Depressed farm economy sparks 6.8% drop

Northeast Nebraska cropland prices down

Eastern Nebraska has been hardest hit by a softening of land prices during the past year. The obvious result of low farm earnings and high interest rates, according to two University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural economists.

As of Feb. 1, 1982, average land values in the eastern third of the state were down about 6 to 7 percent from a year ago. Overall, average farmland values in Nebraska were reported down nearly 4 percent over the same period, said Dr. Bruce Johnson and Dr. Ronald Hanson, UNL associate professors of ag economics.

"Until commodity prices rebound and farm income levels improve, the land market will remain sluggish," Johnson said.

FARMLAND values have declined in Nebraska in only one other year over the past two decades — a 4 percent drop in 1977.

The pair explained that the results are the preliminary findings of the Nebraska Farm Real Estate Market Survey. They have conducted the survey for the last five years.

Declines in the rest of the state were smaller. In fact, land values remained basically unchanged in the Panhandle and South Central Nebraska, they said.

"The year ending Feb. 1 represents quite a contrast to the 1970s," Johnson said. "Couple an 8 percent general rate of inflation during that period with the 4 percent decline in nominal values and the real value of Nebraska farmland declined an average of 12 percent during the year," Johnson defined "real value" as purchasing power in inflation adjusted dollars.

FOR OWNERS who are borrowing heavily, this decline has serious implications, the pair said. Many farmers have used "heavy debt leveraging" — buying more land at relatively low interest rates using inflated land values as collateral — to expand their operations during the 1970s.

Now, interest rates that exceed the rate of inflation have created serious cash flow problems for heavily indebted producers, they said.

During the 1970s, farmland appreciated at approximately twice the rate of inflation, doubling its real value. But present record high interest rates tend to discount the market value of farmland, the ag economists said.

In fact, without a significant amount of seller financing at rates below those of financial institutions, they said, recent declines might have been even greater.

HIGH INTEREST rates have removed many potential buyers from the farmland market, and have contributed to a higher incidence of forced sales, the team said. Should such activity increase, they said, land values will continue to decline during the coming months.

Land value changes varied by type of land.

The largest percentage decline statewide was for dryland cropland that has irrigation potential: 7 percent.

Statewide gravity irrigated cropland values showed the least decline for cropland: 1.8 percent.

And center pivot irrigated land values were down overall an average of 3.6 percent.

THESE CHARTS, prepared by University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural economists, show the average value of farmland across the state as of Feb. 1, and the percentage of change from a year ago.

Farmland speculation may be a dead furrow

Softening land prices and rising interest rates may have turned the wisdom of farmland speculation during the 1970s into the folly of the 1980s.

Dr. Bruce Johnson, associate professor of agricultural economics at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said that while interest rates remained lower than the rate of increase in land values, using extensive credit to finance farmland investment was cheap, easy and profitable.

However, since many farmers expanded their operations by borrowing against their existing land, Johnson said, they are now experiencing severe cash shortages.

JOHNSON MADE these comments early in March in a presentation at a Farm and Ranch Forum in Grand Island entitled, "Management Strategies for the '80s." His presentation was called, "Land Values: Where, Why and How."

Concerning this practice of heavy debt leveraging, Johnson said, "As for agricultural credit, the years of rapid land appreciation also resulted in a considerable buildup of wealth for existing landowner."

In turn, this wealth served as collateral for financing additional purchases of land and other production assets. It is not surprising that the amount of agricultural debt outstanding has risen dramatically as of late. Here in Nebraska, the increase in agricultural debt just since 1977 approaches 90 percent!

Johnson explained that problems brought on by heavy debt leveraging are most likely to hit farmers who have entered into loan arrangements since 1977. Those whose land is largely paid for, or who have fixed rate loans at relatively low interest, will have a stabilizing influence on the market, he said.

UNTIL RECENTLY, landowners experienced a "multiplier" effect on returns to equity, Johnson said, because annual ear nings plus capital gains consistently exceeded the cost of borrowed capital. This was particularly true during the 1970s, when grain prices were up and inflationary psychology stimulated the demand for land, driving up land values.

Now, two back-to-back years of depressed farm income and the promise of a third has slowed the interest of active farmers in the farmland market, he said. The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported that for 1980, the rate of return to equity in agricultural assets fell to 1.5 percent, the lowest level

Unicameral resolution honors WSC president

By a unanimous vote, the Nebraska Unicameral on Wednesday adopted a resolution honoring Dr. Lyle Seymour, retiring president of Wayne State College.

The Unicameral voted 32-0 to adopt LR257 recognizing the long-time educator for his nearly 30 years of continuous service to the Nebraska state college. Dr. Seymour has served as a teacher, a division chairman, a dean and a vice president before assuming the top post in 1972.

Seymour

LR257 was sponsored by State Senators Merle Von Minden of Allen, Shari Apking of Alexandria and Elroy Hefner of Coleridge. Dr. Seymour will retire from the college presidency, and begin work with the Wayne State Foundation in July.

Craft shop owner to buy Gerald's

Another change is about to take place on Wayne's Main Street.

Ownership of the building at 210 Main is shifting from Gerald Bofenkamp of Gerald's Decorating to Mary Monson of The Shepherdess.

Monson, the wife of Rev. Daniel Monson, pastor of Redeemer Lutheran Church, has operated a craft business in the building since October of 1980.

After closing from March 29 to April 5, an expanded version of The Shepherdess will reopen to handle the wallpaper and paint business, according to Monson.

IN ADDITION, the expanded business will share space with a flooring center operated by Donna and Al Shufelt of Wayne. The business expects to place more emphasis on a total decorating service, according to Monson.

Bofenkamp and his wife, LoAnn, have purchased the Chuck Wagon restaurant in Wakefield.

The Monsons have lived in Wayne since August of 1980, when the pastor received a call to Redeemer Lutheran Church.

His wife has operated The Shepherdess since 1975 — first in Wahoo and now in Wayne. The business started small in Wahoo with about $100 in craft supplies, according to Monson.

Today, The Shepherdess has expanded to include a variety of crafts, including yarns, macramé, silk flowers, quilting fabric, doll-making items and an extensive line of instruction books.

THE MONSONS have four children. Their youngest, Steve, graduated from Wayne High School and is a freshman at Midland Lutheran College, Fremont.

A daughter, Diane, a Midland graduate, lives in Fremont with her family.

Tim, also a Midland graduate, teaches science at Nebraska City Junior High School.

Phil is a senior at Bethany Lutheran College, Lindsborg, Kans.

The Monson brothers have been in the painting business during the summer months for eight years.

THE SHUFELTS have lived in Wayne since 1957 with Donna working at Gerald's Decorating since 1974.

They own and operate the Sears & Roebuck store from 210 Main from 1965 to 1969.

A daughter, Mary Kay Carstensen, and her husband, Jeff, are houseparents at Nishard Hall, Wayne State College.

Their son Mark is a WSC junior. Daughter Jenette is attending Dallas Christian College, Dallas, Tex., after operating her own beauty shop in Wayne.

Country boy. . .

Howdy.
From time to time, my Country Boy thoughts bring back memories to my readers.
Sometimes they catch me on the street, or over a cup of coffee.
And, some are moved to write me with their own country memories.
Among those who recently took the time to share, in writing, some fond farm memories is Dwight Iverson, a teacher in the Laurel-Concord School District.

IVERSON'S LETTER is well written.
And, it contains some special thoughts that brought back some fond memories for me.
He wrote to me about his boyhood farm experiences with a special tractor, the Super M.
I cut my farm teeth on an International Harvester Farmall M that my father converted to a Super M. It was one whole of a tractor.
Recently, I mentioned the Howell family farmstead's Super M in a Country Boy column about getting farm machinery ready for spring's work.
Iverson takes it from there as this week's guest Country Boy columnist.

DEAR RANDY:
I thoroughly enjoyed your article, "Country Boy," in Monday's (March 8) paper.
Springtime rekindles my experiences on the farm much the same way it does for you.
There is one part in your article that especially hit home and that was your reference to your Super M.
We also had a Super M, but our Super M had a different role than yours.
It was a specialized tractor with one purpose in life. Our Super M was a bucker.
In the last 10 to 15 years, the bucker has become an endangered species.

WHEN I WAS growing up, bales of hay used to be 4 x 2 feet and weigh between 75 and 100 pounds.
Today's hay usually comes in big loaves, huge squares, circles, cones and parallelograms - all weighing up to 2 tons.
The need for the bucker, as I know it, no longer exists.
As our Super M had one purpose in life, so did I. I was in charge of bucking the bales into the truck.
On the truck were two older brothers and two older cousins (always known as the "piers").
From June 5 to Aug. 25, all I did was drive this Super M harrow skidder across a wide open field, picking up thousands and thousands of bales of hay.

YOU WOULD THINK that it would be easier bucking in bales than piling them. It was not.
Bale piers would pile bales frantically for 2 minutes and then rest for 3.
The bucker would get no rest.
The bucker's job was to pick up as many bales as mechanically possible in the shortest amount of time, deliver them all to the waiting hay truck, unload without knocking any off, and then get back out there and get another load as fast as possible.
Bucking in bales was a much tougher job than it sounds.
You must remember that there were thousands of bales scattered from fence-line to fence-line with gopher mounds and fox-holes scattered between them.

IF YOU COULD manage to dodge these obstacles, and still get lined up parallel to the bales, you prayed that the old Super M would come through.
Speed had to be fast, but not too fast.
Always, (we used) 5th gear (road gear), as our Super M lost 4th gear years before.
The height of the loader had to be between 18 1/4 inches and 19 3/8 inches.
Too high and you ran the teeth into the ground. Too low and the teeth would penetrate the bale.
That required a difficult exit by the bucker and wasted time.
At precisely the right instant, the teeth were lowered and the bale flipped up. On to the next bale.

IF YOU GOT between 12 and 16 bales, you had a pretty good load.
The bucker NEVER stopped to rest. The piers would not permit it.
The sooner you got the hay loaded, the sooner you could run down to the river, shed your sweaty work clothes, and take a dip in the cool refreshing waters.
There was so much to remember and so little room for error in running that bucker.
As you ran the bucker, your right arm was glued onto the steering wheel, fighting to keep proper position between bales, around the gopher mounds and foxholes and any unforeseen bales that magically appeared before your rear tires.

AS WITH MOST Super Ms, ours had no power steering.
Your left arm was fixed on the control lever. This lever did it all.
Pushed forward and down, it raised the loader. Pushed forward, down and out and it raised the loader and dropped the teeth.

Pulled back all the way, it lowered the loader. Pulled back and pushed (in) and it lowered the loader and raised the teeth.
One wrong push or pull and our Super M might go to the big junkyard in the sky.

THERE WERE three major sins that you were always terrified of:
1) Jamming the teeth into the ground.
When this happened, the teeth broke off. There were many days when I would finish the day with six or seven teeth instead of the usual 12.
This not only took up much time to fix when the day was over, but also it hampered the Super M's ability to function properly and get the maximum number of bales.

2) Knocking someone off the stack. (It) was very dangerous to your health.
Big brother and big cousin did NOT like to be knocked off the stack.
You always knew what happened because the remaining piers would look down at you, shaking their heads in dismay... and then you waited for big brother or big cousin to come limping around the truck, teaching you new words that you never knew existed as he rearranged your face.

3) ROLLING THE bucker over. This happened very easily when a bale mysteriously appeared out of nowhere and planted itself under your rear tire.
The Super M would tip ever so slowly, always giving you time to elect.
She would then do her painful act of breaking hoses, muffler, arms and bending her beautiful frame.
The day I did it, I cleared myself easily, pushed off and landed in the short stubble field writhing in pain.
Brothers and cousins jumped off the truck, sprinted 100 yards to where I lay and screamed: "Oh, No!!"
They were soon upon me, literally.
Hands, feet and face were all trampled as they approached poor old Super M.

I GUESS I COULD understand their feelings.
I could be replaced, Super M could not.
Super M was tough, though.
She had handled it twice before, as both brothers had managed the same feat.
No Super M had ever had a tougher life than ours.
She had been through more than all the (Farmall) Hs and 560s in the county combined.
As times changed and the bales became 2 tons instead of 100 pounds, Super M became a victim of progress and was traded in on a 1236 International.

LAST I HEARD she was resting quietly in a grove of trees somewhere in South Dakota.
Sparrows nest in the radiator, fireless hubs prop her up on railroad ties, squirrels dance in the seat and headlights stare infinitely ahead at the rusting grain bin.
Her life had been fulfilled.
Her purpose in life had been accomplished.
If you listen close, you can almost hear her sigh...

Dwight Iverson
Teacher, Laurel

THANK YOU, Dwight. That ending is enough to make any country boy cry.
I'm sure you're thoughts are shared by any farm boy who spent time as a bucker, particularly those in the saddle of Super Ms.
I, too, have been a bucker. But, being the oldest of the Howell boys, I soon moved to plow. We called them "stackers." Same thing.
I preferred the hay stack to the tractor seat.
We started out running a Super H in the bucker (the old yellow-orange DU-AL loader) until my father bought a Farmhand loader.
The Super H was easily tipped because it was the row-crop tricycle model.
However, when we put the Super M, which was a row-crop wide-front model, in the Farmhand loader, we gained much in the way of stability.

MY FATHER DID tip over a bucker during haying season. I was not there when it happened, but he escaped without injury.
It did not roll over, but went tipped onto its side.
Also, I remember a day when I was a very tired bucker. I switched off, though it was forbidden, with a cousin of mine who had had very little experience as a bucker.
Within 20 minutes of the switch, he rammed six of 12 teeth into the ground. The tractor went for open throttle in 5th gear (road gear) to a dead stop in a matter of a few feet.

HE MAY STILL wear the imprint of the steering wheel on his upper lip.
Since, we were not supposed to switch, I am lucky to not be wearing the imprint of my father's belt on my backside.
To add insult to injury, the bucker wasn't even ours.
It belonged to my uncle.
We had borrowed it and the help of his son (my cousin), who smashed it up to put up a field of hay.
I was not very popular at either farmstead for quite a few days.
Catch you next week.

Legislators low-key on the death penalty bill

The issue of the death penalty in Nebraska was again before the Legislature this past week.
The bill LB 202, to abolish the death penalty, is similar to bills that have been introduced in previous years. Therefore, the debate this year was low-key, in contrast to the emotional nature of the issue.
Under the original bill, the death penalty for all categories of first degree murder would have been replaced by a mandatory 30 year sentence.

senator elroy hefner

AN AMENDMENT was passed that would demand the death penalty for persons who commit premeditated murder while they are legally confined in a jail or prison. It would also apply to those who escape from custody and murder someone.
Proponents of the repeal said that the death penalty is not uniformly applied and does not deter murder.
Opponents said that capital punishment would be a deterrent if it were swiftly and justly administered, and that senators should be working to enforce the death penalty rather than repeal it.
Several senators warned that Nebraskans are angry about people who have been convicted of serious crimes and then are able to have their sentences reduced through high-powered attorneys, plea bargaining or pre-trial diversion.

OF THE 112 criminal homicides reported in the state since 1978, there were 39 cases that were plea-bargained to a lesser charge than first-degree murder, and 15 were cases in which juries convicted the defendant on a lesser charge.
In four or five of the cases the defendant was found to be insane.
I feel that Nebraskans would petition for a return to capital punishment if LB 202 had passed. The bill however, did not pass. I co-introduced a kill motion, and on a vote of 26 to 16 the bill was killed.
However, there has been a motion to reconsider our action and this will probably come up for debate in the next few days again.

American export economy stumbles

Japan trade barriers high

As the American economy continues to sag under a huge trade deficit with Japan, that nation persists in denying significant market access to American agricultural products, products for which a substantial demand exists on the part of Japanese consumers.
It is extremely difficult to explain to an unemployed auto worker or electronics assembly line worker why we continue to provide the level of access to Japanese imports of autos or electronics goods while at the same time our agricultural producers are suffering from low commodity and livestock prices because we are unable to dispose of price-depressing surpluses in foreign markets.
The Japanese must come to understand that resentment and frustration are building over their restrictive policies. The American people are appropriately demanding action, and that action will be forthcoming.

congressman doug bereuter

LAST WEEK, I introduced the "Unfair Agricultural Trade Barrier Relief Act," designed to require action on the part of the president in response to these quota systems and other non-tariff barriers.

The bill would require the president to take action when a foreign country imposes non-tariff trade barriers against U.S. agricultural goods, in any case where a foreign trade barrier is impairing the growth of markets for U.S. agricultural products, the president would be required to impose trade restrictions on importation of all products of that foreign country into the United States, to an extent equal to the economic effect of the foreign country's trade barrier against American farm products.

Attempts to correct the trade deficit must not concentrate on industrial products and high technology goods and ignore the effect of Japanese restrictions on U.S. agricultural products, especially red meat, rice and citrus fruits.
The bill is a two-by-four designed to get the attention of the Japanese.

To the editor:
While Henry Fonda and Katherine Hepburn are being recognized for their roles in "On Golden Pond," I think this is also a good time for our community to applaud all of our local talent who made this stage play such a success when it was performed in Wayne last spring.
A number of people have mentioned to me that their acting and staging was more real and believable than the movie version. So, I'd like to pass this on to them with the thanks of our community. It is so easy to take local talent for granted.

Who cares??

The Wayne Care Centre is under the care of a new administrator. Alan Cooper, a 34-year-old nursing home care specialist, has stepped into the position with impressive credentials and extensive experience.
His own words indicate that his goal is to operate a quality nursing home in Wayne. And, he has publicly indicated that the Wayne Care Centre is a quality nursing home. It is a credit to the Wayne Care Centre staff that the new administrator has found the nursing home in such good shape.
In fact, the staff deserves a special salute for tending to the business of quality care for its residents during a most difficult time.
Unfortunately, the difficult time continues.
The stress, on both residents and staff, brought about by the recent revelations regarding an on-going investigation of the nursing home's previous administrator easily could have affected the quality of care on a day-to-day basis.
Instead, the staff continued to operate the nursing home in a very professional manner on the days before, during and after the previous administrator's resignation.
Now, however, these same professionals have been denied the dignity of having the matter cleared through an appropriate legal process.
The investigation has been limited to the former administrator and, most recently, has expanded to include her husband, a Wayne State College coach who has several guardianships at the nursing home.
Despite that, the professional staff at the Wayne Care Centre has become an innocent victim by association.
Continued footdragging in the case has prolonged the agony and left the entire matter cloudy in the public's mind.
Hardworking professionals with unassailable reputations find themselves left to twist slowly in the wind - a strange sort of reward for doing a good job.
Furthermore, the situation puts the Wayne Care Centre's new administrator at a distinct disadvantage at a time when he needs to help restore faith in a nursing home that has been and is continuing to provide quality care.

Past excesses

Taxpayers have as much to lose from high interest rates if not more than anyone else. It cost the U.S. Treasury $31.5 billion to pay interest charges the first three months of fiscal 1982 on the federal debt, which passed the $1 trillion mark for the first time last year.
In the same period a year earlier, interest charges came to $22.9 billion. Of the 32 percent increase, roughly two-thirds was due to higher than expected interest rates.
According to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) this year's interest payment of $83 billion exceeds the size of the entire federal budget for years as recent as 1958.
"Interest payments on the debt will exceed our original projections by $18 billion in 1982, $32 billion in 1983 and $182 billion over 1989-96 taken as a whole," OMB said.
But as OMB points out, the origins of the problems arise primarily from a legacy of past excesses, not from a shortfall in our current budget control efforts, nor from a flaw in our current budget control efforts.
Higher than expected interest rates are among the important factors keyed to the economy which help increase the size of the budget deficits.
Edwin Meese III, counselor to President Reagan and one of his closest advisers, notes that when inflation comes down, as now is the case, government tax revenues fall as well.
"That helps make federal budget deficits larger."
But Meese also notes that federal entitlement programs, or income transfer payments to individuals, keep growing as more people become eligible. He adds: payments to individuals keep growing as more people become eligible. He adds:
"So at a time when the cost of living is stabilizing and coming down, the cost of these programs is actually increasing, and this is what gives rise to a great extent to the budget problems and the deficits you hear about."
Just how significant these figures are can be readily seen. If the service or interest charges on the debt could be eliminated, it would wipe out the deficit for the current year. In other words, we would have a balanced budget.

Wayne State graduate writes children's play

THE AUTHOR, David Sindelar, was graduated from Wayne State in May 1981 with a degree in theatre and mathematics. A native of Columbus, Sindelar now lives and works in Omaha.

During his four years at Wayne State, Sindelar was actively involved in all theatre productions, either acting, directing or working on technical crews.

"THE TIME Machine" is the end result of a project Sindelar pursued for a children's theatre class. He also has written several one act plays, numerous short stories, and is currently working on a full length comedy drama.

"The Time Machine" will be his first play to be produced. "THE TIME Machine" tells the story of three children, Mary, Bobby and Jenny, who, out of curiosity, discover their Uncle Phil's invention - a time machine.

The children accidentally start the machine and in a flash it takes them to the Timesmith's laboratory and to the year 2193. There they meet a caveman, robots, Napoleon, Sir Lancelot, and an intelligent monkey.

PROBLEMS ARISE when the children want to return home, however the primitive machine they arrived in does not have an inductible antifriction reversifier. It is up to the Timesmith to send himself back in time to try and locate the missing part.

THE CAST includes Ed Aken as Bobby; Corinne George and Kirsten Olsen as his sisters, Mary and Jenny; Tim Ryan in the role of Uncle Phil; Michele Brockmoller as the robot maid, FL21; Steve Von Seggner playing the robot butler, BN73; Tim Gail as the Timesmith; Mark Ford portraying Sir Lancelot; Nancy Williams as the monkey; Robert Lewis as the caveman, Broogh; Jim Craun in the role of Napoleon; and James Fouk and Mark Ford as Napoleon's guards, Pierre and Jacques.

"THE TIME Machine" is under the direction of Dr. Helen J. Russell, with Pam Elbracht as assistant director/stage manager. Arthur L. Dirks has designed the sets, costumes and special effects and is technical supervisor.

ADVANCE reservations for "The Time Machine" are not necessary for the Sunday, April 4, performance, but are essential for the subsequent weekday performances. About 4,500 area school children are expected to attend the production.

General admission is $3 for adults and $1 for children. Teachers accompanying groups of children are admitted free of charge.

Girls All-Area team shows no weaknesses

This year's All Area girls basketball team has a little of everything when considering the basic fundamentals of basketball. Ballhandling, shooting, rebounding and defense are all assets of this squad of all stars.

Four seniors are joined by a sophomore on this year's All Area first team. All four seniors plan to enroll at college next fall.

This year's Wayne Herald All Area girls basketball first team members, listed alphabetically are: Darla Janke of Winside, Brenda Jones of Wakefield, Anne Schultz of Laurel, Desiree Williams of Allen and Jill Zeiss of Wayne.

All Area selections were made based on nominations by area coaches.

DARLA JANKE, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Dean Janke Sr., is a 5-8 senior forward at Winside High School.

She averaged 8.67 points and 5.8 rebounds per game while hitting 30 percent of her shots and 61 percent of her free throws.

Janke's most memorable season experience was being selected to the Clark Division All Conference second team and the All Area team.

Her pre season goal was to have a winning record and Winside's team goals were to do well in districts. "We won our first game but I wish we could have won more," she says. "I wish we could have done a little better at conference and could have ended the season with a better record."

Janke plans to attend the University of Nebraska following graduation from high school.

BRENDA JONES, daughter of Robert and Karen Jones, is a 5-7 sophomore who played forward and center for Wakefield High School.

She is the only underclassman selected to the All Area team and averaged 12 points and 11 rebounds a game. Jones was selected to the Clark Division All Conference second team.

She had no comments about her past season or future plans.

ANNE SCHULTZ, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Delos Schultz, is a 5-7 senior forward at Laurel-Concord High School.

She averaged 11.2 points and 8.1 rebounds per game while hitting 33 percent from the field and 57 percent from the line. She finished her career with 376 points and 309 rebounds and set two Laurel-Concord records for most points in a game (27) and most points in a season (246).

Schultz' pre season goals were to score 15 points and pull down more than 10 rebounds per game, make the All-Area team and All-Conference team, win the conference title and qualify for the state tournament.

The Clark Division All-Conference first teamer said her most memorable season experience was defeating Allen in districts after losing to the Eagles twice during the regular season. "They have a good team and I guess beating them was a team goal as well as my own."

"I felt our team had its ups and downs. I think we played together as a team really well," said Schultz. "I think Laurel will be strong next year in both volleyball and basketball."

After graduation from high school, she plans to attend Wayne State College and major in elementary education and physical education with an endorsement in special education. Schultz said she would like to become a teacher and coach volleyball and basketball.

DESIREE WILLIAMS, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Craig Williams, is a 5-5 point guard at Allen High School.

The Lewis Division All-Conference first team selection averaged 13.1 points per game while hitting 38 percent of her shots. She was a 55 percent shooter at the free throw line and led her team with 25 assists.

Williams' pre season goals were to have a winning season with balanced scoring, play with intensity, be a good team leader, instill others with a good, competitive, positive attitude and have lots of fun.

Her most memorable season experience was winning the Ponca Tournament. "After a season opening loss to Ponca, our team improved, winning the next five games including a rematch with Ponca in the tournament," said the Allen senior.

Another highlight was defeating Winfield, which at the time was rated in state. Des is a two-time All State honorable mention selection and this is her second year on the All Area team.

"I think we could have had a better season. It was tough losing to a couple of teams by one point," Williams said. "I had an overall good career with four winning seasons, two trips to the state tournament and a lot of support from the school and community."

This fall, Williams plans to enroll at either the University of Nebraska or Iowa State University. She has not yet decided on a major and doesn't know if she will participate in college athletics.

JILL ZEISS, daughter of Don and Jan Zeiss, is a 5-3 senior guard at Wayne-Carroll High School.

She led her team in scoring, assists and free throw percentage. She hit 64 percent of her free shots and averaged 10 points a game.

Zeiss said her most memorable season experience was scoring 18 points and making 12 of 13 free throws against Wisner Pilger. She also will remember the West Husker Tournament when the Blue Devils played their best against champion Harrington CC.

Her pre season goals were for all team members to help each other and play together as a unit. "Though the season was disappointing record wise, the young players gained a lot of experience for next year," said the Wayne senior. "A lot of positive things came out of our year. We learned more fundamentals, team play and how to get along."

Zeiss earned West Husker All Conference first team honors and All State honorable mention by the Omaha World Herald and Lincoln Journal-Star.

Jill plans to attend Wayne State College on an athletic grant for volleyball. There she will study pre-nursing. She hopes to receive a degree in nursing which eventually would lead to a teaching degree in nursing.

FIRST TEAM: Darla Janke, Winside; Brenda Jones, Wakefield; Anne Schultz, Laurel; Des Williams, Allen; Jill Zeiss, Wayne.

SECOND TEAM: Renee Gadeken, Laurel; Michelle Harder, Allen; Joni Jaeger, Winside; Kim Sherry, Laurel; Beth Stalling, Allen; Missy Stollenberg, Wayne.

HONORABLE MENTION: Teresa Biggerstaff, Wakefield; Christy Hingst, Wakefield; Lisa Jensen, Winside; Cyndi Jones, Laurel; Tamie Murray, Wayne; Janet Peterson, Allen; Shelly Williams, Allen.

All-Area boys have all-around abilities

The 1981-82 basketball season for many northeast Nebraska teams wasn't as successful as last year. But that doesn't mean that there weren't many quality athletes in this part of the state.

The Wayne Herald's annual All Area boys basketball team is composed of some of the finest all around athletes in the five school coverage area of Allen, Laurel, Wakefield, Wayne and Winside.

The five individuals named to the first team are three sport standouts in their respective schools. Four of the five athletes are seniors and they plan to have successful college careers.

Members of this year's All Area first team, listed alphabetically, are Jim Krajcek of Winside, Robb Linafelter of Allen, Phil Martin of Laurel, Todd Schwartz of Wayne and Mark Starzl of Wakefield.

All Area selections were made based on nominations by area coaches.

JIM KRAJCEK, the son of Ed and Chick Krajcek, is a 6-2 senior forward at Winside High School. His scoring average was in double figures and he led the team in rebounds.

Krajcek said his most memorable season experience was winning after a winless 1980-81 season. "Our first win over Allen this year was a good feeling after last year," said Krajcek.

The Winside senior said his pre-season goals were to have a 500 season, have everyone on the team play together, make the All-Conference team, and enjoy the game of basketball.

The Clark Division All Conference second team selection says basketball is his favorite sport and added that he had a lot of fun the past three seasons. Future plans are to attend college, tryout for football and major in biology. Krajcek would like to get into veterinary medicine after graduation from college.

ROBB LINAFTER, the son of Ken and Doris Linafelter, is a 6-2 senior at Allen High School. He averaged 16.2 points and 7.5 rebounds per game while playing all positions on the Eagles' basketball team. He hit 67 percent of his free throws and 40 percent from the floor.

Linafelter said his most memorable season experience was holding Winfield's Jay Jackson to two points while playing man to man. He won't forget his junior season because it marked Allen's first winning season in 10 years.

The Allen senior said he was disappointed in his team's record but felt the Eagles played as a team and had fun, which he said was most important.

His pre season goals were to score in double figures, have a winning season and play as a team. He scored in double figures in all but two games. The Lewis Division All-Conference honorable mention selection holds the school record for most assists in a game with 10.

Future plans include attending college at Nebraska Wesleyan, playing football there and getting a degree in pre-med. He would like to go to med-school after graduation from Wesleyan.

PHIL MARTIN, son of Gana Martin and Kendall Martin, is a 6-1 senior forward at Laurel-Concord High School.

He averaged 7.4 points a game and had more rebounds than any other Laurel player in the past two seasons. He hit 41 percent from the field and 58 percent from the line.

Martin's most memorable experience was winning the Ponca Tournament over the host team. His personal pre-season goals were to hit 40 percent from the field and 70 percent from the free-throw line, earn selection to the All-Conference team, win the Ponca Tournament, improve throughout the year and have a winning season.

Looking back on the past season, Martin said the Bears "definitely improved throughout the year. I wish our season record could have been .500. I think we were a better team than our record showed."

The Clark Division All-Conference second team selection plans to attend Morningside College in Sioux City, major in accounting and play baseball.

He said he hopes to be successful both academically and athletically in college. His more immediate concerns are to have a good high school baseball season.

TODD SCHWARTZ, the son of Judith Goeden, is a 6-2 junior guard at Wayne-Carroll High School.

He averaged 17 points a game and hit 67 percent from the free throw line. Schwartz said his most memorable season experience was being selected to the all-time tournament team at the Wayne State Holiday Tournament. He also was a second team selection to the West Husker Conference.

The Wayne senior said his pre season goal was to play with the best of his ability. His future goal is to be competitive at every sport in which he participates.

"I thought that we had a better team than what we showed but lack of experience hurt us," said Schwartz who has another year of high school remaining.

MARK STARZL, son of Mr and Mrs. Ed Doeschler, is a 5-11 senior guard at Wakefield High School.

His most memorable experience was trying for the 1980-81 conference division championship with Harrington. Starzl averaged 13 points and 9 rebounds a game.

The Wakefield senior said his pre season goal was for the team to play to the best of its ability.

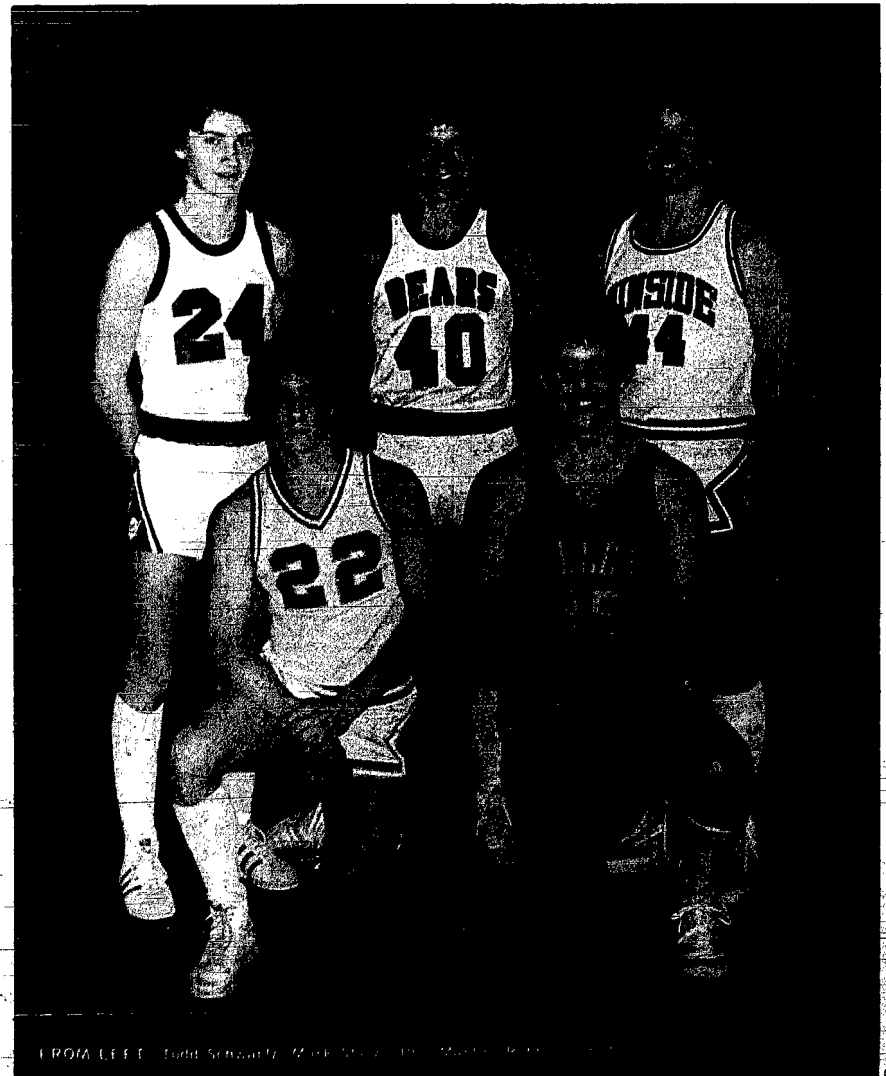

Starzl plans to attend college and play baseball. The football, basketball and baseball, standouts will concentrate on baseball as his only collegiate sport.

Looking back at the past season, the Clark Division All-Conference second teamer said he thought the Trojans worked as hard as or harder than any other team around. "Even though we had a lot of problems this past season, we worked them out as a team and I still had fun," said Starzl.

FIRST TEAM: Jim Krajcek, Winside; Robb Linafelter, Allen; Phil Martin, Laurel; Todd Schwartz, Wayne; Mark Starzl, Wakefield.

State qualifier returns

3 lettermen to lead Wayne

One state qualifier and two other lettermen return to form the nucleus of this year's Wayne High golf team.

Cole Froeschle is expected to be Wayne's number one golfer. The sophomore tied for fifth place at state last year and had to settle for sixth when he lost a playoff.

The other two lettermen are seniors Cedric Ellingson and Bill Vriska. Vriska probably will only be able to play in invitationals this year. In order to continue collecting Social Security checks, he enrolled as a full-time student at Northeast Tech in Norfolk. His full load of classes at Wayne High and Northeast Tech don't allow for participation in many golf meets this season.

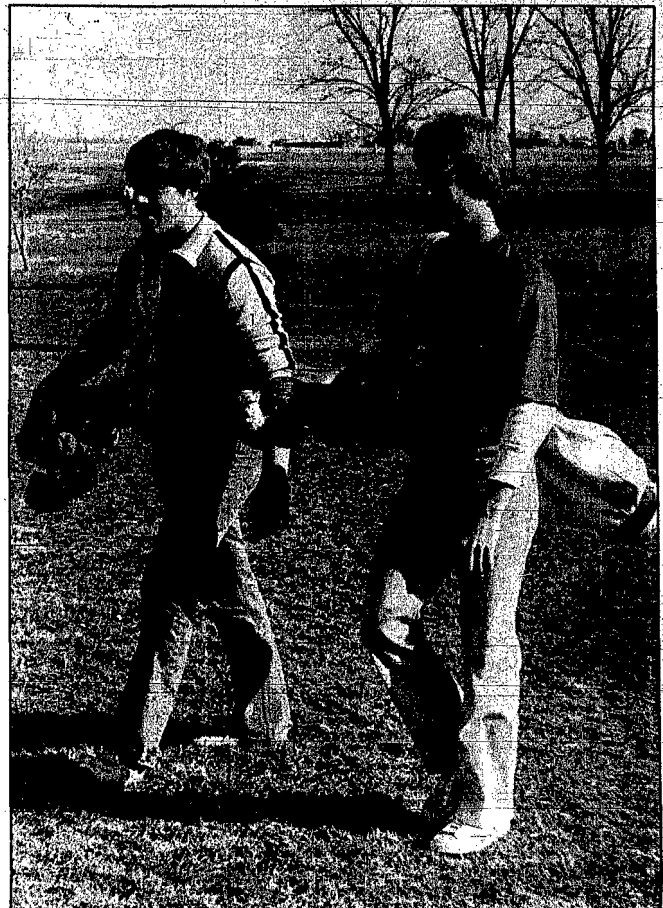

Other golfers expected to be top contenders are junior John Carhart, sophomore Perry Ben-shoff and Layne Marsh and freshman Brad Moore.

Other golfers who may see action are senior Larry Luaders, sophomore Lell Olson and David Romer and freshmen Cory Lesberg, Terry Schultz, Bob Sherman, Carl Urwiler, Darrin Barner and James Predecht.

Veteran coach Harold Maciejewski said his golfers need to shoot in the low 80's in order to have a successful season. "We have the fundamentals but need to play a lot of golf."

AAL donates toward jaws of life

Branch 1566 of Aid Association for Lutherans recently presented a check for $7,655.11 to the Laurel Volunteer Fire Department to purchase a jaws of life.

The jaws of life is a rescue tool that can remove steering columns, cut door posts, peak back roof tops or take fire doors completely off of their hinges in seconds.

The AAL branch sponsored a benefit dinner on Jan. 31 at the city auditorium that was attended by about 600 persons. The funds donated at the dinner were supplemented through AAL's coop benevolence program. This program provides incentive for local branch members to raise funds in response to unmet needs of individuals, families and their communities.

AAL is the nation's largest fraternal insurance society. AAL members own insurance, take part in association activities and conduct projects for their local Lutheran churches and communities.

In 1981, AAL returned more than 27 million dollars through its fraternal programs. This money, which would otherwise have gone to the government in taxes, is returned many times over when added to the voluntary efforts of AAL members. There are about 48,000 AAL members in Nebraska, and in 1981, Nebraska received about $750,000 of AAL's fraternal dollars.

More Valley Corner Systems every year, because it's the least costly investment per acre.

It's going to be harder to make farming pay off in the years to come. Harder for many reasons. So if anything makes sense, it's to maximize the potential of the land you now farm. Irrigating with a center pivot is one way. Irrigating with a Corner System is even better.

A Corner System can irrigate 19 to 45 more acres than a regular pivot, producing extra income on acres already being farmed. That's why nearly one out of every six pivots sold today is a Corner System.

And when it comes to Corner Systems, nobody knows more than Valmont. They've proven reliable with nearly 3,000 systems in operation. That's at least 20 times more than any other brand.

Before you buy any center pivot, see us. We'll tell you how a Valley Corner System can add to your bottom line profits while being the least costly investment per acre.

Valley dominates the field.

Q. I understand some changes have been made in the inequities in how the nation's primary inflation indicator, the Consumer Price Index is figured. What are these, and how would I be affected?

A. Perhaps the most significant change in the computation of the Consumer Price Index is prices of new houses and mortgages will no longer be considered a "consumer item," purchased every month. Rather, the Bureau of Labor Statistics will instead include a figure which will reflect what it would cost you to "rent" your own house - a rental equivalency. Another change will reflect what consumers are buying now, and not in 1972-73, as the CPI had previously reflected. For example, as the prices of some meats rose - consumers switched to other meats or poultry. The CPI, however, did not. What this will mean to persons whose income is tied automatically to the CPI isn't clear as yet. However, it appears it will be more fair to millions whose incomes are not indexed.

Quick. Spot the IRA that's right for you.

Bewildering isn't it? One Individual Retirement Account looks like the next. But an IRA from IDS is different. I'm not only interested in your IRA. I'm more concerned with how an IRA will fit into your total financial plan. And believe it or not, I might not recommend an IRA at all. But if an IRA is what you need, I'll help you construct one that makes sense. Not just for today, but as part of your total financial plan. IDS has been helping people with their financial plans for 88 years and offering IRAs since 1976. So don't pick any old IRA. Pick up the phone and call me at 375-1848.

Advisory Council sets final meeting Monday

The Wayne Community Advisory Council, during its final meeting of the current school year, is expected to select officers and discuss the organization's structure.

The council, which will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, March 29, in the Wayne High School Library, also will be presented with a program on the high school tutorial program.

Mary Lou George, a resource teacher for high school students with learning disabilities, and Curt Erye, high school guidance counselor and director of continuing education, will present the program.

IN ADDITION, the program will include such topics as foreign exchange students, the EMH program, the advanced chemistry enrichment class and the speech and drama class for gifted theatrical students.

The council, which functions as a continuing link to the community, parents and the Wayne-Carroll Community School system, will also receive a presentation from teacher Judith Schafer, who will discuss her general English and speech units scheduled for adoption in ninth and 10th grades.

Also, teacher Dale Hochstein will report on his general biology classes and a new research class planned for next year.

THE COUNCIL is expected to review a report on programs for the district's four newly purchased Apple II computers.

Subcommittees meeting during the March 29 session will include Special Needs, Special Talents and Title I.

Kay Cattle will present the Special Needs subcommittee with a report on preschool referral and placement.

Becky Keldel, a school board member, will present the Special Talents subcommittee with a report on the Conference on Education for the Academically Talented.

Title I subcommittee members will discuss the math and reading programs.

The meeting is open to the public.

Farmland

since the Depression. It averaged nearly 5 percent during the 1970s, he said.

"With short-run success, it was only natural for many farmers to consider leveraging even more," Johnson said. "The game turns sour though when interest rates shoot ahead of inflation."

In figuring real interest rates, adjusted for inflation — Johnson said — market analysts have noted an exception swinging from negative to positive values since 1979. The real rate recently has risen from a minus 4.5 percent to a positive 5.5 percent.

BORROWING TO finance debt at interest rates above the rate of inflation and land depreciation due to depressed earnings, have contributed to an increase in farm sales, Johnson said.

The 1980s are likely to bring positive real interest rates as a rule, rather than an exception, Johnson said, as lenders try to protect themselves against future inflation. Also, variable interest rate loans are becoming almost universal, he said. The effect of these is to shift the risks of inflation and interest rate fluctuation from the lender to the borrower, he explained.

Coupled with an uncertain political climate which hampers world grain trade and cut backs in price support programs, this has led to a softening of land values, Johnson said.

Regarding investors likely to be in the market, Johnson foresees a shift from active farmers to high income absentee investors, he said.

Johnson advises producers to be "very conservative" about future farmland investment, he said. "particularly since the heyday" of instant wealth from heavy debt leveraging is past.

HE GAVE farmers the following suggestions for economic survival:

• If more land is needed, rent rather than buy. Enter into share arrangements rather than cash to reduce risk. Establish rapport with the landlord to gain security of tenure and the possibility of an option to purchase in the future.

• Wise purchases can be made as attractive offerings hit the market in the months ahead. But don't be hasty. The more established producer with a low debt to equity position can best benefit. Consider cash flow carefully before buying.

• Late entrants into farming may need to consider some drastic measures to cut losses. Partial liquidation through land sales may ease the credit crunch. It may be possible to tie into a long term lease agreement with the new owner to maintain a necessary acreage base.

• Debt refinancing may be needed. But beware of arrangements that help buy time, but add deeper indebtedness in the future. Converting debt into longer term agreements may not be much of a solution. For instance, a $1,000 loan at 16 percent interest over 20 years creates an annual payment of $189. If this is refinanced into a 40-year agreement at the same interest rate, the annual payment would be $160, hardly a significant difference.

Group starts a fund for journalists

To encourage students in the field of community journalism, a special fund has been started by the members of the Northeast Nebraska Press Association.

At their annual meeting in Norfolk, members of the Association voted to contribute $300 to start a new University of Nebraska Foundation account called "The Community Journalism Development Fund."

"Obviously, we are delighted with the support from the Northeast Association," said Neale Copple, dean of the University of Nebraska Lincoln School of Journalism.

"We very much want to help develop programs of study that will help meet the needs of community journalism. The community journalists continue to be a bulwark of the nation's press," he said.
