Roosevelt Park area residents listen to an overview of water district project proposed for their neighborhood.

Roosevelt Park Water District Decision Due

Roosevelt Park area water district property owners have until Aug. 10 to be included in this year's construction schedule.

Beyond that date, according to Wayne officials and city engineering consultants, there is little likelihood the project could be bid in time to be completed within this construction season.

And, there is even less likelihood the city could take advantage of the bidding competition expected with a contractor on site for three other city water projects.

DESPITE THAT, several members of the City Council seemed less than optimistic Tuesday night that property owners would give the go-ahead on the Roosevelt Park water district improvement project.

The project, which involves looping the district into the citywide delivery system by installing new lines and replacing old water mains, was reborn earlier this month after a property owners protest petition had stalled for several weeks.

Nearly 30 residents of the Roosevelt Park area appeared at Tuesday night's informal informational hearing on the proposed project — a project redesigned by the city's consulting engineers in an attempt to reach a compromise over financing the construction.

Property owners, in the initial petition that stalled the project, had protested special assessments the city has contended were needed to finance the improvements.

TUESDAY NIGHT, property owner protests, with few exceptions, were the same.

However, it was the first time anyone — other than resident and property owner Vernon Russell — from the district appeared before the City Council regarding the project.

City Adopts $5.8 Million Budget; General Fund Drops to $881,956

Though nearly 30 taxpayers questioned a $36,000 Wayne water project for several hours Tuesday night, not one taxpayer appeared before the City Council to discuss a $5.8 million 1981-82 budget.

Mayor Wayne Marsh interrupted Tuesday night's marathon informal hearing on the Roosevelt Park area's proposed water improvement project for a formal public hearing on the city's budget proposal, which features a general fund figure of $881,956.

Within minutes the budget hearing was closed without a murmur, and before the City Council recessed at 11 p.m., the financial package was adopted unanimously just three days before the start of fiscal year 1981-82, Saturday, Aug. 1.

NO EXPLANATION of the budget proposal was offered during the public hearing. Only city officials had access to copies of the budget during the short hearing.

After adopting the budget, the Council recessed until 7 a.m. Thursday at the Windmill Restaurant for a working session on city employee salaries, part of the 1981-82 package.

As reported in The Wayne Herald a month ago, the general fund total — the total linked to the personal property tax burden — dropped from the current $930,130 to $881,956.

However, the entire budget ($5.8 million) is up significantly over last year. The $1.2 million increase is attributed to jumps in the revenue generating budget categories, such as the electrical fund and water sewer fund, according to Norman Melton, city clerk-treasurer.

EARLIER THIS summer, City Administrator Phil Kloster said the electrical fund increased because of continually climbing energy costs and an inadequate budgeting for the category during the current year.

The adopted electricity fund figure is $3.3 million compared to the current budget figure of $2.7 million.

According to Melton, the water-sewer fund increase can be attributed to a number of city construction projects, particularly in the area of water improvement districts.

Under the new budget, the water-sewer fund jumped from $327,760 to $1,041,249 — a figure more than double that for 1980-81.

critic, owns several lots within the proposed improvement area.

Under the city's proposal, his lots (including his home site and several vacant parcels) and those of other property owners would face special assessments based on a per-frontage-foot formula.

The city also is proposing to build and upgrade part of the system with general obligation funds.

THE MARATHON debate over financing Roosevelt Park's proposed water improvements has been spearheaded by Russell, who has repeatedly told the City Council that funding should be general obligation.

He continued to dominate the property owners protest Tuesday night, challenging city officials, consulting engineers and the city's legal counsel.

Using more historical supposition than engineering fact during the debate, Russell strode to the podium several times to outline what he contended was a city practice of unequal treatment for Roosevelt Park.

And, though city officials have begun to openly question Russell's motives in seeking

Charter Legion Member Reviews 61 Years

By Theresa Wull

The "90-day wonder" has become a 61-year-wonder in Wayne.

John T. Bressler Jr. earned officer status in the Navy after only 90 days of training — something that ordinarily took four years of study at Annapolis Naval Academy to do.

The name "90-day wonder" was thus given to him and so many others who completed the quickie officer training course during World War I.

After Bressler came back from the war, he helped charter Wayne's chapter of the American Legion, which is celebrating its 61st anniversary next month.

YOUNG TEDDY Roosevelt and a man named D'Loier, along with four or five others, were the prime movers behind the Legion's formation, Bressler said.

They had met in France after the Armistice and were sitting in cafe discussing the idea of a veterans' organization in the United States.

The first national convention was held in St. Louis, Mo. in 1919. Bressler was a delegate at the first state caucus, held that September in Omaha. A provisional outfit was set up at this meeting, Bressler explained.

The first official state meeting was held in September, 1920. Earl Cline was elected commander, and Bressler-chosen as vice-commander.

AFTER THAT first meeting in Omaha, Bressler and 16 other vets started the Wayne Legion post.

At the next state convention in 1921, Bressler was re-elected vice commander. He served under Commander Robert Simmons, who was later chief justice of the Nebraska State Supreme Court.

Over the years, the Legion has become more active, he said. They now lobby in Congress to secure benefits for veterans and worked to establish a fund for needy vets.

The Wayne post provides crutches and wheelchairs for those who need them. They've also become more socially active and established the Veterans Club about 20 years ago, Bressler added.

ALTHOUGH HE used to enjoy the Legion meetings, the 87-year-old soldier doesn't go to them now. It's easier for him to stay at home.

Auxiliary Marks 60th

A small group of mothers, sisters and wives accepted an invitation 60 years ago to honor those who had been killed in World War I and help those who had come back from the war.

These ladies chartered the American Legion Auxiliary, which celebrated its 60th year of existence in May.

The post and auxiliary are named after Irwin L. Sears, the first man from Wayne to die in World War I. His sister, Ethel Sears, was the first Auxiliary secretary. Mrs. W.H. Phillips was the first president.

Membership had grown to 39 members after the first year of organization. It now stands at 93: senior members, seven junior members and eight permanent members.

Mrs. Ernest Sielken currently serves as president. Eveline Thompson is secretary-treasurer.

The Adult Developmental Center was cited for its reorganization and new contracts. Under the direction of Rezek, the ADC Coordinator, and other Region IV personnel, clients cut shingles for Heritage Homes, sand stakes for Carhart Lumber, finish breadboards for Timberline Wood Products and make wind chimers for Bill Watson. Give-A-Way Returns to Single Shot Wayne's Grand Give A Way returns to a single shot at $1,000 in bonus bucks Thursday night.

Three names were called last Thursday night in a tripleheader drawing. Only Alvin Temme of Wayne won $350, however. He was at Wellman's IGA when his name was called.

Butch Meyer of rural Wayne and Bob Paul of Wakefield lost out on $350 each. They were not in a participating merchants store when their names were called last Thursday night.

The grand slam ($1,000) name will be called at 8 p.m. this Thursday.

Both contests, the tripleheader and the grand slam will be alternating on Thursday nights for the remainder of the summer.

As before, spouses can claim the prize on behalf of the winner. Only one name will be called at 8 p.m. Thursday night.

The new tripleheader twist alternates prizes, giving Wayne shoppers three chances at $350 each one week and a single shot at the $1,000 bonus bucks grand slam the next.

In the tripleheader, three names will be announced at the 15 minute intervals regardless of a win or a loss on the first or second try. One name is announced in the grand slam.

Illness Delays Exchange Student's Trip Home

By LaVon Beckman

By now Lucia Rodriguez is apt to be sitting in her mother's kitchen in Bogota, Colombia eating one of her favorite Colombian dishes.

Lucia, 17, was Wakefield High School's foreign-exchange student this year as part of the Youth for Understanding exchange student program.

She arrived in Wakefield in January and made her home with the Duane Tappé family.

LUCIA WAS scheduled to join other foreign exchange students from Colombia in early July for their return trip home after studying the past several months in high schools throughout the United States.

As the July 8 date approached for their departure from the United States, Lucia's homesickness grew and she had begun packing several days earlier in preparation for the long flight home.

ON JULY 6, just two days before the plane carrying the Colombian students was to leave from the United States, Lucia became seriously ill with chills, fever and severe stomach cramps.

It was 6:30 a.m. on July 6 when Lucia was rushed to the Wakefield Community Hospital by her American parents, Duane and Olga Tappé. She received two blood transfusions in Wakefield before being transferred the following day, July 7, to St. Luke's Hospital in Sioux City.

On Thursday, July 9, Lucia underwent surgery in Sioux City for intussusception, a disorder of the intestines rarely seen in persons over the age of three.

NOT ONLY WAS Lucia severely ill, she had also missed her plane home.

Lucia remained in the hospital for nearly two weeks following surgery, and recuperated in the Tappé home for another four days before boarding a plane last Sunday to join her family and friends in Colombia.

WHEN NEWS OF Lucia's illness growing homesickness reached her family in Bogota, sister Gloria, 26, took time off from her job as a nurse in Colombia to come stay with her sister in the United States.

On Sunday, July 26, nearly two and a half weeks following Lucia's surgery, the sisters boarded a plane at 6:40 a.m. and were met by their mother and family later that evening in Bogota, the capital of Colombia.

Because of the nature of her first trip to the United States, Gloria didn't have time to sightsee. Her days were spent helping sister Lucia recuperate so the two could return home as soon as possible.

Gloria says she will probably return to the United States some day and hopes to visit many of the sights described to her by Lucia.

ALTHOUGH Lucia was understandably anxious to return to her home in Colombia, she says she has had lots of good experiences in the United States and will never forget the many friends she made at Wakefield.

"The United States is a wonderful country," said Lucia, adding that she especially enjoyed visiting all the monuments in Washington, D. C. enroute to Wakefield last January.

Lucia found small town life in the United States very different from her own hometown of Bogota, which boasts a population of nearly 6 million people. "But," she smiles, "six months here was long enough."

She said she especially missed her family and friends in Bogota and was anxious to return to her mother's kitchen for some "traditional" Colombian food.

BEFORE LEAVING, Lucia expressed her gratitude to all the people who sent cards and telephoned her while she was recuperating in the Sioux City hospital and in the Tappé home.

"I want to say thank you to all the people," she smiled. "They were really nice."

The Tappé family will miss their South American daughter, "but," says Olga, "we know she has a beautiful family to go home to."

FOLLOWING LUCIA'S return to Bogota Sunday she planned to spend a week recuperating at home before enrolling in a Colombian University, where she will study motel management.

"Motel management is a very good industry in my country," says Lucia, "and it's a very good business to get into, especially if you speak English."

Lucia Rodriguez, at right, visits with sister Gloria in Duane Tappé home.

Mabelle Lundahl Honored

Former Wakefield Woman Celebrated For Long Years of Church Service

Bethlehem Lutheran Church in Brooklyn, N. Y. honored one of its most outstanding parish workers earlier this year with a gala weekend celebration, including a catered dinner, music-filled service of thanksgiving, parties, and a dance with the bishop.

The celebration was held in honor of a former Wakefield woman, Mabelle Lundahl, on the fiftieth anniversary of her service to the church.

Mrs. Lundahl, who grew up in the Wakefield area, was celebrated in April for her faithful work in the church and was presented with a silver bowl by Leonard Nilson, President of the Church Council.

THE CELEBRATION will continue in Wakefield this Sunday, July 26, as friends and relatives gather for a reception in Mrs. Lundahl's honor at the Salem Lutheran Church.

The open house reception will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Mrs. Lundahl is here visiting several relatives, including her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Lundahl, and a nephew, Virgil Ekberg, all of Wakefield; another nephew, Leland Herman of Wayne; a niece and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Claybaugh of Carroll; and another brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Lundahl of Sioux City.

MRS. LUNDAHL, who holds a teacher's certificate from Wayne State College, has served Bethlehem Lutheran Church for the past 50 years as Christian Education Director. She continues to serve in that capacity.

She was born in Iowa and grew up at Wakefield with her five brothers and three sisters. She was confirmed in Salem Lutheran Church and graduated from Wakefield High School.

MABELLE LUNDAHL

In addition to holding a certificate from Wayne State College, she is a graduate of the Conservatory of Music of Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill. As an undergraduate at Luther College in Wahoo, and at Augustana, she toured with the college choir and served as soloist in three area churches.

SHE TOOK courses at Moody Bible Institute in Chicago and Biblical Seminary in New York City before going to Bethlehem Church on Jan. 8, 1931, as parish worker and religious director.

Mrs. Lundahl said among the most satisfying tasks in her church career have been working with young people and directing a youth choir that was invited to sing at the World's Fair in New York City in 1939, and another that sang at the International Youth Conference of the Augustana Synod in Boston in 1953.

NOW IN HER 51st year of service with Bethlehem Lutheran Church, Mrs. Lundahl has been an integral part of the church and its work for almost half of its existence.

She has served under seven pastors in various functions, ranging from teaching, choir directing and visitation, to office administration and editing the now 93-year-old Bethlehem Star.

AT THE weekend celebration in April, events got underway with a testimonial dinner and dance Saturday evening attended by more than 150 persons.

The next day Mrs. Lundahl was honored with a thanksgiving service preceded and followed by receptions. Fiftieth anniversary recognition gifts included a gold cross and silver engraved bowl, along with cash donations.

Preparations for the celebration had been under way for nearly a year and were kept secret from the longtime parish worker.

Wayne Midgets, Legion are Double Winners

Things looked bleak for the Wayne Midgets through the first five innings of Sunday's district championship game.

Then, following a pitching change, the locals exploded for 10 runs in the final two innings to defeat host Coleridge 10-6 and qualify for area play this week at Wisner.

Wayne is now scheduled to face Crofton at 6 p.m. tomorrow (Friday) in Class C, Area A tournament action. Oakland will face the District 4 winner at 8 p.m. in the other bracket. Neligh and Plainview were scheduled to meet in that district's finals.

COLERIDGE ACE Mike Hoffart held Wayne to one run through the first five innings of the title game. Then, he ran out of pitching eligibility due to American Legion limits on the number of innings a player is allowed to pitch.

Meanwhile, Wayne ace Todd Pfeiffer did an equally effective job in the first six innings against Coleridge. He pitched a three-hitter and recorded 10 strikeouts in the seven-inning game.

The hosts capitalized on Wayne mistakes to score two runs, one in the third inning and another in the fourth. In the third inning, a base hit, stolen base and sacrifice moved a Coleridge runner to third base. A throwing error on a two-out grounder resulted in a run.

Wayne tied the game in the top of the fourth. Jeff McCright walked and stole second base. Kevin Maly cracked a base hit and McCright scored on a picturesque play at home plate.

THE WAYNE PLAYER appeared to be facing a sure out as the catcher had the ball in plenty of time. However, McCright dove over the crouching catcher and came down with one hand on the plate. Wayne lost another scoring opportunity as Maly was caught between second and third and was tagged out diving into third.

Coleridge struck again in the bottom of the fourth to regain the lead. Two walks, a fielder's choice and a base hit which was held in the outfield resulted in one run for a 2-1 lead.

The tide turned in the sixth inning and for awhile it appeared Wayne would run away from the hosts. Pfeiffer, Steve Overin, McCright, Todd Schwartz, Maly and R.J. McTeer each scored one run as Wayne opened up a 7-2 advantage.

Overin and McCright had key base hits and pinch hitter Pat Melena drove in a run. After holding Coleridge scoreless in the bottom of the inning, Wayne added three runs to its total in the seventh.

McCright walked, Schwartz was hit by a pitch and Maly drove in both runs. Maly added Wayne's 10th run.

PFEIFFER RETIRED the first two batters in the bottom of the seventh and Wayne was within one out of a 10-2 win. Then, the game shifted. The next two batters reached base on a fielder's choice and error.

Five consecutive walks resulted in four Coleridge runs. Pfeiffer settled down and fanned the next batter for the final out to protect a 10-6 lead.

Wayne scored its 10 runs on five hits and Coleridge scored six runs on three hits. The win advances the locals into area tournament play at Wisner Friday.

Area Tourney Pairings

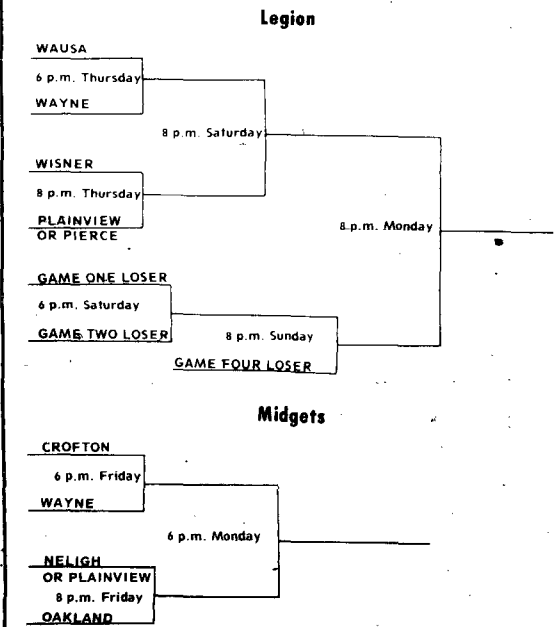

Two Wayne teams will vie for state berths as the Class C, Area A American Legion Midget and Legion Baseball Tournament opens tonight (Thursday) in Wisner.

The Legion division is double elimination and the Midget division is single elimination.

Wayne's Juniors are scheduled to open play against Wausa at 6 p.m. at the Wisner ball park. In the other bracket, Wisner is scheduled to meet the District 16 champion at 8 p.m. Rain-delayed that championship game between Pierce and Plainview. It was rescheduled for last night (Wednesday).

In the Midget division, Wayne will face Crofton at 6 p.m. tomorrow (Friday). At 8 p.m., Oakland is scheduled to meet the District 4 champion. That game, also rain delayed until Wednesday, pitted Neligh against Plainview.

Admission is $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children 12 and under.

Nissen RBI Keys Wayne Win

Kevin Nissen sliced a base hit down the right field line with two outs and bases loaded to bring home Todd Heier for the winning run as Wayne's Legion ripped Emerson 3-2 Saturday in Class C district semifinals at Coleridge.

Bases were loaded in the bottom of the seventh inning when Nissen became the hero by lining a base hit just inside the foul line and over the first baseman. Heier scored easily for the winning run.

THE FINAL RUN kept Wayne's district hopes alive after a brush with elimination in the top of the seventh inning.

After leading 2-0 since the first inning, Wayne saw its advantage slip away in the seventh. Paul Calvert and Pat Henderson drew walks and moved to second and third on a well-executed double steal with two outs. Then, Kirk Utemark rapped a double to bring in both runs.

With the score tied at 2-2 and Emerson picking up momentum, Wayne struck back in the bottom of the final inning. Heier led-off by drawing a walk and Jim Sperry made a fine sacrifice bunt. Heier took second base on the bunt and tried for third as Sperry plowed over Emerson's first baseman who was standing on the bag.

Heier was called safe in a controversial, close call at third base. The next batter, Todd Skokan reached base with a walk and stole second base. With first base open, Emerson elected to issue an intentional walk to Jere Morris.

WITH BASES LOADED, Jeff Allen was called out for stepping out of the batter's box on an attempted bunt. Then, Nissen came through under pressure with two outs to drive in Heier.

Wayne's first two runs came in the bottom of the first inning. Morris drew a walk and Nissen singled moving him to third. With one out, Nissen attempted a balk steal. Emerson's pitcher was called for a balk and both Wayne runners advanced.

With a 1-0 advantage, Tim Pfeiffer hit a sacrifice grounder moving Nissen to third. At that point, Pat McCright took over by ripping a one run single.

Pfeiffer went the distance on the mound and threw a four-hitter while striking out eight batters. He retired 18 of the first 21 batters and fielded five grounders himself. The only balls which left the infield in the first six innings were the three base hits Emerson collected.

Both teams played error-free ball in the exciting second round district contest.

Leading batters for Wayne were Nissen with a double and two singles in four at bats and McCright with two hits in two plate appearances. Morris collected Wayne's only other hit.

The victory moved Wayne into Sunday's district final against Wakefield.

After a scoreless first inning, Wakefield blew the game wide open with three runs in the second, 10 in the third and four in the fourth.

DALE PHIPPS had the biggest hit of the night when he blasted a three-run home run in the third inning. Phipps had two hits, scored two runs and drove in five. Joedy Sherer rapped three base hits and scored two runs. Brian Soderberg was two-for-two and Billy Warren had two hits in three at-bats.

In all, Wakefield out-hit Winside 15 to 3. Wayne Guy, Warren and Mike Clay scored the winners. First three runs in the second. Sherer, Soderberg and Phipps scored two runs each in the third. Guy, Warren, Jeff Coble and Troy Harder each added one run.

In the fourth, Warren, Harder and Mark Starzl scored. Starzl had a triple.

Winside's three hits were collected by Mark Koch, Barry Bowers and Brian Bowers. Phipps pitched the first three innings for Wakefield and Robb Linafelter finished the last two.

The triumph advanced Wakefield into Sunday's finals against Wayne.

Budget

Federal revenue sharing, also not linked to property tax burden, increased from $59,939 to $89,612.

PASS-THROUGH funds, such as those in the trust and agency section of the budget increased from $61,338 to $102,315.

According to Melton, the 1981-82 figure represents a rearrangement in budget presentation that reflects revenue from such things as traffic fines.

Since the city acts as a conduit for those funds, the money will be channeled through the trust and agency accounts rather than inflating the police department budget, explained Melton.

Special assessments dropped under the new budget. The current total is $437,682. The budgeted figure for 1981-82 is $361,322.

The Wayne Municipal Airport Authority fund increased from $52,361 to $56,701.

Revenue from property taxes is expected to be $239,360, compared to the current year's budgeted figure of $220,000.

THE CURRENT budget's actual property tax figure was $201,225. Melton said the difference is in homestead exemptions.

The property tax revenue for Wayne's Airport Authority was set at $23,392, compared to this year's budgeted figure of $18,754. This year's actual figure was $18,300, with homestead exemptions accounting for the dollar difference, according to Melton.

No proposed or suggested tax rate was available during Tuesday night's meeting. Melton said the tax rate is set by the county and that valuation for the entire county had to be completed before Wayne would know the 1981-82 rate.

The new rate will no longer be expressed as a mill levy, but will reflect dollars per $1,000 of assessed valuation, Melton said.

IN OTHER, action, the Council postponed a vote on an ordinance setting up fees, bonds and guidelines for street excavation on public property within the city limits.

Action on the ordinance was postponed after a debate, initiated by Councilman Gary Vopalensky, revealed that a number of Wayne area contractors were complaining of red tape delays for digging permits.

Contractors John Vakoc and Lee Sweeney appeared before the City Council to protest the fees, the bond and the digging permit logjam.

Under the proposed ordinance the city fee structure would require a $2,000 bond for street excavation work, plus $25 for digging in paved streets.

Excavation in alleys and right-of-ways would carry a $10 fee, according to Kloster.

VOPALENSKY questioned the need for the ordinance and characterized it as "unnecessary regulation."

He said his discussions with contractors indicated that such a fee schedule, with the weight of law behind it, would make exception work in the city unattractive to local contractors. Kloster contended that the ordinance was needed to protect public property and the taxpayer from poor-quality workmanship. He said that one or two contractors tend to spoil it for those who perform up to standards.

Vakoc suggested that if the Council was really interested in protecting taxpayers, the city should do the repair work on public property and limit contractors to private property.

KLOSTER SAID the city did not have the staff to handle that kind of workload and that he questioned whether it should get involved in doing that kind of work.

Vern Schulz, city maintenance superintendent, said the city could not do the work with the present staff and equipment setup. He also said it would cost more to have city crews do the work.

That point was challenged by several members of the Council and by Kloster. Schulz explained that while it would probably take less time because of specialty equipment and full crews, the cost of using them would be greater.

Without resolving that issue, the Council continued to debate the merits of a fee and bond schedule until it was clear no consensus could be reached.

Marsh postponed action on the matter until more research could be done, particularly in regard to contractor complaints about an apparent excavation permit bottleneck for work done in the city.

THAT ISSUE came on the heels of an agenda item that involved delinquent special assessments for curb and sidewalk work on Main Street south.

At issue was the concrete work in front of The 4th Jug and King's Carpets. Special assessments were delinquent on both properties as part of the downtown improvement district project.

Ken Jorgensen, owner-operator of The 4th Jug, and Larry King, owner-operator of King's Carpets, both appeared before the City Council to protest lack of action on their complaints about the workmanship in front of their businesses.

Jorgensen told the Council he had filed a formal written protest about the workmanship within the time required by law three years ago.

He also said that he had talked to city officials many times regarding the problem, all to no avail. Jorgensen said his sidewalk was cracked and had sunk at least an inch, in addition to pulling away from the front of his building.

KING SAID the sidewalk was in worse shape than the one it replaced. He said he would rather have the old sidewalk back.

Both said they had the money to pay the special assessments, but had refused to do so on principle.

After consultation with legal counsel, Mayor Wayne Marsh informed the businessmen that the city could not waive payment of the special assessments, but that the Council was aware that there was a problem that needed some consideration.

Both Jorgensen and King agreed to pay the assessments with the understanding that they could work with the Council to come up with some way of financing repairs.

The contractor was liable for up to a year after the work was done, Marsh said. And, he added, the contractor returned to make repairs and correct problems after the year had expired.

BEFORE RECESSING, the Council passed two of three ordinances updating the city's codes on construction of sidewalks and the creation of sidewalk improvement districts.

The third proposed ordinance was introduced, but failed to survive a vote suspending the statutory three consecutive readings rule.

That ordinance, requiring sidewalks in certain zoning districts, will be read and reconsidered at the next Council meeting.

An initial vote on the ordinance passed with opposition from Vopalensky only. However, Councilman Darrell Heier joined Vopalensky in defeating the suspension of the triple read rule.

The Council also passed an ordinance updating city codes on the establishment of group homes in the municipality and approved the re-establishment of stop signs at 12th and Pearl streets.

Kloster told the Council that the Windmill Restaurant had received approval for a Class C liquor license.

Water

general obligation funding for the entire project, not one City Council member challenged the major property owner's role in the organized protest.

THE DEBATE was not without surprises, however, particularly when a majority of those attending the hearing contended that they had no water-pressure problems in Roosevelt Park.

That contention alone, which changed several times through the course of the debate, prompted Darrell Heier, elected as a councilman at large, to question the group closely regarding the area's water delivery system.

And, though Russell directed several questions regarding the area's representation on the City Council to Councilman James Craun, the 1st Ward representative did not respond. Nor did he join the debate at any point.

Mayor Wayne Marsh opened the hearing with the introduction of Dennis Hirschbruner of Bruce Gilmore & Associates, the city's engineering consultants. Hirschbruner provided the residents with an overview of the proposed $36,000 project.

STARTED ABOUT a year ago when the city conducted a citywide test of its water delivery system, including fire hydrant checks, the Roosevelt area project soon received "fairly high priority," the engineer said.

Water pressure for domestic use was a main concern, as was fire protection, according to Hirschbruner.

The city created the water district and, in the process of moving toward upgrading what was salvageable and installing lines that did not exist, the controversy over special assessment vs. general obligation stalled the project.

As part of a massive citywide water delivery system upgrading plan, the city moved ahead on three other projects — Sherman Street, Ninth Street and Fairground Avenue — and the digging of a new well on the east side.

HIRSCHBRUNER explained that some sections of the Roosevelt Park area are served by 4-inch, dead-end mains.

He also said the district needed to be looped into the citywide system — a linkage that would not only improve water pressure for domestic use, but also enable the city to deliver a high volume of water for emergency fire protection without significant pressure loss to households.

After the project was stalled, engineers redesigned the proposed improvements and recreated the district on the strength of information that property owners there wanted an upgraded delivery system.

The crux of the matter, according to City Administrator Phil Kloster, was not upgrading the system but the controversy over how it would be financed — special assessments to property owners benefiting from the improvements or general obligation revenues that would spread the cost of the project over the citywide personal property tax base.

THE REDESIGNED project now involves a proposal to replace the 4-inch line with 8-inch line on Windom Street south from Fairground Avenue to Folk Street and continue the line — where none exists — to Connable Street.

The proposal calls for a new 8-inch line on Connable to Nebraska Street south, and then up Nebraska Street to Fairground Avenue.

The line in Folk Street, between Windom and Nebraska streets, would stay with the city reconnecting it to the new north-south lines.

With the Fairground Avenue line part of another project, the City Council has proposed that general obligation funds would underwrite the cost of the new line down Windom Street from the old railroad right-of-way to Folk Street.

Also, with the Folk Street line staying, the city would agree to use general obligation financing for the Connable Street line.

THE SPECIAL assessment funding would underwrite the new line on Windom from Folk Street to Connable Street.

And, special assessments would be used for the new line from Connable Street north to Fairground Avenue, according to Hirschbruner.

When completed, the upgraded lines and new lines would form a loop that would tap into the citywide system as it passes Roosevelt Park on Fairground Avenue.

Property owners would face frontage foot special assessments on their lots, based on a north-south measurement.

Hirschbruner presented the City Council and the property owners with three special assessment alternatives.

The first — and least costly — plan presented by the consultant involved a special assessments schedule that would cost property owners about $8.55 per frontage foot for the improvements.

THAT SCHEDULE would mean $855 for a 100-foot lot with the cost spread over a number of years (five, 10 or 15 years, for instance) at the discretion of the City Council.

A second special assessment schedule, and an alternative available to the City Council, would be to set the per-foot cost on the north half of the Windom Street section (between Fairground and Folk) at $3.91.

Under that proposal, everyone else in the district would be assessed $10.75 per front foot.

And, a third alternative outlined by Hirschbruner would make half the cost of the 8-inch line from Fairground to Folk and half the cost of the Connable Street line general obligation. Special assessments under the third plan would then be $10.13 per frontage foot for every property owner in the district.

Hirschbruner said the first schedule ($8.55 per frontage foot) would be his recommendation.

PRESSED TIME and time again to explain the city's proposal to split the costs between general obligation and special assessment, rather than total general obligation, Hirschbruner repeatedly explained that the project involved special benefits, including the addition of lines.

At one point toward the end of the hearing, Ken Swartz capitalized the theory behind special assessments and explained, with the help of a map of the area projected on a screen, the flip side of the coin — that property owners in subdivisions pay (in a pass-along price or in special assessments) the cost of city services, such as water.

Both he and Mayor Marsh explained and re-explained that the new lines subject to special assessment in Roosevelt Park should not be part of the tax burden carried by city residents who would receive no benefit from the project.

SEVERAL PROPERTY owners, including Russell, contended that the benefits to Roosevelt Park were no different than those of several other projects under construction in the city.

Specific reference was made to the Sherman Street project, which is under construction to upgrade the city's delivery system loop for fire protection purposes, not domestic water delivery.

When questioned, neither Russell nor any other property owner at the meeting could come up with an example to prove the Sherman Street contention.

The informal hearing was interrupted for an advertised 8 p.m. public hearing on the city's proposed budget for the 1981-82 fiscal year.

But, within minutes, the City Council members and Roosevelt Park property owners were back at it with questions and answers on the proposal.

City Council members are expected to act on the proposal — either to abandon the project or approve it — during the next meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 11.

Top Lobbying Spenders Score Important Victories

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association
The Nebraska Railroad Association and the city of Omaha might seem like an unlikely pair. But during the first half of 1981 at least, they had something very much in common.

The state's largest city and the railroad association each spent more than $17,000 on legislative lobbying, making them the top two spenders among lobbyists.

At the end of the 1981 legislative session, which lasted 90 working days, reports filed with the Clerk of the Legislature showed more than 300 lobbyists had recorded $770,332 in lobbying expenses. That figure was a rebounding 34 percent higher than the reported lobbying expenses for the 1979 90-day session, and 29 percent more than the amount spent for the 60-day 1980 session.

ALTHOUGH lobbyists' successes and defeats cannot be measured simply by reviewing expenditures, it is known that the top two spenders scored victories in areas that were deemed important to them. And both victories involved taxes.

The city of Omaha, which reported 1981 lobbying expenses of $17,334, won permanent extension of its city sales tax authority. Omaha, unlike other cities in the state, is allowed to levy an extra half cent on top of the city's 1 percent sales tax.

The railroad association, recording 1981 expenditures of $17,664, worked hard for passage of several bills, including the successful train-mile tax package.

The victorious legislation imposes a train-mile tax to raise money for overpasses and underpasses, a program designed to ease rail crossing congestion brought on by increased train traffic. The railroads opted for the train-mile tax over the previously enacted ton-mile tax, which was replaced by the new, railroad-backed legislation.

The list of lobbyists seems endless, with a wide range of special interest groups represented. Among them is the University of Nebraska, the state agency that receives the largest chunk of the state general fund allocation.

The university emerged as the sixth highest spender during the 1981 session, reporting lobbying expenditures of $13,019.

PROBABLY ALL state senators, except maybe Ernest Chambers of Omaha, are lobbied on one issue or another during the course of a legislative session. Chambers must be singled out because the Omaha lawmaker, frequently critical of lobbying, claims to have never been a "dupe" or "paw" of a lobbyist.

That's not to say other senators are dupes or pawns, but anyone who has closely watched senators in action and lobbyists at work realizes some senators are more likely to be influenced by lobbying efforts. Chambers is, however, clearly an exception.

For better or worse, the Omaha lawmaker more often can be heard accusing lobbyists of undue pressure than he can be seen talking to a lobbyist. In fact, Chambers has been known to single out lobbyists by name during legislative debate on an issue that he believes has become clouded by special interest groups and their attempt to influence or shape legislation.

But while Chambers is probably correct when he says some lobbyists do, in fact, wield great power over some senators or issues, the lobbyist does serve an important role in lawmaking.

SOME ISSUES, especially those raised for the first time, might be foreign to new and veteran senators alike. The astute lobbyist can be invaluable in educating lawmakers, enabling them to make informed decisions that otherwise might have been impossible.

So the powerful or influential lobbyist has a purpose in lawmaking, just as any special interest group or constituent does who takes the time to express his views.

And without the expression of those views, laws might be shaped on the basis of only the beliefs of 49 senators. That would be too few, and the citizens of Nebraska would not be well served.

DECAMP TO ISRAEL — State Senator John DeCamp has been overseas many times for many reasons. Now, amid claims he is a bigot, an anti-Jew and anti-Semitic, he is planning a trip to Israel.

DeCamp has been criticized for supporting W.A. Curry, a Columbus agribusinessman advocating anti-Zionist views.

The criticism has prompted DeCamp to respond in several ways, including guest opinions on several newspaper's editorial pages.

The Neligh lawmaker recently told a news conference that Richard Fellman, former state senator and Douglas County Board member, suggested DeCamp visit Israel, and he agreed. Fellman also suggested DeCamp meet with Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., who Curry said favored Israel's interest over those of the United States.

DECAMP SAID Fellman, acting as a spokesman for the Jewish community, suggested DeCamp retract his statements to avoid being "forever labeled as a bigot." DeCamp refused, and in his newspaper comments raised First Amendment-free speech issues and blasted efforts to stifle legitimate debate.

DeCamp did not indicate when he would travel to Israel, but he did say he planned to pay for the trip with his own money.

It will be interesting to hear what he has to say when he returns from Israel, and whether the trip will lessen the backlash DeCamp has received for supporting Curry.

It's embarrassing
Wayne's 100 years old this year and there'll be no official celebration
It's too late in the year to get a shoot em up, skyrockets at night, good time in the old town celebration together
No one seems to know — for sure anyway — how the anniversary date got by the Wayne County Historical Society, the Wayne Chamber of Commerce and a host of other history wavers — but it did
Perhaps even more unfortunate is that the discovery comes at a time when the historical society is ever so hard at work with the Wayne County History book — a project that's been over a year in the making
The combination of a centennial celebration and new county history book would have set the stage for a blow out that could have rivaled any in northeast Nebraska
But that is not to be
And, lest the mistake somehow take away from the efforts of the historical society, it is important to remember that a history book in the hand is better than a bash in the woods
No one could possibly measure the countless hours or labor and concern spent getting the 'book of a thousand authors' to press
And, historical society members — those volunteers and those drafters — deserve a salute for sticking with a project that may be the only one time memorabilia of an otherwise unmarked centennial this year
Although no official decision has been made regarding the Wayne centennial celebration, it looks as if the county historical society is favoring 1984 (an Orwellian date, to be sure) for the 100th birthday bash
That's 100 years after the date the four year old town was officially incorporated — a date seldom, if ever, used by communities celebrating centennials
Another date suggested by some is 1983. That's 100 years after the first courthouse was built in Wayne. That's two years away
And, of course, there's always 1982. That's 100 years after the year Wayne was officially designated the county seat. That's next year
The point is, conceding that this year offers no time for such things, someone should select a date before 1984 comes and goes
Under the circumstances, everyone is looking to blame everyone else. And in that less than constructive process, the town could bicker while the bash burns
Once the date is set, all the resources that can be mustered should go toward making that celebration a rousing, rockets red glare rendezvous with history
And, just as a reminder, Wayne's bicentennial is in 2081. Mark your calendar

Conservative Nebraska

Figures just released by the statistical section of the Nebraska Energy Office show that the state has exceeded the goals set for energy conservation for 1980 by a wide margin.

When the Nebraska Energy Conservation Plan was written in 1976, the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) later to become part of the Department of Energy) predicted that Nebraska's energy use in 1980 would total 412 trillion BTU's from all sources.

This figure was based on the assumption that we would have continued to use more and more energy at rates prevailing before adopting any conservation measures.

The energy office has now completed its work of compiling preliminary estimates of 1980 consumption. The results are better than expected — 1980 total consumption was 538 trillion BTU's, down 12 percent from the 190 FEA estimate.

The target set in 1976 was a reduction of 7.27 percent which was then believed to be an ambitious project.

The reduction in total energy consumed was accomplished in spite of an increase of 1.5 percent in population and a 3 to 4 percent growth in economic activity. The conservation goal was exceeded by almost 5 percentage points.

The 1980 Nebraska data show that there has been a sharp increase in the use of coal, considered to be consistent with our national goal of shifting from imported oil to domestic coal. The figures also show reductions in the use of gasoline and propane. Along with the increase in use of coal, the use of electricity is increasing.

The trends seem to be to substitute electricity for oil products wherever possible.

State Employees Prove It

'More Can Be Done With Less'

"We who are employees of the state of Nebraska have proved you can do more with less.

"In the past year the state has opened a new prison facility, a veteran's home in Douglas County and state office buildings in Omaha and Scottsbluff. And yet, as of June 30, 1981 the state had 664 fewer employees than on the same day in 1980.

"It was on June 30, 1980 that I ordered a freeze on hiring employees for agencies under the governor's direction. I asked the independent boards and commissions that operate many of the state agencies to cooperate with the order.

"UNDER THE freeze, the heads of agencies that report to the governor couldn't hire, anyone — not even replacements — unless the agency directors obtained written permission from me.

"A few state senators criticized the move, claiming that essential services couldn't be delivered under the plan, even though I exempted from the freeze all positions of people responsible for health care or those who were guarding prisons and the mentally ill.

governor charley thone

intensive manner

"WE HAVE now lifted the freeze. In its place each agency responsible to the governor is required to submit a plan as to what its staffing would be on June 30, 1982. In general, the agencies are expected to make further employee cuts in the next year. Since legal requirements will require several of the agencies to grow somewhat in the next year, I am requiring the remainder of the agencies to make deeper personnel cuts to compensate.

"The agencies that are directly responsible to the governor achieved about 85 percent of the 664 full-time equivalent personnel reduction. The other 15 percent was made in agencies that are administered by independent boards and commissions. The employment figures do not include those of the University of Nebraska and the state colleges, which are governed by their own boards.

"Overall, state employees are doing a better job than ever of providing services to Nebraskans and we're doing it with less employees. My goal is to continue that reduction in the coming year."

Dairymen In Dither Over Milk

By M.M. Van Kirk
Nebraska Farm Bureau

One of many tough decisions concerning the 1981 Farm Bill on which Congress has been laboring this summer is what to do about the dairy price support program, a subject which always brings a flurry of arguments about the level at which milk prices are to be maintained.

Those who argue for 90 or 100 percent of parity support are seemingly able to ignore the question about what happens when government purchases reach such unmanageable levels that cutbacks simply have to be made — with an accompanying drop in market prices. The nation is close to that situation right now.

IN THE FIRST five months of this year, Commodity Credit Corporation purchases of milk products were up 71 percent from the same period in 1980. For the first 8 months of the current marketing year, Commodity Credit purchases were up 3.9 billion pounds milk equivalent and it is estimated that purchases for the 1980-81 marketing year will total about 13 billion pounds, setting a record high.

Despite a buildup in government dairy product holdings last year and the decline in per capita milk consumption which has been going on for a number of years, milk production increased last year. That's why there are a number of proposals aimed at encouraging milk producers to reduce their production.

The Dairy Division of the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service has published a booklet explaining the Federal Milk Marketing Order Program, a system that is little understood by the general public. During 1979, about 116,400 U.S. farmers delivered milk to handlers regulated by 47 federal milk marketing orders which define the terms under which handlers of milk in a specific market purchase from dairy farmers.

The orders are legal instruments designed to promote orderly marketing, to maintain steady, dependable markets, and to help prevent needless fluctuations in price.

CURRENT LEGAL basis dates back to the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 and its predecessors, the Agricultural Adjustment Acts of 1935 and 1933. Before that, there were attempts through cooperative associations to stabilize the price of milk but those early attempts broke down completely when the Depression came and cut-throat competition began destroying milk producers.

The characteristics of milk cause an inherent instability in milk marketing and contribute to producers' bargaining difficulties. Milk is bulky and perishable and must be moved quickly to market.

Cows have to be milked twice a day, every day of the year and dairy farmers must continue to ship their milk to market even when market prices are not satisfactory.

Milk production varies widely with the seasons. Cows produce more milk in the spring and less in the fall. Milk cannot be stored to balance the peaks and troughs of supply. The industry, therefore, must continually produce an over-supply or reserve to make sure that there will be enough fluid milk at all times for the day-to-day needs of consumers.

RESERVE MILK that is not needed for fluid use is manufactured into dairy products — cheese, butter, non-fat dry milk, etc. That's where government support purchases enter the picture.

Milk problems are not peculiar to the United States. The European Common Market countries, where dairying is major and strongly government supported, regularly build up mountains of butter and other by-products that they must periodically "unload." Some of their surpluses go into animal feeds and compete with other feed protein sources such as soybeans.

Nebraska is not a big dairying state like Minnesota or Wisconsin so its farmers and ranchers have a more balanced outlook on dairy support legislation. A strong dairy industry is essential to the good health of the nation and must be maintained. But at the same time there must be a practical balance between production and consumption.

"How much taxpayer support is too much or too little?" That's the historic question in the writing of all farm bills.

4-Hers Scout for Garden Bugs

Damage a Dead Giveaway for Insect Pests

By Randall Howell

Plant damage can be a dead giveaway when it comes to identifying insect pests in the garden.

That's what a group of Wayne County 4-H Club members are learning during this summer's gardening season.

In an only one of its kind in Nebraska 4-H project, five Wayne club members have been studying garden insect identification and control with the help of Don Spitzke, Wayne County extension agent.

THE YOUNGSTERS - Stuart and Steve Rethwisch, Jassi and Vini Johar and Blaine Johs - wrote their own 4-H garden insect scouting program for 1981 after a 1980 start.

And, since early June, the 4-H five have been scouting garden insect damage, gathering weather related data, identifying the insect pests and determining control methods.

Project results for the 4-H Entomology Club members will be on display during the Wayne County Fair, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 6-9.

Lessons learned during the project could go a long way toward helping the general public identify and control garden insects, according to Spitzke.

"WHAT THE gardener is looking for is a problem," said Spitzke, who explained that insect inspections should start at a once per week level - particularly through June and July.

If problems such as wilted leaves, stunted growth, off-color leaves, or holes and chunks left in foliage are discernible in an overview inspection, the gardener must take a closer look.

The "overview inspection" is little more than an eyeball survey of the garden plants, according to Spitzke. "It's an attempt to get an overall impression of how the garden is doing," he added.

Of course, if the garden looks good, a closer inspection could identify some developing problems, he continued.

A CLOSER inspection, according to Spitzke, involves examining at least two out of every 10 plants for damage.

Weather data is important, according to the 4-Hers, because wind, low rainfall or excessive heat can cause plant damage. So, with the weather conditions in mind, vegetable plants need closer scrutiny.

Gardeners must examine for leaf and stem damage, plant discoloration (Aphids, for instance, suck the juices from plants causing discoloration), and general plant health.

"If, on closer examination, everything looks fine, forget about it," Spitzke said. "Recheck the plants in another three or four days."

HOWEVER, if the examination was thorough and the vegetable plants did not look right, the inspection schedule must be stepped up.

According to Spitzke, gardeners must then recheck the garden plants "every day or so." He said the discovered damage could be weather related or insect related.

If weather related damage can be eliminated, within reason, the next step, according to Spitzke, is to identify the damage - such as holes chewed in leaves.

"The damage will identify the insect," Spitzke said. "Too many gardeners waste all kinds of time trying to identify insects when they should be identifying the damage. That damage will lead them to the insect."

ONCE THE damage is identified, Spitzke recommends that the gardener obtain a copy of "Insect Control Recommendations for Vegetables in the Home Garden," a 22 page, notebook size booklet published by the Cooperative Extension Service, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The publication, which matches the plant damage to the culprit most likely to cause it and suggests control timing and methods, is available free at county extension offices.

Included in the publication are sketches of a number of the most common garden insect pests to aid gardeners on identification.

The last few pages of the booklet offer a handy chart with guidelines on chemical and natural insect control measures, including chemical mixing proportions, application timetables and harvesting restrictions.

"SOMETIMES the suspected insects are not found, but the damage is apparent," explained Spitzke.

"Once the damage is identified, a control program can begin without needless time wasted on an insect chase that may end up with control measures for the wrong insect or a helpful insect, such as the lady bird beetle (the common aphid-eating ladybug)," he said.

For instance, if the examination turns up damage to cabbage plants and the visible result is holes chewed in the leaves, then the booklet's identification table will steer the gardener to the likely insect pest.

Once the pest is identified, according to Spitzke, another section in the booklet outlines the stages of insect growth, timing for effective control methods and type of methods gardeners can use.

FOR THE home gardener who wants to be prepared, Spitzke recommends four basic chemicals be on the garden shelf.

They are: Sevin 50% WP (wettable powder); Diazinon 25% EC (emulsifiable concentrate); Sevin Dust; and either Dipel or Thiodan or Blotrol.

"With those four chemicals, they (the gardener) can control almost all insects," Spitzke said.

According to the county agent, an insect control rule of thumb holds that sprays are more effective than dusts. "Dusts are easier to use," he said. "But, they are just not as effective."

He explained that rainfall will dilute the effect of sprays and dusts. "Furthermore, chemicals are poisons and should be treated with respect," the county agent added.

"ALWAYS follow directions on the container or in a garden booklet," he said. "Most (insect-control chemicals) can be stored in a cool, dry place that does not freeze, but they must be stored out of the reach of children."

Spitzke said that the best way to store garden insect chemicals is to keep them in the original containers. That way, he explained, the directions are right there and no one is likely to mistake the chemical for something else.

"Gardeners should not use farm chemicals to solve garden insect problems," Spitzke warned. "Chemicals should not be used unless they are clearly recommended for garden use."

He said most garden chemicals are readily available in drug stores and department stores.

SPITZKE SAID that Dipel may be the most difficult to obtain. "It is very effective. It is a bacteria and very safe to use, but only kills the caterpillar-type insect," he said.

Gardeners, Spitzke said, need to know that there generally is a waiting period between chemical application and the dinner table.

"When using chemicals, always thoroughly wash the vegetables," he said. "Also, tear away the outer leaves on cabbage and lettuce."

Spitzke urged caution on those gardeners who have a habit of eating vegetables "right off the vine" after chemical use.

"In fact, I suggest that gardeners shouldn't use chemicals unless it is absolutely necessary...don't just spray and dust every few days," he added.

THE COUNTY agent said that those gardeners opposed to the use of chemicals, often can find an alternative.

Certification Deadline Nears

Seed producers planning to certify seed fields of soybeans are reminded of the Aug. 1 deadline for submitting application for field inspection and certification, according to the Nebraska Crop Improvement Association.

Top Flock Show Scheduled

The 45th annual Nebraska "Top of the Flock" Sheep Show and Sale will be held Aug. 1 at the Nebraska State Fairgrounds in Lincoln, according to Dr. Ted Doane, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension sheep specialist.

More than 200 sheep entries are expected for the event sponsored by the Nebraska Registered Sheep Breeders Association. The sale is the longest continuous sheep sale in the United States, said Doane, secretary of the organization.

"The sale provides an opportunity for producers to come to a central location and purchase quality rams and ewes with good genetic potential," he said. "All yearling rams will be sold as guaranteed breeders," he added.

The show will begin at 9 a.m. and the sale will follow at 1 p.m. with Rollie Rosenboom of Clifton, Ill., serving as judge and auctioneer.

Yearling rams and ewes and ram lambs and ewe lambs of at least five sheep breeds will be shown. Currently entered are 113 Suffolks, 59 Hampshires, 36 Dorsets, 27 Corriedales and two Columbias. A top of the flock ram will be selected.

Cattle on Feed Down 1%

Cattle and calves on feed July 1 for slaughter market in the 23 agricultural states totaled 9.57 million head, 1 percent below a year earlier and 7 percent less than two years ago.

This is the smallest July 1 number on feed since 1975. For both steers and heifers, lighter weight groups are considerably lower than last year, while the heavier weight groups are generally showing increased numbers on feed.

Placements during the April-June quarter totaled 5.95 million, 6 percent above the same quarter last year but 3 percent below the comparable period in 1979. Other disappearance of 560,000 head leaves net placements of 5.39 million. Marketings of fed cattle for slaughter during April-June totaled 5.59 million, down 1 percent from the same quarter last year and 9 percent below April-June 1979. Marketings for the April-June 1981 quarterly period were the lowest since 1975.

The July 1, 1981 cattle on feed inventory included 6.20 million steers and heifer calves, down 1 percent from a year ago and 9 percent from two years ago. Steers and steer calves represented 65 percent of the total July 1 number on feed in both 1981 and 1980. Heifers and heifer calves totaled 3.33 million, 2 percent above a year earlier but 3 percent below July 1, 1979.

Cattle feeders expect to market 6.14 million head during the July-September quarter of 1981. This would be 7 percent more than third quarter marketings in 1980 and 3 percent above 1979.

Association Lends $31 Million

The Federal Land Bank Association of Norfolk made 284 loans totaling over $31 million to farmers and ranchers during the first half of 1981, according to Calvin Allyn, association president.

Allyn said that while the money is loaned to farmers, local communities benefit from the Land Bank serving as a pipeline to bring in outside capital. He said that others benefit when farmers put the money in circulation in the local area.

Of the total amount of money loaned, 38 percent was used to buy land, 25 percent to refinance real estate debt, 21 percent to pay debts, and 9 percent to make improvements.

Eighteen percent of the loans went to farmers under the age of 35, according to Allyn. He also reported that 21 percent went to people between the ages of 35 and 45, 34 percent to people 45 to 55, and 27 percent to people age 55 or older.

The Federal Land Bank Association of Norfolk is a farmer owned cooperative and gets its lending funds through the sale of bonds on the nation's money markets.

The Federal Land Bank Association of Norfolk makes long term loans to farmers and ranchers in Antelope, Boyd, Burr, Cedar, Cumming, Garfield, Holt, Knox, Madison, Pierce, Stanton, Wayne and Wheeler counties.

REFCO Unveils Hog Program

REFCO Foods Ltd., a major Chicago-based livestock marketing service, has unveiled a comprehensive forward hog contracting program.

The new program allows hog farmers to "pre-sell" their production by locking in a price today for hogs that will not be ready to go to market for several months. The program can help assure hog producers a reasonable rate of return on their production and can allow them to plan and market production more efficiently and more profitably.

While forward contracting is a common practice in the grain industry, it is not as widespread in the livestock industry.

REFCO traders and representatives from Chicago, Memphis and Sioux City presented the new program at Sioux City last week.

Bereuter Opposes Sale of Reserves

Congressman Doug Bereuter has expressed strong opposition to the sale of government-owned grain reserves at a time when "many of our producers are poised on the verge of economic ruin."

In a letter to David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, Bereuter said any such sales would depress commodity markets and be disastrous for farmers "who face exorbitant production costs, particularly for credit and fuel and agricultural chemicals."

Bereuter said his letter was prompted by reports that the Office of Management and Budget is pressuring the Department of Agriculture to sell nearly 250 million bushels of Commodity Credit Corporation corn purchased by the Carter Administration in the wake of the Soviet grain embargo.

"I oppose any such sales until such time as the market price of commodities is at a level which will ensure our agricultural producers a fair return on their investment and labor," he said.

Animal Exposition Set For September

The 32nd annual Meat Animal Exposition will be held Sunday, Sept. 13, and Monday, Sept. 14, at the Norfolk Livestock Market in Norfolk, according to Rod Zwygart, Chairman of this year's show.

The Ag Economics Council of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce sponsors this event each year. The judge for this year's show will be Rod Ogren of Marcus, Iowa.

A MAJOR RULE change this year is that the grand and reserve grand champion steer and heifer will be required to sell.

The judging of the market beef show will begin at 8:30 a.m. on Monday. The market beef show will be divided by weight rather than breed.

A fee of $4 will be charged per entry. This fee is to cover cost of bedding, yardage and hay and will be paid when checking in at the show.

The Norfolk Livestock Market on Sunday.

A showmanship contest will again be held in conjunction with the market beef show and the finals will be held at about 3 p.m. on Monday afternoon.

LOTS OF FIVE Fat Cattle Show and Sale will be a feature of this year's show. Judging of the Lots of Five will be at 3 p.m. on Monday, followed by their sale at 6 p.m.

A carcass contest will again be held. The cattle will be killed by Dugaide Packing and the carcass will be available for viewing from 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday.

Show rules and regulations, as well as entry blanks will be available from your county agent or through your v.u.g. instructor, or you may pick up entry cards from the Norfolk Livestock Market or the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce office.

PRUNE SHADE TREES - Summer pruning of shade trees is best done in late winter because less sap will flow from pruning cuts.

In summer you're better off not pruning shade trees because the tree is in full foliage.

When you prune shade trees have a definite purpose in mind. Unless you're pruning to obtain a desired form, try to follow the natural shape of the tree.

Don't try to cut too much off at once. Pruning back more than over several seasons. Pruning too often will cause a tree to be under stress.

When pruning back to large branches, make the final cut in several cuts as nearby bushes are possible. Shear the top and bottom to explain for attack of diseases and decay.

WATERING TREES - Trees need a lot of water during these dry and hot days. For a tree to remain alive and well requires as much as 300 gallons of water a day.

A tree can recuperate from hot weather if it's watered with an amount in addition to that needed by the lawn under it. A good deep watering once a week should maintain a tree's needs.

If the soil does not take in water adequately by sprinkler or soaking, a soil needle or root feeder attachment for the garden hose is recommended for applying water at a depth of 12 to 24 inches.

BINDWEED IN LAWN - Use 2.4 D herbicide until October to do it. Let the bindweed go until there is a good top growth to take in the chemical and move it to the root system.

CONTROL OF ANTS - Sprays of boric acid, usually only active when ants are building nests. Use a mixture of one tablespoon Malathion to one gallon of water. It may take a couple of treatments to get rid of the ants. If the entire lawn is infested, use Malathion or Dieldrin.

The Great "Don't wait. Do it now" Valley Summer Sale.

There will never be a better time.

Do it now. This summer. Because even if you won't turn it on until next spring, purchasing a Valley irrigation system now makes a whole lot of sense. Here's why. Buying now allows you to take your investment tax credit and depreciation this year. It also means that your system will be up and ready next spring while others are still waiting. The sooner you do it, the more you'll save.

Cultural Revolution

Chinese Ag Scientists Catch Up

China has more scientists working in ag meteorology in Peking than the U.S. has in the 50 states together, but the Chinese have a lot of catching up to do as a result of the Cultural Revolution.

That's the assessment of a University of Nebraska ag meteorologist who was invited by Peking University to spend a month in China giving lectures and visiting research sites.

Dr. Norman Rosenberg, director of the NU Center for Agricultural Meteorology and Climatology, lectured in Peking, Nanjing, Shanghai and Lanchow in May and June and explored possible U.S.-China joint research projects.

"THE CHINESE have a good theoretical understanding of agricultural meteorology but they lack many of the practical skills in experimentation," he said. "They are learning to conduct meteorological experiments on their own by trial and error and are strongly motivated to learn from others."

Rosenberg gave lectures on ag meteorology in the U.S. water use efficiency in agricultural production, possible impacts of the increasing carbon dioxide concentration in the atmosphere, and the effects of hot, dry winds on crop water demand and photosynthesis.

Much of China's experimental ag meteorology is very basic, he said, and there's much to be learned from the 17 or 18 U.S. ag meteorologists. Such research as the Cultural Revolution represented the major university and scientific research in that only now is the new crop scientists coming along.

From the scientific literature, it's apparent that the Chinese want to do more work up into the mid- and high latitudes. The Cultural Revolution began in 1966 and the 12 years of chaos by the revolution has meant that only now is the new crop scientists coming along.

THE YOUNGEST scientists with any experience and skill are in their mid-20s while leadership now in their 70s. These people are not allowed to retire since there is no one ready to replace them, Rosenberg noted.

Small, field, agriculture predominates in China, he said, with complex rotations designed to yield up to three crops a year. Rosenberg arrived in China in mid-May and saw wheat plots harvested and plowed, flooded, then replanted with nursery rice within a week. A second rice crop would follow in the same plot, he said, but low fall temperatures may be a problem for the second rice crop.

Because of the problem of having enough season to handle three crops, the Chinese are intensely interested in microclimate effects, such as ways to capture the most sunshine, to warm the soil quickly in the spring and to protect plants from low temperatures. Because intercropping is popular, too, the Chinese scientists are interested in the influence of each crop on its neighbors, he said. "They may be pushing it (multiple cropping) too far, because soil physical conditions tend to deteriorate especially when paddy rice is grown. Then it becomes necessary to plant a green manure crop to aid recovery," he noted.

A CHINESE SCIENTIST stands in front of a sand dune which has been treated to stop further movement. Straw is driven into the dune in a checkerboard pattern and shrubs and other vegetation are planted in the squares. Some of the plantings may be irrigated for a few years to aid establishment. The Chinese believe that much of their desert areas were made by man's abuse and can be reclaimed.

HOWEVER, the Chinese systems of intercropping and "relay cropping" could become important in the United States at some point because the potential production is great and the energy usage is low, he said. Chinese agricultural areas resemble botanical gardens with many different kinds of crops grown in one area, he said. The Chinese make great use of greenhouses and even build temporary ones in the field. A dirt wall is constructed as the north side of the greenhouse, curved bamboo sticks are used for the frame supports and plastic is rolled over the sticks to make an inexpensive greenhouse.

The Chinese are very interested in windbreaks and the Center for Ag Meteorology and Climatology's research in that area, he said. "The Chinese make good use of windbreaks to shelter large areas and grow crops within the enclosure." He visited one 2,000 acre area of level sand dunes on the banks of the Yellow River which was surrounded by windbreaks and subdivided by intermediate shelterbelts. Without these shelterbelts, the dunes would overrun the farmed area or the plants would be killed by "sand blasting."

Research on reflectants also was of interest to his hosts,

Rosenberg said. In recent research, plants are coated with a material such as white clay to reduce the heat load on the plant. This leads to a decrease in water use. China has substantial desert areas, he noted.

CHINESE research with stabilization of sand dunes was particularly interesting to Rosenberg. "They believe that much of their desert areas were made by man's abuse of the land" and that these areas can be reclaimed.

To stop further movement of the dunes, straw is driven into the sand in a checkerboard pattern. Thousands of acres have already been treated this way, he said. Shrubs and other vegetation are planted into the checkerboard and some of the plantings may be irrigated for a few years to aid establishment. After that, it is hoped that changes in the soil will occur from the addition of organic matter and residues, Rosenberg explained.

Rosenberg learned that his book, "Microclimate, the Biological Environment" is widely used in China. All the scientists he met in China claimed to have read the book, he said, but he never saw a copy of it. When he inquired, he discovered that one copy of the book had been purchased, then photocopied and distributed to about 3,000 scientists.

The Chinese disregard for copyrights and patents applies also to instrumentation, Rosenberg noted. "Chinese instrumentation of almost every kind is based on copies of Western or Russian or Japanese equipment. They simply get hold of an example, tear it apart and copy it, generally in large numbers. This practice and attitude is bound to change as the Chinese take their place among the leaders and innovators of science," he said.

While learning about Chinese crop production, Rosenberg also acquainted his hosts with American agriculture. In the country where 80 percent of the people are involved with food production, slides of a center pivot irrigation system and discussion of how it works and what it costs brought incredulous looks, he said.

Bugs

"For instance, with the tomato horn worm, just pull them off and drop them into a can, or knock them off the plants into a can," he said.

"A can buried several inches in the soil around a plant is an effective barrier to cutworms," he added.

Spitze said that Dipel is often a workable alternative since it is not a chemical, but a bacteria. He noted that more and more hybrid vegetables are developed with a resistance to insect pests, so seed selection is important. And, in addition to picking the insects off the plants, garden crop rotation often helps reduce the problem, he explained.

Also, he added, destroying the insect infested garden refuse in the fall can help.

"OF COURSE, gardeners who are unwilling to use any chemicals may have to accept lower yields and poorer quality vegetables," he added.

Common household liquid detergent and water (1 tbsp per gallon) often does the job and sticks to plants better. And,

Rotenone, a natural substance made out of plants, is another alternative, as is knocking them off with hard stream water.

Most insects are only active when it is warm, which means the middle of the day, according to the county agent. Cutworms, an exception, work at night.

Chemical applications should be made at the height of the insect daily activity, he continued.

"Grasshoppers are one of the insects that move in from outside areas," Spitze said. "So, a barrier — a few feet wide — around the garden can be effective. Since the chemical is applied in the barrier strip and not on the vegetable plants, the strength of the mixture can be increased."

Grasshoppers, he said, are easy to kill when small, but extremely difficult to control when full grown.

SPITZE reminded gardeners that insecticides are not herbicides and will not kill plants if properly used.

He also warned that if the garden scouting does not turn up the insect, even though there is damage, it could mean that the pests have moved on to another location.

"Keep checking to see if the damage gets worse," he said. "Leaves must be examined both on the topside and the underside and stems must be examined from top to bottom."

Spitze said gardeners should not discount the possibility of disease. "Disease is a big factor in garden vegetable damage. The inability of a gardener to find an insect causing damage may mean that the gardener has a disease problem," he said.

Camp Attracts 361 Students

Sound of Music Fills Wayne State

The sound of music, both vocal and instrumental, is filling the air around one of the Midwest's largest music camps at Wayne State College this week, according to Dr. Jay O'Leary, camp director and head of the college's fine arts division.

The 37th annual WSC summer music camp, scheduled for July 26 through Aug. 2, has attracted 361 music students to the campus. The camp is open to students entering their freshman year in high school through students who just received their high school diplomas last May.

many cases, these are the best musical ensembles some of these students have been in. And it gives the students an opportunity to meet other students and make friends.

THE STUDENTS have the option to study both band and choir or to specialize in the areas of band, choir and swing choir, or piano. The students may audition for a variety of groups and in individual recitals which perform during the week. A camp dance and king and queen coronation for the students is scheduled for Saturday evening in the WSC Student Center.

During the week the campers are housed and fed at Wayne State College, except for local commuters. A variety of leisure activities, including swimming and tennis, are available to the students.

Performances scheduled throughout the week include a faculty/staff recital at 8:15 p.m. on Monday; a student recital at 8:15 p.m. on Tuesday; "Camp Capers" (an evening of popular music and variety) at 8:15 p.m. on Wednesday; a piano recital at 4:15 p.m. on Friday, and an honor's concert for some of the top student groups at 8:15 p.m. on Friday.

Also a stage band and swing choir concert at 5:30 p.m. on Saturday, and the "Grand Finale Concert" on Sunday, with two bands, a girls' chorus and mixed chorus performing at 1 p.m. and the concert choir, orchestra and wind ensemble at 3 p.m.

IN ADDITION, string players entering the eighth grade are eligible, and high school swing choir directors are taking part in a swing choir workshop July 28 through Aug. 1.

The 361 students enrolled make this a record year, according to O'Leary. The camp will reach a climax with the annual "Grand Finale Concert" set for 1 and 3 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 2, in Ramsey Auditorium, Wayne State Fine Arts Center. The public is invited to attend. Admission is $1.50 for adults and 50 cents for students over six.

O'Leary and the WSC music faculty are being assisted by a number of high school band and choral directors from both Nebraska and from out of state as well as by some Wayne State music students.

Robert Hills, a nationally known swing choir specialist from Western Illinois University, is leading the swing choir workshop for high school directors and will direct the camp swing choir.

"We provide an enriching musical experience for the students," O'Leary said. "In

- Will not burn grass — just use as directed

It clears out weeds as it fertilizes your lawn.

You can clear up dandelions and more than three dozen other common weeds at the same time as you give your lawn a full feeding of Scott's fertilizer. It also contains iron to correct the yellowing caused by iron-poor soil. Result? Your weeds fade away as your lawn grows thicker and greener.
