Defendant takes the stand in murder trial

Testifying on his own behalf, the defendant in his second-degree murder trial Wednesday denied he intentionally killed his brother-in-law during a scuffle in the shooting victim's rural Winside home.

Dennis Virgil Thorne, a 36-year-old Bloomfield man, took the witness stand minutes after the defense recalled Criss Kleinschmidt, 22, widow of Marlen Kleinschmidt, 20, rural Winside, Wednesday morning in the Ninth District Court trial.

Thorne, who turned himself in to authorities on the morning after the Oct. 9 shooting incident, told the three man, nine woman jury in the second floor courtroom of the Wayne County Courthouse that "the gun went off" accidentally.

DURING THE THIRD day of the jury trial, presided over by Judge Richard P. Garden of Norfolk, Thorne told the court he fell against a living-room wall at the rural Winside home during an early morning

3 men, 9 women on Ninth District Court jury

A three-man, nine woman jury hearing evidence in the Ninth District Court second-degree murder trial may begin deliberations Thursday.

The jury, seated Monday after hours of questioning by defense counsel, has been hearing evidence since 2:35 p.m. Monday.

Female jurors in the case include Verdina Johs, Wayne; Donna Jacobsen, Winside; Lynal Franzen, Wayne; Marie Mohr, Wayne; Debra Bodensiedt, Wayne; Barbara Heier, Wayne; Janice Barelman, Wayne; Marjorie Porter, Wayne; and Jill Kai, Wayne.

MALE JURORS include Larry Nichols, Wayne; Kenneth Jorgensen, Wayne; and Terry L. Roberts, Carroll.

Both Nichols and Roberts are farmers. Jorgensen is a Wayne tavern owner.

Johs is a Wayne housewife. Jacobsen is a nurse. Franzen is a rural school teacher. Mohr is a partner with her husband in a Wayne restaurant.

Bodensiedt is a part-time University of Nebraska-Omaha student. Heier is a housewife. Barelman is a bookkeeper. Porter is a retail store clerk. And, Kai is a senior nursing student attending classes in Lincoln.

THE JURORS were selected from a 59-member panel.

That panel was reduced to 36 prospective jurors Monday through a random drawing of names conducted by Jo Ann Ostrander, clerk of District Court.

The 36 prospective jurors then faced a question-and-answer screening process conducted by Ninth District Court Judge Richard P. Garden, who is presiding at the trial.

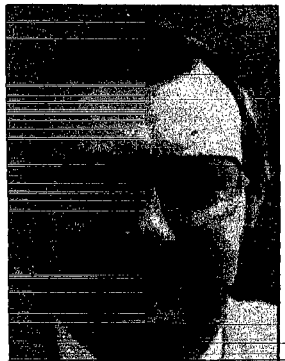

During that screening Monday, only one prospective juror was disqualified. The prospective juror was replaced by another from the panel called for the trial.

Pre-emptory challenges from County Attorney Budd Bornhoff, the prosecutor, and Terry Dougherty, defense counsel, eliminated 24 prospective jurors to produce the final 12-person jury.

Two incumbents seek seats on City Council

Two more incumbent councilmen — one in Ward 3 and one in Ward 4 — are seeking reelection to the Wayne City Council.

Larry Johnson, 46, owner-operator of Johnson's Prozen Foods, and Leo Hansen, 65, a Wayne County farmer who lives in the city, have filed for spots on the May 11 non-partisan primary election ballot.

Johnson, who represents Ward 4, filed Tuesday morning. Hansen, who represents Ward 3, filed Monday morning.

THE RE-ELECTION bids by Johnson and Hansen puts an incumbent City Council member running for each of the four seats on the ballot this year.

Darrel Heier, a Wayne High School teacher, and Carolyn Filter, an employee of Providence Medical Center and the only woman on the Council, filed for re-election last week.

Incumbent Mayor Wayne Marsh also has filed for re-election. He faces a challenge from Ward 4 Councilman Gary Vopatensky, who filed last week only days after Marsh threw his hat in the ring.

The mayor has no vote on the City Council.

TO DATE, the only other incumbent to face a challenge in the election is Heier.

Springtime scratching spot

AFTER A LONG northeast Nebraska winter, that old cold-weather cattle coat starts driving cows a bit crazy. So, they look for a nice tight stretch of barbed wire to do some scratching. Here, just northwest of Wayne, it looks like a cow scratching party took on the cattleman's roadside fence. The Hereford hair also cushions the barbs against any summer push into the lush grass of the road ditches.

Savings due for city electric customers

Council approves power contract

Wayne's municipal power customers may not face an electric bill increase in 1983.

That's the bottom line on a power contract negotiated by the city with Western Area Power Administration (WAPA) and the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD).

After nearly a year of negotiating, Phil Kloster, city administrator, presented the City Council with terms of that power contract Tuesday night.

ON A UNANIMOUS vote, the Council approved a resolution authorizing Mayor Wayne Marsh to execute the contract.

Last April, at Kloster's suggestion, the city applied for a power allocation from WAPA, a supplier, even though access to the electricity had been cut off some 20 years ago.

Kloster said that, in pursuing power purchases from WAPA, he learned the supplier had reopened access to electricity under a post-1985 marketing plan.

Wayne's application was accepted and the city will be supplied with an allocation of power at "about one-third" the current rates, according to Kloster.

THE POWER is expected to come on-line in Wayne sometime in April, Kloster told the Council.

said the allocation could range as high as 25 to 35 percent of the city's peak power demands.

Kloster told The Wayne Herald the new contract would represent about a 6.5 percent savings in city power costs.

He said the $79,000 drop in power costs was a projected figure that would depend on peak loads in the city during the coming year.

"I'm excited about it," Kloster told the Council. "It's going to look good when we have to look at 1983. It could limit or eliminate a need for a power increase for 1983."

THE 20-YEAR power allocation contract expires in 2000.

Kloster said WAPA had some commitments in 1991 to divert some water into irrigation projects. That, he said, might reduce the savings by some 1.63 percent.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's tremendous for the City of Wayne," said Councilman Keith Masley. "I'd like to thank the city administrator... that's the advantage to having a top city administrator."

After the Council approved the contract, a unanimous vote also approved an amendment to the city's power purchase agreement with NPPD.

"We have to thank NPPD for allowing us to get the WAPA contract," Kloster said.

"WE HAVE TO get NPPD approval before they (WAPA) can even sell it to us," he continued.

"They've agreed to back off (their contract terms with the city), and allow them (WAPA) to sell it (the reduced-rate power) to us," he added.

Kloster also informed the Council he was working on a project that would allow the city to sell excess power to neighboring states.

The administrator said the city could not market power within the state, but could sell supplemental demand load to communities beyond Nebraska.

IN OTHER ACTION, the City Council postponed a decision on accepting bids, or rebidding, for a police patrol car.

With the strength of a 7-3 vote behind a motion to table a resolution on rebidding the police car, the Council decided to consider that matter at the next regularly scheduled meeting on Tuesday, March 9.

Councilman Masley voted against the motion to table and the subsequent motion to adjourn, which also passed 7-1.

The last-minute maneuver, initiated by Councilman Gary Vopatensky, broke an apparent stalemate that developed over the handling of three bids received for a police cruiser.

NOT ONE OF THE bids, including two from local automobile dealers, met the city's advertised specifications.

Bids were received from Ellingson Motors and Mike Perry Chevrolet-Oldsmobile of Wayne, and Husker Dodge of Omaha.

Husker Dodge met all specifications except the bid bond. None was included in the company's bid of $8,046.97 on a 1982 four-door Dodge Diplomat with no trade-in.

The city's trade-in is a 1971 Ford.

The Ellingson Motors bid of $8,553 for a 1982 four-door Pontiac Bonneville also did not contain a bid bond. The car did not meet specifications either, according to Kloster.

Mike Perry Chevrolet-Oldsmobile was the only company to submit a bid bond. That bid was $9,430.19 for a 1982 four-door Chevrolet Impala.

HOWEVER, THE car did not meet specifications, Kloster said.

Furthermore, the Mike Perry Chevrolet-Oldsmobile proposal exceeded engineer's price estimates, according to Kloster.

Initially, the Council decided to defer a decision on the bids.

After two public hearings on zoning requests, the Council again discussed the bids and several, including Councilwoman

"It's heavenly if all goes well," Dr. Runestad added, but he pointed out there is no room for error in front of an audience composed of professional choral directors.

WAYNE STATE'S Madrigal was selected to perform after they submitted an audition tape to ACDA.

In addition to performing their selections during the "Convention Banquet and Entertainment Extravaganza" on Feb. 27, the Madrigal will be used as a demonstration group by Dr. Norris Hays of the University of Wisconsin Eau Claire.

Hartington CC boys hit 100 in win

In a high scoring, run-and-gun game, fourth ranked Hartington CC bombed Wayne 104-74 Tuesday night at Hartington.

"We shot pretty well and our offense did a good job. The big difference was on the boards, especially the defensive boards," said Wayne coach Bill Sharpe.

Wayne State led 17-16 with 9:30 to play in the first half. In the next five minutes, the Cats were outscored 13-2 by Bellevue for a 10-point deficit.

Freshmen third at Randolph; beat Cedar

The third place trophy was captured by Wayne's freshmen in the Randolph Invitational Saturday.

"They stayed real close until the third quarter. Then, we changed to a man-to-man defense and scored some easy baskets," said Wayne coach Duane Blomkamp.

The season came to a close on a happy note for the Wayne freshmen as they gunned down Hartington Cedar Catholic 55-40 Tuesday night in Hartington.

Cold first half costly to Trojans

Although Wakefield hit a respectable 44 percent from the field, coach Scott Miller felt that his team could have shot better and given Ponca a closer contest Friday night.

The second half showed considerable improvement with Wakefield hitting 3 of 6 shots in the third period and 10 of 15 in the final stanza.

Ponca ruled the boards 26 to 16 but committed 15 turnovers compared to 9 for Wakefield.

Cats end season with Coleridge

The fine performance of one player wasn't enough as Winside 10-18 as Coleridge Monday night in Class D-3 District play at Wakefield.

Scott Janke had a fantastic game but the rest of the team didn't play well," said Winside coach Dennis Gorman.

Allen finishes with loss to Emerson

A speaking Emerson-Hubbard squad romped over Allen 81-43 Tuesday night, eliminating the Eagles from Class C-7 District play.

Schuyler rolls to win over Lady Blue Devils

The absence of Jill Zeiss from the lineup due to an injury didn't help the Wayne Blue Devils any in their meeting with Schuyler Thursday night.

Governor counting on economic picture to improve

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

If the nation is being asked to survive hard economic times by practicing Reaganomics, is it possible Nebraskans are being asked to live with "Thoneomics?"

That question really doesn't need an answer, but it does raise some interesting questions in light of the state's current fiscal condition and a clear division between legislative leaders and the governor.

Gov. Charles Thone is still resisting efforts to raise the state's personal income tax rate from 15 to 16 percent of federal liability. And he's sticking to that position even despite a recent dismal revenue report.

STATE REVENUE officials say tax revenues are coming in much lower than expected, and they're blaming a recession ravaged economy.

State Tax Commissioner Don Leuenberger recently revealed taxes will generate between $10 million and $16 million less in revenue than had been projected originally. That's a considerable revision in figures that lawmakers rely heavily upon when appropriating money for the upcoming fiscal year.

In response, legislative leaders like Appropriations Committee Chairman Jerome Warner of Waverly are calling for an increase to 16 percent in the individual income tax rate.

Warner and like-minded senators stress an increase in the tax rate doesn't translate to an increase in taxes. That's because the federal income tax cut directly affects Nebraska's rate, which is a direct percentage of the federal liability.

SO WHAT WARNER and others are trying to do is keep state income tax revenues closer to where they were before the federal tax cut, although Warner says even an increase in the state tax rate won't generate as much money as before the federal reduction.

Thone, on the other hand, is trying to see if that the federal tax cut that was passed on at the state level by virtue of the piggyback nature of the state tax is in fact passed on.

And he has shaped a budget that he says can be accomplished without a tax rate increase, although a few new revenue-generating measures will be needed and some funds might have to be shifted from one category to another.

It's beginning to sound like Thone's plan is very similar to Reagan's.

BOTH LEADERS believe a little "hurt" can go a long way toward making things better. Neither wants excessive suffering, and they're hoping decision makers and lawmakers will prune and preserve where necessary.

Reagan also is confident his economic policies will turn things around, and he sees brighter days ahead.

Thone, likewise, is confident the state's economic picture will improve soon enough to raise enough money to cover the spending obligations approved the Legislature for 1982-83.

Similarities definitely exist between Reagan's and Thone's approaches to the economy situation. One difference that some Nebraska reporters keep mentioning is the fact that Thone is seeking re-election this year, while Reagan is not.

BUT CONSIDERING Thone's longtime support of Reagan and his ongoing pledge to hold the line on tax rates, the governor really hasn't deviated much from the past. It would appear at this juncture that Thone's version of Reaganomics is not an election ploy, but rather a continuation of his policies and convictions.

Still, Warner and like-minded senators are convinced Nebraska's income tax rate will have to be increased this year. And they've got figures and solid reasons to back up their beliefs.

But at this point it's doubtful whether Thone will change his position, unless another downward revision in revenue figures is forthcoming.

THE LEGISLATURE'S Revenue Committee has decided to let the full Legislature discuss ways to raise more money.

The panel recently advanced to the legislative floor three of Thone's proposals for the 1982-83 state budget. But the committee has recommended some revisions in Thone's revenue-generating proposals.

The measures, with the committee's proposed amendments, would mean $25 million to $30 million more for the state. The extra money would come through a reduction in the mandatory treasury reserve and increases in certain tax rates.

The committee agreed to recommend an increase in the corporate income tax rate, but the committee's version calls for a smaller increase than Thone is seeking. The panel also went along with a hike in the cigarette tax, but the senators proposed a 2-cent per-pack increase, while Thone suggested 4 cents a pack.

NOW THAT THONE'S bills have been advanced for consideration by the full Legislature, lawmakers will have to decide whether to accept the committee's recommended changes in Thone's bills.

The Legislature is not bound by the panel's amendments, which must be approved by the full Unicameral before they can be considered. Even if the committee's amendments are accepted, they are not sacred and can be amended or scrapped at any time before the measures reach a final vote.

It's too soon to say whether Thone's or the committee's approach will survive the legislative process. And, it's entirely possible neither approach will survive. Trade-offs and compromise, after all, are commonplace in the legislative arena.

Business threat

Nebraska's small-business community is overwhelmingly opposed to full state assumption of federal programs which fall victim to budget cuts, according to a statewide survey of more than 8,000 small-business owners.

In a poll conducted by the National Federation of Independent Business in Nebraska, 79 percent of those responding said that state government should not attempt full funding of federal programs; transferred to state control. Only 11 percent favored their continuation using state funds.

The independent-business owners are concerned about financing. The block grants to be provided by the federal government clearly will not pay the full cost of these programs. However, funding them from the state treasury would drastically increase the tax burden on individuals and businesses. Our members strongly prefer a policy of belt-tightening, rather than continuing a high level of spending.

Other responses in the survey are indications that the small-business community is already threatened by economic difficulties. By a margin of 97 to 2 percent, the small-business owners asked for tightening of unemployment compensation eligibility standards to discourage persons from quitting their jobs and going on employment. And in a related matter, 67 percent of the respondents said there should be no increase in the current level of $180 per week maximum workers' compensation benefits.

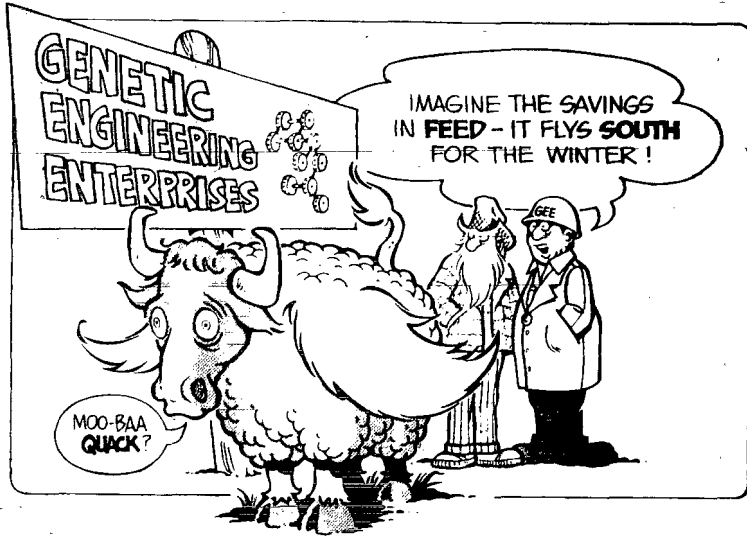

There is a clear message in these results. Despite the usual spirit of fairness in the small-business community, many of our members feel they are being pushed to the brink by worsening economic conditions.

Last year, for example, only 36 percent favored no increase in workers' compensation benefits, compared to 67 percent this year. Times are getting tough for small-business owners, and they expect restraint to be the keynote of government policy while we work through the current difficulties.

An "equal access to justice" law proved quite popular with the NFIB membership, garnering an 87 percent approval rating as against 4 percent opposition. This legislation (LB 92) would accomplish on the state level what similar federal legislation mandated in 1980: that government should pay court costs and legal fees when it loses a non-criminal suit involving a small business.

Generally, Nebraska's state government has been cautious with the taxpayers' money. We feel it is incumbent upon legislators to maintain that tradition — even if it becomes politically difficult to do so as the federal government shifts its responsibilities back to the states.

To the editor:
The Wayne County History Book Committee wishes to thank everyone who helped in the production of the 1981 County History. Those who gave their time and worked in any way to assist us deserve our special gratitude. Beyond that, however, our thanks go to those who encouraged us during that long year of hard and sometimes frustrating work. We needed that encouragement.

No less do we appreciate the many expressions of praise for the book since it has appeared.

The business men and women who supported us by advertising, the people who took space on special pages for memorials and tributes, as well as those who purchased books, made it possible for us to raise the many thousands of dollars needed for the book's printing. We could not have managed without them.

Special thanks go to those who were helpful in the distribution of the histories. First, to Gerald Bofenkamp who allowed us to use his Decorating Center as our headquarters for storing and distribution; to Clerk Carol Moseley who took charge in the absence of one of our staff; and to Mary Monson of The Shepherdess who was helpful in many ways during that period.

Thanks are due to The Wayne Herald for generous coverage during the year of our work, especially to Lavon Beckman whose help in promoting our interests was most important to our success. We also thank station KTCB for publicity during the distribution of the history books.

To the editor:
Once upon a time there were two mental inmates walking in the rain, clouds parted, a rainbow appeared and one said: "Isn't it beautiful?"

The other said, "Yes, for this Government has funds, but they send us to this college."

Hurray, we found a graduate. Congratulations, Wayne Herald! We humbly thank you for making it vividly clear how low, lowstate northeast Nebraska thinks about the Panhandle.

He succeeded in convincing the rest of us "fools, pinheads, antelopes and animals" in the Panhandle of the true eastern feelings. The rift has widened immediately. Originally, we only wanted recognition equal to the rest of the state, but with your kind help we may actually wind up in Wyoming.

One must feel sorry for your readers to have to read this sick, macabre, polluted humor (which is not even funny). As immigrants from Europe, we are proud to live in the West. We agree we cannot compete with the East, our mouths are not big enough to stick our feet in. We need them to brace ourselves against smelly east winds.

To finish his nonsense: We could declare the Mountain time — Wyoming, Nebraska State and war to the Union. Of course we would lose, but in the peace treaty, we would get foreign aid and modern weapons; for which expositions we need our own parking area for foreign dignitaries, 2,700 sections in Sioux County alone.

P.S. His defaming and foul language evidently is caused by lack of integrity or ignorance.

Tourism expected to create more jobs

Tourism in Nebraska is expected to create the equivalent of 2,000 more fulltime jobs in 1982.

In 1981 the people in the state who worked part and full time serving visitors were the equivalent of 35,000 year around jobs. It's estimated that this total will reach 37,000 in 1982.

People from out of state or Nebraskans traveling more than 100 miles from home within our borders are defined as the tourist market, and these folks spent more than $1 billion in 1981, the first year that amount had been achieved.

governor charley thone

AN INCREASE of from 5 to 10 percent in dollar value is expected in 1982.

The state is increasing efforts to build this bonanza for Nebraska's economy, and each citizen of Nebraska can help.

Nebraska has more to offer all its state-owned facilities than ever before. The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission will be opening in 1982 a new state park on the Platte River between Omaha and Lincoln.

The commission also operates five other major parks, eight historic parks and 43 state recreation areas. All of the parks will have more activities and more to see during more months of the year in 1982 than ever before.

THE STATE HISTORICAL Society aids the commission in restoring facilities with accuracy and in presenting activities that provide an authentic feel of Nebraska's early days.

The 50th anniversary of the completion of the Nebraska state capitol is 1982. It's all spruced up for the occasion. Guided tours are available and there's a multi-media show about the capitol. This year our state house will be a better tourist attraction than ever before.

The Nebraska Department of Economic Development has responsibility for advertising to attract visitors. The efforts are better in quality and more extensive than in the past. The state is not wasting its comparatively few dollars nationwide but is concentrating on reaching prospects in neighboring states.

The state agencies involved in tourism are now cooperating better than at any time in the past.

THESE ARE TWO ways all Nebraskans can aid in building the state's tourism industry. One is by going out of the way to be courteous, friendly and helpful to those visiting our state. How a person is treated will have more to do with whether that person enjoys a vacation than the scenery or activities. Nebraska is beginning to attract some visitors from abroad, and we especially need to put out the welcome mat for them.

The second way for Nebraskans to build the tourist trade in the state is by vacationing in the borders themselves. We do have excursions to suit almost every taste in Nebraska. Vacation money spent outside of our state is lost forever, but that spent in Nebraska turns over again and again building the economy of our entire state.

I hope you will be an ambassador for Nebraska to visitors, and I hope you'll spend some time getting to know your state better. If you'd like information on Nebraska tourist attractions, just write to me at the State Capitol, Lincoln, Nebraska 68509.

Production, market plans will help maximize soybean yields, profits

Are you producing soybeans at a profit—or taking a loss? If you know how much it costs you to produce a bushel of beans, you know your personal profit margin from a glance at the latest soybean price quote on the board of the elevator. And if you know your cost per bushel, you can formulate both a production plan and a marketing plan—to help you optimize your profits for 1982.

"They should relate to each other to maximize production and income," says economist Bob Acton. "While these plans by themselves cannot ensure you a profitable year, they are an important first step.

A good production plan will include varieties, tillage practices, chemical programs and a good estimate of your production costs. Likewise, your marketing plan will answer the what, when, where and at what price levels. It's not too early to think about your expected selling price for your 1982 crop," Acton reminds.

"Knowing your production costs and potential yield is the key to building good production and marketing plans," continues Acton. Identifying either is not easy. You can only estimate them—based on recent trends. You may want to budget several options before you finalize your production and marketing plans. Acton says. "The challenge is to shoot for maximum yield—yet control your costs."

"Another point to remember your cost per bushel goes down as yields increase. If you can produce more beans per acre, your production costs don't rise nearly as fast as your return per acre since you're producing more beans per acre," Acton adds.

"If you're trying to cut production costs, don't do anything that may reduce your yields. That will raise your cost per bushel—and reduce your profit margin per bushel," he points out.

Acton cautions that while one should plan and strive for the best price the marketplace permits, it is interesting to note that net income increased more rapidly as you increase yield from 20 to 30 to 40 bushels per acre—than as your selling price increases from $6.00 to $6.50 to $7.00 to $7.50 per bushel.

For example, with production costs of $150 per acre and $7.51 beans, your net income with 22 bushels yields is $15 per acre. If you could push yields to 30 bushels per acre you need only $5.51 beans to earn the same $15 profit. A 40 bushel yield, even at the $5.51 price would give you an even more respectable $70 profit per acre. Or you could shoot for both the higher price and higher yield and earn $135 per acre.

"The bottom line," concludes Acton, "is that you need to analyze your production practices in terms of potential yield and related cost. Then select the option that gives the net income per acre you're shooting for."

National grass lands— Grazing cost lower

Fees for grazing livestock on national grasslands in the nine Great Plains states have been lowered for 1982, R. Max Peterson, chief of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Forest Service, said last week.

The states are Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas and Wyoming.

"The 1982 fee for the 17 national grasslands in these states will be $3.34 per animal month, an average of 22 cents less per animal month than last year," Peterson said.

An animal month is the grazing of one cow, one horse or five sheep for one month. National grassland grazing fees are determined by an adaptation of the formula established by Congress to set fees for grazing on the national forests.

In determining grassland fees, the formula uses a base fee which is modified by comparing the total costs of grazing livestock on public and private land, annual private land lease rates, beef cattle prices, and the costs of producing livestock in the nine Great Plains states.

"The 1982 grazing fees have been reduced because the prices farmers and ranchers received for beef in 1981 declined while the costs of livestock production increased," Peterson said. "These factors play a prominent role in determining national grassland grazing fees."

Copper as a swine growth promotant topic of program

The pros and cons of copper as a growth promotant in swine will be one of the topics covered during a University of Nebraska Area Swine Day program to be held at Wayne City Auditorium today (Thursday).

Don C. Spitze, agent chairman, Cooperative Extension Service in Wayne County, said producers have learned that copper, acting like an antibiotic, will improve gains and feed conversion of growing-finishing swine. In addition, copper (usually copper sulphate) is much cheaper to add to diets than antibiotics—$1 to $2 per ton compared to $5 to $12 per ton, Spitze said.

However, there are definite drawbacks, he said, including a potential for overdose and subsequent toxicity; copper remaining in swine manure is highly corrosive to metal feeders, slats and other equipment; and possible inactivation of swine waste disposal lagoons.

Copper in swine diets will be discussed by one of several NU Institute of Agriculture specialists appearing on the swine day program, which begins at 9:30 a.m. and concludes at 3 p.m. with questions.

Animal scientists, agriculture engineers and veterinary sciences will update producers on the latest developments and recommendations in swine nutrition, health, housing and genetics, Spitze continued.

Producers who attend the session also will have an opportunity to consult on a "one-to-one" basis with university specialists on problems in individual swine operations.

Wayne County pork producers are cooperating with the Extension Service and the animal science department in the series of 10 educational meetings being held around the state.

Farm specialist says Ag production to rise

Costs for farm inputs are likely to rise 5 to 10 percent in 1982, according to Dr. Les Sheffield, University of Nebraska extension farm management specialist. With few exceptions, prices will reflect the current inflationary times, he said.

"Despite the fact that farm commodity prices are generally below the cost of production for most commodities, it appears that in most cases the costs for farm inputs will reflect inflation increases," he said.

LP GAS PRICES are expected to increase slightly as a reflection of higher natural gas prices, because over half of LP gas supplies are derived from "stripping" it from natural gas.

— Fertilizers and ag chemicals. Depressed commodity prices and slackening world demand for fertilizers will tend to limit prices for a number of fertilizers, especially phosphates and potash products. Prices for these fertilizers could be lower than in 1981.

Prices for nitrogen fertilizers may strengthen in the spring and summer because of higher natural gas prices and the closing of some unprofitable nitrogen fertilizer plants. Early buyers of fertilizers may be able to take advantage of discounts for some products if the manufacturer or distributor wants to move product, Sheffield said.

Prices for atrazine and triazine herbicides should stay the same or rise only slightly in 1982, because of strong competition. For most other herbicides, and most insecticides and pesticides, increases are expected to be in the 5 to 10 percent range.

result has been sharply increased real estate taxes on a per acre basis, Sheffield said. Taxes are continuing to escalate, along with increased farmland real estate values. Taxes also are reflecting inflationary impacts for goods and services provided by counties and local school districts.

Little easing of interest rates or the credit crunch is likely, Sheffield said. "Those farmers with a lot of borrowed capital and low equity positions will be hard pressed to obtain adequate credit for their 1982 operations," he predicted.

SHEFFIELD OUTLINED the price outlook for various inputs:

— Energy. The present glut of world crude oil coupled with weakening demand should keep enough pressure on petroleum fuel to hold prices for gasoline and diesel relatively steady in 1982.

Natural gas prices for irrigation already have risen sharply because of price increases which became effective Jan. 1. The new Gas Purchase Agreement clause which passes along the increased cost of natural gas from new wells to the user, could bring another rate increase by spring, Sheffield said.

Electricity rates charged by Rural Electrification Association Districts will reflect increases in the wholesale cost of electric power charged by the major wholesalers, Sheffield said. Coupled with inflation, 1982 electric rates could increase from 10 to 20 percent or even higher in some cases, where electric power for irrigation is a major part of an REA district's total load.

The thaw

The time had come for every trickle to become a torrent... every rivulet to become a river... On the strength of shimmering midwinter sunshine, the snowbanks sank into streams that gurgled in to gully washers. And, while the warmth of sunbeams danced the light fantastic across a sleepy prairie, the weight of winter snowfalls cracked under the strain of a premature spring. The agony of ice cracked loud and clear along the mucky meandering pathways to another pothole. And, the earth stood naked, her winter garment grabbed and tossed down turbulent tributaries with fast-water chasms caught in the springtime stripping of the land. From droplet to deluge, the water moved from furrow to fence line and onward from roadside to river, splashing over sleepy dams in a deafening drop that crashed with the sound of cymbals in an orchestrated thaw. The thaw... it was the thaw that broke the spell of winter, washed the snow-choked chasms clean and chased the below-zero blues away. The thaw... it was.
