Planners discuss fitness facility

Wayne's City Planning Commission is awaiting a presentation of plans and specifications on Providence Medical Center's new physical fitness facility. Without the restrictions of a formal agenda Monday night, Planning Commission members found time to discuss the facility, which is being developed in the basement of the hospital.

Dr. Willis Wiseman, the facility is being developed as a preventive health care extension to the hospital.

The physical fitness facility, which will be owned by Providence Medical Center, is being developed by the hospital in conjunction with a recently formed non-profit corporation.

City planners expressed hope that the project sponsors would come before the commission with a presentation.

Kloster said he sent the hospital a letter on Friday "to clarify requirements for a building permit."

FURTHERMORE, Kloster said he felt it "would be wise on their part" to explore the covenant between the hospital and Wayne State College regarding use of the land site "particularly in light of the recent problem with the covenant."

Kloster's reference was to original plans that called for the construction of the Providence Medical Center Convent on land donated to the hospital by the college.

The covenant between the hospital and the college prohibited use of the land for anything other than medical facilities. Since the convent was housing, the Benedictine Missionary Sisters were barred from building there and selected a nearby site for the just completed convent.

KLOSTER SAID he pledged the city's efforts to expedite matters for the sponsors of the physical fitness facility, which will be housed below the hospital cafeteria.

Ellingson, who had a blueprint of the facilities floor plan, said he felt the matter would be coming before the commission soon.

Gary Van Meter, a commission member, said that as he understood it, the facility was a non-profit enterprise designed to be a physical fitness center that the "hospital ends up owning."

He said the program is similar to the one at the Marion Center. "The general idea is to promote physical fitness programs for preventative tenance," he added.

KLOSTER SAID there was some concern and debate over whether a building permit was required.

"It's almost as if they don't want to bring it before the board," he said.

When contacted Tuesday, Wiseman said he had responded to Kloster's letter on the building permit question. He said he expected the matter to be resolved soon.

"This is a serious physical fitness and prevention program," Wiseman said, explaining that the non-profit corporation is encouraging it, but that the facility would be owned by the hospital.

"IT'S ONLY one of many things the non-profit organization expects to encourage in the way of physical fitness in Wayne," Wiseman said.

"It's the development of hospital services," he continued.

He likened it to the development of other special services at the hospital.

General contractor for the physical fitness facility is Ofte Construction Co. of Wayne.

IN OTHER action before the commission, members discussed signs identifying home businesses.

Dick Keldel, a commission member, said that the planners had been involved in a number of past discussions regarding home business signs.

He asked whether the panel had any thoughts about enforcing the city codes on such signs. Keldel suggested that if the city was not going to enforce the sign codes, they should be eliminated.

ESU One board reviewing nepotism policy

Nepotism. That's an undercurrent that has been lurking at the policy-making mechanism of the Educational Service Unit One board for months.

And, Tuesday night, the board nearly flogged the matter to the surface.

The undercurrent prevailed, however, and the matter was referred to committee for review and recommendation.

BEFORE THE matter went to committee, however, board members were presented with a proposal on nepotism.

The proposal, drawn by board member and Wayne attorney Kenneth Olds, addresses a matter that has concerned ESU board members — both privately and publicly — for months.

And, public discussion of the matter has surfaced at the last three monthly board meetings.

Tuesday night's meeting in Laurel was no exception.

However, after a brief discussion, the matter was referred to the board's policy making committee for review and recommendation at the December meeting.

THE NEPOTISM proposal placed before the board for committee consideration Tuesday night states:

"It is the intent of the board to avoid situations where related personnel are in a supervisory capacity over other related employees of the (Educational Service) Unit since the board is of the opinion that such employment would be detrimental to the (Educational) Service Unit."

Furthermore, the proposal states: "...and it is the intention of the board to adopt this policy so as to avoid possible conflicts of interest between related personnel."

THURSTON COUNTY board member Darrell Merry, acting chairman Tuesday night due to the absence of Chairman William Wiese, suggested the proposal be placed with the policy-making committee.

The four other members attending the board meeting concurred.

The final paragraph of the proposal stated: "No personnel shall be employed by the Unit that are in the first-degree relationship with the administrator or any other supervisory employees of the district, or in other situations where a conflict of interest would occur between such related personnel."

THAT'S ALL legalese for a proposed ban on nepotism, which is generally defined as patronage bestowed or favoritism shown on the basis of family relationship — particularly in business or politics.

In the ESU board's case, it's the business and politics of education.

Though no one has been publicly singled out as a target of the board's anti-nepotism campaign, it is a known fact that ESU One employs Harry Mills as administrator, and his wife, Ardyth Mills, as a film librarian.

Both are based at ESU headquarters in Wakefield.

Several board members have indicated that other man-and-wife teams are employed by ESU One, including treasurer John Portwood of Wakefield and his wife, Marjorie.

HOWEVER, most of the discussion has focused on the administrator and the film librarian.

Furthermore, board members are split over whether any newly adopted anti-nepotism policy affects those who already are employed by the Unit.

One group maintains that such a policy would prevent future problems with nepotism. Another group looks on any adopted policy as a means to deal with current employees.

Tuesday night's discussion on policy making also touched on reduction in force and grievance procedures.

Those policy considerations also were referred to committee for review and recommendation to the board at the December meeting.

Several board members have indicated

Second meeting set City task force lauded by state energy officials

Wayne's fledgling Energy Task Force has already received statewide attention.

And, task force chairman John Vakoc is pleased with that attention.

"I think it's good," Vakoc said Tuesday. "Any time we can get that kind of attention, it probably means we've accomplished something."

The chairman was referring to the praise Wayne received — for forming the task force — during the day-long Nebraska Community Improvement Program activities in Lincoln Saturday.

LARRY RIEGEL of the Nebraska Energy Office and Dan Meyer, legislative aide to state Sen. John DeCamp, praised Wayne and Lincoln as the only cities in the state to form a group specifically to encourage energy conservation.

Wayne's efforts were mentioned during a meeting of representatives from cities across the state. The cities represented were NCIP participants.

According to Roger Toomey, executive vice president of the Wayne Chamber of Commerce, the city was specifically cited to the group as an example of what smaller cities can do.

Wayne's new energy task force, which will hold its second meeting Thursday, was initiated and formed by the chamber.

Official announcement of the task force formation came Tuesday, Oct. 27, during a chamber press conference.

IN LINCOLN Saturday, Riegel and Meyer — both speakers for the session — distributed copies of The Wayne Herald news story announcing the formation of the task force.

Four days after the task force was formed, Vakoc conducted a morning organizational meeting at the Windmill Restaurant, downtown Wayne.

According to the chairman, Thursday's meeting will be a continuation of organizational steps for the task force.

"We've come to the conclusion that the amount of material available concerning energy is staggering," Vakoc explained.

He said it will take several more meetings before specific, attainable goals can be set.

THE OVERALL mission of the task force is to publicize, encourage, and work to promote methods of energy conservation, including energy audits.

The eight-man task force is expected to work through a strong committee structure, once organizational work is completed.

Pat Gross, chamber president, has acknowledged that Sen. DeCamp's recent visit to Wayne under the auspices of his program, "Project: Energy Independence," provided the catalyst for the formation of the group.

DeCamp spoke to key Wayne business leaders and the general public in two afternoon sessions — one downtown and one at Wayne State College.

Wayne wins 2 statewide CIP awards

Wayne has won two statewide awards for public service.

Gov. Charles Thone presented the city with the 1981 Nebraska Community Improvement Award Friday afternoon in Lincoln.

That night, Wayne won the 1981 All-Nebraska Community Award during the annual Nebraska Community Improvement Program (NCIP) banquet in Lincoln.

ROGER TOOMEY, executive vice president of the Wayne Chamber of Commerce, accepted both awards on behalf of the city.

The two awards mean Wayne has met or exceeded standards in 16 areas of public facilities and services.

Wayne was one of 31 communities to meet or exceed the NCIP standards.

According to Toomey, next year's NCIP competition already is underway.

"WAYNE WILL be eligible for six other individual prizes and for the No. 1 community award in its class," Toomey said.

He said the additional prizes will be available to Wayne because the city's Business and Professional Women's Club has volunteered to form and submit a scrapbook.

The scrapbook, according to Toomey, will feature "all significant advancements" that take place in the city during the 1982 competition year.

GARY VOPALENSKY, an administrative employee and aide to Mills, attended the meeting to present the board with his review and recommendations.

Reminding the board that it had the option to call an executive session that would exclude the press, Vopalensky explained that his report involved personnel matters.

Board member David Hay objected to the suggestion and told Vopalensky that it was not his place to report to the board.

Hay explained that he felt Vopalensky should be reporting to the board's policy-making committee, which in turn would report to the board.

Board members agreed and no motion was made to call the Vopalensky-initiated executive session, which would have barred the press.

BEFORE CALLING the meeting to order, board members debated the definition of a police report

Wayne Police reported an unusually quiet Halloween this year with only minor incidents requiring officer assistance. With a weekend free of motor vehicle accidents, police answered four calls on open fire hydrants in the city. Pranksters opened a fire hydrant about 7 p.m. Saturday on the east side of town near the park. The hydrant was shut off, and police were called to the scene again for a repeat performance. AT 7:48 p.m., police were called to an opened fire hydrant in the 1200 block of Walnut Street. Again, the hydrant was closed. All was quiet on the hydrant front until Sunday, when officers were called to the 500 block of Sixth Street east, where another fire hydrant had been opened. The hydrant was closed. But, Halloween started a bit early for Miron Jenness of Wayne. He reported that eggs were thrown at his house and automobile about 4:30 p.m. Friday. He also reported that eggs were put in the gas tank of his car. AND, JERRY Langston of Wayne also got an early dose of Halloween. At 10:40 p.m. Friday, he reported that his car had been covered with shaving cream. The only other Halloween trick on the police log Saturday involved the laundromat at the corner of Ninth and Main streets. According to police, pranksters filled washing machines with toilet paper and garbage, kicked in the office door and scratched the paint on several machines. A small amount of laundry soap was taken from the laundromat office, according to police. ON SUNDAY, Larry Brader of Wayne reported a rifle stolen from his home. According to police, the rifle is a lever-action .22-calibre Winchester Magnum XTR. Brader reported the theft at 5:25 p.m. At 9:20 p.m. Sunday, Joe Lonje of rural Wayne reported the drivers-side window on his car had been broken while it was parked in the 700 block of Logan Street. A TRESPASSER was reported standing at the corner of the David Field home at 11:18 p.m. Sunday. Police investigating the report were unable to locate any suspect, nor were footprints visible. The trespasser was wearing a red coat, according to police reports. On Monday, Berniece Fulton of Wayne reported the hood of her vehicle had been scratched and tomatoes had been thrown at the side of her house. Police received the report at 4:55 p.m.

sheriff's log

The Wayne County Sheriff's Department is investigating a weekend break-in at Broyhill Mfg. of Wayne that netted thieves $27. According to Sheriff Scoley Thompson, the break in was discovered by company employees at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. THOMPSON said the manufacturing plant, located in Wayne's Industrial Park just east of the city off State Highway 35, closed at 6 p.m. on Friday. Thieves gained entry to the building between closing time and the start of the workday Saturday, he said. Gillingham farm of rural Wayne. Car thieves took the vehicle from the farmyard about 10:20 p.m. Sunday, Sheriff Thompson said. The car, a 1976 Ford Elite two-door, is a two-tone beige with license plate number 27 J324. Anyone seeing a car matching the plate number and description is asked to contact the Sheriff's Department immediately.

Grant applications due

Young women who are residents of Nebraska, students at Wayne State College, and going into teaching are encouraged to apply for the $150 grant-in-aid provided by Psi Chapter, Delta Kappa Gamma.

Applications are due in the Financial Aids Office in Hahn, WSC, before Dec. 1. The grant will partially pay tuition and fees for the January, 1982, semester.

Preference in selecting the recipient will be given to juniors and first term seniors who are residents of Cedar, Dixon, Knox or Wayne counties. If no applications from residents of these four counties are received, other young women who are Nebraska residents and plan to teach will be considered.

The application to be left in the Financial Aids office should include the completed form, a letter from the applicant, and, if possible, a letter of recommendation from one high school or college teacher. The letter from the applicant should be a letter of introduction, a means of sharing her need for assistance, her goals and her future plans.

Writing contest deadline

Entries for the Neihardt Creative Writing Contest must be submitted by January 15.

Entries must be the original work of seniors presently enrolled in an accredited high school and should consist of no more than four poems or two short stories.

All entries should be typed and include a brief letter of nomination from a sponsoring teacher. Submit material to Neihardt Creative Writing Contest, Box 102, Department of English, Wayne State College, Wayne, Nebraska 68787.

IN COSTUME for Friday's Beaux Arts Ball are: Bob Lewis, Beth Czupryn, Ken Hladky, Lance Hankins.

Beaux Arts Ball set Friday

This Friday, Nov. 6, should be a ball. That's when the Wayne State College art, music and theatre department co-host a "Beaux Arts Ball" in Wayne.

The Ball will be held in the Black Knight restaurant in downtown Wayne. The concept of "Beaux Arts" relates to the French term referring to fine arts. Next week is designated as Fine Arts Week on the WSC campus, and the Ball will cap the week's fine arts related activities.

The "Beaux Arts Ball," in more common terms, is simply a dinner and dance. It is not meant to promote or sell anything, according to Dr. Jay O'Leary, head of the Fine Arts Division at WSC.

INSTEAD, it has one single purpose — fun. Participants can wear costumes if they so choose. "Wear what your kids wore for Halloween if you want to," O'Leary said.

There is no central "theme" to the ball, and costumes are certainly not required.

O'Leary said the ball is open to everyone, not just adults or college personnel. It's only real relationship to the Fine Arts Division is that it is sponsoring the event, he said.

The dinner will be served at about 7:30 p.m., followed by the ball, and music by "Solid Gold."

TICKETS for the dinner and dance can be purchased for just $8.50 from either the Fine Arts Division office, Val Peterson Fine Arts Center, or at the People's Natural Gas office, 208 Main Street.

Tickets for the dance only can be purchased for $2 at those same outlets or, unlike the dinner, on the night of the dance.

For further information or to order tickets, contact O'Leary at Wayne State College, (402) 375-2200, ext. 360.

Marxism debut set for Ramsey Theatre

Marxism makes its debut at Wayne State College at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 10, when the highly acclaimed one-man show, "GROUCHO!" will be presented at Ramsey Theatre in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Center.

"GROUCHO!" is a nostalgic assemblage of famous songs, skits, and one liners recounting the life and times of Groucho Marx.

Stadlen first played Groucho Marx in "Minnie's Boys," a musical based on the life of the Marx brothers.

His other credits include a Tony nomination for his work in the Broadway musical "Candide," and an Emmy nomination for his performance as Defense Attorney Samuel Leibowitz in the NBC's "Judge Horton and the Scottsboro Boys."

THE LATE Groucho Marx himself, after seeing Stadlen's performance, commented, "He does Groucho better than I do!" Assisting Stadlen is Nancy Evers as Emily Schmalhausen. She sings, plays the piano, and adds a touch of elegance to the show.

Tickets for "GROUCHO!" are available at $2.50 each, and will be sold at the door. Students, faculty and staff will be admitted free with college ID.

Registration set for '82

Registration for classes in the 1982 spring semester will take place Nov. 9-20 at Wayne State College.

Registration will be different this term as the college is using a system different from the one used in past years. It's called "cardless registration."

PREVIOUSLY, when students registered, they were given a packet of cards to fill out. This term, all the information contained on those cards will be on one sheet.

The student will check to insure that all the information is correct, and fill in the classes he or she wishes to take. Students will also list alternate classes on the registration form, in the case that a class they might have wanted to take is closed.

For those not able to register in advance there will be registration Jan. 4, in the Assembly Hall of the Hahn Administration building.

Wayne County Pork Producers crown first queen

Farmers urged to merchandize product

Successful pork producers wear two hats.

And, the producers' hat must be exchanged with the businessmen's hat in the hog market.

That's the upshot of a farm commodity broker's advice to the Wayne County Pork Producers Association Sunday night, during the group's first annual Pork Awards Banquet.

Nearly 200 persons listened to Dave Maherer of M&M Commodities, South Sioux City, as he urged pork producers to spend more time merchandizing their product.

DURING AN evening that saw Kelli Baier, 17, daughter of Stan and Inge Baier, rural Wayne, crowned as Wayne County's first Pork Queen, Maherer told the group "Our job isn't done until we merchandize it (pork)."

Maherer, a former professional football player, told the producers that farmers are more like big businessmen than they are like the small town merchants.

"Most farmers are worth more than the small businessman in the small towns of Nebraska," Maherer told producers and the families crowding the North Dining Room of the Wayne State College Student Center.

"WE HAVE TO merchandize and do it well," the former San Diego Charger said. "We have to ask the question 'When does the time come when someone wants my hogs?'"

Often poking fun at himself and his professional football career, Maherer opened his remarks by explaining that he was "one of those players who ran out onto the field to help other people off."

A rolund man with a predilection for humor, Maherer said he has often been asked what it was like to play with the Chargers. "I don't know," he quipped. "I was one of those guys who tried to get dirty doing calisthenics."

Maherer told the audience that in his football days there was no television coverage and no newspapers. "We had to send out postcards on the games," he said.

"LET'S TALK hogs," the stocky farm commodities broker said, swinging into his concerns about pork producers in the marketplace.

"We're such great producers that we spend little of our time merchandizing what we produce," he continued.

"It's easy to do," he said. "When you produce the hogs, you work hard putting everything together. Then you want to take it easy."

Maherer warned that "taking it easy" was dangerous in today's market.

"We have to change hats," he said. "We have to take off the producer's hat and put on the businessman's hat."

Maherer said when he first started out in the business things were simple.

"IF IT RAINED out, we knew what the market would be," he continued.

"Now, we have to worry about London and Poland," he added.

The broker stayed out of politics, but did say that over his years of experience it "doesn't make any difference if they're Democrats or Republicans" as far as farm policy is concerned.

Referring to Secretary of Agriculture John Block's recent comments about farmer's and the free market, Maherer said pork producers "are really going to have to get on the ball and merchandize."

EXPLAINING that the normal seasonal uptrend for the hog market was in November, the broker said it would be delayed this year.

Maherer predicted a "seasonal uptrend in hogs, but not until December if we get it then."

The South Sioux City man said hogs might be around 48 cents. He also said the pork producers are expanding hog production.

And, in another prediction, he said he could see 1982 hog contracts dropping "into the 30s again."

Maherer said the economy is hurting and "you're not going to see it turn around soon."

He blamed "plastic credit" for the inflation and said that if people "could charge groceries like they do everything else, we'd create a demand for hogs."

HE QUICKLY noted that that kind of action "would spark inflation for more problems."

"We almost have to stop this economy to turn it around," he continued. "Everybody wants to solve it painlessly, but it can't be done."

Maherer wasn't entirely pessimistic though. He said hog producers will see the demand cycle return.

Until then, he urged producers to survive with what they have now.

Often kidding farmers for "holding out" for a better price, Maherer warned producers "You can't let other people make up your mind. You are the only one who knows what your cost is."

DURING A tongue-in-cheek explanation of how he arrives at market prices, Maherer said "I watch the moon."

The audience laughed. He continued.

"It's as good as anything else. It comes up each day. It's always there. And, you don't have to have a college education to look

ZERO-PLUS CALLING

Zero-Plus Calling is the fast, easy way to make person-to-person, collect calls, calls charged to your credit card or any calls requiring the assistance of an operator.

Here's how to direct-dial a Zero-Plus Call (NOTE: After you dial the operator will bring in to ask which type of call you are placing.)

Person-to-Person

DIAL ZERO + the area code if different from your own + the out-of-town number. Simply say you are calling person-to-person and who you want to speak to.

Credit Card Calls

DIAL ZERO + the area code if different from your own + the out-of-town number. Just say "Credit Card" and give your card number.

Collect Calls

DIAL ZERO + the area code if different from your own + the out-of-town number. Give your name and say that you are calling collect.

These calls have a higher rate than those you dial direct without using the operator. And there's a three-minute minimum charge on operator-assisted calls.

For lowest rates call station-to-station just as you've been doing, by dialing direct, without operator assistance. That way, extra savings are also possible through the one-minute minimum charge. Information about long distance calling and money-saving tips are in the Customer Guide section of your phone book.

*Low dial-it-yourself rates also apply on calls placed with an operator where direct dialing facilities are not available.

He loves to cook

Local lawyer says Oriental dishes are healthier, more economical

By LaVon Beckman

After a long day at the office, 32-year-old Michael Krochmalny often trades in his briefcase for an apron. Michael, a lawyer with the Legal Aid Society in Wayne, has been cooking since he was about 14 years of age — and not just TV dinners.

Michael's specialties include Lasagna, Chicken Divan Crepes and Cheng Tu Chicken.

"COOKING IS good therapy," says Michael. "Preparing the food is often relaxing. Of course eating is always relaxing too," he laughs.

"I look at cooking like anything else you do around the house. You can start at any age or any weight and progress from there. Michael says he especially likes to cook Oriental dishes because — well — they're cheap for one thing. And, he says, they're much healthier than American foods.

A lot of Oriental dishes are stir-fried for only a minute or so, retaining a lot of the vitamins and minerals.

MICHAEL doesn't apologize for spending so much time in the kitchen.

And, he doesn't apologize for being the only man in an Eastern cooking course being taught by Manjit Johar.

On Wednesday nights, Michael and his apron join seven women who also are enrolled in Manjit's class in the home economics room at Wayne High School.

"It's fun," smiles Michael. "Of course, he laughs, "It would be neater if the class enrollment included just one other man."

MICHAEL SAYS that coming from a single parent family, he either had to learn to cook or go hungry.

"My mother often worked more than one job, and it was often left up to me to cook for myself. I found shortcuts for just about everything," he laughs.

Michael says it's easy for anyone who watches Julia Childs to become easily discouraged. "That doesn't have to be the case," he says. "Cooking doesn't have to be a lot of work.

"Once you find out what the end result is, you can get there by some other means."

MICHAEL EXPLAINS cooking as a basic chemical process.

"You mix ingredients that may or may not be edible in the end. You cook to arrive at a certain place as far as taste and consistency.

"It's like music," smiles Michael. "You can either do it by ear or read the music."

While Michael prefers to cook "by ear," Judi, his wife of 7½ years, "reads the music."

MICHAEL says he does 99 percent of the cooking at home.

"Judy doesn't enjoy cooking," smiles Michael, "although she's very good at French toast on Sunday morning. And, she makes great bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwiches."

"Let's just say we never fight to get in the kitchen," he laughs.

"Judi does the laundry and I do most of the cooking," says Michael. "We sort of share everything else."

THE KROCHMALNYS do all their grocery shopping together.

"Most of the ingredients can be found right here in local supermarkets," says Michael. "Other things, mostly seasonings, are purchased from an Oriental food store in Omaha.

"IF YOU don't enjoy eating, you probably won't enjoy cooking," says Michael.

"One of the nice things about cooking is you can always eat what you want."

Oriental dishes are Michael's favorite. "I've always enjoyed eating Oriental food," he says, adding that in recent years Chinese food has become very popular in American homes.

ALTHOUGH MICHAEL enjoys preparing Oriental dishes, he doesn't consider himself a gourmet cook.

"A gourmet meal is as much an attitude as it is a science," says Michael, adding that gourmet refers to continental cooking, especially French dishes.

MICHAEL ALSO enjoys preparing meals for guests.

His company night dishes often include crepes and fondues.

Not all of his dishes turn out exactly like he would like them to.

"I made a chocolate fudge cake around St. Patrick's Day. Of course I thought green food coloring would be nice. It turned out looking like an old army blanket."

"It didn't look very pretty," laughs Michael, "but it tasted great."

LIKE MOST good cooks, Michael worries a little about his weight.

"I've just noticed my fingers are getting fat," laughs the 185 lb., 6 ft. lawyer.

"I've added about 20 pounds since graduating from law school. It's the fact that it's all located in the center that bothers me. I wouldn't mind so much if it were in my shoulders or feet."

MICHAEL GREW up in Columbia, S.C. and attended the University of South Carolina, graduating with a degree in journalism.

Following graduation, he spent two and a half years in the Air Force where he worked mainly on editing base newspapers. It was while he was stationed in Omaha that he met Judi, who is employed as an emergency loan clerk with the Farmers Home Administration office in Wayne.

THE COUPLE moved to Agawam, Mass., "because," says Michael, "it was the nicest place I've ever lived geographically."

While in Massachusetts, Michael worked for Social Service agencies and published a bilingual newspaper.

In 1976, the Krochmalnys returned to Omaha where Michael attended Creighton Law School. After graduating and passing the bar, he applied for and received a job with the Legal Aid Society of Omaha.

He began working at the Legal Aid office in Wayne in September of 1979.

RECENTLY, it was learned that the Legal Aid Society office in Wayne will be closed by the first of the year for economic reasons.

"It's Reaganomics," says Michael.

The Wayne and Columbus societies will be combined into a more centrally located office at the Norfolk Regional Center.

Although Michael's new office will be in Norfolk, his home will continue to be in Wayne.

"Judi and I like it here," says Michael. "We recently bought a home in Wayne and plan to remain in it."

Local cooks stir fry and steam

By LaVon Beckman

It's not surprising that Oriental stir-frying and steaming are causing quite a stir in American kitchens. Eastern cooking techniques are easy, they enhance the flavors, colors, and textures of the foods — and they're economical.

Although for many years the western world considered Oriental cooking too difficult to attempt, in recent years Americans have discovered how simple many Oriental dishes are to prepare.

SEVERAL LOCAL residents are learning first hand that Eastern cooking also can be fun.

The adventurous cooks, including seven women and one man, are students in Manjit Johar's Eastern Cooking course which began Oct. 14 in the home economics room at Wayne High School.

The five-week course includes Indian, Chinese and Japanese cooking techniques, with emphasis on breads and natural foods.

"IT'S FUN," said Manjit during a recent interview in her home.

"There are many myths regarding Eastern cooking," she added.

"For one thing, most people believe that Indian meals are prepared without any meat.

"That's not true," she stresses. "Meat is used in many Indian dishes, although it is very expensive."

Manjit says although there also is a popular belief that Indian food is very hot, the dishes vary from one part of India to the other as do the people, languages and climate.

"Indian cooking is influenced by historical, geographical, and religious factors. The availability of materials also affect the cooking techniques," she explains.

"HISTORICALLY, Indian cooking was influenced by the British, French and Dutch who were lured to the Indian coast for its spices.

"A lot of meat preparation started in the north, where the climate is cooler.

"In the south of India, where the climate is hot, the foods are spicier."

"INDIAN FOOD is exotic, spicy and fast growing in popularity in the western world," says Manjit, who came to America from India 18 years ago.

Manjit says the art of Indian cooking lies not in high spicing, but in the delicacy of spicing.

"It is the use of selected spices in a particular manner to bring out the dominant flavors of a dish or to drown the undesirable ones which is the real art," she smiles.

MANJIT'S CLASS also includes Chinese and Japanese cooking techniques.

"Many of the ingredients are the same as in Indian cooking," she explains, adding that Chinese restaurants are very popular in India.

"THE ART of Chinese cookery is a meticulous one," explains Manjit, "and in some ways it is complex."

Manjit

However, Manjit says there is an essential logic and simplicity about its principles, and that it can quite easily be mastered by those with a little patience and a great love for food.

"Even a beginner can produce authentic dishes without difficulty in an ordinary kitchen, using no more than ordinary skills and ordinary utensils," she smiles.

"The Chinese style," she explains, "is to take time over the preparation and as little time as possible for cooking. It is the cook not the diner who cuts the food. He or she slices, chops, shreds, minces, dices or crushes the ingredients in the kitchen before cooking.

"Nor does the Chinese diner add his own salt, pepper or spices. The cook does this before serving, believing that the seasoning can be truly effective only when added during the cooking process."

MANJIT SAYS that to the Chinese an essential part of the meal is contrast and variety.

Several main dishes are prepared to avoid monotony and to pique the appetite. A rich dish may be offset by a light and delicate one, a highly seasoned dish counteracted by a bland dish.

"No single dish is the main dish," says Manjit. "All dishes are equally important."

JAPANESE MEALS are light and easy on the waistline, says Manjit.

"The food customs of the Japanese people are rooted deeply in their history, their love for disciplined beauty, and their appreciation of art in all forms."

Manjit says fish, rice and light teas have been staple foods in Japan for centuries.

"Fruits and nuts are plentiful in Japan," adds Manjit, "and the Japanese islands are surrounded by rich fishing waters and changing weather which provides different types of fish, shellfish, kelp and seaweed."

"The land also is very suitable for rice farming and vegetables."

"MAKING SKILLFUL use of these products makes the Japanese cooking and eating a delightful art," smiles Manjit.

"The essential principle of Japanese culinary art is to preserve the fresh, true flavor of all ingredients while retaining the natural beauty of the foods."

Manjit says that tempura, sukiyaki, dashisashimi and yaki are popular in Japan and have a high rate of acceptability to guests from other lands.

MANJIT SAYS guests in her home are very often treated to foreign dishes she has prepared.

She and her husband Joe, a professor of chemistry at Wayne State College, came to the United States from India 18 years ago and have resided in Wayne for the past 13 years.

Their family includes sons Ravl, 20, a student at the University of Nebraska Lincoln, Jassi, 14, a freshman at Wayne Carroll High School, and Vini, 13, an eighth grader at Wayne Middle School.

"WHEN I was growing up I hardly did any cooking," laughs Manjit.

"My mother taught me after high school. She's a very good cook."

Manjit's family remains in India, although she has one cousin residing in Pittsburgh.

"This (America) is my life," says Manjit.

MANJIT GROWS many of her own Indian vegetables, spices and herbs in a garden in back of her home.

Herbs not readily available in this area that can be found in Manjit's garden include karela, tinda, kaddi, dhania and methi.

More Indian families are moving to this area," smiles Manjit, "and it makes me happy to share with them."

MANJIT SAYS Americans are becoming more exposed to Eastern cooking.

There are lots of Indian restaurants in the eastern United States," she says, "adding that diners there can eat a very good meal including dessert and wine, for under $10."

One of the main reasons Manjit is conducting the Eastern cooking course at Wayne High is to expose local residents to other foods.

In addition to the cooking lessons, class participants also learn where to find the ingredients they need to prepare an Eastern meal, and what substitutes they can use.

"MOST ORIENTAL dishes are very quick and easy," says Manjit, adding that she finds most of the ingredients for her dishes in Wayne's grocery stores.

"Not only are they easy, they're much cheaper than many American dishes, and they're more nutritious."

"Chopping onions and kneading flour are also great ways to rid yourself of hostilities and relax."

ALTHOUGH THIS is the first Eastern cooking class Manjit has taught to the public, she has given several local residents informal lessons in her home.

Manjit says she definitely would like to expose more persons to Eastern cooking techniques and would consider teaching another class if enough interest were shown.

Interested persons should contact her or Curt Frye at Wayne High School.

ONE OF THE Japanese dishes prepared by students in Manjit's class is Beef Sukiyaki. The dish can be made using familiar cooking methods, and with ingredients found in local supermarkets.

The recipe is as follows:

- 2 lbs. boneless sirloin steak, very thinly sliced
- 6 stalks celery, diagonally sliced 1/2 inch thick
- 2 medium onions thinly sliced
- 8 green onions and tops cut in 2 inch pieces
- 1/2 lb. fresh spinach
- 1/2 lb. fresh mushrooms
- 1 can sliced bamboo shoots (8 oz.)
- 1 cup beef broth
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 1/2 cup sherry
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 6 tablespoons peanut or vegetable oil

Arrange steak and vegetables on large tray. In large measuring cup mix together beef broth, soy sauce, sherry, and sugar.

Add 2 tablespoons of oil in a wok or frying pan. Set heat control at 350 degrees. Add one 1/2 of the steak and pour 1/2 of the soy sauce mixture over the steak. Fry for 2 minutes. Add 1/2 of vegetables. Keep the steak and vegetables separate. Turn gently while cooking.

Cook for 15 minutes. Serve immediately over rice or noodles. Repeat with the remaining ingredients.

Annual fall bazaar

SHERYL LINDAU AND KAREN Wiseman display a stained glass which will be given away during a drawing at the Wayne Community Hospital Auxiliary's annual Fall Bazaar this Saturday in the city auditorium. The stained glass was donated by Wiseman-Lindau Clinic. Drawings also will be held for a tree skirt, made by Melba Wait, an afghan donated by Luella Marra, and a stuffed animal donated by Donna Schumacher. Doors to the bazaar open at 10 a.m. A lunch of chili, vegetable soup, assorted sandwiches, homemade pie and other desserts, will be served beginning at 10:30.

Rally held at Grace Lutheran

Wayne Zone Lutheran Women's Missionary League held its Fall Rally at Grace Lutheran Church in Wayne on Oct. 20.

In attendance were 129 persons, including four guests and four ministers.

The Rev. Thomas Mendenhall had opening devotions.

MRS. CLAYTON Schroeder, zone president, called the meeting to order. Mrs. Marvin Victor welcomed the guests, followed with the response by Mrs. Howard Grave, secretary's minutes were read and approved. Treasurer's books were audited by Mrs. Alfred Benson, Mrs. Elmer Johnson and Mrs. Joyce.

COMMITTEES for the District Convention to be held in 1982 at the Marina Inn were discussed and distributed to the societies.

The convention will convene Monday afternoon, June 7, with registration, Bible studies and interest conferences.

The convention committee will be meeting and coordinating plans.

MRS. MARGE Mackey reported and showed slides of the International Convention in Milwaukee. The slides were donated by Ruth Ebmeyer of Laurel.

District representative Mrs. Erma Stigge brought a "bucket" of coming events. There also are new mustard seed packets available.

THE REV. Jon Vogel, pastoral counselor, gave opening devotions for the afternoon session.

Mrs. Schroeder introduced the speaker, Mrs. Jan Warneke, whose topic was "Thank God Each Morning the Sun Comes Up." She spoke of her son, Kent, who was paralyzed at birth. He has undergone surgery several times to correct hip problems and is now a student at the University of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Winside, will host the 1982 Fall Rally.

Carroll host for American Legion county convention

The American Legion County Convention was held Tuesday evening, Oct. 27, at Ron's Steakhouse in Carroll, with 38 Legionnaires and Auxiliary members attending.

Legionnaires elected Roy Sommerfeld county commander, and Chris Bargholtz vice commander. Both are of Wayne.

MRS. ROBERT I. Jones was acting chaplain when the Auxiliary met.

Mrs. Keith Owens and Mrs. Jones conducted a memorial service, followed with a moment of silence to honor deceased members, including Gold Star mothers Hazel Bressler and Martha Sieckmann, both of Wayne, Iola Schmitz and Laura Banister, also of Wayne, and Mrs. Minnie Woods of Carroll.

MRS. OWENS presided at the business meeting and Mrs. Robert Johnson read the secretary's report.

Roll call was answered by six members from Winside, 14 from Carroll, and nine from Wayne.

Guests were Laura Tippery of Decatur, District III president, and her secretary, Joan Tippery, also of Decatur.

Mrs. Tippery spoke and presented awards. She announced the District III Convention will be held in Wakefield in the spring of 1982.

MRS. EVELINE Thompson of Wayne told about the national convention she attended in Hawaii in August.

Mrs. Thompson was elected county president. Vice president is Mrs. Werner Mann of Winside, and secretary is Mrs. Norbert Brugger of Wayne.

Mrs. Robert I. Jones had closing prayer, and the group sang "America."

THE 1982 County Convention will be held at Wayne.

Those planning to attend are asked to send the fee, their name and address to Dixon County Extension Office, Concord, Neb., 68728. Checks should be made payable to the Dixon County Home Economics Fund.

Deadline for pre-registration is Nov. 20.

Canned zucchini may be fatal

Throw out any zucchini pineapple you have canned by the water bath method, warns extension food specialist Laurel Branan of the University of Nebraska.

In a recent article which appeared in the Columbus Telegraph newspaper, Branan says the University of Michigan has just announced results of a study on whether zucchini pineapple was safe when canned as a high acid food using the water bath method.

THE STUDY found that the product is likely to spoil in storage.

Botulism, a fatal toxin, can grow under these conditions, says Branan.

"Persons who have preserved the zucchini pineapple using a recipe which includes lemon and pineapple juice are being advised to destroy the product," Branan says.

"The risk of feeding this product to your family is just too great."

ZUCCHINI is a low acid food which must be processed by pressure canning.

The addition of 1/2 cup of lemon juice and 46 ounces of unsweetened pineapple juice was first thought to alter the acidity level of zucchini, making it a high acid food.

Due to recent discoveries, it was found that the natural water level of zucchini appears to dilute the acidity level of lemon juice and pineapple juice over a period of time — "A rather short period of time," the food specialist adds.

BRANEN SAYS if you want to pressure can zucchini pineapple, do so for 30 minutes at 10 pounds of pressure.

She says it is easier and definitely safe to freeze the recipe.

Botulism is such a strong toxin that people shouldn't take a risk. She says the toxin is so powerful that one teaspoon of the pure substance could kill hundreds of thousands of people.

Symptoms include blurred vision, speech and eventual respiratory arrest.

Seniors Raise $400

quorum, since only five out of a 10-man board attended the session.

Several board members said they were certain state law considered a quorum a majority. However, after more discussion, several members said education law, as it applied to ESU boards, allowed five members to constitute a quorum.

Most commonly used dictionaries define quorum as the simple majority needed to conduct business.

During the meeting, board members discussed cash flow, mileage and investing cash reserves.

ESU ONE works toward a cash reserve that represents about 20 percent of the district's budget.

Board member Randall Shaw, a Wayne State College instructor, initiated discussion on mileage payments. He calculated that the Unit pays upwards of $100,000 in mileage payments to employees per year.

Mills and Vopalensky acknowledged that the mileage payments represented a large part of the budget. A discussion ensued regarding car pooling and coordination of programs to eliminate unnecessary trips.

Board members also discussed the Crofton School District's stated intent to withdraw from the Unit's contract services for the financially mentally retarded and to start its own program.

MILLS SAID the timing of the Crofton proposal was the key to the controversy. According to Mills, the school district signed contracts for the service with ESU One, but intends to renege on the contract.

Mills said the 1981-82 budget for the services was built on the basis of contracting parties served and that Crofton's backout would add costs to other participating districts.

Consensus was to continue billing the Crofton district for services outlined in the contract.

Board members also agreed to seek legal advice on the terms of the contract and a possible court test.

Crofton has paid for the services rendered during the first two-month billing period. The next billing is expected by mid-December, when the Crofton TMR students are expected to be in the school district's own program.

BEFORE ADJOURNING, board members discussed the ESU relationship with the State School Boards Association.

Hay initiated the discussion by expressing his concern that service units will be put under the total jurisdiction of the state Department of Education during the coming session of the Legislature.

"I've always been the one who has said we were different," Hay said. "If we do not declare our support for us, as we are, we'll become puppets of the state Education Department."

Hay said ESU boards are at fault for not supporting the state Service Unit Board concept.

"We are not a school board and we have never tried to understand that," he added.

MILLS SAID he felt certain the majority of ESU administrators across the state would be opposed to being under the Department of Education.

Mills noted that ESUs had no clout as lobbyists in the Legislature and suggested that may be why the units lean toward the State School Boards Association.

"We have a different role, entirely different," insisted Hay.

Pick-up contest winners

WINNERS OF THE Miller pick-up program contest at Wayne State College for last year included the TKEs ($1,500), the Wrestling Club ($1,500), Phi Sigs ($500), Order of Diana ($500) and Delta Sigma Pi ($500). Above, Don Schernikau, Brian Miller, campus rep, and Mike Whetstone join Don Younger, area manager for Miller Brewing Co., to receive their checks. Below, Dave Condon, Cindy Anderson and Mark Bohlmann join Younger with their checks. The prizes were presented at the Amber Inn of Wayne recently. The contest was jointly sponsored by the brewing company and Jim Pile & Sons Distributing. Organizations picked up bottles and aluminum cans during the spring semester last year. The cans were recycled in Norfolk.

Planners — Chamber committee planning the purchase of Christmas lights

Kloster presented the panel with the city code on home business signs. Basically the code limits that type of sign to 2 square feet of non-illuminated material to be mounted against the wall of the principal building used for the home business, he said.

THE PLANNERS agreed that a number of home business signs in Wayne were not in compliance with the code.

Kloster said the code had not been an enforcement priority.

"On top of the problem of enforcing it, you've got economic times like this when people are scratching for a business in their home or garage to make a little more money," he said.

The commission arrived at no decision on the matter but Kloster acknowledged that the code was specific with regard to home business signs.

BEFORE ADJOURNING, the planners discussed the need for the city to put together a plan for mobile home developments.

Recent state Legislature action has changed the laws regarding mobile home developments. Planners agreed that the city needed an interpretation of current law as a basis for building appropriate regulations into the municipal codes.

And, in response to questions from the planners, Kloster told the commission that the city was not requiring building permits for solar energy panels.

The main reason is more philosophical than anything else, Kloster said. The people who have put forth effort in terms of energy conservation continue to get jabbed by higher energy bills for trying to conserve. I didn't feel the city needed to contribute to that.

The Wayne Chamber of Commerce has formed a committee for the purchase of new Christmas lights for the city's downtown area, according to Pat Gross, chamber president.

The lights that have served Wayne for a number of years are beginning to show their age and the chamber feels that they should be replaced before Christmas 1982.

Committee chairman is Gary Van Meter of Mines Jewelry.

Other committee members include Joanie Burst of Joanie

Designs, Vern Schulz, City of Wayne, Sandy Wriedt, Just Sew, Steve Brandt, First National Bank, and Gaylen Wiser of the State National Bank & Trust Co.

According to Gross, the committee will be responsible for the selection of new decorations and for the method of financing the purchase.

Obtaining new Christmas lights will need to be a community effort, Gross said. "Neither the chamber nor the city have funds available for such a large expenditure."

Free trees available

For interested farmers and ranchers, the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission once again has free tree seedlings available through the Nebraska Wildlife Habitat Program.

There are enough seedling bundles for 500 cooperators. Bundles consist of 50 redcedar and 50 ponderosa pine seedlings for habitat development and windbreaks.

An additional opportunity this year is the availability of 500 bundles of 100 green ash seedlings allowing interested persons to start a woodlot to provide fuel in eight to ten years, depending on soil and moisture conditions.

Seedling bundles are available for farmers and ranchers and are intended for rural sites only, outside city limits. The seedlings must also be planted at least 200 yards from inhabited dwellings.

To receive an application form, write to Habitat, P.O. Box 30370, Lincoln, Neb. 68503. Applicants need to specify which bundle they are interested in receiving in order that the proper form is returned. Applications may also be obtained from district Game and Parks Commission offices in North Platte, Bassett, Alliance, Norfolk and Omaha.

Physical fitness: A medical look at 3 typical cases

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a three-part series designed to inform Wayne area residents about the benefits of physical fitness. This article, which outlines physical fitness problems and answers in three hypothetical, but typical, cases, is being published with research assistance from Wayne area physicians.

The Providence Medical Center staff — including physicians Willis L. Wiseman, James A. Lindus and Robert and Walter Benhack — supports the new non-profit Wayne area corporation recently formed for the encouragement and development of physical fitness and related activities.

As part of that support, the medical staff is publicly urging area residents to become involved in the endeavor, both as supporters and participants.

For a 27-year-old mountain climber, being physically fit is quite different — in some ways — from the fitness a 70-year-old senior citizen wants or needs to work in his garden or spend time in his workshop.

However, there are some very real similarities.

MOST IMPORTANT, perhaps, is being able to do the things we want to do, or need to do, without damage to the body.

And, to be able to do a task well enough to have it be satisfying.

If a person can perform the physical task well, without physical harm or prolonged recovery time, then it may be said that he or she is sufficiently physically fit.

If then becomes obvious that physical fitness is a very individual thing, and consequently varies from individual to individual.

Despite the individuality of it, there are some guidelines on physical fitness that can apply to a number of different age groups.

BEFORE TOUCHING on those, it may be helpful to examine three typical cases where physical fitness is a problem.

After the problems are outlined, some physical fitness answers can be explored.

Here are the problems:

CASE 1 — John is a 35-year-old successful insurance salesman. He is married. He and his wife have three children. John was being considered for a promotion until this year, when his performance at work sagged far greater than the general downturn in the economy could explain. Now, even his job is in jeopardy.

CASE 2 — Richard is a 51-year-old highly successful businessman. He is married. He and his wife have four children, the two older ones in college. He was on the first day of a long-awaited fishing trip with friends. And, after an episode of over-exertion, he died of a late-evening heart attack.

CASE 3 — Kathrine is a 72-year-old grandmother. She and her husband, a retired clerk, have been married 51 years. She is subject to frequent episodes of indigestion and related problems. In addition, she suffers from disabling lower-back pain, which has steadily worsened over the years.

These three cases are valid examples of the kinds of problems that can result from being physically unfit.

As we look deeper into John's lifestyle (CASE 1), we find he was never particularly physically fit.

Sure, he played football in high school, but was — and still is — overweight. In college, he drank to excess and still smokes about 1 1/2 packs of cigarettes a day.

He did get his degree, settled down and began raising a family. Now, at 35, when he should be laying solid groundwork for supporting his family and providing for their education, as well as his own retirement, he is having serious problems.

HE JOINED his firm nine years ago and until the last two years had been at the top of the sales force.

Now, despite the difficult economic times and the need to work even harder, he finds it difficult to go to work to do his job. He complains to his wife that he is tired all the time, even though he is sleeping the same amount.

And, his friends notice that he often finds excuses to avoid leisure time activities. What has happened to John?

NOW RICHARD (CASE 2), had always considered himself to be physically fit. He had a number of high school and college trophies and awards for athletic prowess.

For the last 15 years, however, he had been very busy with his successful business, which he had started singlehandedly. Many employees worked for him, all depending on his leadership and experience. And he still found it necessary to spend about 12 to 14 hours a day at his business. In addition to the various civic duties he had assumed.

Richard had gained about 30 pounds since his college days. And, he smoked from one to two packs of cigarettes per day.

HE HAD LOOKED forward to his fishing trip with a couple of buddies for some time.

Typically, before leaving on the trip, he had tried to do all the work he would normally do on those days at the office.

On the first evening of the trip, the car got stuck in mud while the group put the boat in the lake. Richard worked hard, doing a lot of pushing, while getting the car out of the mud.

Afterwards, he complained of severe chest pains and he was sick to his stomach.

Later that evening, he died at a nearby hospital. What happened to Richard?

AND, KATHRINE (CASE 3) is the grandmother of three healthy grandchildren. She has been in moderately good health most of her life, but always a bit on the frail side.

She did fall about five years ago, and broke her arm.

She's always been a worrier. One of her frequent concerns now is her health. Back and digestive problems cause her to consult with her physician every few weeks.

What has happened to Kathrine?

HERE ARE some case-by-case answers to the physical fitness questions posed in these typical situations:

CASE 1 — Job and family responsibilities can have a cumulative effect. John is experiencing a mild depression in response to these problems.

His general lack of physical fitness makes him more susceptible to this condition. Low work performance and lethargy are often the first symptoms of depression.

A number of studies show that regular physical fitness activities can alleviate or prevent depressions of this type, in addition to the personal benefits of increased stamina and feelings of well being.

At John's age and condition, his symptoms are probably completely reversible and might be expected to change favorably if he changes his lifestyle to include regular fitness training, loses weight and quits smoking.

CASE 2 — Richard was the classic weekend athlete. There are several problems in Richard's lifestyle: occasional strenuous exercise which greatly exceeded his personal fitness level, excessive weight; absence of regular exercise; smoking; and a high-pressure work situation.

These and other factors can be measured. They constitute what we collectively call risk factors.

The factors are well-established in determining the risk of developing serious heart and circulatory system diseases.

A number of studies suggest that reducing these risk factors is beneficial and may greatly reduce the threat of cardiovascular diseases that may lead to heart attacks, strokes and other disabling or fatal results.

CASE 3 — Healthy lifestyles with regard to diet and physical fitness really begin to add up in the sixth, seventh or eighth decade of life.

More scientific documentation is being gathered in this area of preventative medicine. So far, it supports the consensus that physical fitness and healthy eating habits established over a lifetime result in substantial health benefits, including the absence of disease.

The data has not reached the point where we can say changes in diet or exercise actually increase a person's life expectancy.

However, we can certainly improve the quality of the years we do have by preventing disease, preserving bodily functions, and enabling the body to recover from — or better cope with — those diseases and conditions where remedies are less than ideal.

In Kathrine's case, a number of controlled studies suggest that life-long adherence to good diet and exercise practices may prevent, or at least ease, a wide variety of digestive disorders, as well as preserve muscle and bone function — including some types of low-back pain and disability.

NEXT: Physical fitness IS worth the effort.

Grandslam slated for Thursday

Would $1,000 in bonus bucks redeemable at the stores of Wayne's Grand Give-A-Way merchants interest you?

If so, it would be wise to be in one of those stores Thursday night at 8 p.m. That's when your name may be called as a winner in the retail promotion.

Last week, three area residents lost out on the tripleheader drawing, which offers three $350 bonus bucks prizes. They just weren't in any of the participating stores.

LAST WEEK'S losers were Lorene Wittler of Wayne, Emil Brader of rural Wayne, and Don Harmer of rural Carroll.

That means one Wayne shop per has a chance at winning $1,000 in bonus bucks at participating Grand Give-A-Way stores this Thursday, Nov. 5.

There hasn't been a $1,000 winner in weeks. So, participating merchants are eager to find a winner.

One name will be called in participating stores at 8 p.m. The winner will have 1 minute — 60 seconds only — to identify himself or herself to claim the $1,000 in bonus bucks.

NEXT Thursday, Nov. 12, the tripleheader returns. And, the grandslam is on again for Thursday, Nov. 19.

Both contests, the tripleheader and the grandslam alternate on Thursday nights.

The winners must be in a participating store when their names are called to be eligible for the bonus bucks.

In the tripleheader, three names are announced at the 15 minute intervals regardless of a win or a loss on the first or second try. One name is announced in the grandslam.

PARTICIPATING Grand Give-A-Way stores include Arnie's Ford-Mercury, Associated Insurance, Ber's Franklin, Bill's GW, Black Knight, Burger Barn, Carhart Lumber, Charlie's Refrigeration, Chrysler Center, Coryell Derby, Diamond Center, Discount Furniture, El Toro Lounge and Ellingson Motors.

Also, The 4th Jug, First National Bank, Fredrickson Oil, Griess Rexall, Jeff's Cafe, KTCH Radio, Karet's Furniture, Kaup's TV, Kuhn's Department Store, McDonald's, Merchant Oil, Mike Perry Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, Morning Shopper and Permida Inc.

And, Northeast Nebraska Insurance, Rich's Super Foods, Sev Mor Drug, State National Bank and Trust Co., Surber's, Swans' Apparel for Women, T&C Electronics, TP Lounge, Rusty Nail, Triangle Finance, Wayne Book Store, Wayne Grain & Feed, Midwest Federal Savings & Loan Association, Wayne Shoe, Wayne Yards, Club Wellman's IGA, Melodee Lanes, Logan Valley Improvement, Timberline Wood Products, Wayne Greenhouse and Gerald's Decorating.

SAY THANKS

Dear Readers, Thanksgiving Day is only a few short weeks away. It's a day we set aside each year to be thankful for the many good things in our lives. Some very special "good things" have happened to us over the years because someone took the time to care or to help.

Get a pencil or pen and a piece of paper. Write us — in 500 words or less — about that good turn, that special person (or if you're too young to write, draw us a picture). Please pick a "special someone" who is alive and in our circulation area, so they can read about your thankfulness.

You see, if you drop your personal story in the mail to us by Monday, November 16th, we'll publish it. We'll publish it — just as you wrote it with your name on it — in a special Thanksgiving Day section of the newspaper entitled: "Why I'm Thankful."

Tell us your story. Sign your name. Include your address and telephone number. Then, drop it in the mail to:

Why I'm Thankful
The Wayne Herald
P.O. Box 71
Wayne, NE 68787

Our panel of judges will select the best "Why I'm Thankful" story in four categories — kindergarten through fourth grade, fifth grade through eighth grade, ninth grade through 12th grade, and adult (out of high school).

Four Wayne merchants — Bill's GW, Wellman's IGA, Rich's Super Foods and Johnson's Frozen Foods — will provide the winning writers with a free Thanksgiving Day turkey. And, Bill's GW also will provide a free tub of broasted chicken to the "special people" the winners write about.

Winside farm couple wins award

ARLAND AND DOROTHY AURICH, rural Winside, receive the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District's Conservation Picture Award during a meeting of the LENRD board at Wayne State College last Thursday. The Aurichs were honored for their outstanding achievements in conserving the soil and water resources on their farm. The award was sponsored by the Winside State Bank. Lynn Lessman, second left, a bank officer, assisted in the presentation.

as did Melvin Meierhenry, left, local NRD director. The Aurich farm is 4 miles south and 1 1/2 miles east of Winside. The Aurichs bought the farm in 1957 and began working with the Wayne County Soil Conservation District that year. All 200 acres of cropland are protected by a terrace system with grass waterways. A farmstead windbreak and grassland are other conservation features on the Aurich farm.

Soil specialist offers plowing tips

Terrace system needs maintenance

Today's high farming costs make it important to maintain any farm improvements including terrace systems, according to Verlin Francis, conservation technician with the Soil Conservation Service.

Each year adverse weather and farming practices take their toll on the terraces' effectiveness, he said. If terraces aren't maintained, they will lose soil-saving abilities, Francis continued.

"THE BEST way to maintain a farmable terrace is by plowing along the terrace itself. Plowing should have the soil turning toward the terrace ridge, in other words, to have the back furrow on the terrace ridge and the dead furrow in the channel," Francis said.

Another way to properly maintain a terrace is to perform the tillage and planting operations on the contour, he said.

"Farming up and down the hill over terraces should be avoided since it is the most harmful practice to a terrace system, he warned. Heavy equipment also may be needed to build up terrace height, if tillage operations are not done properly, Francis explained.

Steep backslope terraces require a different method of maintenance.

"IN ADDITION to plowing up to the top of the ridge, the terrace channel may have to be cleaned out with a scoop or blade, according to Francis. The backslope may eventually become too steep with continued plowing, he said.

The height of underground outlet terraces is even more important to maintain than regular

26 mastitis control meetings set

Dairymen to tour farms with videotape

A parade of homes and 7,000 persons viewing a milking parlor, (a version of the campus craze, stuffing the telephone booth)?

These unlikely feats will be made possible for those attending the 1981 series of mastitis control meetings around Nebraska, and without the discomfort of wind, rain and cold, according to a University of Nebraska extension dairy specialist.

Dairy producers will gather at 26 locations — 25 in Nebraska and one in Iowa — during the week of Nov. 9, to view selected dairy operations entirely via videocassette and slide-tape, explained Don Kubik, program coordinator.

given an "open house" packaged tour of 12 dairy operations during four hours.

The dairy operations selected were from the 32 Nebraska Mastitis Control Demonstration Herds, Kubik explained. "These producers have agreed to share their experiences, show problem areas, and tell of ways changes have been made to control mastitis in their herds," the specialist said.

While an actual tour would have covered 720 miles, Kubik said, the meetings where all views are closeups, are located so no producer need drive more than a 40-mile round trip.

The demonstration herd owners have reduced somatic cell counts (a mastitis indicator) more than 40 percent and increased milk production by 648 pounds, Kubik stated. "This translates into an additional yearly net income of $85 per cow, or $5,100 for the average 60-cow herd," he said.

The schedule of mastitis control programs include Norfolk and Wayne. On Tuesday, Nov. 10, the Norfolk program is at Kings East. On Wednesday, Nov. 11, the Wayne program is at the USDA Service Center.

"THE BEST way to maintain a farmable terrace is by plowing along the terrace itself. Plowing should have the soil turning toward the terrace ridge, in other words, to have the back furrow on the terrace ridge and the dead furrow in the channel," Francis said.

Another way to properly maintain a terrace is to perform the tillage and planting operations on

The last grain ride
 THIS OLD GRAIN ELEVATOR rests against the rooftop of an old wooden-staffed corncrib northwest of Wayne. Despite some missing paddles, the elevator probably pushed thousands of bushels of earcorn into the crib before being replaced by modern augers conveying the field-shelled corn to gleaming steel grain bins. Somehow it seems fitting that it was allowed to rest against an old friend.

Nebraska's ditch weed

ONE OF THE CROPS that received some harvest attention in Nebraska this fall was wild marijuana. Commonly called Nebraska's ditch weed, the plant grows in abundance along the highways and byways of rural Wayne County. Authorities say that most of the plants are descendants of the hemp Nebraska farmers grew during World War II at government encouragement. The tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) level of the wild pot is much lower than that grown in Mexico and Columbia — prime sources for the supply that finds its way onto the streets of America. With a very low high potential, the Nebraska ditch weed is often harvested to cut with a better grade of marijuana, according to law enforcement authorities. However, harvesting it, possessing it, or smoking it is illegal.

VETERANS DAY PROGRAM

The Laurel-Concord Public Schools will be holding a Veterans Day Program again this year for all students and members of the community. Due to the availability of this year's speaker, Bernie Saggau, the program will be held Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. rather than Wednesday, the traditional date for Veterans Day.

The program will include selected numbers by the Laurel-Concord Concert Band and presentation of the colors by the Laurel VFW and American Legion.

This year's speaker is Bernie Saggau, who has been the executive secretary of the Iowa High School Athletic Association for the past 14 years. He is considered by many to be one of the leaders in our country in high school athletics and high school activities. He has a very positive and enthusiastic approach toward young people, high school athletics, education and America. He is a former teacher and principal and has been very active in sports activities.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Cedar County Historical Society met on Thursday in the Cedar County Museum at Hartington with 30 in attendance.

Election of officers was held with John T. Thoenes of Hartington, president; Ferdinand Wortmann of Hartington, vice president; Mrs. Bea Bruening of Hartington, secretary; and Robert Wagner of Hartington, treasurer. Miss Ruth Ebmeier was appointed program chair man.

Mrs. Lucille Robinson of Hartington spoke on "My Trip to the Asian Countries."

Hostesses were Mrs. Gertrude Gadenken, Miss Ellis Larson and Miss Ruth Ebmeier, all of Laurel. The next meeting will be Tuesday, Nov. 17 at 8 p.m. in the Belden Bank Parlors in Belden.

lee, John Chace and Rojane Bowman, both of Laurel, and Derek Lineberry of Concord. The next meeting will be Sunday, Nov. 15 at 5 p.m. at the Methodist Church with Jylene Urwiler and Troy Heltman of Laurel and Bruce Meier of Belden as hosts.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

The Laurel Immanuel Lutheran Youth Fellowship will be selling Christmas greenery and trees from Washington until Nov. 11. They are raising funds to help send members to a district youth gathering in Grand Island Nov. 13 to 15.

THANKOFFERING SERVICE

The Laurel United Lutheran ALCW Thankoffering Service will be held today (Thursday) at 8 p.m. The Rev. Kenneth Marquardt, pastor of the United Lutheran Church, will lead the Bible study entitled, "Our Identity in Christ as Christians." The executive board will be the hostesses. Everyone is to bring their Thankoffering boxes.

LUTHERAN HOUR RALLY

The members of the Immanuel Lutheran Church in Laurel are encouraged to attend the Lutheran Hour Rally on Sunday at the Norfolk Senior High School. The hymn sing will be at 2:30 p.m., with the Rally beginning at 3 p.m. Dr. Oswald Hoffmann of the Lutheran Hour will be the guest speaker.

A special youth rally will be conducted on Saturday prior to the rally for high school youth from the entire district. These activities will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Mt. Olive Lutheran Church in Norfolk. The high school youth will also be involved in carrying the flags for the "Parade of Nations."

QUEST NIGHT

The United Methodist Women of the Laurel Methodist Church are inviting the ladies from the area Laurel churches to its guest night on Tuesday, Nov. 10 at 7:30 p.m. The program will include special music and a style show given by the Barn Door in Laurel with Mrs. Harold White of Laurel in charge. A dessert lunch will follow the evening activities.

The program will include special music and a style show given by the Barn Door in Laurel with Mrs. Harold White of Laurel in charge. A dessert lunch will follow the evening activities.

FILM SHOWING

The United Lutheran Church in Laurel will be showing the film, "Where Luther Walked" on Sunday at 7 p.m. The film is sponsored by the Luther League and the entire congregation is invited to view it.

This new film is about the life and times of Martin Luther. The on-camera host in the film is Roland H. Bainton, longtime reformation scholar at Yale University.

After the fellowship hour, a brief meeting will be held for Luther Leaguers and their parents.

MISSIONARY LEAGUE

The Lutheran Women's Missionary League of the Immanuel Lutheran Church in Laurel will hold their annual Christmas fair, bake sale, lunch and white elephant sale on Saturday at the Laurel City Auditorium starting at 10 a.m.

Prices are to be on each item brought for the white elephant sale.

MARINERS

The Mariners of the Laurel United Presbyterian Church will meet Sunday at 8 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall. The Merlin Swansons will be in charge of the program and the Harry Olsons will have the devotions. The Milo Johnsons are on the serving committee.

Area One of the Homestead Presbytery will have a church officers training workshop on Sunday at the Wakefield United Presbyterian Church from 3 to 8 p.m. Area pastors are sharing in the leadership. Newly elected members of the Laurel church and nominated officers are urged to attend. The evening meal will be served by the ladies of the Wakefield church.

Where cottonwood is king

THE MIGHTY COTTONWOOD stands alone in a farm field southwest of Wayne, its branches draped with the flare of fall colors. With a ready-to-pick cornfield in the background and a double-row of the summer's hayfield harvest nearby, the tree appears to be a marker to guide the local landowner to the autumn harvest. Single cottonwood trees, like this one, dot the Nebraska countryside by the dozens. And, Nebraska farmers — for the most part — allow them to grow, plowing and planting around their deep roots and low branches.

HALLOWEEN PARTY
The annual Halloween party for pre-school through sixth grade youngsters was held Saturday evening at 7 p.m. at the City Auditorium with about 50 children attending.

The children were divided into different age groups with decorations in each group. Games and contests for each age group were held. Those assisting the different grounds were Mrs. Allen Schrant, Mrs. David Warnmunde, Miss Julie Warnmunde, Mrs. Don Leighton, Mrs. Ron Leapey and Mrs. Robert Wacker.

Prizes and treats were given. A parade in front of the judges for the best costumes was held. The winners were pre-school and kindergarten: Nathan Hill of Tecumseh, Denise Nelson, Andrew Jensen; first and second: Tessie Bresley of Omaha, Chris Mann and Donnie Nelson; third and fourth: Kathryn Hill of Tecumseh, Max Brogren and Max Kant; fifth and sixth: Rhonda Suehl, Lisa Janke and Ann Meierhenry.

The Winside Federated Womens Club sponsored the event. The committee in charge was Mrs. Allen Schrant, Mrs. Robert Wacker, Mrs. Niels Nielsen, Mrs. Ray Jacobsen, Mrs. Marvin Cherry, Mrs. Ron Leapey, Mrs. David Warnmunde and Mrs. Jay Morse.

Mrs. Otto Koch will be program leader.

50th WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

The Neighboring Circle held a party Oct. 24 at the Legion Hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Carstens on their 50th wedding anniversary.

Those attending were club members and their husbands, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carstens, Joel, David and Curtis of Wayne, Miss Dawn Carstens of Fremont, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Carstens of Norfolk, Mr. and Mrs. George Carstens of Hoskins, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dotson and Tammy of Wisner, Mrs. Mary Otto, Mrs. Patty Ankenny and Tina of Lincoln, Mrs. Debbie Manske, Jenny and Randy of Lincoln.

Ten point pitch was played for entertainment. Prizes were won by Dean Carstens, Ray Jacobsen, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kott, Mrs. Hans Carstens and Mrs. Mary Otto.

The club presented a gift to the Carstens. A decorated anniversary cake centered the table. Lunch was served at the close of the evening.

COMMUNITY CLUB
The Winside Community Club held its meeting Oct. 26 at Lee and Rosies with eight members present.

They discussed giving of sacks of candy to children for Christmas. It was decided to do this on Oct. 19, the same day as their turkey drawing. More details will appear later.

It was also decided to hold a pancake supper on Feb. 13 with bingo to be played for entertainment.

The next meeting will be Nov. 23 at the Stop Inn.

SATURDAY NIGHT PITCH CLUB

The Saturday Night Pitch Club met Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackson.

A New Year's party is being planned. Plans to be announced at a later date.

There will be no meeting until January at the Dale Langenbergs.
