Principal Faces State Inquiry on Assault Case

Nebraska's Professional Practices Commission, an arm of the State Education Department, is expected to conduct an inquiry into an assault complaint against Wayne High School Principal Donald Zeiss.

The inquiry, which could result in the suspension or revocation of Dr. Zeiss' certificate, is expected to be conducted by a panel of state educators designated by the State Education Commissioner.

A complaint against Zeiss, 38, was filed with the commissioner by Wilma and Darrell Moore of Wayne a week after the couple asked the Wayne-Carroll School Board for action on charges that the principal assaulted their 17 year old son, Jeff.

ZEISS PLEADED guilty in Wayne County Court last Thursday to a charge of third degree assault in connection with the incident, which occurred on July 25 on Sherman Street.

Appearing without a lawyer, Zeiss entered his plea without comment during an arraignment before Wayne County Court Judge James Duggan.

Duggan ordered a pre sentence investigation by the District II probation officer and set sentencing for 1 p.m. Sept. 24.

Zeiss faces a maximum sentence on the misdemeanor of one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The assault charge was filed against Zeiss by Wayne County Attorney Budd Bornhoff.

MEANWHILE, the school board, meeting in special session Tuesday night on the Zeiss matter, issued a statement through Superintendent Francis Haun.

"On advice of the attorney for the district (Kenneth Olds of Wayne), the superintendent and board members decline to discuss the status of the principal since a complaint has been filed with the Nebraska Professional Practices Commission in Lincoln," the statement said in part.

The board recessed the special session, which also involved a marathon discussion on salary negotiations with teachers, until 1 p.m. Wednesday.

At that time the board was expected to reconvene "to discuss further personnel matters involving Principal Don Zeiss."

IN ADDITION, the board statement said: "Since the commission would have authority to suspend or revoke the principal's certificate, and since Nebraska law provides for a hearing on such a suspension or revocation, it would be improper for the board to comment on the status of the matter at this time."

The board has promised the Moores a "full investigation" on the incident. That promise came on a unanimous vote during an Aug. 10 meeting when board members and Haun reviewed a letter of complaint against Zeiss.

That letter, written by the Moores, outlined allegations of assault and death threats to the couple's son, a senior this year at Wayne High School.

The Moores, in filing their complaint with the State Education Commissioner, included a copy of their letter to the school board and a cover letter indicating the local school board had voted to investigate the matter.

According to Wilma Moore, the cover letter also stated their contention that the incident involved conduct "unbecoming a professional educator."

ON AUG. 17 the Moores were informed that a copy of their complaint and cover letter had been forwarded to the executive director of the Nebraska Professional Practices Commission.

And, last Wednesday, the commission informed the Moores, as well as Zeiss, that a formal complaint had been filed against the principal.

Zeiss is under no obligation to present the commission's inquiry panel with a written response. The commission's letter makes it clear that an inquiry is forthcoming.

Zeiss, when contacted Tuesday by The Wayne Herald, said: "They've followed the avenues that they felt they needed...this didn't involve school and I was hoping to keep it out of school."

ZEISS HAD declined to comment on the case until Tuesday.

"This is not an isolated incident," he continued. "It's an outcrop of 12 to 14 months of incidents that the thing developed from..."

Zeiss said he felt that Haun was "completely satisfied" with his performance at school.

"I have been under the impression that I've done a good job and that I would continue to do so," Zeiss said.

The principal had reportedly told Wayne County Sheriff's Department investigators that unidentified youths frequently drive by his 905 Sherman Street home yelling insults, and sometimes throwing objects at the house.

INVESTIGATORS reportedly learned that after one such incident on the night of July 25, Zeiss got into his vehicle and began following a car.

The incident between Moore and Zeiss occurred after the principal got the vehicle to pull over, according to the investigation reports.

According to the Moores, Zeiss called their son the following day to apologize for a case of mistaken identity.

City Drops Excavation Fees Council Pledges Answers, Action On Hunters Knoll

Drainage problems continue to bog down progress on the proposed — but long-stalled — Hunters Knoll Subdivision, an addition being developed by Wayne businessman Roy Coryell.

Appearing before the City Council Tuesday night, Coryell sought guidance from Wayne officials on solving drainage problems to meet municipal codes for annexation.

The proposed subdivision, which has been platted on Coryell-owned land west of the city and south of state Highway 35 near Mike Perry Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, was approved by the City Planning Commission earlier this year.

HOWEVER, the approval was contingent on a re-engineering of the subdivision's drainage plan.

Coryell, who has had the drainage problem restudied, told City Council members that the project would remain stalled without more guidance from the city regarding water runoff.

The developer said that, at the Planning Commission's request, he had met with members of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners to discuss runoff along the roadway to the west of the subdivision.

That roadway's ditch, which runs south of state Highway 35 along the western edge of the subdivision, could be used for drainage, according to Coryell.

HE ALSO asked city officials about the roadway itself, seeking information on whether it was the developer's responsibility to pave the stretch of county road which would come under the jurisdiction of the city should annexation occur.

"Basically, we want to know how it's going to be handled," Coryell said. "We'd like to know if we can do these things. The road situation is only one of several questions we'd like to air before we move ahead on the project."

With more questions than the City Council had answers, Coryell asked how the takeover of the county road by the city would affect the development of his property.

The north-south gravel road in question borders the Wayne County Fairgrounds west of town.

PHIL KLOSTER, city engineer, said his staff's recommendations would be for a paved road.

"Council would want it to be the most cost effective in terms of maintenance," he told Coryell.

Coryell, noting that blacktopping the road has been a discussion topic for years, asked whether that kind of hard surface would work.

He did not get a concrete answer. Instead, both Mayor Wayne Marsh and Kloster discussed more meetings on the matter.

In response to Coryell's inquiry about paving the road at the first stages of construction, Marsh said it would depend on how fast the project was developed.

KLOSTER suggested that the project be developed in stages and that the paving of the road could be tied in with the final stage.

"That would be a thought, but eventually you have that cost," Coryell said.

"It's a problem for everyone and we need to get it solved," the developer added.

Coryell called on Clyde Flowers of Bruce Gilmore & Associates, the city's engineering consultants, to explain some options for drainage in the proposed subdivision.

Flowers, who has studied and surveyed the proposed subdivision, said that one option was to take the water overland down the county roadway.

Another option, he said, was to take runoff to the east down to Oak Drive in underground pipes or culverts.

ANOTHER OPTION, according to Flowers is for Coryell to build a "duck pond," that is a holding pond where runoff could be trapped and gradually released.

Coryell contended that the roadway route

Boards Plan A 50th-Year Celebration For Airport

Wayne Municipal Airport's 50th anniversary will be celebrated Sunday, Oct. 4 in conjunction with Wayne Industries Day.

Members of the authority and the Wayne Industrial Development Board are working together on plans, including a fly-in breakfast and industry displays, for the dual celebration.

Members of Wayne Industries will be guests at the breakfast, which is expected to involve pilots from a three-state area.

OTHER ACTIVITIES being planned include an aerobic show, a radio-controlled model airplane demonstration, reduced-cost airplane rides, and a spot-landing contest.

All events will be open to the public, according to authority members, but a fee will be charged for the fly-in breakfast.

This week, pilots in a three-state area are being sent invitations to the fly-in breakfast, according to Dean Craun, authority member.

Craun and authority member Chuck Barnes are working with Wayne Industrial Development Board members on details for the celebration.

BARNES SAID the authority committee is seeking historical information and photographs on the airport for a 50th anniversary display.

He urged those with historical information, photographs or an association with the airport to contact him at Box 228, Wayne, 68787, or to call 375-2850.

Also, pilots who have received training at the airport or who used the airport as a base after military or private training should contact Barnes.

FIRST DISTRICT Congressman Doug Bereuter gestures while making a point to taxpayers during a Hear-the-Citizen session Monday.

Congressman Hears Support for Reagan Taxpayers Talk, Bereuter Listens

President Ronald Reagan is getting a solid vote of confidence from Nebraskans attending Congressman Doug Bereuter's First District listening sessions.

That's the word from the congressman during his Monday afternoon stop in Wayne, where he conducted another "Hear-the-Citizen" session.

Bereuter, who has more than 40 such sessions scheduled for his eastern Nebraska district during the Congressional recess, gave more than 30 Wayne area residents an overview of the U.S. economy before opening the floor to comments and questions.

AFTER HIS 90-minute session at Wayne's City Hall, Bereuter said that "generally, the people are supportive of the president."

He said a number of Nebraskans have gone so far as to say they did not vote for Reagan but that they are impressed with his style and leadership.

"People are commenting about the improved relationship with Congress and that they like his informal manner," Bereuter said.

"And, several have said they like the way he is doing what he said he would do," the congressman added.

BEREUTER, who was scheduled to return to the Wayne area on Wednesday with California Congressman Dan Lungren, said he has been fielding a number of questions about "falling farm prices."

Wayne was no exception. Several Wayne area farmers attending the Monday session discussed farm prices, cost of production and this country's grain exporting policies.

More than one farmer said Monday that prices needed a floor. One suggested 70 percent of parity "for a start."

"On the grain exporting policies, Bereuter told the group that the Food for Peace program has worked well, but that it was only a small part of the farm-export policy.

He said he felt that it would be better if "we shipped more of our foreign aid overseas in the form of agriculture products and kept more taxpayer dollars at home."

ONE AREA farmers have been criticizing Reagan for has involved the length of time that elapsed before he lifted the recent Soviet grain embargo, according to Bereuter.

The First District congressman said that Reagan was getting overwhelming support on the way he has handled the air controller situation.

"I'd say he's getting almost total support for his position on that," Bereuter said.

Another area of concern to Nebraskans, according to Bereuter, is the U.S. Postal Service.

"People are concerned about the Postal Service," he said. "And, basically they feel they are paying more for declining service."

BEREUTER SAID he has also been answering a number of questions about proposed Social Security revisions.

A number of senior citizens attending the Wayne listening session questioned Bereuter about the future financial security of the fund.

And, before adjourning the session, Bereuter heard Phil Kloster, city administrator, suggest that Congress continue and increase revenue sharing funds to states and municipalities.

"Bereuter explained that it was not a "bring home the bacon" program and therefore "not the most popular in Congress."

He also said he felt that revenue sharing funds channeled to states had reached a point where they would level off.

BEREUTER'S Wednesday schedule in Wayne was to take him and Congressman Lungren on a tour of the Dick Sorenson SPF hog farm northwest of the city.

Part of the exchange-visit schedule included a lunch and tour of the Merle Ring farm east of Wayne and an afternoon tour of the Waldburn Egg Co., Wakefield.

From there, Bereuter and Lungren, a two term congressman from Long Beach, Calif., were scheduled for a tour of the Iowa Beef Processors plant in Dakota City.

Fun-filled Olympics Provide Play-time for WSC Freshmen

The first days of college may have brought back childhood memories to this fall's crop of Wayne State College freshmen.

Many 17, 18 and 19 year-olds could be seen Monday afternoon breaking eggs, taking piggyback rides, running through kiddie pools and playing in the mud.

It was all part of the annual freshman olympics at WSC and the newcomers seemed to enjoy the activities.

The broken eggs were part of the chicken egg fights which matched females on blindfolded males' shoulders in an attempt to use old, rolled-up newspapers to smash eggs which daggled in old nylon stockings from the backs of other girls.

The piggyback rides were simply races between couples from the three teams. The kiddie pools were part of an obstacle course which had contestants clear a stack of straw bales, jump a kiddie pool, crawl or roll under a table, jump two hurdles and sprint to the finish line.

And when the day's final event, the tug-of-war, was completed, participants threw their fellow freshmen into the mud puddle which added color to the tug of war. The mud-dunking finale wasn't as wild as during past years when more than half of the participants ended up covered with mud.

Other events included a sack race, three-legged race and pyramid building. The day's festivities were won by Bowen Hall. The team of Morey Hall, Anderson Hall and off campus placed second and the Berry-Neihardt Halls team finished third.

Wayne Community Theatre Presents 'My Fair Lady'

Residents of Wayne and the surrounding area have spent weeks polishing their Cockney accents, preparing elaborate full stage settings, and rehearsing the many and varied songs for the world famous musical "My Fair Lady."

The musical, a full production of the Wayne Community Theatre, will open this Friday at 8 p.m. in Ramsey Theatre on the Wayne State College campus.

Saturday's performance at 8 p.m. will be preceded by a 6:30 dinner in the North Dining Room of the WSC Student Center. Sunday will feature a 12:30 p.m. brunch, followed by a 2 o'clock matinee performance.

TICKETS FOR all performances may be purchased at Griess Rexall Drug, Sav Mor Drug, Blake Studio, or at the door prior to each performance.

The deadline to purchase Saturday's dinner/show tickets is Thursday noon. Sunday's brunch/show tickets must be purchased no later than Friday noon.

HELEN RUSSELL, director of the production, said wherever "My Fair Lady" is performed, audiences have tapped their toes to such lively tunes as "The Rain in Spain," "With a Little Bit of Luck," and "Get Me to the Church on Time."

They have swayed to "Wouldn't It Be Lovely?," "I Could Have Danced All Night," "On the Street Where You Live," and "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face."

CHRIS CROSGROVE, who is vocal and orchestral director, is a Wayne State College senior majoring in voice and bassoon.

NO MUSICAL comedy is complete without dancing and the Wayne-Edmund Community Theatre's production will be especially lively due to the inventiveness of choreographer Beth Schafer.

Schafer is a junior at Wayne High School and was a featured dancer in last year's "Fiddler on the Roof."

This spring she choreographed Wayne High School's production of "Guys and Dolls."

She studied dance for nine years at Cheryl's School of Dance in Minneapolis and is currently studying with Gay Coble.

Hoskins Peace Church Dedicating New Addition

Peace United Church of Christ, Hoskins, will dedicate a new addition to the church during worship services Sunday, August 30.

According to the Rev. John David, the 10:30 a.m. dedication service will be conducted by Dr. David Jamieson of the Nebraska Conference of the United Church of Christ.

Sunday's dedication service is part of a month long celebration during August observing the 100th anniversary of the church's founding.

There will be a potluck fellowship dinner at 12:30 p.m., followed with a panel of former pastors at 2.

ORIGIN OF Peace United Church of Christ dates back to Feb. 6, 1881 when four persons met in the Ernest Behmer home. Construction of the first church began in September of 1881, and a parsonage was built a year later.

The second church was built in 1902 on the existing 40-acre site southwest of Hoskins, followed in 1951 with construction of the current church building.

THE NEW 800-square foot addition to be dedicated this Sunday includes a pastor's room, large lobby, mother's room, space for six more pews, and an enlarged basement.

Volunteers provided much of the labor.

Pastor David said the addition became necessary with the growth of the congregation.

In 1950, 39 families were members of the church. Today there are more than 100 families.

IN BUILDING the new addition, workers uncovered a cornerstone laid during the 1950 construction. Inside were a Bible, Heidelberg catechism, dedication program, and yearbook of denominations.

There have been 14 resident pastors at the country church during the past century.

Hoskins Man Appointed Postmaster in Winside

A 35-year-old Hoskins man has been appointed postmaster at Winside.

Theodore J. Olson, who had been working as a carrier technician with the U.S. Postal Service in Norfolk, assumed his new postmaster duties Saturday.

Olson began his career with the Postal Service as a part-time Norfolk distribution clerk in 1969.

A 1964 graduate of Norfolk's Burns High School, Olson was promoted to part-time city carrier in 1970.

He became a regular city carrier in February of 1975 and was promoted to carrier technician on March 1, 1975.

A four-year veteran of the U.S. Air Force where he was a jet-engine mechanic, Olson is married to the former Sandra K. Sells of Reading, Kans.

They have two children, Christopher, 13, and Cher, 11. The children, an eighth grader and a sixth grader, began attending classes at Winside Elementary School Monday.

I'M REALLY excited about the appointment," Olson said Tuesday. "It's one of the best things that's happened to me."

"We're looking forward to moving into the community."

Olson, a member of the American Legion and Disabled American Veterans, replaces Carl Fischer, former Winside postmaster, who retired about nine months ago.

Chuck Thompson of the Wayne Post Office was acting postmaster during the selection process.

Postmasters are selected on merit, based on recommendations from a review committee.

They are appointed by the Postmaster General.

OLSON HAS continued his education by attending Norfolk Technical Community College, Norfolk.

A Norfolk native, Olson is the son of Charles and Mary Ann Olson, Norfolk. He attended elementary school in Norfolk.

Olson's Winside staff includes one rural carrier, Ted Hoeman, and an assistant to the postmaster, Lorraine Prince.

Roosevelt Park Street Repair Sought

With the defeat of Roosevelt Park Water District behind him, Wayne's Vernon Russell has a new cause.

Appearing for a few minutes before the City Council Tuesday night, the Wayne property owner and businessman asked that potholes and streets be repaired in Roosevelt Park.

"I hate to make a pest of myself, but I guess I will," Russell said. "I intend to continue attending meetings until you recognize Roosevelt Park as a part of the city," he continued.

"WE WOULD like to get the pot holes (in Roosevelt Park) cleaned up and the culverts flushed and the electrical lines off the houses and garages," he said.

Russell, a former city councilman, said he considered the situation in Roosevelt Park a matter of "gross negligence" on the part of the city.

Mayor Wayne Marsh told Russell, who lives and owns property in the Roosevelt Park neighborhood, that "there will be some action." He reminded Russell that the matter had been discussed before and that the Council was working on the situation.

on the west edge of the property was adequate for the runoff.

Also attending the session was Merlin Beermann, District I county commissioner. He said his concern was "down past the church."

He said that it was his understanding the city had jurisdiction on zoning and codes "two miles out."

Kloster said "The Council owes it to Mr. Coryell to insist or not to insist on a hard surface road, and what kind of drainage plan would be sufficient to meet codes."

KLOSTER said the developer needed the information before deciding to go on with the project. Coryell acknowledged that the economic situation made him more concerned than ever about the project and said that he needed the information to be able to determine how to approach developing the land.

"The answers may have to come at the next Council meeting," Kloster said, agreeing with Marsh that Coryell's questions needed study and city recommendations.

When the proposed subdivision was presented to the Planning Commission earlier this year, Coryell was asked to approach the County Board of Commissioners for assistance on what the commission members saw as drainage problems.

KLOSTER SAID the city would need to consult with its engineers and the codes before providing Coryell with answers.

Discussion on the project ended after Coryell expressed an interest in having the city handle the special assessment debt for municipal services.

Kloster told him that there was a "big question on how much financial obligation the city could handle" on the project. He asked for time to study the financial picture - a request agreed to by Coryell.

In other action, the Council agreed to a redrafting of an ordinance that would set up guidelines for excavation within the city limits.

ON THE AGENDA for several consecutive meetings, the ordinance met with opposition from several contractors who objected to city red tape, a fee schedule and a bond for excavation work.

Initially, Councilman Gary Vopalensky challenged the proposal contending that the schedule and red tape was creating a hardship on local contractors and driving them out of town to seek work elsewhere.

After several weeks of debate, the ordinance is expected to be presented for a vote at the next Council meeting.

It is patterned after an excavation ordinance on the books at Seward, according to Kloster.

The proposed ordinance drops the fee schedule entirely and utilizes a performance bond.

THERE WERE no objections to the proposed redrafting. Attorney Kem Swarts, legal counsel to the city, assured Council members that the city would be in the "same position legally," but that the performance bond would cost the contractors less.

Councilman Darrel Heier questioned why the city would drop the fee schedule.

Kloster said that after studying the matter he felt that the amount of money collected would have been minor, but it would have caused more ill will than it was worth.

Councilman Keith Mosley said that property owners were having enough trouble getting the work done now.

"I would feel more comfortable with that (the proposed redrafting) than what we have now," said Vopalensky.

BEFORE ADJOURNING, the Council accepted a bid of 3 cents per square foot for reseeding grass on right of ways in the city's three summer water improvement projects.

The bid proposal, which guaranteed germination, came from Haase Landscaping of Norfolk.

Haase was among three bid bidders, including Nielsen Landscaping of Norfolk and Barner Lawn Service of Wayne.

The Haase proposal included two bids, one for hydroseeding and one for mechanical seed application, or seed drilling. The company submitted the lowest bid in both cases, but the Council decided against going the hydroseeding route.

Reseeding the torn up right of ways is expected to get underway within days, particularly on the Sherman Street water project. The Ninth Street project construction is still underway. The final project is along Fairground Avenue.

CITY COUNCIL members also approved a stop sign ordinance after discovering that a previous ordinance approved several weeks ago placed the signs on the wrong streets.

The ordinance passed Tuesday night places stop signs on Eighth and Ninth streets at Logan Street and on 12th Street at Pearl.

An inadvertent error in the last ordinance placed the signs on Logan and Pearl streets.

And, Council members received a report from Kloster on activity at the city's Transfer Station.

Principal

Fifteen days later the Moores presented their complaint to the school board during a regular meeting.

Another statement is expected from board members after Wednesday's meeting.

THE PROFESSIONAL Practices Commission, which exists under Nebraska education law, has 12 members appointed by the governor.

The group has the power to observe and assess the performance of educators and decide cases where formal charges are brought against teachers or administrators.

The scope of the panel's authority and jurisdiction involves reviewing ethical and professional performance, competency, continued service in the profession and contract obligations.

When the panel investigates a complaint, it has the option to dismiss the charge, warn or reprimand the educator or recommend that the State Board of Education suspend or revoke the certificate of the teacher or administrator.

Ombudsman, Prison Experts Squaring Off in Court

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association
A man who 162 Nebraska inmates think is concerned about their wellbeing has filed a federal suit because he believes prison experts tried to impair his effectiveness.

move that he and Thone said was by mutual consent. The experts did their review, which included tours and interviews, and prepared their report for Thone.
After Thone received the report, which was published in April, the governor received a petition from about 150 correctional officers. Their petition said a "potentially dangerous and explosive situation within the prisons" existed because of Muhammad's presence.

ombudsman and his mode of operation. From all top staff down to the newest correctional officer we found that there is a great deal of concern on the authority of the ombudsman and how he performs his duties.
THE EXPERTS said the ombudsman, in a move they described as "not unusual," visits a corrections institution "to make all kinds of allegations to the staff." The experts said the ombudsman apparently requires the staff, and not the inmates, to prove they are innocent of an allegation.

minds will deal with Muhammad's claims. It's apparent at least 142 inmates believe he is fair and concerned. It is also evident at least 150 correctional officers apparently don't like to have Muhammad around.
But this deputy public counsel for corrections obviously takes his job seriously and apparently intends to be around for awhile. If he didn't, he probably would not have filed suit claiming his reputation had been damaged.

control on Sept. 1.
The law also changed the role of the Health Board, stripping it of its independent policy-making hat and making it an advisory body. The board's last meeting as an independent body was Aug. 17, and its next meeting will be as an advisory board.
The Health Board now will be independent only in the area of professional licensure. Herb Hopkins of Lincoln, a member of the 15-member board, says the transition is going well. And he says the board's functions really won't change that much after Sept. 1.

Van started its rounds across the state in July 1980.
The Energy Office says its mechanics, who have special training in engine engine analysis, found some problems in most of the vehicles that were evaluated.
In all, the mechanics said, some 62 percent of the vehicles had problems, compared to about 31 percent that checked out. The mechanics note that compacts had the fewest problems, while vehicles like station wagons and pickup trucks had the most.

Birthday Bonus

In just over a month, the Wayne Municipal Airport is going to be celebrating its 50th anniversary.
And, members of the Airport Authority have joined forces with the Wayne Industrial Development Board to help celebrate the occasion.
The idea is a good one. And, it is important that Wayne area residents take part in the observance.
Area residents not only need to know more about the industrial development in their city, but also need to have an appreciation for the role an airport plays in attracting new industry.
An airport often gets mischaracterized as a costly chunk of concrete designed for fly boys. Perhaps it's human nature to be critical of those things that appear to cost a great deal of money, yet are only used by a few.
But, you see, that's wrong when it comes to assessing the benefits of an airport. There's just no doubt that an airport, such as Wayne's, contributes significantly to the development of the local economy.

Regulation Rip-Off

Waste is wrong.
The Bible teaches you that, and so did your mother and your Aunt Mathilda.
Part of the American character, as it has developed in a free enterprise environment, is to fight waste and inefficiency.
Business people take pride in being problem solvers, carefully weighing costs against benefits to produce the best possible product or provide the best possible service at the lower cost. After all, we are consumers too!
To resign ourselves to accepting a built-in layer of wasted resources and effort, even if price increases could produce the same bottom line, is offensive to most members of the business community.
Shortly after taking office in 1977, President Jimmy Carter ordered his Cabinet officers and agency heads to personally read all the rules and regulations their staffs promulgated. The order was later discarded because the officials found that there weren't enough hours in the day to read all the requirements.

Women Gain Executive Branch Ground
Thone Proud of Appointees

The appointments I have made in the past 2 1/2 years as governor are a great source of pride.
Some of the most able and outstanding men and women in the state have been persuaded to serve the public.
The appointments have ranged from judges, to state senators (in cases of death or resignation), to heads of branches of state government and to members of commissions that either have executive power or are advisory.
OVER-ZEALOUS partisanship is something I've tried to avoid in my administration. Several departments or bureaus are still headed by people appointed by the previous governor.
The quality of those appointed as judges by me is a particular source of gratification. The group appointed knows the law, has sound judgment and possesses a desire to render evenhanded justice.

governor charley thone

The Nebraska Secretary of State keeps a log of appointments by governors to boards and commissions. During the 2 1/2 years I have been governor, 27.6 percent of those appointees have been women, compared to 14.8 percent in the previous six years.
Agriculture-related agencies serve as an example. I realize that today farming is a family partnership, so I appointed the first woman to the Gasohol Committee, Wheat Development Advisory Commission and the Corn Development and Utilization and Marketing Board.
WOMEN have made great strides within the fulltime working force of the state executive branch under the governor's control. As of June 30, 1981 there were 236 more women as permanent, fulltime employees in official, administrative, professional, technical and paraprofessional positions than on the same date in 1978, the last year of my predecessor. This was accomplished even though the total number of employees in those categories had been reduced during my term by 171.

During the year ending June 30, 1981, 54.8 percent of the people newly hired by the state in those supervisory, professional, paraprofessional and technical positions were women. This is in line with my goals to hire more women and to hire the most highly qualified people.
Every geographic area of the state has been represented among my appointments. In particular, I have been able to give greater representation on boards and commissions to the western part of the state which has often been neglected or ignored in the past.
As governor I depend upon those to whom responsibilities are delegated. I'm proud of my appointees and thankful to them for the excellent service they as a group are performing for the people of Nebraska.

Established Farmers in Cost Crunch

By M.M. Van Kirk
Nebraska Farm Bureau
Inflation reflected in excessive costs of production in agriculture has reached a critical level at which it is endangering not just the younger, beginning farmers and ranchers but also those who have traditionally been the most solidly based in assets, credit availability and efficiency of operation.
The reasons today are different but the effects are a little like what happened during the prolonged period of combined economic depression and drought that had such devastating effects on Nebraska farmers and ranchers in the 1930s.
First to fall were those who were over-extended in land and capital obligations and that included some of the larger units, as well as the marginal operations. Then trouble came for those who couldn't survive several back-to-back crop failures. Finally everybody, including those who had been considered well-to-do, were caught up in the foreclosures and bankruptcies that marked the latter days of the Depression period.

SOME FIGURES provided by the USDA's "Farmline" pinpoint the seriousness of the situation. Costs per acre of production this year are projected to increase 14 to 19 percent after 1980's 15.4 percent per acre jump in expenses—excluding land costs. That adds to 30 percent or more in the past two years.
Farmers and ranchers cut back 10 percent on their spending for capital items (tractors and other farm machinery, trucks, autos, building and fencing, etc.) but look at some of their other cost increases:
— Fuels and energy in 1980 cost them $9.9 billion, 21 percent more than in 1979 and the sharpest rise of all production items. Diesel fuel costs on the farm in 1980 were up 35 percent from the year before with a total bill of $3.2 billion.
— Interest expenses for farmers and ranchers rose 20 percent last year to $10.6 billion for the credit they had to have for operating expenses and to meet real estate mortgage payments.
— Farm services such as rent, custom hired work, veterinarian services, breeding fees, insurance, marketing expenses and hired transportation, cost farmers $21.3 billion in 1980, an increase of 10 percent over 1979.

PRODUCTION outlays per farm averaged over $56,000 in 1980, up 2.4 percent from the $55,000 in 1979 and a small increase compared with the 19 percent jump from 1978 to 1979.
This may come as a shock to Nebraska farmers and ranchers but in 1980, their average expenditures per farm were $97,000, exceeded only by California's average of $115,000 per farm. The figure was $90,000 in Iowa and $78,000 in Kansas just for comparison.
Here is a revealing statement from the USDA analysis: "The biggest share of total production expenditures was concentrated among a relatively small number of large farms. Farms with gross sales of at least $100,000 represented about 16 percent of all farms, but they accounted for almost two-thirds of total outlays and about two-thirds of all sales."
What that really means is that production expenses are leaning heavily upon the bigger operators who previously had been able to spread their per-unit costs, but are less flexible in their ability to "cut back and make do."
Analysis note that the 1980 drought-reduced yields coupled with rising costs produced a staggering jump in per-unit costs. They say that 1981's prospects for improved yields forecast much smaller increases in costs per unit of production. For example, the 1981 projected non-land production cost of corn is $2.38 per bushel, 2 cents above the 1980 estimate. That's not much consolation but it is a gleam of light in an otherwise murky outlook.

Fat Cattle Prices To Remain Weak

Cattle prices, which have dipped since late June, are likely to be steady to weaker the balance of the summer, a University of Nebraska extension economist said this week. Earlier expectations had been for prices to be higher, according to Al Wellman, a livestock marketing specialist.

Potential marketings of fed cattle are the reason for the change in the short-run outlook, Wellman explained. The U.S. Department of Agriculture's quarterly cattle-on-feed report indicated cattle feeders on July 1 planned to market 7 percent more cattle during the July-September period than they did a year ago.

Placements on feed during April-June were estimated at a little less than 6 million head, up 6 percent from a year earlier. Marketings from feedlots in the same period were 1 percent below last year. The increase in placements for the quarter was the result of large April placements — up 39 percent from 1980 in the seven states reporting placements monthly. Placements in these states were about the same as a year earlier. In May and were 9 percent less than last year in June.

Most major feeding states reported fewer cattle on feed than a year earlier.

Wellman termed this "a realistic prospect." The report showed the total number of cattle on feed July 1 was down slightly from a year earlier, but there were more cattle on feed weighing more than 700 pounds. While there were 5 percent more steers and 8 percent more heifers in the 700 to 1,099 pound range, there were fairly large decreases in weights under 700 pounds for both steers and heifers.

While prices this summer do not appear likely to strengthen, some price recovery appears possible, Wellman said. This is based on the decrease in the number of lighter weight cattle on feed and the potential for October-December fed marketings to be well below their third quarter and year-earlier levels.

Fed cattle prices dropped about $4 per hundredweight from late June to early August, Wellman said. Choice steers at Omaha sold mostly from $66 to $67 per hundredweight recently, compared with $70 to $72 in late June.

"I look for prices during August-September to be in the mid $60s range, with prices this fall likely to be in the upper $60s," he predicted.

The economist said pork supplies and demand for beef will continue to be key factors in cattle prices. Pork supplies this fall are expected to be 8-10 percent below last year.

"If they aren't down that much, it could mean lower cattle prices," Wellman said. "And prices could be higher if demand for beef improves."

The USDA report estimated the number of cattle on feed July 1 in 23 states at nearly 9.6 million head, down 1 percent from a year earlier and 7 percent below the number on feed July 1, 1979. It was the smallest July 1 on-feed count since 1975 and was a little below average trade guess in advance of the report.

Big Biscuits Bake in the Northeast Nebraska Sun

THESE BIG BISCUITS, which stretch well into an alfalfa field northeast of Wayne, are being browned by a strong August sun. Looking every bit like a giant version of a popular breakfast cereal, the round bales probably will be carted to a nearby farmstead where the hay will be used for wintering cattle. Rows of round bales and rows of smaller hay stacks that remind passers-by of giant bread loaves dot the countryside this time of year as farmers work with a third cutting of hay.

Weed Control Presents Extra-Trip Problem

Reduced Tillage Session Keyed to Energy

A sunny August day with temperatures in the low 80's would normally find Nebraska farmers out in the fields, or working on equipment.

But recently some 250 farmers from throughout the state traveled to York to hear a blue ribbon panel of experts discuss ways to reduce energy use and conserve soil moisture in their tillage practices.

The conference, held at the Alfred Grotz farm in York was called for the benefit of farmers throughout the state.

"Energy related costs, such as fuel and fertilizer have become the single greatest drain on the farmer's budget," said Dr. David Duncan, weed control specialist for Monsanto Agricultural Products Co. "Any way we can help growers reduce or better control soiling costs and conserve moisture, particularly by reducing tillage trips across the field, can only help strengthen the local farm economy."

DUNCAN SAID two recent trends in agriculture which are "at odds" with each other. "On one hand, farmers want to eliminate their weed problems by applying a herbicide, and incorporating it, so they don't have to be as dependent on a timely rainfall as they would with surface applied, pre-emergence herbicides," he said.

"Unfortunately conventional preplant incorporation normally requires extra tillage trips, and this practice is counter to the second trend developing in the state — reduced tillage. Farmers are currently trying to cut back on the number of tillage trips taken across the field, to reduce fuel use and cut the moisture loss caused by excessive tillage."

Joining Duncan on the panel were John Furrer, extension weed specialist for the University of Nebraska, and Lyle Gingerich, Monsanto product development associate in Nebraska. Both agreed that reducing tillage is a growing trend in the state.

"WE'VE NOTICED in the past year an increased awareness in reduced tillage procedures," said Furrer. "The interest is there for several reasons. Higher energy costs and moisture conservation are primary factors."

Citing the dry springs farmers have been confronted with over the last several years, contrasted by the sudden and unexpected rainfall in many parts of the state this spring, Duncan cautioned that farmers must find the right balance between herbicide incorporation for weed control, and proper tillage practices. "We were taught that a series of tillage operations was the best way to control weeds, but over working the soil often dried it out," Duncan explained. "Studies by the University of Nebraska show, in essence, that each time you till the soil, you lose the equivalent of one half inch or more of rainfall. Of course, this depends on the tillage equipment used, tillage depth and soil type. Tests also indicate that you can lose up to one inch or more of moisture with deep tillage of six inches or more."

HOWEVER, Duncan said, there is another side to the story. "These tillage systems were developed over a long period of time, so farmers may be reluctant to give them up. And even though heavy tillage reduces soil moisture and can cause other problems, some farmers have relied on extra tillage to incorporate herbicides and thus ensure weed control," he said.

To help control weeds while conserving soil moisture and fuel, Gingerich recommended a practice called surface blend. "Surface blend is a single-pass, shallow incorporation of Lasso herbicide into the top two inches of the soil profile," he said. "Many farmers want some sort of herbicide incorporation. With surface blend we use lighter, wider, faster equipment to mix the chemical into the top two inches of the soil, right in the weed seed germination zone. Because less of the soil is being filled than with a conventional preplant incorporation, Surface Blend minimizes moisture loss."

MOISTURE savings isn't the only reason farmers are turning to surface blend, according to Gingerich. A major consideration is the fact that surface blend allows the farmer to cover more acres per day — a critical concern to Nebraska farmers in a busy spring.

"To apply herbicide in conjunction with a single pass of a field cultivator takes approximately 6-8 minutes per acre, as opposed to 15-6 minutes per acre when applying herbicide with a two-pass disking operation," Gingerich noted.

"According to University of Nebraska tests, tractors burn .08 gallons of diesel fuel per horsepower hour," continued Gingerich. "This means the typical 180 hp tractor, running at 75 percent of capacity, or 135 hp, burns about 10.8 gallons of fuel per hour. Applying herbicide by means of Surface Blend results in a fuel savings of 1.62 gallons per acre, or $1.86, based on a fuel cost of $1.15 per gallon."

NOT ALL herbicides can be shallowly incorporated in a single pass, warned Gingerich. "All herbicides should be applied in accordance with label directions. But a single-pass, shallow incorporation of a herbicide such as Lasso, atrazine, Bladex, Sencor or Lexone into the top 2 inches of the soil makes sense for Nebraska farmers who want to incorporate. "It gives consistently good grass control, and it's a long-term alternative for farmers who are concerned about the adverse effects of deep and excessive tillage on soil moisture, fuel costs and manpower expenditures. It's a step in the right direction."

Two Youths Win Driving Contest

Eight youths from Dixon and Cedar counties competed in the Area 4-H Tractor Driving Contest. Top individual was Mike Muller, son of Francis Muller, Wakefield. Derwin Roberts, son of Courtland Roberts, Allen, came in second. Both of these youths received purple ribbons. Jay Jones, son of Wayne Jones, Allen, also participated and received a blue ribbon. Two other youths received blue ribbons, two received red, and one white. Mike Muller will represent Dixon County at the State Fair Contest.

Extension agents from Cedar, Dixon, and Wayne counties cooperated in staging the contest. Participants are timed while driving through a course without touching poles marking turns. This includes backing. They are also checked for ability to make a safety inspection of a prepared tractor and a driven tractor as well as completing a written safety and maintenance quiz.

Area Farmer Head of ASCS

Secretary of Agriculture John Block has appointed E. Mickey Stewart, of Lincoln, as state executive director of the Nebraska Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

As executive director, Stewart will be responsible for carrying out federal farm price support, production adjustment and cost sharing conservation programs in Nebraska.

Stewart, 58, has owned farms in northeastern Nebraska since 1948 on which he produced corn, oats and alfalfa. He has had a ranching operation in Holt County since 1950, which is currently operated by his son. He presently owns 2 farms in Cedar and Knox Counties totaling 640 acres.

He served as Nebraska state director of Agriculture from 1979 to May 31, 1981, and has been executive secretary of the Washington State Cattle Association and the Nebraska Stockgrowers Association. He holds a B.A. degree in business from the University of Nebraska. He and his wife, Betty, have two sons.

Federal Land Bank Loans Up

The Federal Land Bank of Omaha experienced brisk lending activity during the first six months of 1981. According to executive vice president Don Utloff, the Land Bank loaned $712 million to farmers and ranchers in Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming as of June 30.

Utloff said the amount loaned was about $60 million less than the amount loaned during the first half of 1980. He said the primary reason for the decline was the fact that farmers and ranchers borrowed less money to refinance short term debt than they had during the first half of 1980. The proportion of money loaned to refinance short term debts stood at 14 percent during the first six months of 1981, down from 20 percent for the same period in 1980.

Wakefield Farmer Shows Champion

Jack Sievers of Wakefield and Bellar Exotic Farms of Wisner recently showed the Grand Champion percentage heifer at the Third International Chianina Congress.

The event was held in Calgary, Alberta, Canada. The heifer was a June 1980 daughter of Blue Sky Jet Set.

The Best show string consisted of nine head. Four first places were received by the string. The farm also was named Premier Breeder and Exhibitor of the show.

There were 200 Chianinas exhibited from Canada and the United States.

Dixon Farm Couple Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Harold George of Dixon were presented an engraved plaque and framed certificate at Broken Bow on Aug. 10. The Georges were one of the three families honored in Custer County whose land has been owned by the same Nebraska family for 100 years or more.

The award was co-sponsored by Ak Sar Ben and the Association of Fair Board Managers.

Mr. George came to Gibbon in April, 1871. Two years later he moved to a dugout on Deer Creek and in 1875 moved down the South Loup River to the land he eventually homesteaded.

Allen Youth Wins Tractor Test

Vocational Ag instructor Tom Wilmes reports that the District FFA Tractor Driving contest was won by Allen member Dennis Smith, son of Mrs. Desmond Smith. The contest was held at Pender recently with 28 FFA boys from the District participating.

Stuart Lubberstedt, Allen's other contestant placed 12th.

The boys were qualified for the district contest in the local contest held earlier this summer. Dennis will participate in the state contest at the State Fair grounds in Lincoln on Sept. 5.

Recent Rains Slowed Crop Pests; Farmland Insect Threat Reduced

The rains may have slowed them down a little, but corn borers, chinch bugs, spider mites and grasshoppers are still present in Nebraska.

Bob Roselle, University of Nebraska extension entomologist, said that in most areas, the insect conditions in the last half of the growing season appear less threatening than they did last year.

"This is primarily due to better moisture which enables the corn and sorghum crops to produce in the presence of some pests," the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist said.

THE SECOND generation European corn borer has not been as active as a year ago, Roselle said, since wet conditions earlier reduced adult activity and heavy rainfall July 31 may have dropped many moths and small worms.

"Some fields will require attention, but it appears that the losses will be much less than in 1980," the specialist added.

Historically, the rain that slows chinch bugs must fall in June when the bugs are in wheat, Roselle noted.

The moisture received in late July helped sorghum tolerate the second generation but much damage had occurred before the general rainfall.

"We will have to wait and see if August and early September continue to be wet enough to influence the second generation."

IF NORMAL late summer weather returns, it could trigger rapid development of spider mites, especially in central and western counties, the entomologist said.

Cool, wet conditions tend to delay their development, he added, but they are still there.

Grasshoppers are still in the crop areas and some in heavy populations, but rain will tend to keep margins green and hold them for awhile.

"Watch for movement into corn and soybeans as the summer progresses," Roselle warned, "since there's still time to control in field crops and reduce the 1982 potential."

'81 Membership Drive Goal Met By Wayne County Farm Bureau

Wayne County Farm Bureau has made its membership quota for the 14th consecutive year with 1981 membership now at 374.

At the regular monthly meeting held last week, John Anderson, 1982 membership chairman outlined plans for achieving a 17th year of growth.

HE POINTED out the need for growth stating that funding for Farm Bureau objectives on county, state and national levels comes entirely from local membership fees.

He also said that farmers declining power in the election booth necessitates a more united front toward legislative bodies.

The 1982 campaign in Wayne County will be carried out by county Farm Bureau board members or their appointees in each precinct starting Oct. 1.

The timing of the campaign is necessary because of the need for funds in the legislative area soon after the first of the year. The special effort will end Dec. 5 — the day before the state Farm Bureau convention convenes in South Sioux City.

AS PART of the campaign workers will conduct a poll to try to determine the number of farm families in Wayne County.

Awards to precinct campaigners who excel in each of several categories will be made at the organization's Christmas party to be held in December.

The Fresh-Air Fencepost

TIME WAS WHEN a steel fencepost had to be anchored in the ground. However, a farmer north of Wayne has figured out a way to set a post in fresh, riverbank air. Braced only by a short piece of angle-iron, the fencepost, blades flapping in the wind, hangs over the riverbank in a vain effort to keep three stands of barbed wire taut. Maybe it was only meant to be a warning to cattle.

Some Kernels of Wisdom

ONCE A PLACE where students learned their ABCs, this old schoolhouse northwest of Carroll now offers a simple lesson in the storage of grain. If you nail the doors shut and cover the windows on an old schoolhouse, it works fine for a number of things. And, considering the number of old schoolhouses standing vacant, the idea of using the space for grain storage can't be all bad. A farmer's grain auger fits nicely in what used to be a classroom window. Perhaps the farmer was storing some kernels of wisdom at the old country schoolhouse.

Two Old Friends in a Farmyard

THESE TWO OLD friends, a leaf-less tree and a life-less building, watch the summer roll by in northeast Nebraska. Located northeast of Wayne, the twosome was found basking in the late summer sun while owls hooted and mourning doves cooed from nearby branches. Absolutely silent in its summer vigil, the tree cast a late afternoon shadow on its friend in an effort to shade its weather-beaten siding.

Auto-Owners for Car Insurance

If your brand new car is totaled, will your insurance company pay you for a brand new car?

Auto-Owners will when you have comprehensive and collision coverage. If you have an accident anytime within 90 days and your new car is a total loss, we'll pay you the total cost of your new car. And with Auto-Owners, your new car is covered immediately, automatically, under your policy.

So if your present policy doesn't give you this kind of total coverage, maybe you better scrap it.
