Young mother, policeman save Wayne toddler's life

By Randall Howell

Quick action by a Wayne mother and a city patrolman saved the life of 20-month-old Joshua Bower this past weekend.
Joshua, the only child of Mary and Robert Bower, 704 Pearl Street, stopped breathing about 7:45 a.m. Sunday.
"I picked him up and he was limp," Mary told The Wayne Herald. "His eyes were back and his mouth wouldn't open."
MARY RAN downstairs and dialed 911 — the Wayne Police Department emergency number.
"It wasn't even a minute and he (Wayne patrolman Keith Adams) was there," she said. "He came running into the house."
Joshua had just begun to breathe again, according to his mother, who related the harrowing experience to The Wayne Herald Tuesday.
Adams, who has been with the police department for 5 1/2 years, was on patrol Sunday morning.
"When I got there, she (Joshua's mother) was holding the door open with the baby in her arms," Adams explained.
"THE WAY SHE was holding him... he was lifeless... his arms were hanging down," Adams continued. "She gave the baby to me. I would have sworn he was not breathing."
Joshua is a fighter, though. He had begun to breathe ever so shallowly and ever so shakily — just before Adams got to the Bower house.

Mary had forced Joshua's mouth open and "held him upside down" in an effort to get the breath of life started again. Miraculously it had worked.
"I kept his airway open," Adams said, explaining that he placed the infant on the floor in preparation for mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.
"He took a shallow breath," Adams said. "I was going to give him my own, but he took another shallow breath and continued breathing real shallow."
MOMENTS LATER, Joshua was rushed to Providence Medical Center by ambulance.
Dr. James Lindau of the Wayne Family Practice Group met the infant at the hospital.
After a short hospital stay, which included an examination, Joshua was back home Sunday morning to sleep under the watchful eye of his mother and a friend.
"He had had a seizure," Mary explained. "Dr. Lindau said that a fluctuation in his temperature probably triggered it. He may never have another one."
Mary, who was home alone with her infant son Saturday night and Sunday morning, said Joshua had been "a little feverish" the night before the episode.

"I GAVE HIM some baby aspirin and he went back to sleep," she continued. "He was restless, but he didn't wake up all night."
Mary said Joshua woke up about 7:30 a.m. and she gave him some water.
"Bob was away, so I took him to our bed," she explained. Her husband, an education and psychology instructor at Wayne State College, was in Bloomfield conducting a weekend workshop.
Mary, who is expecting another child, said she laid Joshua at the foot of the bed with a pillow at first. Then, since her husband was not home, she said she decided to place Joshua at the head of the bed beside her.
"I PICKED HIM up and he was limp," she said, relating that the next few moments seemed like hours.
Overwhelmed by the quick response by Adams, Mary said: "He came right through the door on the run. We have a big dog... a Doberman, but that didn't slow him down. He took him (Joshua) and handed it from there."
Mary said the ambulance was "here in minutes that seemed like hours to me... but I know it was only minutes." Adams continued to work with baby Joshua during the short wait.
"He (Adams) just took over," Mary said, a quiet sigh of relief still in her voice as she recalled the incident. "He rocked him and he talked to him. I was so glad he was there."

ADAMS, WHO has attended Sudden Infant Death Seminars, said: "When he (Joshua) continued breathing, I took him in my arms... but he wouldn't cry. I moved him and even patted him on the rear to try to get him to cry but he wouldn't."
"Finally, just as the ambulance got there, he started to whimper a bit," continued Adams, who is a certified respiratory therapist.
Adams worked at St. Vincent Hospital in Sioux City, Iowa, while at Briarcliff College.
Mary said she called a friend, Karen, while waiting for the ambulance. "I just had to call someone," the young mother explained. "Well, she beat us to the hospital."
The two watched over Joshua until Mary's husband returned. "If it hadn't been for Joe Fleck at the college, Bob wouldn't have known until he got home," Mary continued.
"JOE SPENT several hours on the telephone trying to get Bob in Bloomfield," she said. "He worked so hard to get in touch with him."
Fleck reached Mary's husband, who returned to find his son alive and well, and his wife still marveling about the emergency help.
"As soon as he knew Joshua was okay, Dr. Lindau turned to me and said: 'And, how are you doing?'" Mary said. "That was so kind and sensitive of him."

THIS URBAN OWL napped for hours Saturday while perched on a tree branch in front of the Clyde Flowers home on Fourth Street west. The bird of prey, which appears to be a screech owl, opened its eyes from time to time to check out the passers-by. The Flowers family discovered the owl in their front yard early Saturday afternoon. The owl, seemingly undisturbed by the presence of neighbors, remained on the branch until after sundown. The Flowers and several neighbors have reported hearing the nocturnal screech owls. New Norfolk office to serve area clients Wayne Legal Aid office doors to close in December

A reorganization of the Legal Aid Society in northeast Nebraska will close the door on Wayne's poverty-law-services office Dec. 1.
An expected 25-percent cut in the federally funded program has sparked a move to consolidate the Wayne and Columbus offices in new headquarters at Norfolk, according to Sam Zeleski, managing attorney based in Columbus.
Wayne's Legal Aid needs will be served from newly leased office space in the Norfolk Regional Center once the city office, at 420 Pearl Street, closes, according to Zeleski.
OFFICE RECORDS, materials and furniture are being moved from the rented residential structure near the Wayne County Courthouse.

According to Zeleski, who will direct the Norfolk office, some Wayne staffers will rejoin the Legal Aid Society at the Norfolk headquarters, which will serve about 14 counties in northeast Nebraska.
A number of other staffers, he said, will be out of a job.
The Wayne office, which first opened in 1978, has functioned with a seven-member staff serving about eight northeast Nebraska counties.
The Norfolk office will serve the 14 counties with a start-up staff that's less than half as large, according to Zeleski.

IN NORFOLK, the Legal Aid Society staff will include the managing attorney, a staff attorney working with the elderly, a Reggie Fellowship-law school graduate (one year only), and a part-time secretary-receptionist.
In Wayne, the office staff included three attorneys, a law school graduate, a paralegal, a clerk and a part-time secretary-receptionist.
According to Zeleski, only one of the lawyers, Mike Krochmalny, the aging-grant attorney, and Kathy Severens, the Regal Fellowship-law school graduate, are expected to be transferred to the Norfolk office.
Without positions in Norfolk, once the Wayne office closes, are Mary Buford and Frank Daley, both attorneys; Linda Rhoads, a paralegal; Connie Clark, a clerk; and Rozan Pedersen, secretary-receptionist.

THE OFFICE has been operating on a month-to-month tenancy since the recent expiration of the Legal Aid Society lease on the Pearl Street office, according to Zeleski.
Zeleski, who has been in charge of both the Wayne and Columbus offices, said Dec. 1 is the target date for closing the city office.
He said Legal Aid Society clients can count on a transition period that will include procedures and staff to respond to emergency situations and telephone calls.
Zeleski said Tuesday he had just completed negotiations with the state Department of Public Institutions for the new Norfolk headquarters.

In addition, the managing attorney said the new Legal Aid Society office will continue the toll-free telephone service to clients and potential clients. The number is — and will continue to be — 1-800-672-8319.
HOWEVER, HE said that the staff would not be able to arrange for personal appointments at the Wayne office after Dec. 1.
The Columbus office, which is expected to continue for several months, has an early 1982 target date for consolidating services in Norfolk, Zeleski said.
He said the Columbus staff has been smaller than Wayne's Legal Aid Society crew.

According to Zeleski, the final disposition of the congressional and Reagan administration cutbacks will influence the timetable for the Columbus office shutdown.
"Our main goal is to find a permanent place to operate and to survive the Reagan cuts," Zeleski explained.
"WE ARE NOT withdrawing our services from the Wayne area," Zeleski continued, explaining that the decision has been made to centralize the staffing.
The move will allow us to make some...

Art alumni plan reunion

If you've graduated from Wayne State College with a major in art, then Pearl Hansen wants you. Hansen, a Wayne State art instructor, is in the process of organizing a reunion to be held this spring for anyone who has graduated from WSC with an art major, no matter how long they left the campus.

"We would like to contact as many of our alumni as possible so that we may share ideas concerning the field of art and art education", Hansen said.

A possibility for the reunion is a show of artwork produced by the alumni. Some ideas that will be discussed include forming a newsletter, offering courses which would meet alumni needs, and the alumni's thoughts on where art stands economically and politically.

Hansen states, "I want them to see what is happening with art on a national, state and local level."

For more information on the art major reunion, contact Pearl Hansen at Wayne State College, Wayne, NE 68787 or call (402) 375-2200, ext. 356.

Radio-TV grows at WSC

Wayne State College's Radio/Television concentration is enjoying one of the largest enrollments in the past several years, according to Herb Meinert, assistant professor of humanities.

"At present, there are 44 Radio/Television majors, nearly double the number of students we had in 1979. That makes the broadcast department the largest single area within the Division of Humanities," Meinert said.

Meinert credits the growth in the area to careful recruitment and a growing interest in broadcast communications, among other things.

Choir performing in Lincoln

Friday evening, Nov. 20, the Wayne State College Concert Choir will be performing at 8 p.m. at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

Two performances of the Benjamin Britten "War Requiem" will be conducted under the direction of internationally famous choral conductor Robert Shaw.

The concert will be shared live on the Nebraska Educational Television Network. The concerts will be held in O'Donnell Auditorium on the Wesleyan campus.

a judge.

Laurel teacher receives award

Ed Brogie, Department chairman for science at Laurel High School, has been named an Outstanding Biology Teacher for the State of Nebraska, according to Wayne State College assistant professor of biology Harland Pankratz, chairman of the state selection committee.

Brogie is active in the Junior Academy of Science and the National Wildlife Federation, bird banding, and is known for taking his students on overnight field trips to various regions of Nebraska.

BROGIE is a 1975 graduate of Wayne State. During his college career he participated in the WSC track program and holds the school record for the long jump at 22 feet nine inches.

Pankratz, chairman of the state selection committee, comments that Brogie has "significantly contributed to the improvement of the science program at Laurel."

The Outstanding Biology Teacher Award is presented each year to one biology teacher in each of the 50 states by the National Association of Biology

Teachers and the American Optical Association, and is "the most prestigious award given to classroom teachers anywhere," according to Pankratz.

Awardees receive a framed certificate and a high quality binocular microscope.

THE AWARD will be presented to Brogie during a meeting of the Northeast Nebraska Junior Academy of Science on Nov. 20 at the Villa Inn in Norfolk.

A second presentation is tentatively planned for Nov. 24 at Laurel High School.

Some hard hitting

Southern ends Cats' hopes of .500 season

By Ken Probst

Wayne State College

Missouri Southern utilized a strong third quarter to escape with a 23-19 win over the Wayne State Wildcats in the 1981 season finale last Saturday in Wayne.

The Wildcats staged a determined fourth quarter rally, but a late pass interception by Missouri Southern's Mark Bock ended the game for the Lions. The loss dropped Wayne State's final record to 4-6, including 2-5 in the Central States Intercollegiate Conference. Southern finished with an "official" record of 3-7-1 and 3-4 in the CSC, but that mark included four forfeit losses because of an ineligible player. Wayne State had two chances to take the lead early after Lion fumbles. Freshman defender Kurt Brosamie recovered the first fumble on the Wildcat 20, and Wayne moved into position for a 36-yard field goal attempt. Pat Maxwell's kick was short.

WAYNE STATE linebacker Tony Scudder recovered another fumble at the Southern 31 just two plays later, and again the Wildcats moved into position for a field goal. But Maxwell's 25-yard attempt was blocked by Lion Tim Jones and Southern took over on its own 30.

On first down, Lion running back Tom Laughlin burst up the middle for a 57-yard gain to the Wayne 13. On the next play, Harold Norralise went the distance to stake Southern to a 7-0 lead as Terry Dobbs kicked the extra point.

The Wayne State showed a few fireworks of its own on the next series. On first down from the Wildcat 31, tailback Randy Frink took a pitch over his right tackle and sped 64 yards to the Southern 6. Tight end Ed Blackburn latched onto a tipped Kelly Neustrom pass on the next play for the touchdown. Pat Maxwell drilled the extra point to knot the score at 7-7.

Neither team was able to mount a serious scoring threat for the rest of the half, though Southern called upon kicker Terry Dobbs to try unsuccessful field goals of 57, 54 and 52 yards in the second quarter.

SOUTHERN APPEARED on its way to a roul after dominating the third period. Wayne State was nowhere on its first possession of the second half and Maxwell was forced to punt from deep in Wildcat territory.

Southern got the ball on the Wayne State 42 and took it in after just five plays, the big gainer a 23-yard pass from Marly Schoenthaler to John Anderson on a third-and-seven situation at the Wayne State 39. Harold Norralise then gained 15 to the one, and he took it over on the next carry to give the Lions a 14-7 advantage.

Later in the third period, a 56-yard punt by Southern's Mark Shuffiebeam nailed the Wildcats back on their own six-yard line. On third down and 12 from the four, Lion defender Mike Petel broke through the Wayne State line to nail Neustrom for a two-point safety and pad the margin to 16-7.

Still later in the third period, Pat Maxwell boomed a high 44-yard punt that Southern's Steve Sater fielded at his own 34. Sater broke to his right and raced up the sidelines 66 yards for the touchdown. Terry Dobbs' third conversion pushed the score to 23-7.

At that point, Neustrom led a Wildcat rally that nearly succeeded in pulling off the upset. Wayne State drove 89 yards in just six plays to score. A 43-yard pass to Pat Maxwell that carried to the Lion 35 was the key. Maxwell then gathered in a 22-yarder for the score to close the gap to 23-13. The pass for the two-point conversion failed.

On the ensuing kickoff, Tony Scudder stepped in front of Maxwell and tapped an onside kick down the left sideline. It was recovered by Rob Tiedgen at the Southern 40 with 6:44 remaining.

Just four plays and 61 seconds later the Cats were back on the board, with Neustrom throwing 10 yards to Blackburn for the touchdown. Again the pass on the two-point conversion failed and the score stood at 23-19 in favor of Southern.

THE WAYNE STATE defense held the Lions on their next possession and forced a Southern punt that gave the Wildcats the ball on their own 27 with 2:33 to play. On first down, a pass to Blackburn netted 17, but moments later Southern's Mark Bock intercepted a Neustrom pass to foil Wayne State's comeback hopes.

Wayne State got one more chance when Southern turned the ball over on downs. Operating from his own 40 with only 11 seconds to play and no timeouts left, Neustrom was sacked by Mike Petel for the third time of the day as the final gun sounded.

Neustrom added 239 passing yards to his new single season record at Wayne State of 15 of 21 completions for all three Wildcat touchdowns. Maxwell caught four passes for 115 yards and a score, and Blackburn grabbed six for 90 yards and two touchdowns. Frink finished the day with game rushing honors as he netted 120 yards on 18 carries.

Kirk Neustrom led all Wayne State tacklers with 11 stops. Linebacker Ron Gilbert, tackle Ron Berrie and end Troy Thiem had 10 tackles and a quarterback sack. Tony Scudder had 10 tackles and a fumble recovery, and safety Jay Sandy added 10 tackles and a forced fumble. Linebacker Steve Dennis had 10 tackles, while back Kurt Brosamie had eight tackles and a fumble recovery.

Ten Wildcat seniors ended their Wayne State careers on Saturday.

Turkey Trot set Saturday

Wayne is planning its second "howl" celebration of the year. On the "spurs" of the summer Chicken Show, Wayne is now preparing for a Turkey Trot.

Actually, the turkey came before the chicken; this being the fifth annual trot. And neither the chicken nor the turkey have yet laid an egg.

If this seems very confusing it is to convey the point that Wayne will be holding a 5000 meter (3.1 mile) race that will begin and end downtown after touring the Wayne State College campus, the business district and residential areas.

The race will begin at the corner of Second and Main Streets at 10 a.m. Saturday, (Nov. 21). For those who registered before Tuesday the fee was $5. There will be a $6 charge the day of the race. Every entrant will get an "I'm a Turkey Trotter" t-shirt and the male and female winners will receive frozen turkeys.

Last year, Dan Cloester from Norfolk, a World Class marathon runner, led the field of 120 runners with a time of 15 minutes 29 seconds. Karlene Erickson, of Erikson, finished first among the women with a time of 17 minutes 26 seconds.

Erickson is one of Nebraska's premier female runners, recently finishing second in the Diet Pepsi 10 kilometer National Finals, fifth in the Bonne Belle 10 kilometer Race included and International field of world class women runner, and first in the 1981 Omaha Marathon.

Applications may be obtained by contacting Mr. Pat Gross, Box 111, Wayne, NE 68787.

Randy's Recap

By Randy Hascall

THE CY YOUNG Awards brought an equally foolish end to a ridiculous Major League baseball season. It was a year, in which the two winning teams in the National League (Cincinnati and St. Louis) didn't even make the playoffs.

The players' strike had such an impact on the season that it doesn't even deserve a spot in the record book. And now, the topper of all!

Fernando Valenzuela named Cy Young Award winner in the National League? The baseball writers must have been swayed by a few quarts of Mexican tequila and a box of chocolate-covered jalapeno peppers. What happened to Tom Seaver, Steve Carlton, Nolan Ryan and a couple of the others?

Valenzuela definitely is deserving of rookie of the year honors. But his statistics don't stand up to those of several other National League pitchers. Because of his terrific start this past season and because of all the publicity he received, Valenzuela takes the top honor away from those deserving individuals.

Check out these statistics: Valenzuela's record was 13-7 with an earned run average of 2.45. While his ERA is impressive, his record is far from it. Tom Seaver of the Cincinnati Reds had a 14-2 record and 2.55 ERA, Steve Carlton of Philadelphia had a 13-4 record and 2.42 ERA, "no-hit" Nolan Ryan of Houston had an 11-5 record and 1.69 ERA. Even Valenzuela's teammate Jerry Reuss had stats on the same level with a 10-4 record and 2.29 ERA.

Valenzuela did lead the National League in strikeouts with 180 and innings pitched with 192 but Carlton was right behind with 179 strikeouts in 190 innings. The Mexican did help his team to a World Series championship but don't forget that Ryan set the record for most career no-hitters topping the legendary Sandy Koufax.

Although Valenzuela's statistics were tremendous especially for a rookie, I don't know how Seaver, Carlton and Ryan can be overlooked for their outstanding seasons.

The American League Cy Young Award is less of a controversy. Relief pitcher Rolfe Fingers was given the award for his low ERA and 28 saves. However, several good starting pitchers were overlooked.

The relievers have their own award and I feel that the Cy Young should be saved for starters. High ERA's and mediocre records probably hurt the starters' chances this year however.

Among the fine starting pitchers who didn't get a crack at the Cy Young are Steve McCatty of Oakland with a 14-7 record and 2.32 ERA, Dennis Martinez of Baltimore with a 14-5 record and 3.32 ERA, Scott McGregor of Baltimore with a 13-5 record and 2.24 ERA, Pete Vuckovich with a 14-4 record and 3.54 ERA and Ron Guidry with an 11-5 record and 2.76 ERA.

CORNHUSKER FANS are now wondering: If Nebraska can beat Oklahoma without the services of Turner Gill.

The loss of Gill sure hurts the Huskers' chances but a win could place the Big Red as high as second or first in the final ratings. Penn State can knock off top-ranked Pittsburg in the final season matchup, Pittsburg can defeat Georgia in the Sugar Bowl, Texas can trip up Alabama in the Cotton Bowl, and Nebraska can whip Clemson in the Orange Bowl.

Those possibilities should give the Cornhuskers top shot at the national title. For now, let's cheer for Georgia Tech to upset Florida or Auburn to upset Alabama.

WAYNE STATE DEFENSIVE coordinator Ralph Barclay is eating steak and basketball coach Rick Weaver is eating corn.

Barclay, normally a football coach, was player-coach for the WSC alumni basketball team which gave Weaver a variety of good struggle Saturday night before finally losing by four or five points. Prior to the game, Weaver had wagered a steak dinner that Barclay couldn't sink a free throw in two attempts.

Ralph came through to win the steak. He missed his first attempt but hit the second.

A walk through Wayne County history

A LONE PINE tree stands near a shingled, wood-frame cupola from the old courthouse at LaPorte, Wayne County's first county seat. The cupola is fenced in on an historical site southeast of Wayne. A marker at the site pays tribute to the "pioneers who tamed the wilderness." Just a few miles west, the LaPorte Cemetery gates guard the graves of early settlers including a veteran of the War of 1812 — Nathaniel Allen. The sites take the curious on a walk through Wayne County history.

Legal Aid

financial adjustments to the cutbacks and increase our efficiency on some of the cases," he added. Zaleski explained that many of the administrative hearings attended by both Legal Aid Society staffers and their clients are held in Norfolk.

"For instance, there's a tendency to have the social security and employment hearings in Norfolk," he added.

Zaleski stressed that the future of federal funding for Legal Aid Society services is uncertain.

"REAGAN AND (David) Stockman have been opposed to the federal funding of legal aid for the poor," Zaleski said.

"It's hard to say whether we are getting nailed badly, or whether we are in a process that will make our program more relevant on a dead center," the managing attorney continued.

He said the society, faced with funding uncertainty, is exploring state block grants, other avenues for continued federal funding, grants and private donations to keep the program afloat financially.

"And, our transition arrangement (in Norfolk) depends on the funding we get for 1982, he added.

Zaleski said that several cutback plans under review in Washington D.C. would slash the federal funding of the program anywhere from 25 percent to 50 percent.

"IF THE CUTS go through Congress, no one is sure what the president will do with the veto," Zaleski said, explaining that the Legal Aid Society is "making the move now" to gear for a response to the needs of northeast Nebraska from Norfolk.

"Under the worst scenario, we'll keep the office in Norfolk at least one year," Zaleski said.

"Our program out of the Omaha Legal Aid Society has made a commitment to a continued rural presence," he added.

"Our experience in Wayne has been positive. The relationships there have been good from the organizational group to today," he said. "We're honoring the faith they (Wayne area residents) have put in us."

IN LIGHT of the cutbacks, Zaleski said the only reasoning the society has used is "how will our clients best be served?"

He said the society will try to do it as "fairly and completely as possible" out of Norfolk.

"It's a compromise decision based on the needs of our clients," Zaleski continued.

"It is difficult and it's hard for the people in Wayne to give up that area after three years here," he said. "It's not easy to break out into a larger area. And, personally for them, it is a hardship to move."

According to Zaleski, the society, which does not handle criminal or juvenile cases, has designed a tiered level of priorities.

"We are under a cutback and we cannot meet all the requests we are receiving now," he said.

LEGAL AID Society attorneys primarily handle civil matters, including debt problems for clients meeting low-income requirements.

He said the Norfolk office plans to focus on cases where qualified clients seek assistance in food stamps, social security benefits, supplementary income benefits and other federal welfare cases.

A second priority, time and staff permitting, will be emergency evictions, and utility shutoffs, according to the managing attorney.

And a third area, again time and staff permitting, will be the domestic relations area, including debt collection and bankruptcy problems at the poverty level.

THE LEGAL AID Society involves programs handled by full-time poverty law specialists who provide free legal services to eligible low-income clients with civil law problems, Zaleski explained.

"We want to be available to help people who have problems in that area," he continued. "It's a crushing point in the war against poverty."

Legal Aid attorneys and paralegals represent plaintiffs and defendants in civil matters that range from guardianships to public assistance benefits.

The society also serves an educational function in the area of rights and procedures.

Zaleski has been based in Columbus for about 18 months. He has served with the society in Omaha

Livestock Service asks farmer participation

The Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service is asking farmers and livestock to participate in the end of the season crop and livestock surveys this fall, according to Jack L. Aschwege, State Statistician.

The Nebraska surveys are a part of the Nationwide program of publishing accurate and timely agricultural statistics.

ASCHWEGE points out that all individual farm information supplied will be kept confidential. The information collected from these surveys will be used in preparing State and county estimates of acreage and yield of all harvested crops, winter wheat seedings, cattle, hogs, sheep and chicken numbers.

The first set of questionnaires concerning acreage and production of fall harvested crops and winter wheat seedings will be mailed in early November. Surveys will also be carried out in late November and early December to obtain information on livestock and poultry numbers and winter wheat seedings.

Many cattle producers will also be surveyed in late December and early January. Some farmers will be contacted by phone or personally visited, Aschwege said.

Farmer participation is voluntary but essential in providing reliable estimates on acreage and livestock numbers, he pointed out. These estimates are important if farmers, ranchers, and their organizations are to have a sound basis for making and adjusting production, storage and marketing plans.

Hoskins celebration

Physical, verbal, emotional, sexual abuse

'Society must intervene to save the children'

By LaVon Beckman

Child abuse or child neglect? The words mean different things to different people. Both describe situations in which society should and must intervene...

and mentally, by parents or other persons responsible. Agnew said that while parents must be free to raise children as they see fit — within limits — it is society's responsibility to intervene when the child is being mistreated...

AGNEW SAID it is important to remember that two-thirds of reported abuse occurs in children under the age of three. "In most instances the child cannot voice clues to abuse and neglect," said Agnew...

DETECTING and reporting child abuse, outlining some of the reasons parents and other adults abuse children, describing feelings which an abused child may experience...

A four member panel of experts discussed various aspects of the problem before a crowd of about 200 college students and residents of the community.

Panel members included Dr. Robert Agnew, director of child and adolescent services, Northern Nebraska Comprehensive Mental Health Center, Norfolk. Donna Bathke, chairperson of Parents Anonymous, Norfolk. Steve Hecker, a member of the Norfolk Police Department and Cindy Williams of Child Protective Services, Norfolk.

"WHEN we talk about child abuse, we often feel like we're shouting into the wind," said Dr. Agnew.

Agnew pointed out that child abuse is on the rise — more and more — although its effects are often hard to see. Statistics show that approximately one million children each year are mistreated, both physically

- A manner that reflects fear, intimidation or withdrawal.

- Evidence of unusual bruising, lacerations, or fractures.

- Unusually frequent "accidental" injury.

- Turning to strangers indiscriminately for attention or affection.

- Not looking to parents for relief from discomfort.

- Excessive anxiety.

- Truant or runaway behavior.

- Inconsistency between observed physical injury and the history of the injury as given by the parent.

- Bravado, or denial by the child that any problem exists.

- The child who rationalizes excessive punishment by saying "I'm bad I deserve it."

- Destructive or cruel behavior.

AGNEW SAID that while none of the clues would by themselves necessarily be an indicator of abuse, two or more clues present in either the parent or the child should be enough to alert society that a family may be in need of intervention.

Agnew stated, "By ignoring the problem, and the effects of child abuse on society, we're creating more child abuse. It's a never ending cycle."

Cindy Williams of Child Protective Services told the audience that in Wayne County, an average of one case of child abuse is reported every two months.

AGNEW SAID it also is important to identify parents who are likely to abuse.

"Economic considerations and other family pressures play a large role when we talk about child abuse,"

Agnew said one of the biggest reasons for child abuse is that parents were in many instances abused as children themselves.

"The only training they had to parenting is what their parents did to them," he said, reminding the audience that child abuse is a never ending cycle.

"ONLY RARELY are abusing parents psychotic," said Agnew, adding that most will appear to be "normal."

He said professionals need to be sensitive to the clues that are presented.

Agnew provided several clues in identifying parents who are at high risk, including parents who expect too much, or parents with a negative attitude towards their children.

Additional factors to look for, he said, are parents who are socially isolated and have little opportunity for time away from their children.

OTHER CLUES, according to Agnew, are parents whose expectations of themselves as parents are unrealistic; parents who express fear that they may harm their child, parents whose sense of self esteem seems to be very low; parents who indicate that their relationship with their own parents is poor; parents who are uncomfortable relating to their child in the presence of another person, or parents whose anger about their child's behavior appears to be out of proportion to the situation.

DONNA BATHKE, another member of the panel, said all too often it is the tendency of those working with families with child abuse problems to focus on signs of pathology and dysfunction.

Bathke said in evaluating a family, the professional needs to include an assessment of the strengths which are present.

Bathke briefly explained the services provided to parents by Parents Anonymous, a federally funded, nationwide program of "self-help" for parents with abuse problems.

"PARENTS Anonymous chapters are peer led with the support of a professional sponsor," said Bathke.

Bathke added that Parents Anonymous offers parents the opportunity to share their feelings with other parents who are experiencing the same problem, and affords them the protection anonymity.

The program is free, and each chapter functions as its own crisis intervention unit. Parents exchange phone numbers and are available to each other and to the group leaders, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

STEVE HECKER of the Norfolk Police Department said while it is important that parents suspected of abusing their children receive professional help, Nebraska law instructs citizens to report child abuse whenever they know or suspect it has occurred.

Hecker reminded the audience that the "reporter's" identity is legally protected and they are immune from any liability or civil or criminal action, except for maliciously false reports or statements.

HECKER NAMED three ways in which reports of child abuse can be made in Nebraska.

"If the situation is an emergency," said Becker, law enforcement officials should be called first. They have the authority to remove a child immediately.

Hecker said reports also may be made to the Multi-County Social Services Unit or County Welfare Office. Both work together with law enforcement officials on certain cases.

In the Wayne area, reports of suspected child abuse can be made to the Multi-County Social Services Unit in Norfolk, 371-7633, or Wayne County Public Welfare, 375-2715.

Persons suspecting child abuse also may call a national toll free hot line, 1-800-652-1999. Persons manning the hot line make reports both to the police and to the Social Services and/or Welfare Offices.

HECKER TOLD the audience that even if a suspected child abuse case has already been investigated, persons who suspect abuse to still be going on should not hesitate to report it again.

"Sometimes not enough evidence is found the first time and subsequent reports can clarify the situation," said Hecker.

"As long as you have reasonable cause to believe a child is being abused, you should make the report."

HECKER SHOCKED members of the audience when he told them police have the option to investigate or not.

"Unfortunately," said Hecker, "police often times don't respond to a call. They aren't familiar with laws regarding child abuse."

Hecker said that while all police officers are required to attend an eight-week training class in Grand Island, "you can throw what you learn there out the window when you get home."

"If your department doesn't want you to respond to a child abuse call, you don't," he said.

"I hope that's not a surprise to you," said Hecker above gasps of surprise from the audience.

AGNEW CLOSED the program by saying effects of child abuse are severe.

An abused child may never be able to love and trust other people, and he may always have a poor self-image, said Agnew. Injuries inflicted in childhood may result in permanent crippling deformity.

"The child may become very aggressive, or take his or her anger inward and withdraw," he said.

"Parents who habitually abuse their children may very well end up killing them," emphasized Agnew. "Hundreds of such cases happen every year."

ALL FOUR members of the panel closed by saying society must get involved.

—Learn the facts about child abuse, its causes and treatment.

—Help abused victims and their parents with your time, resources and understanding.

—Support legal and social efforts to combat child abuse.

—Report child abuse when you see it.

This year, there will be thousands of children who will be abused — physically, verbally, emotionally and sexually.

Wayne Advisory Council school's link to community

The Community Advisory Council will hold its first meeting of the year Monday, Nov. 23, at 8 p.m. in the Elementary School library.

The council is the official link between the community, parents, and the school system.

All interested residents are invited to attend the meeting to become actively involved in the Wayne school system.

EACH FALL, the students of Wayne Middle School and West Elementary School take nationally standardized achievement tests.

During Monday night's general community council meeting, Richard Metteer, Middle School principal, and Dave Lutz, Elementary School principal, will discuss the results of these tests.

THE COMMUNITY council meets as a group three times each school year.

Members may choose to work on one of the subcommittees which meet throughout the year. Subcommittees are formed with the school board's approval as needs and interests arise.

At the present time there are four subcommittees. They include:

SPECIAL NEEDS: This committee aids and advises Project Success, Predict and Prevent, and the programs for the educable and trainable mentally handicapped (EMH and TMH).

Special Talents: This committee is studying ways in which the school system can meet the needs of students who are gifted and talented.

Title I: This committee serves as the parent advisory group for the Title I program. This project receives some federal funds.

Nutrition: The nutrition committee prepared a booklet on nutrition which was distributed to parents last year. Plans have not been made for this year.

MEMBERS OF the Community Advisory Council remind residents that the active involvement of parents and community members can make a difference in the school system.

New York theatre tour set

The Empire State Building, the Statue of Liberty, Central Park, Times Square—that and more can be yours if you sign up now for the annual Wayne State College New York Theatre Tour scheduled for Dec. 26 through Jan. 2.

The tour itinerary includes viewing at least three Broadway productions including "Barnum," a musical starring Jim Dale in his Tony award winning performance as P.T. Barnum, "Children of a Lesser God," which also earned a Tony, and either "Death Trap," the longest running Broadway comedy thriller, or the highly acclaimed comedy "The Fifth of July."

PERSONS taking the tour for college credit must also view two other productions. Whether it is taken for credit or not, there will still be plenty of time to do what participants want — unlike many other tours of this type under taken by other organizations.

Many of these type of tours occupy all of a person's time," noted tour director Dr. Helen Russell, professor of communication arts at Wayne State. "This tour leaves lots of free time to do what you want to do."

Those going on the tour will stay in the Piccadilly Hotel on West 45th Street, right off Times Square and in the heart of the theatre district. It is not far at all from famous sites such as Madison Square Garden, Radio City Music Hall, Greenwich Village, Little Italy, New York Stock Exchange, United Nations, Rockefeller Center, and many, many more.

In addition to the Broadway productions, participants can take in a number of excellent off-Broadway plays plus opera, ballet and symphonies. In short, you can see whatever you want to see.

ANOTHER highlight of the trip is food. Russell said that restaurants of all kinds and in all price ranges are available to tour-goers.

If the New York Theatre strikes your fancy, you can get more information about it by contacting Dr. Helen Russell at Wayne State College, or call (402) 375-2200, ext. 442.

To make reservations, call the Extended Campus Division at (402) 375-2200, ext. 217.

Schmidt observance

MR. AND MRS. RALPH Schmidt, Wisner, will be honored at an open house reception for their 30th wedding anniversary on Saturday, Nov. 28, from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Wisner city auditorium. The event will be hosted by their children, Roger of Stanton, Clark of Norfolk, Mr. and Mrs. Larry (Peggy) Steinkamp of Wall Lake, Iowa, Mr. and Mrs. Stan (Cindy) Nathan of Hoskins, and Carol Schmidt of Lincoln. All friends and relatives are invited to attend.

Area homemakers get Christmas head start

Diane Radick of the Flora Craft Shop, Yankton, S. D., conducted a Christmas workshop for 36 area women at the University of Nebraska Northeast Station, Concord, on Nov. 9.

She was assisted by Dolly Radick, also of the Flora Craft Shop.

They directed the women in completing seven holiday decorations and gift items, including napkin rings, decorated wall mats, ribbon angels, and quilted santas.

DORTHY MOHR of Laurel, who has attended the Christmas workshop for several years, said she has used many of the ideas to make Christmas gifts, including gifts for Sunday school teachers and children.

Many of the handcrafted items can help stretch the Christmas budget as well as add a personal touch to gifts.

THE WORKSHOP was arranged

ed by Anna Marie White, Dixon County Extension Agent, as part of the Dixon County Home Economics Extension program.

Women attending the workshop included Ronnie Gotch, Sandy Pettit, Mrs. Randall Ellis, Rose Gotch, Marilyn Malcom, Jackie Williams, Mrs. Donna Schroeder and Mrs. Jim Stapleton, all of Allen; Mrs. Harlan Mueller and Mrs. Ardyce Habrock of Emerson; Leanne Carstensen, Donna Ebrmeler, Judy Kvols, Mrs. James Linn, Dorothy Mohr, Mrs. Gary Schmitt, Kathleen Schroeder, Kris Schroeder and Connie Schutte, all of Laurel; Susan Van Minden of Ponca; Sherry Bradley and Janet Gron of Rándolph; Sharon Gustafson and Susan Sandahl of Wakefield; and Barbara DeWald, Patricia Dolata, Luisamella Pino, Karen Luschen, Lisa Papenhausen, Phyllis Rahn, Mrs. Harvey Reeg, Donna Shufelt, Lanora Sorenson and Jla Jean Swinney, all of Wayne.

Methodist women plan Christmas Fair

United Methodist Women met in the fellowship hall for a 12:30 p.m. luncheon on Nov. 11.

Jociell Bull had the pledge service, entitled "Two Copper Coins." She was assisted by Marilyn Anderson, Rachel Wolke, Donna Liska, Jan Kohl, Vida Sutherland and Niki Tiedtke.

Women were invited to be guests of United Presbyterian Women during their meeting Dec. 2 at 2 p.m. Those planning to attend are asked to contact the church office by Nov. 21.

The Rev. John Westerholm of Concord officiated at the double ring rites.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Bloom of Dixon, and the bridegroom is the son of Edwin Gadeken of Laurel.

DECORATIONS for the 7 o'clock ceremony included spiral candelabras and hurricane pew candles adorned with bows and flowers in the bride's chosen colors, burgundy, dusty rose and soft white.

Wedding music included "Wedding Song," "He Has Chosen Me for You," and "The Lord's Prayer," sung by Susan Erwin of Concord and Steve Linn of Laurel.

Organist was Steve Linn, and pianist was Lori Koester of Allen.

GIVEN in marriage by her father, the bride chose a white, floor-length gown of polyorganza fashioned with a jewel neckline and basque bodice enhanced with a Chantilly lace ruffle. The Gibson Girl sleeves and cuffs were of chantilly lace.

The semi A-line skirt was edged with a double flounce caught at the back waist with a bridal satin bow. The attached chapel train also carried a double flounce.

Her bridal illusion fingertip veil was edged in re-embroidered Chantilly lace and caught to a Juliet headpiece of handclipped lace and seed pearls. She carried a cascade of one dozen burgundy silk roses accented with Stephanotis, miniature carnations and pink baby's breath.

Their floor-length, polyorganic dresses were in daphne rose dramatized with draped bodices and encrusted sleeves with dyed-to-match Venice lace.

They wore flowers and streamers in their hair and carried white lace fans entwined with burgundy, dusty rose and soft pink roses and streamers.

FLOWER GIRL was Heidi Parsley of Sioux City, and candlelighters were Brian and Tim Bloom of Dixon, the bride's brothers.

Phillip Bloom of Dixon, also a brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

REGG GADEKEN of Coleridge, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man.

Groomsmen were Dan Stelling of Plainview, Garth Paulson of Laurel, and Randy Bloom of Dixon, brother of the bride.

Ushers were Brian and Tim Bloom of Dixon, Mike Arant of Arkansas, Russ Gade of Laurel and Doug Thompson of Laurel.

The bridegroom was attired in a white tuxedo and wore a burgundy rose boutonniere. His attendants wore burgundy tuxedos and white ruffled shirts edged in burgundy.

The mother of the bride selected a long primrose dress designed with a crystal pleated skirt and long, full English tulle sleeves. Her dress was enhanced with a cape like ruffle that encircled the bodice.

A RECEPTION for 300 guests was held at the Concord auditorium following the ceremony. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Gadeken of Greeley, Colo., and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Van Cleave of Laurel.

IMPROVEMENTS MADE
 Many of the windows at Graves Public Library have recently been repaired, according to Mrs. Lee Brudigam, librarian. She said that all basement windows and the stained glass windows on the upstairs are now sealed with Lexan, a tough type of plastic. This material will prevent any breakage caused by a hailstorm, wind, etc.

The plastic will also help to retain heat in the building during the winter months and cool air during the summer. Combustion windows were installed on four upstairs windows to allow a flow of air into the building when air conditioning is not needed. Mrs. Brudigam said having windows open prevents a musty odor from settling in the library.

The repair work was done by the Continental Art Glass Co. of Blaine, Minn., and was paid for from gifts and grants received by the library.

WOMANS CLUB
 "History" was the theme when the Carroll Womens Club met Friday at the Lutheran Church fellowship hall for their annual Thanksgiving cooperative dinner. As a feature for the day, members arrived in colonial costumes.

Mrs. Edward Fork accompanied for the group, who sang, "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow," preceding the dinner.

Mrs. Robert Johnson, Mrs. Martin Hansen and Mrs. Edward Fork were on the planning committee for the dinner.

Mrs. John Swanson conducted the business meeting, Mrs. Arnold Junck reported on the last meeting and Mrs. Ervin Wilfong read the treasurer's report.

Roll call was "a favorite old time recipe."

The birthday song was sung for Mrs. Lem Jones, Mrs. Robert Johnson and Mrs. T.P. Roberts.

The table for special occasions, that Mrs. Merlin Kenny and Mrs. Robert Johnson prepared for the Wayne County Historical Table Fashions on parade, was judged as a winner and the club received $10, which was voted to be returned to the Historical Society as a donation.

A letter was received from the Good Will Industries in Sioux City and the club voted to send $16 for a Thanksgiving dinner for a family of four.

Mrs. Swanson announced that a tasting or appetizing party sponsored by the Wayne PEO will be held Dec. 2 at the home of Dr. Wayne Wessel at 620 Hillcrest Road from 4 to 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available at Grless Drug, Joanie Designs and the Cupboard.

Plans for the annual Christmas party and $1.50 grab bag gift exchange will be held at 2 p.m. on Dec. 10 at the Lutheran Church fellowship hall. Members are asked to bring cookies or fruit and a decorated two pound coffee can, so Christmas boxes can be packed for shut-ins and elderly of the Carroll community.

Mrs. Edward Fork will be in charge of purchasing a gift for a resident of the Wayne Care Centre.

Mrs. Milton Owens and Mrs. Robert J. Jones were in charge of the program and presented a "Pilgrim's" skit.

Roll call for the December meeting will be a favorite Christmas song.

In charge of the old fashioned Christmas program are Mrs. Arthur Cook, Mrs. Robert Johnson and Mrs. Edward Fork.

Hostesses are Mrs. Robert J. Jones, Mrs. Ruth Jones, Mrs. Lem Jones and Mrs. Ellery Pearson.

Physical fitness: Exercise guidelines important

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a three-part series designed to inform Wayne area residents about the benefits of physical fitness. This article, which explores the "wellness concept" and discusses exercise guidelines for fitness programs, is being published with research assistance from Wayne area physicians.

Across the country, physical fitness articles are appearing in newspapers and magazines. An increasing number of articles discuss the reasons and benefits of physical fitness. For instance, "Health" magazine recently described it as the "Wellness Revolution." And, "Time" magazine recently referred to it as the "Fitness Craze."

FURTHERMORE, groups and organizations promoting physical fitness — and related wellness concepts — are forming rapidly in the villages, towns and cities of America.

And, most bookstores now feature a section of books describing a variety of methods for achieving physical fitness. The books span all ages, interests and abilities.

It has been estimated that more than $30 billion is being spent annually in the United States on physical fitness.

IT HAS been established that physical fitness is different for different people.

And, since physical fitness is, essentially, the capacity to carry out the everyday activities of work and play without excessive fatigue and with enough energy to respond to emergencies, it follows that physical fitness must be a very individual sort of thing.

Basically, an individual should undertake an exercise program designed to improve cardiovascular fitness, increase muscular strength and endurance, improve flexibility and to keep body composition at an appropriate level.

These four basic components of physical fitness apply to most all individuals.

FLEXIBILITY, for instance, is vital to performing any activity. It is a combination of muscle and joint action to provide the full range of motion, including the movement of joints — bending and twisting.

In addition, good flexibility provides protection against muscle and joint injury. And, it greatly reduces muscle soreness.

Muscular endurance is the capacity of the muscle to exert force repeatedly over a period of time, or to hold a fixed position for a period of time.

It is the ability to use strength and sustain that use for the period of time necessary to accomplish a desired task.

STRENGTH is the actual capacity of a muscle to exert maximum force against a resistance.

Generally increasing muscle strength is also a safeguard against injury and disability. Cardiovascular capacity is the most important component of physical fitness.

It is the ability of the body to deliver nutrients and oxygen to the tissues and remove the waste products.

This is accomplished, for the most part, by the heart, blood vessels, blood and lungs.

Some general concepts to consider in developing a fitness program, regardless of the actual activity or the individual involved, follow.

OVERLOAD — This means that the body must do more work than normal during the given exercise if there is to be actual physical benefit.

In other words, the exercise should involve more total work than normal, which can be accomplished by doing it longer or faster than usual.

2. Progression — To improve physical conditioning, the body needs to be continually exposed to new overloads.

Generally, a body will adapt to overloads and more difficult routines.

3. Use and disuse — To use the body generally promotes increased functioning. And, disuse allows deterioration.

It is astonishing how rapidly physically fit individuals lose muscle strength and endurance when temporarily overcome by acute or disabling conditions.

4. SPECIFICITY — This means that the body responds specifically to the kinds of demands made on it.

Strength is developed mainly from resistance exercises.

Cardiorespiratory endurance is developed mainly through aerobic activities. Flexibility and range of motion are developed through stretching exercises.

5. Individual differences — People respond to physical fitness activity in their own unique way. There are many ways to achieve greater strength, flexibility and cardiovascular endurance.

Age, body type, degree of obesity, as well as motivation, inherited characteristics, some types of disabling injuries and illnesses are factors to consider when developing a physical fitness plan.

They may alter an individual plan significantly.

SOME GENERAL guidelines should be followed in any exercise routine.

The routine can be broken down into four general phases. They include:

1. The stretching and warm-up phase — This should be a minimum of 5 to 10 minutes of activity to prepare the various muscles being used for additional, more strenuous activity.

In addition, in this phase there is an actual warming of the muscles that preconditions the body for further work.

In order to prevent sprains and strains and other serious injuries to muscles and ligaments, this phase should always precede any physical fitness activity.

2. MUSCULAR strength and endurance phase — This phase should be a minimum of 5 to 10 minutes for each of the muscle groups involved.

3. Aerobic phase — The activity must be aerobic and the heart rate elevated to at least 60 percent of the age adjusted rate. But, it should not exceed 80 percent of the age adjusted rate.

The exercise should be sustained for at least 20 to 30 minutes.

4. Cool down phase — There should be a gradual recovery from vigorous physical activity.

This recovery period should include both stretching activity to enhance flexibility and walking to prevent pooling of blood.

IT IS important for an individual starting an exercise program to receive guidance.

Most people can undertake a moderate exercise program without risk, but caution is advised before the individual begins a more vigorous exercise program.

For individuals over 40 years old, it is advisable to have a general medical examination before starting an exercise plan.

The exam may be necessary for those under 40 if there is a history of serious chronic disease, such as diabetes, high blood pressure or heart disease.

GROUP EXERCISE programs, while not necessary to achieve fitness, help sustain and motivate many people.

They can be a positive force to keep people exercising on a regular basis.

In beginning any new exercise plan, or resuming one after a long break, the individual is encouraged to get off to a slow start that builds through a gradual increase within personal limits.

For instance, adults are advised to begin an easy walking program before any jogging, or running, activity.

Walkers have fewer injuries than runners or joggers, anyway.

INDIVIDUALS should strive to exercise at least 20 to 30 minutes daily, though 40 to 60 minutes per day is highly desirable.

Warm-up and cool-down activities should be added onto the actual exercise time. Furthermore, a general increase in activity during the normal course of a day can be very beneficial, too.

Examples could include the use of stairs instead of the elevator, or parking farther from work, walking to work, and lunch-hour walks.

Also, control of diet is important, particularly for those individuals who are overweight. Consumption of fats, sugars and calories should be limited.

Smokers, particularly those who smoke cigarettes, should quit.

THERE ARE many other lifestyle changes that can add to an individual's general level of wellness.

Wayne area physicians, for instance, feel that it is very appropriate for a community hospital to be involved as much with wellness — the prevention of illness — as it is involved with treating diseases and injuries.

The staff at Providence Medical Center in Wayne is committed to enlightening and informing area residents about the benefits of high-level wellness.

Plans are underway to involve the Wayne hospital in this area of preventative medicine.

More Valley Corner Systems every year, because it's the least costly investment per acre.

It's going to be harder to make farming pay off in the years to come. Harder for many reasons. So if anything makes sense, it's to maximize the potential of the land you now farm. Irrigating with a center pivot is one way. Irrigating with a Corner System is even better. A Corner System can irrigate 19 to 45 more acres than a regular pivot, producing extra income on acres already being farmed. That's why nearly one out of every six pivots sold today is a Corner System. And when it comes to Corner Systems, nobody knows more than Valmont. They're proven reliable with nearly 3,000 systems in operation. That's at least 20 times more than any other brand. Before you buy any center pivot, see us. We'll tell you how a Valley Corner System can add to your bottom line profits while being the least costly investment per acre.

Valley dominates the field.

Constraint will be Nebraska's 1982 budget byword

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

The special budget-cutting session of the Nebraska Legislature is over now, but that doesn't necessarily mean smooth sailing for the state.

Gov. Charles Thone got just about everything he wanted from lawmakers during the extraordinary legislative session. He suggested a $25 million budget reduction package and got a $24 million bill.

Lawmakers, before approving Thone's cut, added back $600,000 for alcoholism treatment programs and $400,000 for cancer research. Thone said OK to that extra $1 million and signed the bill tightening legislation, which won 40-5 final approval.

BUT THONE warned that constraint will be the byword in spending matters next year. The state's economy, he said, faces uncertain times. He promised to present the 1982 Legislature with a budget that will be "tighter and leaner than any so far."

When times get tough, Thone says, everyone has to tighten his belt—everyone in Thone's mind includes the state of Nebraska.

Some interesting aspects of belt tightening were raised by the recent special session. It didn't seem too tough for lawmakers to find $24 million to cut from the state budget. So why did we need the $24 million in the first place? Could we have cut, say, $50 million from state obligations? $100 million?

It's true a number of agencies affected by the Legislature's action (at Thone's request) have publicly expressed their belief that the reduced appropriations will hurt. But surely a number of agencies can get by with relative ease without the money.

THE $24 MILLION budget reduction bill also raises some questions about the appropriations/budget-setting process. In theory, lawmakers decide what services are needed and appropriate accordingly. They'll tighten the purse string a little more if expected revenue is short.

But in actuality many officials, agency heads and even lawmakers take a somewhat different approach to budget setting. Instead of first figuring out what it will cost to provide the necessary services, lawmakers find out how much money is expected to be available and appropriate all of it.

Although the budget setting process isn't quite that simple, in many cases that's what it amounts to when it's boiled down to its simplest form. It would be interesting to see what would happen if lawmakers actually did figure out the cost of state government first, instead of the reverse.

If $24 million in cuts were possible this fall, why did we need that money budgeted in the first place? Is state government or any of its functions going to collapse without the extra money? Probably not.

THAT'S NOT to say the money wouldn't have been well spent. It's doubtful it would have been wasted. But if we're really interested in belt tightening, maybe that $24 million — and perhaps another $24 million like it — shouldn't have been appropriated in the first place.

Regardless of whether people view Thone and the lawmakers as heroes or villains for their budget cutting, the relative ease with which the money was cut should be a message to taxpayers.

Some tax money apparently is being appropriated that doesn't absolutely have to be. It's time to account for every tax dollar that pours into the state's coffers.

TIE-BREAKING VOTE — Did the lieutenant governor legally break a tie in the Legislature on the controversial multibank holding company bill?

That question has been posed to the Nebraska Supreme Court in one of the most interesting cases to reach the justices this year.

The vote was deadlocked 24-24, and Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers abstained instead of breaking the tie. Lt. Gov. Roland Luedtke was presiding, and he exercised what he thought was his authority in casting the tie-breaking vote. His "aye" left supporters with the belief LB376 had passed.

But Thone, acting on the attorney general's advice, disagreed and returned the bill to the Legislature unsigned. This time, opponents thought they were victors.

BUT LUEDTKE got in the final blow when Thone was out of the state. Serving as acting governor, Luedtke signed the measure and sent it over to the secretary of state. That office waited until the last minute to certify the measure as passed.

That prompted a court challenge, filed by two financial institutions that wanted to take advantage of the new law. The banks' attorney contends the Constitution authorizes the lieutenant governor to exercise his responsibility to break ties in such cases.

But the state contends Luedtke couldn't legally vote to pass the bill because he isn't an "elected member" of the Legislature. At issue, the state said, is not who may vote, but how many votes from "elected" members are required. In this case, as with all bills, 25 votes are necessary, the state said.

The issue now is in the hands of the Supreme Court, which will write the law of this land when its ruling is handed down later, perhaps as late as next year.

The good life

Nebraska — the good life. You've seen and heard those words before. They appear on countless Cornhusker State souvenirs. And, chances are that you've read them on the rock guards of the vehicles you've followed across the state's highway system.

Well, those words have apparently been taken to heart by thousands upon thousands of rural Nebraskans.

According to a recent Department of Economic Development report, rural Nebraska experienced a population trend turnaround during the 1970s.

In short, that means Nebraska's rural population is increasing, rather than declining. In fact, the report indicates that the number of counties showing an increase in population during the decade of the '70s nearly doubled over the number recorded for the 1960s.

Some 42 counties gained population during the last decade, compared to only 22 in the 1960s. For many counties, populations grew for the first time in four decades, the report says.

The report is encouraging. Somewhere along the line Nebraska has been able to slow down reverse — what is called "out migration."

A common problem among the upper Midwestern states, out migration has often skinned the population.

Unable to offer sufficient employment challenges, states like Nebraska have often watched as those youngsters with the best educations left to seek careers elsewhere.

The drain on this state has been significant over the years as home state talent migrated to other states, joined the workforce there and contributed significantly to a non-Nebraska economy.

Now, research is showing that a significant number of Nebraskans are here to stay.

That means the home state economy will benefit from the home-grown talent. That means home state communities will benefit from home-grown taxpaying.

The Midwestern states have been exporters of home-grown and skilled, and talented for decades.

Now, the market for that talent is developing in Nebraska.

As youngsters, educated in the state's top-notch school systems, take their place in rural communities and the workforce at home, the heart of Nebraska beats stronger.

That indicates Nebraska is, indeed, offering the good life.

With Nebraskans building a better Nebraska, the good life is likely to get even better.

Basically wasteful

"Cap the Knife," Weinberger, where are you?

The U.S. Air Force maintains two bases in Greenland at an annual cost of at least $65 million. These facilities exist for a clear purpose. To refuel American military planes crossing the Atlantic. What current need do they serve now that those refueling stops are no longer necessary?

The Air Force claims that Søndestrom Air Base, for a cost of $20 million a year, stands ready to detect potential enemy aircraft. Thule Air Base spends $45 million annually to detect ballistic missiles. Yet, in an age of satellite detection and with early warning systems blanketing Canada and Western Europe, the new rationale for these bases is less than convincing.

I don't imagine too many of the 306 military personnel stationed in Greenland would be heartbroken at the closing of one or both of these facilities. And Greenland has no Congressmen or Senators to howl in protest, as is invariably the case when closings of unnecessary bases are attempted in the United States.

Most Americans want our defense capability increased, but we have no patience for the waste of our tax dollars by the Pentagon than we do by any other department or agency of government.

The sacred cows

Sen. William Proxmire earned a reputation as one of the most vocal opponents of government's wasteful spending habits. Each month he presents a "Golden Fleece" award to the federal program or agency that is responsible for the most flagrant abuse of the taxpayers' dollars.

But even Sen. Proxmire has his sacred cows to protect at our expense. In fact, this Senator's sacred cows are just that — cows!

The Reagan administration has been trying all year to convince Congress to reduce subsidies for dairy farmers, but when Congress failed to act by Oct. 1, a previously scheduled increase in dairy price supports took effect.

Administration backers in both the House and Senate tried to push through a measure to roll back the increase, but this effort was thwarted single-handedly in the Senate by Sen. Proxmire.

His delaying tactics succeeded for 13 days, at a cost to the taxpayers of some $400,000 per day. As such, no one would accuse Sen. Proxmire of being self-serving if he were to serve himself this month's "Golden Fleece" award!

Legislative committees preview 1982

Hearings shaping session

The 87th Legislature, First Special Session, came to an end at approximately 10 a.m. Nov. 7.

After seven busy and sometimes very long days, the Legislature enacted Legislative Bills 7 and 8 and Gov. Charles Thone signed them into law.

Thanks to the Legislature's action, the Board of Equalization and Assessment did not have to increase our tax rates when it met last week.

IT WON'T be long before the Legislature will be resuming its duties once more during the regular session beginning in January. In the meantime, I will be commuting between Allen and Lincoln periodically to attend legislative committee hearings.

Of the two committees of which I am a member, only the Miscellaneous Subjects Committee is scheduled to meet this month. It will meet Nov. 24 to consider Legislative Resolutions 162 and 154.

LR 162 is an examination of our existing retail alcohol beverage regulations and the statutes relating to retail liquor licenses

LR 154 is a study of the feasibility of moving the William Jennings Bryan statue from Fairview, his Lincoln home, to the State Capitol grounds. In addition to these resolutions, I am also quite interested in LR 119 which will be scheduled for public hearing soon.

It is a study of the operation and effects of Nebraska's motor vehicle inspection program. If anyone wishes to express their views on this or any other issue, I encourage you to either attend these public hearings or let me know by letter or telephone.

I will be at home at Box 127, Allen, Nebraska, 68710, for most of the interim period between now and January. Please feel free to write or call at any time about these or any other matters of concern to you.

Low taxes to aid state recovery

The Nebraska economy currently isn't healthy, but it isn't as sick as the nation's. Our low taxes will aid our state in avoiding the worst of the recession and in recuperating sooner.

Nebraska's sales tax rate of 3 percent hasn't changed since January 1, 1918. When I became governor, the state personal income tax rate was 18 percent of the federal liability. For 1980 and 1981 that has been reduced to 15 percent, and taxes on business have been reduced proportionately, thus leaving $100 million with individuals and firms that would have been taken in state taxes by the higher rates.

THE ACTION of the legislature in special session to cut current year state spending largely as I requested will mean that the same rates can be carried over into 1982. I join Nebraska taxpayers in thanking the majority of the unicameral for this vote.

The economy in our state badly needs the stimulus of low state taxes. Nebraska's well being depends heavily upon agriculture, and current prices of both grain and livestock are below production cost for most farm and ranch operators.

Bad farm prices combined with high interest rates are causing disaster in farm investment and car and truck business.

In such a situation, I couldn't agree at all with those who suggested that we raise taxes rather than cut spending.

AFTER THE CUTS, the state is still able to provide all necessary services and to continue making progress in many areas.

As for the future of the economy, there are many encouraging signs. The interest rates have begun to drop. Farm prices are just going to have to increase. The beneficial effects of the federal tax cuts are sure to be felt by mid-1982 if not sooner.

When economic resurgence comes, our state government will be in sound fiscal condition and will not be a millstone around the neck of the Nebraska economy.

To the editor:

We are trying to locate members of the old 315th Troop Carrier Group from World War II days and after a 35 year wait it is a very difficult task. With the generous assistance of newspaper editors and writers, and with the help of their good readers, we have been able to locate over 450 of our former members during the past four years.

As we continue to find old orders, that are from 35 to 38 years old, we hope to be able to locate another thousand to fifteen hundred men who served in Africa, Europe and south America during World War II with the old 315th. I hope that you will be able to help us by printing this letter as space allows.

I am trying to locate Alvin Tietgen who was a member of the 315th Troop Carrier Group during World War II and entered the U.S. Army Air Corps from Wayne. It is my hope that some of his relatives or old friends will see this and be able to pass along his current address.

If any former members of the old 34th, 43rd, 309th or 310th Squadrons should see this — please drop me a line. Your name will be added to the current roster and you will receive the latest news letter, roster, and folder on past reunions.

We are already looking forward to, and planning for, our fourth reunion which will be held in Chicago during October of 1982. Please send any information or addresses to: Robert L. Cloer, 1417 Valley View Drive, Yuba City, Calif. 95991.

My sincere appreciation for any assistance you can give us with the above letter.

Thank you, Wayne Herald, for the lovely picture of our little Miss Buddy Poppy and coverage of the event.

Also to Gerald's Decorating for the use of their window for the display. Clete Sharer for the banners, Eveline and Harold Thompson for decorating the window.

To the girls who went out and sold the posters and poppies and the gals that took care of things in the Vets Club.

To our little Miss Buddy Poppy, Tammy Griesch, who helped distribute poppies to the residents of Wayne Care Center and to Mrs. Stoltenberg for taking us around.

This was a most gratifying experience. So many of these ladies were at one time active members and loyal workers in veteran's organizations. How proud they were to wear their little Buddy Poppy.

Thanks to the merchants and everyone who contributed.

Again, the posters are on display in our Veterans Club.

And the money will be used for the aid, assistance, relief and comfort of needy or disabled veterans or members of the armed forces and their dependents and the widows and orphans of deceased veterans.

To the editor:

Last weekend I was in Nebraska to visit in my home and with my brother, Lefty Olson. Mother had sent me the article, LeVon Beckman, wrote about him and I must compliment you on the comprehensive job that she did. It certainly is the best I've seen about Lefty and I, for one, appreciate her doing it.

There are some others who have also benefited from her efforts — beyond thanking and complimenting her, I feel that she should also know that there is a quadraplegic boy in Allen, who, after reading about Lefty, has gotten into photography and now plans to attend college.

Also in Wayne, Deanna Malcolm, who, as you may know, has Multiple Sclerosis was encouraged. I visited with her briefly while she was home and, though her hopes for becoming more mobile were dashed, I believe she was encouraged by my brother's successes, and can now look for new ways to broaden her horizons.

So — thanks for myself — the article will be plastic coated for my file — and thanks for others who read it and saw life in a new perspective.

Firepower from the farm

LOOKING LIKE anti-aircraft guns, these three grain augers search the northern sky from a defensive position near the Westside Grain and Feed elevator in the southwestern section of Wayne. Despite the military-like display of firepower, closer inspection found no foxholes nor soldiers to man the augers. Perhaps the soldiers were camouflaged while waiting for the first attack from Old Man Winter.

Changes in pest control

The need for a systematic approach to crop production and crop protection is becoming increasingly critical as world population expands and demand for food and fiber increases, a University of Nebraska entomologist contends

South Sioux City recently "THE PRESENT prophylactic approaches to crop protection have often proved to be short-lived and, in some instances, have led to unwanted side effects," Andersen said. The IPM approach offers the greatest promise for effective, safe and continuing solutions to many pest problems in crop and livestock production, he said

Dr. Lloyd Andersen, NU extension entomologist, addressed the subject of integrated pest management in a panel presentation at the sixth annual Midwestern Conference on Food, Agriculture and Public Policy in of several methods of pest reduction, including chemical controls, crop rotations, planting resistant varieties, varying hybrid maturity, use of biological controls and other methods, he said.

"The basic objective of IPM is to hold crop and livestock pests at 'safe' levels, that is below economically damaging level," Andersen said.

"THOSE OF us involved in IPM do not feel that we can eliminate pesticides altogether as some have unrealistically suggested, but what we do emphasize is the practical and effective use of these products.

Use of field scouts is the foundation of IPM, Andersen said. Pest levels in the field are compared with economic thresholds to determine whether treatment is necessary.

The Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service has provided a major programming thrust in Nebraska, Andersen said. As a result, corn acreage under IPM has increased from 4,800 acres in 1978 to 219,000 acres this year.

SAVING ENERGY

Heating and cooling your home accounts for about 70 percent of residential energy costs. You can eliminate much of the waste of heat by doing the following:

—Close off unoccupied rooms and shut their heating vents. However, if water lines run through the room, keep the room warm enough to prevent freezing. Use kitchen, bath and other fans sparingly, in one hour these fans can blow away a household of warmed air.

—Keep your fireplace damper closed, unless you have a fire going. An open damper in a 48 square-inch fireplace chimney can let up to 20 percent of the heat from your furnace escape.

—Lower your thermostat to 65 degrees F. during the day and 55 at night. You can save approximately two percent on fuel costs for every degree you reduce the average temperature.

—Have your furnace serviced at least once a year. This could save you 10 percent in fuel consumption. Be sure to also clean and/or replace the filter in the forced air system regularly as needed.

—Keep draperies and shades open in sunny windows; close them at night.

—For comfort in indoor temperatures use the best insulation of all warm clothing.

CARING FOR NEW FEEDER CALVES

Put calves on grain and protein supplement shortly after their arrival in new quarters. Higher levels of natural protein provided early seems to increase appetite, and calves eat better.

Give calves hay on the first day. Chopped hay works well. On the second day, place 1 1/2 pounds of grain on top so the calves have to work through it to get at the hay. On the third day, add an additional half-pound of grain and protein supplement, but mix it in well to give the complete meal. Use corn silage on the same basis as hay, after the first day.

Hay is reduced as the grain supplement is increased about a half-pound per day. This will add up to about four or five pounds after a week, with one pound being protein supplement.

The protein supplement and started at a low level on the second or third day. Do not use urea in this early starting ration.

Be sure and have plenty of clean water available, and it wouldn't hurt to let the water tank overflow a bit to let the calves know where it is.

MORTON'S SOLAR SALT

Here are a few specs on the Solar Salt. Morton Salt Company produces it. It ranges from 99.2 to 99.8% per salt usually at the 99.57% level. It is harvested from the Great Salt Lake in Utah and the sun is used to evaporate most of the water from the salt, hence the name "Solar Salt." It is a hard salt crystal ideal for use in automatic water softeners with the brine tank along side the softner. Due to its hardness it does not tend to cake and bridge as much as some of the other salts. Due to its purity, there is virtually no dirt introduced into your softening system.

Taking in the traffic

DON'T FENCE me in. That's what seems to be on the minds of these three Herefords as they surveyed county road traffic northwest of Wayne last week. The trio was part of a Wayne County herd enjoying the final tidbits of fall grass and stubble before winter's white blanket covers the vegetation until spring's thaw. Of course, from their standpoint, it might seem strange that human beings put fences around their highways so motorists can't get away.

USDA commodity reports now available to farmers

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agricultural Service commodity reports are now available directly to farmers via the AGNET computer network according to a University of Nebraska AGNET official.

Al Stark, AGNET supervisor, said USDA approached AGNET about putting its commodity reports on the computer network in order to speed their delivery to farmers.

"USDA has been concerned that all users do not have equal access to these reports. Farmers were irritated because the big grain companies could obtain the reports the day they were issued while farmers had to wait three to five days to see them in the media. Often the market had reacted to the reports by the time farmers learned what they said," Stark said.

JIM MURPHY, USDA program director for International Agricultural Statistics, said

USDA had been looking for a medium to get foreign statistical information to farmers more quickly. "That's the aim of our administration," and the secretary. Using AGNET to distribute the reports will also save money in printing costs as well," Murphy said.

USDA is committed to a 90 day trial to obtain data on use. Murphy said, but may extend the test period to six months.

FAS will enter commodity reports on the AGNET system on Wednesdays, at about midday Stark said. The total report is expected to average six pages a week and to cover five or six commodities, he said.

Farmers can access all the reports or only the specific reports they are interested in, he said. "Nebraska farmers aren't likely to be interested in the cotton report but will be very interested in the grains and feed report."

IN ADDITION to cotton and grain, report categories are horticulture and tropical products, oilseeds, tobacco, dairy, livestock and poultry, U.S. ag exports, satellite crop ant. world agricultural situation, and new publications.

"The thing I really like about these FAS reports is that they're capsule stories. They summarize results quickly," Stark said.

For example, the first week's grain report contained 97 lines. Printing out only that report on his terminal would cost a farmer about $1 plus the cost of the long distance phone call if AGNET were accessed during prime daytime hours.

The cost would be lower if the farmer were using AGNET for more than one report or program because it's necessary to log on only once, Stark said. Costs also would be lower if the farmer logged on after prime time hours.

U.S. Ag Department plans to speed up FHA appeal process

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is proposing to simplify and speed up the appeal process for loans turned down by the Farmers Home Administration.

"It would mean better, faster service for borrowers and would cut administrative costs," said FmHA Administrator Charles W. Shuman, "and we believe that if an applicant feels our decision has been in error, we owe the person a speedy review."

FmHA is a credit agency of the USDA and makes loans to farmers and other rural residents for farming, housing and community development.

People have until Jan. 4, 1982, to submit comments on the proposed changes.

Shuman said the proposal would reduce the number of steps involved in an appeal to no more than two in the field and one in the agency's national office in Washington. This, he said, would cut administrative costs and the time it takes to process appeals.

Some of the proposed changes are:

—Pre-hearing meetings may be waived.

—Files must be made available for inspection upon request by the appellant before being mailed to the hearing officer.

—Tape recordings of hearings are optional rather than mandatory.

—Further appeals can be made within 30 days instead of 20, to give the appellant adequate time.

Details are available in the Nov. 5 issue of the Federal Register. Comments should be sent to: Directive Management Branch, Rm 6346-S, Farmers Home Administration, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.
