Q. The new upper limits on IRAs certainly look inviting. However, I am wondering if a person would have to make a $2,000 contribution, each year, in order to realize a worthwhile retirement amount.

A. Although $2,000 is the limit an individual may contribute per year into an Individual Retirement Account without penalty, your annual contributions can be substantially less and still realize a good retirement income. Of course, the gauge is the length of time the account is left untouched. But, as an example, if you were to contribute the maximum of $2,000 per year, at the beginning of each year, and allow your tax sheltered IRA to accumulate for 40 years at a presumed 10 percent interest, compounded annually, you would realize some $973,704. If, on the other hand, you were to contribute $100 annually, at the same interest rate, you would accumulate $48,685 after 40 years. An annual contribution of $500 would work out to $243,428 after 40 years, or $54,051 after just 25 years. IRAs are quite flexible, and fit easily into most budgets.

THE WAYNE High track teams, like most teams in the state, have had few opportunities to practice outside prior to Thursday's opening invitational at Columbus Lakeview.

At Lakeview Thursday

Track teams to get tested

The track season at Wayne High School officially opens Thursday as the boys and girls teams compete in the tough Columbus Lakeview Invitational.

A dozen teams are scheduled to clash for team honors Thursday in Columbus.

Wayne boys prepare
Under the direction of coach Al Hansen, the Wayne boys are missing five standouts from their 1980-81 team. Lost to graduation are Doug Proett, Steve Monson, Henrik Olsson, Tod Heier and Pat McCright.

Three senior lettermen and state qualifiers return to strengthen this year's squad. Eric Brink will run the 100 high hurdles, 300 intermediate hurdles and the 400 meter dash. Mark Hummel will specialize in the 400 and 800-meter runs. Alan Lindsay will work the 100 and 200-meter dashes.

Those three should be responsible for much of Wayne's scoring. Other returning lettermen are juniors Dan Frevert, Terry Gilliland, Kurt Janku, Mark Kubik and John Wynn, and sophomore Blaine Johnson.

Frevert will be a sprinter. Gilliland will run the 400-meter dash. Janku will specialize in the pole vault and high jump. Wynn will compete in the 800 and pole vault.

Other boys out for track are seniors Jeff Loberg and Steve Zahniser, juniors Glenn Elliott and Jon Jacobmeier, sophomores Matt Baier, Doug Doerflinger, David Garlick, Brian Letting, David Melton and Jim Prabhakar, and freshmen Chris Kuehn, Kevin Koenig, Pete Martin and Preston Olson.

Girls are competitive. Coach Mavis Dalton says the quality distance runners from last year's squad and it should be easy to fill those spots.

However, in most other events the Blue Devils are expected to do well. "We need more distance people—that's where we lose points," said Dalton.

to work some underclassmen into the longer races. In our other events we plan to score and be competitive.

Wayne also lost its high jumpers from last year and will have to fill that area. Since the Blue Devils have rarely been able to work outside, there will be a few question marks when competition opens Thursday.

Five state qualifiers return from last year's team.

Missy Stoltenberg, a junior, will compete in the sprints and anchor the relays. Senior Jill Zeiss will run the hurdles, relays and the mile run. Fran Gross, a sophomore, will concentrate on the 400, 800 and relays. Jill Mosley, a junior, is a long jumper and will run the 200 and relays. Another junior, Kelly Bartholomew, will specialize in the shot put.

Four other lettermen will strengthen the team. Lori Bahns, a junior, will run the mile. Sophomore Julie Anderson will throw the shot. Junior Jo Carlson will compete in the shot and discus and junior Kris Baier will participate in the long jump.

Other girls on the team are senior Connie Hansen, sophomore Sarah Bliven and freshmen Lisa Jacobsen (hurdles), Jody Allen (high jump), Sarah Lebeck, Tiffany Witke, Darci Johnson, Paula Koplin (hurdler), Debby Bull, Laura Struve, Denise Ahlvers and Amy Gross.

Wayne boys and girls track schedule: March 25—at Lakeview Invitational, March 29—Host practice triangular with Emerson, Laurel, April 2—at Cpl. Umbus Scotus Relays, April 6—at Wayne State Girls Invitational, April 7—at Wayne State Boys Invitational, April 13—Wisner Invitational, April 20—at Tekamah Invitational, April 30—at West Husker meet in Wisner, May 8—at Wisner Invitational, May 13—Districts at Columbus Scotus, May 21-22—State Track Meet

Two All-Americans

Talented vets, newcomers give Wildcats strength

A strong corps of returning veterans and some talented newcomers should make the 1982 Wayne State College track squad extremely competitive during the spring outdoor season.

Track coach Dr. LeRoy Simpson is preparing his men's and women's teams for their March 25 opener on the WSC track when Westmar, Morningside, and Dana come to visit. Wayne State will also play host to a large invitational on April 15, and the Wildcats will host the Central States Intercollegiate Conference meet on April 30-May 1.

Dr. Simpson said he expects his women's squad to be "really good in the sprints," and he feels his hurdle and spring relays corps to be strong also. The men's crew should be strongest in the hurdles and pole vault, and hopes for good things from his short relay squad.

Starman (sophomore, Norfolk) in the 400 and 800.

In addition, Dr. Simpson will be looking to several newcomers to fare well for the Lady Wildcats. Top newcomers include Lisa Pyle (sophomore, Sioux City) in the 400 and 800; Vicki Wampler (freshman, Wausa) in the high jump; Tracy Stoltenberg (freshman, Wayne) in the high jump and long jump; Lori Schulerberg (freshman, Hooper) in the sprints; and Melissa Gottschalk (freshman, Papillion) in the 800 meter.

Topping the list of men's returnees is two-time NAAIA All-American Ed Blackburn (senior, Malvern, Iowa) in the hurdles and 200 meter. Others expected to do well include Joe Ortmeier (junior, West Point) in the high jump; Scott Driver (sophomore, Wynot) in the pole vault and high jump; Ron Keegan (senior, Sioux City, Iowa) in the distances; and Dave Hamm (sophomore, Craig) in the distances.

NEW ADDITIONS expected to make major contributions include: Lonell Greene (freshman, East Orange, N.J.) in the 400; Darrell Owens (freshman, Miami, Fla.) in the sprints; Casey Thomas (freshman, Correctionville, Iowa) in the sprints and long jump; Jeff Clawson (junior, Marshalltown, Iowa) in the distances; and Bryce Lambley (sophomore, North Bend) in the distances. Simpson is also expecting good things from a group of four freshmen, who will make up his mile relay squad. The group includes Dan Kendal (Woodbine, Iowa), Tod Heier (Wayna), Troy Brande (South Sioux City), and Pat Lapadula (Framont).

The veteran Wayne State coach points to traditional state powers Kearney State and Doane to once again dominate in Nebraska. He also noted that Midland has some "outstanding people" but feels the Warriors lack the depth of some of the other top opponents.

The 1982 Wayne State College track schedule: March 25 Westmar, Morningside, Dana at Wayne; April 4 at University of South Dakota Invitational, 6 at Dordt (Iowa) Invitational, 15 Wayne State Invitational, 20 at Orange City (Iowa) Invitational, 23 at Madison (South Dakota) Invitational, 30 CSIC Meet at Wayne State.

May 1 CSIC Meet at Wayne State, 7 NAAIA District 11 Championships at Kearney State, 13 All Corners Meet at Midland College, 20-22 NAAIA National Meet at Charleston, W.V.

FLOCKS OF Snow Geese can be seen flying north this time of the year — a sure sign of warmer weather to come. Although cooler weather and precipitation hit this part of the state last week, geese and ducks continued their northern flight.

"L'IL ABNER" IS SCHOOL MUSICAL

During the past three months, members of Wayne High School have been vigorously preparing for the musical "L'Il Abner."

"L'Il Abner" is a musical comedy based on the comic strip characters created by Al Capp. The plot is a satirizing mixture of hill-billy nonsense and sharp, critical humor.

As the play opens, word has been sent down from Washington that the citizens of Dogpatch must evacuate their mountain homes. Dogpatch has been selected as the most unnecessary town in the country, and therefore the perfect site for nuclear tests.

It appears that something useful is found in the town when Mamma Yokum produces her secret formula of Yokumberry tonic which makes muscle men of weaklings.

However, General Bullmoose, a sly and cunning politician, sets a sully siren and Evil Eye Fleagle with his double whey to work on L'Il Abner, hoping to wheedle Mamma's secret formula from him.

Intermingled with this plot is the love affair of L'Il Abner with the "well built" Daisy May.

Daisy's attempts to catch L'Il Abner on Sadie Hawkins Day are complicated by the persistent Earthquake McGoon and General Bullmoose's private secretary, Appassionata VonClimax.

Major cast members are as follows: L'Il Abner, Rocco Schuly; Daisy May, Mandy Peterson; Mamma Yokum, Stacy Marsh; Pappy Yokum, Gregg Elliott; Mamma In Sam, Tom Fletcher; General Bullmoose, Mike Sieler; Earthquake McGoon, Brian Schmoldt; Senator Phogbound, Jeff Moore; Evil Eye Fleagle, Dave Remer; Appassionata VonClimax, Michelle Sherlock.

The director is Ted Blenderman. The music director is Robert Stuber. Choreographer is Beth Schater, and providing accompaniment will be Judy Kucera at piano and Kara Kugler, rhythm.

Dates for the musical are

March 26 and 27 at 8 p.m. Tickets are now being sold by cast members for $2.

JUNIOR FUND RAISERS

The junior class at Wayne High School is involved in two fund raisers.

The first is to gain money for the prom by selling raffle tickets for a limousine ride to the prom. Junior and senior students can purchase the tickets at $1 each, and if two are purchased, a third ticket is received free.

The drawing will be held on April 8.

The winner and date, along with another couple or two friends, will be picked up by a chauffeur, driven around Wayne, and to the prom. There is a 50-mile limit for the limousine ride.

The limousine, owned by Gary Pick of Wayne, has a luxurious interior, including a stereo and a television.

The other fund raiser that various juniors are participating in is a fruit stand.

For the first week, fruit was sold during lunch time. However, because of Federal regulations, food cannot be sold in the high school until after 1:30, thus the apples and oranges are now sold after school.

The cooperation of Bill's G.W., who helped furnish fruit for this activity, has been greatly appreciated.

Funds raised will go to Dori Alvin, a junior class member, who recently lost everything in a house fire.

A free lunch will be served for the students at the Wayne Vets Club.

ENGLISH CLASSES ATTEND "ANTIGONE"

On Thursday, March 11, the Junior and Senior English classes and the speech class journeyed to Doane College at Crete to attend the Greek play "Antigone."

"Antigone" was written by Sophocles, an ancient Greek writer of tragedies. "Antigone" is Part II of "Oedipus Rex."

Antigone was the devoted daughter of her blind father, Oedipus. When her brother Polynices was slain, the king ordered his body left to the vultures.

But Antigone defied him and buried her brother's body. For this she was shut up alive in a tomb.

SCIENCE EVENTS

There are many upcoming events in the science department. At our last Science Club meeting Scot Curry gave a comprehensive report on the activities of the National Audubon Society. His enthusiasm is contagious, and there is talk of forming a Northeastern Nebraska Chapter of the Audubon Society.

Now that the Science Club has really gotten off the ground, they are looking for community service projects. One that they've come up with is a proposed nature trail, and another is an active Ranger Rick Club for the elementary kids to help serve their needs. A survey was passed around to the elementary teachers, and several have responded.

This past weekend (Saturday, March 20) many of the science students made the trip to Wayne for the Junior Academy of Science Fair. We expect a very good showing from the Laurel students.

Mr. Rynearson's electricity class got some time out of school last Thursday to go downtown to visit the Laurel Municipal Power Plant. The students learned about electrical relations on a larger scale to apply to what they've learned in class.

Also, this was National Wildlife Week and the people in the science department encouraged everyone to show some concern about the wildlife around them. The week was devoted to arousing people's interest in wildlife and ecology.

ALAN PAGE, former professional football player for the Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears, signs autographs for a few fans in backstage Ramsey Theatre. Page spoke to nearly 225 persons Thursday night about violence in sports and problems of the student-athlete. The program, sponsored by Wayne State's Student Activities Board, lasted about two hours.

Former

He stressed the importance of education and explained that the terms "student" and "athlete" don't seem to be related. "Sometimes, players go through four years of college without learning to read or write very well."

Sharing a past experience with his listeners, Page told about his final year with the Vikings. The defensive line coach had his nine linemen read the playbook. Three read real well, two did alright and four had a real struggle, he said.

Although Page was one of the three individuals who read real well, he pointed out that the four who struggled made it an unpleasant and painful experience for all.

"I THINK THE educational system is failing our kids. Getting an education is not always fun and not easy. The attitude is that if I'm an athlete I don't have to get an education," said Page. "Athletes should be an incentive to get a good education. Unfortunately, it's often a substitute."

"For me, school was relatively easy. In ninth grade I started football. By 11th grade, school became a struggle. It was pretty much the same way at Notre Dame," said the collegiate All American. "I was fortunate because I graduated—many don't." At the University of Minnesota only one member of the men's basketball team graduated in the last four years, he said.

"The big problem is the way high school and college football is played—everyone wants a winner," said Page. He explained that on the major college level "like the University of Nebraska, football is business, and very big business."

Athletes are seen as role models to minority kids, poor kids and underprivileged kids, Page said. "They see their heroes who make a lot of money and they think they can do it. But it's a false hope. There is very little chance of being a pro. Someone once told me, 'I don't know if it's true, but the chances of getting hit by a meteor are better.'"

PAGE CLOSED his speech by telling the audience that the system can be changed. The concentration should be placed on education and we should find role models outside of athletics.

"I think we can see that athletics and education can go together. Then everyone's a winner. I don't believe we can have too many winners."

During a question and answer period, the attorney touched on such areas as drug use in football, game fixing, playing for the Chicago Bears, a possible NFL strike and little league football.

The first question directed at Page asked about the prevalence of drug use and game fixing in the NFL. Page responded by saying that he felt drug use in the NFL is on about the same level as it is in society. He said he finds it hard to believe that game fixing or throwing doesn't happen but pointed out that in 15 years of pro football he never saw it happen.

THE UNEMOTIONAL Page told a group of Chicago Bear fans that his most enjoyable years of pro football were played with Chicago. "The Bears treated me like they were happy to have me. I was treated with respect."

When asked what he disliked about the Minnesota Vikings, Page replied, "We don't have time for that."

Page was asked if players are given shots of pain killer before games as depicted in the movie "North Dallas Forty." "I've seen it happen. I've seen it happen," he replied. "The team, former football star predicts an NFL strike because the two parties' past histories haven't been too agreeable or reasonable." He said he doesn't feel "pee wee" football leagues are doing youths any good and said he will encourage his son to find some type of athletic endeavor other than football.

When asked if he ever plans to become a coach, Page replied, "Not unless I lose my mind."

Bob Enix, president of the Wayne Chamber of Commerce, presented Page with a key to the city at a press conference prior to his Thursday speaking engagement in Ramsey Theatre. A reception was later held in Page's honor.

Spinal

Brent was a third grade student. Born in Sioux City, Brent and his family moved to Jackson about two years later, and then to Allen.

In addition to Brent, Bill and Arlene Chase are the parents of four other sons and one daughter.

Brent's oldest brother, Rick, 25, resides at Allen, Brad, 23, lives at Waterbury, and Billy, 21, attends Wayne State College. At 17, Jeff, the youngest, is a junior at Allen High School.

"Sister Lisa, 14, is a freshman at Allen High."

"THE FAMILY really babied me after my accident," recalls Brent, "and I resented them for doing it."

It was nearly five months following the accident before Brent returned home to his family and friends.

After being hospitalized in Sioux City for three weeks, where he underwent surgery to stabilize his neck, Brent was transferred to the Swedish Medical Center in Denver.

He remained at the Swedish Medical Center for 10 days, and then entered Craig Hospital in Denver for further treatment and therapy.

Craig Hospital specializes in spinal cord and brain injuries.

AT CRAIG Hospital, patients with spinal cord injuries learn how to care for themselves.

They are taught personal care, how to dress themselves, how to transfer in and out of their wheelchair, and how to use different devices to eat with or brush their teeth. They also learn what exercises they can do to build their bodies back up.

In addition, patients attend classes where they are told about the problems they will encounter and what to expect when they leave the hospital.

"We even discussed sex," laughs Brent.

"I WAS STILL completely dependent when I left Craig Hospital," says Brent. "I could hardly get my pants on at first."

"They taught me all that stuff in Denver, but I couldn't do it. I wasn't strong enough."

"I could feed my face and that was about it. I couldn't cut my meat, fix myself a plate, or anything."

"I had a very poor attitude and I was angry at the world. I was angry for a long time."

IN JULY, nearly six months after Brent's accident, it was time for him to return to Allen.

"I did and I didn't want to come home," sighs Brent. "I didn't want my friends and family to see me like this."

"It was like being a baby again. My mother fed me, bathed me, dressed me— even helped me go to the bathroom."

FOR NEARLY a year and a half before his accident, Brent and a buddy, Ricki Smith, lived in a house outside of Allen.

"It was terrible living with my mom and dad again and being so dependent on them," says Brent.

"I had a lot of resentment against my mom. I guess I was just embarrassed that she had to do all these things for me."

"It was terrible to live with."

AFTER SEVEN months at home, Brent decided he couldn't live there anymore.

"It wasn't because we had a fight or anything and my family kicked me out," laughs Brent.

"I wanted to be on my own. I was tired of always being asked when I was going out, what I was going to do, and when I would be home."

Brent moved into Allen's new housing complex for the elderly and handicapped. It was then that his life began to turn around.

ALTHOUGH BRENT still depended on someone to come in each day to dress him, feed him, and put him to bed, there were many things he was forced to learn to do by himself.

An aide still comes in each morning to help Brent get ready for the day.

But Pearl Snyder, Allen's village clerk, no longer comes at night to put Brent to bed.

"I can get in and out of bed from the wheelchair by myself now," says Brent, "and I can shower and dress myself."

Brent has even learned to fix simple meals for himself, including soup, sandwiches and cereal.

Recently, however, when Brent attempted to fix steak for the first time, he suffered second degree burns to three fingers on his hand.

"I did it while I was fixing supper," smiles Brent, "and I didn't even know I did it."

BRENT STILL visits Craig Hospital once each year.

He says most of his accomplishments were made this winter during his latest visit, when he stayed for one month.

"I learned to get in and out of a car by myself, and how to get in and out of bed."

"I had never attempted any cooking before that, and I couldn't completely dress myself."

"I DON'T MIND going back to Craig Hospital," says Brent.

"Not only are they teaching me a lot more things to do, but I see people there a lot worse off than I am."

Brent's next visit to the hospital will be this summer when he undergoes surgery on his right hand.

"They're going to tighten up the muscles in my thumb so I can have a better grasp," he says.

Similar surgery on his left hand will be performed the following summer.

BRENT ADMITS his future looks much brighter than it did two years ago, but he says, "I don't want people to think I'm great."

"I don't like living like this, but I'm going to live and I might as well make the best of it."

Brent enrolled at Wayne State College in January, during second semester, and is taking 13 hours of classes.

"I got tired of sitting around doing nothing," he says.

JUST THREE weeks ago he began driving back and forth to school in a specially equipped van.

The van, purchased by Brent, was equipped for the handicapped by the Vocational Rehabilitation department in Norfolk.

"I knew if I went to college they would fix me up with a van," laughs Brent.

The green van comes complete with an electric chair lift, hand controls, a floor which lowers and raises to adjust to the height of the driver, an electric lock down to lock Brent's wheelchair in place, and a side door which opens automatically.

USUALLY BRENT is accompanied to Wayne by other Allen students attending college here.

And recently Brent and several of his friends drove in the van to Colorado where they went skiing for several days.

They've also driven to Omaha and Sioux City.

"I'M GETTING along a lot better now," says Brent as he sits in the library at Wayne State College.

"Time is a big healer, and my family and friends have helped a lot. When I first came home from Denver I didn't know if I would have any friends left."

"I get along really well with my family, and my attitude is a lot better."

BRENT SAYS there will always be periods of depression.

"I miss not being able to do the things I use to do," he says softly.

"People don't realize what spinal cord injuries are like."

"People don't understand what people in wheelchairs go through. They think it's just sitting in a chair and that's all there is to it. Brent said it now takes him an hour and half to get ready in the morning, and that doesn't include any time to eat. "Before," he says, "I could be dressed and ready in a half hour."

BRENT CREDITS Wayne State College for changes it has made to make it easier for wheelchair students to attend college.

"They've put in a lot of ramps, elevators, and handicapped parking stalls," says Brent.

Brent says he can get just about anywhere on campus and doesn't have much difficulty maneuvering in and out of buildings.

He says his biggest obstacles are still steps, curbs, doors and rough terrain.

LOOKING AHEAD, Brent says he just wants to get a job and live on his own— maybe in Lincoln or Denver.

He says he hopes to graduate from Wayne State in the spring of 1985.

"Surely I'll graduate by that time," he laughs.

More Valley Corner Systems every year, because it's the least costly investment per acre.

It's going to be harder to make farming pay off in the years to come. Harder for many reasons. So if anything makes sense, it's to maximize the potential of the land you now farm. Irrigating with a center pivot is one way. Irrigating with a Corner System is even better.

A Corner System can irrigate 19 to 45 more acres than a regular pivot, producing extra income on acres already being farmed. That's why nearly one out of every six pivots sold today is a Corner System.

And when it comes to Corner Systems, nobody knows more than Valmont. They're proven reliable with nearly 3,000 systems in operation. That's at least 20 times more than any other brand.

Before you buy any center pivot, see us. We'll tell you how a Valley Corner System can add to your bottom line profits while being the least costly investment per acre.

Wheels

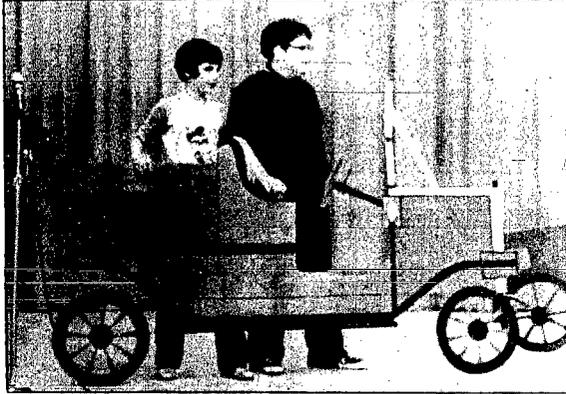

The "Wheels" of a major Winside Elementary School musical production are turning.

Scheduled for a 7:30 p.m. Thursday performance in the school's multipurpose room, the musical involves nearly 80 children from kindergarten through sixth grade.

The youngsters are under the direction of Coleen Jeffries, the school's vocal instructor.

Separate room rehearsals have been underway since February. The entire group has been rehearsing together for the past two weeks.

The musical, "Wheels," features acting, singing, choreography, props and scenery (made by the seventh grade art class) in a production that's the first of its kind at the school for several years. And, it's free and open to the public.

WINSIDE KINDERGARTENERS Dustin Puls, Christine Brugger, Kurt Jaeger, Matthew Stuthman and Belinda Appel form the engine of the "Wheels" train as their classmates bring up the caboose. First-grader Annie Munter walks a baby carriage, and sixth-graders Doug Paulson and Dean Westerhaus drive a car in the musical production. While her classmates operate a ferris wheel, sixth-grader Ann Meierhenry belts out a song under the direction of Coleen Jeffries. And, first-grader Jenni Hancock takes a rest on the stage, while the whole crew sings during a recent rehearsal.

THE WAYNE HERALD

ONE HUNDRED SIXTY YEAR WAYNE, NEBRASKA 68707, THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1982 THIS ISSUE — TWO SECTIONS, 20 PAGES NUMBER FIFTY-ONE

CHIEF JUSTICE Norman Krivosha of the Nebraska State Supreme Court joins three panelists for the Wayne State College Public Affairs Institute program Tuesday in Ramsey Theatre. Other panelists are Walter Reed, University of South Dakota's law college dean, Don Shaneyfelt, University of Nebraska's law college dean, and Rodney Shkolnick, Creighton University's law college dean.

WSC Public Affairs Institute program Law-school deans defend system

By Randall Howell

Three law college deans participating on a Wayne State College Public Affairs Institute program Tuesday defended America's legal system more than they analyzed it.

Acknowledging that Americans are "somewhat slow to march down the road to equality," Walter Reed, dean of the University of South Dakota College of Law contended that law is the result of experience.

"It is the expression of reform already taken place," Reed told a small group gathered in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Center's Ramsey Theatre after remarks by keynote speaker Norman Krivosha, chief justice of the Nebraska State Supreme Court.

"WE HAVE TO put things in perspective a little bit," Reed said.

"Equality is dependent on the dictates of a society the law serves," he continued. "Equality has its advantages, but sometimes it has to be looked at in perspective."

Reed split the issue into what he called "equality with a big E" and "equality with a little e."

Big E equality, he said, referred to "equality of the system overall." And, little e equality addresses "how it works at the individual case level."

He suggested, for instance, that his listeners contemplate the concept of equal punishment under the law.

AND, THE LAW college dean asked the audience to consider the question of motive in punishment for a man convicted of stealing $50 worth of food for his hungry family compared to the punishment for a man convicted of stealing $50 to support his drug habit.

"Absolute equality is not the same as justice and fairness," he contended. "Equal justice under the law may not be perceived as equal."

"We're on the right track, but we've got a lot of work to do," he said.

Don Shaneyfelt, dean of the University of Nebraska's College of Law, directed his remarks to the chief justice, particularly

Chief justice warns quick-fix threatens equality under law

By Randall Howell

A quick fix society's growing frustration over increasingly complex problems can jeopardize a democracy's fundamental concepts, including equality under the law.

That seemed to be the consensus of panelists participating in a Wayne State College Public Affairs Institute program Tuesday.

"We've become a society of quick answers to complex problems," said panelist Norman Krivosha, chief justice of the Nebraska Supreme Court.

"WE ARE A society anxious to have quick answers," contended Krivosha, who spearheaded the panel's presentation, "Equality Under Law: Problems of a Democracy."

Krivosha joined panelists Walter Reed, dean of the University of South Dakota's College of Law, Don Shaneyfelt, dean of the University of Nebraska's College of Law, and Rodney Shkolnick, dean of Creighton University's College of Law.

"I am not prepared to bring you those quick answers," said the State Supreme Court's chief justice, who spoke to a small afternoon audience in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Center's Ramsey Theatre.

"It's easy enough to talk about equality. It's easy enough to demand equality, but what do we mean by it?" questioned Krivosha during his opening remarks.

"THE AMERICAN people today are extremely frustrated," the chief justice contended.

"I am frustrated," he added, explaining that all Americans face a number of complex problems including more violence, less security. "They are gnawing at us," he said.

"It is in times such as these that Americans must stop to analyze what has made this country what it is in a short 200 years."

Calling equality the "single most important element in American democracy," Krivosha referred to the U.S. legal system as an integral part of that free society.

"It may be important to stop for a moment to ask ourselves 'What does the word (equality) mean?'" Krivosha contended.

SUGGESTING THAT it may mean "independent and equal to all," Krivosha insisted that it is "that understanding that makes the difference."

Explaining that every society has a legal system, the chief justice told the audience that it's the first thing even a dictator does.

Krivosha said that the use of a created legal system spelled the difference between countries with laws that provide freedom and equality and those with laws that take it away.

Reaching into ancient history, the chief justice reminded his audience of civilizations with laws that reserved freedom and

WHS stage band wins top honors

Wayne High School's stage band, under the direction of Ron Dalton, took top honors for the second time in two months during the Coyote Jazz Festival held Tuesday at the University of South Dakota.

The Wayne High band competed with six other schools in Class A — from Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota to receive the first place place honor and trophy.

Wayne High students who received individual citations for outstanding musicianship were Brent Haun on lead trumpet, Mark Hummel, trombone, Frances Prather, tenor saxophone, and Gregg Elliott, tenor saxophone.

Last month, during a jazz festival at Northeast Technical Community College in Norfolk, the stage band also received the first place trophy.

Also participating in the University of South Dakota Jazz Festival was Wayne High's swing choir, directed by Robert Stuberg.

The choir, which also competed in class A, received a 2 plus rating. Mandy Peterson was awarded a certificate for outstanding soloist. Choirs from seven other class A schools were in vied in the competition.

Stuberg said the Coyote Jazz Festival was the first contest Wayne High's swing choir has participated in outside of districts.

Herald editor resigns to join family farm

The editor of The Wayne Herald has resigned. Randall Howell, 35, resigned his position with the twice-weekly newspaper Monday to join his father and brother in the family farming operation near Aberdeen, S.D.

Howell, who also is editor of The Sundowner, a Wayne-based monthly agri-business newspaper serving northeast Nebraska, joined The Wayne Herald staff a year ago.

"THE DECISION to resign the editorship was not an easy one to make," Howell said. "Nor will it be easy to leave Wayne."

Howell, who has 15 years of daily and weekly newspaper experience, said he expects to remain with the newspaper staff for another month before joining the family farm operation northeast of Aberdeen.

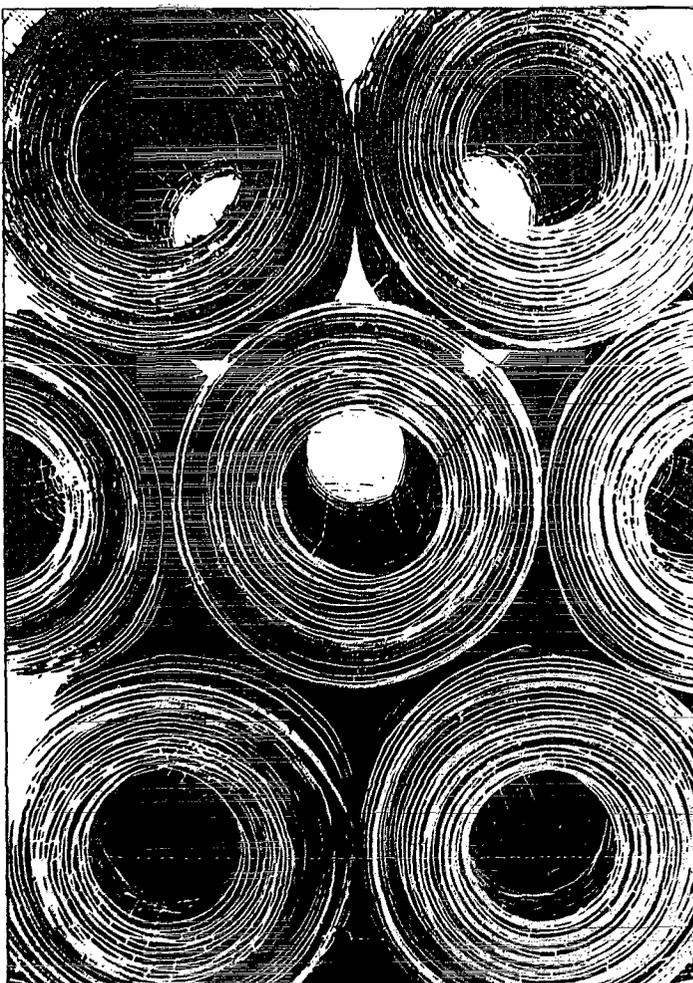

"We have many good friends here and the community has been good to us," Howell said. "We take with us fond memories of a year spent among people who care about themselves and each other."

Howell said he intends to continue building a free-lance writing career "but the family farm comes first."

Knox County dispute ESU One board offers contract to supervisor

In an effort to end an ongoing special education dispute with at least five Knox County school districts, the Educational Service Unit One board has offered a 10-month resource consultant contract to staff member Richard Genovese.

During a special meeting in Laurel last Thursday night ESU One board members offered the $24,300 contract to Genovese two months after making contract offers to the unit's other three supervisors.

Initially, Genovese, who has been working with Knox County students in special education, was denied a contract offer from the ESU One board.

WHEN ESU ONE administrator Harry Mills of Wakefield declined to recommend Genovese for re-employment, the action sparked a controversy that brought Knox County schools superintendents before the board.

Bloomfield School superintendent John Post revealed to the board that Genovese's services were not only needed in Knox County, but that the superintendents there had recommended his re-employment with the full knowledge of Mills.

In fact, Post revealed, Mills had been involved in several meetings to improve special education services to Knox County. Those meetings involved negotiations to retain Genovese.

Apparently feeling that Mills acted beyond the scope of his duties in hiring Genovese and placing him in Knox County, the ESU board publicly reprimanded the Wakefield-based administrator earlier this month.

DURING LAST week's meeting the board decided, on the strength of a contract recommendation from Mills, to hire Genovese for Knox County.

References to Knox County were deleted from the contract offer and job description, despite the fact that the proposal has come about as the result of Knox County requests for the services of Genovese.

The board voted to offer him a 10-month contract at a salary of $24,300, with full family insurance, long-term disability insurance, and mileage at the prevailing rate.

TERMS OF THE contract offer were revealed and voted on when the board reconvened from an executive session.

The offer was approved with six affirmative votes. Dr. Veryl Walstrom of Knox County abstained.

Earlier in the meeting, ESU administrator Mills recommended that the board offer a contract to Genovese at a salary of $25,500, with full health and disability insurance, and allowance for one national convention.

"YOU'RE NOT going to get him unless you're willing to pay the bill," Mills told the board before it voted to go into executive session to discuss Genovese's salary.

"If we do this under any other terms but our own then we're going to be asked to do it for the other counties served by ESU," said board member Dave Hay of Belden.

"This situation was not of the board's making," said Hay, "but we've got to establish the fact that if someone is going to be employed by us then we have to establish the rules."

BOARD MEMBER Randy Shaw of Wayne reported that he and other members of the board had met earlier with Knox County superintendents to discuss what services they wanted.

"We made a proposal to them," said Shaw, adding that Knox County superintendents had expressed "quite a bit" of concern over Genovese's salary.

"We didn't make any promises," said Shaw.

Experts judge quality of teacher education programs in Nebraska

Quality in teacher education programs of the Nebraska State Colleges has been judged to be high by both internal and external experts, the governing board for these colleges was told recently.

Dr. Leonard Skov, Kearney State College Dean of Education, presented a report to the Board of Trustees of the Nebraska State Colleges in behalf of the education departments of the four State Colleges.

Skov had been charged by the Board to do an analysis of the Nebraska Teacher Education Study which was submitted to the Nebraska Coordinating Commission for Postsecondary Education in January.

STATE COLLEGE deans were requested by the Board to re-examine teacher education programs at the State Colleges in order to react to the study and respond to the recommendations of the Coordinating Commission.

The deans were also requested to propose specific action plans to strengthen teacher education at the State Colleges.

SKOV'S REPORT stressed that the State College teacher education area had been highly successful in maintaining quality educational programs.

The study reported that the State Colleges have evolved from single purpose Teacher Education institutions to their present multi purpose programs.

Teacher Education programs have experienced the benefits of meshing other strong non education academic departments with their Teacher Education specialty.

Presently, Teacher Education majors make up approximately 15% of the total student body.

THE NEBRASKA Teacher Education Study showed that nearly 7,500 of Nebraska's practicing teachers and administrators received their highest degree from one of the State Colleges.

Skov pointed out that, "To put this into perspective, the figure for the University of Nebraska system would be approximately 8,400. However, with the exception of Douglas and Lancaster counties, a heavy majority of practicing teachers are products of the State College System."

BY ITSELF, the study showed that quality evaluation by numerous agencies is conducted at Chadron, Kearney, Peru and Wayne State College.

Opportunities include accreditation reviews by three separate bodies, and the findings of the study itself, which used four consultants, all from outside Nebraska.

RECOMMENDATIONS of the Nebraska Coordinating Commission, found in the State College report, were helpful in validating efforts that are already in progress at the State Colleges.

Suggestions included that the Board of Trustees of Nebraska State Colleges review teacher education programs, increase the study of communication skills, and develop a proposed system for a follow-up study on graduates from the State Colleges.

Skov said, "Recognizing the quality indicators that were reported by the consultants, the State Colleges can appropriately feel very proud of their service to elementary and secondary schools and students in Nebraska."

These proposals have been implemented or have recently undergone study the report showed. "It's always helpful to know we are advancing in the right direction," said Skov.

VARIOUS DEANS from the State Colleges noted that the future course of teacher education in Nebraska may eventually be determined by the level of financial support provided by various public bodies.

Financial support to local school systems will help determine the final attraction and retention of quality teaching personnel.

The question of school district organization, appropriate class size and adequate classroom support may be decided by the state commitment to insure quality educational programs throughout Nebraska.

STATE COLLEGE teacher education programs in Nebraska will continue to play a vital role in providing quality teacher education.

Skov said, "The role that should be played by various interested groups in dealing with this problem on a state level is an interesting one."

The report concluded by suggesting that, "The State Colleges collectively, and each campus inductively, with their major commitments to education, are prepared to remain active participants in such a process."

Randy's Recap

By Randy Hascall

A RARE OPPORTUNITY arose a couple of weeks ago when I received a press pass to the NCAA Wrestling Championships in Ames, Iowa.

I couldn't pass up a chance to see the country's best wrestlers compete so I packed my bags and headed out. I was accompanied by Rick Eckholt and Jon Jacobmeier. Eckholt, a former wrestler in Iowa and at Wayne State, works in The Wayne Herald press room. Jacobmeier is a junior wrestler at Wayne High.

In Ames, we saw Winside wrestling coach Paul Sok and wrestlers Mark Koch and Barry Bowers who also made the trip to Iowa State University.

I was the only person with a ticket for the finals but on Saturday night I checked with some of the "scalpers" about tickets for the final session.

Eckholt conned one scalper out of a finals pass and semifinals pass for $8 total—not bad considering the two tickets regularly sell for that amount. And his seats were only two rows up.

Jacobmeier wasn't quite as lucky but still nabbed tickets for the finals and semifinals at a cost of $12. That wasn't bad either considering that scalpers were asking (and getting) $25 or $30 for a single finals ticket later that evening.

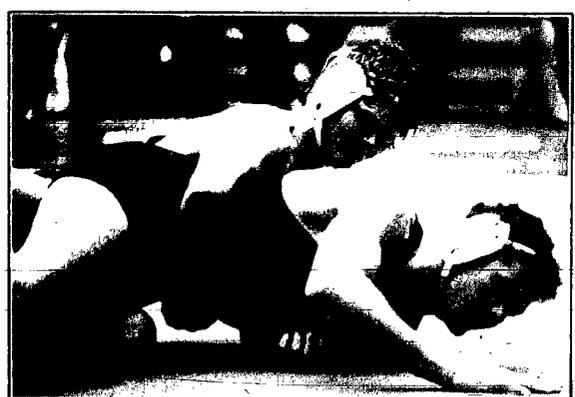

I saw one kind: old man in the crowd who had a spare ticket for the championship round. One of his friends was unable to attend the finals so he sold the ticket for a staggering $6—just enough to cover his cost. That just goes to show there are still some unselfish people in the world.

was super and we all agreed the semifinals were the best. There were upsets and exciting to the finish matches.

I didn't feel the media did a very good job of covering the national tournament. I'm sure the Des Moines Register had substantial, thorough coverage but I couldn't find a spare copy of the paper in Ames or Marshalltown (where we stayed) at any time. The Ames newspaper also gave pretty good coverage to the event.

However, I was certainly disappointed with the Omaha World Herald and Sports II illustrated. Nebraska finished sixth in the nation and all I could find in the World Herald was a short story about Iowa winning another championship.

I would think a sixth place finish and four individual medal winners would warrant a story in the state's dailies. Gary Albright even won the pin title among all the wrestlers.

I didn't expect too much from Sports II illustrated since they aren't known for their wrestling coverage. But, they had even less coverage than I anticipated.

With two photographers and at least one or two writers covering the event, I thought that maybe Sports Illustrated was planning more comprehensive coverage than usual.

I sat next to one of SI's photographers during the finals and he shot as much film in one individual match as I did for the entire finals. I'm sure he got some great shots.

However, the March 22 Sports Illustrated contains only two pages of coverage on the NCAA Tournament. There are four small pictures on the two pages—two action shots, one trophy presentation picture and a set up shot of Dan Gable restraining an overweight wrestler.

The majority of the story concerns the weight problems of Iowa champion Barry Davis. There is little about the actual wrestling tourney and almost nothing about the team race.

ABC's "Wide World of Sports" did a better job as it adequately covered some of the matches. But, with a three day attendance of 73,566 (an NCAA record) and a final round crowd of 14,204, coverage should have been better.

I LEARNED FROM the NCAA Tourney that Iowa University fans and Iowa State fans don't get along very well.

Everytime an Iowa wrestler took the mat, Iowa State fans booed and vice versa. Although it isn't good sportsmanship it did make things interesting.

Those two teams were in a race for first place through most of the tournament.

One, Two, Six, Seven in A League 'Final 4'

Three seeded teams reached the "Final Four" as the first round of A League basketball was completed Monday night.

Top seeded Team One advanced by virtue of a bye while Team Six and Two advanced with expected victories. In an upset, Team Seven topped Team Three, avenging a loss two weeks ago.

Monday's playoff semifinals: 7-30 Team Six vs Team Two, 8-45 Team One vs Team Seven. Winners will meet at 7:30 next Monday (April 5).

Team Seven 40, Team Three 58. Team Seven led from the start and held off a late rally to dispose of Team Three Monday night in the first round of playoffs. The win was only the fourth all year for Team Seven.

Balance paid off for the winners as four players scored 12 points or more. Al Nissen led the triumph with 14 points while John Kvaering, Vic Sharpe and Jay Stoltenberg hit 12 points each.

For Team Three, Tim Koll and Mike Patton teamed up to score 48 of 58 points. Koll topped all players with 36 points and Patton added a dozen. Koll had 10 points in every quarter but the third. Team Three 12 18 10 18-58. Team Seven 14 19 14 13-60. Team Seven 4, Nissen 14, J.

Kealing 12, V. Sharpe 12, J. Stoltenberg 12, M. Ganseboom 6, D. Murray 4.

Team Three: T. Koll 36, M. Patton 12, D. Smith 6, M. Lewon 2, Jeff Edmonds 2.

Team Six 80, Team Four 75. Team Four, which had won on only one game all year, nearly pulled an incredible upset against 10-2 Team Six.

An explosive third quarter gave the underdogs a seven point lead with one quarter to play. However, Team Six tied the game at the end of regulation and prevailed in overtime.

The first half was close with Team Six holding slight edges at the end of each of the first two quarters. A 20-12 scoring edge in the third quarter gave Team Four the lead.

In overtime, Team Four was forced to play with only four players as Ken Daniels fouled out. The loss overshadowed a tremendous performance by Jon Erwin who burned the nets for 46 points including 36 in the first three periods. Rob Mitchell and Dean Carroll each scored 12 points in the loss.

With five players in double figures, Team Six was led by Steve Sorenson with 19 points, Jeff Zeiss with 15, Tod Heier with 14, Kevin Nissen with 14 and Perry Nelson with 10.

Four 16 19 20 11 9-75. Six 19 17 12 18 14-80.

Team Six: S. Sorenson 19, J. Zeiss 15, T. Heier 14, K. Nissen 14, P. Nelson 10, T. Pfeiffer 4, N. Zimmer 4.

Team Four: J. Erwin 46, R. Mitchell 12, D. Carroll 12, D. Peterson 3, K. Daniels 2.

Team Two 61, Team Five 57. The middle two quarters of Monday's were the keys as Team Two earned the fourth berth in the A League semifinals.

After falling behind 12-8 in the first quarter, Team Two rallied to outscore Team Five 28-26 in the second and third periods. The lead held up through the final quarter.

The winners were led by Dave Schwartz with 22 points, Brad Erwin with 14, Jerry Goeden with 12 and Kevin Murray with 12. For Team Five, Marty Hansen canned 26 points, Steve Meyer scored 11 and Todd Christensen scored 10.

Team Two 8 18 20 15-61. Team Five 12 12 14 19-57. Team Two: D. Schwartz 22, B. Schwartz 14, J. Goeden 12, K. Murray 12, Jeremy Edmonds 10. Team Five: M. Hansen 26, S. Meyer 11, T. Christensen 10, D. Hix 4, D. Rose 4, C. Hoefs 2.

WAKEFIELD'S baseball players were working out indoors until nice weather arrived earlier this week.

Final Trojan team should be good

Unless the Wakefield High School Board of Education reverses an earlier decision, this is the last baseball team the high school will field.

The Trojans are hoping to go out in style with a successful 1982 season. The season is scheduled to begin Tuesday (March 30) in a home game with Bancroft.

PITCHING SHOULD be one of Wakefield's strengths. The top three pitchers will be senior Mark Starzl, sophomore Wayne Guy and freshman Brian Soderberg.

"Pitching is always pivotal and I think Mark (Starzl) is potentially one of the best pitchers we've had in years. I don't think he's far behind Rick," said Wakefield coach Joe Coble comparing Starzl with former ace Rick Guy who is now a starter at Wayne State.

Wayne Guy, a younger brother of Rick, is expected to be back up pitcher to Starzl. He is coming off of a knee injury which sidelined him through the football season. Soderberg will move into the number three pitching slot.

"I feel our pitching staff is as good as anyone's. Laurel has Phil Martin and Mike (Wayne coach Mallett) always comes up with some pitchers," Coble said. "Our top two pitchers have experience and if they're healthy they're as good as any."

OUTFIELD WILL be a critical area of concern according to Coble. The veteran coach said Mike Clay is a "fine, proven player" who will fill one spot. Five or six players are competing for the other two outfield positions.

The infield is another Wakefield strong point with most of the positions filled by returning players. Kent Roberts will catch, Keith Roberts will play first base, Jeff Coble returns at second base. Soderberg will play shortstop and Starzl and Guy will alternate at third base and pitching.

The top two hitters off of last year's team both return. Coble led the squad with a .381 average and Starzl batted over .300.

"This is the last year of a traditionally successful baseball program and there is sentiment attached," said Coble. "Everyone would like to finish with a fine year. We won only two games last year and that was unusual. This should be a more meaningful year."

Coble says his squad has good speed and adds that he won't be afraid to give baserunners the signal to steal base. He adds that the team's hitting has to improve from last year.

Team roster and number of letters-earned: Mark Starzl 3, Brian Soderberg, Troy Greve 1, Mike Murphy, Mike Clay 2, Jeff Coble 1, Ted Tullberg 2, Bob Berry, Lee Foote 2, Tom Schwarlen 2, Kent Roberts 3, Mark Kubik, Keith Roberts 3, Dennis Biggerstaff 1, Wayne Guy 1, Steve Peterson 1.

Schedule: March 30—host Bancroft, 4 p.m.; April 2—host Town (doubleheader), 2:30, May 5—host Wayne, 4 p.m.; May 10-14—Districts, May 24-25—State.

Senior Tim Bloom probably will play first base, sophomore Brian Halsch is expected to challenge for an outfield spot and at second base Paul Lotquist and John Chace are top contenders.

WEISENBERG SAID that Robson and the Marquardt brothers need to have a good year offensively in order for Laurel to have a successful season.

One of Laurel's strengths is its defense up the middle. Martin's pitching also is expected to be an asset.

"We have some pretty fair hitters. We have worked fairly well and we'll be trying to win," said Weisenberg.

Other players who will vie for positions are senior Curt Christensen, sophomores Jim Casey and Craig Hanson and freshmen Kyle Daberkow and Mike Granquist.

The season is scheduled to open April 2 when the Bears host Boys

Laurel preparing

Class B runner-up shows strong defense

The Laurel Bears won't be able to defend their 1981 Class B runner-up baseball finish.

That's because all high school baseball teams are lumped together in Class A this season. That won't keep the Bears from shooting for big things in Class A though.

GONE FROM last year's T-2 team are some key players, Joe Olsen, Bryan Buss and Scott Norvell were lost to graduation. Olsen was a top pitcher and he and Buss were two of Laurel's leading hitters.

Although last year's graduation stole some good players, coach Bob Weisenberg still has some talented players returning. Phil Martin, a senior all-state pitcher, tops the list of returnees. Other leaders are Kelly Robson, a junior shortstop and pitcher; Brian Marquardt, a senior catcher and pitcher; Dave Marquardt, a senior third baseman and pitcher; Ron Hirschman, a junior right fielder; Dennis Martinson, a junior left fielder; and Mark Herrmann, a sophomore equality for privileged classes, such as the wealthy.

Justice

"ONE GREAT PROBLEM can be summed up in a question I get asked all the time," he said. "When are you guys going to stop letting off crooks on technicalities?"

Krivosha contended that much of what America is about is found in that question. "The presumption of innocence is a doctrine of jurisprudence in this country. The chief justice continued.

"A charge doesn't mean anything unless and until the government produces proof beyond a reasonable doubt," he explained.

Taking issue with the "letting off crooks" mentality, Krivosha asked a rhetorical question: "What was it they got off of, if they were never on...?"

EXPLAINING THAT when he was in law school he studied "those technicalities," Krivosha said, "they were the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Nebraska."

He reminded his listeners that the "Communists would do away with our system because of those technicalities."

Krivosha said that when he took his oath of office to uphold the U.S. and Nebraska constitutions, there were no qualifications on equality.

The oaths did not qualify equality, he continued. "I did not say equality for almost all persons."

The chief justice contended that one of the problems with the legal system is that the "general public does not know enough about it."

EXPLAINING THAT the courts and officers of the courts are bound by the law no matter what their personal opinions are, Krivosha said: "You yourselves have not bothered to know about the system."

The chief justice also took issue with what he referred to as a common misconception that judges are to be blamed for increased crime today.

Using anecdotes and calling on personal experience, the chief justice offered an alternative suggested to him by a Bostonian: "The upshot of the proposed solution was for the courts to begin 'convicting a few innocent people so the guilty know we mean business.'"

Referring to Franklin Delano Roosevelt's executive order in 1942 that sparked the internment of thousands of Japanese American families, Krivosha indicated that it represented unequal treatment under the law.

"THE U.S. SUPREME COURT said 'in difficult times we have to do difficult things,'" Krivosha said, reminding the audience it was a split decision that upheld FDR's executive order.

"It may have eliminated the problem, but denial of that equality created a greater problem," Krivosha contended.

"There is no question about the need for equality under the law," the chief justice insisted.

"It needs to be equal without exception, equal without regard to who's involved and equal without regard to the individual," he continued.

"When we demand that our rights and safety come first, we place in jeopardy the concept of equality under law," he said.

"THE POWER to bring about equality is with you," Krivosha told his audience.

"But, before you change it (the system) you ought to be sure what it's all about," he said.

"Before we insist on what we want, we need to understand what's important," the chief justice urged his listeners.

"Before you holler for change, understand what it is we have. Decide what it is you want, but do it understandingly."

Acknowledging that these are dangerous times, Krivosha said: "We have been in dangerous times before. Unless we stop for a moment, we will do away with equality under the law."

System

with regard to Krivosha's earlier reference to legal technicalities.

INSISTING THAT the right and duty of the courts to declare "what is a fundamental right," Shaneyfelt said he was concerned about the application of technicalities.

"How far do they go?" he asked.

Shaneyfelt reminded the panel that the courts have held that education is not a fundamental right.

"Certainly, I conceive equality is a kind of democracy," Shaneyfelt said. "The people see it as justice and fairness. What are these technicalities?"

The law college dean asked about legal advice for the poor. With Legal Aid funding experiencing cutbacks across the country, Shaneyfelt asked if the Bar "has a duty to fill the void...to provide legal services (to the poor) no matter what?"

RODNEY SHKOLNICK, dean of Creighton University's College of Law, posed rhetorical questions about equality under the law — the program's theme.

He suggested that treating unequal equals equal was not justice, but that treating equals equal is justice.

"When are people equal?" he asked, reminding his audience that the Bible says there should not be a law for the rich and a law for the poor.

When are they unequal? he asked. "That creates tension between the courts and the public."

Contending that tension is part of the criminal court arena, he reminded his listeners that the U.S. system of justice depends on a non-democratic process.

"PART OF IT is beyond the control of the people," he said. "It is a device for our protection."

Shkolnick also reminded his listeners that amending the U.S. Constitution was a non-democratic process beyond the scope of a simple majority — yet essential "to protecting some basic concepts of democracy."

"The courts are supposed to interpret the law in the light of day," he continued.

Insisting that the judicial system remained a vital check upon the powers of government, Shkolnick said it is "much better to err on the side of the citizen."

He said "freedoms are generally lost through government action."

THE LAW COLLEGE dean urged his listeners to recognize the problems and tensions as courts develop and change the law.

"We have to recognize that judges are there to make decisions," Shkolnick said, suggesting that if the courts are doing their jobs there is going to be tension.

"Tensions become greater in tough times," he continued. "Answers to the same questions change just as people. Times and personalities change."

Shkolnick said the alternatives would be to accept law as what the judges say it is or to never depart from past decisions.

"Either is totally unworkable," he said.

WHEN KRIVOSHA joined the panel, he said that it was important to keep in mind that equality often is discussed "having reached our own decision that it's unfair."

The chief justice insisted that equality requires greater examination. He warned against starting the examination with a conclusion.

"All crimes may be alike," he said. "But, no two criminals are alike."

Krivosha reminded his listeners that court consistency was being attacked by human beings, not machines.

"Why hasn't IBM replaced all judges?" he asked. "Because the decision making requires human values."

INSISTING THAT the law is not a science, the chief justice likened it to an art.

"The answers aren't important, the questions are important," he continued.

Shkolnick, addressing a question about the complexity of law, said: "Society has become more complex. We could all be our own doctor. There was a time when anyone with a leech could do an adequate job. It's a shame, but it's nothing worth bemoaning. Life has become complex, that's a fact."

Reed and Shaneyfelt agreed.

"I would not want to blame it on lawyers," Reed said, explaining that Americans live in an explosion of rules and regulations that require some technical help.

"It's the system under which we operate," he added.

"Law is not complicated," Chief Justice Krivosha added. "It's life that's complicated."

State's bid-rigging scandal straps old contractors

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

The state's bid-rigging scandal has started to come into focus, but questions still remain about how it was able to exist undetected for so long and what will become of the indicted companies and officials.

Contractors and state and federal officials have pleaded together information that indicated bid rigging on state highway projects had almost become an accepted practice.

Attorney General Paul Douglas says it amounted to "ferritizing," and projects were passed around among the companies involved. If it was agreed a particular company would get the project, other involved contractors would submit higher bids. The "courtesy" was extended to them on later projects.

THE STATE Roads Department has said it won't let indicted companies or officials take part in this month's bid letting, at least not directly.

New companies have sprung up since the indictments have been issued by a federal grand jury, and records indicate some people associated with the indicted companies are part of the new corporations. That prompted a debate among some state officials about whether — and to what extent — the old companies were and should be involved in the new companies.

The state Roads Department said it wouldn't accept bids from indicted companies or new companies whose officers had been indicted. But department officials conceded "old" company money, no doubt, was financing the new companies, and they seemed to think that would be OK.

Douglas and Gov. Charles Thone, however, made it clear they didn't want the new companies to, in any way, be connected with the indicted companies and officials. And if there was that connection, they didn't want the new companies bidding on state projects.

THE ROADS Department no doubt was aware some of the largest and most active contractors and construction companies were among those indicted. The department probably wanted the security of knowing experienced operations were bidding on state highway projects.

But Douglas and Thone don't think new corporations that are financed by people indicted for bid rigging should be allowed to bid on projects in this month's letting. And Thone pledged to use his power to see that doesn't happen.

Thone acknowledges he's exposing a "get tough" policy, but he thinks it's warranted.

Bid rigging, after all, did go on undetected — probably for decades.

Thone says bid rigging cannot be tolerated, and the state will do whatever it can to prevent bids from being rigged again.

But it's questionable whether bid rigging now or in the future can be prevented completely.

BOTH STATE and federal officials have said Nebraska's bid letting process was and has been a good system, yet bid rigging occurred.

Maybe what it takes to keep bid rigging from occurring is an occasional shakeup, such as the recent indictments. But that's a time consuming and costly process.

Only time will tell whether the administration's current "get tough" policy has lasting effects. In the short term, however, it can be expected that contractors will be wary of rigging bids.

POWER LINE — It seems like it's been South Dakota vs. Nebraska all the way through the Mandan power line debate.

For awhile, the South Dakota Public Utilities Commission seemed to be one-up on Nebraska. The PUC rejected the transmission line, which would run from Canada to Nebraska — through South Dakota.

But now it appears to be one up for Nebraska. The state Power Review Board says it's not bound by the PUC decision, and the Nebraska agency has granted approval to build the $486 million, 500-kilovolt line.

Meanwhile, the Nebraska Public Power District, which has proposed the line, is appealing the PUC decision.

THE POWER REVIEW Board's chairman, Richard Wood, said his agency — not South Dakota — should decide matters of public interest in the state.

In all due respect to South Dakota, I think this board is better equipped and more able to make decisions on public need in Nebraska," Wood said.

Wood and his two colleagues on the board concluded South Dakota isn't authorized to decide what's right for Nebraska. Plus, Wood says the evidence supports the need for NPPD's proposed power line.

But the squabble between the two states probably isn't over. There's always the litigation route, and it would be somewhat surprising if someone doesn't try that approach. If no one else, the South Dakota landowners might act, especially since they're opposed to having the line cross their land.

A solution probably shouldn't be expected too soon, especially since the two state hold such opposite views.

Building foundations

Dr. Lyle Seymour will be hard to replace. When the Wayne State College president retires in June, he will leave a pair of executive shoes that promise to be hard to fill.

Fortunately, after 30 years of continuous service to the college, Seymour will not be turning his back on an institution that he has helped build.

In fact, the retiring president is embracing a challenge that, if anything, has all the potential for underpinning the institution's survival in the decades to come.

It is a credit to the retiring president that he is willing to trade the security of years spent at the helm of WSC for the formidable challenge presented within the structure of the Wayne State Foundation.

The selection of Seymour for the foundation post is not only logical, but wise. The retiring president has been an integral part of an institution that he, in turn, must present to potential benefactors.

Seymour knows higher education. But, more important, he knows WSC higher education. He, in effect, will be representing the reality of a concept he built.

That will speak well for WSC's future as a state college closely tied to a vibrant community. If, years ago, the Nebraska State Colleges board had set out to build a representative to take on the foundation responsibilities, it could not have built a better one than the retiring WSC president.

Seymour's task will not be an easy one. He is accepting the challenge at a time when there is some doubt about this nation's commitment toward higher education.

That leaves Seymour with the double duty of selling the concept of higher education, generally, and the WSC program, specifically.

Certainly, his success, to some degree, will depend on the community's continued support of the college in every sense of the word.

As qualified as he is, Seymour cannot do the job alone. Without the help of this community, the future of the college becomes a serious question. And, if that happens, the future of Wayne becomes a serious problem.

It is extremely important that each and every one of us becomes a member of the foundation. WSC sales staff under the direction of the retiring president.

To do otherwise is to disregard our future, and a future for our children.

another viewpoint

The gray train

Sen. William Armstrong, whose state of Colorado faces perpetual water scarcity, makes a valid point when he contrasts benefits from water reclamation projects in the West with Federal spending projects that offer no return.

In a recent "Denver Post" article, Sen. Armstrong noted, "The Washington Metro subway system, for example, is costing the nation's taxpayers about $10 billion, approximately the same amount as the total invested in all Western water projects since the turn of the century. But the subway won't ever repay the taxpayers a dime."

Congress itself is partly to blame, as are former managers of the regional transit system. Both granted exorbitant and unwarranted concessions to the labor unions.

The 50-year-old Davis-Bacon Act, which Congress refuses to repeal, requires contractors to pay top union wages on metro construction. According to a federal study, the act's requirements that pay match prevailing scales will add an estimated $150 million to construction costs. The act applies to all federally funded construction.

Repeal of this outdated law alone would save an estimated $1.5 billion to $2.4 billion in federal construction costs each year.

The system inherited a costly format of labor negotiations almost unprecedented for public bodies, permitting an arbitration panel rather than publicly elected officials to make final decisions.

Contracts require the system to pay union employees a cost-of-living increase and to pay it four times a year.

A court decision requires payment even during periods when the contract lapses out of existence.

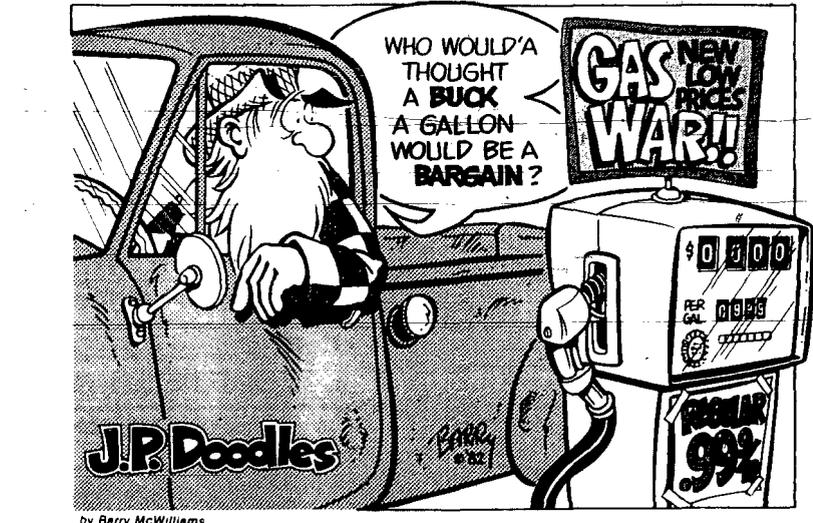

As the senator noted, the system serves the needs of some 3.5 million residents. Nonetheless, it is a perfect example of a federal spending project unlikely to repay a dime.

Death penalty question resurrected

Battle on over banking bill

Merle's Message from the Unicameral

LB 626, the controversial banking bill, which would allow multibank holding companies to own up to nine banks in Nebraska, was back before the Legislature again last week.

Prior to its advancement to Final Reading, an amendment was attached to the bill which would have allowed countywide branch banking instead of limiting it to the corporate limits of a city as it is now.

Due to some confusion as to the contents of the amendment, it was mistakenly adopted as part of the bill. This required for their action last week to undo the mistake and re advance LB 626 to Final Reading.

THERE COULD have been a few problems with this maneuver, but everyone agreed that in all fairness the bill should be corrected and re advanced in the form originally intended.

The Legislature has been almost evenly divided on the bill so far. As I have stated before, I am opposed to the bill because I think our small banks serve my district and all of Nebraska well and passage of LB 626 will only help the large banks.

The Legislature also dealt with this year's bill to end the death penalty. LB 202 would substitute a mandatory 30-year sentence in place of the death sentence for those convicted of first-degree murder.

senator merle von minden

Several attempts have been made in the last few years to eliminate the death sentence, but none have been successful. This year was no exception. The bill was killed last Wednesday, but a motion to reconsider our action has been made so we will probably take the matter up again next week.

I AM PERSONALLY opposed to eliminating the death penalty because I do believe it serves a purpose. It may not deter everyone in all circumstances, but in deterring some, it does save lives.

LB 774, which requires a school board to give a hearing to a probationary teacher before it can terminate that teacher's contract, passed on Final Reading last Friday. When a teacher is hired, he or she is employed on a probationary basis for the first two or three years, depending on a probationary basis for the first two or three years, depending on the Class of the school district.

Prior to the passage of this bill, a school board could simply choose not to rehire a questionable teacher if he or she were still in the probationary period. Now a hearing will be required before terminating their contracts.

I OPPOSED THIS bill because I feel that the school boards have enough problems trying to hire and retain the best teachers for our children. Time is needed to observe and evaluate these probationary teachers. It is difficult to weed out the poor teachers under our present method and LB 774 just puts another burden on the school board.

It looks as if we will go without new license plates for another year if LB 759 is passed. It was advanced to Select File last Wednesday. The governor has estimated that delaying the issuance of new license plates will save the State approximately two million dollars.

Several alternatives were proposed including an amendment which would have provided for new plates this year. It would have required one plate for each vehicle to be displayed on the rear bumper only. All attempts to amend the bill failed.

Getting everyone in the Legislature to agree on something does not happen every often, but it happened last Thursday. On a 43-0 vote the Legislature declared March 19 to be Agriculture Day in recognition of the important role that agriculture plays in the lives of all Nebraskans.

Next week promises to be interesting as the Legislature attempts to tackle some more appropriations issues.

Things are not looking up down on the farm...

By M.M. Van Kirk
Nebraska Farm Bureau

Things are not going to get better "down on the farm" or back in Detroit or Peoria until economic conditions throughout the nation improve, and no amount of political gimmickry and jawboning is going to change that reality.

American workers without jobs are not going to buy beef steak and choice hams and bacon in 1982 any more than they did back in 1932. A very sizable percentage of those who are working and struggling with inflated family expenses can't afford to finance new homes and automobiles at 15 to 18 percent rates.

And those who can afford such purchases and financing aren't helping American recovery prospects by giving foreign workers 25 percent of the U.S. auto market.

FARM PRODUCTS, just like Detroit automobiles and farm equipment made in Peoria, Moline or Grand Island, are to sell, consume and use, not sit in bins or on factory and retail sales lots and build up interest and storage costs.

Manufacturers and labor unions have shown signs recently that they are getting the point that a closed plant benefits no one and that having a job is a great deal better than depending on unemployment and welfare.

Their current efforts to cooperate and revitalize the domestic auto making industry deserve the support and applause of all Americans.

It makes no more sense to support products from countries which apply protective tariffs and discriminatory handicaps against U.S. products than it does to make it worthwhile for U.S. companies to import foreign sugar for their refineries while reducing contracted acreage with American cane and sugar beet products.

THE BASIC reason that the nation's interest rates are of present levels is that the federal government must compete in the money market with huge borrowings to cover annual deficits that are now projected at $90 to $100 billion and more.

Such deficits could be eliminated by a combination of maintaining tax rates and reduced spending, even if that reduction includes defense items and farm programs.

It begs to be said that the Reagan Administration which promised a new direction to the nation's economy has turned its back on the one thing that conservatives have been advocating for nearly 50 years — a balanced federal budget on a consistent basis.

Every farmer and rancher and the operator of any business knows that the solution to survival in a time of economic stress lies in maintaining or increasing operating revenues while finding ways to reduce operating costs.

NO-HOMEMAKER ever told her husband that they could solve the family budget problems if he would take a cut in his "bring home" pay.

Yet a highly-touted feature in the Administration's economic recovery and inflation control program has been a 3-year tax cutting plan that is partly responsible for the projections of those unacceptable deficits.

Government cannot borrow the country into economic recovery and prosperity any more than farmers and ranchers can borrow and store their way into prosperity or even long-term survival.

This nation has the resources, the skills and the work force to turn its economic direction around if only its people and leadership would get back to basics and forego politics.

If you have a problem or a suggestion about state government, now's the time to contact your state senator. Wayne area residents are represented by two legislators: Sen. Merle Von Minden of Atton and Sen. Elroy Hinton of Coleridge. Letters to the senators need only be addressed to them c/o the State Capitol, Lincoln, NE 68500.

Researcher says rising food needs can be met

Can the agricultural research community provide the tools and techniques to farmers that will enable them to meet ever-growing food needs? Can the be done in light of the fiscal constraints that our country has decided are necessary in the years ahead?

A research administrator, Paul J. Fitzgerald, feels strongly that agricultural research scientists and engineers in the federal, state and private sectors can meet these challenges. They can, he said, if budgets are invested prudently among the various sectors and if the right research priorities are set and acknowledged by each sector.

Fitzgerald, with USDA's Agricultural Research Service, chose Agriculture Day, chaired nationally by Agriculture Secretary John Block, to say something good about curbs on federal spending.

"THESE CURBS are forcing those of us in the agricultural research community to spend much more time on joint planning and setting of priorities so as to focus our resources on the most important research activities. And, let's face it, agricultural research is an investment in our future — one of this nation's best inflation fighters. If we invest wisely and steadily, we will have the technology that we will need and we will avoid the kind of crisis inspired programs that too often have characterized the past."

In the meantime, he pointed out, "We are in a client supported provider role. That role mandates that we help farmers increase the rate of food production with the rate of demand for food. The gap now shows about a 2 percent annual deficit in the rate of increased productivity needed to meet the demand."

The former crop scientist emphasized that closing the gap will not be easy in light of limitations. Fewer and less valuable research dollars is one. A shortage of talent — fewer scientists and engineers — is another. But perhaps the most serious constraint, he said, are the loss of soil and degradation of water inherent when row crops are grown on highly erodible marginal lands.

"We must find ways to produce more food and feed on our best acres, so that we can reduce the use of marginal lands from row crop production," Fitzgerald said. "We must also work the snags out of no till and conservation tillage practices so that they can find wider use in protecting our soil and water resources."

"I am a realist," Fitzgerald said, "but at the same time, I try to reflect the vision and dedication of our scientists and engineers who are finding ways to overcome the limitations. Much research is in laboratory pipelines that, once applied, will reduce soil and water losses, save energy, help cut costs of farming, and increase productivity."

AS EXAMPLES, Fitzgerald cited projects underway or recently completed in north central states by scientists of his agency.

—Two alfalfa lines, developed at St. Paul, Minn. for Midwest growing conditions, produced 166 pounds of nitrogen per acre versus more than a widely used variety. An annual alfalfa fixes nitrogen and stores it in the roots and crowns until killed by frost. The new variety should be available in 2 or 3 years. Grown in rotation with corn, it will provide excellent protection against erosion, and it could provide all the nitrogen needed for the corn crop.

—Plant physiologists at Urbana, Ill. are pursuing the riddle of photorespiration of soybeans and how it can be decreased. If they can stop the energy wasting process, they could raise average yields in the Midwest from about 30 bushels to 45 bushels an acre. "That would mean, of course, that growers could produce the same amount of soybeans on a third less acreage — and at less cost," Fitzgerald said. "I hope that some of this nation's highly erodible marginal lands then could be put in grass or legumes."

—Crop and soil scientists at Columbia, Mo. found in 4-year studies that corn yielded 4 more bushels of corn an acre on no-till plots than under conventional tillage, and average annual soil loss was held to 0.6 tons an acre compared with 4.3 tons lost per acre on conventionally tilled land.

"No-till planting is an impressive way to prevent erosion," Fitzgerald said. "However, yields often suffer under some farming conditions because germination and emergency are delayed or pest and disease problems are magnified. New systems for growing crops under no-till are needed."

—Scientists at Clay Center, Neb. have found that lambs grow faster, reach market weight sooner, and convert feed more efficiently when they are exposed to 16 hours of light daily as compared to 8 hours. With this management system, lambs could be marketed every 72 weeks and the marketing time adjusted to take advantage of seasonal prices.

Concluding his remarks on Agriculture Day, sponsored nationally by the Agricultural Council of America, Fitzgerald said, "As we look ahead, there is no deficit of need, no scarcity of ideas, no lack of resolve in the agricultural community. If we together in the research community husband our resources and invest them prudently, and use the vision and courage of our scientific convictions, we can meet whatever challenges the future may bring."

The ag mechanics team (from left) of Dennis Smith, John Stapleton, Deven Nice, Keith Rohde and instructor Thomas Wilmes won districts and will compete at state. The state champion will qualify for nationals. The welding team of Derwin Roberts and Jody Mahler took second at districts and will compete at state. In individual ag mechanic judging at districts, Rohde took top honors, Stapleton placed third, Nice took sixth and Smith finished fourth. In welding, Roberts was third in arc welding and Mahler was third in the acetylene division. Districts were held at Norfolk several weeks ago.

FALL CHISEL PLOW

Farmers have been asking about the effectiveness of fall chisel plowing. Here are the results of some experiments at the Northeast Station.

In the fall of 1976, Northeast Station started to compare three tillage systems (fall chisel, spring plow, and tillplant). Average yields for 1977 and 1978 were 116, 121, & 119 respectively. The small difference in yields was one to natural variation in the field and not the tillage system.

Based on the data from these two years, there appears to be no benefit from using the chisel plow on silt loam soils. Use of the chisel plow in the fall may have some benefit where the soil texture is a clay loam or silty clay loam.

HEIFER CALVING TIME

Dr. Duane Rice, extension veterinarian, makes these recommendations on heifer calving.

Frequent check up of all cows and heifers due to calve is absolutely necessary if one is to have a good calf crop.

Calving difficulty is more frequent in first calf heifers, and the producer will reap valuable benefits by following a rigid routine of observation and examination of certain animals when necessary. The ability to determine early enough when the cow is in trouble will provide a veterinarian opportunity to deliver a live calf.

In heifers the pelvis frequently is too small to deliver a large calf. If this opening is too small the person attempting to deliver the calf should not spend more than 15 to 20 minutes attempting delivery. If it takes longer than that, contact a veterinarian. He will take proper measures to ensure safe delivery, which may include surgical techniques.

One reason many first calf heifers encounter difficulty in calving is because they have been bred by bulls that are not screened for calving ease or these heifers were simply too light at breeding time. They should weigh somewhere in the range of 650 pounds before breeding. Exotic breeds should weigh 570-800 pounds when they are bred.

Heifers raising their first calf should be fed a higher level following calving for the first few months, until going to grass, to increase conception. It is not uncommon for nearly 1/3 of the first calf heifers to fail to conceive while a calf is nursing.

Beware of rural fires

Any day now you may be hearing all sorts of news about rural fires in Nebraska. That's the worry of a Nebraska Forest Service forester who heads the statewide Rural Fire Protection Program.

Don Westover explains that there is a heavy "fuel load" in the open country—leftover grass and weeds from the 1981 growing season. And as the grass dries out and March winds blow, fire dangers will run extremely high. One careless cigarette, he says, may start a damaging wildfire.

Compared to the five year average, 1981 rural fires were up 17 percent. The area burned was over 23,000 acres. Loss of capital improvements and crops in 1981 fires was about one million dollars. In 1980, fire losses ran more than $1.3 million. Westover shows 2,327 rural fires reported in 1981. March is traditionally a big month for rural fires in Nebraska. Westover points out that with last year's heavy growth of grass and weeds to provide fuel, he thinks this March may bring big fire troubles.

4-H speaking contests planned

More than 2,000 Nebraska 4-H members are finishing up county Timely Topic Public Speaking Contests. The winners soon will be moving on to the seven district competitions scheduled in five regions of the state.

The contests began more than 40 years ago and traditionally have been sponsored by radio station KFAB in Omaha.

The contests have two youth divisions—one for 9 to 13 year olds, and one for 14 to 19 year olds. All contestants get ribbons for county competition, and pens at the district level.

District winners in the older youth divisions compete for two $250 scholarships to one of the University of Nebraska colleges. The scholarships will be awarded to the two top winners of the state contest to be held Mon., June 21, during the State 4-H Conference on the UNL East Campus.

The district contests are as follows: March 27—Lincoln, April 17—Chadron, April 17—Halsey, April 24—Curtis, April 24—Holdrege, May 1—Norfolk, May 1—Aurora.

Economy clouds dairy outlook

The outlook for the dairy industry is clouded by the uncertain employment and income situations of the general economy, said Dr. Mike Turner, extension marketing specialist at the University of Nebraska.

"Prices received for milk by dairy producers are expected to remain at 1981 levels throughout the new year," Turner said. "Production will remain high and government price supports for milk used in manufactured dairy products will remain at the October 1981 level through September 1982 (10 per hundredweight), as provided in the new farm bill," he said.

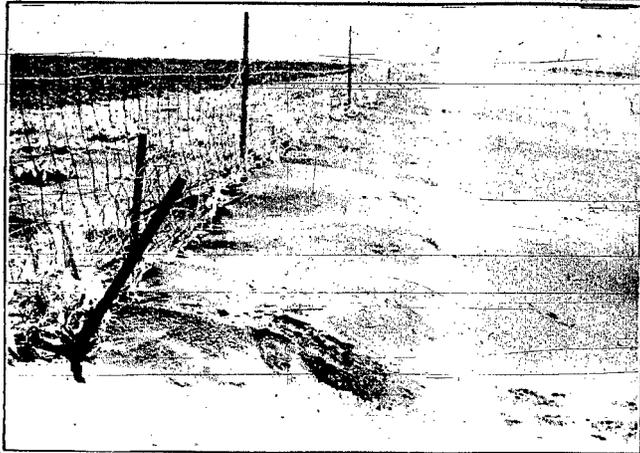

With encouragement from the budget-conscious Reagan Administration, the U.S. Department of Agriculture elected not to increase the price support level last April. The net increase, as provided by legislation, will be in October when the price support is set at $13.25 per hundredweight, Turner said.

Ag Institute applications

Applications to attend the 11th annual Nebraska Agricultural Institute are now available from high school vocational agriculture instructors, home economics instructors, county extension agents, guidance counselors, or by contacting the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 8497, Lincoln, Nebraska 68509-4947. Applications must be mailed to the Nebraska Department of Agriculture by April 15.

The theme for the Nebraska Agricultural Youth Institute is "Looking Toward New Horizons." The institute will be held July 19-23.

NAYI gives 200 high school juniors and seniors a chance to exchange opinions and ideas on important issues and concerns of today's agriculture. Delegates selected to attend NAYI will come to Lincoln to interact with agricultural leaders, government officials, experts in many areas of agriculture and others involved in agricultural youth.

WIND EROSION did its damage on this particular field.

ASCS Photography

96,000 acres damaged

Wind erosion is down

Wind damaged 38 percent less land in Nebraska this year from November through February than during the same period a year earlier.

Gene Sullivan, state conservationist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service, said wind damaged nearly 96,000 acres of land. This figure compares to the 155,000 acres of land damaged last year.

There is also 331,000 acres of land in condition to blow, which is the lowest figure in three years," said Sullivan. "In 1981, we had over 805,000 acres ripe for wind erosion. Most of the improvement comes from good fall moisture, excellent wheat growth and large amounts of residue from last year's yields reducing acres damaged and in condition to blow," he said.

SCS CONSIDERS land damaged if enough soil has been removed or deposited to subject the land to further erosion hazard, to cause a lower yield or to impair its capacity to produce.

"In the spring, now that the snow has melted and the residues and cloddiness from fall tillage begins to breakdown, is when we normally get the most wind erosion," said Sullivan.

Nearly 70 percent of the land damaged is in Morrill and Pierce Counties. Lack of cover crops, lack of last year's crop residue remaining, and fall tillage were the main factors on the land that was damaged according to SCS.

Nearly 70 percent of the acreage that could have soil movement by wind erosion comes from five counties reported by SCS field offices in these counties and acres in these counties: Chase—46,000; Morrill—50,000; Pierce—30,000; Scotts Bluff—70,000; and Box Butte—30,000.

OTHER COUNTIES included in the report are: Arthur, Banner, Cheyenne, Deuel, Dundy, Frontier, Furnas, Garden, Gosper, Harlan, Hayes, Hill, Kimball, Keith, Lincoln, McPherson, Perkins and Red Willow.

Each year the SCS compiles wind erosion reports covering seven months, November through May. Additional information on how farmers and ranchers can protect their land is available from the local Soil Conservation Service office.

Innovator's fair is set April 3

Nearly 50 exhibits will be on display for public inspection at the Innovator's Technology Fair on April 3 in Hartington. Featured exhibits include wood splitting and heating equipment, home built solar collectors and alcohol distillation. The Technology Fair has been organized by the Small Farm Energy Project to demonstrate do-it-yourself projects that can help farmers reduce operating expenses around the farm. The fair will be held at the Cedar County Fairgrounds.

The Innovator's Technology

Fair will feature home built tire turning equipment to convert old tractor tires to useful feed bunks and other uses. Home built wood splitters and saws will demonstrate how wood heating can be low cost. Information will be available on building portable solar collectors for home space heating and grain drying. There will also be informational displays on direct marketing, solar heating of dairies and tillage. Public agencies, including the Soil Conservation Service and the Extension Service will also have information on assistance for farmers.

The agenda of the day's activities, including demonstrations of composting, wood splitters and alcohol distillation, will be available next week.

The Fair is intended to give the public, particularly farmers, the opportunity to learn more about projects that farmers can build themselves to reduce farm costs.

More information on the Fair is available at the Small Farm Energy Project, phone 402-254-6893. Other local sponsors include the Cedar Co. NFO and the Cedar Co. Farmers Union.

ASCS program

Conservation use required

To control erosion, insects, weeds and rodents on cropland taken out of production as a result of 1982 farm program provisions, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service requires program participants to devote this land to certain conservation uses.

"First of all, the conservation use acreage must be eligible land which meets certain size and width measurements," Erwin Morris, chairman of the Wayne County ASC Committee, said. The land designated as conservation use acreage must be devoted to an approved conservation practice that will protect the land from wind and water erosion. "This land has to have protection established on it as soon as possible after the beginning of the normal period for planting spring crops," he said.

Conservation use acreage must be cropland that was planted to small grains or row crops, or devoted to hay within one of the last two years. Approved conservation uses include annual, biennial, or perennial grasses and legumes, volunteer stands other than weeds, small grains and crop residue from use of no till or minimum till practices. Other practices may also be approved, according to Morris.

Special cover and practices are approved by the State ASC committee with the concurrence of the State conservationist and also various wildlife agencies, organizations and other interested groups to assure that the conservation use acreage will be adequately protected.

The ASCS official said conservation use acres may not be harvested. Grazing, however, will be permitted between Oct. 1st and April 1st. Farmers who comply with the acreage reduction programs will be eligible for price support loans, target prices and the reserve program.

Applications for the 1982 programs may be filed until April 16. For more information on conservation use acres or other program details, contact the Wayne County ASCS office at 120 Logan St. or call 375-2453.

THE GRAND CHAMPION female honor at the Nebraska Polled Hereford Association Show was won by JB Lady Victor 637M. This daughter of JB Victorious 446J was exhibited by JB Ranch, Wayne, Neb.

JB Ranch earns top honor

JB Ranch of Wayne and Satorie Farms Inc. of North Bend, claimed the top honors at the Nebraska Polled Hereford Association Show on March 6.

Evaluating the classes of the 49 head competition in St. Paul was Chester Gullikson, of Gullikson Polled Herefords, Bath, S.D.

After sifting through the heifer lineup, judge Gullikson selected JB Lady Victor 637M to receive the champion female trophy. She is a June 1980 daughter of JB Victorious 446J and was shown by JB Ranch, Oscar L. Tegmeyer and Son, Davenport, claimed the reserve female title on Future Lady Lamp 119, an April 1981 heifer sired by Gerdes Future Spidel.

SF Victor J151 8044 earned the top bull honors for Satorie. The champion is a March 1980 bull sired by OR Dom 549 J151. The reserve championship bull banner was presented to KJ G&R Justa Miracle 12M, a son of GH Justa Banner 305K. The November 1980 winner is co-owned by Kevin Jensen, Courtland, Kan., and G&R Polled Herefords, Marysville, Kan.

Pre-measurement of acreage is suggested

Before planting spring crops covered under the 1982 acreage reduction programs, Ray Butts, an official of the Wayne County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, says it is very important that farmers consider obtaining pre-measurement of their acreages.

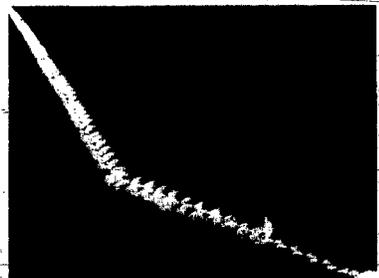

"At the request of the farmer, we will measure, reference and mark out fields with stakes prior to planting. The pre-measured acreage is guaranteed and it is important in helping farmers plant which fields to plant and which to designate as reduced acreage," Butts said.

To be assured of program compliance, farmers are required to plant within the stakes that are placed when the land is measured. After planting, they are required to report their crop acreages to ASCS.

The agency is accepting pre-measurement service requests now. Other producer services include measuring total cropland, field or subdivisions to be planted and land areas for other purposes. Fees vary, based on the type of service rendered.

To request the service, call 375-2453 or visit the local ASCS office at 120 Logan St. in Wayne.

More Valley Corner Systems every year, because it's the least costly investment per acre.

It's going to be harder to make farming pay off in the years to come. Harder for many reasons.

So if anything makes sense, it's to maximize the potential of the land you now farm. Irrigating with a Corner System is one way. Irrigating with a Corner System is even better.

A Corner System can irrigate 19 to 45 more acres than a regular pivot, producing extra income on acres already being farmed. That's why nearly one out of every six pivots sold today is a Corner System.

And when it comes to Corner Systems, nobody knows more than Valmont. They're proven reliable with nearly 3,000 systems in operation. That's at least 20 times more than any other brand.

Before you buy any center pivot, see us. We'll tell you how a Valley Corner System can add to your bottom line profits while being the least costly investment per acre.

Valley Corner is the Best.

Saturday, March 27, 1982

HELP!!! This is the time of year that we are getting in trucks of merchandise that we purchased at the Dallas Winter Market in January, and due to business conditions, we bought too much and have no place to put it. Our warehouses are full, and our display floor is jammed. We are taking this 8 Hours to give you the most fantastic buys you have seen in your lifetime, and at the same time help us make room for more new furniture arriving daily.

WOW!!! Have you ever wished you had the latest in flotation sleep? Well now you can at a price you can afford, with this hybrid water mattress and foundation. You can even use your own bedding. This is one of our finest and it can be yours for only $299.95.

Just a few items to give you an idea of price, check these out. Grandfather clock, regular price $659.95, buy it for only $359.95 or this ceiling fan with 3 speed reversible motor for only $74.95 and one group of end tables of odds and ends you can save over half on, starting as low as $29.95 for solid pine.

To sum it all up, we say there is no one that can beat our prices no matter how they try. We don't buy other store's old merchandise and we're not going out of business. We sell only quality brand name furniture for the lowest prices anywhere. So take advantage of this crazy sale and really save money. We have a credit plan to fit your budget with Free delivery and set up at no extra charge.

Oh Yes... everything is reduced. Just take a look! We are sure you will find something you want.

How about a dinette set?? Wood or metal, from Chromcraft or Daystrom, the two most famous names in dining furniture. We have them and we're going to sell them starting as low as $199.95, or this Daystrom 5 pc. set with swivel casters chairs that was $389.95, For Only $269.95.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY CELEBRATED
St. Patrick's Day was celebrated at the Wayne Senior Citizens Center on March 17 with the wearing of the green. Fines were given to those not complying. Alice Dorman and Lucille Wert crocheted green lapel shamrocks which were the fines. Decorations for the monthly potluck dinner that day were in green and white and included spring bouquets. Seventy persons attended the noon meal. The invocation was given by Genevieve Craig. Mary Nichols, R.N., registered 55 persons for the free blood pressure clinic held from 9 a.m. to noon. Speaker following the luncheon was Wayne County Judge Mrs. Luverna Hilton. Her topic, "A Day in Court," was followed with a question and answer period. The H and F Polka Band of Pilger entertained the group in the afternoon, and lunch was served. COORDINATOR ATTENDS BOARD MEETING Georgia Janssen, coordinator of the Wayne Senior Citizens Center, attended the Northeast Nebraska Area Agency on Aging board meeting last Thursday in Albin. The board approved a grant for a mini bus radio system for the Wayne Center. SERMONETTE GIVEN
