More lab tests set on city's new well

State Health Department and private laboratory tests continue to show excessive levels of the trace mineral manganese in water from the city's new $50,000 well. As a result, the new well — on the eastern edge of the city — will remain shut down until the city reaches a decision on whether to incur the expense of chemical treatment, according to Phil Kloster, city administrator.

Kloster said the well, which was shut down in early February when state Health Department lab tests showed excessive levels of manganese, has remained unused since the initial shutdown. Kloster said the city has no intention of pumping water from the well until the trace-mineral problem is solved. Four February water tests, one from the state Health Department labs and three from private laboratories, showed "such a variation" in the levels of manganese that "the city has opted to retest the water" at all the labs involved before making a treatment decision, according to Kloster. Kloster said that the lowest level of manganese found by the labs in the new well's water exceeded state limits. The city administrator said he expected the final testing to be completed within a week.

"WE'RE STILL trying to isolate the problem," Kloster said. Manganese is a hard, brittle, grayish-white metallic chemical element. Kloster said there is no health danger to city water users from manganese, particularly since the well has been shut down for more than a month. According to Kloster, manganese problems are correctable and usually require chemical treatment at the water source.

Rural Wayne County couple hears tomorrow's cattle call

By Randall Howell

Bigger
Taller
Longer
Those three words are written in the cattleman's bible by Bev and Jark Beeson of rural Wayne

Those three words are preached at the Beeson's JB Ranch, northeast of Wayne

And, those three words are practiced in the breeding of purebred Polled Herefords on the couple's 360-acre farm, a foundation for cattle factories producing today's leaner, red meat carcasses.

POLLED HEREFORDS are a religion at the Beeson ranch

And, bigger, taller and longer framed carcasses are scripture for the breed's faithful — the Beeson's and their 7-year-old son Jack, a Wayne Elementary School second grader.

"Whenever we get height and length, we seem to get the red meat carcass," explain Bev, who was recently featured in the American Polled Hereford Association's official publication "Polled Hereford World."

"We are working in our breeding program to avoid the fatty carcass," the 50-year-old cattle breeder said.

The Beesons select their Polled Herefords for a number of traits and characteristics.

IMPORTANT IN that selection is ease in calving and milking ability, according to Bev, who was interviewed by the association's Ellen Kapton for the annual distaff issue — a 192-page magazine entitled "Distaff '81" published in November.

The Beesons, who won the female reserve championship at the mid-February 1982 Beef Expo at Des Moines, Iowa, also are breeding Polled Herefords for bigger calves, higher calf survival rate and heavier weaning weight.

As if breeding for those characteristics wasn't enough, the Beesons take their cattle program another step.

"We're also breeding for disposition," Bev explained. "If they haven't got a good disposition, they go

AND, NO MATTER how the red meat carcass eventually scores at the dinner table, the Beesons explained they must continue to breed for live animal "eye appeal," according to Bev, a Polled Hereford convert.

"In the end, we still have to have eye appeal for our customers," she explained. "The cattle have to go out and perform and have eye appeal."

Bev, who grew up around Shorthorns on her father's southwestern Minnesota family farm, switched to Polled Herefords in 1957 after marrying Jack, an Oklahoma native and former herdsman for Leland Herman's Hervale Farms, northeast of Wayne.

Her cattleman father, Dewey Lundstra, was among Minnesota's pioneer Shorthorn breeders and was named "Builder of the Breed" by The American Shorthorn Association.

THE BEESONS are breeding and building more efficient cattle through an intensive Polled Hereford breeding program that they have developed together over the years.

Part of the program comes from the stuff Bev cut her teeth on as a Shorthorn breeder's daughter at Beaver Creek, Minn.

And, part of the program comes from Jack's Oklahoma farm-boy background and nearly 29 years as Hervale Farms herdsman, where Polled Herefords also carry "the day."

"People say this land (in northeast Nebraska) is too expensive to run cattle on it," said Jack, who will turn 53 on St. Patrick's Day (March 17).

Jack doesn't believe it. And, Bev doesn't believe it.

"WE CAN DO IT with Polled Herefords because there is so much food and roughage on cornbelt land," explained Jack, who grew up with beef cattle and wheat on a north central Oklahoma farm near Garber.

Noting that Polled Herefords have built a solid reputation over the years as foragers, Beeson said "there's a lot of feed on corn stalk ground."

The Beesons own pastureland, but come fall they put the Polled Hereford herd on picked corn ground where the cattle winter until spring brings the grass.

"Polled Herefords have become increasingly popular now that the high cost of energy has become a big factor in farming," explained Jack, who first met Bev in 1955 when they traded help at the Sioux Empire Fair at Sioux Falls, S.D.

SHE WAS SHOWING her father's Circle L Shorthorns.

He was showing Hervale Farms Polled Herefords.

Both were on their way to the Minnesota State Fair as part of a series of on-the-road shows taken in by cattle breeders.

Two incumbents nix re-election bids

2 seek Wakefield School Board seats

Two residents of Wakefield have filed for seats on the Wakefield School District Board of Education.

Larry Clay, who is completing his eighth year as a member of the school board, is seeking re-election.

Jim Stout, a non-incumbent, also announced last week he plans to run for the board.

RANDALL LARSON, who is completing his second term (eight years) on the board of education, and Marie Pretzel, who has served one term, chose not to seek re-election.

Board members whose terms do not expire this year are Herman Utecht, Ronnie Wenstrand and Merlin Greve.

CLAY, A 43-year-old school psychologist with Educational Service Unit One (ESU), said his primary reason for seeking re-election was the lack of interest shown in filling the three seats.

"We have a good school and a good school system," said Clay, "and I would like to help maintain that."

Stout, 38, says he is running for a seat on the board of education because he feels people of the community should be involved in what's going on.

A RESIDENT of Wakefield the past 16 years, Clay taught school for one year at Wakefield before joining ESU 15 years ago.

A graduate of Springview High School, he received his bachelor's degree from Hastings College and his master's degree from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln (UN-L).

He has done additional graduate work at both UN-L and the University of South Dakota at Vermillion.

HE TAUGHT school at Osceola for five years prior to moving to Wakefield.

He is a member of the Wakefield Lions Club and several professional organizations.

He and his wife, Bonnie, a film clerk at ESU, are the parents of two children. Mike, 17, is a junior at Wakefield High School. Kristi, 15, is an eighth grader.

STOUT, WHO farms three miles south and a half mile west of Wakefield, is a native of Milligan.

Following graduation from Neligh High School, he farmed three years at Neligh before moving to Wakefield in 1966.

He served six years on the Wakefield Farmers Union Board before retiring last March.

STOUT AND his wife, Barbara, are the parents of three daughters.

The oldest daughter, Angela, 16, is a junior at Wakefield High School. Susan, 14, is an eighth grader, and Becky, 4, is in first grade.

Stouts are members of the Wakefield Covenant Church, where he has held several church board offices. He presently is a church trustee and Sunday school teacher.

THE FILING deadline for non-incumbents seeking a term on the Wakefield Board of Education is March 12.

Wayne lawyer candidate for county attorney post

A veteran Wayne lawyer is seeking election to the post of Wayne County attorney.

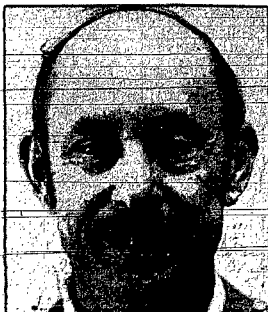

John V. Addison, 57, who has practiced law in Wayne for 24 years, filed Thursday for a spot on the Republican Party ballot in the May 11 primary election.

A 1958 graduate of the University of Nebraska Law School, Addison was in partnership with his father, H.D. Addison, until the attorney's death in 1971.

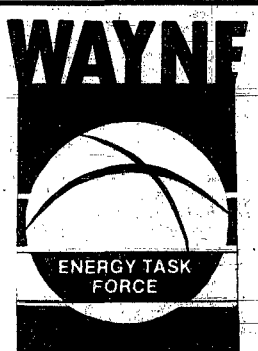

ADDISON'S FILING, the third time he has sought the post, forces the campaign for county attorney into a primary election contest since he is the second Republican Party candidate to seek the office.

Energy Task Force unveils official logo

Members of the Wayne Energy Task Force got a first-hand look at the organization's new logo during a regular meeting at Allied Lumber & Supply last week.

Designed and developed by Wayne artist Pearl Hansen, the logo will be used as a task force symbol, according to John Vakoc, chairman.

The logo features a circle within a square, and utilizes the strength of black and white graphics, according to Hansen, a veteran Wayne State College art instructor.

"I WANTED something that was simple and strong graphically," Hansen told The Wayne Herald.

Several months in the development and design stage, the new logo was sought by the group "to easily identify information and projects coming from the task force," explained Vakoc.

The March unveiling of the new task force logo coincides with Gov. Charles Thone's proclamation declaring the month as "Energy Conservation Month in Nebraska."

Hansen said she worked from several ideas offered by the committee through Vakoc before finally arriving at the circle and square design.

"I'm sure a lot of people will think the circle represents the sun," she said. "But, to me, the circle is an energy-filled kind of symbol."

news briefs

Home energy workshop slated

Jim Bowman, extension program manager of the Nebraska Solar Office, will instruct a "Converting Existing Homes for Energy Efficiency Workshop" on Tuesday, March 16, from 7 to 10 p.m. at Northeast Technical Community College, Norfolk.

Topics to be covered include conservation techniques for reducing heating and cooling loads, methods of storing heat within a house, sun screens and night insulation for windows, venting and passive solar cooling techniques, sunspaces/greenhouse additions, active solar collection, and federal and state tax incentives.

For more information contact Jim Bowman, Nebraska Solar Office, W191 Nebraska Hall, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Lincoln, Neb., 68588-0526, or telephone (402) 472-3414.

City Council meets Tuesday

The Wayne City Council will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in City Hall.

On the agenda for the meeting is consideration of two ordinances on rezoning and review of bids for a city police car.

The Council also is expected to consider approval of plans and specs for the city's electric distribution project and the waste water treatment plant.

No school for kindergarteners

Dave Luff, principal of Wayne's Elementary School, said there will be no morning and afternoon classes for kindergarteners only on Friday, March 26.

Luff said Kindergarten Round-up will be held that day for next year's prospective kindergarteners.

Delegate filing deadline near

The filing deadline for delegates to the Wayne County Republican Party convention and the Wayne County Democratic Party convention is Friday, March 12.

Any voter registered in the county qualifies as a delegate to the convention of their political choice after filing at the Wayne County Clerk's office.

police report

Wayne police are seeking a subject who vandalized a car in The Wayne Herald parking lot Thursday night.

According to police, the subject entered an unlocked 1961 Buick owned by Kim Kalpust of Wayne. Once inside, the subject took the rear-view mirror, twisted the gearshift lever and broke the turn-signal lever.

Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $50. Kalpust told police the vandalism occurred between 10:30 p.m. Thursday and 1 a.m. Friday.

IN ANOTHER INCIDENT, police recovered two city-owned picnic tables from 111 Lincoln Street at 1 p.m. Thursday.

And, police and Wayne Volunteer Fire Department units responded to a chimney fire at 6:30 p.m.

The fire, which was brought under control within minutes, was in a house chimney at 515 Fourth Street west.

Police also issued a citation to a dog-owner Thursday after the dog was reported running at large in the 800 Block of Lincoln Street.

Also, tender-bender accidents kept police officers busy after the late winter snowstorm earlier this week.

ON WEDNESDAY, police were called to the scene of an accident between a tractor trailer and a car in the 500 Block of Seventh Street west.

Police said a 1978 Plymouth, driven by Doris Clausen of Carroll, was struck by the Waldbaum's tractor trailer about 6 p.m.

The tractor trailer driver, Jerry J. Saltzman of South Sioux City, has stopped his rig behind another Waldbaum truck that was stalled on an icy hill, police said.

While Saltzman was out of the truck asking Clausen to back out of the way, the tractor trailer slid backwards down the hill into the car's front end skidding the automobile backwards, according to police.

ON THURSDAY, police investigated an accident in the 300 Block of Twelfth Street west.

According to police, a 1965 Mercury, driven by James N. Scott of Wayne, was eastbound on Twelfth Street at 12:50 p.m. when he lost control of the vehicle and slid into the left front of a parked 1979 Chevrolet Suburban.

The Suburban, owned by Richard Wurdinger, was parked on the north side of the street facing west at the time of the accident.

At 5 p.m., police were called to the scene of an accident in the 400 Block of Ninth Street east between Bradley Hansen of Cherokee, Iowa and Tim W. Corbit of Wayne.

ACCORDING TO police, the Hansen car, a 1971 AMC Hornet, entered the street from the alley and failed to yield to the Corbit car, a 1975 Ford.

The Corbit car, which was westbound, struck the Hansen vehicle, according to police.

At 10:37 Thursday, police investigated a two-car accident at the intersection of Main Street and Fairgrounds Avenue between Kathy J. Kinning of Pender and Steven Hanzlik of Norfolk.

Police said the Hanzlik car, a 1963 Buick, had stopped to make a left turn and was hit by the Kinning car, a 1977 Dodge.

According to police, the Kinning car was unable to stop because of the icy street surface.

ON FRIDAY, police investigated an accident at the intersection of Tenth Street west and Pearl Street.

According to police, a 1980 Chevrolet driven by Darlene S. Dvorak of Brainard, was making a left turn onto Tenth Street when it struck a parked 1975 Chevrolet owned by Michael Meistrick of Norfolk.

Police said the Meistrick auto was illegally parked on the south side of the street when the 1:29 p.m. accident occurred.

Christine Hamm, daughter of Deardrill Hamm of Winside and Melva Tramer of Craig, recently enlisted in the U.S. Air Force's Delayed Enlistment Program (DEP). According to Msgr. Ron Marshall, Air Force representative in Norfolk, Airman Hamm will enter active duty Nov. 15, 1982 and has selected the General Technical career area for training after completing the Air Force's six week basic training course.

According to Marshall, the delayed program is for qualified applicants who have reserved an Air Force job or received an Air Force assignment. The time spent in the DEP will increase a member's seniority for pay purposes once on active duty.

Hamm is a 1980 graduate of Winside High School.

Howdy. March is a time when the pace of outdoor activity picks up a bit on the farms of rural America. No matter how right the groundhog was in February, March warms the blood in the veins of farmers, young and old alike. And, though cropland may still be under several inches of snow or icy run-off water, the toolshed takes on the look of a farm-machinery factory as the implements of plowing and planting are made ready for spring's work.

THE EXCITEMENT that comes with spring's work can put a smile on the face of the crustiest curmudgeon in the country. And, the machinery preparation for those endless days in the field can be just as exciting. It was always an opportunity for me to learn some things about machines and how they work. That knowledge often saved the day, or at least part of the day, later on when the machinery was breaking down in the field and my father was fit to be tied. He was always in a better mood during March, when we would work together tuning up tractor engines and repairing the damage done to implements during the previous season's fieldwork.

I DON'T REMEMBER my mother getting all that excited about it. But, she probably had her reasons. I think her reasons probably had something to do with the fact that, after a winter of barnyard manure, her husband and sons were now adding gasoline, diesel fuel, grease and oil to the mess. She was always somewhat chagrined by the fact that country boys, grease and barnyard manure seemed to mix so well. She never quite seemed willing to accept the well known fact that a country boy just couldn't fix anything unless he was up to his ears in grease. Besides, it was good for chapped hands.

THE RUSH TO get the machinery ready made after school hours twice as busy and kept me from straying too far away from home on weekends. Had we had a heated toolshed where the work could have been done during January and February, things might have been different. But, I doubt it. Farmers are people, too. And, that means they procrastinate like everyone else does. So, getting the machinery ready at the last minute was all part of being an agricultural person. Work on the tractors always began first. And, to me, it was always the most rewarding. That's when I got my first lessons on the internal-combustion engine. It's also where I first learned that spark plugs can and will bite.

THE FIRST COUPLE of years that I helped overhaul the tractor engine, I was more confused than enlightened. But, eventually, the engineering that goes into the agricultural tractor made some sense to me. I actually began to understand how the whole thing worked.

I'm sure my father became quite exasperated waiting for me to catch on to the mechanical basics of engines, transmissions and rear-end gear boxes. But, not everyone's a mechanic, right? Someone has to clean the radiator, change the oil, replace the transmission fluid and hand wrenches to the mechanic. Sooner or later (probably later), the world of pistons, rings, valves, camshafts, lifters, magnetos and carburetors opened to me.

IT STILL TOOK me a long time, though, to get anything to run right after I put it back together. My father, who is a good mechanic, was an excellent, but tough teacher. And, for years after I learned to overhaul engines, it was he who could bring the pistons to life when all else failed.

It got frustrating, sometimes, to work for weeks on a simple, four cylinder, gasoline engine that just wouldn't start until he offered a few suggestions drawn from years of experience with balky tractors.

When I was a young country boy, we had International Harvester's Farmall line -- the basic red Farmall M and Super H.

THAT M SOON became a Super M at the mechanical hands of my father. Remind me, someday, to tell you the story about that old M. She was like a sister to me. In her prime, she could out-pull, out-plow, out plant and out-run anything in the county.

But, back to the shop. Part of getting the machinery ready for spring's work involved modifying it so that the Howells boys could run it.

We all started field work at a younger age than any of the neighbor's sons. And, that meant that we were always short on one end when it came to reaching the pedals, levers, trip ropes and other gadgets that operated the tractors and implements.

FOUR-BY-FOUR blocks bolted to clutch pedals and brake pedals put the command of a tractor within my reach. That didn't necessarily mean I could disengage the stiff clutch on a Farmall M, but that did put it within reach of my short legs.

To push the clutch in, I still had to brace myself by grabbing hold of the crossbar that supported the headlights. Then, with the clutch disengaged, I was able to quickly slip the tractor into gear by freeing one hand while holding on for dear life with the other.

One slip and the clutch would pop, often killing the engine in a tractor-jerking fashion that bruised my arms and sometimes my chin as I flew against the steering wheel.

MY FATHER WELDED extensions onto the hydraulic levers and the power-take-off rod. That way, I wouldn't have to get down off the seat, mounted on the tractor platform, to operate the levers.

Although, as I recall, we didn't have much that operated with hydraulics. Most of our machinery involved dead-bolt hitches to stationary drawbars.

The plows, which did have break-away hitches to protect them from rocks, were all operated with levers and trip ropes. Sometimes, I recall, I took three or four passes along the headland of a field before I could get those plows to drop into the James River Valley loam.

FOR YEARS, I didn't have the strength to pull that trip rope while fighting the steering wheel of a tractor that wanted to go everywhere but down the furrow.

And, in addition to lacking the strength, I wasn't long enough to reach the steering wheel with one hand and the plow's trip rope with the other.

You had to be able to do a spread-eagle reach from the tractor seat, always keeping a foot near the clutch should something go wrong.

The other foot always had to be near the brakes just in case the tractor needed a reminder that would force it to follow the command of the steering wheel.

So, with one arm occupied by the need for a hand on the constantly moving steering wheel, the other arm was stretched to the trip rope on the trailing plow.

MORE THAN ONCE I was jerked out of the tractor seat after picking up the trip rope while it slackened in a turn and stretched in a straightaway.

Those trip ropes were always knotted by my father to give me a better grip in the field. It was all part of the machinery preparation each March. He knew that readying our farm machinery meant more than just oiling and greasing the moving parts.

Even the seat on the tractors had to be moved forward so that my stubby little legs could reach the wooden blocks already mounted on the clutch and brakes.

The Farmall M and H series were rowcrop tractors and did not have fenders. Remaining in the seat between the two huge rubber-banded rear tires was important.

SO, WHILE MY father kept busy modifying the farm equipment, I made myself useful, scraping off last year's grease, cleaning the dirt and dust from the implements and thoroughly oiling and greasing anything that moved.

The chains and gears that were frozen by rust, had to be cleaned and polished and lubricated.

And, of course, the tires on the equipment had to be in working order. For some reason, the tires on farm equipment always seem to go flat during the winter months.

That always meant that I had to tear them down, search for holes in the tubes and remount them for spring's work.

To this day, I don't mind grease and oil, skinned knuckles from wrenches or balky engines half as much as I hate tires.

ANY COUNTRY BOY who has had to pry a cold tire off a rim and pound it back on knows what I'm talking about.

You have to be mean with a hammer and it helps to be packing some weight behind it. I was mean enough as a little feller, but I didn't pack enough weight to make a hammer any kind of a threat to a stiff implement tire.

My father, who sometimes was amused by my fancies with tires, often would tell me to get a bigger hammer. That kind of move always put my own fingers and toes in great danger.

And, as a young country boy, one of the things that frustrated me the most was that a grown farmer could always feel free to cuss his brains out at a ornery piece of equipment.

CUSSING WAS not an outlet I was free to choose when I was having trouble with an uncooperative piece of equipment. I always thought that was terribly unfair.

After my knuckles had been skinned and my fingers had been bruised, I just didn't feel like saying "jeepers."

I wanted to holler like hell. Sometimes, I had to walk all the way to the barn before I could do it.

Then, on the way back, I'd have to think of a good reason for going there in the first place. Catch you next week...

State aid dispersal a serious dilemma

We have passed the half way point in this legislative session. This past week marked the 30th day in our 60 day short session. There still are hundreds of bills to deal with, and many of those are concerned with controversial issues.

One of those issues is how to divide the $70 million used to provide state financial aid to local governments, better known to many of us as the personal property tax relief fund. The problem is how to divide that money in a way that is constitutional. In 1980 the state Supreme Court ruled that the formula now used to divide the money is unconstitutional.

The Revenue Committee has been holding public hearings all this week on a number of bills that deal with the problem. Some of the measures under consideration are:

LB 816, INTRODUCED by the Revenue Committee. The bill would combine the $70 million personal property tax reimbursement fund and the $12.6 million local subdivision aid fund.

School districts would share in $45 million distributed through state aid to educational cities would share $18.9 million; and technical community colleges would share $2 million. County governments would not have to share in the cost of Medicaid, which currently costs them $16.7 million.

LB 822 would distribute the $70 million to counties according to the proportion of property taxes paid in a county compared to the statewide total.

LB 963, like LB 816; combines personal property reimbursement and local subdivision funds. The intent of the bill is to delay the question until the state Supreme Court acts on the Attorney General's appeal. The bill would distribute the funds next year under the formula now in effect.

LB 878 simply extends the interim formula now in effect for another year. The Revenue Committee expects to make a decision on this state aid distribution issue in the near future.

Hospital guidelines inequitable

Some constituents from Gresham recently brought to my attention an inequity in the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) guidelines for low cost or free care in hospitals that have received Hill-Burton funds.

Income eligibility guidelines for the Hill-Burton program provide for a lower income eligibility threshold for farm families than for non-farm families.

FOR EXAMPLE, in the continental United States, the Hill-Burton threshold for non-farm families of four is currently $8,450. The figure for farm families is $7,100 per year -- a difference of nearly 15 percent.

The assumption is that farm families don't need as much income as non-farm families, apparently because of the amount of food grown on the farm. That assumption is no longer realistic in the days of specialized farming operations.

I have written to HHS Secretary Richard Schweiker and asked him to review this and other regulations that make similar assumptions. I have pointed out to the Secretary the extent to which modern farm families are affected by the economy and requested that he eliminate this disparity.

JOB SERVICE -- Several weeks ago I discussed the importance of keeping Nebraska's Job Service offices open. I supported a successful effort to provide $2.3 billion to keep these offices open nationwide. Recently I received a report on the number of placements made by these offices in Nebraska.

As of Sept. 30, 1981, the end of the fiscal year, Nebraska Job Service offices had found employment for 69,541 people, including 2,654 veterans, 8,139 minorities, 20,981 women, and 31,691 young people.

ANYONE 65 OR older is entitled to an extra tax exemption of $1,000. This means an automatic additional reduction to income of $1,000 for single persons, and $2,000 for a married couple, both 65 or older, who file a joint return.

Single persons 65 or over do not have to file a federal income tax return if their income was less than $4,300. The limit for a married couple, filing a joint return, with only one spouse 65 or older, is $6,400; $7,400 if both spouses are 65 or over. For tax purposes, persons are considered to be 65 on the day before their 65th birthday.

An important benefit to keep in mind is that Social Security payments are not taxable. The same holds true for Railroad Retirement benefits.

Another special benefit is the "Credit for the Elderly." The credit can, in some cases, but not all, reduce taxes owed by as much as $375 for single persons and $562.50 for married couples who file a joint return. Although the credit generally applies to persons 65 or older, it is available to those under 65 if they have a taxable pension from a public retirement system.

PERSONAL RESIDENCE -- People over 65 who are thinking about selling their personal residence should consider the once-ina-lifetime $100,000 or $125,000 exclusion of the gain on the sale of their home.

If you sold your home before July 20, 1981, the exclusion is up to $125,000. An awareness of the tax consequences is essential before selling a personal residence at any age, but doubly so for those age 55 or older to whom this benefit applies.

You can obtain information and assistance by calling the Taxpayer Information number listed in your telephone directory. In Lincoln, the number is 477-6081. In other areas of Nebraska, it is (800) 642-9960.

Games people play

It is clear that there is much more to an Education Service Unit One meeting than meets the public eye.

It also is clear that there is much more to the day-to-day functioning of the unit at the administrative level than meets the public eye.

The recent controversy involving special education services in Knox County is testimony to that.

Furthermore, it appears that the one man who could have prevented the problem did not do so.

Instead, the district administrator watched, with very little comment, while ESU board members publicly slapped the wrists of their Knox County clients over the retention of special education services supervisor.

The wrist-slapping, which occurred at the ESU board's February meeting, eventually brought Knox County school administrators to the March meeting.

During that meeting, it became quite clear that information had been available for some time that could have prevented the problem from developing in the first place.

However, the ESU board members did not have that information. But, the unit's administrator, who serves at the pleasure of that board, did have the information.

The upshot is that after an executive session at last Tuesday night's meeting, the administrator got his wrists slapped.

And, the Knox County school administrators got an apology in addition to a promise that a board committee would work with them in an effort to solve the misunderstanding.

Last week the ESU administrator praised the qualifications and credentials of Richard Genovese, the supervisor caught in the middle of the controversy. In fact, he said the supervisor's qualifications exceeded those of his other three supervisors -- Duane Tappe, Gary Vopalsky and Larry Clay.

Ironically, only four weeks before that, Harry Mills would not even give the board a recommendation to extend Genovese's contract, let alone give him a pay raise.

This happened at a time when Knox County school administrators were recommending Genovese not only get a contract extension, but also get a substantial pay raise -- one beyond that Mills recommended for his three Wakefield-based supervisors -- for the Knox County based supervisor's contribution to their program.

After sifting through the public information available from both monthly meetings, an observer couldn't help but wonder what kind of games are being played at the ESU One headquarters in Wakefield.

The problem appears to have all the drama of backroom political power plays; but few of the rewards.

To the editor: The members of the Wayne Women's Club join me in complimenting you and Lavonne Beckman Anderson for such complete coverage through pictures and articles of the recent annual Fine Arts Festival.

It might interest you to know that this has been an annual event for the Wayne Women's Club since the 1965-1966 club year. In the past the Wayne Women's Club has hosted the District III Fine Arts Festival which includes about 50 clubs in this area. These events have provided an excellent opportunity for schools to encourage students in art work, sewing and musical performances. Opportunities are open to clubwomen and others interested in sewing, speech, essay writing, crafts and art.

The Wayne Women's Club is a non-profit volunteer organization which has justly earned its place in the Wayne community since its organization in 1919. Thank you for your continuing support in telling our story. Janice Predohl, Chairman Wayne Women's Club Fine Arts Festival

PAUL BURMAN, COOPERATIVE weather observer from Wakefield, collects weather data from equipment housed inside a small hut in his back yard. In the photo at right, Paul displays some of the drawings he has done throughout the years.

Weather watcher

Wakefield weather observer loves his work — and life

By LaVon Anderson

For 22 years, Paul Burman has been the man Wakefield residents rely on to tell them how much it snowed, how hard the wind blew, how many inches of rain fell, or how low the temperatures dropped.

The 65 year old Wakefield resident has been a cooperative weather observer in Wakefield, "an unpaying job," he laughs, since 1960.

Burman took over the position from Walt Moller, who has since moved to Wayne, served as Wakefield's cooperative weather observer from 1953 to 1960.

PRIOR TO Moller, cooperative weather observers in Wakefield included Hubert Eaton, 1949-53; C. E. Johnson, 1945-49; Charles Long, 1920-44; Richard Chinn, 1918-20; S. H. King, 1917; E. J. Dunlop, 1916; and J. H. Weaver, 1894 to 1916.

"People don't realize the amount of time and work involved in being a weather observer," smiles Burman.

"The weather story in Nebraska is always changing," he laughs, "and if you don't like the weather, just wait a few minutes — it will change."

BURMAN'S interest in climatology developed many years before he became Wakefield's official weather observer.

A native of Wakefield, he attended Wayne State College for three and a half years after graduating from Wakefield High School.

His course of studies at Wayne State included five hours of geology and five hours of climatology and meteorology under Professor F. G. Dale.

"The meteorology class was kind of complicated," smiles Paul. "There weren't over 10 students in the class."

Following college, Paul spent one year in the service, where he played coronet in the 35th Division Band.

AFTER THE service, Paul returned to Wakefield and to the dairy career he became involved in while still a student in college.

His fancy for horses goes back many years, and he still rides horseback three hours a day, except during the cold months of January, February and March.

The horses, which are stabled in a large barn out back of his neat brick house on the east edge of town, include one saddlebred and two quarter horses.

"Riding horseback is the most relaxing thing there is," smiles Paul. "I don't need any nerve pills to go to sleep at night."

PAUL HAS raised horses for many years and has displayed them in shows throughout the country.

Although his horse showing days are over now, Paul's home is filled with pictures of his prize winning horses, and he loves to display the many trophies and ribbons he's won during the years.

At the Denver Stock Show, he showed three breeds of horses, Arabians, quarter horses, and American saddlebreds.

His horses also have traveled to shows in Omaha, Sioux City and Sioux Falls.

"HORSES ARE an expensive hobby," says Paul.

During the 1930's, Paul could purchase a 20 ton truck of hay for $200. Today, the same amount of hay costs him over $2,000.

Paul also remembers the time he bought oats for 10 to 15 cents a bushel. Today, he pays $2.10 a bushel.

WHEN HE'S not riding his horses, Paul might be found drawing them.

Paul, who has drawn "ever since I can remember," shuffles through his pictures until he finds one of a horse and cowboy.

The picture was drawn in 1923, when Paul was just a second grader.

"I've always been a big fan of horses," smiles Paul.

ALTHOUGH PICTURES of horses which Paul has drawn hang throughout his house, there are also pictures of ships, wildlife of all kinds, and people and scenes familiar to him.

A beautiful artist, who says he can draw "most anything," Paul designs his own Christmas cards each year to send to family and friends.

"I could draw a picture of you, and I bet it would be better than a photograph," says Paul with a twinkle in his eye.

PAUL'S LIFE has been as changing and as varied as the weather he's been observing the past 22 years.

"I sort of fell into this weather observing thing," says Paul.

When Wakefield announced his retirement as a cooperative weather observer, a field man came to Paul's door looking for directions to the Moller home.

"He said he was in a predicament," smiles Paul, "and he asked if I knew anyone who would be willing to take over Moller's weather observing job."

"If you think I'd be adequate, I'd take it," Paul told the fieldman.

Paul, with his background in climatology, of course got the job.

He is among 225 cooperative weather observers in Nebraska, and 12,500 weather observers throughout the country.

THE WEATHER Service furnished him with the necessary equipment, including a maximum and minimum thermometer, and a rain gauge.

That equipment is kept inside of a "shed" but which stands several feet off the ground in back of Paul's house.

Since then, Paul has purchased several pieces of weather equipment of his own.

A $100 anemometer which Paul bought several years ago, measures the wind velocity. "I've seen that go up to 82 miles per hour in a bad wind storm," he says.

Paul also owns a barometer, two recording thermometers, and a humidity gauge.

PAUL LOVES to observe the weather, however he admits it's a "pretty disgusting job in the winter time."

Although it is only necessary that Paul check his equipment at the end of the Weather Bureau day, which is 5 p.m., he says curiosity leads him to check his equipment anywhere from four to five times a day.

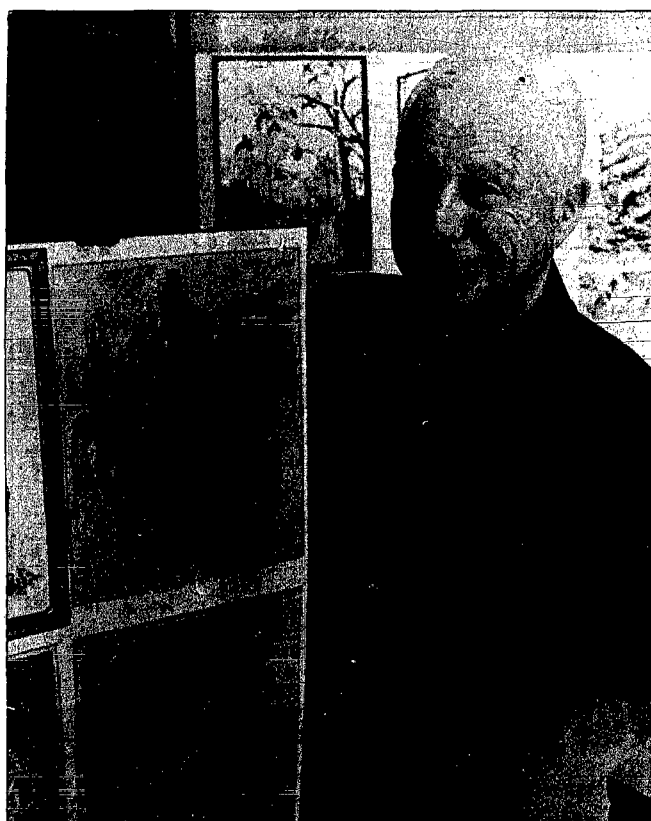

Paul says he's hardly ever missed a reading. "I've got the horses to feed and I'm home just about all the time."

"Observing the weather is actually a pretty soft job," laughs Paul.

PAUL'S WEATHER observations are sent each week to the Weather Service in Omaha.

From there, forms with his weather observations are sent to Lincoln, Norfolk, and Asheville, N. C., where all the records are processed.

If the precipitation in Wakefield is over half an inch, Paul places a call to the Norfolk flood service.

"They've got to get the water running the right way you know," laughs Paul.

PAUL LOVES to talk about the weather and each week sends a report of his weather observations to the local newspaper, The Wakefield Republican.

During his 22 years as a weather observer, he has sent over 1,100 weekly reports to the newspaper.

He says he often receives weather data inquiries from insurance companies and attorneys concerning temperatures, fog visibility, and ice conditions.

"Nebraska probably has a harsher climate than anywhere else in the nation," says Paul.

Daily temperature increases of as much as 40 to 50 degrees, and hourly increases of 20 degrees have been recorded in the state.

"THE CHANGING of the seasons is a show we've all seen before, but never tire of," smiles Paul.

"Each day has an individual personality. It's all in the records — and in the memories of many persons."

Paul doesn't have any plans to retire soon as a weather observer.

He's good at his job, and throughout the years he received the awards to prove it.

PAUL'S INTEREST in Wakefield reaches far beyond it's numerical weather data figures.

His Wakefield roots go deep. His grandparents were the first Swedish family to move to the community.

Paul was a member of the Wakefield Hospital board for nine years, serving as chairman of the board for eight years, and was a member of the steering committee for the Extended Care Wing of the Wakefield Health Care Center.

He is a past president of the Wakefield Community Club, and served as a 4-H leader for many years.

EVEN THOUGH he is retired, Paul rises each morning at 4:45.

He does 300 push-ups and 100 sit-ups before breakfast, and goes up and down the stairs 50 times.

"I've done that ever since I retired," he says. Despite his handsome physical appearance and pleasant, outgoing personality, Paul has managed to remain a bachelor all these years.

"That wasn't easy," he laughs. "I use to date all the time, but after you get so old you kind of slow down."

briefly speaking

Babysitting clinic postponed

The final session of a Babysitting Clinic sponsored by Wayne County Jayceettes, scheduled Tuesday, March 9, has been postponed.

Mindy Lutt, a Jaycee member, said the final session will be held Tuesday, March 16 at 4 p.m. in the Redeemer Lutheran Church social room.

Youths who have completed all four sessions will receive a certificate at the final session.

97th birthday observed

Mrs. Mary Langenberg of Norfolk, formerly of Hoskins, observed her 97th birthday on Monday, March 1.

Mrs. Langenberg was honored on Sunday, Feb. 28, during a dinner in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frances Uirlich of Norfolk.

Relatives visited in Mrs. Langenberg's home Monday evening.

Mrs. Langenberg and her husband resided in the Hoskins community until 1951 when they retired and moved to Norfolk. She is an honorary member of the Highland Woman's Extension Club of Hoskins.

There are five children, 13 grandchildren, and 21 great grandchildren.

Club plans 40th anniversary

Hillside Club will observe its 40th anniversary on Sunday, April 18, at 2 p.m. in the Woman's Club room of the Wayne city auditorium.

Former members will be invited, and hostess will be Dorothy Grone.

Plans for the observance were made when the club met March 2 with Florence Rethwisch. Twelve members and one guest, Mrs. Dale Johnson, attended.

Members answered roll call with a flower bulb exchange. Honored with the birthday song were Elaine Vahlkamp, Elma Gilliland, Janet Reeg and Dorothy Grone.

Pitch furnished the entertainment, with prizes going to Linda Dorcay, Janet Reeg and Irene Temme.

Ballroom dancing postponed

An adult education class in ballroom dancing, which was scheduled to begin in Wayne on Tuesday, March 9, has been postponed until next fall.

The class is sponsored by Wayne Carroll High School, Wayne State College, and Northeast Technical Community College, Norfolk.

Program on house plants

Acme Club met last Monday in the home of Jean Bentback, with 13 members present.

Bonadell Koch gave the thought for the day. Mary Doeschler included roll call with her program on house plants and their care. Members brought growing plants to exchange, with comments about their growth and care.

Mrs. Doeschler also read "Green is the Color of My True Love's Thumb."

Next meeting will be March 15 in the home of Irma Hingst. Betty Wittig will have the program, and roll call will be "My Favorite Cooking Tool."

Selected for honor roll

Mike Voog of Wayne has been named to the academic honor roll for the first quarter at Western Iowa Technical Community College in Sioux City.

He achieved a 4.0 grade point, the highest grade attainable, in the machinist program.

Secret sisters revealed

Club 15 met in the home of Mary Nichols on Feb. 17. Secret sisters were revealed and homemade valentines exchanged.

New names were drawn for secret sisters. This year's officers are Viola Meyer, president; Carol Baier, vice president; Hazel Roberts, secretary-treasurer; and Sandra Lutt, news reporter.

Myra Foote was in charge of the entertainment. Tripoley was played.

Plans were made for a family polluck supper at 6:30 p.m. March 20 in the Columbus Federal community room.

County Right to Life sponsoring breakfast

Wayne County Right to Life met last Tuesday in the home of Joann Ostrander.

The group will sponsor an egg with ham breakfast on Sunday, March 28, in the Woman's Club room of the Wayne city auditorium.

Serving will be from 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and the public is invited.

Family tickets may be purchased for $8.50. Individual tickets are $2 for adults, and $1.50 for youngsters 12 years of age and younger. Youngsters five years and younger will be admitted free.

A banquet will be held Saturday evening with guest speaker, Jane Muldoon of Michigan, vice president of the National Right to Life.

NEXT MEETING of Wayne County Right to Life will be at 7:30 p.m. April 6 in the Fred Mann home.

PREPARATIONS were made for the Nebraska Coalition for policy on weddings

The Wayne Herald success team success and photographic of wedding-loving families living in the Wayne area.

Because our readers are interested in current news, we put the off wedding and photographs offered for publication in our office weekly. 30 days after the date of publication, the photograph submitted with a picture editor's decision will not be carried as a story but will be used in a column underneath the picture. Wedding pictures submitted after the story appears in the paper must be in our office within three weeks after the ceremony.

Goldenrod Hills Agency gets favorable rating

A state evaluation team appointed by Governor Charles Thone has given the Goldenrod Hills Community Action Agency at Walthill a favorable rating according to Donna Clark, Goldenrod Hills executive director.

Mrs. Clark explained at a monthly board of directors meeting that the team reviewed community action agencies across Nebraska to determine how community service block grants should be distributed next year.

The evaluation team was made up of five members of the State Department of Public Welfare and reviewed the agency, its programs and participants.

MRS. CLARK explained a new reimbursement program for senior citizens meals paid to Goldenrod by the Welfare Program.

The state welfare department has reduced payment from $2.25 to $1.85 for home delivered meals and from $2 to $1.75 for meals served at senior centers. The cuts go into effect immediately.

In other action, the Goldenrod Hills Board sealed two new directors, Richard Clinin of Ponca and Mel Murphy of Wisner.

Randy's Recap

By Randy Hascall

WHEN I TOLD Edna Meyer last week that I hoped David Lipscomb College would draw Kearney State in the first round of the NAIA Basketball Tournament and beat the Antelopes, I had no idea that it could come true.

However, David Lipscomb, coached by Wayne native Don Meyer, did draw Kearney in the first round and will get the opportunity to play the Antelopes at 10:45 tonight (Monday).

David Lipscomb College, located in Nashville, Tenn., just ran its regular season record to 32-4 and qualified for nationals by downing Carson Newman 86-76. Coach Meyer, son of Don and Edna Meyer of Wayne, has his work cut out for him in David Lipscomb's first appearance in the national tourney.

Playing Kearney in a post-season tournament is like walking a circus high wire—one slip and you're through. The Antelopes (23-8) struggled earlier this season but are peaking now that tournament time approaches.

Kearney has plenty of experience in national tournament play and could be the sleeper of the tourney. The Nebraska state college has been a basketball power for years.

David Lipscomb is fifth seeded in the 17 team field. I suppose if I was a good Nebraskan I would be cheering for Kearney. After all, the Antelopes build their successful teams with good true-blooded Nebraskans year after year. And Kearney is a representative of the Central States Intercollegiate Conference, of which Wayne State is a member.

But, my Wayne State blood flows deep. Kearney has always been an arch rival of the Wildcats. A Wayne State alumnus rooting for Kearney at nationals is like a Nebraska football fan cheering for Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. I just can't do it. Many folks can but not me.

Besides, Meyer is a graduate of Wayne High School and his parents are friends of mine. I say, "Go David Lipscomb!"

Thanks to Norris and Helen Weible, the Meyers will get to see their son's team in action for the first time since the 1978-79 season.

The four Wayne residents plan to be in Kansas City's Kemper Arena for the late tip off. Also hoping to journey south are the coach's sister Nancy and Scott Ligenteller, both employees at Midwest Federal.

OLD-TIMERS WRESTLING is deceiving. When I think of "old-timers" I think of white haired men with wrinkled faces and walking canes. Participants in the so-called old timers meets are a far cry from that description.

Many of these old-timers are former college wrestlers. The others are high school wrestlers. Some are wrestling coaches and most are in tip top condition.

The Crete Old Timers Tournament drew several wrestlers from the Wayne area. Winside coach Paul Sok, Wakefield assistant Dan Heeren and WSC grad Don Sher-nikau all competed at Crete. All are former Wayne State wrestlers.

Sok didn't lose a match but finished third at 145 pounds. He won four matches and wrestled to a scoreless tie with two-time All-American Dennis Cozad of Omaha.

The tournament was set up according to international rules with each weight class divided into two pools. The winner of one pool wrestles the winner of the other pool for the title.

Cozad and Sok tied for first in their group but Cozad was selected to wrestle in the finals because he pinned an opponent while Sok won by default over that wrestler. Jay Swanson, another two-time All-American edged Cozad 4-3 for the title.

Heeren won three matches and lost one to place third in the 172-pound class. His only loss was to the champion at that weight.

Shernikau placed third at 135 pounds by winning four matches and losing one. Another local wrestler, Greg Lage won the 165-pound weight class. Brothers of Heeren and Shernikau also participated in the meet.

A Wayne wrestling club for old-time wrestlers has been formed and workouts for anyone who is interested are held from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays in the Rice Auditorium basement.

An old-timers meet is scheduled Saturday, March 27 in the Wayne High gym. To enter, contact Don Koenig at either the Wayne Middle School or Wayne Elementary School.

Wayne State soph earns All-America status in hurdles

With three full track and field seasons left in her career, Wayne State sophomore Kelley Peterson is looking forward to a bright future.

The WSC hurdler placed sixth in the 60 yard hurdles last week in the NAIA national indoor track meet. She is the first Wayne State female to ever place in a national meet.

HER TIME of 8.6 seconds in the 40-yard hurdles not only earned her a sixth place medal but also qualified her as an All-American.

The sophomore from Nehawka led the Lady Wildcats' track team last year. She placed second and third respectively in the 100-meter dash and 100-meter hurdles at the Wayne State Invitational last spring.

She won gold medals in both events at the NAIA District 11 Meet last year and placed first in the 100-meter dash at the Central States Intercollegiate Conference Meet. Peterson, who holds the Wayne State record for the 100-meter dash, qualified for nationals in the dash and hurdles as a freshman.

Peterson will test her skills soon on the home oval as the outdoor track season opens March 25 when Wayne State hosts Westmar College and Morningside College in a triangular.

ANOTHER ALL-AMERICAN hurdler will join Peterson in that meet. Ed Blackburn, an All-American in track and football, will try to recover the form that led him to a sixth place finish in the national outdoor track meet last year.

He also competed in last week's national indoor meet but came up short of a second short of qualifying for semifinals in the 60-yard high hurdles.

Coach LeRoy Simpson's crew will have a full schedule on tap beginning in late March.

One last fling

THESE THREE SLEDS waited patiently through the warm weather of late February. They knew that the groundhog was right...that winter would return for one last blast in early March. So, they waited and rested on the barren vines along the side of a home in the northwestern section of the city. Winter's return this week, gave them one last fling in the snow before spring.

Colder weather in January slowed speeders in Wayne

January's cold weather and icy roads apparently slowed down city motorists.

According to the Wayne Police Department, only four arrests were made for speeding in January.

Another 18 motorists received police warnings for speeding.

The number of city speeding cases for January 1982 falls far below the monthly level that appeared in department reports for the ending months of 1981.

HOWEVER, illegal parking continues to be a leading problem in the city with police issuing 204 tickets for violations in January, nearly double the 106 issued for the same month in 1981.

In addition, police issued 40 parking violation warnings during the month. More than half the tickets issued involved violations of the ban on parking between midnight and 5 a.m., according to the department's monthly report.

No parking this side violations garnered 33 tickets and no parking from 3 a.m. to 5:30 a.m. violators netted 29 tickets during January.

JANUARY ARRESTS totaled 25, significantly off the pace of 40 made during the same month last year, according to the police report.

Seven of those arrests were for illegal motor vehicle registrations. Four arrests were made for failure to dispose of parking tickets and three were made for license inspection stickers.

Two January arrests were made for theft, one for a traffic violation, one for a stop sign violation and one for an illegal dog on a dog as target and one for failure to remove sidewalk snow.

Police also issued warnings to four city residents regarding failure to remove sidewalk snow. Nine December arrests were handed by the courts during January.

POLICE ISSUED 24 violation cards to motorists during January with eight cards returned with the violation corrected.

Nine violation cards were issued for no headlights on motor vehicles and five were issued for no taillights.

In addition to the 18 speeding warnings issued during the month, police warned eight motorists on illegal U turns, two for traffic signal violations and two for stop sign violations.

Uniformed officers logged a total of 828.5 hours during January compared to 857 for the same month last year.

Dispatchers logged 744 January hours, the same number worked during the same month last year.

POLICE PATROL cars traveled a total of 3,324 miles during January, about 300 miles off the monthly pace of last year's 3,978.

Police cars used 403.7 gallons of gasoline during January, compared to 408.4 gallons for the same month last year.

During January, police received 138 requests for service, slightly higher than the 111 for the same month last year.

The department handled 2,210 radio messages, compared to 1,773 during January of 1981.

Telephone messages for the month totaled 886 with 52 logged 911 emergency calls.

Police identified 35 of the 911 calls to be justifiable.

THE DEPARTMENT handled 13 criminal complaints and two criminal arrests during the month.

One animal and five vehicles were impounded by police during January.

Police investigated 23 accidents on public streets, compared to nine during January of 1981.

And, six accidents on private property were investigated by police during the month.

Department expenditures for the month totaled $15,785.37 with expenses to date for the fiscal year at $96,300.94 out of a budget of $207,352.

More Valley Corner Systems every year, because it's the least costly investment per acre.

It's going to be harder to make farming pay off in the years to come. Harder for many reasons. So if anything makes sense, it's to maximize the potential of the land you now farm. Irrigating with a center pivot is one way. Irrigating with a Corner System is even better.

A Corner System can irrigate 19 to 45 more acres than a regular pivot, producing extra income on acres already being farmed. That's why nearly one out of every six pivots sold today is a Corner System.

And when it comes to Corner Systems, nobody knows more than Valmont. They're proven reliable with nearly 3,000 systems in operation. That's at least 20 times more than any other brand.

Before you buy any center pivot, see us. We'll tell you how a Valley Corner System can add to your bottom line profits while being the least costly investment per acre.

Q. Is there any difference between the Individual Retirement Account and the Universal Individual Retirement Account?
A. There probably is some confusion in terms. There is only one form or concept underlying the Individual Retirement Account, or IRA. The word "universal" has been tacked on in some areas following passage of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 which did change IRAs considerably. The word "universal" refers to the fact employees who are covered by company retirement plans may now open IRA accounts. Previously, they could not. This means most teachers, military employees, city, state and federal workers as well as virtually all persons employed by a company may not participate. The limit on tax deductible contributions has also been raised from $1,500 to $2,000 per year, and the limit on the portion of a person's salary which can be contributed to an IRA has been raised from 15 percent to 100 percent. But, to simplify terms, let's just say that the pre-tax act IRA has been changed considerably, and is now, sometimes called the "universal" IRA.

Breeders

The show circuit kept both of them busy for years, but today they spend more and more time on their Wayne County farm with son Jack and the family's 85 to 90 Polled Hereford cows and 25-30 Polled Hereford bulls.

"We don't know yet whether we're going to starve or make it," Bev quipped, her quick smile spreading across the face of a woman who is happier working with cattle than working in the kitchen.

With backgrounds tied to agriculture, both Bev and Jack, who own little in the way of modern farm machinery, speak almost reverently about the land.

"THE SNOW AROUND grass farms is not as black as it is around here along the road-sides," Jack lamented.

Concerned about fenclaine to fenclaine (illage), Jack said: "I'm not sure we're going to leave this land in better shape than we all found it." He recalled that "that used to be" the unwritten law of the land, called stewardship.

His wife, who refers to the Polled Hereford cow herd as "the factory," noted that the Beeson breeding program is tailor made for producing efficient beef cattle on minimum feed.

Jack, who noted that the high cost of energy is signalling the need to produce beef closer to the feed supply and the river markets, said: "There is a place for the beef cow heard in the corn belt."

DESPITE THE American cattleman's on going romance with exotics, the Beesons have stayed with the more traditional Polled Herefords, preferring to improve and enhance the breed's ability to efficiently produce a top quality, lean, red meat carcass.

And, if the Beesons have been good for Polled Herefords, then Polled Herefords have been good for the Beesons.

In 1966, Bev received the association's Polled Hereford Herdsman of the Year award. To this day, she is the only woman to receive the award, one of the association's most coveted trophies.

The plaque reads: "Presented in recognition of outstanding achievement in sport manship, integrity, cooperative attitude and dedication to Polled Herefords as recognized by his fellow herdsman. His personal traits have contributed to the advancement of Polled Herefords."

THE AWARD, WHICH was first offered in 1964, was presented to Bev during the 44th National Polled Hereford Show. In 1965, the Beesons had the show's national champion female. A year later, Bev not only had the association's herdsman award under her belt, but also wore a one time cast brass buckle on that belt.

She still has the buckle among the couple's dozens and dozens of national and regional awards, trophies and plaques that line several shelves in the office of their modern ranch style home.

Only steps away from that office are pens that hold such herd bulls as home grown JB Pioneer 548, who is 58 inches high at the hips and nuzzles friends and strangers like a month old puppy.

BORN ON APRIL 28, 1979, JB Pioneer is the son of Klondike Galner 3 and carries Citation and RWJ breeding in his pedigree, according to the Beesons.

Nearby is FLE Enforcer 9121, a bull the Beesons purchased from Falklands Farms in Pennsylvania last October. Enforcer is a son of Enforcer 107H (1981 Sire of the Year) out of a Vindicator dam.

He's a 7 year old that stands 59 inches at the hips and is a gentle as a bottle lamb.

And, of course, across the farmyard with the calf crops "Frosty," Jack's prize heifer that was purchased from the Chester Gullickson Polled Hereford Farm near Bath, S.D.

She's called "Frosty" because she got her ears frosted as a calf, explained Bev.

Jack, who will be 8 years old on March 27, has already been pulling down firsts at the Wayne County Fair and seconds at the Nebraska State Fair.

THOUGH JOCK is an only child, his mother grew up the second oldest of 12 children born to Dewey and Jennie Lundstra of the Circle L Ranch at Beaver Creek, Minn., just east of Sioux Falls, S.D.

Jack's father is the oldest of three farm kids born to Dell and Olive Beeson on the Sooner prairie near Enid, Okla.

Bev, who is a member and past president of Pollethies — a national Polled Hereford Association auxiliary unit, is a 1950 graduate of Beaver Creek High School.

Jack, who was active in Future Farmers of America as a young farm boy, is a 1947 graduate of Garber High School.

Jack met Leland Herman in 1949 at the Ft. Worth, Tex., Stock Show after working on several farms and ranches in northeastern Oklahoma.

"I TOLD HIM I thought he had two of the nicest heifers I'd ever seen," Jack recalled, "I wanted to go to work for him."

On July 10, 1950, Jack became herdsman at Hervale Farms. That fall, he was drafted. But Jack returned as herdsman after two years in the Army.

JOCK BEESON, 7, and his canine friend frolic in the yard at the JB Ranch northeast of Wayne.

Bev, who farmed with her father for several years, earned an elementary school teaching certificate from Southern State Teachers College (University of South Dakota) at Vermillion.

She taught school for a year at Tripp, S.D., the year after she met Jack in Sioux Falls.

"I darn near wore out my new Pontiac, driving to Tripp to see her," Jack said, laughing with his Polled Hereford breeding partner.

When they married, Jack and Bev teamed up for the Hervale Farms Polled Hereford operation.

THE COUPLE worked with Hervale's show cattle and bull consignment sales in addition to handling road shows and general farming chores.

Traveling throughout the continental United States and Canada, the man woman team hit shows from Billings, Mont. to Tulsa, Okla., with stops in Denver, Dallas, Kansas City, Calgary and Edmonton, to name but a few.

However, when Jack returned from the Army, he purchased five Polled Herefords to run with the Hervale Farms stock. In addition, he bought two from Leland Herman.

The Beesons began putting some land together for the day they could go on their own. They bought land southwest of Carroll in 1971.

Jack credits Bev with making the plan work.

In 1973, the couple bought land 3 miles east and a half mile north of Wayne, where Bev and Jack would settle in 1978 on the newly christened JB (Jack & Bev) Ranch.

TODAY, THE BEESONS own 360 acres.

and a farmstead. "Very little farm machinery, more than 100 Polled Herefords, and a 9 year old registered quarterhorse named "Toomoo."

In addition to the Polled Hereford breeding stock, the farm produces pastureland grass and alfalfa hay for the cattle and corn.

Bev, who is a trained artificial insemination technician, works side by side with Jack in a long range breeding program that's designed to produce long, tall Polled Herefords.

"We're breeding for a larger framed animal that grows more efficiently," Bev explained.

"We want a cow that's a good mother and a good milker," she continued.

And, we want to produce as many pounds of beef as we can per cow. The most pounds of beef per cow at the most efficient rate," Jack added.

"WE'VE GOT to keep culling for better cows," Bev said. "We want a 600 pound calf off grass and cornstalks."

One of the Beeson's goals is to breed a national Polled Hereford champion.

"But, the foundation of the JB Ranch is the beef cow call factory.

"If you sell someone a good cow, that's the best advertising you can get," said Bev, who has developed a keen eye for cattle after a lifetime of raising and judging them.

"We're excited about the prospects for Enforcer and Pioneer," she added.

At the end of the three-page story and picture spread in the November 1981 issue of "Polled Hereford World" Bev declares, "We're gonna make it. Everything we've got now has come from Polled Herefords and hard work, so we'll just keep that up."

Candidate

but not admitted to the Nebraska Bar Association, filed for the post on Wednesday.

Nebraska law requires that a county attorney be licensed to practice law in the state.

Bornhoff filed as a Republican Party candidate only days after his father, Budd B. Bornhoff, 62, a Democrat and long time Wayne County attorney, declined to seek re election.

To date, the Wayne County Democratic Party has not produced a candidate for the post.

ADDISON, A FORMER Air Force pilot and veteran of the Korean War, is a 1947 graduate of Stanton High School.

After graduating from UN L Law School, Addison joined his father in the Wayne law firm.

Currently, Addison serves as legal counsel for Wakefield and has served as attorney for the Village of Winside and city attorney for Wayne.

A member of the Wayne American Legion, Addison is also a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He and his wife, Betty, who is vice president of Midwest Federal Savings and Loan Association, have three children — Robert, Susan and John.

Robert, who lives in Wayne, works for Waldbaum's in Wakefield. Susan is a nurse and lives in Denver. John is a senior at Wayne High School.

NRD seeking candidates to fill vacancy

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District is accepting applications to fill a board director position vacated by the resignation of Marlen Kraemer of Laurel.

Kraemer says he resigned because of a state law that prohibits directors from benefiting financially from NRD contracts.

The part-owner of Logan Valley Construction Company of Laurel was elected to the board in 1980 and took office in January 1981. Kraemer said his letter of resignation was dated Feb. 12.

"According to NRD records, Logan Valley was the contractor that built the Bower road structure west of Winside. The company was paid $5,947 for the work according to an NRD expense statement.

The 48 year-old said he was unaware of the law until checking recently with his attorney, Logan Valley, may be a subcontractor helping build the Willow Creek Dam.

Kraemer's unexpired term will be filled by a registered voter who resides within the bounds of Subdistrict IV. The Subdistrict includes Laurel, Belden, Randolph, Shells, Carroll, Wayne, Winside and Hopkins.

Planners accept subdivision plat

Wayne's City Planning Commission has approved a preliminary plat for the Fletcher and Feader's Subdivision.

Unanimous approval of the preliminary plat came Monday night during a brief regular meeting at City Hall.

The subdivision involves two blocks split by Window Street in the southeastern section of the city. It is necessary under state law governing the sale of land parcels of less than 10 acres.

THE SUBDIVISION has come about as a result of the sale of Feader's property to Gene Fletcher of Wayne.

The property sold involves a strip of land along the west side of Window Street north of Fairgrounds Avenue.

Incorporated in the final plat plan is the deeding of a 50-foot strip of land at the north end of the property to the city for a roadway.

The strip, which is 280-feet long, has been used as an access route for the city for years, according to Klotzer.

THE PRELIMINARY plat, which must gain City Council approval, is not expected to change in the final plat.

In related action, city planners reviewed a proposal to streamline lot-split procedures.

According to Klotzer, the city has no easily understood procedure for property owners to follow.

He presented the commissioners with a lot-split application form that contained a systematic approach to gaining the information the city needs to act on the request.

KLOTZER'S PROPOSAL outlines information required by the city from lot splitters, including a scale map, lot dimensions, legal descriptions and the designation of utilities.

Applications for lot splits, which carry a $100 fee, eventually will be available from the City Clerk's office, according to Klotzer.

The proposed forms will outline the procedure for filing the request with the city, including deadlines.

"This should streamline the process," Klotzer told the commissioners. "And, it should help estimate a number of problems."
