year's drought, last fall's lack of rain, and the snowless winter has all but ruined this year's hay crop.

The recent rains, as welcome as they have been, have not turned the hay crop around in the Wayne area.
A number of farmers, discouraged by the first-cutting tonnage, are wondering what to do with the dryland acreage (irrigated alfalfa suffered from the freeze, but farmers are looking for better later cuttings).
The temptation to plow it down is balanced by the thought of high hay prices this fall.
It's likely that most will hold on hoping for a rain or two between now and the second cutting.

BEFORE SIGNING off today, I want to encourage you to write letters to the editor.
This is your newspaper. Letters give you access to it in a way that can, and should be, instructive for both you and those who read about your opinions.
I happen to feel that, while the opinion articles appearing on this page twice a week are often well worth reading, there are a number of you out there who have very important things to say.
Letters to the editor should give you a soapbox where free speech and freedom of the press work at their best.
If you have an opinion about something, don't hesitate to share it with us and with our readers.

IF YOU FEEL up to it, let us know how we are doing with your newspaper.
Do we cover the things you want to read about?
Are we overlooking important issues or stories in your area?
Is the newspaper informative?
Do you feel that it does an effective or ineffective job in accurately reflecting the community you live in?
I've got some pretty thick skin, so sound off. Give letters to the editor a try. Let's talk about the things that are on your mind.
Sounding off a little may make you feel a lot better. And, it may give us a chance to do a better job.
Catch you next week.

It takes more than chicken feed to produce a national chicken festival, of that you can be assured.
And, the Wayne Regional Arts Council needs to put more financial eggs in its basket to do the kind of job that is necessary to make The Chicken Show a successful spectacular.
Though the council is sponsoring the fowl extravaganza — with help from the Wayne Chamber of Commerce — there's a great need for volunteer help, too.
Now, maybe you don't like chickens and that makes it a problem for you to participate as an artist, contestant or volunteer helper.
Don't let that stop you from considering a donation to the council.
Jane O'Leary, council administrator, reports the group has only $100 to put on the show. Now that's chicken feed when it comes to making a day-long, downtown festival work.
Obviously, The Chicken Show is an idea that flapped its wings and flew into the national limelight.
O'Leary says the council expects over a 1,000 more people from this area than were in the original estimates. And, there's the very real possibility that Wayne will have some feathered friends from much farther, now that the national media has been settling into Wayne's nest.
It sounds like a fun thing for a festival. And, O'Leary's the first to admit it's grown beyond the council members' wildest imaginations.
"We just thought that sometimes people think art is too serious," she said. "It has to be in some situations, but there are situations where you can have some fun. That's what The Chicken Show is all about."

Let's not chicken out now, folks. Gather your eggs and get involved. It might be a lot of fun. It could bring a lot of people to town for a light-hearted fling. If done right, and the council is working hard to see that that is the case, it could be one of the zaniest experiences for Wayne since the last time the Wildcats had a winning season.
Let's not lay an egg on this celebration. Cluck it up. Pluck your friends. The last one to pitch in is a rotten egg.

Keep Up With Russia?

The key to American security is spending defense dollars effectively, and not playing 'catch-up' with the Soviets.
I believe it would be wrong to base our military preparedness on matching the Soviet Union tank for tank, man for man. With that concern in mind, I have joined an informal Congressional caucus established to help insure that increased defense dollars are spent wisely, and waste, fraud and abuse curtailed.
A substantial majority in both houses of Congress now recognizes that larger expenditures for national defense are necessary, because of the unprecedented and continuing escalation of Soviet war capabilities. Major U.S. defense elements — including shipbuilding, military pay, operations and maintenance — have for some time gone underfunded, both in relative and absolute terms.
However, we must also direct our spending toward innovative weapons and programs. Instead of merely trying to match Soviet hardware. An example would be deployment of the high-speed hydrofoil ship to combat enemy submarines, a weapons system that, unfortunately, has been all but abandoned. The less we spend on research and development, the less likely we are to achieve technological breakthroughs that give us parity with the Soviets.
The focus should be to develop new weapons systems that are advanced but not necessarily more complex or costly.
Americans have to step back and take a critical look at U.S. military tactics and strategy, as well. We cannot use traditional battlefield tactics and go head-to-head with the Soviets; it's obvious we would be badly outgunned and outmanned.

Americans Decide to Save or Spend

U.S. Chamber of Commerce
To save or not to save?
Is that such a difficult question for Americans today?
If not, why have so many politicians in Washington made such an issue of it? And why are pollsters so busy asking questions whether taxpayers would save or spend money from the tax reduction that President Reagan has promised?
Given their drothens, Americans doubtfully would like to save more of their earnings. Today, they are hard put to stay ahead of inflation, let alone save.

THE NATIONAL economy, it is agreed, needs greater savings for investment to finance creation of new jobs and greater productivity as the solution to our high inflation. Our current savings rate is almost half what it was in 1975 when we saved an average of 8.6 percent of earnings. Today, we save only 4.7 percent, below the rate in Italy, Japan, France, Great Britain, West Germany or Canada.
Is there a dilemma? No. Critics of the President's proposed tax program — a reduction in tax rates of 30 percent over the next three or four years — simply have attempted to discredit his plan by raising doubts as to whether money from tax reductions would be saved.

As critics are wont to do, they talk out of both sides of their mouth at the same time. Out of one side they say, "People will spend the tax savings for things they need, thereby fueling more inflation." Out of the other side they say, "The tax cuts are meaningless. They won't be large enough to leave any for savings for most taxpayers."

Senator Relates Thoughts About Government System

The final gavel has fallen on the 87th Legislature, First Session, and this has given me an opportunity to do some quiet thinking about our system of government.
Since this will be my last column this year, I would like to relate some of my new insights I have gained as your senator.

As a freshman senator, possibly my most enriching experience was learning of the true diversity of the State of Nebraska. I am amazed at the different attitudes each senator represents that are unique to his or her geographic area of the state.

I HAVE BECOME close friends with senators who have resided all their lives in the sparsely populated Sandhills in western Nebraska. I have also become close friends with senators who have lived primarily in metropolitan, densely populated areas in the eastern part of the state.
All of these senators are seeking to represent their constituents as well as I am seeking to represent you. They all work very hard at representing their diverse geographic regions of the state. As a result of this, the personalities of these senators become as different as the various regions from which they hail.
The legislative process becomes a beautiful process that is capable of embodying the vast variety of opinions. From the outside, observing the process, it looks continuous, chaotic, and hectic. It probably is all

In two nationwide opinion surveys, conducted by professional polling organizations at the request of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the public indicates a strong desire to save under the Reagan plan. In a poll taken about the time President Reagan was wounded March 30 in an assassination attempt, 82 percent of the people said they would use some or all of a tax reduction for savings or to pay off bills rather than for current consumption. This poll was taken by Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N.J.

IN AN EARLIER poll, the Gallup Organization surveyed a sample of 1,596 consumers. It showed consumers are very much in a mood to save. Nearly three of four respondents (72 percent) said that now is a time when it is especially important to add to savings and reserve funds.

Whether the Reagan tax cuts are large enough to yield significant savings has been the topic of an extended public debate between the "Washington Post," which opposes the Reagan tax plan, and W.R. Grace & Co., a major industrial company based in New York City, which used full-page advertisements to counter "Post" editorials.

According to the "Post," inflation would push people into higher tax brackets and thus by 1984 they would be paying taxes at about the same tax rate as today.
But the Grace company and its president and chief executive officer, J. Peter Grace, made their own computer studies and pro-

Table with 4 columns: 1980 Taxable income, Same income 1984 dollars, Reagan % rate reduction from present rate. Rows include income levels from $10,000 to $100,000.

THE POSSIBLE savings, quite clearly are substantial, but polls and projections are not the only or best criteria of what people would do. As found in research by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, there is a consistent connection, or historical link, between tax changes and savings rates of Americans.

of these things. What causes this appearance is the meeting of minds of all these divergent people.

AND WHAT RESULTS from this collective meeting of the minds are thoughts that become the laws of the State of Nebraska. I truly feel, after being a participant in the system, that the State of Nebraska has a very smooth, efficient and honest system of government.
Without a doubt, this first session of the Legislature has been one of the most edifying experiences of my life. I enjoy being your state senator. I look forward to returning home upon completion of this session and being with my friends and neighbors once again, but I also look forward to returning next year and working for you as your representative in Lincoln.
As I am very interested in any thoughts you might have about state government during the interim period, I would like you to feel free to contact me at my Allen home, and that address is Box 127, Allen, Nebraska, 68010.

To the editor:
Hurray for the high school kids!
Somebody has finally spoken out on the new format of the paper. I've heard it from people in their teens to age 80. What happened to Wayne City news? I'm sure everyone in this county has his or her story but that is not news to everyone!
Human interest might be used successfully once a month, but not twice in every issue!
Filling an entire front page and part of another with one story and, oh my yes, the 1/4 page picture, leave me not reading but wondering if I'll renew my subscription.

These include: a) Self-guiding Nature Trails on the Arboretum, including the main campus; b) A Nature center with educational programs by Arboretum and college staff; c) Continued labelling of plant material on the Arboretum (campus); and up-to-date mapping of plant specimens; d) Display plots of selected plant types: wildflowers, native and other grasses, herbs, etc.

To the editor:
Friends, this is your official invitation to become a "friend of the Wayne State College Arboretum."
Those concerned about the appearance and usefulness of the Wayne State campus, long known as the "Midwest's Most Beautiful," and interested in improving it, are forming a non-profit organization.
Participation in this organization will be of two types: regular members (annual dues of $10), and donor members (donors of memorial trees or shrubs, $50 in lieu of live plant material).
Donor members whose contributions exceed $100 will automatically become members of the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum, of which Wayne State is a primary site.
In accordance with the above, a listing of plant needs and landscape material, as well as educational projects under development, is maintained by the acting curator, and will be available from: Dr. Charles R. Maler,

Grace Kids Do For Others

YOUNGSTERS in several churches across town opted to return to school last week — vacation Bible school that is. One of the most unusual projects was undertaken by about 30 fifth through eighth grade youngsters of Grace Lutheran Church, who made lap robes for seven members of their congregation in wheelchairs. The project, under the direction of Mrs. Faye Mann, consisted of the youngsters drawing the lap robe recipient's name and various church symbols on blocks with crayons, pressing them in with waxed paper to make the colors permanent, sewing them together and tying them. Lori Sorensen, at left, finishes coloring one of the blocks. Displaying the finished projects in the photo above are, front row from left, David Ahlman, Michael Heithold, Tim Fleming, Craig Neisius and Mellissa Struve; standing from left, Margo Sandahl, Maria Sandahl, Amy Anderson, Vickie Meyer, Christine Heinemann, Tonya Erleben, Greg Schmidt, Todd Gehner, Kurt Rump, Casey Nichols, Lori Sorensen, David Heinemann and Stuart Rethwisch.

'My Fair Lady' Auditions Slated

Auditions for the Wayne Community Theatre's fall musical, "My Fair Lady," will be held Sunday, June 14, from 2 to 5 p.m., and Monday and Tuesday, June 15 and 16, from 5 to 8 p.m.

All tryouts will be held in Ramsey Theatre, located in the Val Peterson Fine Arts building on the Wayne State College campus.

"MY FAIR Lady," with music by Frederick Loewe and book and lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner, has been acclaimed as one of Broadway's greatest musicals. That production starred Rex Harrison as the cratchety, middle-aged bachelor Henry Higgins, and Julie Andrews as Eliza Doolittle, the little cockney gutter sparrow.

The large cast includes Eliza's father, Alfred Doolittle, Colonel Pickering, Freddy Eynsford Hill and his mother, Mrs. Higgins, Henry Higgins, housekeeper and numerous minor singing and non-singing roles.

WHILE the play requires that all of the characters have either a British or a Cockney accent, it is not necessary for persons auditioning to know these accents.

"In fact," says Helen Russell, who will direct the production, "I would much prefer that those auditioning did not attempt an accent. We will work on accents during rehearsals and strive for consistency."

"MY FAIR Lady" will be presented in Ramsey Theatre Aug. 28, 29 and 30. Rehearsals will begin June 29.

History Book Sales Surpass Goal

Sales of the 1981 Wayne County History have surpassed the committee's original goal, and a new goal has been set.

Lucile Larson, a member of the history book committee, which is sponsoring the publication, said sales have increased the last two weeks and over 500 have been ordered and paid for.

SOCIETY members are now hoping to sell 700 books or more before the material is submitted to the publishers by July 15.

Cost of the book is $30.90, plus $2.75 if mailing is desired. Books must be paid for at the time they are ordered.

The Historical Society wishes to stress that the history books are being sold on a pre-publication basis only. No books will be available following the July deadline when information is turned over to the publishing firm.

THE COMMITTEES are in the process of collecting material and organizing it for submission to the publishers by July 15.

If material is turned over to the publishing firm by that date the books will be delivered in early December in time to give as Christmas gifts.

TO DATE, about 915 biographies of families and a large number of town, school and church histories are ready for publication. Several more are being finalized by the committee.

The special pages committee is still campaigning for business histories, memorials and tributes.

Mrs. Larson said the special pages will feature a multitude of interesting pictures with captions, including picnics, graduation groups, baseball teams, family reunions, wedding days, pets, and automobiles of all makes and models.

Stories include town ordinances governing speed limits, cattle and chickens roaming in gardens and on the streets, and social items, including a couple who drove their car to Emerson and, because of rains, were forced to return home on the evening train.

MRS. LARSON wishes to emphasize that members of the Wayne County Historical Society and Wayne Area Retired Teachers Association receive no pay for the work and time they have put into this county wide historical preservation project.

Mrs. Larson said many committee members are paying for their own gas, postage, and phone calls in connection with their work on the book.

"They are eager to present the best history book available," said Mrs. Larson.

Summer Reading Program

Robin Completes 3-Year Nebraska Track Career

Robin Mills

Wayne Herald Photograph

Success from Junior Olympics to Nationals

By Randy Hascall

Robin Mills was practically born with a pair of track shoes on her feet. Now at age 21, she'll be hanging up her shoes. At least on a competitive level.

Robin, competing on the same team as world-class sprinter Merlene Ottey, built herself into one of northeast Nebraska's greatest track and field athletes during a three-year career at the University of Nebraska.

NOW, A COMBINATION of things has brought Robin's successful career to a close. She has one year of eligibility remaining at NU but says she needs a break from the long day, to-day routine of training.

Another major factor is the expanded recruitment of athletes from various parts of the world. Gary Pepin, the Nebraska women's track and field coach, has offered scholarships to athletes from Jamaica, Canada and other countries.

With the import of outstanding athletes, Robin feels that she probably will not be able to make an important contribution to the Nebraska team next year. So she plans to devote her time to studies and life as a wife. Robin is engaged to marry Daniel Byers on Aug. 8.

"Right now I need a break. But next year when I go to watch the track meets, I'm sure I'll miss it. I've been running since I was this high," Robin stated as she held her hand about three feet above the floor. "But I always plan to run to keep in shape."

The 1978 graduate of Wakefield High School is majoring in human development and elementary education and will graduate from UNL next spring.

When she finishes her college education, Robin hopes to teach at the elementary level and would like to coach.

DURING HER college athletic career, Robin was directed by two coaches. Carol Frost was women's track coach in Robin's freshman and sophomore years and Gary Pepin took over after Frost moved to O'Neill where her husband got a coaching job.

"The most important thing I can say about Robin is that she really contributed to the team aspect. She always put the team ahead of her individual performance," Frost said when reached by telephone.

"Robin is an excellent athlete who contributed above and beyond what was expected of her. She was a hard worker who always put the team ahead of her individual achievements. She is a real fine individual who was able to get along well with all her teammates," Frost continued.

Pepin's comments were similarly favorable. "Robin was a real pleasure to have on the team. At times, it was very frustrating for her because her best chance to make the varsity team was running relays and she was the fifth runner on a four-member relay team," Pepin explained.

"ROBIN TRAINED real hard and an injury to one of our better runners opened up a hole in the relay team. She took over and ran well in nationals. We could have placed real high if not for a bad handoff on one of the other legs," Pepin said. "Robin was a fun athlete to coach. She has a very good personality and I enjoyed having her on the team."

Robin is the daughter of Harry and Ardyth Mills of Wakefield. She has two older sisters, Marlene and Carol, and one older brother, Scott. The family has lived in Wakefield for some 15 years.

The youngest of the Mills clan, Robin was an active athlete at Wakefield High School. She lettered in track all four years and qualified for state the last three years of her career. She competed in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, the 440 yard relay and the long jump.

Volleyball and basketball occupied much of her athletic career. Robin earned all-conference honors in both sports and was named to The Wayne Herald All Area team for basketball. During her senior year, she was named high school athlete of the year at Wakefield.

ALTHOUGH ROBIN DOWNPLAYS her athletic achievements, her high school coach Ernie Kovar wasn't afraid to speak boastfully about the athlete.

"Robin is the kind of kid who is a great example for other kids around here. She had some athletic ability and worked hard for what she did. She was four years of fun," Kovar stated. "She had some hard times in high school."

Kovar explained that during her junior year, Robin just missed qualifying for state in several events. The top two individuals and top relay teams in each Class C district qualified for state. Robin placed third in the long jump, although jumping more than 16 feet, third in the 100 against two of the state's leading sprinters and ran on the 440 and 880 relay teams which finished second in districts.

However, a successful senior year offset Robin's junior disappointments. Her high school career was climaxed by a high finish in the state 100-yard dash. In a blanket finish, Robin finished one-tenth of a second out of first place. The race had five false starts and Kovar said that had an impact on Robin since she always relied on strong, fast starts.

The Wakefield graduate said that she learned a lot from Kovar and respects him a great deal. She said her coaches at NU helped a lot and things worked out fine with both. "I really enjoyed running there. I met many lifetime friends and we always pull for each other. We were a close knit team. It was a lot of hard work but it was fun in the end."

AFTER GRADUATING from Wakefield High School, Robin had scholarship offers from several colleges. Instead, she chose to walk on at Nebraska.

The 21-year-old competed in the 60-meter dash during the indoor track season and the sprint relay on occasion. During the freshman year of her outdoor track season, she ran the 100, 220 and on the sprint medley and 4x100 relay teams. She placed fifth in the 100 at the Big Eight meet.

As a sophomore, she ran the 100 and was a member of the Big Eight champion sprint medley and 4x100 relay teams. The latter relay team placed third in nationals.

This past season, Robin placed seventh in the 100 at the Big Eight tournament and the 4x100 relay team won the Big Eight championship. Robin's fastest time in the 100 is 11.8.

The relay team competed in nationals which were held last Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Austin, Texas. The team composed of Mills, Cheryl Zaglis, Norma Murray and Merlene Ottey had the third fastest time entering competition but a bad handoff forced the Nebraskans to finish ninth and only the top eight finishers qualify for finals. The Nebraska track team placed seventh in the nation.

ROBIN SAYS that during the past three years she has seen the Nebraska squad improve to a national power and build a reputation.

"Girls track really came up the last two years. We won the Big Eight both years. When a guys team wins the Big Eight, everyone gets a ring. We got blankets last year. This year, they've ordered rings," Robin said.

With the incoming crop of outstanding track athletes, the Nebraska team has hopes of winning nationals next year. Robin said that the only two Nebraska natives who will attend the university on track scholarships are Sue Lind and Ann Edmonds. The other scholarships were offered to out-of-state athletes.

"It's sad that they go clear out of the country to get athletes. I'm not really against it but it's too bad they can't stay in the states," Mills said.

Although she doesn't entirely agree on the scholarship distribution, Robin says she has no hard feelings toward anyone and points out that she has become a good friend of Ottey.

"I HAD SCHOLARSHIP offers from other places but I'm glad I went to Nebraska. I enjoyed running there and learned a lot," said Robin. "I learned to lose and met world class sprinters like Merlene. The track programs at the other colleges didn't compare with Nebraska's."

In looking back at her track career at UNL, Robin explained that she had to devote herself to track practice beginning in August and ending in May. Through three years, she said she has grown tired of the daily routine.

Although Robin has noticed that Nebraska has pushed to improve its overall sports and recruiting program, she said that the highly successful women's track team still doesn't draw many fans. "The team is really good but nobody is there to watch," she said.

IF ONE INDIVIDUAL deserves credit for Robin's track enthusiasm and success it is her dad.

"I was about as young as you could be when I began running. I must have been about seven years old when I started running in elementary school meets," Robin said.

"When I entered my first Junior Olympics meet, I ran the 100, 220 and long jump and my dad didn't go. When I came home he asked how I did and I said I won everything I competed in. From then on, he went to all of my meets, even when I competed for the university," Robin remembered. "He became a really big track fan and came down to Lincoln to watch me run every Saturday."

Robin's decision to pass up her last year of track eligibility at NU was difficult for her dad to accept but both parents realized that the flow of talented runners into the program would make competition difficult.

ROBIN SAYS THAT she has many fond memories of Nebraska track. When she was a freshman she didn't know what she could do against major college competition and received a big boost when she placed in the 100 at the Big Eight meet.

Two of her other fond memories were winning the Big Eight outdoor title and the fact that the sprint medley's time ranked sixth in the country.

"Just being able to run with Merlene is a thrill. She is so modest, so calm. She is the neatest person," said the three-year letterman. "Merlene says she is no better than anyone. She's just one of a kind. We became close friends."

Once when Ottey visited Wakefield, Robin showed her Wakefield's dirt track. The Jamaican asked, "Where are the lanes?"

Although Robin's athletic career will come to an end one year earlier than expected, it was an outstanding career and will be remembered by many of her fans in the close-knit community of Wakefield.

Robin takes a handoff from a teammate.

Wayne Midgets Win Exhibition Over Winside

A two-run single by Todd Pfeiffer in the second inning scored what proved to be the winning runs as Wayne's Midgets topped Winside 7-2 in a Ralph Bishop League exhibition game, Monday.

Winside's Midgets will play a regular schedule this season but will forfeit all of their games because of an ineligible player who was added to complete the roster.

WAYNE SCORED two runs in the top of the first and never trailed. Pfeiffer singled and later scored on an error and Steve Overin scored on a sacrifice by Todd Schwartz.

A pair of runs in the second gave the visitors a big advantage. Kandy Gamble and Shaun Niemann both scored on Pfeiffer's big base hit.

A big fourth-inning put the decision out of reach. Pfeiffer and Overin scored on a two-run base hit by Jeff McCright. McCright rounded out Wayne's scoring.

Winside struck back with a couple runs in the bottom of the inning to cut the final margin. Jon Meierhenry singled and Scott Janke walked. Both runners advanced on stolen bases. Meierhenry scored on a passed ball and Janke scored on an error.

Wayne is scheduled to play at Laurel tonight (Monday) while Winside hosts Emerson in Ralph Bishop League play.

Turkey Hunting Success High

Nebraska has recorded its highest spring turkey hunting success ever with 41 percent of the spring shotgun turkey permit holders bagging their birds this year.

Wildlife biologist Bob Craig, of the Commission's Alliance Office, reported a total of 1,729 tom turkeys taken by 4,200 hunters during the 1981 season. Last year during the same season, 37 percent of the permit holders were successful in bagging a turkey.

The units, the number of turkeys taken, the number of permits issued and the success rate were: Round Top Unit—42 turkeys; 1,500 hunters, 32 percent; Southwest Unit: 48 turkeys, 129 hunters, 37 percent; Wildcat Unit: 26 turkeys, 65 hunters, 40 percent; Niobrara Unit (early season)—351 turkeys; 754 hunters, 47 percent; Niobrara Unit (late season)—287 turkeys, 750 hunters, 38 percent; Verdigris Unit (early season)—287 turkeys, 502 hunters, 57 percent; Verdigris Unit (late season)—248 turkeys, 500 hunters, 50 percent.

THE 1981 SEASON total represented both a new success record for the season and a record overall harvest. During the 1980 spring firearms season, hunters took a total of 1,066 turkeys, compared with this year's 1,729 birds taken. It was a little tougher time of it than the shotgun hunters, with 11 percent of the permit holders or 84 of 755 hunters, bagging their bird.

Wayne Juniors Ride Allen's Hitting To Defeat Winside

Led by the hot hitting of Jeff Allen and Tod Heier, the Wayne Legion baseball team pounded Winside 15-3 in a five-inning Ralph Bishop League contest at Winside, Friday night.

In four trips to the plate, Allen had two triples and two singles and scored three runs. Tod Heier had a home run and triple in four at bats to complement Allen's hot streak.

Wayne scored the game's first run in the opening inning when Heier crushed a long fly ball to deep left center field. With no outfield fence, the ball carried past the outfield lights and Heier streaked home.

THE HOSTS COUNTERED with a run in the bottom of the inning. Mark Koch singled, stole second base and scored on a base hit by Brian Foote.

In the second inning, Allen led off with his first triple. A single by Brian Fleming scored the go ahead run. Fleming moved to second and third on passed balls and scored on a balk steal.

Jere Morris, who had walked, stole second, took third on a passed ball and scored on a sacrifice grounder by Bill Vrlliska. Wayne added two runs in the third inning.

Kevrin Nissen reached base on an error and stole second base to move into scoring position. Then, Allen blasted his second triple of the night for an RBI. Allen scored on a balk steal.

Two more runs in the top of the fourth put Wayne in control. This time, Heier ripped a triple and Nissen got by virtue of an error. Both runners scored.

WINSIDE ADDED two runs in the bottom of the inning as Barry Bowers reached base on an error and Foote doubled. Two passed balls allowed both runners to score.

The fifth inning was the one that put the game away. Jim Sperry, Al Lindsay, Jeff Moore, Heier, Nissen, Tim Pfeiffer and Allen added seven runs to the winners' total.

Sperry had a single, Lindsay clubbed a triple and Allen had a single in the inning.

Nissen was winning pitcher for Wayne. Foote pitched four innings and Koch and Jaeger finished up for Winside.

Wayne is now scheduled to play at Laurel tonight (Monday) in another Ralph Bishop League contest. Meanwhile, Winside will host Emerson tonight.

Buying New Appliance? Don't Forget Energy Guide

Perhaps the humid and warm weather we've experienced lately has reminded you that last summer you decided to purchase a new air conditioner early this summer. Whether it's an air conditioner or another new major home appliance you're shopping for — be sure to use the energy guide to help you make a selection.

by linda huinker
wayne county
home extension agent

ALL refrigerators, freezers, water heaters, clothes washers, dishwashers, room air conditioners and furnaces manufactured this past year have to bare the bright yellow label called the Energyguide, as part of a national energy conservation program.

It costs a lot of money to buy a new appliance. But it may cost more than the purchase price to run it during its lifetime. One owner usually uses a room air conditioner 12 years, refrigerator 15 years, freezer 18 years, clothes and dish washers 11 years, water heaters 10 years, and furnaces 20 years.

THE Energyguide helps you compare appliances for efficiency or energy cost. EER labels must appear on new room air conditioners. EER stands for energy efficient rating and is the ratio of cooling capacity (in BTU/hour) to the wattage rating. This ratio has been determined in the factory by standardized testing. The higher the number, the less energy a model of a certain size will take to run.

ROOM air conditioners don't have energy cost labels, because cooling needs vary so much from one part of the country to another. Most other new appliances, however, will have a cost label attached. It will provide an estimated yearly energy cost based on a national average utility rate and how much energy the appliance uses during standardized testing. This cost label will help you compare appliance models similar in size, and features.

when the more energy efficient model has a higher purchase price (and they often will).

REMEMBER, however that with rising energy costs, the best buy is the model with the lowest total cost.

To compute the total cost, simply multiply the yearly energy cost (from the label) by the number of years you plan to use the appliance, then add the initial purchase price. The answer is the total cost of the appliance.

For example, refrigerator A costs $550 and has an estimated yearly energy cost of $48. Refrigerator B costs $500 and has an estimated yearly energy cost of $67.20. Total cost of refrigerator A is $720 ($48 x 15 years plus $550), while total cost of refrigerator B is $1,508 ($67.20 x 15 years plus $500).

The energy efficient model is the best buy in the long run, even though it costs more initially.

IF YOU decide to buy the more efficient refrigerator, and it is more expensive initially, you might want to figure out how long it will take to recover the extra cost. To do this, divide the difference in the purchase prices by the difference in yearly energy costs. The answer gives you the length of time required.

WHEN shopping, still compare features, warranties and service availability, as always, in addition to the Energyguide. But let the estimated energy costs or efficiencies help you spend your dollars more wisely.

Farmland Rents Up Slightly Over 1980

Farmers who rent land are paying stable or only slightly higher rental rates this year compared to 1980, according to preliminary results from the 1981 Farm Real Estate Market Survey conducted by the University of Nebraska's Department of Agricultural Economics.

Farmers' rental levels this year are very close to last year's reports. Dr. Bruce Johnson, associate professor of agricultural economics at the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. He adds that rates may run higher in the southwest.

CURRENTLY, four out of every 10 acres are being rented in Nebraska. Most rented cropland is leased under a share agreement, where payment to the landlord is in the form of a share of the crop. However, in every area of the state, some land is rented for cash.

When renting for cash, farmers are paying an average of $40 to $45 an acre throughout much of eastern and northeastern Nebraska, Johnson says. In the southwestern and southeastern areas, dryland is renting for about $35 to $40, while in the southeastern corner of the state the average price rises to $55.

Johnson says there is always a considerable range in rental amounts depending on the quality of the land. Some cropland rents for $70 while dryland cropland in eastern Nebraska approaches $100, he says.

IRRIGATED cropland commonly goes for $110 to $135, Johnson says, although rates for land in the Sand Hills appear to be lower than 1980.

Recognizing that bidding for rental land usually increases prices, Johnson points out that this year's tenants are more cautious.

We need to remember that farmers, including many tenants, came through a rough year in 1980. Drought conditions affected a lot of folks," he says. Weather conditions are a real uncertainty this year too.

By Betty Addison

Since my wife started working full time last year, we have managed to do pretty well. In fact, we're much better off financially than we thought we could be at our age (we're both in our 20's). It's very tempting to buy a lot of things we want on installment plans. Is there an established guideline for how much we can safely handle?

A. More and more families are solving the problem of rising costs by adding a second income to the family purse. Two income families should remember to exercise caution in building up the size of their debt load. What happens if a sudden job shake-up leaves one without work, or if the economy should take another sudden downturn? The good rule for financial security is: Don't commit more than 20 percent of after-tax income to monthly installment payments (not including the mortgage). If your short-term debts can be liquidated in one year, you are on pretty safe financial ground.

Safety Day To Feature 3 Planters

Three conservation tillage planters will be displayed and demonstrated at the 30th Annual Tractor Power and Safety Day at the University of Nebraska Field Laboratory near Mead July 23.

Conservation tillage includes any system which leaves residue after planting and which requires a planter capable of cutting through this residue, said Elbert Dickey, extension agriculture engineer-conservation.

"Residue management through the use of conservation tillage system is the most cost-effective method for controlling wind and water erosion," he said. Because conservation tillage systems vary in the amount of residue they leave on the surface, farmers look for a planter that will work for a variety of residue conditions, he said.

ONE OF THE most widely accepted planter for conservation tillage, a John Deere model, is one of the three to be demonstrated, Dickey said. Also slated for demonstration is an International Harvester planter.

The IH series is comparable to the John Deere model and was recently developed. It offers some of the same advantages as the John Deere, a design that adjusts easily for depth, seed placement and varying residue conditions, he said.

The most recent Buffalo slot planter also will be shown. It is well suited for a no-tillage system, Dickey said and was one of the early planters developed for no-tillage farming.

The popularity of conservation tillage has risen dramatically over the past few years, Dickey explained. Such systems not only leave residue for moisture and erosion control but also reduce labor costs and fuel consumption by as much as 70 percent over the conventional moldboard plow system.

WITH DIESEL fuel costs rising from 22 cents a gallon in 1973 to $1.05 a gallon in 1980, the broad acceptance of conservation tillage translates into a matter of simple economics.

More than 8 million acres of Nebraska's 19.4 million acres of planted cropland were farmed with conservation tillage last year, according to estimates from the U.S. Department of Agriculture Soil Conservation Service.

of the contests scheduled for the celebration.

"All the radio people seem to be real interested in the Cluck-Off Contest," she said, explaining it will feature competition among those who feel they can sound like a chicken.

NEBRASKA and Iowa television and radio also have been feathering their broadcasts with stories about the celebration.

O'Leary said Channel 9's "Jim Henry Show," a noon-time television talk show, has scheduled time for the council members on July 7.

And, she said, Sioux City radio station KSCJ's morning talk show, "Open Line," will feature The Chicken Show on June 15.

Council members are organizing themselves so they are able to call in and talk about the events to KSCJ listeners, she said.

Grand Island's television station also has contacted O'Leary about the event. Sherman Chickens, a chicken supplier from Sioux City, will be sending their "Chicken Man" she said.

"IT'S SCARY," O'Leary said. "It's grown from an afternoon only thing to an all-day celebration. We already are expecting over 1,000 more people from just this area than we had planned for."

According to O'Leary, the Saturday event's theme includes anything about chickens, eggs, leathers, and anything that can be made from those items.

She said that probable plans include the arts and crafts show with decorated eggs, crafted chickens, sculpture, paintings, photography and eggshell art.

And, there'll be chicken races as well as a chicken flying contest. The human races will include a chicken walk for old hens, a randy rooster run and a fancy banty race.

THE MORNING is expected to start with an omelet feed, she said.

Throughout the day those attending will see a hat show and contest, as well as a dressed chicken contest (real clothes).

At least one parade is planned a chicken parade where children who enter will get a free coloring book. Other prizes will be awarded for the best parade entries.

Cluck cluck golf will be available. O'Leary said that entrants will have an opportunity to one putt a chicken egg.

Also, sports fans will have an opportunity to try their arms in an egg toss. O'Leary said.

There will be contests for anyone and everyone including a chicken look alike contest, a rooster legs look alike contest, and a best dressed chicken contest.

FOR THE MORE serious chicken artist, there's a chicken sculpture contest and contests for essays, poems and songs. And, there's room for chicken mimics.

One of the special musical attractions, according to O'Leary, is the chicken sing-along. The council is asking for semi-original compositions, such as "I Left My Chicken in San Francisco," or "Bad, Bad Leroy Chicken."

In addition, council members are seeking favorite recipes for chicken. Arts Council members plan to have them copied and distribute them at The Chicken Show.

Chicken recipes should be sent to the Wayne Regional Arts Council, 908 Circle Drive, Wayne, NE 68787.

Another feature, according to O'Leary, will be a gallery of famous chickens, such as Theodore Roosevelt, Eggs

Benedict Arnold, Feathers Fawcett, Sophie Plucker and Walter Crowingkite.

FURTHERMORE, O'Leary said the council is open to more ideas. "We need workable ideas and more help, particularly for the omelet feed," she said, noting that volunteer helpers for The Chicken Show could call her (375-2335), council president Michael Carney (375-1709), or council corresponding secretary Marla McCue (375-1986).

"I didn't expect it to get this much attention," O'Leary said. "Now we really have to see that we get participants in these areas. I don't know if the national coverage will continue, but I think it's going to be well-attended without it."

O'Leary said that the council is in the process of making committee assignments to encourage participation. "We're going to have to ask for volunteers to head some of the committees," she said.

Though the council is seeking artists and participants for all aspects of the show, O'Leary said committee members are in particular need for people who grow exotic chickens.
