Wayne State works to weather budget cuts

With the onset of winter at hand, Wayne State College is working to weather a budget freeze.

The state Legislature's recent budget cutting mandate, which targeted state agencies for a 3 percent rollback, lopped $153,000 off WSC's 1981-82 operating budget. And, the budget-cutting ax has fallen on a campus already committed to contracts with faculty members and private vendors at a pre special session funding level.

FURTHERMORE, most WSC departments have expended academic year start up funds, which often represent a significant portion of the budget beyond the money earmarked for payroll.

In an effort to weather the slashing storm, WSC President Lyle Seymour has ordered a college-wide budget-expenditure freeze.

"It's a double-whammy," Dr. Seymour told The Wayne Herald. "It (the rollback) has a compounding effect."

Seymour and Ed Elliott, college vice president, explained that the money must not only be pared from the current budget, but will form a base for budget projections linked to the next fiscal year.

"There's going to be an economic impact here and in downtown Wayne," Seymour added.

MEANWHILE, the college is in what Elliott called a "holding pattern" until input is gathered from every corner of the campus and analyzed for direction on the cuts.

The special session mandate rewrote the governor's budget bill, simply eliminating the funding, according to John Struve, WSC dean of finance.

"That means the money's not there," he added.

Struve and Elliott explained that all budget expenditures are getting individual attention.

"We're making decisions on an exceptional approval basis, rather than routine approval," Elliott said.

"It would have been easier to start out the year this way," he added.

COLLEGE representatives will face members of the State Colleges Board of Trustees budget subcommittee next month with a financial plan outlining proposed expenditure cuts for the remainder of the fiscal year.

Between now and then, the college administration has launched a dragnet operation to gather and review budget-cutting suggestions from each department and division on campus, according to Seymour.

"The budget has already been cut," he said. "We are involved in an extensive effort to find out how to run the college for the rest of the (fiscal) year with the budget money remaining."

The total college budget for fiscal year 1981-82, which began on July 1 and ends June 30, 1982, is $7,094,447.

HOWEVER, the general fund, which is rolled back by the governor's suggestion, Unicameral approved a 3 percent cut man date, is $5,100,223.

The 3 percent cut, which is in place, amounts to $153,007, according to Struve.

"We're trying to do the least damage with that cut," Seymour said. "But, the smaller budget sets the continuation base for fiscal 1982-83," he added.

"We'll be operating from a reduced base. Next year is even more serious than this one," he said.

The chairman of the State College Board's budget subcommittee, J. Alan Cramer of Wayne, has suggested the four state colleges involved in the cut — Wayne, Kearney, Peru and Chadron — look at trimming staff salaries.

"We'll have to look at them," Seymour said, explaining that they represent contractual commitments amounting to over 70 percent of the college budget.

Seymour said that among his concerns over any move to cut salaries was the potential for litigation.

"We are free to take the money out

Legal Aid staff to stay with program

Six of the seven Legal Aid Society staff members will continue working with the federally funded poverty law program after doors close on the group's city offices Dec. 1.

Following a board of directors-approved plan to consolidate northeast Nebraska operations under a central office based in Norfolk, the staff members plan to work in a Legal Aid Society outpost network.

According to Michael Krochmalny, the society's Agency on Aging contract attorney, he and two other attorneys will remain in the city to work with Legal Aid clients in an area east of Wayne.

"WE'RE NOT going to lay off anybody," explained Krochmalny, who works with senior citizens throughout northeast Nebraska.

Krochmalny said the outpost system will allow Legal Aid staffers to remain in the Wayne area to serve northeast Nebraska clients, despite the closing of the poverty law group's Wayne offices.

"We could have used the circuit rider approach," explained Krochmalny. "But we decided to keep our staffers in outpost locations with support from the Norfolk office."

In addition to closing of the Wayne office, the society is expected to close the Columbus office early in 1982 as part of the reorganizational plan.

LEGAL AID attorneys Frank Daley and Mary Buford also are expected to remain in the city with responsibility for clients in northeast Nebraska counties east of Wayne.

Buford, for instance, will be responsible for the Legal Aid Society program in Dakota County, according to Krochmalny.

Another Legal Aid Society staffer, Kathy Swanson of Rosalie will be working out of Waitstill for Thurston County once the Dec. 1 transition occurs, Krochmalny explained.

Connie Clark, who has been with the Wayne staff, will transfer to the central Norfolk office, where she will be working as a librarian and clerical paralegal.

LINDA RHODES, a paralegal secretary with the Wayne staff, will have the same fulltime position in the Norfolk office.

And, Rozan Pedersen, a secretary-receptionist for the Wayne poverty-law office, has declined a transfer to Norfolk.

"We are not going to lose any attorneys," Krochmalny explained. "We may have cut-backs in clerical staff."

He said the new outpost system will allow

State Highway 15 north opens - officially

State Highway 15 north is open, officially. And, area motorists who have been weaving around road-closed barriers since March can now maneuver the roadway from Wayne to Laurel without dodging those obstacles.

State Department of Roads officials joined city businessmen, road contractors and the mayors of Wayne, Dixon and Concord for a ribbon-cutting ceremony Friday morning.

SOON AFTER the ceremony, workmen from Nider-Jergensen Construction Co. of Omaha removed the final road-closed sign at the north edge of the city limits, where Main Street ends and the highway begins again.

The highway enters the city from the south, merging with Main Street for the entire north-south length of the city.

Highway 15 drops south of Wayne through

Pilger, Schuyler, Seward and on into Kansas.

However, about 10.2 miles of the north route, which has been closed between Wayne, Laurel, Dixon and Concord since March 5, has been under construction throughout the summer.

THE CLOSING cut off a major artery for motorists from the two Dixon County towns of Dixon and Concord and the Cedar County town of Laurel.

While the official Department of Roads detour sent motorists around the $2.3 million construction project by way of Carroll, hundreds of drivers used Wayne County gravel roads for alternate routes.

"2.3 million is a lot of dollars to spend to have you guys back, but we're glad you're back," Mayor Wayne Marsh told his Dixon and Concord colleagues during the ceremony.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony, which was held at the Wildcat Room, Rice Auditorium, Wayne State College, has been postponed a week because fall rains delayed the completion of construction.

"THE PEOPLE of the north are very happy the road is completed," said Mayor John Young of Dixon.

"I came down that way this morning and the traffic wasn't very heavy, but I'm sure that it will increase," he added.

Mayor Gerald Martindale of Concord said: "I'm sure glad that the road is open...and I wonder now who is going to pay for my new set of tires."

His remarks brought laughter from more than 50 people attending the ribbon-cutting ceremony, which was sponsored by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

"We have a special day today," said Pat Gross, chamber president. "We're officially opening the new highway to welcome our friends to the north back to our community."

DON COOK, district construction engineer with the Department of Roads, said some work remained on the project.

He said the work, mainly guard rails and seeding, would be completed this coming spring. He estimated that part of the contract would be about $100,000.

The road, which was first surfaced in 1976, is only the third highway in the state to feature a recycled asphalt surface, according to Cook.

He said the process save taxpayers about $250,000.

Cook, who thanked the contractors for their work and area residents for their patience and cooperation, said total project cost was $2,243,000.

THREE MAJOR contractors worked on the project.

Nider-Jergensen of Omaha had the $1.1 million grading contract. And, Midwest Bridge of Norfolk had the $296,000 culvert and drainage contract.

An Iowa firm did the bridge on a $160,000 contract.

"The highway was built using the most modern design and construction techniques available," Cook said.

Jack Jergensen, representing his own Omaha construction firm, said the "weather held off" to keep the project close to schedule.

Earl Echtenkamp of Wayne, the highway project manager, also attended the ceremony, which featured three bands, gold scissors and a bright red ribbon.

Cook said the 5 miles beyond the Concord-Laurel spur is scheduled for widening in the near future.

police report

Wayne motorists did some slipping and sliding on icy streets Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Winter's first serious blast kept Wayne police and a number of snowless motorists busy for the three day ice and snow storm.

AT 4:40 A.M. Friday police investigated a collision between a car driven by David S. Doexcher, Wayne, and a parked auto. The parked auto, a 1976 Plymouth owned by the Franzen, Wayne, was struck in the rear by the Doexcher auto, a 1974 Chevrolet, according to police. The Doexcher auto was southbound in the parking lot at Bill's G.W. when the driver attempted to make a left hand turn onto the street. Police accident records show the car skidded on the icy road surface, sliding across the street and into the rear end of the Franzen car, which was in the Villa Wayne parking lot.

ON THURSDAY, two cars traveling east on Seventh Street east collided near the Dearborn Street intersection.

Police reports indicate a 1975 Ford driven by Tim Corbit struck the rear end of a car driven by Kristy Peterson, Wayne, at 5:35 p.m.

The Peterson car, a 1974 Mercury, was stopped in the traffic lane, waiting to make a left hand turn onto Dearborn Street, police said. A neighborhood resident complained that vehicle was driving over lawns.

ON FRIDAY, police arrested a male subject and issued a summons for a court appearance stemming from a property damage incident in the city park near the swimming pool. Police also investigated a report of reckless driving in the

'It's a peaceful town; like a Sunday afternoon'

A pictorial experience

Mural more than art

By LaVon Beckman

For the three students at Wayne-Carroll High School, the mural they worked on for the past seven weeks at Wayne Care Centre is an experience — in working together and in relating to older people.

For residents of the care centre, it's a pictorial trip back in time — when families rode in a wagon down a dirt main street, past the grain elevator and post office, to the small church on the edge of town.

THE MURAL is a class project of Richard Roland, Lori Bahns and Pam Ruwe, all juniors at Wayne High and all members of Ted Blenderman's advanced art class.

The three began work together on the mural about seven weeks ago and hope to have it completed for grading by Blenderman today (Monday).

Located on a large hall wall in the basement of the care centre, the mural is 4-feet high and 20 feet long and depicts a small town in the early 1900's.

"ORIGINALLY," says Richard, "we were going to paint a farm scene next to the town, but we gave up the idea when we realized how much time and work was involved in the project."

All three co-designed the mural, which includes a white frame church, hotel, post office, grain elevator and water wheel.

"We tried to keep the town looking as peaceful as the times," says Pam.

"We toned it down," adds Richard. "It's like a small town on a Sunday afternoon."

ALL THREE artists are most proud of the church, a white steepled structure with gothic stained glass windows.

"When we started painting the mural," says Pam, "we began with the country church, painting the buildings and scenes around it."

"The church is the best," says Lori. "We spent the most time on it."

Richard says he's also partial to the water wheel, which was drawn from a picture found by Dorothy

Gross, assistant activities director at the Care Centre. "It reminds me of the country in the middle of summer," says Richard. "Nice and cool."

ALTHOUGH ALL three admit the mural is a lot more work than first anticipated, they also agree it is good art experience — as well as people experience.

"We've learned a lot about relating to people," says Lori, "especially older people."

"They're interesting," smiles Pam, "and each one is different."

"And they really seem to like the mural," adds Richard.

BLENDERMAN, art instructor the past 12 years at Wayne's middle school and high school, said the mural is more than just a class project. "It has helped the kids learn to work together, and its entertaining for residents of the nursing home."

"Frankly, I think that's more valuable than the actual painting."

policy on weddings

The Wayne Herald welcomes news accounts and photographs of weddings involving families living in the Wayne area. We feel there is widespread interest in local and area weddings and are happy to make space available for their publication. Because our readers are interested in current news, we ask that all weddings and photographs offered for publication be in our office within 10 days after the date of the ceremony. Information submitted with a picture after that deadline will not be carried as a story but will be used in a cutline underneath the picture. Wedding pictures submitted after the story appears in the paper must be in our office within three weeks after the ceremony.

Q. Other than estate planning, what are the benefits of determining my net worth?
 A. Although estate planning is certainly one of the paramount reasons for an individual net worth determination, there are other valuable benefits. An annual net worth calculation could well be the ultimate test of whether you are setting aside enough money for savings. Through your calculations, you should also be able to develop a very clear picture of whether you are successfully building the resources you'll need in the future. Also important, a net worth determination is a measure of whether you owe more than you should - of whether you are over-extended and, if so, by how much. And, finally, your calculations may uncover bits of information you aren't immediately aware of, like the cash value of pension benefits, IRAs, certificates of deposit, etc. Your financial officer will be more than happy to assist you in this invaluable determination.

anywhere," explained Elliott, noting that the revised budget plan probably would be presented to the board "within a few weeks" during a meeting in Omaha.

"The institution is salary-intense," Seymour said, noting that "cutting people's salaries is drastic."

Seymour said it was ironic that the suggestion for salary cuts came from the trustees "since the board's first consideration has always been for salaries."

THE COLLEGE president said that "philosophically, Cramer is right in his suggestion to look at salaries," Seymour added, however, that he had some problems with that approach.

"Anything that impacts programs, impacts students," he explained. "But, cutting staff impacts students, too."

Seymour, Elliott and Struve agreed that the timing of the cutback makes meeting the mandate more difficult.

"We're nearly halfway through the year," he said.

The trio explained that a significant portion of the budget was already expended by this time of the year.

ALL THREE agreed that the 3 percent rollback would represent a 20 percent cut in the remaining unexpended budget funds.

Most of the unexpended funds represent money earmarked for college support systems and operations, such as equipment, supplies, travel, telephone, postage, copying and printing.

"The 3 percent doesn't mean a whole lot until you take the salaries and other fixed costs out of the budget," Struve said. "Then the impact is tremendous."

Seymour said the budget cutting process at WSC would review personnel and non-personnel services as well as support services.

He said the college has ruled out specific program cuts. "We will not take any specific program and eliminate it," he explained, noting that the rollback would likely take the shape of an across-the-board cut.

ELLIOTT SAID the college is approaching the problem with a "horizontal method" of trimming funds.

"Everybody shares equally in the cut, rather than isolating certain segments of the program for a vertical cut," he said.

"There are both short-term and long-term ramifications to these cuts that are subject to discussion on campus right now," Elliott continued.

"We want to have input from all the groups involved," he added.

Struve said that though there were some restrictions on what could and could not be trimmed, the mandate did not target programs.

Instead, he said, responsibility for the cutting process has been left to college administrative personnel and the state board.

"ANYTIME SOMETHING like this happens, you have to reorder and reclassify priorities," Elliott said.

"It's kind of our problem," Seymour added.

Seymour said he has indicated to all administrators that all expenditures must get individual approval.

He said he also has urged a redoubled effort to conserve energy "to hold already reduced expenditures in that area."

"The orders of the day are that normal practices are suspended and we're on an emergency, item-by-item basis for expenditure approval," he said.

The freeze includes a ban on hiring and strict guidelines on personnel replacement.

ACTION TIME FOR WINDBREAKS

Fall is the time for much activity in existing or planned windbreaks. In young windbreaks which experienced weed competition, fall is a good time to clean them up. Once the dormant weed cover is removed, simazine can be applied to control next years weeds. Simazine is a pre-emergent herbicide, but needs good contact with the soil to be effective.

If you are planning to establish a windbreak in the spring, you should contact your local Soil Conservation Service office for assistance. Soil Conservation Service personnel will help you design the planting, recommend species, complete order forms, and arrange for planting by Natural Resources Districts crews if desired.

The Clarke-McNary program began accepting tree orders November 1, and have already sold out 3 species. Twenty-two species of conifers, hardwoods, and shrubs are still available, but some are in short supply. The seedlings sell for $23 per hundred delivered, and must be ordered in lots of 100 per species.

Fall is also the time for ground preparation in areas with heavy soils. Fall plowing the area gives better survival, by providing better planting conditions. Ground is less cloddy and packs around roots better.

Preparation and work done on your windbreaks now, will pay off next spring and for years to come.

FUTURE OF STREAMS IN QUESTION? PUBLIC COMMENT NEEDED

The Nebraska Natural Resources Commission is reviewing a report which deals with water in the streams of our state. The report lists alternatives on streamflow policies which could significantly change the ways this water is administered.

At issue is whether uses of water within a stream should be more clearly protected than they are now. Present state law offers protection for those using water diverted out of a stream for such purposes as irrigation, power production and manufacturing.

However, the law is fuzzy on the uses of water within the stream. Among them are livestock watering, fishing and wildlife habitat, recreation and groundwater recharge.

As a result, some believe streams which still have unappropriated water (natural flow remaining which is not included in some state appropriation permit) should be protected by guaranteeing the flow of that water for the aforementioned purposes. In other words, setting minimum streamflows.

The impact of this study and what finally goes before the Legislature in the form of new laws may very well change the present stream permit system, especially for those who might want to irrigate from a stream in the future.

People of northeast Nebraska can comment on the report at a public meeting, December 8, in Norfolk. A total of seven meetings will be held around the state, with the final one, a public hearing on December 16, in Lincoln. There is also a 90-day period for the Commission to receive written comments on the report. At the end of this comment period, the Commission will make recommendations to the legislature on instream water laws.

- Alternatives include:
- Restricting groundwater pumping near certain streams.
  - Issuing natural flow permits for instream uses. (fish, recreation, groundwater recharge)
  - Setting "protected flow levels" for certain stream reaches that have significant instream values and unappropriated water.
  - Storing surplus water from a stream and releasing it at times of low flow.

- Allow the sale, lease, or donation of appropriation permits by out-of-stream users to entities who would keep the water in the stream.
- Alternatives are also in the report which would prohibit some of the above actions.

STATE LAND JUDGING CONTEST RESULTS

Two northeast Nebraska FFA teams ranked high in the State Land Judging contest, held October 17 in York.

Scribner FFA team (Dave Dahl, Scott Muller, Roger Swac, Ruth Witte) placed second. Howells FFA team (Pat Steffensmeyer, Jody Lerch, Gerald Burenholde, Marty Dlouhy), which won the northeast Area Contest, placed third. Hampton FFA won the State Contest.

Individual placing in the top ten were: 5th — Ken Sunderman, Lyons FFA; 7th — Pat Steffensmeyer, Howells FFA; 8th — Scott Miller, Scribner FFA.
