Pipeline Construction Begins on 3 Projects

Roosevelt Park Water District Recreated

The Roosevelt Park area water district has been recreated by the Wayne City Council.

Created earlier this year for what the City Council had planned to be delivery system improvements, the water district was scuttled by property owner protest.

The protest, which came in the form of a petition bearing the signatures of more than 50 percent of the property owners in the district, put the project on an open ended hold until Tuesday night.

MEETING IN regular session Tuesday night without Mayor Wayne Marsh, who has been hospitalized for medical tests in Lincoln, the Council approved the creation of the district and set an informal hearing on the project for the July 28 session.

Phil Kloster, city administrator, said the informal session was set up to provide a forum for Roosevelt Park area water district property owners.

Only one of those property owners, Vernon Russell, has appeared before the Council to protest the formation of the district and the improvement project design.

Since April, Russell, a former city councilman, has appeared at every meeting that has involved discussion or action on the district.

RUSSELL, who has challenged nearly every aspect of the proposed project, first opposed it on the basis of special assessments, contending the cost should be financed through general obligation funds.

Then, last month, when the Council went to bid on three other projects — proposed as part of a citywide water system upgrading plan — Russell returned to protest that the Roosevelt Park area had been left out of the bidding.

The three projects — one on Sherman Street, one on Ninth Street and one on the Fairgrounds Avenue — went to bid without the Roosevelt Park area included in specifications.

Bids were opened during the June 30 Council meeting, but not before Russell again protested, not being included on a general obligation basis.

BEFORE HEARING from Russell again Tuesday night, the Council — as expected — awarded the contract, which included all three projects, to Albenesius Contracting, Jackson.

The Jackson firm submitted the lowest bid, $230,687.65, considering the use of plastic pipe as an alternative. Moran Plumbing and Heating of Auburn had submitted the lowest base bid without consideration for the plastic pipe, a feature the City Council opted for throughout the three part project.

Albenesius Contracting was expected to begin construction Wednesday, according to Keith Mosley, who was elected Council president pro tem in the absence of Mayor Marsh. Mosley chaired the entire Council session.

THE THREE-PART project essentially involves upgrading a water main loop around the city with 6 inch, 8 inch and 12 inch lines to improve water pressure and increase fire protection.

Before the Council approved the motion to award the contract, Russell asked to speak. He asked for the per foot price on the three sizes of plastic pipeline.

Mosley turned the question over to Randy Busse of Bruce Gilmore & Associates, city engineering consultants. Busse said the 12 inch line priced out at $13.60 per foot, the 8 inch line at $8.65 and the 6 inch line at $6.87.

"If the bid should be accepted, is there going to be any action on Roosevelt Park?" Russell asked. Mosley said the matter was on the agenda for consideration as a separate matter.

Russell sat down and the Council unanimously approved the Jackson firm as the contractor.

AFTER A discussion, initiated by Councilman Gary Vopalensky, on reseeding or sodding the pipeline strips across residential lawns, the Council opened the meeting to a discussion on recreating the Roosevelt Park area water district.

"We have put together some proposals," explained Kloster. "And, we want to give the people of the Roosevelt Park area an opportunity to come here and speak for or against the project."

Kloster explained that an informal hearing — legally the city is not bound to hold a public hearing on the matter — for Roosevelt Park area property owners.

The city administrator indicated that should the property owners and the Council be able to come to some kind of understanding regarding the recreated project, the contract could be awarded during the second meeting in August.

"THE PEOPLE have been misinformed or poorly informed on the project," he said. "There's been a misrepresentation of the figures. The entire project cost is $36,000." Kloster said one of the proposals being worked on for the July 28 informal hearing

Council Postpones Decision on Grass Replacement Plan

In some areas of Wayne, the grass could be greener on the other side of the street this fall.

If it is chances are good that city taxpayers' greenbacks — thousands of them — helped pay for it as replacement grass for that destroyed by the water line trencher. Albenesius Contracting of Jackson has bid 50 cents per square foot for sod to replace 22,200 square feet of grass that will be in the right of way for three city water projects. The Jackson firm has bid 10 cents per square foot to reseed the right of way — a bid that leaves the contract difference at $12,880.

THE CITY COUNCIL, meeting Tuesday night, postponed a decision on which way to go for right of way grass replacement after the Sherman Street, Ninth Street and Fairgrounds Avenue water district lines are dug.

The Fairgrounds Avenue project, which would involve an estimated 14,700 square feet of grass replacement, would cost city taxpayers about $1,470 for reseeding and some $7,350 for sodding, according to the city's engineering consultants.

Reseeding for the right of way along Sherman Street, which involves some 12,200 square feet of grass on residential lawns, could cost $1,220. Resodding it, however, could cost $6,100.

And, the Ninth Street water project is expected to tear up about 5,300 square feet of right of way lawn for an estimated reseeding cost of $530. Resodding there could cost $2,650.

DON KOENIG, who lives at 1009 Sherman, appeared before the Council to indicate that he and some of his neighbors plan to cut their own sod from the right of way in advance of the trencher.

"Most of us in my neighborhood take good care of their lawns. They have a lot of time invested in them," he told the Council. Koening expressed concern about keeping the Sherman Street neighborhood lawns in good shape and asked if the contractor would have a sod cutter to facilitate the replacement.

Keith Mosley, president pro tem of the Council in Mayor Wayne Marsh's absence, said "That's the problem — there is no cutter in the contract and it sounds like getting hold of one (a cutter) around here is difficult."

KOENIG ALSO asked where the contractor would be placing the excavated dirt, expressing hope that it would not be on the remainder of the property owners' lawns.

Randy Busse of Bruce Gilmore & Associates, the city's engineering consultants, said the contractor plans to place the dirt on the street, not on the lawns.

In response to Koening's questions about sidewalks, City Administrator Phil Kloster told the property owner that the contractor would be tearing up as little sidewalk as possible.

"It is my understanding that he (the contractor) plans to bore under sidewalks and driveways wherever possible," Kloster said. "And, where he cannot do so he'll replace them."

KLOSTER SAID the sidewalks and driveways in the water district project areas will be checked so the city has a record of what is property owner responsibility and what is contractor responsibility.

Addressing the grass replacement options of reseeding or sodding, Kloster said "My experience is that whether you do or you don't (reseed or resod) you're to blame if it fails."

He said the Council's best bet was to inform the people in the projects about their responsibilities.

According to Kloster, whatever route the city takes in awarding the replacement contract, the property owners will be responsible for watering and upkeep after the initial reseeding or resodding.

"It will be reseeded or resodded and watered once," he said. "From then on, it's up to the property owner. We're trying to give them the best possible system at the lowest possible price."

MOSLEY EXPRESSED approval of the Sherman Street plan presented by Koening. He said he hoped that more property owners did it that way.

During discussion on the options, the Council learned that the contractor had plans to reseed or resod in September, after the projects were completed.

Gary Vopalensky objected, saying that for those who cut their own sod — saving the city some money in the process — the date would be too late to keep the sod alive.

Kloster assured him that those who cut their own sod could replace it as soon as the water line was in place and the soil over it compacted.

Kloster indicated that the city was prepared to see that the residents along the water line routes were informed of their responsibilities.

"It will be reseeded or resodded and watered once," he said. "But, they have certain obligations to keep it growing."

Australian Couple Visits Carroll Farm Family

By Randall Howell

John and Rosemary Clarke are on a six-week winter vacation this month and next.

Back home in August, they'll only have a few weeks to move to their new farm.

The planned move should get them in the tractor seat just in time for spring planting in September and October.

The 23-year-old Australian truckdriver and his wife, a 25-year-old suburban Sydney sister (nurse), are abandoning their metropolitan lifestyle for a venture into agriculture.

Last week, they spent a few winter-vacation days with Nebraska friends before continuing their leisurely tour of the upper Midwest during the North American continent's summer.

THE CLARKES, after leaving the rural Carroll family farm of Wayne and Ruth Kerstine, plan to tour the Black Hills of South Dakota, Minneapolis, the western provinces of Canada, San Francisco, Las Vegas, the Grand Canyon, Mexico, Los Angeles and Hawaii.

Then, it's back to St. Mary's — a suburb of Sydney, Australia, for the move to rural Audgee, an agricultural community about three hours west of the New South Wales east coast.

Their new farm, which the couple will operate in partnership with a cousin who has been there for many years, is a 200,000 operation with pigs, cattle, lucerne (alfalfa) and small grain — wheat, oats and barley.

According to John, farmers need a 1,000-acre minimum to make a living in the hilly, rocky southeastern Australia cropland.

WHILE VISITING the Kerstine farm (just southwest of Carroll), the Clarkes renewed what has become something of a two-family tradition — kept alive with letters and visits — that dates back to the turn of the century.

Celebrating their second wedding anniversary while

In northeastern Nebraska, the Clarkes also took advantage of Kerstine hospitality for tours of Carroll area farms and cropland.

"During breaks in marathon conversations that kept both the Clarkes and the Kerstines comparing lifestyles, the young couple managed to do some shopping in Wayne, Norfolk and Lincoln. The Lincoln visit included a tour of the state capitol."

The Clarkes were scheduled to leave their Carroll friends for the Black Hills Wednesday.

THE FRIENDSHIP began in South Wales (Great Britain) in the late 1870s when two young men — Rosemary's great-grandfather, Daniel James and Ruth's grandfather, Howell Reed — formed a pact as they left the country.

James was headed for Australia. Reed was headed for the North American continent, more specifically, the United States.

Friends since childhood, James and Reed stayed in the same town in Australia and Nebraska, respectively. Celebrating their second wedding anniversary while

Hearing Scheduled For 1981-82 Wayne Budget

Wayne's City Council will hold a public hearing on the 1981-82 municipal budget proposal at 8 p.m. Tuesday, July 28.

The budget proposal, which has been the subject of several Council committee meetings throughout the last few weeks, is expected to reflect a general fund appropriation of $481,754.

According to Phil Kloster, city administrator, the total proposed budget package could hit the $2.4 million mark — more than $1 million over the current fiscal plan. The general fund appropriation proposal is expected to be some 5 percent below the current 1979-1980 figure.

police report

A petition was presented at Tuesday night's council meeting to re-install stop signs at 12th and Pearl Streets because of numerous accidents there. 36 residents from the area signed the petition.

Specifically sighted was an accident which happened Tuesday, Kirk Smith, driving a 1971 Chevrolet owned by Roy Rewinkel, was eastbound on 12th Street. He collided with a 1970 Ford Torino driven by Danny Watts of rural Wayne, who was northbound on Pearl.

The council couldn't act to restore the signs because under law they are prevented from doing so unless the matter appears on a public agenda.

Keith Mosley, president pro-tem of the city council in Mayor Wayne Marsh's absence, said the city would review the request. It has been placed on the agenda for the next meeting, to be held July 28.

Police investigated an accident at the same intersection Saturday. Marvin Husmann of rural Wayne was driving north in a 1979 Datsun on Pearl Street and collided with a 1964 Chevrolet Malibu driven by Kelly Leighton of Winslow.

A truck parked close to the intersection prevented both drivers from seeing each other.

IN OTHER action, police checked a complaint from the Kinder Service Station Saturday morning. The glass on the front of a pump was broken by an unknown person, who cut his hand and lost a lot of blood in the area.

That afternoon, police rounded up 15 chickens in the 100 block of Main Street.

Police also controlled traffic at Seventh and Main streets Sunday afternoon so firemen could douse a car fire at the Burger Barn.

The Wayne County Sheriff's Department investigated Monday night when Charles McCain ran his car into a creek 2.6 miles west of Wayne on Highway 25. He was going east when a deer crossed in front of his 1980 Chevy Malibu. To avoid hitting the deer, he drove down the right-of-way and ended up in the creek.

Omelet Feed Draws Over 900

Record Heat Fries Chicken Show Goers

Wayne's first-ever Chicken Show flew the coop late Saturday afternoon on the wings of a heat wave that had some considering a sidewalk egg frying contest.

And, whether it returns to roost next year is a matter for the Wayne Regional Arts Council to decide.

According to WRAC administrator Jane O'Leary, that decision won't be made until council members have had an opportunity to review this year's event from a number of different aspects.

WRAC MEMBERS are considering a special council meeting to discuss the future of The Chicken Show.

Among the suggestions already submitted to WRAC members are ideas for a pork show or a beef show next year.

Of course, O'Leary said, there were a number of suggestions about the weather. Saturday's temperatures soared into the 100s for a midday crowd that found little shade around the city auditorium.

O'Leary said WRAC has received a number of suggestions to repeat the show next year but to change the date for cooler weather.

Suggestions ranged from date changes to time of day, such as evening and location, such as in a park.

MORE THAN 900 people were served at the free Milton G. Waldbaum Co. omelet feed served in the City Hall parking lot.

O'Leary said participation in all except one of the activities was better than expected. At times, such as during the Cluck Off, the competition was very serious.

Dean Craun of Wayne's KTCH Radio and George Murphy of Omaha's KOL Radio served as masters of ceremonies.

The Kids Parade garnered 79 entries, including a small band of percussion instrument players from Wayne High School, according to O'Leary.

Parade judges Lyle Seymour, president of Wayne State College, and Phil Kloster, city administrator, carried a banner.

TO HELP SPREAD the word about Wayne's recent Chicken Show, First District Congressman Doug Bereuter presents a "chicken shirt" to Congressman William Carney of New York. Carney was on a three-day tour of rural Nebraska last weekend hosted by Bereuter. The tour was arranged to give Carney, who represents part of Long Island as New York's First District congressman, a first-hand look at Nebraska's agriculture and agri-business. The yellow T shirt was part of the Nebraska memorabilia that Carney took with him back to New York.

Volunteers

Duo Still Fired Up After All These Years

By Theresa Wull

Why do firemen wear red suspenders? To keep their pants up, of course.

But a couple of Wayne Volunteer Firemen have used more than their red suspenders to keep up with the department for a combined service of nearly 100 years.

In fact, when N.H. "Norb" Brugger goes to his fireman's meeting next month, he will mark his 600th consecutive meeting — not a one missed in 50 years.

Paul Rogge will be there with him, marking his 45 years of service with the department.

NORB WAS ASKED to join the department in 1931 by Sol Hemple. "He thought they needed an electrician in the department," he said.

Then fire chief and mayor Martin Ringer asked Paul to join because it was "convenient." Paul worked at the Post Office right across the street and had lived in that block all of his life.

The department has fought some tough fires, they said.

"THE WORST FIRE we fought was Dec. 13, 1958, when the Surber Furniture Store (located where dentists Wessel, DeKeyser and Cooley practice) burned down. It was so cold the Winside fire truck froze up and busted a pump," Norb recalled.

"That was also one of the most expensive fires in Wayne," Paul added.

Norb remembered driving the old truck without a windshield back in those bitter winters. "I had icicles from where my tears froze," he chuckled, pointing to the crow's feet on an otherwise unlined face.

THE TWO HAVE seen the department expand from a chemical and ladder truck — worth $67,000 each," Norb said — to a quarter of a million dollars' worth of equipment.

Among this new equipment is the only aerial snorkel between Sioux City and Norfolk, Paul said, offering a piece of candy to Norb.

This 80 foot ladder has a hose hooked up to it, he explained. The nozzle is at the top of it.

In case of a fire in Bowen Hall, Wayne's tallest building, "we would be able to get the kids out through the windows with this ladder," he added.

This is a long way from the bucket brigades they used to have. "We passed round bottomed buckets with water from the livestock tanks to put out country fires," Paul said.

THESE BUCKETS, along with some other old equipment, are still around. Paul is the official caretaker and driver of a 1936 engine he drove shortly after he joined the fire department in 1935.

He had it painted and rejuvenated a while ago. They plan to drive it in the Old Settler's parade in Winside tomorrow.

"We won a prize last year for having the best fire engine in the parade," they beam.

Picnic Surprise Rings In Firefighters' Ears

Paul Rogge and Norb Brugger thought they were going to a picnic for the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department June 30.

They wound up at a surprise party for themselves. The Fire Department honored Paul and Norb for 45 and 50 years of service, respectively. When Norb walks in to next month's meeting, it will be the 600th time; he's done it. And he hasn't missed one.

NORB, 78, SEEMS TO like doing things for a very long time. He has served as secretary for the department for 44 of his 50 years.

"I was appointed acting secretary in May of 1932. The other secretary never came, and they always asked me to take minutes, so I was elected," he explained.

Aside from his commitment to the fire department, he worked for the City of Wayne for 48½ years as an electrician.

He started April 5, 1926 — the Monday after Easter Sunday, he recalled. He went from fireman to assistant superintendent to superintendent by 1937.

Since his retirement in 1974, he still pulls around as an electrical "consultant" — responding when people just don't know who else to call to fix something. "It keeps me out of mischief and out of my wife's hair," Norb chuckled.

He and his wife of 55 years, Maria, have done some light traveling in the United States. They also work in their garden at home at 414 Pearl, their home since 1934. They have one daughter, Marcella Larson, who lives in Wayne.

PAUL SERVED AS fire chief and president for about 10 years while with the department.

He was a maintenance man for the post office for 36 years, a job that no longer exists.

He helped put the flooring and roofing in where the office is now, and took care of the laws, water, plumbing, and heating. "I also picked up the mail from the train depot," he said.

He and his wife, Helen, have been married since 1927. They have two daughters, Colleen and Joan, and seven grandchildren.

Paul sailed the boat down the Mississippi in the 1960's to visit his brother in St. Louis for four days.

He's enjoyed his years with the fire department, even though he jokes that he's been in it "too damn long."

AMIDST JOKES AND catcalls from their fellow firemen, Paul and Norb posed by the 1936 white fire engine — of which Paul is the caretaker and driver — for some pictures.

They inspected their gold, red stoned bands that resembled a high school class ring. The sides were engraved with the Wayne Fire Department Crest.

The party had been planned for two months and kept a secret by the six people who knew about it.

Harvey Brasch, one of the party's organizers, watched with amusement and admiration as Norb snapped Paul's red suspenders.

"You bet they were surprised," he smiled.

THEY'RE NOW testing a "beeper" warning system for the active firemen.

A walkie talkie like "Plectron Notifier" lets out a scream. The dispatcher at the Police Department then tells where the fire is — before the town whistle goes off, Paul explained.

The notifier is tested every night at 6:30 as part of the development program.

These beepers came in handy when the fire department answered over 70 false alarms at Wayne State last semester.

The fire department presented each a garnet stoned engraved ring at a surprise party last week. The celebration was kept a secret for three months.

Neither of the men have plans for retirement. "There's no reason to quit," they said.

"It gets to be so old and nature," Paul added.

Norb had mentioned something to Chief Richard Korn about putting himself on the retirement list at his 600th meeting.

"Over my dead body," Korn replied.

Exchange Student Becomes a Sharer

By Theresa Wull

"I'm scared to go to the bus," Kathi sighed.

"I had a girlfriend who ate soap so she could stay with her host family. It didn't work."

Kathi Sekinger left June 27 on a bus with all of the other American Field Service students in Nebraska. The group met all of the Midwestern AFS students in St. Louis, Mo., and the Europeans went to New York from there. She left the U.S. July 4. The Swiss miss spent the last year with the Clete Sharer family in Wayne.

DURING HER FIRST few days in America, the Sharers and Kathi had to use a dictionary and sign language to communicate. But she caught on fast.

"She learned the naughty words right away," her American father smiled.

Part of this sign language involved hugging. "It took awhile to get used to all the hugging and kissing. We don't do that in Switzerland," she said.

All the hugs helped Kathi not to be homesick, however. There were only a couple of times she showed it. Kathi said she wrote to over 120 different people — to her parents twice a week at first, later decreasing to twice in three weeks, she said.

She also called her parents on New Year's Eve. "We thought she was going to flood us out of the house," Mrs. Sharer said.

KATHI ALSO could have flooded the Sharers out when she started washing her brunette hair every day.

"There's something about the Swiss environment that makes it unnecessary," she said. "But here, I think I need to wash it so often simply because I do."

Other habits Kathi picked up include drinking plain water and using a microwave oven.

"It's so easy. My mom stands in the kitchen for an hour to cook lunch or dinner," she explained.

"Now I'll have to get up earlier to make my coffee."

Kathi also discovered three American confections which are almost unavailable in Switzerland — jello, marshmallows and peanut butter. She also favors sweet corn and sweet potatoes — something she had never eaten before coming here.

ALL OF THIS interest in food led to a 20-pound weight gain by Christmastime. But she dieted "like a golfer," her dad said — "counting the calories in the lettuce and vegetables, but not the chocolate."

But she stuck to her diet and lost the weight. "I knew if I got any thicker I couldn't go home," she explained.

Sharer seems to be an appropriate name for Kathi's host family. Sharing was the biggest thing she learned here.

"I learned about sharing homes. The Swiss aren't that open-minded to take a stranger in. But I've learned that it can be fun," Kathi said.

Her American sister, Deena, said the experience also taught her to share. She was the only one at home for a long time.

Both girls grinned as they said they didn't have to share rooms; but had to learn to share the shower and bathroom.

BOTH FAMILIES learned by sharing the other's way of life.

Kathi discovered that these rural people love to talk about the weather, especially the rain. They just don't worry about it over there.

Mr. Sharer had promised Kathi lots of snow during the winter. When Wayne had a light snowfall of about two inches, she wanted to take snow pictures to send home.

Clete told her to wait until more snow came, sure that more would. The only other time it snowed was in February during a blizzard — the first Kathi had ever seen.

She never did get any snow pictures.

IT TOOK AWHILE, but little by little, Kathi became Americanized.

It started slowly. One night while playing Yahtzee with her family she counted, "eins, zwei, three, four, five, six."

But she knew she was an American when she started dreaming in English in January.

"I thought it (school) would be much worse. But after the first week, I didn't worry that much," she said.

Exams were sometimes difficult because she couldn't express herself. And she thought Americans were always in a hurry because they all ran to get from their lockers to class within the three-minute limit.

Her year here won't count at her Swiss school. She is an apprentice secretary, working half of the day and going to school the other half.

Kathi also thought that Americans made too much out of high school graduation. "They make a big deal out of something little."

She did, however, buy a class ring with money she received as graduation gifts. She expressed disappointment in the fact that the local AFS chapter would not buy her one — a tradition in many other AFS chapters.

THE SHARERS and their daughters got up to make final preparations for Deena's 18th birthday party and Kathi's going-away party.

"I would like to thank Mr. (Curt) Frye, my counselor at Wayne High School, my host family and school friends for all they have done for me," Kathi added.

Swede Enjoyed 'Country On Wheels'

By Theresa Wull

Henric Olsson, clad in silk jogging shorts and a t-shirt from the 1981 Nebraska State Track championships, sat back on the couch and observed that "America is a country on wheels."

"It's so different. If someone here gets bored, he just gets in his car and drives around. Everything has a drive-in."

The 18-year-old Swede got used to the emphasis on driving, but the fact that exchange students like himself were not allowed to drive bothered him.

There aren't many multi-car families in Sweden, he continued. Students can't get their drivers licenses until they are 18. Then they must take driving lessons privately or at school — at a cost of about $200.

SCHOOL WAS also a big change for Henric. Swedes go to a nine-year comprehensive school. They then decide on and train for a career in the gymnasium, which is like an American junior college.

"It's a totally different system," Henric said. "You have to have good enough grades to go on. If you can't keep up, you quit."

He explained that students work as hard as they can in their classes. And they seldom fail.

"If you start to fall behind, your teachers talk to you about it."

And you can get a one (lowest on a scale of 1-3) if you just go to class."

Henric added that while 90-95 percent of Swedes go to the gymnasium, only 20 percent go on to the university.

ANOTHER DIFFERENCE in school life was organized sports at Wayne High.

Sports in Sweden are organized and financed outside of school. And in track — one of Henric's favorite sports — "you run for yourself. There are no team standings kept."

He enjoyed running on the cross country and track teams this year. "It was really fun. We did good in cross country. It was good for me because it helped me to make friends," he said.

He added that "you run harder if you think the team needs you."

He ran on Wayne High's 2-mile relay team, which placed fourth in state competition this spring. He said that the screaming crowds at State made him "nervous."

"We have Swedish championships, but they are not that big. There is little interest. There were even television cameras at the State meet."

The tall, thin blond — who says he didn't gain any weight during his stay — added that there are no professional sports in Sweden.

TUCKING HIS long legs under him, Henric recalled his first step off the plane into Omaha.

"It was so hot," he complained. "Hot" to him was 83 degrees. "We don't have such extremes in Sweden. The record high temperature is 100 degrees."

He has found that he had picked up English so well he could hardly speak Swedish anymore. "I concentrate on it too hard and it sounds funny," he said in accented English.

When he called his family — his mother, Marta, father, Bengt and sister, Maria — he spoke to them in English.

HENRIC PICKED UP one other American habit besides English — peanut butter. "I love it," he said.

Henric spent his last three weeks in America with the Darrel Heler family in Wayne. Their son Todd — Henric's classmate and friend — invited him to stay.

His former host family, the Darrel Wieners, were taking a vacation during these last few weeks, and Henric chose to stay in Wayne to say goodbye to his friends.

He wasn't all that anxious to go home. He plans to come back when I get the money."

HIS ONLY REGRET about the year was that there was no snow for cross-country skiing, another of his favorite sports.

"I had a great time. It was a great year," he smiled.

Henric Olsson

Emma Noe Marking 106th Year

By LaVon Beckman

She doesn't talk much anymore. She says she's tired of doing that.

Her hearing isn't so good, and her sight is nearly gone. Most of her days are spent resting at the Hillcrest Care Center in Laurel, where she's been a resident since May.

But if you look closely, past the clouded eyes and thin, delicate face, you can almost hear the covecobs crackling in the old wooden stove, see the first horsehoe carriage come putting down a dirt main street, or smell the freshly turned earth beneath the blades of the horse drawn plow.

MRS. EMMA Noe, Dixon County's oldest resident, has told and retold her children and their children's children those stories and many more.

Emma, who will be 106 years old on Sunday, July 19, came to this area, near Wakefield, in 1893. She was born to Mr. and Mrs. Delancy Royce on July 19, 1875, at Irving Iowa, the sixth in a family of eight.

She's seen many changes in her long, full lifetime.

BEFORE HER marriage to Fred Noe on April 6, 1898, she managed Mrs. Fannie Conner's General Store in Waterbury. It was there that she met her future husband.

Noes began their life together farming on the Charles Chase farm south of Waterbury. They resided on several farms around Allen and Dixon until 1942 when they moved into Allen.

Fred died in April of 1947.

BEFORE moving to the Hillcrest Care Center about three months ago, Emma resided over 45 years in her own home at Allen with two of her daughters, Martha Noe and Mrs. Emma Shortt. A bout with pneumonia earlier this year left her very weak and it was then the family decided she would be better looked after by the trained staff at the Hillcrest Care Center.

THIS SUNDAY Emma's children, other family members and friends will gather at the Lions Club Park in Laurel to honor her birthday.

Although Emma is too fragile to attend, she will be in the thoughts of her 10 children, 32 grandchildren, 80 great grand children, and 34 great great grandchildren.

Emma also will be honored at the Hillcrest Care Center, along with other residents observing birthday's this month, during a party Saturday.

EMMA'S children are Martha Noe, Mrs. Florence Malcolm, Mrs. Emma Shortt and Mrs. Malvin (Grace) Green, all of Allen; Mrs. Rex (Mary) Milner of El Centro, Calif.; Mrs. Fletcher (Esther) Brandt of Creighton; Ralph of Melba, Idaho, and Robert, Oliver and Leslie, all of Dixon.

Muller Dethrones Marchese for Open Golf Title

Jay Muller takes the lead with this birdie putt as Rick Lott, Bill Hornbeck and Chuck McHarg watch.

Photography: Randy Hascall

Just when the Wayne Country Club Board may have been considering renaming one of its open tournaments the "Tim Marchese Open", a newcomer entered the scene and stole the show by pulling away to win the Wayne CC July Open, Sunday.

Jay Muller of Scribner dethroned defending champion and June Open champion Tim Marchese of Omaha. Muller fired a five-under score of 103 for 27 holes to edge Marchese by a single stroke. A third golfer, Dale Erwin of Sioux City broke par for the 27-holes by shooting a one-under 107.

MULLER BURNED the first nine holes, setting a new course record of 30 on the par 36 course. He then came back with rounds of 38 on the back nine and 35 on the front nine in the championship round playoff.

Bill Hornbeck of Wayne was the highest local finisher. He carded a total score of 109 over the 27 holes. Hornbeck tied with Robert Prazak of West Point and was awarded fourth place by virtue of a sudden death scorecard playoff.

Several other area golfers qualified for the final nine-hole playoff but failed to qualify among the top eight golfers.

Muller's course record was set with the following consecutive scores on the first nine holes: 4, 4, 3, 3, 3, 3, 2, 4. The final round playoff was an exciting one for Muller and Marchese.

PLAYING IN a five some with Erwin, Hornbeck and Wayne's Chuck McHarg, the two top finishers had quite a battle.

Muller, leading Marchese by three strokes after 18 holes of play, lost most of his lead on the first hole of the playoff. He scored a triple bogey 7 while Marchese settled for a bogey 5.

Marchese actually led by one stroke when he outscored Muller 2-3 on the third hole and 3-4 on the fourth. However, Muller pulled back with a birdie on number six and regained the lead with a birdie on number eight.

The champion's tee shot stopped about 15 feet from the pin and his birdie putt dropped in the back door. The two-way race was a game of inches on the difficult number nine hole.

Muller, who ran into trouble, rolled his chip shot within a foot of the cup and parred the finishing hole. Then, with a large gallery watching, Marchese left his birdie putt just an inch short.

LOCAL GOLFERS did well in the lower flights. Russ Swigart of Wakefield won the second flight with an 18-hole score of 73.

Phil Griess of Wayne won the fourth flight with a 77. Ray Murray of Wayne won the sixth flight with an 83. Mike Carney of Wayne won the seventh flight with an 80 and Wayne's Ken Marra won the ninth flight with an 88. Griess had a four-under 32 on the front nine.

Area golfers who placed second in their flights were: John Fuelberth of Wayne, Ken Whorlow of Wayne, Gary Vopalensky of Wayne, Dick Hitchcock of Carroll, Don Luft of Wayne.

Third place area finishers: Val Kienast of Wayne, Sid Preston of Wakefield, Royce Anderson of Wayne, Mike Perry of Wayne, Kurt Czupryn of Wayne.

Local fourth place finishers: Lee Tietgen of Wayne, Les Luft of Wayne, Lyle Trullinger of Wakefield, Don Echtenkamp of Wayne, Ron Hammer of Wayne, Dick Diltman of Wayne and Dean Chase of Allen.

Juniors Throw Wrench in Title Race As Wayne Teams Sweep Bancroft

The race for the Ralph Bishop League Junior Legion title was jumbled up Monday night as Wayne downed league leading Bancroft 6-3 in one of the season's key mat chups.

Kevin Nissen and Tim Pfeiffer combined to pitch a three-hitter against Bancroft and Wayne rallied from a 3-0 deficit to chalk up one of its biggest wins.

A walk and an error provided Bancroft with its first run in the bottom of the first inning. In the third, the hosts struck back with two more runs on a double and two singles.

TIM PFEIFFER, who pitched the final four innings, earned the victory by retiring 12 of the last 14 batters he faced.

Trailing 3-0, Wayne came back with two runs in the top of the fourth. Pfeiffer led-off the inning with a single but was forced out at second on Pat McCright's fielder's choice.

Tod Heier followed with a two-out single and the two runners filled second and third by stealing bases. Jim Sperry delivered the inning's big hit to drive in McCright and Heier.

Wayne still trailed entering the final inning as Bancroft thwarted any attempt to tie the game in the fifth and sixth innings.

THREE BIG HITS paced the locals to a come-from-behind triumph. With one out, Todd Skoken came through under pressure by cracking a double. He scored the tying run on a base hit by Jere Morris.

Bancroft made a pitching change and Jeff Allen reached base on a fielding error. A base hit by Nissen and sacrifice by Pfeiffer provided the next three runs.

Morris scored what proved to be the winning run and Allen and Nissen scored insurance runs.

The victory improved Wayne's league record to 8-4 and dropped Bancroft to 9-2. Wisner is currently in second place with a 9-3 record.

Wayne will finish its regular season by playing at Wisner tomorrow (Friday) and at Wakefield on Monday. Bancroft must play Hartington and Winside while Wisner will finish its season against Hartington.

Rolling through the baseball season like a steam roller, the Wayne Midgets chalked up another victory Monday to increase their chances of winning the Ralph Bishop League title.

Wayne topped Bancroft 7-1 to increase its league-leading record to 11-1. The locals stayed in the driver's seat by collecting seven hits.

In the first inning, Steve Overin drew a walk, stole second and third bases and scored on Jeff McCright's RBI single. Bancroft tied the game with a run in the bottom of the inning as the lead-off batter scored.

A THREE-RUN third inning put Wayne back in command. Mark Kubik and Todd Pfeiffer drew walks and Overin singled in a run. McCright followed things up with a two-run single which scored Pfeiffer and Overin.

In the fourth inning, the Midgets added four more runs. Tim Heier drew a walk, Chad Dorsey singled and Pfeiffer ripped a two-run single. Overin added a double to score Pfeiffer and Wayne's lead was increased to 7-1.

Pfeiffer threw a four-hitter and Wayne's defense held Bancroft scoreless for the final five innings. Only five players reached base after the first inning.

Wayne is scheduled to play at Wisner tomorrow (Friday) and at Wakefield Monday. Wakefield also has only one loss in Ralph Bishop League play.

A doubleheader between Wayne's Legion and Elkhorn was like night and day Saturday in Elkhorn.

Elkhorn won the first game 18-4 in five innings and Wayne won the nightcap 14-4. The doubleheader turned into an aerial display with five home runs in the two games.

Jere Morris rapped a two-run homer in the second inning of the opening game and Brian Fleming knocked a three-run homer in the third inning of the second contest. All three Elkhorn homers came in the first game.

THE HOSTS scored four runs in the first inning, 10 in the second and four in the fourth while putting away a Wayne team comprised of a few regulars and several second leaguers.

Morris collected a homer and singled in three at-bats and scored two of Wayne's four runs. Jeff Allen and Perry Nelson scored the other two runs. Allen, Bill Vrtilska and Jeff Brandt each had one hit. Elkhorn had 11 hits.

In the second game, Wayne had six hits and drew 17 walks. Starting pitcher Jim Sperry and reliever Kevin Nissen combined to throw a two-hitter.

Elkhorn had one hit in the first inning and one in the fourth and scored all four runs in the fourth.

WAYNE'S JUNIORS were led in hitting by Pat McCright and Brian Fleming. In addition to a home run, Fleming also had a single. McCright had two base hits.

Fleming's shot came with Jere Morris and Kevin Nissen on base and two outs. Tim Pfeiffer and Jeff Allen each had one single to round out the hitting attack.

Nissen and Tod Heier scored three runs apiece and Morris scored two. Players who scored one run each were Sperry, Pfeiffer, Fleming, McCright, Allen and Todd Skokan.

Australian Farmstead Lures Couple From Security of Suburban Living

Though John and Rosemary Clarke have grown up in an urban and suburban environment, they are no strangers to the outdoors.

In fact, the prospect of leaving the comforts of a double-income suburban lifestyle with a house, two cars and ample time for dining out and recreation doesn't seem to scare them at all.

At 23 years of age, John is a hunter — kangaroos mostly — and a bird man. He has his own backyard aviary where he breeds and raises exotic and native Australian birds, including budgerigars, cockatiels, twenty-eight Parrots and multi-colored Quail.

At 25 years of age, Rosemary, who has been a nurse in a 300-bed general hospital for a number of years, enjoys homemaking activities.

She knits and sews and cooks in addition to her enjoyment of animals and the outdoors.

Both do a lot of camping, which they said is a popular Australian recreational activity. But, their favorite weekend is a visit to the farm near Mudgee — the farm they will be operating with a cousin after years of hoping their dream would come true. John and Rosemary talk about the farm animals and the land with a commitment found among Midwestern farmers.

AND, THE couple recently adopted a mother-less grey kangaroo. But, after months of good health, it died of "the diarrhea" — apparently a common reaction in adopted kangaroos because they cannot adapt well to any milk but that of their own kind.

"We thought we had gotten it past that," John said while Rosemary showed color photographs of the native Australian animal.

Kangaroos, John explained, are protected animals, but the government allows some hunting because the last three years of drought in Australia has brought them down out of the hills for forage.

"They've really become pests," he said.

A JOHN WAYNE (an. John no sooner landed in Los Angeles than he started searching for his American hero souvenirs.

He did have a John Wayne doll fully dressed in western gear that he proudly displayed at the Kerstine home, just southwest of Carroll.

Rosemary, dressed in country-girl clothes, said she wanted to take a Minnie Mouse doll back to Australia with her.

"My mother brought me a Mickey Mouse doll last year and I told her when I left that I was coming back with a Minnie Mouse doll," she explained.

Both quick to laugh at themselves, John and Rosemary compared their observations here with "the way we do it back home."

BOTH AGREED that exploring in this country are big. Autos that get petroleum in Australia was "very dear" (expensive), they said that there are very few large vehicles for personal use.

Of course, Australians drive on the left hand side of the road — something that put a little scare into Ruth Kerstine whenever John got into the car.

And the Australians call the trunk of a car "the boot," just as do the English. Jello is jelly. And, they have it with ice cream. A salad is not a tossed kind, but a tray of cold cuts and fresh, sliced vegetables. Pop is a "soft drink" to an Australian and lemonade is not from lemons at all. It's a whiffy fizzy drink much like 7-Up.

"IT'S JUST interesting to compare countries, even the different terminology they use," said Ruth, who along with her husband Wayne, hosted the couple for a week.

"We are always comparing what we eat," Rosemary said, promising to make a special Australian dessert before she and John left the Kerstine's northeast Nebraska farm.

Excited and enthused about the visits and return visits, the letters and return letters, the friendship and returned friendship over the years, Ruth said "It gives you a feeling that we all do here. The older you get the more you get the feeling you want to keep this root thing going."

Rosemary agreed. Ruth smiled.

Water

is a plan to create a new loop of 8-inch main around the water district.

He said, if approved, it would come down Wisdom Street, cross Connable Street and go up Nebraska Street. Klostner also explained that the presence of Albenstus Contracting in the city at that time (early August) should generate an excellent bid on the project.

"To do a haphazard job there is going to create problems for future residents," Klostner explained. "We will be (with the proposal) providing a complete loop around the district to improve pressure and fire protection — and allowing for growth."

KLOSTER SAID that part of the city's proposal would be to "replace part of what's presently there."

He said that "as far as adding lines, the city would be hard pressed to do that — that needs to go as special assessment, not as general obligation financing."

He said the costs (special assessments) would be payable over a 10-year period. "I don't feel that would be a big hardship on any of the property owners here," he added. "But, if they want to come up to voice an opinion — pro or con — they can do so on July 28."

In response to a question from Vopalensky, Klostner said that the city's proposals for the recreated project financing would put 25 percent under general obligation and 75 percent under special assessments.

Klostner said estimate would be a ballpark figure based on a pipeline loadage basis. He cautioned that proposals and cost calculations were incomplete.

RUSSELL ASKED for the floor. Mosley granted the request.

"I'm not going to dispute what Mr. Klostner said," he said. "But, people in that ward made no contact with us." He was referring to Klostner's statement about misinformation on the project.

Russell said the engineers were to blame for "switching pipe from one project to another, and making the price (of the project) nearly double what it has finally come to be."

He said the Council was "still back to what determines special assessment." Continuing, Russell said "Are you going to receive what others have, or are you going to receive more thoroughly, fellas, I can't buy this."

Russell went on to blame the city for the problems — something he has done at every meeting on the Roosevelt Park area water district. "You are making old subdivisions with new ones and asking them to pay for problems the city created in the first place," he said.

COUNCILMAN Larry Johnson told Russell that the informal hearing was for just that purpose. "We know there are problems, that's why we're having the hearing," he told Russell.

Russell cited projects in 30 percent of the cost on general obligation financing.

Before concluding, Russell made an unchallenged reference to engineers leaving the Roosevelt Park area project out of the water improvement plans.

"If you want to make up part of the city, run your 12 inch (water main) down around us... that will make us part of the town."

Mosley thanked Russell for his interest, but expressed a concern that other property owners from that area should be heard on the matter.

"Don't get me wrong," he said. "I'm glad you are interested, as you have always been, but I'd like to see some others interested in it also."

When Mosley restated the Council's plan for the July 28 formal hearing on the Roosevelt Park area water district, Russell said "I'll be there."

Klostner has indicated that the city may prepare a handbill explaining the project proposal for property owners in that area.

IN OTHER related action, the Council approved the issuing of $350,000 in bond anticipation notes to pay for other improvement projects and the three part construction contract for the Sherman Street, Ninth Street and Fairgrounds Avenue water districts.

Klostner explained that in January the Council approved a $700,000 timely for several water improvement projects. Tuesday night's action gives the city interim financing in anticipation of long-term underwriting in the bond market.

He said local banks had agreed to carry 50 percent of the financing load and First Mid-America of Omaha had agreed to carry the remaining 50 percent of the $350,000.

The interim financing agreement through Mid America carries a 9.499 percent average interest rate. Included in the $350,000 were funds earmarked for the Roosevelt Park area water improvement project.

IN OTHER action, the Council held a public hearing on proposed uses of revenue sharing funds for fiscal year 1981-82.

The hearing was designed for public input on the Council's proposed use of the funds and to gather information regarding other possible uses for the coming year.

No one appeared to address the revenue-sharing question, or to make a request, so the hearing was closed without discussion.

Interest Rate Couple Hikes Boost Crop Costs

A percentage point hike in the interest rate can cost producers nearly 31 cents a bushel more for continuous wheat, 37 cents a bushel more for summer fallow wheat, and 39 cents more to produce dryland soybeans.

This word comes from extension agricultural economist Larry Bitney of the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. Bitney also said higher rates affect each producer differently, depending on his assets, source of financing, production methods and whether he owns or rents his land.

IN A TABLE documenting the resulting escalation in prices per percentage point increase in the interest rate, Bitney assessed the total increase for pivot irrigation corn (in southwest Nebraska) at 8 cents per bushel, gravity irrigation corn (in central Nebraska) at 13 cents per bushel, and dryland corn (in eastern Nebraska) at 16 cents per bushel over previous levels.

Crop budgets were based on averages for 1981. Nebraska production costs: Yield, cash costs and land value were hypothetical. The effect was calculated for cash operating costs, machinery investment, irrigation investment and land.

For a hypothetical producer paying current interest rates on all of his crop production expenses, half his machinery and irrigation equipment and half his land, Bitney said, a rate increase of 8 percentage points for operating loans and a 5 percent point hike in real estate loans since 1979 would cause a 40 cent per bushel price for corn, a 95 cent increase for wheat and $1.05 more for soybeans.

Even for short term loans, an increase in the average short term interest rate of 8 percentage points results in production costs rising five to eight cents a bushel over two years ago, depending on the crop and area, Bitney said.

THE IMPACT of a change in the interest rate on machinery investment was calculated using an average depreciated value of machinery which amounted to a little over $100 per acre for each case. The replacement cost at today's prices would probably exceed $200 an acre, Bitney estimated.

Producers who used fix rate term loans or leases on machinery before an interest rate increase would not be affected by rates rising, Bitney said.

He also explained that the greatest impact of change in interest rates on per bushel costs is caused by land investment. The timing of original or later loans, the percentage of equity the owner has in the land and the type of loan — fixed versus variable rate — will affect some producers more than the amounts cited, Bitney said.

Others may feel little or no impact, depending on the variables mentioned.

Couple

go their separate ways, but to be responsible for each other should one or the other fall on hard times.

Part of the bargain was that whoever was doing well would send for the other, offering financial help to return the two in whichever venture proved the more successful.

THOUGH REES and James wrote, they never saw each other again. Both successful in their ventures, the childhood pals stopped writing.

However, in 1910 they both returned to their homeland within months of each other but unaware of the near encounter.

They were unaware, at least, until Ruth's grandfather, Rees, visited a Welsh cemetery where his parents were buried there.

James had signed the cemetery's visitor registration book, complete with address, on July months before.

Rees copied it and, upon his return to the states, resumed corresponding with his Australian friend.

RUTH'S GRANDFATHER Rees died, but her mother Mary Roberts, Wayne, wife of the late T.P. Roberts, continued to write.

When Rosemary's great grandfather James died, her mother, Bronwen Egge, St. Mary's, continued the correspondence from her Australian home.

In fact, according to Rosemary, her mother's first letter in an exchange that has continued was to inform the Roberts that James had died.

Today "everyone writes" in a two family letter exchange that spans the globe from the heartland of the United States to suburban Sydney, Australia.

In pursuit of a lifelong dream, Mary Roberts visited the Egge family in Australia four years ago traveling with grandmother Roberts was Myke Olauson, Minneapolis. Mike's parents are Phil and Myrl Olauson of Carroll.

LAST SUMMER, Rosemary Egge Clarke's parents, Len and Bronwen Egge returned the gesture, visiting the Kerstines at their Carroll farm.

And, of course, this past week Rosemary and John — continuing the century old family connection started by the two boyhood pals, visited the Kerstine family which includes Ruth and Wayne's son, Tom.

Rosemary's three brothers Paul, Peter and Phillip, all of Sydney, write with help from their wives, according to Ruth.

Kerstine family members, including Ruth and Cyndee, write. And, according to Ruth, son Tom has expressed an interest in visiting Australia.

The Clarkes plan to rendezvous with friends, an Australian couple who traveled with them to Los Angeles, in California in August for a two couple excursion to Hawaii.

They will return to Australia and their dream of a family and a farm by mid August, near the end of southern Australia's snowless winter.

Hard-Line on Property Valuation Hearings Changing

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association
Property valuation hearings before the state Board of Equalization this year will mark a stark contrast from the hearings held two years ago when the Thone administration started its ambitious equalization effort.

Back in 1979, all 93 Nebraska counties had to show up at "show cause" hearings during which they were supposed to show why valuation changes ordered by the state board should not be implemented. The hearings stretched over several days and were run in courtroom fashion, with county attorneys counseling their county officials on what to say and state Revenue Department attorneys asking probing questions like prosecuting attorneys.

didn't sit through the hearings, the state Revenue Department experts who conducted the hearings were doing so on behalf of the state board. In the end, valuation changes were ordered that sent some counties to the court system. But the state board's orders were upheld by the Nebraska Supreme Court, giving Gov. Charles Thone what he said at the time was one of the greatest moments of his governorship. So the Thone administration had taken a first, crucial step toward what it said would be true equalization across the state. And despite protests from some counties, the equalization effort was implemented. Now, two years later, the time has again come for the state Board of Equalization to examine counties' property valuations. But unlike 1979 or even last year, relatively few counties are being asked to explain their valuations.

State Tax Commissioner Fred Herrington, head of the state Revenue Department and a member of the state board, says at least nine counties are going to have to answer some questions about their property valuations. THE STATE board recently established guidelines that require counties to explain their valuations if they are 10 percent above or below 1980 valuations. Counties in that position will have to show why their 1981-82 valuations should not be changed. Herrington said McPherson was the only county that said its total valuation was 10 percent lower than last year. The county, therefore, will have to explain why. Other counties scheduled to appear at upcoming Revenue Department hearings are Dakota, Boone, Cheyenne, Dawes, Hoff, Kimbell, Sheridan and Wheeler.

There's a chance several other counties that turned their reports in late also might have to answer the department's questions at the upcoming hearings. But the number of counties being queried this year contrasts sharply to previous years. But Herrington said the equalization process isn't quite finished. He notes the state board this year decided against requiring counties to raise their values closer to actual value. HE SAID the state board's plan is intended to bring all county valuations closer to actual value, but the state is not ready to "fine tune, to take the next steps." Although Herrington isn't sure the state has achieved "absolute equalization," he believes it's "the best it's ever been statewide." And Herrington should know; he's been around many years, including five as tax commissioner from 1955 to 1960. So while the state might not have achieved "absolute" equalization, the contrast between the 1979 and 1981 show cause hearings clearly signals considerable progress.

another five being from New York. Douglas says at least 20 states and one foreign country are represented. DOUGLAS DIDN'T name the applicants, although he says some have been interviewed. And he says he views a few of the applicants as being excellent candidates, while a few others are "crackpots." The man who was named to fill in for Bolin until a new corrections director can be selected has said he isn't interested in taking the job full time. But while Acting Director Donald Best doesn't want the job permanently, penitentiary Warden Robert Parraff is interested in the post. Douglas and Thone plan to meet to discuss the interview-selection process, but with 37 applicants, it probably will be a while before Bolin's successor is named.

Rules of the Road

Summer brings out the bikers — both bicyclists and motorcyclists — in Wayne. And, it brings out the worst in those who drive or ride them in and around town. Time and time again the two-wheeler operators can be observed ignoring traffic signals and other common sense rules of the road. And, of course, the unfortunate thing is that few will learn to obey the traffic laws until someone is seriously hurt. Certainly, motorists also break the rules. And, there is just no excuse for that. However, as unfair as it might be for them to violate traffic laws, the careless motorist rides with a great deal more protection. Bicycle or motorcycle riding both have some attractive advantages, particularly during the summer months. However, one of the disadvantages is operator protection. When a bicycle and a car try to occupy the same place at the same time, the car — for right or for wrong — usually wins. The same holds true for motorcycle car mishaps. There's nothing quite so thrilling for a kid as free wheeling down a hill here in town en route to wherever his spokes will take him. There's nothing quite so devastating as a cycle — motorized or otherwise — slamming into a vehicle at full tilt. The maneuverability of two-wheel vehicles often lulls the operator into taking senseless chances behind the handlebars. It's too bad that if all too often takes a life-threatening tragedy to help people remember the rules of the road. Safety is a full time job for everyone. Parents, in particular, need to be concerned for the safety of their bike riding youngsters. Anyone old enough to bike ride about town is old enough to obey the traffic laws of the town. While they can be a lot of fun, neither bicycles nor motorcycles are toys. And, they can be killers for careless girls and boys. Furthermore, those who do ride with caution can easily become the victim of someone else's carelessness. So, alert, defensive cycling is the only reasonable alternative. Being dead right is not good enough.

Against the Grain

While only a small number of farmers appear to be adding water to too dry grain, the practice has consequences for all Nebraska grain producers. Grain that has been dried to too low a moisture level does not meet test weight standards. Because grain is marketed on a weight basis, some farmers are adding water to bring the weight of a bushel up to the standard. Adding water constitutes adulteration according to the Food and Drug Administration and is illegal. Watered grain may test at an acceptable moisture level in Nebraska, but the grain may be out of condition by the time it reaches the West Coast export market. Foreign matter in the grain, which has a higher moisture content, settles together during shipment, creating hot spots and fostering growth of toxins. The West Coast ports are aware that the problem is occurring in Nebraska grain in a few cases. They don't routinely sample moisture this time of year, but they are beginning to. This could have a significant effect on marketing of our grain overseas. Farmers have spent a lot of money on promoting Nebraska grain through their check off dollars, but that's worthless if the grain's moldy when it gets there. The wet grain problem could lead to discounts that would be passed down the selling chain to the local farmer. All farmers would be paying for the unethical practice of a few producers. Thone Works with Conference on Aging State's Elderly Have Voice

"Views held by the majority of Nebraska's senior citizens will, I trust, be reflected at the White House Conference on Aging to be held in Washington Nov. 29-Dec. 3, 1981. "We held 140 meetings and heard from about 4,000 of the state's senior men and women to get the Nebraska grassroots input of concerns. "NOW, AS the only governor serving on the national advisory committee for the conference, I'm making certain that those views will be heard throughout the nation. The first meeting of our committee was May 19-20 and the next one is scheduled for Sept. 24-25. "Two members of the advisory committee were colleagues of mine in the U.S. Congress: William H. Ayres of Ohio, who was in the U.S. House of Representatives with me, and J. Glenn Beall, Jr. of Maryland, who served in both the House and Senate. "At the May meeting in Washington, I heard widespread agreement that the problems of senior citizens deemed most important without putting them into institutions. We just must do more to help people to maintain their independence in their apartments and homes, rather than thinking of nursing homes as the only answer. "Mental health is of great concern to the elderly also. We've had so many advances in physical health that our senior citizens are now living much longer. Longevity is of no value, however, unless logic, memory and all of our mental faculties remain with us. "We need to do much more research concerning the mental processes involved in aging; in recognition of that need I named as chairman of the advisory committee for the Nebraska aging conference: Chuck Powell, who is chairman of the gerontology department at the University of Nebraska-Omaha. "Aim of the White House conference is to recommend to President Reagan and the Congress a comprehensive, coherent national policy on aging. I'd like to hear from any and all citizens in our state so that the voice of Nebraska will truly be heard at this important national forum."

way back when

30 YEARS AGO July 19, 1951: Glen Wingett of Carroll didn't let last week's muddy roads stop him from bringing his cream to town. Wingett called from the municipal airport and informed Dan Sherry that the cream was there. Wingett, one of the county's flying farmers, owns a light plane that he keeps handy for such emergencies. Gary Kingston, son Mrs. Ella Kingston of Wayne, won the bicycle contest sponsored by Wagner Store. Lawrence E. Jenkins of Carroll was appointed to serve on the Wayne County draft board Tuesday. He succeeds Robert I. Jones of Carroll, who resigned last month.

15 YEARS AGO July 15, 1966: It seems likely there will be about 300 additional living places needed for incoming Wayne State students this fall. An appropriation ordinance passed Tuesday night at the Wayne city council meeting sets the tax levy for the year at 26.3 mills. This remains unchanged from the previous year. Approximately 40 businessmen from Wayne, Winslow, Carroll and Hoskins were conducted on a soil and water conservation tour of Wayne County Thursday. Conservation measures were noted by businessmen, who were unanimous in their expression of enjoyment and enlightenment.

25 YEARS AGO July 19, 1956: The Rev. Harold Kieck, pastor at St. Paul's Lutheran Church for nine years, has accepted the pastorage at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Carroll, Iowa. Wayne firemen installed new metal identification letters on the front of the city hall this week. Installation was recently completed on a large multi-colored sign directing sportsmen and vacationers for a shortcut to Gavins Point Dam. The sign is on Highway 275 about 1/2 mile east of the junction with Highway 15.

10 YEARS AGO July 15, 1971: George John was one of 200 Nebraska young people who took part in "Concert At Dusk" on the Nebraska Educational Television Network Wednesday. Leslie Swanson, son of the Norman Swansons of Wakefield, received the God and Country award in special ceremonies Sunday. Hoskins native Marilyn Bruggeman, now of Des Moines, has been admitted to partnership in the Firm of Ernst and Ernst, an international auditing firm. The Wayne area Youth Association for Retarded Citizens held a potluck supper and organizational meeting at the Wayne Armory, Tuesday.

20 YEARS AGO July 20, 1961: Recent rains have combined to provide adequate surface and subsoil moisture for area crops, according to County Agent Everett Rieck. About 25 percent of the oats are ripe. A total of 43 players took part in the East West Divisions All Star game Thursday at Wakefield. The West rolled to easy victory, scoring 10 runs on 10 hits to win 10-2. A Northern pike weighing 6 pounds, 4 ounces caught by Lyle Strunk at Gavins Point topped the fish stories this week.

To the editor: The Wayne Regional Arts Council is very grateful for the community effort given The Chicken Show. Numerous individuals and organizations, such as the "W" Club of Wayne State College, the Wayne Kiwanis, and AAUW contributed to the day's events. We regret that a complete list of businesses contributing to the festival were not available at the time of the final printing of information. Those omitted include Mine's Jewelry, Midwest Land Company, Roman Meat Packers of Norfolk, O and L Interiors and Pamida. Frank Teach and Wayne State College were invaluable, and provided much appreciated last-hour assistance. Others who provided help above and beyond the call of duty were Twila Claybaugh, Patty Weiland, Larry Hammond, Jan Merriman, Sue Schroeder, Jim Lindau, Carolyn and Cindy Miller, Kelly Bartholomew and Maurice Anderson. There were many other individuals whose help we needed and received, and we are grateful to all. Those who participated, of course, comprised the Chicken Show itself, and we couldn't have done without their presence and preparation. Finally, a special thank-you to Dean Craun of KTCH, to the staff of The Wayne Herald (particularly Randall Howell), and to Roger Toomey of the Wayne Chamber of Commerce. All three of these men have said that their work for us was part of their job, but the WRAC is nevertheless aware of the effort they put forth for the benefit of The Chicken Show. All of us who worked with them have felt privileged indeed. Jane O'Leary WRAC Administrator

To the editor: For the past few years I have read with dismay the "gripes" in the editor's column about the Wayne pool. First of all, when compared to the cost of other sources of entertainment available to families during the summer, swimming is cheap. There is no better exercise and it is fun. I always felt like I couldn't say anything because I had nothing to compare Wayne to. Well, now I do. Kelly Bartholomew at Fort Collins is twice what we paid in Wayne and it's an extra fee for swim lessons where the instructor/student ratio is certainly not 12:1 but more like 20:1. There are also pools in the various housing developments where people pay a membership fee to swim if they live in that area. This fee is anywhere from $50 to $200 per month. Unless things have drastically changed, the swim lessons given at the Wayne pool are excellent. During the two years that our son took lessons, he was well supervised and learned how to swim well. Wayne was a terrific town to live in and we still think of it as home. It offers so much more than lots of towns of the same size and we are proud to say we came from there. Jane Schroeder Ft. Collins, Colo.

Insect War Rages Over Farmland, Regulations

By M.M. Van Kirk Nebraska Farm Bureau This summer's continuing battle with chinch bug problems in a broad area of Southeast Nebraska leaves many farmers with a feeling that they are caught in an impossible squeeze between pesticide manufacturers and government regulatory agencies on the one hand and the destroying army of bugs on the other. Farmers in 22 heavily infested counties have literally been fighting for the life of their corn and sorghum crops on a day-to-day, week-by-week basis. Authorized-use pesticides such as Lorsban 4E, Furadan 4F, Furadan G, Sevin and Thimet have been achieving only limited success in deterring but not stopping the spreading invasion by the six-legged creatures.

FARMERS TELL of spraying on an every few days basis and they are frustrated by the fact that so far the chemicals have not provided a lasting solution. For their own safety and the long-range safety of their environment, they are prevented from buying and using some of the more toxic chemicals. This has been true in recent years in coping with other pest problems, notably grasshoppers. The grasshopper problems of recent years, which also coincide with drought conditions, actually were relatively mild in comparison with some of the chinch bug damage which has been occurring. Since the Federal Food and Drug Act of 1906, a number of laws have been enacted to put constraints on the pesticide companies. The burden of proof of safety has shifted from government agencies to the manufacturers and distributors of pesticides. The formation of the Environmental Protection Agency in 1970 forced a major shift in the direction of research and development of pesticides. As costs have risen, manufacturers have been shifting their efforts toward major crops and major uses, producing chemicals that have a broad spectrum of pesticide control activity instead of chemicals made solely for one purpose. The pesticide marketed as "Thimet" serves as an example. Technically, Thimet cannot be recommended for use on chinch bugs, only for corn root worm. HOWEVER, according to Allen Boelcher, Lancaster County Extension agent, "Thimet may be the best bet to stop the invasion of chinch bugs on corn and sorghum fields. When Thimet is applied before cultivation, then immediately worked into the ground, the efficiency rate is 99 percent. When tested 12 days later, the efficiency rate was 90 percent," Boelcher said. Government intervention in the control of pesticide marketing often adds complications. When the Environmental Protection Agency bans an effective pesticide for being too harmful, or severely restricts its use, the substitute is often a less effective older pesticide. As a result, more pesticide is required per acre to obtain equivalent control. The end result is less effectiveness in the fields at higher cost because extra quantities are needed. At the present time, farmers who are having to spray on an every-other-day basis are rapidly getting into a "no win" position. The chinch bugs keep multiplying and the costs of ineffective control become prohibitive. PROBABLY in the end, Mother Nature will provide the answer but too late for present crops. Right now there is a fungus present in the wheat fields that could wipe out all the chinch bugs according to Tim Miller, University of Nebraska Extension entomologist technician. But he explains, for that to happen, certain atmospheric conditions must be present — a plentiful amount of moisture, the right temperature and high humidity, and these factors combined with temperature around 60 degrees for approximately one week. The ideal time for this to have happened was in June while the bugs were still in the wheat fields, Miller says. He adds, "Unfortunately, these conditions haven't been present for the last five years."

Awww, Chicken Feathers

Hog Prices Expected to Rise

The latest government hogs and pigs report indicate a reduced inventory which would result in higher pork prices in the July to September period.

The figures in the June 22 U.S. Department of Agriculture report are reasonably close to industry expectations, said Larry Blinney, University of Nebraska farm management specialist. The estimated number of hogs coming to market in the next six months is down 8 percent, while breeding stock has been reduced by 12 percent.

Producers are continuing to cut back," Blinney said. Nebraska producers have reduced their percentages by less than the national totals however.

This reduction in pork supplies, through the rest of the year should result in considerably stronger prices, Blinney said. The total meat supply also should be down a little, although broiler production is expected to increase 5 to 10 percent through the end of the year. Beef supplies are projected to be stable to slightly lower compared to year ago levels.

Concord Man Attends Seminar

Lawrence Fox of Farmers Supply, Concord, recently attended a three day school at the general offices of Kent Feeds Inc., Muscatine, Iowa.

The school was for employees of businesses that carry Kent feeds and animal care products and was designed to help them better serve their livestock and poultry producer customers.

Nearly 80 dealer people attended sessions taught by members of the Kent nutrition, training, advertising, marketing, animal care and production departments. A wide variety of subjects were covered at the school, ranging from basic nutrition to methods of merchandising to grind and mix practices. There was also a tour of the company's 650 acre research farm, which is located near Muscatine.

Corn Crop Up 11 Percent

Nebraska's corn crop is forecast at 669.3 million bushels, 11 percent above last year but down 19 percent from the 1979 record crop. Increase for grain harvest at 5.9 million acres is 3 percent below last year. Based on July 1 conditions, yield is forecast at 97 bushels per acre compared with 85 bushels last year and the 1975-79 average of 90.4 bushels.

Planting started earlier than usual due to the mild winter and early spring. However, rains and extremely dry soils in other areas delayed mid season progress and planting was completed about the normal time.

Progress of the dryland crop has been hindered by short moisture supplies. As of July 3, topsoil moisture supplies were rated as short in 51 percent of counties, adequate 46 percent and surplus 3 percent. Subsoil supplies were 66 percent short and 34 percent adequate.

Yearling Calves Face Market

Cattle producers may want to consider selling yearling cattle or heavyweight calves now because of hot weather and poor pasture, according to University of Nebraska extension marketing specialist Al Wellman.

If you've got yearling cattle or heavyweight calves on pasture right now and the pasture's getting dry, feed is hard to come by and hay is sparse, now may be the time to sell," he said. Current interest rates also may encourage beef producers to sell now. Wellman said.

If feed supplies are short, "I wouldn't plan to use next winter's supply on yearling and heavy calves at the expense of the cow herd," he added.

1981 Oat Production Increases

Oats production is forecast at 17,770,000 bushels, 14 percent above last year. Estimated yield is 42 bushels per acre, up 1 bushel from 1980.

Barley production is expected to total 950,000 bushels, unchanged from last year.

Rye production should total 488,000 bushels, down 4 percent from a year ago.

On Board

FREDERICK Temme, Wayne, has been nominated to the New Norco Dairy Advisory Board. This advisory group was formed to more closely combine practical feeding conditions with Norco Mills' feeds and feeding programs. Direction from this group of successful and respected dairymen will be followed closely to maintain modern feeding practices with tomorrow's feeding practices and management. Other members of the Norco Advisory Board are: Pat McLain, Ewing; John Demerath, Plainview; Dave Robertson, Madison; Harold Wendt, West Point and Pete Burbach, Hartington.

How often should you water your bluegrass lawns? Lawns require about 1.0 to 1.5 inches of water per week to maintain active growth. Unfortunately much of the water applied is lost because of poor application practices, high evaporation, uneven distribution and excessive runoff.

The key to a good program is to base watering frequency on the turfgrass plants need. Signs to look for include a dark blue-green color to foot printing marks.

When these conditions occur, water the lawn as thoroughly as possible without runoff.

TIPS ON WATERING - Less frequent but heavier watering encourages plants to develop a desirable, deep root system.

- Aeration of clay and sloping sites helps water penetration, decreases runoff, and encourages root development.

- South exposures, sunny sites, slopes, areas near sidewalks, curbs or driveways, and areas with shallow root zones require more frequent waterings. Shady locations and north exposures may not need watering as often.

- Early morning hours (4 a.m. to 8 a.m.) are the best for watering. Avoid midday watering of lawns because this time is highly inefficient. Evening and night watering favor disease development.

WHERE IRRIGATION is not feasible drought tolerant grasses would be used. Cultural practices that encourage drought tolerance include avoiding early spring fertilization that causes a flush of lush, succulent growth.

- Be sure that phosphorus and potassium levels are adequate and raising the height of cut on the lawnmower to 2.5 or 3.0 inches.

- Never allow a lush, actively growing lawn to go into drought stress without slowly raising it into dormancy. A well-landed and watered lawn exposed to immediate and extended drought will still, after extensive stand thinning and its recovery from drought, will be unsatisfactory.

Heat Hint: Keep Your Shirt On

Farmers Susceptible to Sunstroke

While your skin may be begging for cool air conditioning, your body is screaming for water during a heat wave.

"Most persons around the home and farm overcome from the sun fall to maintain necessary amounts of body fluids," according to Leon Rottmann, extension human development specialist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

specialist noted, "when they remove shirts while working in the fields. While keeping the shirt on may seem warmer, the shirt retains perspiration close to the skin surface, which results in cooling the body. Stripping to the waist hastens evaporation of body fluids and invites heat related problems."

HEAT EXHAUSTION isn't always apparent when it's in the making, Rottmann said. Since body temperatures necessarily don't sound a warning during the heat peak, the most severe symptoms don't occur until later in the evening.

Heat exhaustion sneaks up on many people, he said, like the man who spent the day partly submerged in water while fishing.

"Although the exterior of this man's body was covered with water, he did nothing about replacing fluids inside his body. This led to nausea, fever and cramping long after sundown," Rottmann added.

"Many farm workers are susceptible to dehydration," the body with cold cloths or ice bags and keep him quiet until medical assistance arrives or until you can have medical direction. Never give any stimulants such as liquors, tea or coffee to a patient who has any signs of sunstroke or heat prostration."

Early symptoms of sunstroke and heat prostration are similar and just as dangerous, Rottmann said. These are headache, nausea and dizziness.

With sunstroke, the patient becomes flushed, his skin becomes hot and dry and his temperature shoots up. The patient may even lose consciousness.

"When these signs appear, get the patient to a cool shady place. Rest him on his back with his head slightly raised. Cool the plenty of water and stop activity at the first sign of dizziness or weakness."

The most common danger this summer is simple skin sunburn, which may be anything but simple to treat if it goes to the second and third skin layers, the specialist said.

It is wise to take precautions such as fanning by the clock - 15 minutes the first day with gradual increases."

Lotions and sunscreens that mask and cover can't guarantee against burns from overexposure and even on hazy days a person can get burned. Try to get out of the sun before you redden, he said, because once that happens you are already burned.

Hot, Humid Weather Tough on Livestock Without Protection

Livestock producers should take special precautions for their animals during current hot and humid weather conditions in Nebraska, according to Dr. Paul Guyer, extension beef specialist at the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

When heat is coupled with high humidity, livestock losses occur because the animals' physical mechanisms for controlling their body temperature are not effective, said Guyer.

IN EXTREMELY hot and humid weather, the producers should avoid handling the animals. Cool drinking water and sprinkling with water will help cool them by conduction. Shaded areas also may help except for extremely hot, still days.

Keeping cattle and hogs where air is circulating and using fans where possible will help move air heated by the animals' bodies, the livestock expert said. Where there is little wind and fans are not available, keep the animals scattered.

Cattle in confinement benefit from shade in two ways. The animals' bodies and the ground below them do not receive radiant heat from the sun and the roof or shade may be so constructed that livestock radiate heat to the north sky or to the underside of the roof or shade. The problem of cooling livestock when humidity is high is complicated by the fact that muggy air is not conducive to evaporation and using misting systems will only make the humidity worse, Guyer warned.

ADDITIONAL hot-weather cautions include keeping markings current and selling cattle that have had respiratory problems.

As livestock reach market finish they tend to have less heat tolerance, probably because they have less body surface per unit of weight. Specialists warned that animals with any impairment in health are likely to be the first to succumb to heat stress.

If the producer must transport animals during hot weather, it's better to haul at night or in the early morning in carriers bedded with wet sand. Carrying fewer animals per load and having the truck open for maximum ventilation also helps alleviate heat stress.

While on the road, move rapidly and smoothly, avoiding sudden starts and stops which can cause piling and downed animals. Also limit meal and coffee breaks to minimize the animals' time in the truck, the IANR specialist said.

Windrower Wait

THE NORTHEAST Nebraska oats harvest is in full swing. These plants, heavy with the golden ripe kernels, await the coming win-drower and combine in a rural Wayne field. Hot, dry weather has hastened the harvest as irrigation units work overtime to keep beans, corn and alfalfa growing for fall yields.

Crossbred Gilt Testing Rates Litter Survival

Large White crossbred gilts showed a 12 percent increased embryo survival rate compared to a high ovulation rate and a control line, according to research done by University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources staff members.

The research project was designed to determine if selection for high ovulation rate would increase litter size and to determine when in gestation fetal death loss occurred.

FOLLOWING nine generations of effective mass selection for high ovulation rate and two generations of relaxed selection in the Nebraska gene pool population, 47 control line and 41 select line females were mated pure or to Large White boars. Some 207 pure line and crossbred progeny were slaughtered 30, 50 or 70 days postbreeding and reproductive traits were evaluated for the number of live and degenerating embryos.

Early in gestation the high ovulation line and the Large White crossbreds clearly had more live embryos than the control line females.

Then in later gestation the Large White crosses performed better and there was hardly any difference in embryo survival between the two purebred lines.

Future studies will research the physiological causes of embryo death in order to increase litter size.

Many Operations Need Streamlining

Dairymen Face Production Cost Crunch

Even though determining "average" cost estimates for dairy operations has been compared to trying to milk and costs cow, production levels and costs do have a big impact on profits, according to a University of Nebraska agricultural economist.

Doug Jose, extension farm management specialist for the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, also emphasized that production averages are rough approximations, and that fluctuating prices for feed, fertilizers and labor make stable estimates difficult.

HE DID note, however, that recent increases in nearly all inputs for milk production mean that dairymen should examine all aspects of their operation and determine where to cut corners without sacrificing productivity.

Citing data collected from state and regional dairy specialists and commercial dairy producers, Jose gave the following estimates for net cost per hundredweight of milk for a herd of 60 cows:

— $16.27 for cows producing 10,000 pounds of milk a year.
— $13.76 for cows producing 13,000 pounds of milk a year.
— $12.19 for cows producing 16,000 pounds of milk a year.

Milk prices have averaged about $12.75 per hundredweight, putting the break-even price at the 13,000-pound level. This includes credit for the sale of cull cows, cull heifers and calves.

Jose said feed costs in Nebraska represent about 44 percent of the total cost, followed by 21 percent for capital costs of livestock, facilities and equipment. Labor is estimated at 15 percent of the total with miscellaneous expenses totaling the same. Depreciation, taxes and insurance take up the remaining 7 percent of all costs.

HISTORICALLY, Jose said, feed has been estimated at one-half of production costs.

This meant a cow or herd would have to produce enough milk to more than double its feed costs to be considered profitable.

Because other costs have risen more rapidly than feed costs — interest rates in particular — income from milk may need to be two- and one-half times the feed cost to beat the break-even point, he explained.

"Good records of individual cow and herd production are the main factors in analyzing costs and returns," he said. Effective waste management can reduce fertilizer costs, and therefore, also is an important factor in lowering the cost of feed raised on the farm, Jose said.

CONOCO Fleet Motor Oil CONOCO

The Universal Motor Oil for Mixed Fleets Using Diesel and Gasoline Engines From Any Major Manufacturer — CD-CC-SF-SD

Conoco Fleet Motor Oil

Fleet Motor Oil is a heavy-duty motor oil especially designed to meet the warranty requirements of all major manufacturers of gasoline and diesel engines. It will provide maximum protection to these engines, including those produced by Caterpillar, Cummins, Detroit Diesel, Mack, International, American Motors, Chrysler, Ford, GM and principal tractor manufacturers. Fleet Motor Oil is recommended for all turbocharged engines where the manufacturer specifies a CD, S-3, or 2104C level oil. Grades 10W and 30 are approved for use in Allison transmissions requiring a C-3 fluid.

Fleet Motor Oil is recommended particularly for use in those fleets comprised of equipment powered by various makes and designs of engines, where in the past as many as three different oils were often required to meet the warranty and operating requirements of all these engines. When using Fleet Motor Oil, no compromise need be made to suit the majority of the fleet at the expense of the other equipment.

Fleet Motor Oil also meets the friction stability requirements (TO-2) for Caterpillar Powershift Transmissions.

Fleet Motor Oil, made from highest quality solvent-refined, paraffin-base oils, contains detergent-dispersant, oxidation-corrosion inhibitors, anti-scuff agent, and foam suppressant. It exceeds API Service Classification requirements for CD-CC-SF-SD and specifications MIL-L-2104C, MIL-L-16152B, Detroit Diesel, Ford M2C-153B, Mack TO-2, Cummins, GM604B-M and 6049-M, and Caterpillar S-3 and TO-2.

Fleet Supreme Motor Oil is manufactured to meet the SAE viscosity designation of 15W-40. This is particularly desired by Detroit Diesel to permit easier cold weather starting and yet provide added protection to their high speed heavily loaded engines. This oil is approved by Detroit Diesel (except for the 149 Series) and is suitable for many other engines where the benefits of a multiviscosity oil are desired.

Customer Benefits

- One oil for all engine services... reduced inventory
- Warranty requirements of all engine manufacturers meet with this "one oil"
- Misapplication eliminated... the one oil is the right oil
- Maximum engine protection assured in hot or cold weather under all operating conditions.
- Low ash assures minimum deposits, longer valve life, less port plugging, cleaner combustion chambers
- Excellent rust protection assured
- High detergency gives better deposit control low sludge formation, extended filter life
