Coach has 9 guardianships at Wayne Care Centre

Social Security records show discrepancies

Wayne County Court records show financial discrepancies in Social Security records on five legal guardianships involving residents at the Wayne Care Centre.

The five nursing home resident guardianships, all held by Wayne State College's head football coach, have been found in complete or unacceptable by Wayne County Court Judge James Duggan of Norfolk and the Social Security Administration in Norfolk.

Coach Del Stoltenberg, husband of recently resigned Wayne Care Centre administrator Dee Stoltenberg, has served as a legal guardian for several Wayne Care Centre residents since 1979.

THE COACH'S WIFE, who resigned suddenly Feb. 8 as administrator of the 92 bed nursing home at 918 Main Street north, is under investigation in connection with the financial affairs of the Wayne Care Centre, according to Wayne County Attorney Budd Bornhoff.

To date, no charges have been filed against the former administrator in that case.

However, in the five cases involving legal guardianships held by her husband, Judge Duggan — on behalf of the Social Security Administration in Norfolk — has ordered the WSC coach to produce complete financial records and to resolve the discrepancies.

The financial discrepancies found by the Social Security Administration and outlined by the court involve figures ranging from $130 to $700; court records show.

Coach Stoltenberg has failed to file any report on three of the five guardianships in question, according to the court.

QUESTIONS REGARDING Stoltenberg's legal guardianships have been before the court since late July, according to records at the Wayne County Courthouse.

Under Nebraska state statutes, a County Court has jurisdiction over legal guardianships. And, as part of the jurisdiction, routinely inspects the financial records of residents with court appointed guardians — as does the Social Security Administration. According to court records, the coach failed to file several guardianship reports in late July and, in August, was cited by the judge to comply.

In September, the judge ordered Stoltenberg to show cause why the financial records of several nursing home residents under his legal guardianship were not made available to the court, according to court records.

AFTER FILING an accounting that failed to comply with court directed procedures, Stoltenberg was ordered by Judge Duggan to file a second report, case records show.

In early December, the coach filed another financial report on the guardianships, according to court records. However, the Social Security Administration found the second reports incomplete and unacceptable.

And, according to court records, the coach had yet to file any report on three of the guardianships.

Social Security Administration questions directed to Stoltenberg by letter remain unanswered.

The questions not only deal with financial discrepancies involving hundreds of dollars, but also question the use of dual bank accounts in the two Stoltenberg guardianships held since 1980.

STOLTENBERG was given until Dec. 15 to answer the Social Security Administration's questions to the satisfaction of the agency and the court.

To date, no answer has been filed. Stoltenberg has been the court-appointed guardian for five nursing home residents since 1979, court records show.

He has served as the legal guardian for an additional four nursing home residents since 1980, according to court records.

Seven of the nine guardianships involve former Omaha residents now at the nursing home, according to court records.

STOLTENBERG'S wife joined the Wayne Care Centre staff about four years ago.

She was appointed administrator in 1978. Though her husband has nine guardianships at the nursing home, the former administrator does not serve as a court-appointed guardian for any of the Wayne Care Centre residents.

The Social Security Administration's Norfolk office field representative Bill Howes referred inquiries from The Wayne Herald to Dale Branch, a supervisor.

When asked if the agency was investigating the guardianship cases, Branch referred The Wayne Herald to Gary A. McRill, a supervisory legal assistant with the Field Integrity Staff of the Social Security regional office in Kansas City.

McRILL DECLINED to comment on any investigation, explaining that it was against agency and office policy to do so.

"We don't talk about an investigation," he said, explaining that it was his department's responsibility to "make sure Social Security money is being spent properly."

Commented at his home Friday night for contact on the cases, coach Stoltenberg said he "just went through an investigation."

When informed that there had been no confirmation of an investigation, Stoltenberg said: "I'm not going to say anything...I don't have anything...you can talk to Dave Domina."

Domina is a Norfolk attorney.

WHEN ASKED if Domina was his attorney, Stoltenberg said: "He is but not my attorney."

When asked if he had any further comment on the financial discrepancies regarding the five guardianships, Stoltenberg said: "I don't know what you are talking about...I don't know what kind of ex you have to grind."

Informed that the guardianship discrepancies were a matter of public record at the Wayne County Courthouse and that there was no confirmation of an investigation, Stoltenberg said:

"You are the one who mentioned investigation. Thank you and good night."

He then hung up the phone without further comment.

City Hall's walls new showplace for area artists

By Randall Howell

If government isn't exactly a science, perhaps it is closer to art in Wayne. It's a lot closer to the world of art with the advent of a project that designed to feature the work of local artists on the walls of City Hall.

Wayne's second floor City Hall walls have become a public gallery for the building's first art show.

IN A JOINT City Hall Wayne State College venture, a one woman art show is on display in the City Council chambers and on the walls of the second floor corridor to the city administrator's office.

Wayne artist Diane Dirks, 34, was tapped for the first City Hall display by WSC art instructor Pearl Hansen.

Hansen, who is coordinating the project, was contacted "about a month ago" by Wayne businessman Pat Gross.

"He called me and asked me to contact Phil (Kloster) regarding the possibility of putting the work of local artists on display at City Hall," Hansen said. Kloster is Wayne city administrator.

"INITIALLY, HE SAID it was an effort to get some work from college students and the community on the second floor of City Hall," Hansen continued.

"Hopefully, it is something that can continue," she added. "There may be a problem in the summer months when the students are away but maybe we can turn to the community for those months."

Hansen, who has taught art at the college for six years, accepted the challenge and asked Dirks if she would display her pastels.

Dirks agreed and last week she put 13 pastel paintings on display in the second floor City Hall gallery.

FOUR OF DIRKS' pastels are on the wood paneled wall of the City Council chambers.

Those four paintings, which feature interiors, are part of a "series of pastel drawings dealing with different aspects of light," explained Dirks, whose husband, Arthur, teaches design classes in theater at WSC.

Dirks, who moved to Wayne in 1975, has nine pastels featuring sea shells on display in the hallway between the City Council chambers and the city administrator's office.

The shell pastels also incorporate the "aspects of light" theme.

"I'm trying to evoke a state of mind, a mood, a feeling with the pastels," Dirks explained.

THE LANKY REDHEAD explained that she worked with light emanating from the shells in the hallway pastels.

Though Dirks used real interiors "for a springboard" on the other four pastels.

Natural gas hike decreased

Peoples Natural Gas Co. customers in Wayne can expect a rollback in natural gas rate increases this year.

The rate hike decrease is being passed along by the company because PNG has reached a significantly reduced contract settlement with its wholesale supplier, Northern Natural Gas Co., according to Keith Mosley, Wayne district manager for PNG.

"The decrease is a result of a settlement agreement reached by Northern and the Federal Regulatory Commission (FERC)," Mosley said.

THE SETTLEMENT reduces Northern's general rate increase, which was filed in April of 1981, from $174 million to $40 million.

The typical Wayne customer with an annual natural gas usage of 1,550 hundred cubic feet (Ccf) had been expected to pay 10 to 11 percent more ($55 to $60) per year under that general increase, according to Mosley. Now, however, that increase has been reduced to 2 to 3 percent ($10 to $16) per year for the duration of the contract, Mosley said.

Mosley explained that Wayne customers would be receiving a refund, including interest, based on their natural gas usage since Oct. 27, 1981.

THAT'S WHEN the requested rate increase was put into effect subject to a refund based on the terms of the just-settled contract.

Mosley indicated the average Wayne customer would receive about $15 to $20 as a credit to their natural gas bill. He said the refund probably would come in April or May.

According to the district manager, the rate reduction is due to Northern's recent receipt of FERC approval to serve substantial new sales markets, thus reducing the amount of increase required from existing customers.

Also, since the April filing, Northern has experienced significant changes in its pipeline operations and a deferral of major capital expenditures, Mosley said.

Mayor, councilman seeking city's top post

Wayne's mayoralty race is on with the incumbent and a challenger filing for the office last week.

Mayor Wayne Marsh, who is seeking a second term as the city's chief executive, filed for re-election Wednesday.

On Friday, first-term Councilman Gary Vopalensky of Ward 4 filed for a spot on the May 11 non-partisan primary election ballot.

MARSH, 46, WHO was named Citizen of the Year by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce in January. Is a 39-year resident of the city.

Vopalensky, 30, who was elected to the City Council in 1980, has lived in Wayne since 1969 when he moved here to enroll at Wayne State College.

Born in McLean, Marsh is a 1930 graduate of Osmond High School and attended WSC. He moved to Wayne in 1942.

Vopalensky, a native of Morse Bluff, is a 1969 graduate of North Bend Central High School, North Bend.

To date, Marsh and Vopalensky are the only candidates to file for the mayor's seat. The filing deadline for non-incumbents is March 12.

A LONG-TIME Wayne businessman, the incumbent mayor worked for several major Omaha businesses before, including Epley Hotels and McKesson-Robbins, before moving to Wayne.

A tax consultant, Marsh joined the Internal Revenue Service during his business career in Omaha.

He was transferred to this area by the IRS to head the agency's regional office in Norfolk. When congressional funding was blocked, the Norfolk office failed to open.

Marsh left the IRS and settled in Wayne to run the local Ford Motor Co.

MARSH OPENED an accounting office in Wayne in 1947, and served as secretary to the chamber in 1948.

In 1949, he bought the Wayne Bookstore — a business he ran for many years. He also operated a bookstore at the college for about five years, and opened another bookstore in O'Neill in 1973.

Marsh's income tax work continued throughout his business career in Wayne, including the years he and a partner built Sav-

Campaign kickoff sets theme

With his prepared press release in hand, first-term Councilman Gary Vopalensky announced his candidacy for mayor Friday before filing with the Wayne County Clerk's office.

With two years remaining on his first four-year term, the 30-year-old Ward 4 councilman said: "I would hope to bring to the Office of Mayor the maturity to fairly analyze a situation and the drive to effect a solution."

"I feel that my experience on the Council has given me a first-hand look at city government and I sincerely believe that City Hall and the employees of the City need to be reminded that they are employees of the people," his prepared campaign statement continued.

VOPALENSKY'S STATEMENT emphasized that his filing "did not represent dissatisfaction with present Mayor Wayne Marsh."

Director of speech and hearing for the Waterloo-based Educational Service Unit One, Vopalensky said his candidacy "will offer the people of Wayne a choice for the city's top position."

In what appeared to be a reminder to city officials and employees, Vopalensky's statement continued:

"It is the responsibility of those involved with running this city to be aware of community concerns and at all times act in the best interests of the people that they are elected and/or hired to serve."

VOPALENSKY IS THE second challenger to announce his candidacy for an elective city office.

The first was Vernon Russell, who is seeking the Ward 1 Council seat.

Vopalensky's campaign statement said: "...there is a growing need for city government officials to become more responsive to the citizens that they represent. Russell's challenge to incumbent Councilman Dan Water is based on the same campaign slogan: 'Return city government to the people.'"

Country boy. . .

Howdy. Well, I've managed to irritate half the population of western Nebraska.

Remember that spoof I did a couple of weeks ago about the Panhandle secession issue? I should have known better. Some Panhandle transplant, who now lives in this area, sent a copy of "Country Boy" to the editor of the Scotts Bluff Star-Herald along with a letter.

Star-Herald Editor Daryl Hall published both the letter and my Feb. 8 column. Both appeared in the Feb. 13 edition of the Star-Herald.

IT SEEMS THAT the Star-Herald has received more than a few letters about that egghead easterner who writes "Country Boy" since reprinting the spoof.

I received a letter the other day from a 34-year old Banner County rancher regarding the column.

Rod Van Pelt, who ranches about 25 miles south of Scottsbluff and about 25 north of Kimball, read the reprinted "Country Boy" column and took the time to express his feelings.

I enjoyed the letter so much that I must share it with you. In fact, I decided to make him this week's guest columnist. Here, then, is his letter.

I've often wondered what this great nation would be like if our forefathers were made of the same substance as you.

Some of you think we are all renting a U-Haul and moving to Wyoming where they say it's nothing but antelope and sagebrush.

I'M SURE GLAD the pioneers had the courage to work for changes of progress. I feel some of you have become stagnant and apathetic. I don't feel endeavors of progress should be halted just for beauty on paper.

OUR HERITAGE, history, customs, memories and love for the Panhandle will never be taken away. We will just call the land another name.

TO THOSE WHO say a boundary change would be too expensive or difficult, I remind you once again of our forefathers.

I suppose that cold, snowy, windy eastern Nebraska winter has done it to you again. It seems this is an easterner's way of letting off steam during a long siege of condominium fever.

I KIND OF had to chuckle at your remark stating that the Nebraska shape was rather beautiful and would automatically turn into an ugly duckling on the map.

Nothing comes cheap, unless it is propaganda from the East behind the "Panhandle Curtain."

WE HAVE had very mild winters (knock on wood) compared to the winter of 1979. The day before Thanksgiving we were blessed with 45 inches of snow in 24 hours and zero temperatures.

HOWEVER, ACROSS the line into Wyoming the difference was from nightmare to daylight.

I HATE TO SOUND like those who write to Ann Landers, but I doubt if you have the guts to print this without editing and censoring.

I think it's time we re-drew those lines to recognize that banks do have a definite function, but that function does not include active listing and selling of real estate, particularly farm land.

CONGRESSMAN doug bereuter.

Letters from readers are welcome. They should be timely, brief and must contain no libelous statements.

In closing, I would like to invite you, Randall Howell, to visit here in the Panhandle with us so we can show you where the "good life" really is.

I CALLED ROD Thursday night to chat with him about the letter.

WE TALKED BRIEFLY about the differences between eastern and western Nebraska and both agreed that it was a shame that neither one of us knew enough about how the other guy lived.

I THANKED ROD for the invitation to visit the Panhandle and warned him I might just take him up on it.

He renewed the invitation with some warm western Nebraska hospitality.

ROD, a graduate of the University of Wyoming in Laramie, returned to his Panhandle ranch home after teaching school in northern Minnesota (Cloquet, a small town near Duluth) and Newcastle, Wyo.

He and his wife, Kathleen, are the parents of two young cowboys — Kirk, 10, and Cody, 6.

Pet-abuse bill draws opposition

Tight state budget curbs raises

Many of the issues before the Legislature this past week will be affected by the tight budget.

senator elroy hefner

ON A RELATED issue the Legislature voted 27-16 to wait a week before voting on the 1982-83 budget proposed by the governor.

The Appropriations Committee has recommended a general fund limit of $73 million. Thone's budget proposal is $75 million lower.

Individual income tax rate. Senators voted last week 19-27 against such an increase.

A BILL TO prevent pet abuse was heard before the Judiciary Committee this past week.

Opponents of the bill included representatives of farm and livestock groups such as the Nebraska Livestock Feeders, the Nebraska Pork Association, the Nebraska Woolgrowers, and the Nebraska Poultry Industries.

Congress funds Job Service

Last week the House and Senate approved $2.3 billion of funding that will allow Job Service offices to reopen. I was especially pleased by this vote.

In comments prepared for my colleagues, I pointed out that the administration's proposals to close Job Service offices occurred when unemployment benefit payments had reached unprecedented levels.

Job Service offices provide a direct link between employers and the unemployed. It is counter-productive to close those offices at a time when unemployment is high.

In Nebraska, 73 per cent of the Job-Service offices were earmarked for closing before Gov. Charles Thone authorized an emergency appropriation of $200,000 from a state contingency fund to keep the offices open.

A SUPPLEMENTAL appropriations measure to reimburse the Commodity

Credit Corporation (CCC) for losses in 1980, 1981, and the first quarter of 1982 was also passed by Congress last week.

Because credit is scarce and expensive, farmers are turning to the commodity loan and reserve programs of the CCC as an alternative to selling their crops at prices substantially below their cost of production.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of these programs to the survival of the family farm in Nebraska and throughout the United States. The commodity loan program and the reserve program offer the producer an additional element of flexibility in making marketing decisions.

One last cup

It's always sad to see a local business close its doors. And, the imminent closing of Jeff's Cafe at 212 Main Street is no exception.

Jeff's Cafe, which had become something of a local clearinghouse for breakfasting businessmen, community coffee drinkers, downtown lunch grabbers and dining-out families, will be missed.

It will be missed by downtown businessmen who became accustomed to feeling at home in the unpretentious atmosphere.

It will be missed by anyone who ordered anything from a quick cup of coffee to a full-course meal.

It will be missed by everyone who took part in the chatter and teasing banter that has kept the place a comfortable spot for friends and foes alike.

It will be missed by the owners (Willard and Irene Jeffrey) as a healthy business site.

There is more comfort in knowing that a new business (Daylight Donuts) soon will be opening doors to coffee and doughnut customers at the historical Main Street address.

Wayne is indeed fortunate to have the opportunity to see new businesses move into the downtown district.

And, particularly encouraging is that it is happening at a time when Main Streets across the country are suffering from the economic blues.

One of the reasons that is not happening here is that area residents, for the most part, patronize local businesses.

So, as you drink one last cup of coffee at Jeff's Cafe over the next few weeks, don't forget to thank the Jeffrey family for being here.

And, when the new coffee-and-doughnut shop opens its doors, continue the kind of patronage that has made Wayne a good place to do business.

Real estate rules

The issue of preserving family farms may be a part of next week's scheduled legislative hearing on LB 918, prohibiting banks from actively engaging in certain real estate practices.

LB 918, which I am co-sponsoring with Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, prohibits banks and trust companies or departments from engaging in real estate brokerage, development and syndication, the underwriting of real estate mortgage guarantee insurance and real estate appraisal except in a normal course of business.

Bank and trust employees with realtors' licenses would face possible revocation of their licenses, and a Class II misdemeanor for negotiating in behalf of the bank any transaction from developing and managing real estate for their own personal purposes and benefits.

Because current law is silent on that issue, there can be practices of lending a property owner to either agree to management of his property as a condition of obtaining a loan, or in some cases to sell all or part of his land under conditions set by a bank, with the bank realizing an agent's fee when that land is sold.

I do not feel that is the sort of business practice we want to sanction. Land is too important in Nebraska to assume that what is not specifically prohibited is automatically good public policy, too important to treat its buying and selling like the repossession of a stolen automobile.

SENIOR CITIZENS
 On Feb. 12, 36 senior citizens attended a Valentine party. Party winners of games were Margaree Holm, Lloyd Anderson, Elviss Olson and Winsome Olson. Songs were led by Archie MacMillan. Valentine cookies were donated by Susan Baker and the FFA Chapter. Valentine napkins and napkin rings were made and donated by Brownie Troop 63. The seniors appreciate this very much and wish to thank these organizations.

The Wakefield Seniors have started a new fund-raiser. They are collecting a mile's worth of pennies, $844.80. There is a picture of their fund-raising lady on the wall of the center, her name is Penny Annie. She was drawn by Kay Hillinger. Anyone wishing to contribute pennies are welcome to come and throw them in the basket. The pennies will be counted every two weeks. Every time $10 is collected, a ribbon will be added to Penny Annie's shirt. The money collected will be used to buy something for the center.

Upcoming Events

Tuesday, Feb. 23: Legal Aid, 1 p.m.

Wednesday, Feb. 24: Monthly birthday party

Friday, Feb. 26: Card games, 1 p.m.

The seniors would also like to thank the Wakefield FBLA school chapter for the cookies donated to the center.

HOW TO TAKE THE TEETH OUT OF INFLATION WITHOUT FEELING THE BITE OF FEDERAL TAXES.

Introducing the One Year Tax-Exempt Certificate.

If you hate paying taxes as much as you hate inflation, you'll love this new One Year Savings Certificate.

It lets you earn up to $2,000 of tax-free interest if you file a joint Federal return, up to $1,000 of tax-free interest on individual Federal returns.

And no one — anywhere — is authorized to pay you more interest on this One Year Certificate than State National Bank. On a minimum deposit of $500, our One Year Certificate pays 70% of the current one-year U.S. Treasury Bill rate. Which is no small potato.

And, because of its unique tax-free status, our One Year Certificate could be far more profitable than other savings options.

In addition to a guaranteed return for one year, it also provides the most security. Because inside the State National Bank, your deposits are insured for up to a total of $100,000 by the FDIC. While many non-bank investments are simply not insured.

If you're interested in earnings up to $2,000 tax-free, call or visit with the professionals at the State National Bank. For high-yield savings and solid advice, we're all the bank you'll ever need.

NU WATER SEMINARS COVER TOUCHY ISSUES

Nebraska water issues are the focus of a seminar series this winter and spring at the University of Nebraska East Campus Union in Lincoln. The series is open to the public.

The Water Resources Center, a research and education division of the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, is sponsoring the seminars, which are already underway. They meet at 3:00 p.m. on Wednesdays until May 3, except for March 17 and March 24.

Speakers representing positions for and against the construction of Nordan Dam, irrigation development in the Sandhills and transbasin diversions of water will be featured.

Persons desiring a schedule of topics and speakers should contact the Water Resources Center at 310 Agricultural Hall, East Campus, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, NE 68510-0710.

SOIL SURVEYS

If you have ever wondered what uses your land is suited for or what is the best use for it, you should see your County soil survey.

A soil survey is an acre-by-acre inventory of the different kinds of soils in the landscape. In making a survey, a soil scientist makes numerous borings into the soil, to a depth of 3 feet or greater to evaluate the important characteristics of the soil. The scientist then identifies the soil, locates its boundaries in the field and records the boundaries on an aerial photograph.

CHARACTERISTICS

The scientist also determines the characteristics that affect a soil's use for agriculture, engineering, recreation or urban development. Those characteristics include the texture of the surface and subsill, the thickness and nature of the various soil layers, natural drainage, water infiltration rate, slope of the land and lime content of the soil.

Soil maps can be useful to farmers and ranchers in determining range sites, tree selection for windbreaks, the land's potential for irrigation, the location of prime farmland or even production potential of crops or grasses on the land. Soil surveys provide a basis for much of the conservation work SCS and NRD's provide to land users.

Soil maps are now being used by county commissioners or supervisors in determining the equalization of agricultural land by the county assessor. Soil surveys are done primarily by SCS personnel. The work has been accelerated by funding from NRDs and the University of Nebraska.

In the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District, all counties have completed soil surveys or are in the process.

Based on current funding levels, the soil mapping for the entire state is scheduled for completion with the next 7 years, according to the SCS.

People interested in obtaining soils information about a home site, farm or ranch, or for any other reasons, should contact their local SCS, Extension, or NRD office.

FUNDING WATER STORAGE

Recent studies and developments concerning the availability of water for beneficial purposes, are prompting many of Nebraska's neighbors to intensify their water conservation efforts.

Wyoming, Colorado, Oklahoma, South Dakota, and other midwestern and western states are taking steps to provide funds for substantial water resources development and programs.

Developments in other states include: last month the Colorado Water Conservation Board voted to recommend that the state provide $25 million for construction of the Narrows and Animas-La Plata water storage projects in the South Platte River basin.

NWRA members already are aware of the South Dakota arrangement involving the sale of 50,000 acre-feet of Missouri River water to Energy Transportation Systems, Inc. for a coal slurry pipeline in Wyoming. That project will involve delivery of domestic water to 19 rural South Dakota communities, and the State of South Dakota will receive nearly $1.5 billion over the next 40 years, which it will use for further water resources development in the state.

Wyoming Governor Ed Herschler has announced that he will ask the Wyoming legislature to appropriate $100 million each year for the next six years for water development; and Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh announced last month that he plans to seek a water development fund initially of $200 million to deal with the state's water problems.

These developments signal an increased determination by surrounding states to utilize the water before it leaves their boundaries. So far Nebraska has limited the Resources Development Fund to approximately $3 million annually. These funds cannot meet present project applications and certainly will fall further behind if that rate is maintained.

CLARKE-McNARY TREES

The Clarke-McNary tree program still has seedlings available to landowners of Nebraska for spring planting. However, Ponderosa Pine is the only pine species still available. Of an original 3.8 million seedlings available, less than one million remain. These consist of cedar, ponderosa pine, hardwoods and shrubs.

You may pick up order forms from SCS, Extension, NRD, and ASES offices. Assistance in design and planting arrangements is available from local SCS personnel.
