Jury acquits defendant in shooting death

Dennis Virgil Thorne is a free man. After 141 days in the Wayne County Jail, the 38-year-old Bloomfield man was found not guilty in connection with the Oct. 9 shooting death of his brother in law by a Ninth District Court jury Thursday.

The three-man, nine-woman panel reached the verdict after deliberating 2 hours and 18 minutes in the second floor jury room of the Wayne County Courthouse.

THORNE, AN UNEMPLOYED roofer who was charged with second degree murder in the death of Marlen Kleinschmidt, 40, rural Winside, sat motionless at the defense table while Joan Ostrander, clerk of District Court, read aloud the not guilty verdict at 2:50 p.m.

Apparently unsure of the verdict in the quiet tension filled courtroom, Thorne showed no emotion when Ostrander finished reading.

As the courtroom tension drained, Judge Richard P. Garden ordered the judgment entered as he called Thorne and his court-appointed defense attorney Terry Dougherty of Norfolk to the bench.

Only when Judge Garden released Thorne from the custody of the Wayne County Sheriff did the full impact of the verdict show.

THORNE, HIS PALE and drawn face showing the strain of the four-day trial, turned to Dougherty, embraced the defense attorney and openly wept.

Thorne's half-sister, Criss Kleinschmidt, 22, widow of the shooting victim, quietly wept in a front-row seat of the courtroom — only the second time she showed emotion during the four-day jury trial that saw her testify twice, once for the prosecution and once for the defense.

His face flushed as he embraced Dougherty, Thorne steadied himself while Judge Garden dismissed the 12 member jury.

Then, Thorne slowly walked from the bench to face friends and the news media.

"Great!" he said in response to a question about how he felt.

WIPING A TEAR from his eye, Thorne asked if anyone had a cigarette.

His half-sister already had left the courtroom to call Thorne's mother, Pearl Hughes of Bloomfield (both the defendant and his half-sister have the same mother), about the verdict. The jury not only found Thorne not guilty of second degree murder, but also found him innocent of manslaughter.

The penalty in Nebraska for second degree murder is 10 years to life imprisonment. The state's penalty for manslaughter is 1 to 50 years and/or a maximum fine of $25,000.

While Thorne smoked a cigarette and chatted outside the second floor courtroom, his half-sister waited for him in the Sheriff's office of the Wayne County Jail.

County Attorney Budd Bornhoft, who prosecuted the case, left the courtroom without comment moments after the jury was dismissed.

DOUGHERTY, WHO had escorted Thorne to Wayne County law enforcement authorities on Oct. 9 after the defendant turned himself in, said, "I feels good."

The defense attorney, who soon will be leaving his Norfolk practice for work with a Lincoln law firm, remained at Thorne's side for the few moments they spent in the courtroom after the verdict.

"I think that's the proper verdict," Dougherty said. "I'm real happy for Mr. Thorne. This was a tragedy not a crime. I'm sorry that Mr. Kleinschmidt is dead but I'm glad this man guilty would not have been right."

Moments later, Thorne walked from the courthouse to the jail, with Wayne County Sheriff Scotly Thompson at his side, for the last time.

"YAAAAHOOOO!" Thorne yelled as he entered the Sheriff's office, just northwest of the courthouse.

He went to his cell to collect his personal belongings and to change into blue jeans and boots.

His half-sister waited for him at the information desk. "I'm glad it's over," she said, smiling.

"You did a helluva job," she told Dougherty when the attorney arrived at the Sheriff's office with several personal items, including a watch with a broken band and a western hat, that belonged to her dead husband.

The items, including Kleinschmidt's blue-denim work shirt with a blood-stained bullet hole near the left chest pocket, had been confiscated by law enforcement officers to be held for evidence at Thorne's trial.

THE WIDOW, mother to the four young Kleinschmidt children, declined an offer from Dougherty for her to take the shirt, which had been a key piece of evidence in the state's case against Thorne.

Within 15 minutes, Thorne had checked out of the jail. He and his half-sister soon left the Sheriff's office with Dougherty.

Thorne's personal items were loaded in the Kleinschmidt car — a brown, early-1970s

Dead man doesn't get his own day in court.....

Throughout four-days of testimony in the Ninth District Court second-degree murder trial, no one accused the gunshot victim of being a nice man.

Marlen E. Kleinschmidt, who was pronounced dead at Norfolk's Lutheran Community Hospital during the early-morning hours of Oct. 9, was characterized in a number of other ways by both the prosecution and the defense.

County Attorney Budd Bornhoft, in his closing statement for the prosecution, characterized the 40-year-old Kleinschmidt as a "despicable person" and a "wife-beater."

BORNHOFT TOLD the three-man, nine-woman jury: "I'm not going to try to kid myself and I'm not going to try to kid you, Marlen Kleinschmidt was not the kind of person you could have much sympathy for."

Urging the jury to avoid deciding the case on sympathy, Bornhoft continued: "You don't kill a person because he's despicable...you don't kill a person because he's a wife-beater."

Telling the jury that the defendant (Dennis Virgil Thorne) "had his day in court" and that the dead man (Kleinschmidt) "hasn't had his day in court," Bornhoft continued:

"Don't judge this case because he (Kleinschmidt) was not the kind of person you'd like him to be."

DEFENSE ATTORNEY Terry Dougherty described Kleinschmidt as "destructive, abusive and assaultive."

Several times, during the course of the four-day jury trial, sworn testimony characterized Kleinschmidt as "hard to get along with."

Though the unemployed roofer was not a large man, he had "a demonstrable reputation for violent and destructive conduct when he was drinking," the defense attorney told the jury during his closing statement.

Under oath, Kleinschmidt's own wife, Criss, has consistently characterized her dead husband as "an alcoholic."

COURT TESTIMONY revealed that Kleinschmidt had recently served a 90-day jail sentence for driving while intoxicated.

In fact, his widow's testimony indicated that part of her quarrel with Kleinschmidt on the night of the shooting incident involved her concern over his driving the family car while he was intoxicated.

Kleinschmidt, testimony revealed, had been drinking heavily early in the day on Oct. 8 while on at least two prescription drugs that enhanced the effects of alcohol.

The autopsy report on Kleinschmidt's body revealed his blood contained more than twice the legal alcohol limit set by the state for the purposes of motor vehicle operation.

WITH THE DRINKING came his violent behavior, according to court testimony.

His widow testified that her husband's assaults on that day were not the first she had experienced from Kleinschmidt.

She recounted one particularly harrowing experience that forced her to flee into a nearby farm field "for most of the night" after locking herself in the bathroom to protect herself from Kleinschmidt's assaults.

The young mother told the court she broke the back door window and escaped into the yard, where she hid behind a bush and waited for the police to arrive.

South Sioux City attorney builds mini mall in Allen

A 49-year-old South Sioux City attorney who says he would like to see small towns revitalize themselves, is giving the community of Allen a boost in that direction.

Goby Uhlir, with the firm Uhlir and Horneber of South Sioux City, plans to open a new mini mall in the community, population 390, as early as late March.

The mini mall, which will be called Allen's Frontier Square, is located in the old McCord Chevrolet Garage.

CONSTRUCTION of the mall began in November.

Uhlir, who also owns Allen's Post Office and Somethin' Country buildings, said the new 4,000 square foot mini mall will include seven spaces on the first floor and one room in the basement, which may be used for a youth club or health club.

Uhlir said several persons have contacted him to rent space in the mall, however no leases have been signed.

Possible businesses which may locate in the mall include a laundromat, men's clothing store, appliance and hardware store, toys, baby items and accessories store, recreational furniture shop, including waterbeds, hot tubs and whirlpools, and a bar.

"I'VE HAD several contacts," said Uhlir, adding that he will meet with the Allen Community Club on March 16 to give prospective business owners a tour of the new mall.

Uhlir said he is trying to encourage businesses different from those already located in Allen.

Space costs in the new mall will be competitive, ranging from $125 to $175 a month.

THE MALL is being done in an early rustic frontier American atmosphere of rough-sawn cedar and ear-siding.

A cobblestone walkway opens into a courtyard area which will have a three or four-tiered fountain and benches.

Westwinds-style overhanging eaves, both inside and outside the mall feature wood shingling. Four coach lights will be mounted outside.

Carpenters are Gary Book and Pat Wingert of South Sioux City, and Don Irby of Jackson. Randy Ellis of Allen is the electrician, and R and B Construction of Martinsburg is doing concrete work.

Frustrating year ends with defeat

The 1981-82 Wayne State Wildcats dropped their final two contests of the season to close out a disappointing and frustrating campaign. Bellevue College clipped the Cats 63-49 in an NAIA District 11 mini-playoff, while Chadron State earned a 65-68 decision in the regular season finale.

Coach Rick Weaver's squad ends the year with a 13-22 record and losses in nine of its last 10 games. The Cats will lose seniors Al Jones (Sioux City, Iowa), Jay Bellar (Walhill) and Jim Reinders (Omaha) to graduation.

The Chadron State Eagles put together a strong finish behind Gregg Stephens' 39 points and the cool play of Dave Licari to upset Wayne State 95-88 in overtime at Wayne Wednesday.

Wayne State blew a 10-point lead with five minutes to play as the scrappy young Eagles tied the game at 76 all at the end of regulation play. Licari tied the game on a jumper with 21 remaining, and a last second shot by Wayne's Brad Edwards missed its mark.

Licari then sank all seven of his free throw attempts in overtime to lead Chadron to the win. The visitors built up as much as an eight point lead in the extra frame as they tallied 19 points in the extra five minutes.

Grady Hansen once again paced Wayne State. Hansen's 22 points helped him eclipse his own school scoring record for a season. Hansen, who also led the Cats with nine rebounds, finished with 673 points on the year, 14 better than his total last season.

Brad Edwards and Jay Bellar chipped in 14 each in the losing cause. Brian Pfaff (Jones, Casper, Wyo.) and Al Jones each tallied 11.

New look for Lady Cats

Hitting, outfield termed WSC's strengths

The 1982 Wayne State College softball squad will feature a "new look" this spring when the Lady Cats swing into action in late March.

First-year head coach Deb Weaver, an assistant on last year's NAIA national tournament entry, is currently working with 19 players with another half dozen expected to join after the end of basketball season. Marilyn Strate will be assistant coach of the 1982 team.

Along with the new coach are a number of new players, and they will be wearing new uniforms this spring. They also hope to be playing on a new field later in the season. Whether there is enough of the 1981 softball squad back for a repeat of last year's success remains to be seen.

"We're tired up, workin' hard and getting some things done," Weaver said. She termed her outlook for this spring "cautiously optimistic."

THE 1981 Lady Wildcats posted a 24-20 record and finished ninth in the NAIA national tourney in Huntsville, Tex. The Central States Intercollegiate Conference, of which WSC is a member, had four teams in the national top 10 last season.

The Lady Cat outfield appears on paper to be the team strength. Letterwinners Lynn Brandt (senior, Papillion), Sue Plumb (sophomore, Kirkman, Iowa), Deb Janssen (Kingsley, Iowa) and Lori Johnson (sophomore, Sioux City, Iowa) are the team's four strongest hitters according to Weaver, and bring experience to her young group. Brandt and Janssen both earned post season honors in NAIA District 11.

In general, Weaver expects the hitting to be strong. Defensively, "It will be challenging for the new faces in the infield to provide the teamwork necessary for a strong unit," Weaver said. Gone from last year's team are the starters at second base, short stop and third base.

Heading up the veteran infielders is junior catcher De-Dee Riney (Elkhorn). Weaver describes her as smart and a leader. Sophomore Maggie Alberts (Lawson, Iowa), a squad member who pitched some last year and may again this year, is the top candidate at second base. Returning squad member Cindy Gessman (Denison, Iowa) is a strong contender for the first base spot.

A NUMBER OF NEW players are being looked at to fill vacant spots at shortstop and third base. Junior Diane Sackett (Newton, Iowa) would see action at either position or possibly first base. Sackett is a junior college transfer who is a decent fielder according to Weaver and brings infield experience to the squad.

A sophomore will lead the team much of the time at first base. Kingery (Iowa) is a former third baseman, according to Weaver. Freshman Carrie (Iowa) is a transfer, may be one of the bright spots, and is a right fielder. Weaver is also looking for a third base and infielder who brings quickness and enthusiasm to the team.

Heading up the pitching staff is senior returnee Cindy Stella (Bellevue, Iowa), who lived in the shadow of departed standout Lynn Larsen for three years. She is "ready to attack" according to Weaver, and good things are expected of her. She is a left pitcher and really irritates pitchers, Weaver noted.

Freshman Laurie Gawn (Sioux City, Iowa) is another "control" or "junk" pitcher but Weaver wouldn't be afraid to let her pitch. Her control is good and she's getting her control down. She's gonna be ready," Weaver said.

At the present time, the Lady Cats are not scheduled to open their season until a March 24 date at Bellevue College. The home opener for Wayne State is set for April 1 against the University of Mary.

MORE INSTRUCTION FOR YOUR MONEY

By Betty Addison

Q. How much good does it actually do for the town when we make purchases here rather than somewhere else?

A. Let's look at a town through a "micro" view. Call the town Supermall only five people: Aaron, Bertha, Charles, Dorothy, and Edith. Economically, the town is stable until Aaron receives ten dollars as a Christmas gift. He buys groceries sold by Bertha, who buys a new dress made by Dorothy, who buys a new battery for a car from Charles, who buys a special homecooked meal from Edith, who puts the money in her savings account, which will be used by the savings loan for a loan to Aaron, who will buy from Charles, etc.

At any point, if one of the people involved in the chain had spent the money out of town, all other economic benefits would have been lost. As things stand, the ten dollars could easily improve the economy of Supermall by ten to twenty times the original value. Even though super-simplified, the "micro" look at a town's economy is very accurate. Think about it the next time you buy.

ALLEN'S NEW MINI MALL, being built by South Sioux City attorney Golby Uhler, has an early rustic frontier American look and will house seven businesses on the first floor and a health club or youth club in the basement. Construction on the mall, which will be called Allen's Frontier Square, was started last November and is expected to be completed this month. In the photo at left, Uhler visits with Ponca businessman Dick Chinn.

Mall

two years said his decision to build the mall was based on his desire to give young persons the opportunity to begin a business. "Small towns are going to have to wake up and revitalize themselves," said Uhler. "Towns such as Allen need to become sold on themselves and attract new things and younger people to the community. Uhler said he feels there is enough support in the immediate trade area to support businesses which will locate in the mall.

Uhler said he bought the McCord building in 1979 as a place to store old cars which he collects.

The building had been empty for a few years and was being used as a storage area for other businesses in Allen.

In addition to his interest in old cars, Uhler also collects old records and books, and operates the USA Coin Co., located in the Southern Hills Mall in Sioux City.

Uhler, a native of Kokomo, Ind., completed law school in 1960 and served as attorney in Sioux City until 1964.

From 1964 to 1966 he was involved in the city's Floyd River relocation and urban renewal projects.

Following the relocation project in Sioux City, Uhler moved to Terra Haute, Ind. where he was director of building and development. He also became involved in urban renewal, relocation and similar projects throughout the country.

In 1971 he went into private law practice in South Sioux City.

Uhler said he hopes Allen's new mall will provide the opportunity for persons, especially young people, to begin a business.

"I believe in small towns as a way of living," said Uhler, adding that residents of small communities need to regenerate the values of living in their town.

Jury

Ford, the same one that had been used by the young wife in an early-morning emergency race to Norfolk's Lutheran Community Hospital in an unsuccessful attempt to save her wounded husband's life.

Kleinschmidt was pronounced dead at the hospital on the morning of Oct. 9, moments after medical staff members there failed to revive him with cardio-pulmonary resuscitation.

Neither Thorne nor his half-sister would elaborate on their plans for the future.

"I want to get some fresh air," Thorne told The Wayne Herald just before leaving the county jail.

Thorne had remained under close guard by the Sheriff's Department throughout the trial. More often than not, his "fresh air" had been limited to the short trip between the county jail and the front doors of the nearby courtroom.

Thorne left an unfinished jigsaw puzzle in his county jail cell, according to Dougherty, who leased his client about wanting to stay and finish it.

Thorne's triumphant cheer — as he entered the county jail to pick up his belongings — had been met by muffled cheers from several prisoners in the lock-up section.

Still appearing drained by the ordeal, Thorne's smile said it all.

But, only moments before, 12 sober-faced jurors had entered the courtroom after the jury foreman, Debra Bodensiedt of Wayne, had signaled to the bailiff, Al Sommers of Norfolk, that a verdict had been reached. It was 2:40 p.m.

Earlier, the jury had returned to courtroom for a few moments during deliberations to get a clarification from Judge Garden on the state's manslaughter law.

After signaling the bailiff, and waiting a few moments for the county attorney to arrive, Judge Garden called the jury into the courtroom at 2:47 p.m.

He asked the jury if it had reached a verdict. The answer was affirmatively, and Judge Garden asked the jury foreman to deliver the three verdict documents to the bench.

After examining the verdict, Garden asked Ostrander, the District court clerk, to read the signed verdict document to the court.

It read not guilty.

Garden then asked for a show of right hands from the jurors to affirm the unanimous verdict.

Twelve right hands were raised.

No more than a dozen spectators were in the courtroom when the verdict came at 2:50 p.m.

Kleinschmidt's widow, the defendant's half-sister was among them.

Seated in the front row, a change from her nearly four days in a back row seat, Criss put her head down and wept.

Mother Hughes, a frail-looking white-haired woman, had joined her daughter on Monday to watch the jury selection and listen to opening statements. The elderly woman sat alone when her daughter testified from the witness stand Monday.

Two friends had joined Kleinschmidt's widow in back row seats on Tuesday. On Wednesday she was alone.

And, on Thursday, when the attorneys presented closing statements, the young mother sat alone.

The judge presented the case to the jury at 11:22. After a half-hour of deliberating, the jury took an hour-long lunch break.

When the jury's verdict was read in open court less than two hours later, Criss Kleinschmidt — now in the front row — sat alone.

Seconds after her half brother was released, she left the courtroom alone.

Court

sister (Criss Kleinschmidt) testified that they had never seen Kleinschmidt turn down a light.

On the afternoon before his death, Kleinschmidt had been on a drinking spree that took him from Wee Town to his southwestern Wayne County home and back into Norfolk to the Fireside Lounge, court testimony revealed.

He assaulted his wife more than once during that drinking spree, the testimony shows.

Twice Kleinschmidt tried to choke his wife while quarreling with her in the public parking lot at the Fireside Lounge. She was attempting to get the family car and called Norfolk police for assistance before ending up with the keys from Kleinschmidt.

Under oath the Nebraska State Patrol officer who gave Kleinschmidt a ride home after his drinking spree testified in the early morning hours of Oct. 9, "he was intoxicated."

Kleinschmidt's threatening language in the patrolcar that night prompted the trooper to suggest canceling the requested ride home "if there was going to be trouble."

When Kleinschmidt walked in to his rural Winside home for the final time about 2 a.m. on Oct. 9, he began breaking kitchen counter glassware and threatening his wife with clenched fists, testimony revealed.

Moments before the shooting incident, court testimony shows, Kleinschmidt struck his wife several times with his fists, breaking his watchband in the process and smashing her glasses.

That violence was accompanied by Kleinschmidt's verbal threats on his wife's life and "the whole family," which included four small Kleinschmidt children, their grandmother and the defendant.

Those threats, the beating of his half-sister while she was attempting to make a telephone call for help and shout to him for help, brought Thorne out of his bedroom with a .22 calibre pistol in his hand, according to the defense attorney.

"That's enough to get the average person out of bed," Dougherty told the jury.

"My client tried to lay open his (Kleinschmidt's) head, but decided he didn't want to hurt him that bad," the defense counsel continued.

Thorne did strike Kleinschmidt on the side of the head from behind, according to testimony.

The two struggled. Thorne had Kleinschmidt in a head lock for a few seconds, but he slipped away.

They then went all in face to face, according to testimony, with the pistol still in Thorne's right hand.

Kleinschmidt, unwilling to head his brother in law's warning to stay back, pressed the fight, according to the testimony, despite the fact that Thorne had by this time cocked the gun in an effort to show he meant business.

Thorne's attention was drawn by a sound. He quickly looked over his left shoulder. He saw nothing, but felt Kleinschmidt jump him, according to testimony.

In his struggle to get free of the fight, Thorne fell backward into the living room wall striking his right shoulder and elbow, the testimony revealed.

The snub nosed pistol, still in Thorne's right hand, went off. The bullet tore into Kleinschmidt's left chest and ripped through his heart.

Kleinschmidt stood facing Thorne for a few moments, then collapsed on the living room floor.
