Council Passes City Water Emergency Law

Violators of Wayne's new water-emergency ordinance may find themselves without a drop to drink. Penalties under the new ordinance, passed unanimously by the Wayne City Council Tuesday night, include the possibility of a water shutoff to the abuser and a $25 charge for the stopping and restarting the service. Furthermore, the restarting of the service could require the abuser to post a $100 bond with the city's Water Department.

THE FOUR-PHASE procedure outlined in the new ordinance gives the city authority to define a water emergency, restrict water use and enforce the restrictions.

Two months in preparation, the water emergency ordinance covers water use restrictions under fire conditions, as well as water-shortage situations. For years, the city could do little more than ask for voluntary restrictions. That changed, effective immediately, Tuesday night when the City Council passed the ordinance without public debate.

Under terms of the ordinance, the mayor — in this case Wayne Marsh — is authorized to declare a water emergency and to impose the restrictions.

AFTER A PUBLIC declaration of the emergency, abusers of water-emergency restrictions are considered lawbreakers and are subject to the penalties.

"The water system may turn off the water supply to the premises of any person who, after being notified of the imposition of such emergency restrictions on the use of water, disregards such restrictions," the ordinance states.

That's legalese for turn off the tap. Furthermore, the ordinance language says that the water won't be turned on again until the violator pays the $25 cost of shut-down and restart of service, plus posting the $100 bond with the Water Department.

WAYNE'S FIRE chief — in this case Dick Korn — or his representative has authority to restrict the use of water during a fire under the new ordinance.

Basically, however, the ordinance deals with water shortage situations in which the supply can be rationed on order of the mayor.

During the first phase, the mayor can ration the use of water — from private wells, too — for all recreational purposes, including parks, baseball fields, softball fields, football fields, golf courses, soccer fields, and swimming pools.

Furthermore, the rationing can pertain to watering trees, lawns and yards.

The first phase, essentially a minor emergency phase, allows for recreational use and watering between 9 p.m. and 11 a.m.

For the purposes of rationing and enforcement, the ordinance stipulates that the watering of trees, lawns and yards cannot be construed as a domestic or agricultural use — both priority uses under state law.

THE ORDINANCE'S second phase deals with a tougher water emergency situation. In addition to the rationing in the first phase, the mayor has the authority to restrict water use domestic, agricultural and manufacturing purposes.

As outlined in the ordinance, the procedure would probably be an alternating use based on an odd-even system of house or business place numbers.

Even-numbered addresses would be restricted to water use on even calendar days and odd-numbered addresses would be restricted to odd calendar days.

In addition, all outdoor water use would be stopped between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m.

AND, THE third phase terminates water use for all recreation purposes.

Also, it prohibits the use of water indoors and outdoors for manufacturing and industrial purposes except for personal sanitation and health.

Water use for domestic and agricultural purposes continues under the third phase. Watering lawns, trees and yards do not qualify for domestic or agricultural uses of water.

And, the third phase stipulates that all outdoor use of water is prohibited between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m.

PHASE FOUR, the most extreme emergency outlined under the new ordinance, terminates all use of water for all purposes except for personal sanitation and health.

The mayor is directed by the ordinance to declare the emergency and seek assistance from agencies of the state and federal government.

Water-District Dilemma

Reseed, Resod? That is the Main Wayne Question

It was a grass roots meeting. City Council members discussed options for replacing residential grass along the paths of new water lines scheduled for construction in three areas of the Wayne this summer.

With suggestions and advice from city consulting engineer, Dennis Hirschbruner, and city maintenance superintendent, Vern Schultz, the Council has unanimously agreed to seek bids for the water main projects with reseeding and resodding as part of the work.

VOTING UNANIMOUSLY Tuesday night to take plans and specifications on the three projects to the bid stage, the Council asked Hirschbruner, who works for Bruce Gilmore & Associates, to include a resident inspector line in the bid letting.

Bids are due on the three water main projects at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 30.

Contractors will be bidding on the three as one project or three individual projects that include larger water mains along Logan Street to Fairgrounds Avenue and on to Windom Street, along Ninth Street from Main Street to Pine Heights Road, and along Sherman Street from First Street to Eleventh Street.

THE ESTIMATED combined price tag for the three projects, which have a target completion date within 90 days of contractor start-up, is $339,000. The delivery system upgrading involves water districts 81 2, 81 3 and 81 4.

Hirschbruner explained to the Council that the Logan Street Fairgrounds Avenue Windom Street project had to be modified because engineers were unable to secure an easement on old railroad property right of way owned by Carhart Lumber.

He said the plan now calls for incorporating a future water improvement plan — a water-main crossover along Fourth Street — to deliver the desired pressure for residential users in that area.

Included in the plan is the stipulation that all trees along the proposed water main routes will be preserved, Hirschbruner said.

He said a boring crew will be on hand for the project to drill beneath trees and across Seventh Street (state Highway 35), rather than making open cuts for the water lines.

HIRSCHBRUNER told Council members that the projects also involve the replacement of all fire hydrants. He said the new one would be the 6-inch pumper hydrants rather than the current 4-inch hydrants.

When asked if the Fourth Street crossover with 12-inch line would deliver the necessary upgrading of that section of town, the engineer said: "We won't completely solve the problems in the Roosevelt Park area until a decision is made on the 4-inch line down there, but we're delivering with a correct size to that area."

The three projects are part of an over all upgrading of the city's water delivery system which initially included the Roosevelt Park area. But properly owners from that area petitioned out of the improvement project over misunderstandings on special assessments.

LAST MONTH, the City Council decided to accept the engineering consultant's recommendations to go ahead with three other water-main upgrading projects — the three that were approved for bidding Tuesday night.

During Tuesday night's discussion of the three projects, Councilman Gary Vopalensky challenged Hirschbruner on the engineering and inspection fees — an estimated $31,000 — charged to the projects.

"It's beyond me where that much money can be spent," Vopalensky said.

Hirschbruner said the two categories — engineering and inspection — were lumped together.

HE EXPLAINED that, while he could not give an estimate of the time the engineers already had spent on the project, the firm had two field crews on the scene "for the better part of a week."

He added that there was drafting time, engineering time, contract administration, progress reports and review time for the project included in the cost estimate.

"It involves following the project to the end," Hirschbruner said.

Hirschbruner then asked for the Council's advice on including a resident inspector for all three projects. He said he felt the magnitude of the projects and the number of service connections involved pointed to the need for a resident inspector.

"IT'S NOT an easy job," he said. "It's going to be a bearcat. We're not even sure on the location of all the service locations. When we put the backhoe in the ground we could be in for a surprise."

Hirschbruner said the projects need a full-time resident inspector because Clyde Flowers, an inspector and licensed landscaper with the consulting firm, had job commitments throughout the contract time for the project.

Those commitments will prevent him from being on the site full time, the engineer added.

Council agreed, and the motion to go for bids included the resident inspector recommendation.

BEFORE APPROVING the motion to go for bids, several Council members discuss-

Itinerant Sign Painter Has Brush, Will Travel

By Randall Howell

The itinerant sign painter has returned. He was back in Wayne this week, touching up and re-doing signs on the doors and windows of downtown businesses.

Charles W. Senter ("The W stands for Wayne," Charles WAYNE Senter... they named the town after me.) of Apache Junction, Ariz., pulled into the city Friday night from Laurel, after spending the past weeks crossing Nebraska from the west.

The 75-year-old Wayne native, who was adding some finishing touches to his his work Monday morning at Mines Jewelry, was headed for Wakefield before taking a "loop through northwestern Iowa" with his wife — Marcile — of 52 years.

SENER, started painting signs as a Wayne High School student working at Gamble & Senter clothing store on Wayne's Main Street.

The store, owned in partnership by his father — Victor A. Senter — and Frank Gamble, was next door to the old First National Bank building (now Surber's) on the corner of Second and Main streets.

Interrupting himself time and time again with a story or a joke, Senter explained that he's been coming to town for years to tidy up the front-door shingles for Wayne merchants.

With mahlstick (a painter's stick held in one hand as a support for the other, which holds a brush) in hand, the sun-tanned, white-haired Senter swapped greetings with passers-by.

SENER, who's traveled the highways and byways of America with a paintbrush in his hand and a map in the other, returns year after year as part of his late-spring, early-summer itinerary that takes him from the southwestern part of the country to Florida via the upper Midwest.

"I'll bet you that I have more clients than any itinerant painter in the country," he said, minutes after toasting the morning with a cup of hot, black coffee at Jeff's Cafe — only a few doors down from his Mines Jewelry door-sign job.

"You know, I went to school with Val Petersen," he said, his ever-present grin getting broader for the start of a story.

"I remember the day we graduated," he continued. "Well, you see, we... a friend of mine and I... had been with a couple of girls from Sioux City, the night before and... well, at graduation I feel asleep."

School Board, Teachers Stall on Contract Factfinding

Despite a month-old impasse in contract negotiations, neither the Wayne-Carroll School Board of Education, nor the Wayne Education Association has initiated a move toward factfinding.

According to Superintendent Francis Haun, the board has informed WEA negotiators that "no additional offers would be forthcoming."

The board, however, has not initiated a move that would bring about factfinding in the contract dispute, according to Haun.

HAUN SAID that, as far as he knew, the teachers also had not moved toward factfinding, though either party can do so in an impasse.

The board's negotiators made a final offer — an offer WEA negotiators refused — that amounts to an 8.6 percent boost from a $10,400 base to an $11,400.

The impasse continues, despite a month-old settlement with the district's non-certified staff.

Salary hikes for the non-teaching staff include a 9 percent, across-the-board hike for bus drivers, a 30-cent-per-hour increase for secretaries, cooks and custodians. The substitute teachers' salaries jumped from $35 to $40 per day.

QURING MONDAY night's meeting, the board unanimously approved an 11 percent across-the-board pay increase for non-negotiating supervisory staff for the 1981-82 school year.

In addition, the dues allowance for principals and the superintendent were increased by $50. The allowance is part of a salary package for administrators' membership in professional organizations.

Haun told the board that membership dues in such organizations are often based on a percentage of salary for the administrator, or a district budget formula that takes salary increases into account.

"So as you raise administrators' salaries, their dues to professional organizations increase," Haun said.

CURRENTLY, Haun, who makes $32,300 per year, gets $250 per year for that purpose. His dues allowance will increase to $300.

The other administrators — Donald Zeiss, high school principal ($25,764), Richard Metjeer, middle school principal ($24,464), and David Lutz, elementary school principal ($22,656) — each get $200 per year. Their dues allowance will be $250 each for 1981-82.

Board members passed the salary settlement motion contingent on settlement with the WEA.

Several board members pointed out that past practice — whenever the board settled with administrative staff before reaching an agreement with teachers — had been to allow for a fair adjustment should the WEA contract come in over projections.

LAST YEAR, for instance, administrators agreed to a 7 percent increase, but their contracts were adjusted — except for Haun's — to reflect an 11 percent settlement with teachers, according to the superintendent.

Included in Monday night's salary increases for non-negotiating personnel were raises for the superintendent of buildings and grounds, the head cook and the secretary to the board.

Haun also received a $1,200 car allowance for the current school year. That, the board said, would adjust his salary for the current year to reflect the 4 percent adjustment made last fall on all other administrative staff contracts.

Haun, who had been driving a district car for school business, bought and has been driving his own automobile this year. He told board members Monday night that because of high mileage and the high cost of automobiles, he could not recommend that the district underwrite the full cost of a car for the superintendent.

IN OTHER action, the board authorized Haun to advertise for bids on two buildings and grounds projects.

Accident Victims Improved

Two Laurel girls and a rural Wayne family are in a "much improved" condition after being injured in an accident northwest of Wayne last Thursday night.

Randall Johnson, 31, and son Chris, 5, are in stable condition. Johnson underwent surgery for a broken leg Tuesday.

His wife, Lorraine, is in good condition and "up and moving around," according to nurses at Providence Medical Center.

Kathleen Stage, 18, and Kirsi Rindell are in good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital in Sioux City. Rindell is a foreign exchange student from Helsinki, Finland. She is living with the Wallace Andersons of rural Laurel.

Rachelie Dahlquist, 18, of Laurel was killed in the accident.

Casey's Loses Appeal

The State Liquor Commission has upheld the Wayne City Council's denial of a liquor license to Casey's General Store, a proposed quick stop groceries and gas retail outlet planned for the city.

Gary Donner, Hartington, had applied for the liquor license several months ago, but his request was denied by the City Council. He took the case to the State Liquor Commission in an attempt to overrule the Council's decision.

The Casey's franchise, according to Donner, requires a liquor license for beer sales. Donner had purchased land in the city for the proposed store.

Friends Sought for WSC Arboretum

A new organization, Friends of the Wayne State College Arboretum, is being formed by those interested in the appearance and usefulness of the project, according to Charles R. Maier, acting curator.

The organization is seeking two types of friends: regular members and donor members. Regular member annual dues are $10. Donor members can donate trees or shrubs or $50 in lieu of the plants.

Donors beyond the $100 mark automatically become members of the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum, of which Wayne State is a primary site, according to Maier.

Those wishing to join should send their donation name marked for the arboretum to the Wayne State Foundation.

Detassling Forms Available

Application forms for detassling were received at the Wayne Chamber of Commerce this week. Application forms may be picked up, filled out and turned in again at the Chamber office.

The Nebraska Job Service will send the applications to corn detassling agencies.

Roger Toomey, Chamber manager, says that an average of five applications for employment have been received daily by youth in the Wayne area for the past several weeks.

Anyone who is interested in hiring area youth, specifically high school or college students, should call the Chamber Office at 375-2240.

Wayne-Carroll Schools Set Hearing

The Wayne-Carroll Schools Board of Education has scheduled a public hearing for the proposed 1981-82 school district budget for 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 11, at the high school.

The next regular board meeting will be at 8 p.m. July 20 at the high school. August's public hearing will be combined with a regular meeting of the board.

Jaycees Get $250 for Display

Following Fourth of July tradition, the Wayne City Council has approved contributing $250 toward the costs of the annual Jaycee sponsored fireworks display for the city.

At Tuesday night's meeting, Council members were informed that the money was in the current budget and would be once again offered to the Jaycees for the Independence Day celebration.

Kiddie Parade Planned

The Wayne Chamber of Commerce has received permission from the Wayne City Council to hold a Kiddie Parade on Main Street Tuesday, June 23.

The parade, which will begin at 7 p.m., will help kick off the merchants' Moonlight Madness sales promotion.

Chamber officials requested and got police department assistance for the parade, which will be held between First and Fourth streets.

Monson Receives Scholarship

Stephen J. Monson has received a Lutheran Brotherhood Lutheran Senior College Scholarship, valued at $500.

Gordon M. Nedergaard, district representative, presented the scholarship to Monson. It is renewable for three consecutive years at Midland Lutheran College in Fremont.

Young Planning Commissioner Caper

CHRISTOPHER W. VAN METER joined members of the Wayne City Planning Commission during a recent meeting in City Council Chambers at City Hall. Christopher, who quietly listened to commissioners discuss housing developments and drainage plans, brought his father, Gary Van Meter, along for the session. Van Meter was appointed to the commission earlier this spring. Christopher, whose mother, Paula, turned babysitting chores over to Gary for the evening, is 9 months old. Glen Ellingson, right, another commissioner, appears to be skeptical of the entire situation. The name plates in front of the trio identify City Council members.

Give-A-Way Looking For Winner After Two-Week Drought

It's time to break the two-week old Grand Give-A-Way winless streak.

John Young, chairman of the Dixon Board of Trustees, extended the no-hitter to two weeks last Thursday when he failed to respond to the call of participating merchants.

The $1,000 in bonus bucks is back up again for a hit this Thursday. Merchants are looking for a winner.

Dairy Women Provide Taste Tempting Recipes

During June — National Dairy Month — the Nebraska Dairy Women-Norfolk chapter will provide dairy recipes with a dairy fact of the week for the three remaining weeks in June.

This week's recipe, submitted by Maedell Schwartz, president of the Norfolk chapter, is:

GRILLED REUBEN SANDWICHES

- 8 slices rye bread
- 4 slices corned beef
- 1 cup sauerkraut, drained
- 4 slices Swiss Cheese
- 2 tablespoons thousand

Island dressing
Softened butter

PLACE one slice of Swiss cheese and one slice of corned beef on each of four slices of bread. Spread corned beef with dressing and top with sauerkraut. Top with remaining bread slices. Spread outsides of sandwiches with softened butter. Grill slowly on both sides until lightly browned and cheese is melted. Makes 4 servings.

DAIRY fact of the week: Cheese is a good source of calcium and other nutrients. A 1/2 oz. slice of cheddar cheese provides 20 percent of the recommended daily allowance of calcium, 15 percent of the protein, 6 percent of riboflavin, and 5 percent of the Vitamin A, as well as some Vitamin C, thiamin, niacin, and iron.

Cheeses that are good in sandwiches would be American, Cheddar, brick, and Swiss. Mozzarella is the pizza cheese. Cottage, cream, and blue are excellent for salads, while grated parmesan is great in soups, salads, and casseroles.

Wayne Open Tourney

Marchese Wins Sudden Death Playoff

Tim Marchese of Omaha took advantage of some big breaks to win the Wayne Open Golf Tournament Sunday at the Wayne Country Club.

After finishing as runner up in the early open the past two years, Marchese shook off the bride's maid name tag by finishing on top this year.

The tall, lanky Marchese won a sudden death playoff against Michael Burnett of Bellevue and Craig Waugh of Atlantic City, Iowa. The three golfers were tied at 107 after 27 holes of competition.

ON THE FIRST hole of sudden death, Marchese drove his tee shot in the left rough just 1/2 inch from the out of bounds marker. The other two golfers were in the fairway.

Burnett hit his approach within 12 feet of the cup and Waugh knocked his shot about 20 feet over the green. Marchese, using a two iron, made a fine recovery by rolling his ball into the fringe just off the north edge of the green.

Waugh chipped onto the green within about 10 feet of the pin. Marchese's shot rolled off the green and Burnett's putt missed its target. The latter two settled for pars but Waugh rimmed his putt and was eliminated from the sudden death playoff.

On the second hole, both golfers had free trouble. Both reached the green in four shots. Marchese had a 20 foot putt and Burnett was within four or five feet of the cup. Marchese settled for a bogey and it appeared the match was all but over as Burnett addressed his short but sloping putt. The ball caught part of the cup but rolled past and the golfers went to the third tee box. Burnett's tee shot carried left of the green while Marchese caught the front, right edge of the putting surface.

BURNETT CHIPPED SHORT of the green and struggled to a double bogey five. Marchese rolled his putt within two feet of the cup and saved a par three to win the match.

Champion Marchese shot a four under par 32 on the first nine, then struggled with a 39 and finished with a par 36. Burnett, who carded low score on the final nine, had rounds of 38, 36 and 33. Waugh had consistent rounds of 35, 36 and 36.

Waugh had a two stroke advantage entering the final four holes but bogied number six and parred number nine while Marchese and Burnett both parred six and birdied nine.

The highest finish of any area player was the seventh place finish of Wayne's Chuck McHarg. Other area golfers who qualified for the final nine were John Fuelberth of Wayne and Jim Marsh of Wayne.

GOLFERS FROM the Wayne area won 5 of the 10 flights. Bob Reeg of Wayne won the first flight with a 77. Ron Otte of Carroll won the second flight with a 79. Ralph Etter of Wayne won the third flight with an 80. Roy Coryell of Wayne won the seventh flight with an 82 and Bill Reeg of Wayne won the tenth

High School Baseball Scores Big with Wayne School Board

By Randall Howell

High school baseball enthusiasts have hit a financial home run with the Wayne Carroll Schools Board of Education.

Board members, meeting Monday night at Wayne High School, approved a controversial motion to bring high school baseball into the district's athletic program.

The board's action means that, after a year on the financial bench, high school baseball will be funded in the 1981-82 school district budget — a budget still in the formation stages.

ACCORDING to Francis Haun, superintendent, the board's approval means district funds will underwrite the costs for coaching, transportation and umpire fees.

In addition, Haun said the district would probably be responsible for supplies and costs for facilities, should the baseball team need to lease playing fields to meet schedule commitments.

Wayne M. Nissen, a member of the Wayne-Carroll High School Athletic Booster Club, appeared before the board

Monday night. As a spokesman for the parents' group, he urged the board to consider funding the sport as part of the district's athletic program.

Nissen told the board that during the past season, a season in which the baseball program was funded entirely through efforts of the players and parents, 19 boys participated in high school baseball. He said 17 boys won athletic letters.

NISSEN SAID cost of the program for the current year was about $1,500.

"I want to encourage the school board to support the program to support it financially," he said.

"I hope you would consider this and act on it as soon as possible," he added.

Board member Jim Hummel asked Nissen if the baseball program had received any support beyond contributions from the booster club.

Nissen said that gate receipts for the season totaled $241.32 and that a raffle netted $1,345.

"We have a surplus of about a $100 for bats next year," Nissen reported, noting that money left beyond that would probably be earmarked for uniforms in the years to come.

DISCUSSION ensued on the high school baseball schedule and the new single class status of team competition in Nebraska.

Board members inquired about the number of students participating in baseball and whether the single class status would affect the turnout for the spring sport.

"I really think the majority of those out this year) would not go out for track," Nissen told the board. "And, I think the people we played this year will be in the program next year. We surely have enough competition."

Board president Neil Sandahl thanked Nissen for his presentation and said, "I do appreciate the work the baseball group (parents) did do this year."

The sport was cut from the budget late last summer, according to Haun. He said the board felt, at that time, that student participation did not warrant expenditures for a district supported baseball program.

The board accepted the sport as part of the school athletic program without funding. The booster club was formed to fund and administer the program.

"IF WE HAVE baseball and it's the Wayne Carroll team, then I think we should fund it," Becky Keidel told fellow board members.

"I don't think it's fair to have it totally paid for and administered by parents," Board members discussed postponing a decision on the question, but Keidel said she felt there was no need to delay the matter.

Hummel expressed concern over declining enrollments and expanding school programs.

"One of the things we have to consider is declining enrollment and the kinds of programs we have," he said. "Can we expect participation to make a program worth supporting?" he asked.

Nissen said he felt the program offered a place for those who did not participate in track and field.

SEVERAL BOARD members continued to question the level of participation. And, at one point, Sandahl reminded Nissen that no matter how many turned out for the team, only nine could play at one time.

Nissen, who was using participation as one of the yardsticks to measure the success of past and future programs, finally agreed that baseball was much like the other sports — despite the size of the roster, a limited number see athletic action.

Keidel, who indicated board members agreed that the cost was not a big factor, said, "I think we ought to give it another year."

Sandahl — the only board member to do so — went on record objecting to the district's financial support of baseball.

"My sentiments, and you probably know them, are that I don't think we need a baseball program in high school," Sandahl said. He reminded board members that he was opposed to the idea last year and had seen nothing that has changed his mind.

SANDAHL SAID he felt that American Legion baseball programs offered sufficient opportunity for Wayne area kids.

Nissen countered by explaining that a number of track and field athletes are outstanding baseball players. "Once the track season is over with, those boys go on to play Legion ball," he said. "I fail to see how one program has anything to do with the other program. They're separate. I don't get the connection."

When the motion came to a vote, it carried a contingency measure that would allow the board to scratch the program if participation fell below a reasonable level.

While board members did not set the cutoff line, it was clear from discussion that the program would be reviewed during the spring of 1982.

Board members voted 5-1 in favor of funding the baseball program. Sandahl cast the dissenting vote.

Ralph Bishop Race Tightens As Defense Leads Laurel

A couple of vital errors made all of the difference in the world as the Juniors from Wayne and Laurel engaged in a pitchers' duel, Monday night.

The hosts from Laurel scored one run in the first and two in the second to secure a 3-0 shutout over Wayne.

Both team's pitchers were on target in the seven inning game. Wayne's Tim Pfeiffer fired a one-hitter and struckout 15 batters. Laurel's Phil Martin gave up only three hits and had seven strikeouts.

LAUREL SCORED its first run in the bottom of the first inning and protected the lead for the next six innings. Lead off batter Shannon Hopkins collected the team's only hit and moved to second base on an error. A fielder's choice advanced Hopkins to third and an error led the catcher score.

With bases loaded and no outs, Pfeiffer struckout the next two batters and retired the third batter to get out of the inning. The hosts struck back in the third inning on a walk and error. Hopkins again reached base, this time with a walk. An error on a grounder moved Hopkins to second and let Brian Marquardt take first.

Two strikeouts later, a fly ball was dropped in shallow outfield and both runners scored.

WAYNE HAD FEW opportunities to score and stranded two runners in the first, one in the second, one in the fourth and one in the seventh.

Laurel had stranded three in the first, one in the fourth and one in the sixth.

Wayne's three hits were collected by Pfeiffer, Pat McCright and Jere Morris. Both teams have one loss in Ralph Bishop League competition.

Tomorrow (Friday), Wayne will play at Hartington and Laurel will play at Wisner.

A string of six consecutive wins netted first place for the 4th Jug in the Miller High Life Slow Pitch Softball Tournament at Norfolk this past weekend.

The Wayne team gained victories over Oasis of Columbus, Anderson's, Mel's, Dale Electronics and two wins over the Heelan Hogs.

4th Jug 12, Oasis 0: Leading hitters for the winners were Kim Baker with two doubles, Charlie Kernan with two hits, Steve Atamian with two hits and Marty Hansen with two hits. Baker was the winning pitcher.

4th Jug 13, Anderson's 3: A nine-run fourth inning propelled the Jug past Anderson's in second round action. Baker had a triple and double and Hansen, Atamian and Overin collected two hits each.

4th Jug 3, Mel's 2: In the lowest scoring game of the tourney, the Jug held off a rally by Mel's to win its third round game. Hansen scored the first run in the first inning. Mic Daehnke led off with a triple in the second and scored on a grounder. Kernan reached base on a fielder's choice and scored when Dan Vito smashed a triple.

4th Jug 12, Heelan Hogs 7: The winning streak was kept alive as the Jug rallied from a 6-4 deficit to drop Heelan. Atamian scored three runs and Baker and Mike Webb scored two apiece. Leading batters were Hansen, Atamian, Baker, Overin and Daehnke.

4th Jug 14, Dale's Electronic 8: Baker, who was named most valuable player of the tournament, clubbed a homer and triple in the final two innings to lead the Jug to another triumph. Dates took a 6-0 lead in the first inning but the Jug struck back with one in the second, five in the third, three in fifth and five in the sixth. Overin had a double and triple and Baker had a homer and triple to lead the winners. 4th Jug 15, Heelan Hogs 4: Heelan was no match for the Jug in a rematch. The Wayne players scored seven runs in a big second inning and coasted to an easy win. Atamian and Overin blasted back-to-back home runs in the third inning and Baker homered in the second. Other leading hitters were Daehnke, Moe Green and Merlin Lahm.

Randy's Recap

By Randy Hascall

SLOW PITCH SOFTBALL is taking a step forward in Wayne. Not that participation is any greater or that quality of play has improved. But the chances of playing on a good field are getting much better.

For years now, the summer teams have played league games at the Wayne State College fields. And we are grateful to the college because the WSC fields were the only ones in town.

When the women's softball league began playing at the National Guard Armory, the high school women's field at the college and Darrell Moore Field Games were played at Providence Medical Center for a while last year. Again we are grateful to all individuals, organizations, businesses and private groups who were responsible.

Play on those six fields has been successful. However, some of the fields were not adequate and still are not adequate. It was nice to have them when use was necessary in a community with a lot of active teams but Wayne still lacked quality facilities.

The community still lacks quality fields that can meet the needs of the numerous softball teams in this part of the state.

But things are changing. Darrell Moore Field (named after its owner) was used by the women's league last year and is in better shape this year. Level ground and an outfield snow fence make the field probably the best within the city limits. Thanks to Darrell, facilities are improving. Then, there is Hank Overin Field (again named after its owner). Hank and his family moved to the country this past year and a fine softball field is being constructed on the Overin farm.

The last time I drove past, the field seemed to be progressing well and looks like it will be a dandy.

Softball tournaments are even being planned in Wayne. For years now, tourneys have been held—and held successfully—in towns with fewer people than Wayne has in two square blocks.

ONE SUCH TOURNEY is being held this Sunday. Smokey's Sharpening Losers Tournament will be played at Overin and Moore fields. Another tournament is the Wood Plumbing Tourney.

Hopefully, these are the start of something big. With the cooperation of Overin and Moore and the area softball teams, tourneys and competition on quality fields may be commonplace in the not too distant future.

SOFTBALL DISCUSSION brings to mind the invention of a new style of softball bat. Most people have probably heard by now of the bent-handle Zapper produced by Easton.

The bats' handles have 25 degree bends which are designed to give batters extra power. The new design supposedly allows the sweetspot of the bat to enter the strike zone ahead of the batter's hands. A quicker, stronger follow-through should be the result.

I've never used one of the new bats nor have I even seen one but I will be interested to see how quickly the new design catches on—if it does.

GOOD NEWS for Cats fans: Wayne State's football team seems to have a fine recruit by the name of Bob Norris. Norris was selected to play on the Texas high school all star football team which will play the Oklahoma all stars.

The Texan is a brother of former WSC standout Tracy Norris. Making an all star team in the state of Texas is certainly a great accomplishment. And according to my information, the Lone Star state had 9 high school All Americans. That ranks second behind California which had 11.

REGGIE SWANSON, former athletic trainer at Wayne State, is getting a first class tour of the world. As trainer of the U.S. swim team, Swanson will travel to the Soviet Union with the team this year. In recent years, he journeyed with the team all across Europe. Sounds like a lot of fun.

Wayne Fire Department Report

Firefighters are Million-Dollar Men

The Wayne Volunteer Fire Department saved fire district taxpayers nearly $1 million during this past year.

That's the estimate of property saved from fire by the 57-member department from May 1, 1980 to April 30, 1981, according to Dick Korn, fire chief. The report, released this week, drew praise from Mayor Wayne Marsh, who expressed appreciation on behalf of city residents to Chief Korn during Tuesday night's City Council meeting.

DEPARTMENT figures show volunteer firefighters responded to 20 city alarms and 27 rural alarms during the year for a total of 47 calls.

Three mutual aid calls jumped the total to 50 for the volunteer firefighters. Rescue squad members responded to 12 calls — an average of one per month — to push the department total to 62, excluding false alarms.

However, nine false alarm calls chewed up 84 man hours during the 12-month reporting period and kept firefighters at no-fire scenes for a total of 19 hours. Total calls, including the false alarm reports, hit the 71 mark this year — more than twice as many as the 1979-1980 reporting period, according to Korn.

Department firefighting equipment traveled 165 miles during the current 12-month reporting period, or 54 miles more than the previous year.

Rescue Squad equipment traveled 47 miles, compared to 3 miles during the previous year.

AN AVERAGE of 19 volunteers responded to fire calls throughout the year, according to Korn. The

An average of 5 volunteers responded to rescue calls throughout the year, down considerably from the previous year's average of 21.

The report shows 162 1/2 hours spent on training for a total of 1,324 man hours this year, both up significantly from the previous year's 39 hours for 645 man hours.

THE CHIEF'S figures — an estimate — on property saved during the 12-month reporting period tallied $931,500 — or more than $25,000 per volunteer firefighter.

Estimates on city property damage for the year hit $219,020, or nearly $10,500 per fire.

Rural fire damage estimates were set at $55,225 for the year, or an average of slightly over $2,000 per fire.

Property damage estimates for the year show a tally of $274,245 — a figure that combines both rural and city losses.

Firefighters spent a 30 1/2 hours at city fires for a total of 583 man hours. And, 33 hours were spent at rural fires for a total of 579 1/2 man hours, according to Korn.

MUTUAL AID calls required 16 1/2 hours, for a total of 133 man hours.

The Rescue Squad logged 26 hours, or a total of 130 man hours, on 12 calls.

Korn's department total shows 125 hours logged, including the rescue unit, for 1,509 1/2 man hours of volunteer service for the year.

That compares to 31 hours and 540 man hours logged during the 1979-80 reporting year.

Social Security Reviews Due

Many people receiving social security payments will have their cases re-examined in the near future to make sure they continue to be eligible for benefits, Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk, said recently.

Social security is required to review most disability cases at least once every 3 years starting in 1982 because of the 1980 disability amendments. The reviews are conducted to determine if a person is still disabled, Branch said.

As an important first step in making the required reviews, social security is significantly increasing the number of continuing disability investigations. About 350,000 cases will be reviewed during the remainder of this fiscal year. Next year, over 500,000 cases will be reviewed.

THE INITIAL cases to be reviewed will be selected based on studies which show those cases most likely to result in recovery, Branch said. These first investigations will provide more data which should indicate other types of cases that should be reviewed soon.

Social security disability benefits can only be made to people who have a severe physical or mental impairment expected to prevent them from working for at least 12 months or more or to result in death.

People found no longer disabled during the case reviews will have the opportunity to appeal the decision, Branch said.

More information about social security disability requirements can be obtained at the Norfolk social security office, located 1310 Norfolk Ave., Norfolk, NE. The telephone number is 1-800-642-8310.

One proposal calls for the expansion of the visitors' parking lot in front of the high school. The other project involves replacing the carpeting in the high school's lecture hall.

Board members interrupted the meeting to make on-the-spot inspections of the lecture hall and the parking lot before approving both measures.

HauN, who brought carpet samples to the meeting, took board members into the lecture hall for a check of the worn carpeting there. HauN said a square footage figure was not immediately available.

The carpeting involves recovering floor space between the front-row seats and the lecture hall stage, and carpeting the projection stand as well as two landings near the rear doors.

ON the parking lot project, HauN told the board that the plan calls for lengthening the concrete on either end of already-existing parking space just to the north of the circular drive at the front of the school.

According to HauN, the project will add two concrete parking strips — one 20 by 80-foot strip and one 20 by 90-foot strip — at both ends of the current parking area just over the boulevard off state Highway 35.

Included in the project are plans for motorcycle and bicycle parking at the east end of the expanded parking strip. The remainder will be used for cars, he said. Plans call for converting the parking strip from right angle parking to diagonal parking.

Both projects will be paid for out of money in the district's sinking fund, a budget category in which money is earmarked — under law — for buildings and grounds.

BOARD MEMBERS also authorized HauN to go ahead with projects to repair the Wayne Middle School's gymnasium floor and to purchase a walk in freezer for West Elementary School's lunch program operation.

HauN said he felt the district's maintenance staff would do the work on the middle school floor, which has nails working their way up from the wood base — a floor built in 1939 — through asphalt tiles.

Approval of the walk in freezer purchase came after HauN explained to the board that the district was renting freezer space at Johnson's Frozen Foods, Wayne.

He said the district could purchase a used 10 by 6-foot, walk in freezer from Ivan Frese, Wayne, and move it onto footings just outside the lunchroom doors on the northwest side of the elementary school.

HauN SAID the freezer would be used during the school year to store some of the district's commodity-food-program items.

Board members, concerned that the freezer would be out of doors, discussed freezer security. HauN reassured them that it could be padlocked.

He said he had the unit checked and received a report that it was in excellent working order. Both the freezer and the floor repair project will be paid for from the district's sinking fund, according to HauN.

BEFORE ADJOURNING, the board accepted "with regret," the resignations of high school English teacher Ann Meyer and high school business education teacher Jean Swanson.

Meyer and Swanson joined second grade teacher Ella Fisher, third grade teacher Clarice Schroeder and high school homemaking teacher Marie Mohr in receiving the district's distinguished service to education awards during Monday night's meetings.

HauN said interviews were continuing to replace teachers who resigned posts with the district. The board did reappoint Lu Ann Ellingson as school district nurse. HauN said the district pays half the salary for the full-time position. The remainder is picked up by Education Service Unit One, he explained.

Also reappointed was Title I teacher Roberta Mitchell, pending funding of the program, according to HauN.

HauN SAID information still was unavailable regarding funding levels for the district's school lunch program and Title I.

According to HauN, budget experts at a recent Norfolk meeting said that school district's could expect a 25 percent cut to be the bottom line.

HauN said he expected the figures to be available in July or August.

Neil Sandahl, board president, said he felt the district could get along with a 25 percent cut in the lunch program.

In response to questions, HauN said that most of the high school students skip the lunch program entirely.

"High school students don't use it," he said. "A lot of them just don't eat lunch."

Limestone in Weight Gain

Dietary limestones differing widely in rate of buffering, or neutralizing, action produced similar weight gains and skeletal development in growing pigs at the Roman L. Hruska U.S. Meat Animal Research Center, Clay Center.

"We conclude that sensitivity to dietary limestone source is lower in nonruminants than in ruminants," U.S. Department of Agriculture nutritionist Wilson G. Pond told the Midwestern Section of the American Society of Animal Science meeting at Lincoln.

Limestones high in reactivity rate, as indicated by a laboratory test, produced more complete use of feed and higher steer gains in earlier studies at the center. Source, geological type and physical form of the limestone affect its reactivity rate.

Pond, J.T. Yen, Dale A. Hill and William E. Wheeler added three limestones differing greatly in rate of reactivity to corn-soybean meal diets fed crossbred weaning pigs for 42 days. These limestones had produced different growth responses in feedlot cattle.

Daily body weight gains and feed efficiency of the pigs were not affected by diet, the researcher of the department's Science and Education Administration Agricultural Research said. Neither were liver, kidney nor femur weights different.

Let's Eat!

It May Be an Old College Gag, But PFM Has Some New Tricks

By Theresa Wulf

Incoming Wayne State College freshmen learn within the first week of school that the cafeteria is the "Gag," a years-long tradition.

But Bill Behling has a few tricks up his sleeve to change that image.

He's the new manager of Professional Food Management, the new college cafeteria operators at WSC.

Behling, his wife Chris, and three sons came to Wayne in May to set up shop. Gladieux, the former service, had requested and received an early release from his contract. PFM then started three months earlier than the original August starting date.

BILL AND CHRIS have been working together for six years. "If she didn't work with me, she wouldn't know what I did all those late nights," he smiled.

The husky, dark-haired man channels most of his hard work in to pleasing the students. "I enjoy students — they're why I'm in this business. They're my greatest source of ideas," he said.

These ideas have come from such "glamour-account" schools as Notre Dame, the University of Cincinnati, Indiana Perdue and Kentucky Wesleyan University. And if the ideas spawned from these schools are any indication of the types of kids there, there are some crazy people running around these campuses.

NEWSPAPER tablecloths, outhouses, hillbilly music and undergarments on clotheslines decorated the Wesleyan cafeteria on Hillbilly Day.

"The employees dressed up in bib overalls, bonnets and long underwear. Some of the ladies even wore guns. We planned some 'funny' menus, and the whole thing was a great success," Bill explained.

"In fact," his wife added, "the only thing that didn't work was that we couldn't get the cow in the elevator."

Another of Bill's favorite monkey breakers, as he calls them, is a candlelight dinner for two.

A RAFFLE winner and his or her date dress to kill and show up at the cafeteria, where Bill wines and dines them. "We give them the works — waiters, gourmet menus, everything. Sometimes we even find a music major to play the violin for them," he explained.

There's a catch, however, to all of this romance. This dinner for two takes place in the center of the cafeteria.

Bill also has fire, white, and used employee sales. He advertises them as having custom interiors, rough in spots, etc., and ties in a special with the sales.

Students will have midnight breakfasts and exam treats during midterms and finals weeks. Bill said. Other monkey breakers he has tried before include an Oriental buffet and a Super Bowl Sunday. This event included a cold cut buffet and a wide screen television in the dining room on Super Bowl Sunday.

BILL WOULD also like to include theme buffets and mini-specials in the new program. "If I can get the employees and students involved."

One of his most successful specials was a birthday cake service he created. He mailed parents a letter. Those wishing to send a cake to their son or daughter sent in a form specifying what they wanted written on the cake.

"You would think that parents would just say 'Happy Birthday' or something nice like that. But some kids got cakes that said 'Clean Your Room' or 'Get Off Your Rear and Study,'" he noted. "But being away isn't always fun. The cakes are a nice touch."

THIS SERVICE was so successful, he added, that after a month and a half, he had delivered over 400 cakes.

All of this may seem like a show put on to impress the students. But after living with the image of the "Gag" for so many years, Wayne State students will need to be impressed.

"We're not out to compete with Mom's cooking — we can't," Bill said. "We just want to give the students a decent meal in a good environment."

The cafeteria environment will also be changed. Currently the dining hall is "very functional and not very pleasing aesthetically. It looks like a dining hall. We want to hide that from the kids," he said.

TO GET RID of this stigma, PFM and Wayne State are working with a decorator to change the room's atmosphere. One of the first things to go will be the Martian-like paintings on the walls, which no one has really figured out what they are.

But the success of all of Bill's plans depends on the students. "I'm supposed to spend time with the students, and I need them to talk to me," he emphasized.

Hopefully the students will be as receptive to his plans as the people of Wayne were to Bill when he came earlier to check things out.

He had been working at Eastern Illinois University when he found out that PFM had signed a contract with Wayne State. His love for the outdoors and small town life prompted him to come up on and look at Wayne on his own time. And he liked what he saw.

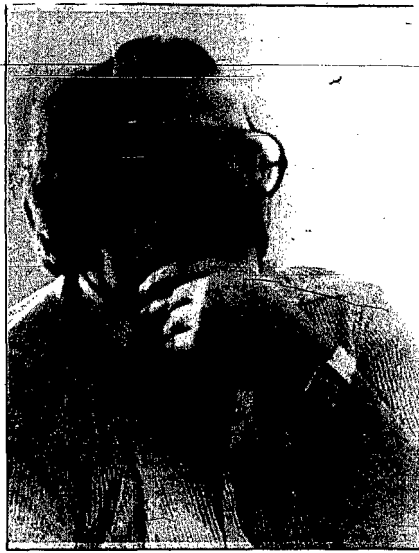

"I WAS real happy with the community and the people. I had written to the Chamber of Commerce. They were super nice and very helpful."

I also talked to some Wayne State administrators and Wayne merchants, and everybody was real nice," he added.

The food service business is such a "gypsy trade" that the Behlings have moved quite often. They hope their stay in Wayne will last at least four years.

ONE IMPORTANT factor in Bill's plans for Wayne State is the fact that he has a lot of freedom to try his crazy ideas for monkey breakers.

As long as I don't do something bad and I can have fun with it, I can do it," he said.

Image Change Needed

Seymour Hopes Students Will 'Gag' No More

Wayne State College President Lyle Seymour hopes students won't "gag" anymore when they go to eat at the college cafeteria. It has been called the "Gag" for years. But with the establishment of Professional Food Management as the new food service, Seymour hopes to change this image.

A Food Service Committee made up of WSC students and personnel began work last October to examine contract bids. Bidders were invited to present their services to them, and they recommended PFM to the Board of Trustees on Feb. 10. It was approved on Feb. 27.

Seymour thought that the variety PFM offered impressed the committee most. "They have many monkey breakers and specials. Also, PFM was the only one of the seven bidders that serves only educational institutions. And there were less complaints from students at PFM schools that the committee checked with," he explained.

In the end, PFM was awarded the contract because it offered the lowest percentage of increase — nine percent — to the students.

A 10 meals per week plan now costs $396 for the semester, compared to $360 last year. Fifteen meals cost $435, up from $396. A nineteen-meal plan is now $450, up from $408 for a twenty meal plan.

Seymour expressed hope for the new food service in the responsiveness of the management.

"I really think it (PFM) will be better. It was felt that the Food Committee could have met with Gladieux, the previous service, but they felt it was no use.

"I think the PFM management will be more responsive to student concerns. We have expectations that they will provide a needed change of pace for the students," he said.

Seymour added that PFM would go all out in the first year to impress the students. They would also continue the effort in order to remove the "Gag" image.

PFM has already taken over at WSC. Gladieux requested and received an early release from its contract in late May. The normal starting date is August.

The new managers, Bill and Chris Behling, are "very personable to work with. They want to do a good job and play," Seymour noted.

"I really hope it's successful for all of our sakes," he added.

Painter

"Well, when they called my name, Val poked me so I'd get up there in time to get my diploma," he said, his grin flashing into a hearty laugh.

BORN IN Wayne to Victor and Leota Senter. Senter completed elementary school and high school here. And, he attended Wayne State College for "a couple of years."

Senter met his wife, Marcile, at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln while he was operating a sign painting business in Sioux City.

He had left Wayne to seek his fortune in Sioux City. After working for T. S. Martins as a show card painter, he joined the Orpheum Circuit to do show cards for the theater chain.

"Marcile enticed me to Lincoln for a party," he said, his eyes dancing with delight over the prospect of another story to tell.

"I turned my job over to a young fella there and went to the party," Senter continued. "We know that young man really gatted things up. I returned to Sioux City engaged and tired him."

UNDAUNTED, Senter opened his own sign painting business in Sioux City — Senter Showcard Service. That was 1930, he said. Showcards were those theater signs that featured artists before the days of television Madison Avenue movie hype.

Six months into the showcard business, Senter sold out to a Sioux City man and went on the road painting signs.

"It just didn't work for him," Senter said of the new owner. "So, six months later, I bought him out and started my second sign shop in Sioux City. I called it ABC Signs...that's so I could get it first in the telephone book," he added.

"It's hard to believe," said Senter. "But, I bought the same shop twice...I bought the thing twice...that's the truth."

SENDER, worked with ABC signs for about 10 years before the start of World War II.

The artist, who says he "artfully dodged" serving in the war, spent the next several years working for Boeing, the airplane manufacturer in Wichita, Kan., his wife's hometown.

Then, it was on to the Alaskan Highway, where he worked in the sign department from the warmth of a steam heated office in Edmonton, Alberta.

"I had a soft job in that steam heated office, and I hated going out on the construction site," he explained.

From Canada it was Detroit Lakes, Minn. "We had Minnesota or Florida in mind," said Marcile. "You said you were going to flip a coin, so we flipped a coin and it came up Minnesota," she reminded Senter.

DETROIT LAKES was home base for a number of years, but Senter traveled from there to do his signs.

"We still had Florida in mind," Marcile said. "For a time they traveled that way, stopping at small towns between northern Minnesota and Florida."

The couple, with one daughter at that time, recalls living along the shore of Lake of the Woods in a tiny town called Angle in Itel, which takes its name from the Northwest Angle.

Senter's jaunts from Detroit Lakes kept him and Marcile busy. But he did have some time for recreation.

"I won a house in a poker game one afternoon," he said. "We were playing golf and went to the clubhouse afterwards to play some two-handed poker. Well, the guy was writing me checks, he got up to $2,900. That was a lot of money in those days."

"Finally, he told me to tear up the checks and he'd give me a deed for a home and lot he had on the lake," Senter explained. "I tore them up, took the deed, sold our house in Detroit Lakes and moved out to the lake."

THE SENTERs soon headed for Florida with daughter, now Jacklyn McLaughlin, who is a bridal consultant in Bellevue with eight shops.

Once there, the couple spent about 10 years starting gift shops and sign painting shops throughout Florida.

"We started them, sold them, and started others," Marcile explained. "We never stayed with any of them very long...we're gypsies, we've always been gypsies."

Their second daughter, now Judy Blocker, is in the advertising sales department for the Jacksonville, Fla., Times Region, a daily newspaper on that state's east coast.

"Judy's husband" is related to the guy, Dan Blocker...they called Hoss in that television show. What was it? Bonanza," Marcile explained. Blocker, who died a few years ago, is Judy's husband's cousin.

THE SENTERs are headed there after their trip through northwestern Iowa and a few days with Jacklyn in Bellevue. They plan to travel through Missouri and hit the southern states route to Florida.

Senter usually wraps up his sign painting travels by mid July. "It's just too hot then," he explained.

"We find a nice cool spot and relax there for the rest of the summer," Marcile added. Then, it's back to Apache Junction, near Mesa, Ariz., for the winter months. It's been home base for about 10 winters.

Marcile, 73, reads no stop in the couple's green and white camper and traveling paint shop. "We don't stay put long. And, we get worse as we get older, not better," she said.

"We did settle down until the children were growing up," she explained.

THOSE ARE the longest times they recall being in one place. And, even then, Senter was on the road painting signs from Nebraska to the Gulf Coast.

It's easier for him to tell you the towns he hasn't visited as an itinerant sign painter. Name some of them — Wayne, Winside, Hoskins, Carroll, Laurel, Wakefield, Concord, Ponca, Pilger, Wisner, Pender, and Allen, for example — and he starts on another list just as long in other parts of Nebraska, Iowa, the Dakotas, Minnesota and beyond.

He's got murals in Mesa, roadside flags in Florida, meat market signs in Minnesota, grocery store signs in Georgia...the list is endless.

And, in each and every small town, the locals know him. He's met them, remembered them and, often, the ones who were in business before them.

Often, he said, his painted signs last longer than the businesses. "I've got one on a photography studio in Wakefield that's been there for, my gosh, 55 years at least. The place hasn't been open and part of the paint — the shadowing on the letters — has gone, but the sign is still readable," he said.

AND, IT'S almost impossible to walk down Wayne's business district without encountering the artist's handiwork.

Senter developed his distinctive style after Rol Line, a showcard artist for T. S. Martins in Sioux City, worked with him. "He took me under his wing," said Senter, who recalled that Line went to work for the Orpheum Circuit in Denver.

"I got his job," Senter beamed, explaining that he did take art in college, but dropped out because "I was too busy chasing her (nods at Marcile) until she caught me."

As a young man, Senter also took a summer course at the Academy of Fine Arts in Chicago. Most of his training, however, has been by doing.

"He's fantastic with an airbrush," Marcile said. "He wouldn't tell you that, but he is."

"And, when he was with Boeing, he did the prospective drawing for the pilot's hand book," she said, a twinkle of pride in her eye.

SENDER WOULD rather talk about his days as a youngster in Wayne.

He recalls starting out in his father's store when he was so young that "all I did was open the door for customers. That's what my dad had me do."

He also talks about pool and dancing. "Marcile and I dance a lot. We do square dancing, round dancing, ballroom dancing and I shoot a little pool," he said.

With all that activity, Senter still finds time to collect coins.

WHEN PRESSED, he'll talk about some of the adventures he's had while traveling the country by paintbrush.

"We used to travel in a panel truck...sort of a two-story thing," he said. "We slept above in the second level and the paint shop was on the first level."

And, he talks of the people — the merchants — he meets on the road. "They paid me in cheese in Wisconsin," he said. "I did a sign for a cheese company and he paid me in cheese."

In South Dakota, a few years back, he was paid in fresh walleye the merchant had caught from the lake. "I need the money like I need a hole in the head," he said.

"Just this past week a guy in western Nebraska who owns a flower shop added $10 to the bill. He flipped me $10...said it was worth it."

Done with his coffee, Senter looked up for one last quip before getting back on the road again. "I don't know if I've got talent or an affliction," he said, sauntering out the door. "We'll look you up when we get back," he added.

Question

ed the grass replacement options for homeowners and renters along the new water-main construction routes.

Hirschbruner told Council members that there were three common, basic options for replacing the grass: contractor replacement; city replacement and property-owner replacement.

The engineer recommended the city go with property-owner replacement. He said contractor replacement would substantially add to the cost of the projects.

Councilwoman Carolyn Fitter expressed concern for older residents who, she said, would probably have to hire the work done. Councilman Keith Mosley said that if the city or the contractor had to do the work the grass "should have to put back as close as it was, then if they (property owners) don't water it...that's tough."

DISCUSSION ensued about the merits of replanting versus resodding.

During debate about whether the sod could be cut ahead of the work crews by property owners, Councilman Larry Johnson suggested that there were a number of young people in the city who might welcome the job.

Schultz said that the city had no sod-cutting equipment and that it could not be rented. He also told the Council that he wanted "100 percent backing from the Council" on whatever policy the city came up with for grass replacement.

Schultz also suggested that the city could consider getting a bid on sod replacement from the contractor and then offering the sod to property owners at that price.

HE ALSO cautioned the Council on getting the city involved in grass replacement.

"We've had that experience dozens of times and it's never good enough. We never get out of the project," he said.

Johnson suggested that the city print notices explaining the procedures to homeowners along the construction routes so that they would have fair warning of what was to come.

Mayor Wayne Marsh agreed.

Hirschbruner was asked to bid the projects as specified, but to include — in addition to the resident inspector — requests for bids on replacement sodding and grass reseeding.

That, said Marsh, would give the city some options to offer property owners.

IN OTHER action, the Council passed a sidewalk ordinance — an ordinance that is part of a long-range effort to upgrade sidewalks in Wayne, according to City Administrator Phil Kloster.

The ordinance passed Tuesday night, defines roadway right-of-way, defines the sidewalk area and places responsibility for maintenance with the property owner or occupant of the land, Kloster said.

BEFORE ADJOURNING, the Council accepted a bid from Water Witch of Omaha for a trencher to be used by the city Light & Power Department crews and the Water & Street departments.

Kloster recommended, after a two-week study of bids submitted and an offer to buy a used trencher from Vakoc Construction of Wayne, that the $13,434.40 bid from Ditch Witch be accepted.

He said the equipment, which was tested Tuesday in Wayne, met the specifications and exceeded them in some cases. The council accepted the bid and authorized Kloster to purchase front-wheel weights for the trencher at a cost of $200.

CITY COUNCIL members also accepted a $4,985 base bid for a half-ton, 1981 GMC pickup from Ellington Motors, Wayne.

The pickup, an in-stock unit, is for the Power & Light Department. The bid involved a $7,258 price with a trade-in allowance for a city-owned 1977 Pontiac (old police cruiser) of $2,773.

Other bidders included Mike Perry Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, Wayne, and The Chrysler Center, Wayne.

City Council members also agreed to a three-year, no-cost purchase, lease-back contract with Northwestern Bell Telephone for 125 poles in the city.

Lawmakers Use Bag of Tricks Before Final Curtain

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association
There probably were few surprises during the 1981 legislative session...

to abstain on the final ballot.
Luedtke's vote sent LB376 off to the governor's office. It also raised cries of "foul ball" and "impropriety." Quick, critics said, grab the Constitution and see if the bill really passed.

measure unless it had been vetoed, which it hadn't.
So now LB376 became a hot potato of sorts. Thone gave it back to the Legislature, but Luedtke wouldn't take it.

what happened to the abortion law, messenger betting service legislation, the drug paraphernalia or ban-the-bong bill, and the 1980 version of the personal property tax reimbursement statute.

Already this year the 1981 amendments to the abortion law are in court, the statute that replaces the old personal property tax relief measure is destined for a possible court challenge unless it's amended; and the controversial multibank holding company bill, which is in limbo right now, no doubt will be subjected to judicial review this year.

seems they're more willing to pass a bill in which they believe and, if necessary, suffer the legal consequences.
In fact, some senators publicly state they would welcome a court challenge of their bill.

BEST SUPPORTING actor Roland Luedtke stole the show, at least for awhile, when he cast the 25th and deciding vote to pass the hotly debated legislation...

Based on what he termed sound legal advice, Gov. Charles Thone returned the legislation to the lawmakers without acting on it. Thone's position was that the bill had not passed.

The controversial bill, which deals with issues more than people or services, has caused a sharp division between large and small banks as well as among lawmakers and lobbyists.

OFF TO COURT - Courts spend a lot of time interpreting laws, finding equitable solutions to disagreements and handling the most varied types of litigation imaginable.

IT SEEMS AS recently as 1978, or perhaps 1977, lawmakers balked more about passing legislation than their colleagues or legal experts said had constitutional problems and might result in a court challenge.

There's probably no right or wrong way to handle controversial legislation. And a court's opinion might be the best way to arbitrate the tough business of law making.

I'm sure that the volunteers who have donated time and energy to learn how to use the equipment on this unit would be more than happy to go to an accident when the ambulance is called than to be called too late.

Nebraska Helps Her Own

"Some states break their necks to attract new industry and ignore existing employers. I think that a state ought to do at least as much, if not more, for its own established businesses as it promises to do for prospects, and that's what we're now doing in Nebraska.

Material participation requirements and valuation procedures are restrictive to the point of negating a law that was intended to benefit farms and other small businesses.

Estate-Tax Reform Has Two Basic Proposals

By M.M. Van Kirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau
A number of bills have been introduced in Congress this session to deal with problems related to the federal estate and gift laws and preservation of family ownership of farms and ranches and small businesses.

FOR EXAMPLE, HR 3003 (Clint Roberts, R-S.D.) would increase the unified credit to provide an equivalent estate tax exemption of $600,000; and would provide an unlimited marital deduction so that property passing to surviving spouse would not be subject to the estate tax.

THE ANNUAL gift-tax exemption would be increased from $3,000 to $10,000 per donee per year. The special-use valuation for estate tax purposes would be modified to permit the use of crop shares or cash rents in the valuation formula and revision of material participation requirements. It would also reduce estate and gift tax rates. Senate bill S 395 is identical to HR 3003.

THE BILLS have been referred to appropriate committees for study and hearings.

The federal estate tax has a significant effect upon the wellbeing of the nation's farm and ranch families. Although the estate tax is the smallest source of federal revenues, approximately $6 billion annually, it is perhaps the largest problem for farm heirs.

For instance, some heirs face difficulties if they elect to value the farm property (generally land) based upon its productive value as farmland rather than its highest and best use as a commercial or residential development.

Farm widows frequently have difficulty proving their contribution to the farming operation when the Internal Revenue Service attempts to include the entire value of the property in the estate of the deceased husband.

THE FEDERAL estate tax has been used periodically during most of the nation's history. Frequently used as a source of revenues to finance war efforts, it became a permanent part of the tax system in 1916. Approximately 1.2 percent of federal revenues are raised through the estate tax. Estates with values of less than $75,000 are exempt from paying the estate tax presently.

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 and the Revenue Act of 1978 increased the exemptions but provided no permanent remedy for the increasingly heavy taxation of farm estates whose major asset, land, is highly inflated. In addition, special-use valuation which was designed as an answer to estate tax problems for agriculture, has become so entangled in the regulatory efforts of the Internal Revenue Service that some estates have foregone such application entirely.

Nebraska members of the House have been active in their support of changes in the federal estate tax law along these lines.

Maintenance-Feed Needs Vary with Beef Cow Types

Perhaps the feedlot advantage of beef cattle with the genetic potential to reach large mature size should be balanced against a higher maintenance cost for large-type cows in the breeding herd. Such was suggested in a feeding study at the Roman L. Hruska, U.S. Meat Animal Research Center in Clay Center.

The feed requirement for maintenance without weight change varied about 20 percent in preliminary calculations, among four types of mature crossbred cows that were either lactating or pregnant, U.S. Department of Agriculture nutritionist Calvin L. Ferrell says.

the potential for medium or high milk production and also either medium or large mature size.

In the feedlot, large type steers do make more efficient use of feed than medium or small types in reaching the same market weight or age at slaughter, but they tend to use feed less efficiently than medium or small types in reaching the same market grade or degree of fatness at slaughter.

The crossbreds compared—12 in each group—were Angus-Hereford or Hereford-Angus, medium milk medium size; Charolais-Angus or Charolais-Hereford, medium milk large size; Jersey-Angus or Jersey-Hereford, high milk medium size; and Simmental-Angus or Simmental-Hereford, high milk large size.

The medium milk medium size group seemed to have the lowest feed requirement for maintenance, the high milk large size the highest, and the other two groups were intermediate. Ferrell told the Midwest Section of the American Society of Animal Science meeting in Lincoln, Neb.

THE FOUR milk-size groups were each subdivided to receive one of three diets based on corn silage—free choice and two restricted levels. The researchers used weight changes and feed intakes up to 70 days, and from then to 140 days on feed, to calculate feed intake for zero weight gain.

If verified in additional experiments, the apparent differences in the feed required to maintain weight of mature cows differing in mature size and milk production potential could affect an owner's choice of cattle type, the scientist of the department's Science and Education Administration Agricultural Research suggests.

Airborne Spray Program Starting For Hopper Infestation Control

An airborne spray program is under way right now to save farmers, ranchers and consumers money.

The Rangeland Grasshopper Control Program has been initiated as part of an ongoing effort to combat this summer's heavy infestations of grasshoppers in cattle producing areas.

According to Ron Johnson, staff officer with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, as many as 30 million acres of rangeland are infested with high levels of grasshoppers.

THE RESULT is millions of dollar's worth of losses of valuable livestock forages.

Since 10 to 15 percent of infested acreage normally is treated, Johnson says five to seven million acres may have to be treated this summer.

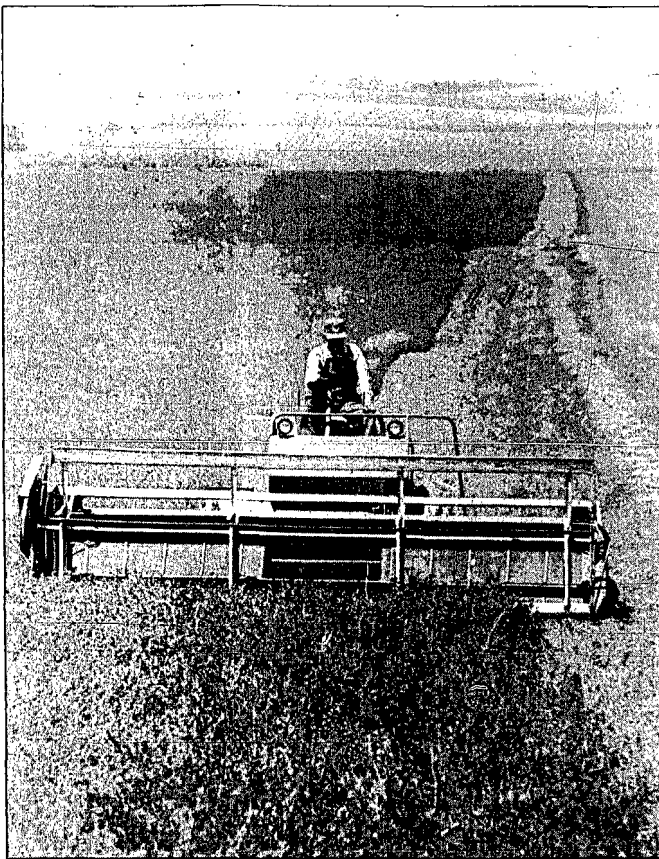

More than 5.3 million acres in 1980 and approximately 7.1 million in 1979 were treated as part of this program.

The spray program is organized on a local area basis and is required to meet certain criteria, including an economic infestation of grasshoppers (usually 8 per square yard) must be present, a proposed spray area must have at least 10,000 acres, everyone in the spray area must participate and the landowner's money must be on deposit.

The key to making the program work on a local level is spraying a large enough block to deter re-infestation of grasshoppers from untreated areas, according to Johnson.

TWO INSECTICIDES are used in the government sponsored program SEVIN 4 OIL carbaryl and ULV Malathion. According to Northwest area APHIS director Dick Jackson, Seattle, these two insecticides were chosen for "their relatively low mammalian toxicity, lack of environmental persistence and excellent grasshopper control capabilities."

Haying in the Heat

THE ALFALFA CROP is either ready for harvest or has been harvested in many area fields around the countryside. Lawrence Hansen of rural Wayne was seen windrowing his crop south of town last Friday as warmer temperatures moved in.

Northeastern Rainfall is Still 25% Below Normal

Precipitation in eastern and northern Nebraska is 25 percent below normal levels with two weeks remaining in the peak rainfall period, the Ag Climate Situation Committee of the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service reports.

Moisture for the 1981 crop season is expected to be 15 to 20 percent below normal, the committee said.

Variable thunder showers typical of May and June improved the moisture situation in scattered areas, according to Ralph Neild, extension climatologist in the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. The southwestern part of the state continues to be 20 to 30 percent above normal precipitation levels, he added.

PASTURE and range feed supplies were raked short to adequate with northeastern and southeastern counties showing the greatest deficit, the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service told the committee.

Warm season growing degree days accumulated since degree days since May 1 put cool season crops about one week ahead of normal. Wheat harvest could start as early as the last week of June in southeast Nebraska, the committee said.

Freeze damage to wheat has been highly variable but extensive in local areas from eastern Nebraska as far west as North Platte. IANR extension agronomist Don Hanway said.

Wheat in the Panhandle is approaching the blooming stage, he said, and damage through most of the area is thought to be minimal. Potential for some damage exists across much of the area, however.

showers favored development of tan spot and Septoria leaf blotch on lower leaves, he said.

Leaf rust is present at low levels in most fields and stripe rust has been observed in susceptible varieties in the south central area, he said.

The committee reiterated that planting soybeans or sorghum into freeze-damaged wheat stubble is risky because of inadequate subsoil moisture.

Grasshopper Hatch Easier to Handle Before Migration

The benefits of controlling young grasshoppers in roadsides and fencerows before they migrate to cropland can't be overstated, a University of Nebraska insect specialist contends.

David Keith, extension entomologist in the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, said egg hatch of cropland invading hoppers has started and will continue for several weeks.

Controlling the wingless nymphs before they migrate to row crops will save time, money and frustration, he said.

"SMALLER HOPPERS are easier to kill, a lower rate of chemical application can often be used, and less total area needs to be treated," he said. Savings also are realized if grasshopper damage to crops is prevented.

When eggs have hatched and young grasshoppers average 20 or more per square yard, sprays should be applied to breeding areas to prevent migration into crops such as corn, grain sorghum and soybeans.

Roadside ditches, fencerows, terraces and weed patches can be sprayed with carbaryl (Sevin), dimethoate (Cygon, DeFend) or toxaphene, Keith said. Pastures infested with small hoppers can be sprayed with acephate (Orthene 75 SP), carbaryl, ariathion ulv or dibrom.

Farmers should check labels for recommended rates of application and restrictions, he said. County agents can provide additional information and a NebGuide titled "Grasshoppers" (G74-106).

Baby Wild Animals Not Pets

The admonition not to adopt baby wild animals as pets has more urgent meaning this year, because of the higher than normal number of rabies cases, a University of Nebraska extension wildlife specialist said this week.

Ron J. Johnson said some baby wild animals, such as skunks or raccoons, can carry rabies for days or weeks before showing symptoms. "Many persons could be exposed to rabies during that time," he warned.

One such case which occurred in South Carolina is referred to as "the $10,000 raccoon." It cost $10,000 to find and treat all the persons exposed to the baby coon that was picked up as a pet, Johnson explained.

"Wild animals taken in as pets also may become a menace or a nuisance as they mature," Johnson said. "Even though baby animals are sometimes seen alone in the wild this time of year, mother usually is around," he said.

"The biggest favor you can do for yourself and the baby wild animal, if you find one unattended, is to let it alone," he said.

Tricia Bloemer, 16, is editor. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Bloemer, Broken Bow, has been a member of the Concord radio show, the Broken Bow High annual staff and the 1980 Nebraska State Fair 4-H Press Team.

Assistant editor is Stacy Nathan, 16. Stacy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Darold Nathan of Lindsay is a reporter for her 4-H club. She also has written for the Madison County 4-H Special Tabloid Section in the Norfolk Daily News.

Beth Wilkens, 15, is the paper's copy editor. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Wilkens of DeWitt has been a reporter for Brownies and her 4-H club and has written essays for the Fairbury Journal News.

Herbicide Applicator Reduces Water

An innovation in herbicide and pesticide application can greatly reduce the amount of water carrier used according to University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension agronomist Alex Martin.

Writing in a weed science newsletter, Martin said that controlled droplet applicators (CDAs) are generating interest among farmers because they can produce a uniform droplet at relatively low spray volumes. The liquid is metered onto a spinning disk powered by a 12 volt electric motor. The rotating disk uses centrifugal force to produce the droplets and spreads them in a circular spray with a pattern diameter of up to 78 inches.

Carrier volumes of 5 gallons per acre or less are possible with the CDA, Martin said. According to Iowa State University weed control specialist James Nelson, a conventional hydraulic nozzle needs 10 to 60 gallons of carrier per acre. Thus, water supply problems and tank filling time are greatly reduced, Nelson said.

Export Team Going to South Africa

Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng has announced plans for a joint government industry team of grain specialists to travel to North Africa as part of a recently announced intensified campaign to expand U.S. grain exports.

Lyng said team members will leave June 13 for Morocco and Algeria, where they will meet with government officials and members of the grain trade to try to develop specific plans for expanding trade services, improving credit programs and determining quantities of U.S. grain to be purchased in the 1981-82 marketing year. Due to the recent severe drought in Morocco, a major focus of the visit will be on the current situation and Moroccan food requirements, he said.

Morocco and Algeria are two countries targeted by USDA as having a growing market potential for U.S. grain sales.

Farmers Nudged Toward Politics

Farmers and ranchers need to become more involved in the political arena, according to Howard Whitmore, a family farmer from Shelby, and chairman of the board of directors of the Omaha Bank for Cooperatives.

In remarks prepared for the Omaha Bank for Cooperatives' annual stockholders' meetings in Nebraska this week, Whitmore said farmers and ranchers need to keep abreast of proposed legislation to lobby for the legislation they want.

"They need to know exactly who their representatives are. And they need to talk to them, and tell them what their concerns are and what their beliefs are as far as legislation is concerned," said Whitmore.

Whitmore added that state and national cooperative councils can be very effective in educating legislators about cooperative and agriculturally-related issues.

Allen Farmers Help a Neighbor

Twenty-five Allen area farmers plowed and sowed 180 acres of oats for Ken Anderson at a plowing bee last April. Anderson's leg is injured and he must use crutches to walk.

The farmers used 74 bottoms during their five and a half hour effort.

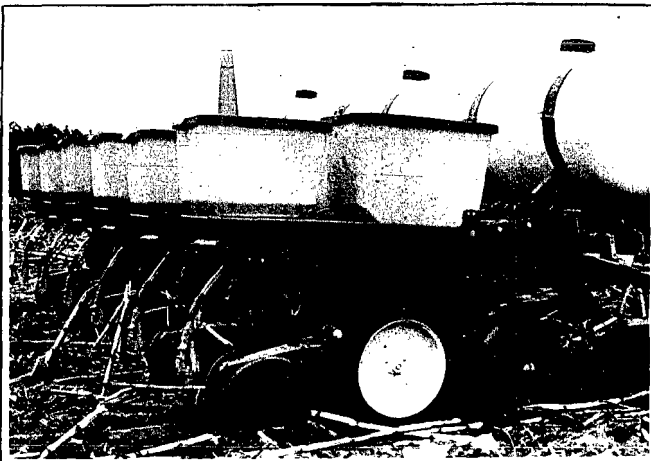

Those helping were Marvin Reuter, Ervin Kraemer, Elmer Lehman, Kenny Swanson, Gary Lunz, Dean Nelson, Duane and Lindy Koester, Richard Blohm, Alvin Anderson, Harlin Anderson, LeRoy Creamer, Fritz Kraemer, Bob Blohm, Bill Heitman, LeRoy Koch, Gordon Hansen, Rudy Blohm, John Meyer, Wallace Anderson, Greg Urwiler, Paul Borg, Rex Rastede, Bob Oberg, and Loren Rueter.

Helping with the dinner were Frances Kraemer, Jeanine Anderson, Gloria Oberg, Susanne Neslon and Arlene Blohm.

Wayne Students Ag Graduates

Two Wayne area students were among 114 graduates from the University of Nebraska School of Technical Agriculture. Exercises were held May 29.

Julie Ann Sprouts of Wayne received a degree in veterinary technology, while Mark C. Mueller of Wakefield received a degree in production agriculture technology.

THE JOHN DEERE Max-Emerge conservation tillage planter, above, to be shown on Tractor Power and Safety Day at the NU Field Laboratory at Mead, July 23, cuts surface residue, drops seed at appropriate depth and firms soil behind with V-type press wheels. Boxes on top store seed and liquid fertilizer. Close-up of the John Deere Max-Emerge conservation tillage planter, below, shows fertilizer opener, front and cutting action of the fluted coupler behind it.

Soybeans in the 'Crook Stage' Will Tolerate Most Herbicides

With warmer soil temperatures this spring farmers may find their soybeans are up before they can begin their preemergence herbicide program.

When beans emerge before preemergence treatments can be applied, special precautions are in order, according to John Furrer and Alex Martin, extension weed specialists in the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

SOYBEANS in the crook stage will tolerate most herbicides without damage because the herbicide will not penetrate the plants. Amiben is the only commonly used preemergence soybean herbicide that also is registered as a postemergence treatment. It can be applied up to the second trifoliate leaf stage.

Dual and Lasso, while not registered for postemergence use, would not likely damage soybeans if applied postemergence.

However, all of the other preemergence soybean herbicide treatments, especially those containing Goal, Modown, Lorox, Sencor and Lexone, would seriously injure or kill soybeans if applied postemergence, the agronomists said.

Three postemergence herbicides are available for soybeans and may be seeded if beans have come up before preemergents have been applied. Furrer and Martin said. All give best control if applied when weeds are small.

BASAGRAN is effective against many broadleaf weeds including velvetleaf, sunflower and cocklebur but is weak against black nightshade, morningglory and the pigweed weeds, especially velvetleaf, are more susceptible when two to three inches tall. The addition of oil concentrate to Basagran improves control under hot dry conditions.

Blazer is effective against sunflowers, cocklebur, black nightshade, morningglory and pigweeds. Velvetleaf is not adequately controlled with Blazer. Temporary soybean stunting often occurs with Blazer.

Dyanap is registered for postemergence application after soybeans have reached the second trifoliate leaf stage. It is effective against several troublesome weeds including cocklebur, sunflower and morningglory.

Basagran, Blazer and Dyanap are all contact herbicides and require very thorough coverage for best performance. Flat fan or cone nozzles operated at 40 psi are suggested for applying these materials. With Dyanap small spray droplets are also important in maintaining safety to the soybeans, the agronomists said.

Electrical Shocks Tenderize Beef

Tenderness of beef from mature, U.S. utility grade carcasses can be improved by electrical stimulation of carcasses before boning, U.S. Department of Agriculture research indicates.

Chilling the wrapped beef cuts 24 hours before freezing also significantly improved tenderness of primal cuts from 60 carcasses. In a study by H. Russell Cross of the Roman L. Hruska U.S. Meat Animal Research Center, Clay Center, and Bradford W. Berry, Reilville Agricultural Research Center, Beltsville, Md., they compared the effects of postmortem handling systems on ribeye, top round and outside round primal cuts.

Electrical stimulation involved sending a current ranging from 100 to 600 volts through the carcass at 3 second impulses for 1 minute immediately after slaughter. Other researchers have shown that this technique aids in tenderization of meat.

Electrical stimulation tended to improve tenderness of beef primal cuts when the carcass was processed one hour after slaughter, Cross told the Midwestern Section of the American Society of Animal Science meeting at Lincoln, Neb. Electrical stimulation also improved tenderness sufficiently to allow hot boning one or three hours after slaughter.

Blade-tenderization and papain enzyme dip treatments appeared to improve tenderness only in cuts from unstimulated carcasses, the researchers of the Department's Science and Education Administration Agricultural Research found.

Hercon Plans Underground Homes Seminar

A seminar on underground, earth-sheltered homes will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Birch Room of the Student Union, Wayne State College.
Sponsored by Hercon Homes, a division of Carhart's Lumber, Wayne, the seminar, which is free and open to the public, will feature Kenneth U'Ren, president of Everstrong Marketing and the man who developed a process for building total-wood earth-sheltered homes.
The seminar will follow a day-long open house at Carhart's Lumber, Main Street south, U'Ren, who is based with his company in Redwood Falls, Minn., will be available for consultation and information on underground homes throughout the 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. open house, according to Alan Rainbolt, sales manager for Hercon Homes.

U'REN, WHO will be meeting with area contractors Wednesday night, has developed and patented a process for using treated wood to construct underground homes.
His company, a pioneer in the field, also specializes in earth-sheltered commercial buildings.
U'Ren's appearance in Wayne is part of Hercon Homes' effort to reach contractors and homebuyers with information regarding earth-sheltered homes, according to Rainbolt.
"A lot of interest has been expressed by contractors and our customers over the earth-sheltered home," Rainbolt said. "U'Ren is an expert in the field and we are sure his expertise will answer a lot of questions for those thinking about building that kind of home."

HERCON HOMES features several styles of earth-sheltered homes. The company is an affiliate of an International franchise that allows Hercon Homes to market the materials.
U'ren serves as a resource expert for Hercon Homes. He calls the homes earth-integrated houses.
They are unusual in that they're built entirely of wood rather than the usual concrete. "Wood does not draw condensation," he says. U'ren predicts that earth-integrated houses will catch on with as much as 70 percent of new-home buyers within the decade.

Furthermore, U'Ren says he can match the cost of a quality conventional house with an earth-sheltered home.
Rainbolt urged those considering alternative housing to attend Thursday night's seminar to get answers to their building questions.
Free coffee and doughnuts will be available during the session, Rainbolt said.

The Carroll Car Crunch

THE LAST REMAINS of a triple-car, chain-reaction crash in Carroll showed the squeeze put on this automobile. The accident, investigated by the Wayne County Sheriff's Department over the Memorial Day weekend, involved a northbound car driven by Lori L. Hahn, Carroll, and two cars parked at the Laura Fredrickson resident on state Highway 57. The impact sent one of the cars across the street and into a tree.

Professor Donald R. Hickey, Wayne State College.

Hickey: Embargoes Usually Don't Work

Trade embargoes usually don't work. That is the conclusion of Professor Donald R. Hickey, Wayne State College.

In a forthcoming issue of the "Journal of American History," Hickey analyzes American trade restrictions during the War of 1812. Throughout the period from 1765 to 1812, Americans periodically sought to win concessions from Britain or France by applying commercial sanctions.

The leading proponents of these measures were Thomas Jefferson and James Madison. Although the Jeffersonian Republicans always defended economic coercion as an alternative to war, they continued to rely on economic pressure to bring Great Britain to terms during the War of 1812.

THE RECORD SHOWS. Hickey said that economic coercion "played a central role in Republican strategy for winning the war."

How successful were these wartime restrictions? According to Hickey, they neither prevented Britain from securing vital supplies from the United States nor forced her to agree to favorable peace terms.

"In the end," writes Hickey, "the various trade restrictions had little effect on Britain's war effort and did little to improve America's bargaining position. Instead, they recoiled upon the United States, reducing American trade and depriving the federal government of much needed customs revenue."

Can the nation's historical experience guide American policy makers today? According to Hickey, who was interviewed in his office at Wayne State College, to some degree it can. "History never repeats itself," he says, "because circumstances are never the same. Yet there are lessons that can be learned from history."

HICKEY SAID that the United States considered imposing sanctions against England and France during World War I but shrank from the policy for fear of undermining America's rich wartime trade and enabling Imperial Germany to triumph in Europe.

On the eve of World War II, the United States prohibited the export of oil and other vital supplies to Japan, but instead of winning concessions from that nation, this policy merely prompted her to go to war to get the materials she needed.

For the past 20 years, the United States has maintained a trade embargo against Cuba. While this has unquestionably injured Cuba's economy, it has neither undermined communism in that country nor tempered Cuba's aggressive foreign policy.

According to Hickey, the recent grain embargo against Russia was equally ineffective. "She simply got the grain she needed from other sources," he says.

WHAT THEN are the broader lessons Americans can learn from their experience with trade restrictions? "The most important thing to remember," Hickey said, "is something farmers learned very quickly during the grain embargo: economic sanctions are a two-edged sword that sometimes do as much harm to the nation imposing them as to the intended victim."

And even when they do work, economists say they usually fail to achieve broader ends. "Nations rarely make major political or diplomatic concessions," Hickey says, "in response to economic pressure from unfriendly nations."

Hickey earned the doctorate from the University of Illinois, specializing in early American history.

He has published more than a dozen articles in scholarly journals of national circulation. Hickey has been an assistant professor of history at Wayne State College in Nebraska since 1978 and is also editor of the Midwest Review.

Living on the Lonesome Prairie

THIS SINGLE TREE specimen stands lonesome in a rowcrop farmland just east of Hoskins. The rolling, cultivated countryside that stretches in every direction provides a contrast to the vertical vegetation found on a tree trunk. The landowner, apparently a tree lover, has farmed around the jolly green giant for years.

Polishing the Memorial Cup

IRIS BREEDER AND grower Roger Nelson, Wayne, polishes a silver trophy, the Dr. Craig Elyson Memorial Cup, he recently won for a variety — Glory Bound — he developed. The cup goes to the individual in the four-state region — Nebraska, Iowa and the Dakotas — who's variety garners the most honorable mention votes nationally. Glory Bound brought the cup to Nelson for 1980 Iris competition. The variety came in 19th out of the top 82 varieties nationally. Had Glory Bound not won the cup, Nelson's Metropolitan variety would have brought it to Wayne. That Nelson variety placed second in national competition. Nelson developed Glory Bound in 1971 and it was officially released in 1978. He will keep the cup for a year.
