Facing the First Day Of School

of Mike Baier, Laura Bauermeister, daughter of Jerry and Linda Bauermeister, Andy Luft, son of Terry and Peg Luft, and Andrea Vopalensky, daughter of Gary and Connie Vopalensky. There will be no school on Labor Day, Sept. 7.

Winside Bar Owner Is Denied New Trial

A 28-year old Winside tavern owner, convicted in June on three felony drug counts, is appealing his case to the Nebraska State Supreme Court after losing his bid for a new trial.

Charles Welbie, who is serving 8 to 16 years in the Nebraska State Penal Complex, Lincoln, was denied the new trial late Tuesday by Ninth District Court Judge Richard P. Garden.

Garden, who presided at Welbie's five day June jury trial at the Wayne County Courthouse, denied the new-trial motion and two other motions by the tavern owner's attorney, Vincent Kirby of Norfolk.

APPEARING BEFORE Garden on behalf of his imprisoned client, Kirby filed a notice of intent to appeal about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, minutes after the judge denied the new-trial motion.

Kirby's next two motions, one to admit Welbie to bond during the appeal process and one to stay execution of the tavern owner's sentence, also were denied by Judge Garden.

Kirby, who represented Welbie during the felony drug trial earlier this summer, asked the court for a hearing on an affidavit of poverty he plans to file on behalf of Welbie.

The affidavit of poverty, if accepted by the court, would apply to the appeal process transcripts and bill of particulars, according to Kirby, who said Welbie has no money to take the case beyond the Ninth District Court.

SPECIAL prosecutor Thomas DeLay, who also appeared at Tuesday's late-afternoon court session, said the Ninth District Court had no jurisdiction on the bond and stay-of-execution motions since Kirby filed a motion of his intent to appeal the case.

Wednesday morning, Kirby said he would pursue both motions before the State Supreme Court during the appeal process.

Kirby also filed an affidavit in Ninth District Court against DeLay.

The affidavit accuses the special prosecutor of "deliberately manipulating" Welbie's jury trial in an effort to suppress evidence.

Judge Garden accepted the affidavit without an objection from DeLay, who was appointed to prosecute the case after Wayne County Attorney Budd Bornhoff disqualified himself.

Principal Gets Reprimand Over Assault on Student

Wayne High School Principal Donald Zeiss has been reprimanded by the Wayne-Carroll School Board for assaulting a student.

Zeiss, who has pleaded guilty in Wayne County Court to third degree assault (a misdemeanor) in connection with an incident involving 17 year old senior Jeff Moore of Wayne, has been issued a letter of reprimand by the board after an investigation of the case.

Furthermore, the board has directed Superintendent Francis Haun to "maintain a school system with discipline based on strict and fair procedures."

HAUN, WHO released the board's statement on the case Wednesday, has told the board he will follow its directive.

The statement, which was initiated by Neil Sandahl, board president, clearly leaves the door open for future board action pending a state investigation of the incident. "The board believes, at this time, that the Professional Practices Commission has the legal authority and proper procedures needed to fairly recommend a course for future board action," the board statement continues.

After several executive-session meetings to investigate the case, the board statement said that members had "come to the conclusion that there is not a simple remedy to cure the hurts that have occurred to many people."

AND, ADDRESSING teachers, administrators and students, the board statement said: "...in addition to having concern for the internal operation of the school, (the board) is also concerned with the out-of-school behavior."

In a sternly worded statement, the board said it "believes that a few young people have cause to consider the role that they have played in disrupting the home lives of those who administer and teach in their schools."

Zeiss, who pleaded guilty without comment in mid-August, has told The Wayne Herald that the incident was not isolated. "It's an outcrop of 12 to 14 months of incidents that the thing developed from," Zeiss said after he had been notified that the Professional Practices Commission was planning to investigate the case.

AS PART OF the board statement, Haun urged parents and students "who have concerns regarding any phase of their school" to contact him.

He said confidential appointments, if desired, could be arranged on Mondays through Saturdays from 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The board's investigation of the matter began Aug. 10, when Wilma and Darrell Moore, Jeff Moore's parents, appeared at a regular meeting to seek action after the July 25th incident between the 38-year-old principal and the high school senior.

Board members approved a resolution to conduct a full investigation. The Moores also took the matter to the Wayne County Attorney.

On Guard Wayne-O'Neill Units March Toward Full-Strength Goal

By Randall Howell

Wayne's National Guard is marching toward full strength this year.

And, if this year's recruitment efforts match the surge in sign-ups during the past year, the unit could reach the goal by Jan. 1.

That's the direction Capt. Stanley Burst, Wayne-O'Neill unit commander, has set after just over a year of recruitment that has tripled the strength of the unit.

WAYNE'S UNIT — Company A (Detachment 1), 1st Battalion, Mechanized 134th Infantry — recently returned from Camp Ripley, Minn., where guardsmen spent the better part of two weeks in training.

Wayne's guardsmen were joined by Detachment 1, which is the O'Neill unit, for the summer camp — the second one under Burst's command.

Combined strength of the units is 123 guardsmen, up from only 45 soldiers in 1980.

Summer Camp 1981: Page 3A

Authorized combined strength for the units is 159, which means this fall's annual recruiting drive goal is 36 guardsmen.

Today's unit strength in Wayne is 66, with 57 guardsmen serving in the neighboring O'Neill unit, according to 1st Sgt. Dennis Spangler of Wayne.

AN INFANTRY unit on wheels, the Wayne-O'Neill National Guard unit is a company-level component of the 1st Infantry Battalion, which is a battalion-level component of the 47th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) — Nebraska's National Guard.

Computers, Weapon Drills Part of Two-Week Camp

If General George Patton could return from the grave to see how the United States defense system operates in 1980, he would be astonished.

Two dozen guests from Nebraska had such an opportunity in late August during a two-week Nebraska National Guard training camp at Camp Ripley, Minn. The Nebraska Guard flew its guests from Lincoln to Minnesota aboard an Air Guard plane. The plane cruised at an altitude of 3,000 feet and a speed of 200 knots.

Guests included mayors, lawyers, newspapermen, bankers and morticians from communities in the eastern half of Nebraska. The group flew up on a Thursday morning and returned on Saturday afternoon. At Camp Ripley, the VIP's were split into groups of local Nebraska units and slept in the barracks and ate in the mess hall.

THE WAYNE-O'NEILL unit attended the two-week session and had a successful stay. The unit was presented the top awards given during the camp.

The "Best Training Award" was presented for outstanding performance in production use of training time, training evaluation, realism in training, use of junior leaders in training, creative training methods. The award of "Best Operator/Crew Maintenance" for annual training also was awarded to the local unit.

It was apparent upon touring Camp Ripley that the computer age has affected the National Guard. In one building, officers could be seen gathered around a table discussing how to counter moves initiated by the enemy. A map of Germany approximately 10 feet long and six feet wide sat on the table. Plastic game pieces resembling "Monopoly" pieces were scattered across the map.

The scene was part of a Computer Assisted Map Maneuver System (CAMMS) designed to exercise command, control, staff procedures and maneuvers at the battalion and brigade levels.

THE PROGRAM is divided into three sub-systems: players who plan and execute tactical missions, give orders and fight battles; controllers who prepare and supervise from headquarters; a computer which determines results, reviews records and makes reports, critiques and evaluations. Battle damage, casualties, ammunition supplies, various terrain and personnel status are all determining factors in the battle.

After watching the battle simulation, guests ventured with their hosts out into the "field" of the largest National Guard training camp in the United States.

IN THE FIELD, the guests witnessed mortar fire and operation of 11-ton armored personnel carriers. While in the field, the personnel carriers were covered with camouflage nets which contain radar scattering devices. The range of the mortars is approximately 3,700 meters.

The troops and guests remained in the field until 2 a.m. as activities were planned throughout the evening. A demonstration of illumination rounds continued for several hours in the mosquito-infested firing range. Illumination rounds were fired into the air and lighted the ground as machine gun fire drilled targets throughout the range.

A "night problem" between two companies brought the night's activities to a close. The two companies attacked each other in armored personnel carriers through rough terrain and fired simulation rounds.

AN IMPRESSIVE weapons demonstration was set up for Friday on the range. A Tubular Optical Weapon system (TOW) demonstration gave an indication of the type of weapons which are available. Two top gunners were selected from simulation drills and were given the honor of demonstrating the TOW system.

Perched atop armored personnel carriers, the gunners fired wire-guided missiles at targets ranging from 2,800 meters to 3,700 meters away. Every missile made a direct hit.

Thin wires are attached to a 24-volt battery inside the launcher and ignite the missile. The wires also are attached to the missile throughout its slow flight and the gunner can guide the missile into moving targets simply by maneuvering the launcher.

A single TOW system costs approximately $185,000. A similar anti-armor unit known as the "Dragon" is hand held. The Dragon missile system resembles a bazooka and works on the same principle as the TOW missile. Two members of the Wayne unit—Alan Ruzicka of Wakefield and Layne Beza of Pender—were selected as the top two operators at Camp Ripley and were chosen to demonstrate the hand-held weapons.

Interim Head Ruby Pedersen Plans To Emphasize Writing

By Theresa Wulf

When Ruby Pedersen took over Aug. 1 as interim head of the Humanities Division at Wayne State College, she became the only female division head on campus. She is sitting in this year for Dr. Donald Schultz, who took a college sabbatical to further his studies.

After her year is over, Pedersen will return to her duties of teaching English and Methods of Teaching classes. She continues to supervise the student teaching program.

BECAUSE SHE IS one of several interim faculty members in the Humanities Division this year, she said it's not as easy to plan and do things, so there won't be many changes in programs.

She will continue to emphasize writing skills, since "everyone is complaining that students can't write," she said.

Her emphasis will start with the Freshman Composition class — one of the most disliked classes on campus because it is required, she noted.

"It's a good program. But we need longer to teach it. We should make it a two semester course, but that would be difficult to initiate," Pedersen explained.

SHE FEELS the class — which presently runs for one semester — can be one of the most valuable classes people will take, but they often don't realize it until later.

"It's good that people are coming back to the realization that almost everyone needs to know how to write. It's an important form of expression and communication," she said.

"I would hope people would take pride in being able to express themselves," she added.

A brush-up course for seniors would be a good idea. They used to have to take a proficiency test before graduating, and many times they didn't pass and had to take a remedial English course.

Pedersen also wants to emphasize the importance of taking a foreign language, and fill a position in the communications department left open by a late resignation.

THE FIRST big thing scheduled for the year is the move to a new Humanities building at the end of October. The Education building was opened recently. Both buildings end a year-long renovation project.

It's the first time the English department has had new facilities. "Quite a treat for me," Pedersen said. "I was afraid it wouldn't be finished before I retired."

At one time or another, she has taught in every building on campus — even a couple that have been knocked down. And she's taught in every grade but kindergarten.

PEDERSEN HAS spent the past six summers directing the British Institute program at Wayne State. This summer's trip to England ended the Sunday before the royal wedding.

The group saw officials practicing with the parade horses in Hyde Park. And they walked the route the carriages carrying Lady Diana and her wedding party took that morning.

That made it even more special for some of the group who stayed in England for the wedding. But Pedersen felt that she got an even better view when she got up at 4:30 that morning to watch it on television.

"The British people were generally thrilled about the wedding. They like the royal family, and there is genuine affection and respect for them," she said.

AFTER HER retirement, which is two or three years away, Pedersen hopes to teach English as a second language as part of an adult education course — to immigrants, for example.

"Or maybe I'll be a travel guide or tour director," she said.

One of her real interests is Nebraska writers, particularly Marie Sandos. She has led bus-tour studies about these writers.

In her spare time, she writes to her children and visits her two granddaughters.

Her husband, J. L., was a postmaster in Laurel. He died in 1971.

Daughter Anne is assistant news director for television station WOWT in Omaha. Her son, Jim, is an attorney in Minneapolis, Minn.

Her oldest granddaughter is two years old. The other was born July 26 — the day she came home from England this summer.

140 Alumni Return to Belden

The 21st annual Belden High School alumni reunion was held Saturday evening at Ron's Steakhouse in Carroll.

One hundred and forty graduates were registered, coming from Nebraska, South Dakota, Iowa, Arizona, Montana, Wisconsin, California and Minnesota.

Arland Harper was master of ceremonies for the program.

Wayne State Selects 4 Captains

An outstanding group of three year let termen will serve as football captains for the 1981 edition of the Wayne State College football team according to Coach Del Stollenberg.

Seniors Ron Berrie, Kelly Neustrom, Tony Scudder and Steve Zelinsky were selected by a vote of the team at the end of spring practice. Stollenberg noted that the vote is not a popularity contest, but rather a position for a "team person." The only requirement, Stollenberg said, was that each be a senior with three to four years of participation.

The captains are expected to provide the team with leadership both on and off the field, in games and in practice. They act as team spokesmen and as a liaison between players and coaches. They are expected in particular to help freshmen and transfers get accustomed to Wayne State College and the Wildcat football program.

"They are able to sit down on a one on one basis and visit with or help players with any problems they might have," Stollenberg said.

Ron Berrie is a 6-3, 240 pound defensive tackle, is a three year letterman, has received a number of grid honors in both high school and college, including honorable mention all conference accolades last season. Ron is a business major and the son of Ronald and Marge Berrie of Davenport, Iowa.

Kelly Neustrom is a 5-11, 180 pound quarterback, is a senior, majoring in business education and physical education. A four sport standout in high school and three year letterman at Wayne State Col lege, he earned conference and district Player of the Week honors last season. Kelly is the son of Bob and Shirley Neustrom of Moxley, Iowa.

James "Tony" Scudder is a 6-2, 235 pound senior linebacker and defensive tackle. An industrial arts major at WSC, he was a high school All State in his home town of Galesburg, Ill. Tony earned first team All Conference honors last year and is a potential NAIA All American. He is the son of Richard and Bev Scudder of Galesburg, Ill.

Steve Zelinsky, a 6-3, 255 pound senior offensive tackle, is a three year letterman majoring in marketing at WSC. A high school football standout, he is the son of Mike and Rita Zelinsky of Wheaton, Ill. The Wildcats open the 1981 season on Sept. 12 in a 1:30 p.m. contest at Chadron State.

Randy's Recap

By Randy Hascall

"ANOTHER FALL SPORTS guide is off the press and that means the fall season is ready to open. I'd like to recognize some people behind the scene who helped me get the guide put together and ready for readers.

Bill Carlson handled the advertising. The middle shop crew of Judi Topp, Alyce Henschke, Trudy Muir and Nancy Schulz took care of the paste up, proofreading, headline and correction setting and other miscellaneous work. Then, the presswork was done by Ray Murray, Dave Diediker and Al Pippitt.

Those folks don't receive much credit for the work they do but it sure is appreciated.

A "SUPPORT BIG RED with Schlitz" campaign is being staged this fall according to a release I received in the mail this week. It states that athletes competing in the University of Nebraska's men's and women's intercollegiate sports programs will once again receive a special financial boost from Schlitz beer this season.

According to the release, the UNL athletic fund will receive assistance from Schlitz and its 12 beer wholesalers in the state who have pledged 50 cents for each case of Schlitz beer sold during September. Nebraska wholesalers raised nearly $24,000 during last year's program.

THE WAYNE STATE Wildcats will again have their hands full when they meet archival Kearney State in football this season. National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Division I pre-season ratings rank Kearney in a tie for fifth place with Cameron, Ok.

The Antelopes finished in fifth position last year. Elon NC and Northeastern Oklahoma are ranked one-two just as they finished last season. Missouri Western and Pittsburg State also received votes in the balloting.

In the Division II pre-season ratings, Peru State is tabbed in a tie for seventh, Hastings is picked 11th and Chadron State received votes but is not rated.

Other NAIA statistics show Central States Intercollegiate Conference teams high in several categories. Kearney has the country's second longest streak of consecutive winning seasons at 20.

The Antelopes are the second winningest football team in the last five seasons with a record of 42-7-3 and rank fourth in the past 10 seasons with a 73-20-1 record. Fort Hays State running back Tom Doll is the NAIA's fourth leading career rusher with 4,477 from 1975-78.

I GUESS IT'S time again to make a stab at a pre-season Top 20 college football rating. I haven't had time to study any of the teams or talent except Nebraska so most of the predictions are made either by guess or intuition.

Since I like to be different instead of going along with the crowd, I won't pick Michigan number one. Darn near everyone else did. Instead, I'm picking all Nebraska fans lease favorite team.

Recap's pre season top 20:

1. Oklahoma
2. Michigan
3. Alabama
4. Nebraska
5. Notre Dame
6. Southern Cal
7. Georgia
8. Penn State
9. Ohio State

NICO'S CHRISTMAS

Regulations Set

Duck and Geese Seasons, Zones Undergo Changes

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission made a number of changes in the 1981 waterfowl hunting regulations, adopted new duck hunting zones in the eastern portion of the state and set season dates at the Commission meeting in Lincoln Aug. 28.

The Commission followed staff recommendations in dividing the state into five areas for duck hunting. The High Plains area — that area of the state west of a line from approximately U.S. 183 in the north and U.S. 280 in the south (see map for exact boundaries) — will have a season split into three portions.

The open season dates will be Oct. 3-4, Oct. 10-11 and Oct. 24 through Jan. 10. The 83 day season was split in this manner to provide hunters an opportunity to hunt during the two best early weekends of the season and to also comply with the federal framework which requires at least 73 days of the season must fall after Dec. 12.

In the Low Plains area, the Commission divided the eastern portion of the state into four areas to provide early hunting opportunity in Zones 3 and 4 while still allowing the season to be open throughout the primary mallard migration period. The zones were developed based on public input gained at 13 public meetings held earlier in determining what hunters wanted for seasons in their area. This plan also allows for some later season hunting opportunity in Zones 1 and 2, while still allowing some October hunting opportunities.

The season dates will be: Zones 1 and 2, 60 day continuous season beginning Oct. 24 and running through Dec. 22. Zones 3 and 4 will be open for 60 days beginning Oct. 3 and continuing through Dec. 1.

The 100 point daily bag limit will be in effect across the state. Accepting the staff's recommendations down the line, the Commission set goose seasons across the state to begin Oct. 3, with the exception of the Canada Goose season in the Sandhills Unit.

The seasons for light geese (Snows, Blues and Ross' Geese) will begin Oct. 3 and continue through Dec. 27, a total of 86 days. The daily bag limit will be five geese, the possession limit will be 10.

The season regulations for dark geese (Canada and Whitefront) differ by area of the state. In the Missouri River North Unit, the season will begin Oct. 10 and continue through Dec. 27, a total of 79 days. The daily limits will be one Canada and one Whitefront goose through Nov. 13 and two Canadas or one Canada and one Whitefront beginning Nov. 14. The possession limit will be two legal daily bags.

In the East Unit, the 72 day season will begin Oct. 10 and continue through Dec. 20. The daily limits will be two Canada geese or one Whitefront and one Canada through Nov. 22, and one Canada and one Whitefront beginning Nov. 23. Possession limit is two legal daily bags.

In the West Unit, the 72 day season will also begin Oct. 17 and continue through Dec. 27. In this unit the daily limit will be two Canada geese or one Canada and one Whitefront through Nov. 22, and one Canada and one Whitefront beginning Nov. 23.

The possession limit is two legal daily bags.

In the Sandhills Unit, the Special Canada Goose Season will begin Oct. 31 and continue through Nov. 15. The daily, seasonal and possession bag limit will be one Canada Goose. In order to hunt this area, hunters must obtain a free permit from the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission Headquarters Office, Box 30370, Lincoln, 68503. Each Canada Goose taken must be immediately tagged with the permit. This season was lengthened by one week over last year's nine day season to allow hunters additional opportunity to take a goose.

A significant change was adopted by the Commission for the benefit of young hunters in that area of the state where the use of steel shot is required by law. Due to the unavailability of steel shot in 2 1/2 inch 20-gauge shells, the Commission voted to follow a staff recommendation that would exempt hunters 16 years of age and under from the steel shot requirement, when using shotgun chambered for that shell. The area in which steel shot is required is Clay, Fillmore, Phelps and Kearney counties, with the exception of the waters of the Platte River.

Whorlow Wins Senior Tourney

Ken Whorlow fired an 18-hole score of 74 to win the overall competition in the Men's Senior Golf Club Championship at Wayne Country Club, Sunday.

Whorlow shot identical one-over par rounds of 37 on the front nine and back nine to win the 55-59 age division as well as the overall title.

The 60-64 age division was won by Don Sund with a score of 39-44-83. George Thorbeck won the 65-69 age division with a score of 46-46-92 and Dutch Fuelberth claimed top honors in the 70 and older age group with a 44-46-90. All division titles were decided by scratch scores.

In the net score division, Les Luft took first place with a net score of 63. He shot a 78 with a 15 handicap. Second place went to Wilbur Weddingfeld with a net score of 64. He shot an 86 with a 22 handicap.

Arnie Reeg placed third with a net score of 65. He shot an 84 with a 19 handicap. Fourth place was captured by Clark Wenke with a net of 66. He had a 93 with a 27 handicap. Willie Lessmann and Wayne Tietgen tied for fifth place with identical net scores of 67.

In another area of competition, Dutch Fuelberth was awarded the top prize for coming closest to shooting his age. At age 74, he shot a 90. Whorlow was second in that competition.

Turkey Permits Available

A total of 1,758 fall shotgun turkey permits are still available following the Aug. 21 permit drawing, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

Resident hunters who have not already received a fall shotgun turkey permit for the 1981 season may apply for the remaining permits Sept. 1 through Sept. 14. Drawing for oversubscribed units will be Sept. 18. If permits remain following the second drawing an open application period will begin Sept. 28, when both resident and nonresidents may apply.

The units not yet filled and the number of permits still available include Niobrara Unit (late season), 208; Round Top Unit, 1408; Verdigris Unit (late season), 96; and Wildcat Unit, 46. The season dates for all units where permits are still available are Oct. 31 through Nov. 13.

Guard

 1980 after the company commander was transferred.
 A Grand Island native, Burst resigned his Marine commission after nearly 10 years with the corps.
 He then went to work with Spangler and the unit's recruiters for an all-out drive to regain the Company A's strength.
 Under Burst's command, successful recruitment tripled to place the unit within 20 percent of full strength.

"I HAD A hard time resigning my commission in the Marine Corps," Burst said, expressing satisfaction with the way the Wayne O'Neill guardsmen have responded to his leadership.

Burst, who has a bachelor's degree in business and animal science from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, joined the Marines in 1971 "right out of college."

When he came off active duty, he remained in the Marine Corps Reserves attached to the Lincoln unit. But he returned to Grand Island, where he worked for Swift & Co. With Nebraska's only Marine Corps Reserves (headquartered in Omaha), Burst moved to Lincoln a year later. There he worked for American Stores, a packing plant.

In 1975, the Marine Corps unit in Lincoln was closed. Burst, who had moved to Wayne in 1974, was assigned to the Omaha unit. Before leaving Lincoln, he had joined NC(plus) Hybrids, a seed corn company.

TODAY, in addition to the National Guard command, Burst is the seed corn company's district sales manager for northeast Nebraska.

Before taking over the local command a year ago April, Burst commuted to Omaha for his Marine Corps duties. He and his wife, Joanie, owner and operator of Joanie Designs, have four children.

Burst said he was assumed by Spangler that the Wayne O'Neill command would offer solid backup at the sergeant level.

"I knew Sgt. Spangler was a capable man," Burst said. "So, I told (Lt. Col. John) Davis I'd give it a year."

Davis, who is based in Omaha, is company commander of the 1st Battalion, 134th Infantry.

"That was okay with him, so we went to work," Burst said. "And, we've had a drastic turnaround in recruiting and retention."

BURST CREDITS most of the recruitment success to the unit's efforts at the high school level.

"We're, right now, playing nip-and-tuck with full strength," he said, giving his recruiters a verbal pat on the back for their efforts.

And, Burst explained that a general upgrading of National Guard programs has given his staff the tools for recruitment.

One program, which the Wayne O'Neill unit recruiters have actively pursued, involves signing up juniors and seniors for an All Nebraska Platoon.

Nearly 30 northeast Nebraska recruits for the Wayne O'Neill unit trained at Fort Benning, Ga., this past summer.

"We recruit out of high school and they go as a group for 13 weeks of summer training," Burst explained.

THE KEY to the program is that "four or five kids go together," Burst said. "If one makes it, they all make it."

That type of training builds esprit de corps," Burst added.

The Wayne unit recruits at the high school level in Wisner, West Point, Beemer, Bancroft, Pender, Wakefield, Allen, Newcastle, Ponca, Randolph, Laurel, Hartington and Winslow.

Board of Education rules prevent the unit from recruiting at Wayne High School. But, O'Neill recruits in much the same manner at high schools throughout a territory that extends well beyond that city's market area.

"When they come back (from training)...if we do our job, we keep them," Burst said.

"THERE'S REALLY no magic key to making a unit work, but there are things you have to do," Burst continued.

"When he (the guardsman) goes home on Sunday, he has to feel satisfied that he has accomplished something," the commander added.

Burst, who expresses a preference for training exercises in the field, said that Nebraska's winter weather sometimes interferes.

Training one weekend per month, the Wayne O'Neill unit has found Burst's leadership has brought them safely home from a stepped-up schedule of field training, even during the coldest months of the year.

A number of other National Guard incentives have made Burst's recruitment efforts easier.

AMONG THE National Guard enlistment incentives is a program that involves a 75 percent tuition assistance waiver at tax-supported institutions of higher learning.

Also, the guard allows a new recruit to pick between a $1,500 enlistment bonus or a $4,000 educational bonus program.

Another program picks up 15 percent of a student loan per year, for a recruit as long as the soldier remains with the National Guard.

That program, one of the newest in the National Guard's recruitment arsenal, was established last October. Spangler said it expires this October, but that he felt the program would be renewed by Congress.

And, a pay raise — expected to be as high as 14 percent — is expected this fall, according to Spangler and Burst.

TODAY, A guardsman can earn as much as $500 per month during training exercises, according to Spangler.

He said that starting pay for the one weekend-per-month duty obligation is about $67. That goes up with rank and years of service.

A buck sergeant with four years of service can make $100 per weekend," Spangler said, explaining that the National Guard is slated for a "substantial pay raise" in October.

Guardsmen are committed to 12 weekend training sessions per year, plus a 15-day annual training period, which usually involves summer camp.

Those without previous military service must take 12 weeks of military training at an active Army installation before returning to their local unit, Spangler said.

However, today there are alternatives to summer camp training, according to Burst. He said that a number of the Wayne unit guardsmen had schedule conflicts and were given other training options.

THE MAIN THING we worry about is training soldiers at combat proficiency," Burst said, explaining that most units would have 60 to 90 days notice before entering combat situations.

"You can't fake people (without training) and throw them into combat situations at that time," he said.

"We have to be familiar with all new weapons and remain proficient with existing weapons," he continued. "The men are trained in the mechanics, but the actual down-range firing of a weapon...that's something else."

Burst said summer camp puts the guardsmen in combat-training situations on a concentrated schedule.

"A lot of people think summer camp is a two-week party," he said. "Sure, they have their evenings free most of the time, but during the day we make every minute count."

BURST SAID regular Army evaluators critique the performance of units during the summer camp and report to the commanding officers on the strengths and weaknesses of the guardsmen.

"About 75 percent of this summer's training was based on what I saw go wrong at summer camp last year and what the critique said," Burst explained.

"What I look for as far as our company is if right today we got called to Europe, would I feel comfortable putting them up against the Russian Army," the commander said.

"Maintaining a unit at combat proficiency (for that) is very difficult to do during peace time," he continued. "The motivation factor is just not there."

BURST SAID that he and his officers set up a number of squad reaction combat situations throughout the year to test the company's readiness.

"We've done night maneuvers and night reconnaissance and security procedures," he said. "And, we've had winter survival exercises that included cross-country skiing. I try to come up with some unusual kinds of training."

The company's training facilities are somewhat limited, according to Burst. Several members of the unit have helped by gaining access to land.

Area guardsmen often train on a 1,500-acre tract on the Missouri River north of Newcastle. A second training site involves another 1,500 acres north of O'Neill on the Niobrara River.

However, the main training site for the Wayne group is some 2,000 acres just north of Stanton, according to Burst.

"The thing that hurts the most is spending so much time on the road to get to the training areas," he said.

BURST SAID the unit's three biggest tasks involve recruitment, retention of guardsmen and combat readiness.

"Our country is not ready to go to war," he said. "Military funding has been pinched and we're going to have to have better gear."

Burst, who is gearing up for a November recruitment campaign kickoff, said that he was convinced the men in the local unit stay with the National Guard "because they want to be here and the money's good."

He said he is pleased with the progress his unit has made.

"I want to stay here and watch this company grow to 100 percent strength," Burst said. "And, it's not inconceivable...that could happen by the end of the year."

Cablevision Offering HBO

HBO is coming to Wayne. On Friday night, Sept. 11, city cable television viewers can move that dial to Channel 11 for a week's worth of free Home Box Office fare.

Brought to the city by Wayne Cablevision Inc., 120 Third Street west, the HBO introductory offer will involve a half-price hookup from Sept. 7 through Sept. 25 according to Jack McEvoy, general manager based in Hays, Kans.

McEVROY SAID the HBO channel will add a 17th selection to Wayne Cablevision, which is available to city residents only. After the free viewing week, HBO programming will shift from Channel 11 to a permanent spot on the television dial Channel 5, according to McEvoy.

He said the sign-up promotion, which begins Tuesday, offers the service to cable subscribers only.

The current monthly cable television fee for Wayne subscribers is $7.95. HBO will cost subscribers an additional $9.95 for a total of $17.90 per month.

"IT'S A premium service to our customers," McEvoy said. "HBO is one of several available across the country. We think it is by far and away the best. Some 70 percent of all premium service subscribers across the country have HBO."

McEvoy said the free preview week, which ends on Sept. 17, gives cable subscribers an opportunity to watch part of the programming and make up their own mind about it.

On Sept. 4, HBO is expanding its programming to a 24-hour weekend (Friday and Saturday night) format, McEvoy said.

And, he explained, on Jan. 1, 1982, HBO will offer 24-hour programming seven days a week.

"PRIMARILY, it's a movie channel," McEvoy said. "In addition to movies, HBO broadcasts some selected sporting events that commercial television doesn't give much attention to."

After the free viewing week, non-subscribers will view a scrambled screen on Channel 5 — the Wayne HBO channel, he ex-

"The subscriber is under no contractual obligation," he said. "If, after signing up, they decide they don't want it, all they have to do is tell us and we'll cancel their HBO service."

McEvoy said that cable subscribers will soon be getting an HBO viewing guide to help them select programming on the channel.

ALL CABLE television subscribers should get the viewing guide in time for the free viewing week, he explained.

After that, he said, only HBO subscribers will get the guide, which arrives by mail at no additional cost.

The guide not only lists the programs and viewing times, but also gives an explanation of the story line and a motion picture rating, he said.

McEvoy said the guide offers viewers, particularly parents, an opportunity to select programming for their home.

Wayne Cablevision personnel offering subscriber service includes Maxine Robins, office manager, and Richard Van Every, technician manager.

Wayne Herald Starts Subscription Drive

With this issue, The Wayne Herald launches a month-long fall subscription campaign.

The campaign, which ends on Oct. 1, offers new readers a free 8x10 color studio photograph for a one-year subscription sign-up during September.

And, the same free-photograph offer is good for long-time readers of The Wayne Herald who extend their current subscription for a year.

A one-year subscription for readers in Wayne, Pierce, Cedar, Dixon, Thurston, Cuming, Stanton and Madison counties is $12.79.

PLUS, THERE'S a special bonus offer for those who buy a two-year subscription or extend their current subscription for two years.

Those readers will have the same opportunity for the free 8x10 color photograph — to be taken by Blake Studios of Wayne — plus a $4.58 discount on the regular two-year subscription price of $25.58.

That means, during September, you can sign up for two years of The Wayne Herald — more than 200 issues — for $21.

For a two-year subscriber, the price per copy is less than half the cost of buying The Wayne Herald over the counter at 20 cents per issue.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS and those renewing their subscriptions will get a gift certificate at The Wayne Herald for a free 8x10 studio color photograph setting at Blake Studio.

The studio settings will be a subscriber's choice and may include the entire family, one member, or any combination, including pets.

Additional charges will be made for settings outside the Blake Studio — outdoor or home settings, for instance.

 torney Budd Bornhoff filed third degree assault charges against Zeiss.

Zeiss, appearing without a lawyer before Wayne County Court Judge James Duggan, pleaded guilty and a pre sentence investigation was ordered.

Judge Duggan set 1 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 24, as the date for sentencing.

Meanwhile, the Moores filed a complaint with the Nebraska Professional Practices Commission, an arm of the State Education Department.

The panel, which may begin its inquiry as early as next week, has the authority to suspend or revoke an educator's certificate.

ZEISS HAS reportedly told Sheriff's Department investigators that unidentified youths frequently drive by his Wayne home yelling insults and throwing objects at the house.

On the night of July 25, following another incident, Zeiss reportedly got into his vehicle and began following a car.

The assault on Moore occurred after Zeiss got the vehicle to pull over, according to investigation reports.

Zeiss, according to the Moores, called the senior high school student the next day (July 26) to apologize for a case of mistaken identity.

Fifteen days later, the Moores brought their case against Zeiss before the school board.

WEIBLE AND three co-defendants were arrested last year in Winslow during the late hours of Dec. 18 and early hours of Dec. 19 when Nebraska State Patrol narcotics agents staged a drug deal and subsequent raid on the Dale Busskohl home.

Weible, who was eventually tried on two felony cocaine counts and a marijuana charge, was convicted by a Wayne County jury in late June.

Busskohl was sentenced to 2 to 5 years in the state penitentiary. Vernon Sarha, who turned state's evidence, was sentenced to 300 days in the Pierce County Jail. Diane Coyle, Busskohl's girlfriend, was fined $100 and ordered to take a drug rehabilitation course.

3 Constitutional Offices Under Fire From Unicameral

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Three constitutional offices — the state treasurer, state auditor and lieutenant governor — have not been without their critics this year.

That's not to say the offices and their offices have enjoyed criticism free years since their creation. But it does seem the three offices have been in the news more this year than during at least the past five years.

Nebraskans probably will be hearing a lot more about the three offices now that a legislative committee has conducted a public hearing on an interim study resolution dealing with various aspects of the constitutionally created arms of government.

SEN. DON WESELY of Lincoln introduced the resolution, which calls for a study of the feasibility of proposing a constitutional change to abolish the state treasurer's of-ice, a proposal to put the auditor's office under the Legislature's control and a suggestion to discontinue the lieutenant governor as the Legislature's presiding officer.

During a recent hearing on Wesely's resolution, both the treasurer and lieutenant governor were present or were represented, but no one came from the auditor's office. And it's the auditor's office that has been the subject of the most criticism lately.

LI Gov. Roland Luedtke couldn't make the hearing, so his assistant read a prepared statement in which Luedtke supported removing the lieutenant governor from the Legislature. Such a move, Luedtke said, would make the office more accountable.

Luedtke, former Speaker of the Legislature, came under fire this session when he cast the deciding 25th vote on the controversial multibank holding company bill. The validity of his vote is now being studied by the courts.

Luedtke, in supporting the removal of the lieutenant governor from the Legislature, is practicing what he preaches. He often lets Speaker Richard Marvel preside over the Legislature while works on other duties of his office.

ALSO APPEARING at the recent hearing was newly appointed state Treasurer Kay Orr. She and her predecessor, Frank Marsh, were joined by others in opposing abolition of the office.

The Constitutional Revision and Recreation Committee heard testimony that abolition would be unwise, but some changes in the office might be warranted and feasible. Wesely believes other agencies could handle the duties of the treasurer's office. He also has suggested some other alternatives to abolition.

For example, he said one possibility would be to make the treasurer the head of the state Department of Administrative Services. Another option he said would be to make revisions that would result in giving the treasurer's office more responsibility.

Another option, which has some obvious drawbacks, would be to let the governor or Legislature appoint the treasurer. The trouble with that option is that the people wouldn't have much input in the decision, which critics would charge was politically motivated. Now, voters select their treasurer.

THE THIRD proposal in Wesely's resolution — putting the auditor's office under the Legislature's control — was the one that attracted no one from the auditor's office. But then state Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson hasn't been a very public person even in time of stress, such as when his office was under fire earlier this year.

Johnson's former deputy, Chuck Patton, did show up at the hearing and supported the proposal. He said the office would be more accountable under the Legislature's control.

Patton was fired by Johnson in June, but he believes he lost his job because he refused to sign an audit of the governor's office. The audit, which kept the office in the news for some time, indicated the governor's office charges some of its expenses to other offices.

Senator's on the legislative committee that is handling Wesely's resolution could culminate their efforts by introducing bills during the 1982 session. But even if no legislation is forthcoming after this interim study, each of the offices involved is now at least on notice that the office is being watched, and legislative efforts to make changes might surface down the road.

UNDER FIRE — Within hours after the state Commission on Aging selected a new executive director, the appointment was clearly less than unanimous.

Five of the 12 commission members resigned in protest of the appointment of Patrick B. Augustine of Lawrence, Kan., a former Kansas legislator who no doubt is used to controversy by now.

While he was in the Kansas House of Representatives, an audit revealed the state had overpaid him for expenses and theft charges were filed but later dismissed.

Some of his past troubles no doubt are at the heart of recent criticism about his appointment to the Nebraska job. But Augustine correctly notes that he had major support from the commission for his appointment, and he intends to take the job.

BUT GOV. CHARLES THONE is involved now, and it might be awhile before the controversy settles down. The five resigning commission members want to meet with the governor, who indicated he might meet with all 12 commissioners.

Plus, Augustine wants to meet with Thone so the governor can hear first-hand what the new aging director does, wants, has done, can do and will do.

Thone's comments after that session could be instrumental in indicating what kind of future Augustine will have as the new aging director.

Spirit of September

September quickens the pace around Wayne. Not that it's asleep any other month. Quite the contrary. But, somehow, September quickens the pace. It's a good feeling — a purposeful feeling. And much of it has to do with education.

When those students return, the educational process stirs this town.

Though there's always a complaint or two here and there — by and large, most Wayne area residents extend a sincere welcome to the students, faculty members and administrators.

Even the complainers smile when telling or retelling a story about college students, campus capers or any one of a number of episodes that have become part of Wayne's history.

It's a history rich with human experiences that bring American town and academic gown together for another year of educational challenges.

The town and gown relationship that builds in Wayne each year, is further proof that people can and do make things work.

While many small Midwestern towns are faced with the constant challenge of renewal, Wayne is blessed with the challenges that come with new people, new ideas, new thinking, new approaches, new relationships, new experiences and new tomorrows.

The willingness of townspeople to accept students as new residents, and the willingness of students to accept the town as a new home, speaks welcome loud and clear.

It's a new beginning each fall, but that new beginning is built on years of hard work and understanding — the kind that builds on tradition with an eye toward the future.

Young and old alike speak of the tradition with a sense of pride that comes with the rewards of experiencing education at its finest.

Perhaps that quickened pace is part of an educational eagerness found in Wayne — from downtown to the college campus.

After all, we're all students learning to make our own way in life. Certainly, our own education comes from a willingness to learn from each other on and off campus.

That's the spirit that seems to thrive here.

It's the spirit of September in search of tomorrow's sunrise.

When it dawns on Wayne, it captures the entire community.

Japanese Expanding U.S. Food Importing

By M.M. Van Kirk
Nebraska Farm Bureau

Maintenance of productivity remains the key as to why exports of U.S. farm commodities continue to grow while U.S. producers of non agricultural products fall behind foreign manufacturers in both domestic and foreign markets.

Recently a USDA trade analyst reassured U.S. agricultural interests after they became jittery when the Japanese, under pressure, agreed to cut back car exports to the United States by 8 percent between April 1981 and March 1982 to help the floundering U.S. auto makers make a recovery.

The trade analyst told U.S. farmers that more restrictive Japanese policies on agricultural items of importance to the United States are unlikely and that the Japanese market for imported agricultural commodities will continue to expand over the next several years, due to continued growth in population and real incomes and slow growth in Japan's domestic food production.

The Great Gun Grab

The National Rifle Association acting in conjunction with four residents of Morton Grove Ill. has filed a lawsuit in the Circuit Court of Cook County challenging the validity of the recently passed Morton Grove ordinance which would ban the private possession of handguns in the northern Illinois town.

The NRA's suit filed on Aug. 10, seeks to block any implementation of a Morton Grove ordinance which was passed by the town's Village trustees on June 8 and which was scheduled to take effect on Sept. 6.

The suit maintains that the Morton Grove law is invalid because it violates Article I, Section 22 of the Illinois State Constitution, which guarantees individual citizens the state the right to keep and bear arms.

The Morton Grove law, which sparked similar anti handgun legislation in other Chicago suburbs, was the nation's first out and out handgun ban affecting private citizens. It provides that no person in the community of 25,000 shall possess any handgun unless the gun has been rendered permanently inoperable.

Citizens were given a 90 day grace period in which they were to "voluntarily and peacefully" deliver their handguns to the Morton Grove Police Department. After that time, any citizen found in possession of a handgun would face arrest, prosecution and, if convicted, jail sentences and/or fines.

Exemptions were provided for police officers, security personnel, licensed pistol clubs and other state designated authorities.

In a prepared statement the plaintiffs said, "We feel that the Morton Grove law violates our right to keep and bear arms, a right which is expressly guaranteed by the Constitution of the State of Illinois."

"It would force us, and other law abiding gun owners in Morton Grove, to surrender our handguns even though we had in no way criminally misused them. This is a law which should not be allowed to stand in the United States of America."

Article I, Section 22 of the Illinois State Constitution says that, "Subject only to the police power, the right of the individual citizen to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

In 1970, the Sixth Illinois Constitutional Convention's Committee on the Bill of Rights officially interpreted this as a guarantee that "a private citizen has the right to possess and make reasonable use of arms that lawabiding citizens commonly employ for purposes of recreation or protection of person or property."

The committee also said at that time that any use of the police power or law that "attempt to ban all possession or use of such arms" would be invalid.

When the Morton Grove ordinance was passed, proponents of the measure said that they had been promised free legal support from a Washington based law firm concerned with gun control.

Super Safety Week Slated

Several hundred Nebraskans attending a Governor's Conference on Traffic Safety in Lincoln Aug. 25 were challenged by me to find a way to reduce traffic fatalities as we have reduced traffic accidents.

State and local officials and representatives of the private sector spent a full day trying to solve the riddle of why Nebraska highway deaths are up in 1981 even though the number of accidents is less than in 1980.

governor charley thone

DURING THE first six months of 1981, the number of highway accidents was 11 percent less than in the first half of 1980 and the number of highway accidents involving injuries was down 6 percent, but the number of fatalities was up 18 percent.

It will take several weeks to work out some of the best recommendations made at the conference. There were actually more excellent ideas than can be carried out by available personnel.

One traffic safety idea I launched at the conference is for a Super Safety Week this fall. We will ask churches, schools, civic groups, business, labor, local governments and the news media to participate in a seven day blitz to make Nebraskans more highway safety conscious.

One campaign we launched in May is producing outstanding results. It recognizes that about half of the nation's highway fatalities involve drinking drivers. Report Every Drunken Driver Immediately, or REDDI, asks Nebraska citizens to call the local law enforcement agency or the State Patrol whenever a car is seen weaving on the street or highway.

DURING JULY about 400 REDDI calls were made by citizens in the state. These calls triggered police investigations that resulted in about 225 arrests. Whenever a law enforcement officer removes a drunk from behind the wheel, he or she prevents possible highway slaughter.

Nebraska is going to reduce its highway fatalities. It will work for whatever steps seem to be the most promising — whether it takes legislation, or new procedures in law enforcement, prosecutions, the courts or parole. We won't neglect the contributions that can be made by the private and volunteer sectors.

We'll have safer streets and highways in Nebraska. And we'll be deeply indebted to the dedicated men and women who attended the Governor's Conference on Highway Safety.

Why not a senior center for the old people, by the old people and of the old people?

Is a babysitter worth what we are paying for one?

I believe that most of the older people could adjust to it.

What good is a babysitter if the kids have to take care of themselves much of the time anyway?

Former Mayor Decker suggested that the babysitter should be paid $10 an hour. It didn't get any better.

Is it any better?

Aren't we paying too much for so little?

100 Years Later... Youngsters Still Come to Learn

One hundred years ago, Wayne County School District 15 was organized as pioneers of the county saw the need to educate its young people. Today, youngsters are still receiving a topnotch education in the one-room schoolhouse located four miles north and one-half west of Wayne. On Sunday, Sept. 6, the school will celebrate its 100th birthday with an open house reception from 1 to 5 p.m. Former teachers and students as well as the general public are invited to visit the school. There will be old-time games as well as reminiscences of years gone by in the little school. Persons with pictures, old books, or other items of interest are invited to bring them for display. For more information contact Judy Echtenkamp, 375-2521, or Rhonda Sebade, 375-2659. This year there are 11 students, including John Schuttler, Keila Echtenkamp, Coleen Otte, Susan Sorensen, Chad Douglas Spahr, Holly Sebade, Chad Hank, Chad Sebade, Dusty Milligan, Bowdie Otte and David Sorensen. Teacher is Lynal Franzen.

Down by the Riverside

THESE CROSSBUCK braces support aluminum irrigation pipe that reaches into the bottom of a riverbed northeast of Wayne. Part of the pump, which lifts the water several hundred feet, can be seen halfway down the riverbank. The pipe crosses under a county road and delivers water to a nearby field. Most center-pivot irrigation systems pull water from a field-side well. This system caught the water on its way by the adjacent farmland.

Sodium Hypochlorite Successful Swine Parvovirus Preventative

Sodium hypochlorite is probably the best choice among several alternatives tested for disinfecting hog premises to prevent porcine parvovirus (PPV) infection, a scientist of USDA's Agricultural Research Service says.

PPV produces large losses to pork producers annually from reproductive failure, resorbed embryos and stillborn or mummified pigs.

PPV vaccines are not readily available, says veterinary medical officer Taimage T. Brown, Jr. So housing hogs in buildings freed of PPV contamination by cleaning and disinfection is essential for preventing infection.

against pseudorabies and transmissible gastroenteritis viruses reduced liters numbers of organisms in solution by 10,000 or more. Against PPV only sodium hypochlorite and sodium hydroxide were similarly effective.

SODIUM hypochlorite is a more desirable disinfectant than sodium hydroxide for use in PPV decontamination, Brown says. Sodium hypochlorite is effective against many viruses, is free of poisonous residues, safe and easy to handle, readily available and inexpensive. Although sodium hydroxide will also inactivate many swine viruses, Brown says, it is very caustic and must be handled carefully. Runoff of excess disinfectant is very toxic and repeated use will corrode metal and deteriorate wood.

Formaldehyde solution and for maldehyde vapor were also effective disinfectants against PPV but are slow acting and have other characteristics that make them more difficult or unpleasant to use than sodium hydroxide.

Second Income Vital to Nebraska Farmers City Job Checks Keep Many on the Farm

Working in town provides the staying power for many Nebraska farm families to remain on the farm, a University of Nebraska study has concluded.

Without a second income, many families with small farming operations would have to come below the poverty level, according to the study.

Ron Hanson and Bruce Johnson, associate professors of agricultural economics, and Stuart L. Bartruff, a former graduate student, based their conclusions on a survey in early 1978 of 3,000 farm families in a 45 county eastern Nebraska area. Approximately 25 percent of the families returned questionnaires.

FORTY FIVE percent of respondents reported that either the farmer, the farm wife or both were employed off the farm, Hanson said. Average family income for 1978 for all survey respondents was $20,500 with about one fourth coming from off farm sources.

The families' reliance on off-farm income varied widely, but in general families with lower net farm income were more reliant on outside earnings, Hanson said. "Many of the families with small farms would have total family income below the poverty level if they had to depend solely on farm income."

Respondents who reported less than $10,000 in net farm income for 1978 averaged off-farm income of more than $9,000. In contrast, those with net farm income greater than $30,000 reported less than $4,500 from off farm sources.

Off farm income for farmers with smaller operations was usually wages or salary, Hanson said, while larger farm operators earned most of their off farm income from business ventures related to farming, such as seed sales or custom spraying, or from dividends and interest on investments.

BECAUSE smaller farming operations had higher off farm income and larger ones had lower farm income, income disparity among farm families was smaller, Hanson said, although smaller farmers still had below average total income.

Since 1970 about 55 percent of total income to farmers nationwide has come from off farm sources. The trend has been constant, Hanson said, although the amount increases a little each year. The U.S. Department of Agriculture expects 1981 to be a good year for off farm earnings for farm families.

Nebraska's lower proportion of off farm employment may be attributable to lack of opportunity, Hanson said. In Illinois where he studies dual employment for his dissertation, more than half of all farm families sought off farm jobs. Illinois has many more metropolitan areas, he noted, and they are well-distributed across the state, making jobs more available to more farm families.

IN THE Nebraska study, one-third of all respondents reported working off the farm in 1978. Forty percent of the farmers with net farm incomes under $10,000 held other jobs, and of these, two out of 10 worked full time. Farmers and farm wives working off the farm engaged in wide variety of off farm jobs. One-third of all farm wives surveyed held a job in town.

Most farmers with off farm jobs have held them an average of 12 years, and most viewed their dual employment situation as permanent, Hanson said. They seemed to see it as a very acceptable way of life - few would care to give up the job and farm full-time or give up the farm and move to town.

Dual employment was formerly regarded as a way to get into farming full-time, Hanson said. "We used to think that a small farmer with a job in town would reinvest that off-farm income into the farm in hopes of getting more land or equipment to enable him to farm full-time."

"Now, though, most use the additional income for a better standard of living, for such things as household luxuries or college for the kids. Dual employment is not the inroad to full-time farming that it used to be," He estimated that less than 20 percent of farmers with jobs in town are working toward farming full-time.

HANSON noted that farm family members are willing to travel large distances to a good job - up to 30 or 40 miles. Of survey respondents, farmers averaged a commuting distance of 13 miles one way. Farm wives had a shorter commute, less than four miles one way.

The importance of off-farm jobs to farm families was paralleled by the importance of their labor to area employers, according to the survey, Bartruff interviewed 21 selected manufacturers in smaller cities about hiring preferences and learned that the businesses preferred to hire farm family members.

"In general, they had better work habits, were willing to put in a full day's work, were more conscientious and more mechanically minded," Hanson said. Farm family members were more easily trained and more accustomed to work, the manufacturers said. Two thirds of the businessmen said farm family members were more productive, dependable and trustworthy.

Eighty-five percent of the manufacturers said the availability of a farm labor supply was one factor considered in choosing a location for their business, Hanson said. Manufacturers did not indicate a need to make special accommodations for farm family members tended to schedule their vacations during the peak work periods on the farm.

Of respondents not working off the farm, nearly three fourths said they considered farming a full time occupation that did not leave any excess labor for working off the farm, according to Hanson. These respondents were more likely to have larger operations and higher net farm income, he noted.

Expert Sees Ag Legislation Shifts

The pending 1981 Farm Bill has been in the limelight lately, but national policy affecting farmers encompasses much more than that specific bill, a University of Nebraska policy expert said this week.

"I believe that fiscal monetary and trade policies of the federal government are now more important to the welfare of agriculture and rural people than commodity programs," which are emphasized in versions of the 1981 farm bill, said Roy Frederick, extension economist public policy.

Thus the upcoming farm legislation needs to be interpreted in a much broader context, Frederick said, and an historical perspective is useful.

FARM commodity programs were originated 50 years ago because of a concern that the farm population was disadvantaged relative to the non farm population. During the '30s, per capita income of farmers averaged only about 30 percent of non farmers, Frederick noted.

Since then, however, the economic disparity between the two sectors has narrowed. The annual ratio of farm to non farm income was no less than 74 percent in the 1970s, and in 1973 and 1979, per capita income of farmers was actually higher than that of non farmers.

The improved income status of farmers was largely due to agricultural exports, which increased from $7 billion in 1970 to $40 billion in 1980, Frederick said. "Prior to the 1970s, U.S.

agriculture was plagued with excess capacity - we were consistently producing more than required for ourselves or foreign customers."

However, with the Russian grain sale in 1972, the worldwide market began to open up and there was no longer a need to use government programs to take substantial amounts of land out of production, Frederick explained. As a consequence, old style land retirement programs, such as the soil bank, became obsolete.

"MORE recently the focus has been on reducing instability in prices and incomes. Prices fluctuate much more than they did prior to the 1970s. This causes problems as farmers try to plan for the future, especially for those who have assumed large amounts of debt with the expectation that farm product prices will continue to rise," he said.

Because of this, programs that help farmers counter the temporary price instability are perhaps more needed than ever, the policy specialist said. Nonrecourse commodity loans serve this function well, as long as loan rates are not set at an artificially high level.

"Rates should be set consistent with what the worldwide market for ag commodities will bear," he said. "I doubt that producers, taxpayers or the federal government want to have loan rates set at a level that would start a massive long-term buildup in stocks."

"A wide range of government policies in addition to production ups and downs have contributed to fluctuating prices," he said, "including shifting from fixed to floating currency exchange rates, export embargoes and frequent changes in monetary policy which cause fluctuations in interest rates."

even more important in the months and years ahead, Frederick predicted. He suggested three examples.

"Inflation appears to be slowing after increasing of a 13 percent annual rate in 1979 and 12 percent in 1980. Prices of farm inputs are highly sensitive to inflationary forces while prices of farm commodities are less responsive to inflation. As a result, a sustained effort to reduce inflation would be more helpful than just about any specific policy initiative the federal government might take toward agriculture," Frederick said.

"Historically, interest rates have fallen as the inflation rate decreases. But current policies of the Federal Reserve System suggest that interest rates may remain high for some times, causing severe cash flow problems for farmers with large amounts of debt. "A reduction in interest rates should both increase the price of farm commodities and reduce farmers' cost of doing business," he said.

"The value of the dollar in international transactions is tied closely to inflation and interest rates. During 1981, declining inflation and still-high interest rates have contributed to a stronger dollar. "Our currency has gained 25 to 30 percent in relationship to major European currencies. Unfortunately, a stronger dollar makes our agricultural commodities less attractive to foreign customers," Frederick explained.

BROWN, AT the National Animal Disease Center in Ames, Iowa, points out that cleaning without proper disinfection does not eliminate PPV contamination. Cleaned facilities may harbor infectious PPV for long periods.

Brown evaluated disinfectants, which are in general use by farmers or veterinarians, for effectiveness in inactivating PPV, pseudorabies virus and transmissible gastroenteritis virus.

PPV is one of a group of viruses often resistant to disinfectants, the other two viruses represent a type generally susceptible to many disinfectants.

Corn Production Outlook Surges

Corn production for Nebraska on Aug. 1 is forecast at 759 million bushels, up a sharp 13 percent from the July 1 forecast due to very favorable July weather, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Total production, if realized, would be 26 percent above the 1980 crop. The yield is estimated at 110 bushels per acre, 13 bushels above a month earlier and 25 bushels higher than last year's heat and drought-reduced yield. Acres in tilled for grain harvest are estimated at 6.9 million acres, down 3 percent from last year. The 1979 record crop of 822 million bushels averaged a record high 115 bushels.

Dryland corn production is forecast at 135.3 million bushels, 31 percent above last year. Yield is forecast at 69.4 bushels per acre, up 21.2 bushels from last year. Farmers are expected to harvest 1.95 million acres of dryland corn for grain, 9 percent below last year.

Irrigated corn production is estimated at 623.7 million bushels and, if realized, would be 25 percent above last year and the highest of record. Yield is forecast at 126 bushels per acre, 25 bushels higher than last year. Acreage for grain harvest is estimated at 4.95 million acres, equal to last year's record acreage. Irrigated acreage totals 72 percent of the all corn for grain acreage, up from last year's 70 percent.

Allen Men Attend Seminar

Jim Stapleton, Willis Schütz, Linn Martes and Dale Eklson, representing the Farmers Cooperative Elevator Co. of Allen, attended a two day Director Seminar at Lake Okoboji, Iowa, recently as part of the 30th annual Summer Conference sponsored by Land O'Lakes Agricultural Services, Fort Dodge, Iowa.

Board of Director members of local cooperatives from six midwest states were introduced to new management information designed to assist them in carrying out their responsibilities to the farmer membership.

The 1981 conference theme of "Grow For It" emphasized utilizing technology, people and regional cooperative resources. The conference stressed that utilizing technology that is here, the great resource of people, couple with the commitment from Land O'Lakes as a regional will enable local cooperative to deal with tomorrow's challenges by planning today.

Jonathan Stelling of Dixon County took top honors with a perfect score and received a purple ribbon.

Others receiving prizes were Richard Roland, Steve Rethwisch, Vini Johar and Marcia Rethwisch, all of Wayne County and Robert Beiringer of Madison County. Blue ribbons went to Steve Schlichty of Burr County and Jassi Johar of Wayne County.

All of these 4-Hers except Richard and Steve will compete in the state contest held at the State Fair on Saturday, Sept. 5. Richard and Steve have won the state contest in the past and are ineligible to compete.

Mike Rethwisch and Blaine Johs conducted the contest.

Range Judging Set for Allen

This year's Area Six Range Judging Contest, covering 19 northeast Nebraska counties, will be held at Allen, on Tuesday, Sept. 15, according to Stan Stirling, Dixon County extension agent. The contest involves plant identification and evaluation of range site and condition. An educational program on Range Management will also be presented.

Those interested in participating may contact their vocational agriculture teacher, Soil Conservation Service office, Natural Resources district, or county extension agent for entry forms and contest details.

Oats Production Jumps 11%

Oats production in Nebraska is estimated at 16.8 million bushels, 11 percent above last year.

Rye production at 532,000 bushels is 14 percent above last year.

Sugar beet production of 1,520,000 tons is 14 percent lower.

The dry edible bean production estimate, at a record high 3.7 million cwt., is 42 percent higher.

Hay production at 6.7 million tons is down 6 percent from last year.

Fat Cattle Inventory Grows

Nebraska cattle feeders had 1,340,000 cattle on feed on Aug. 1. This inventory was up 3 percent from last year and up 4 percent from 1979.

Marketings of fed cattle during July by Nebraska feeders totaled 290,000, an increase of 12 percent from 1980 but 6 percent below July 1979.

Placements of cattle into feedlots during July totaled 240,000 head, down 25 percent from the record high number placed a year ago and 4 percent below two years ago.

Wheat Trails 1980 Yield

The wheat crop in Nebraska is now estimated at 103.7 million bushels, 3 percent above a month earlier but 7 percent below last year.

Yield per acre at 34 bushels was up 1 bushel from last month but 4 bushels below 1980. Excellent yields on much of the Panhandle wheat acreage improved this month's production estimate.

Soybean Growers Set Record

Production of soybeans in Nebraska is estimated at a record 73.5 million bushels, 38 percent above the 1980 crop and 34 percent above the previous record for 1979.

Expected yield is 35 bushels per acre, 5 bushels higher than last year and 1 bushel below the record yield for 1977. Estimated acreage for harvest at 2.1 million acres is the highest of record and 19 percent above last year.

Sorghum Soars over 1979 Record

Sorghum grain production in Nebraska is expected to total a record 161.95 million bushels, up 33 percent from last year's crop and 7 percent above the 1979 previous record output.

Estimated yield of 79 bushels is up 19 bushels from last year and equal to 1979's record yield. Acreage for harvest is indicated at 2,050,000 acres, 1 percent above last year.

Eggshell Vaccination for Marek's Disease Major Breakthrough for Poultry Producers

Scientists now have vaccinated chicks through the eggshell before they hatch to prevent Marek's disease, a technique veterinarians believe can drastically cut the nation's poultry losses in the years ahead.

A vaccine for Marek's disease has been in use since 1971, but a technical problem has limited its effectiveness.

The problem, said Terry B. Kinney, acting administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service, is that chicks are vaccinated after they are hatched.

CHICKS usually are vaccinated within a few hours after hatching and then are placed in brooder houses where exposure to Marek's disease can occur, said Kinney, but the time between vaccination and exposure sometimes is so short that chicks do not develop adequate immunity.

Result: Some vaccinated chicks still get the disease. Vaccinating the chicks before they hatch solves this problem by giving them more time to develop the needed immunity, said Kinney.

These research results demonstrate for the first time that resistance can be established in chick embryos through vaccination. Use of the new technique will help the poultry industry save billions of dollars in the future, said Kinney.

"The savings will result from reduced deaths and condemnations of poultry, improved feed utilization and increased egg production."

Marek's disease is the leading cause of poultry losses.

USDA veterinary scientists developed the pre-hatch vaccination method at the Agricultural Research Service's Regional Poultry Laboratory at East Lansing, Mich.

Jagdev M. Sharma, USDA scientist who developed the technique, said birds vaccinated three days before hatch had an 8 to 1 ratio of disease resistance.

All unvaccinated birds developed the disease.

"We have found vaccination of chick embryos very successful," he said. "It had no adverse effect on percent of hatch or rates of gain."

Sharma said the chicks vaccinated before they hatch are protected by the time they hatch so they can overcome early exposure to the disease.

Before the vaccine became available to poultry producers, Marek's disease cost the poultry industry almost $300 million a year. In 1971, the first year the vaccine was used nationally, benefits to the poultry industry were estimated at about $30 million.

BY 1974, the first year the vaccine was used by the entire poultry industry, gross benefits had climbed to $628 million and are expected to reach $2 billion by 1983, compared to vaccine research costs of $32 million over a 10-year period.

Once testing of the new vaccination technique was started, Sharma said, "We were surprised by the results. Chicks were protected from Marek's disease by the time they hatched, so they overcame early exposure to the disease much better than chicks vaccinated at hatching, now a common practice in commercial production.

Post-hatch inoculation

"Whether our methods, under laboratory conditions, would be a practical alternative remains to be determined. It also remains to be seen whether this method of vaccination is feasible for other diseases.

"We found optimum protection was achieved if vaccination was done at about the eighteenth day of embryonation, the same time embryonated eggs routinely are transferred to hatching trays. It may be possible for commercial producers to vaccinate and transfer eggs at the same time," Sharma said.

Sharma and a colleague, Ben R. Burmester, exposed test birds—of a genetic line developed for use at the laboratory because it is highly susceptible to Marek's disease—three days after hatching.

Vaccination before birth has been tried with mammals in medical research, said Sharma, but these injections are laborious and resulting abortion problems have not been overcome.

Late season broadleaf weed control in corn and sorghum is possible with 2,4-D. Such a treatment could make harvesting easier and reduce weed seed production.

Both corn and sorghum can suffer yield reductions from 2,4-D applied during the flowering stage. As a guideline, 2,4-D on sorghum can be resumed after the silk turns brown. The use of 2,4-D on sorghum can be resumed after the grain reaches the early dough stage. Sorghum should not be sprayed with 2,4-D between the beginning of head emergence and the milk stage.

These late 2,4-D treatments will not cause lodging or stalk brittleness in the crop.

A one pound per acre application of 2,4-D will control many large broadleaf weeds, including pig weed, sunflower and cocklebur, but will be weak on velvetleaf. The weeds become increasingly difficult to control as they mature. Ester formulations are likely to perform better than amines; however, esters produce vapors that may damage sensitive crops, gardens and ornamentals.

CORN SILAGE — Here are some suggestions for good corn silage:

1. Cut at proper stage of maturity — maximum yield and nutritional value occur when kernels are fully denting but plant is still relatively green.
 2. Moisture content of 65 percent is ideal. Ideally, the bottom layers could be somewhat drier to take up any seepage, and top off silo with wetter silage for a better seal.
 3. A fine chop (1/2 inches) is important to insure a tight pack and reduce sorting and refusals at feedout. Keep cutter knives sharp and shear bars adjusted — reduced power requirements is a side benefit. Consider a recycler screen, if the crop gets too dry.
 4. Fill, pack and cover as rapidly as possible. For uprights, use a "distributor" to ensure more uniform filling and prevent "coning" — it will increase silo capacity about 15 percent. For bunkers and pits, pack continuously. Layer and pack every load in on a gradual incline. Cover the bunker in sections with black plastic immediately after final packing and weight it down. Plastic is expensive, but its cheaper than losing an extra 10-15 percent of your silage to spoilage.
 5. Consider a non-protein nitrogen silage additive such as anhydrous ammonia (cold-flow), Pro-Sil or urea.
- The ammonia systems — Cold-Flow and Pro-Sil — have an advantage over urea losses, and increasing silage lactic acid content and bunklife.

MILDRED THOMPSON of Wayne now has $1,000 in bonus bucks to spend at any participating Wayne business. She was working at Ben Franklin Thursday night when her name was announced during the weekly Grand Give-A-Way. Jean Nuss presented the bonus bucks to his employee, Thursday.

City Woman Wins Bonus Bucks; Tripleheader Returns Thursday

A Wayne woman won the $1,000 bonus bucks prize last Thursday night in Wayne's Grand Give-A-Way contest.

Mildred Thompson was working at the Ben Franklin store when her name was called.

So, this Thursday the contest's tripleheader returns with three $300 bonus bucks prizes.

That means three names will be called at 15 minute intervals beginning at 7:45 p.m.

NEXT Thursday, Sept. 10, the grand slam returns with one $1,000 prize. And the tripleheader is on again for Thursday, Sept. 17.

In this Thursday night's contest three names will be called — one at 7:45 p.m., one at 8 p.m. and one at 8:15 p.m.

Both contests, the tripleheader and the grand slam alternate on Thursday nights.

The winners of this Thursday's tripleheader must be in a participating store to claim the bonus bucks. All winners must claim the prize money within one minute after their name is announced.

AS BEFORE, spouses can claim the prize on behalf of the winner.

The new tripleheader twist alternates prizes, giving Wayne shoppers three chances at $350 each one week and a single shot at the $1,000 bonus bucks grand slam the next.

In the tripleheader, three names are announced at the 15 minute intervals regardless of a win or a loss on the first or second try. One name is announced in the grand slam.

This Thursday's winning name in the tripleheader contest will be announced in all participating Grand Give A Way stores.

PARTICIPATING stores include Arnie's Ford/Mercury, Associated Insurance, Ben Franklin, Bill's G.W., Black Knight, Burger Barn, Carhart Lumber, Charlie's Refrigeration, Chrysler Center, Coryell Derby, Diamond Center, Discount Furniture, El Toro Lounge and Ellingson Motors.

Hypnotherapist to Appear at WSC

A nationally-known expert in the field of hypnosis and unconscious communication, Tom DeLuca, will appear at Wayne State College on Monday, Sept. 14, at 8 p.m. in the Ramsey Theater.

A native of New York, DeLuca began work as a "hypnotherapist" dealing with psychosomatic disorders nearly five years ago. He claims that most of one's problems stem from a "negatively programmed unconscious mind."

communication with others in therapeutic or entertainment situations that allow him to induce hypnosis, "almost instantly," as well as to influence another person's mind through "unconscious communication."

The program, sponsored by the Student Activities Board at WSC, is free to students with ID's and $2 for the general public. After the show DeLuca will be available for a questions-and-answer session.

As a result of his work, DeLuca claims to have devised "rapid and unique" methods of communication with others in therapeutic or entertainment situations that allow him to induce hypnosis, "almost instantly," as well as to influence another person's mind through "unconscious communication."
