WAPA dispute costs ratepayers $7,000 per month

Four cities block Wayne's low-cost power

Four northeast Nebraska cities, including Wakefield, are costing Wayne's municipal customers nearly $750 a day.

Wayne's loss of low-cost Western Area Power Administration (WAPA) electricity for its consumption in April alone is expected to cost municipal ratepayers some $7,000.

The added $7,000 per month power cost for Wayne is the result of recent legal action taken against WAPA by Wakefield, Madison, Randolph and South Sioux City.

THOSE FOUR cities have temporarily blocked WAPA's allocation to Wayne and 18 other Nebraska cities that also applied for and were granted access to the low-cost hydroelectric power, according to Phil Kloster, city administrator.

"They (the four cities) failed to exercise their option to apply for power under WAPA's guidelines," Kloster explained.

"Now they feel they have just as much right to the power as we did, so they joined forces to seek an injunction to block the distribution of the electricity," Kloster added.

According to Kloster the Injunction, which was recently filed in federal court at Lincoln, was not granted, but it effectively prevented 19 Nebraska cities, including Wayne, from getting the low cost power in April.

KLOSTER SAID that, though the injunction failed, WAPA guidelines prevent the agency from distributing power until all contract disputes are resolved.

"It looks like the matter is going to be decided in court on its merits," he said, explaining that effectively blocked Wayne's allocation.

Wayne was scheduled to begin receiving its low cost power allocation on April 1.

The WAPA power was projected to replace 24 percent of the city's summer power load and 35 percent of the city's winter load, Kloster said.

"We are seriously considering filing suit for damages against the Council members and managers of those cities blocking the power," Kloster said.

"WE'VE GONE BY the book, following WAPA's guidelines in applying for the power and must protect our ratepayers," Kloster continued.

"We've been working hard to keep power rates down for Wayne customers and it's unfair that we are being penalized because of the inability of a few to take care of their own city business," Kloster said.

Kloster said that the upshot of the matter is that the four cities blocking the delivery of the power allocation to 19 Nebraska towns is that they missed application deadlines.

"It's costing those 19 cities that followed the rules more than $100,000 per month in higher power bills," Kloster said.

Nebraska law allows lawsuits to be brought and for the individuals responsible to be named in the suit, he said.

"BECAUSE OF THEIR action, WAPA has put a hold on our contract," Kloster continued.

Wayne had sought and was granted a WAPA power allocation.

In February, after months of meetings to negotiate the contracts, the Wayne City Council approved an agreement with WAPA whereby the city would purchase low-cost power.

After working with this region's WAPA headquarters in Billings, Mont., Kloster was initially informed that Wayne qualified for a power allocation.

The firm offer for power contract came from WAPA on Sept. 15, Kloster said.

INITIALLY, HE said, the city was scheduled to begin receiving the allocation late last year.

However, complicated negotiations that involved both WAPA and the Nebraska

Public Power District (NPPD) sometimes forced the city into weekly meetings on contract, Kloster said.

"Under WAPA rules, all contracts must be locked down before the power arrives," he explained.

"We met on almost a weekly basis from September through February," he continued, explaining that a contract consensus finally was reached in February.

The Council approved the contracts on Feb. 23.

"It was done on the understanding that we would begin receiving our allocation on April 1," Kloster added.

Wayne painter's work captures people on canvas

His dark eyes penetrate. And they dance — sincere and searching — on the threshold of a warm smile.

His square jawed intensity reaches into a world of creative art, producing a passion for painting people that pervades personally.

An accomplished portrait artist, 44-year-old Carlos Frey of Wayne is putting his creative touch to a personal canvas destined for new dimensions.

"I WANT to be a very good artist and I'm trying to develop that into a desperate need that will really crank me up," explained Frey, a former associate professor of art at Wayne State College.

"When want develops into need, that's when action takes over," the Oklahoma panhandle-born artist added. "With that comes the adrenalin and with that comes the freedom on how to spend a day, or how long that day should be."

Fond of telling young, developing artists that his inspirations "came from GMAC" (General Motors Acceptance Corp.), Frey frequently uses his finely honed sense of humor to make a point that puts art in perspective.

Frey's growth as a recognized Midwestern artist has given him the foundation for some new perspectives.

IN THE STRUGGLE to survive, the Wayne artist has built on his portrait work to the point that it undergoes a transition to what Frey calls "people painting." And, cognizant of the confidence that People painting is more than painting people.

That comes from a Wayne artist who has spent a good share of his professional life painting people.

"People paintings involve people, but not necessarily portraits," explained Carlos Frey, who has gained a reputation for portraiture throughout the nation's midsection from Nebraska to Texas.

FREY, A 44-YEAR-OLD former Wayne State College art instructor, is developing people painting from painting portraits.

I tended to systematize my development and it limited me to one facet of painting," explained Frey.

"I promised myself I'd stay with it

(portraiture) until I reached a level of proficiency," he continued.

"I have become comfortable enough with it that I was ready to reach for some other things," he said.

"From portraits, where the interest is still in the face and figure, I have developed into what I would call a people painter using the human figure in all manners and ways in its environment," he continued.

LAST SUMMER, Frey was a visitor to Macy, where he attended Omaha and Winnebago Indian pow-wows.

"I spent two days photographing Indians at the pow-wows," he added. The experience helped Frey develop a broader range of people paintings.

comes with art-world-recognition, Frey has pushed on into landscape work.

The results have crowded some of Frey's portraiture off the gallery walls at Mid America Art Studio in Wayne, where he and his wife Sherian, also an artist, work on a daily schedule that often begins well before sunrise.

The studio, just off the county road south of state Highway 35 at the 1-mile corner east of Wayne, involves a framing shop, living quarters and a huge corrugated-steel building.

SHERIAN OPERATES the framing shop and teaches in the communications arts at Wayne State College.

"I'm one of her best customers," grins Frey.

Nebraska student enrollment strong for state colleges

Nearly one-half of the Nebraska counties had 1 percent or more of their total population enrolled at a Nebraska State College during the 1981 fall semester.

Data indicated 44 counties had at least a 1 percent enrollment, with nine counties registering a 2 percent enrollment and two counties with a 4 percent enrollment at Nebraska State Colleges.

An enrollment analysis of the 1981 fall semester was presented to the Board of Trustees, by each of the Nebraska State Colleges, at the March 19 meeting.

COMBINED ENROLLMENT figures for the Nebraska State Colleges indicate 12,290 students were enrolled during the 1981 fall semester.

Enrollment data showed that of the total enrollment, 11,202 or 91 percent of students attending the Nebraska State Colleges were Nebraska residents.

Two thousand three hundred twelve (2,312) students were enrolled for the 1981 fall semester at Wayne State College according to the college's enrollment data. Of the 2,312, 81 percent of the student population were Nebraska residents.

Wayne State College received 438 of its 2,312 students from outside the Nebraska border. The 19 percent of out-of-state students attending the college came from a variety of different states with Iowa as the leader of out-of-state enrollment.

CHADRON STATE College, during the fall semester, had a total of 1,933 students enrolled at the campus located in the northwest region of Nebraska.

Enrollment data disclosed a majority of students during the fall semester were from the Nebraska Panhandle. Sixty-seven percent of the total enrollment at Chadron State College came from that region.

Kearney State College, the largest of the four Nebraska State Colleges, had the smallest number of out-of-state students attending the four colleges. Two percent of Kearney State College's 7,173 students came from areas other than Nebraska.

BUFFALO COUNTY contributed the largest amount of students to Kearney State College. The county supplied the college with 1,429 students, compared to Hall County who contributed the second largest number with 423.

Kearney State College was also the only college of the Nebraska State Colleges to have one student from each Nebraska county enrolled at its campus.

Eighty eight percent of the student population enrolled at Peru State College, according to Peru State College enrollment data, were Nebraska natives. Statistics presented by the college gave a total enrollment for Peru State College of 852 students.

Majority of WSC students are Nebraskans or Iowans

Students from Nebraska and Iowa make up 97.7 percent of total enrollment at Wayne State College, according to figures provided by WSC Registrar Virginia Wright.

A total of 2,304 was enrolled at Wayne State during the Fall 1981 semester. Of that total, 2,026 (88.4%) were from Nebraska. A total of 68 Nebraska counties were represented, with Wayne County leading the way, as expected, with 248 students.

Iowa students easily take second place in the enrollment picture. A total of 304 Iowans was enrolled at WSC in the fall, or over six times as many students as the rest of the states in the nation combined contributed.

Iowans make up 12.8 percent of the WSC student body. Next in line is Illinois, represented by nine students, followed by South Dakota with six. Students from 22 states enrolled at WSC. Eight foreign countries contributed to students to Wayne State.

Seven Nebraska counties and one Iowa county provided Wayne State with better than 100 students each.

In Nebraska, those counties include Cedar, Dakota, Dixon, Dodge, Douglas, Madison and Wayne. Woodbury County in Iowa was represented by over 100 students also.

Country boy...

Howdy. Community journalism is, in many ways, journalism at its best. It is that because it exists with a built-in accountability that exists nowhere else in the professional media.

A FREE PRESS is the foundation for so many things we have come to take for granted in this country.

When a controversial issue rubs someone the wrong way in a small town, the sparks often burn someone you know.

WHEN A CONTROVERSIAL issue rubs someone the wrong way in a small town, the sparks often burn someone you know.

It's almost second nature for those who push for power, but run from responsibility.

IN ADDITION, it often clouds any issue, often for the benefit of the scoundrel who would like nothing better than to escape in a smokescreen.

THEY ARE IN the vanguard of those who would praise the small-town newspaper for seeing everything as they see it, but find it suddenly useless when it has another viewpoint.

BECAUSE OUR country is free, they, too, are free to operate in this manner.

WHEN A CONTROVERSIAL issue rubs someone the wrong way in a small town, the sparks often burn someone you know.

WHEN A CONTROVERSIAL issue rubs someone the wrong way in a small town, the sparks often burn someone you know.

small men abuse power and big men don't need it. I often think of that when I encounter those who misunderstand, or refuse to accept, a system built for everyone...not just them, but for everyone.

FREEDOM OF THE press is a workable protection against abuse from these scoundrels who sink behind small-town bushes, unable to stand in the light of scrutiny from a community newspaper.

BECAUSE OUR country is free, they, too, are free to operate in this manner.

WHEN A CONTROVERSIAL issue rubs someone the wrong way in a small town, the sparks often burn someone you know.

WHEN A CONTROVERSIAL issue rubs someone the wrong way in a small town, the sparks often burn someone you know.

When the presses roll with community newspapers that report and comment on the people, places and things of small-town America, your freedoms are protected, defended, and strengthened.

A FEARLESS community newspaper willing to comment and unafraid to see the folly behind those who would suppress comment, is indeed a valuable instrument to its readers.

AN ISSUE THAT fails to withstand the close scrutiny of the public is an issue destined to fail.

Checkoff for beef boost to stockmen

Much of the time these last few days has been spent debating budget issues. There are only seven working days left in this legislative session, and so there will be many bills that will not be acted upon.

Bond plan to help homebuyers

I spoke on the House floor recently in favor of an amendment that would provide $1 billion to the nation's ailing housing industry and suffering homebuyers.

GREEN THUMBERS — Congratulations to the Nebraska Green Thumb workers who have been working 30 hours a week to refurbish the Johnson County Courthouse.

Earlier this year, they painted fire hydrants and picnic tables and their next project is the Johnson County Fairgrounds.

Also this year I met with the Seward Housing Authority at Seward Manor, the Crele Housing Authority at Centennial Terrace, the Fairbury Housing Authority at Parkway Manor, and the Beatrice Housing Authority.

NEBRASKANS IN WASHINGTON — Many Nebraska 4-Hers visited the Nebraska breakfast last week when they came to Washington for the National 4-H Conference.

We also had visits from the Nebraska Realtors and the Nebraska Association for Retarded Citizens. Pamela Thompson of Lincoln, Nebraska's Cherry Blossom Princess, was in town with her parents.

To the editor: March 26, 7th and 8th graders from Wayne Rural Schools participated in the annual Wayne Rural Spelling Contest.

SMALL BUSINESSES — America's small businesses got some much needed help last week when the House of Representatives passed a bill requiring the federal government to pay interest on its overdue bills.

The government pays 30 percent of its bills late, and 90 percent of government purchases are from small businesses.

In effect, the government has been borrowing money — an estimated $11 billion annually. Last week we took a big step toward correcting that situation.

EXPORT CREDIT — My amendment to the 1981 Farm Bill established the Agricultural Export Credit Revolving Fund.

With continuing deterioration of the farm economy, Nebraska's farmers and America's farmers need all the help they can get.

Bearing arms

In what is probably the most extensive legal research yet made public on the Second Amendment "right to keep and bear arms," the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee has released a formal report citing "clear proof" based on historical and legal evidence supporting the individual right of Americans to arms ownership.

Alumni game nears

Weather slows workouts
Veteran Wayne State College football Coach Del Stollenberg and his 57 member spring squad have seen bad weather bring preparations for their annual alumni game to a near standstill. The weather is really hampering us, Stollenberg commented after his team was unable to spend any of their second week of drills outdoors. Though the team has been able to spend plenty of time on "mental type work" on the blackboard, they have yet to engage in their first scrimmage. As a result, Stollenberg really doesn't know how much talent he is working with. "It's hard to tell indoors. We hoped for a scrimmage last Friday and for a couple this week, but the weather just hasn't cooperated," he said. A total of 29 letter winners are going through spring drills. Several lettermen are missing football practice due to their participation in Wildcat baseball or track. Stollenberg said spring drills are designed to accomplish three major goals. It gives coaches a chance to look at new members, particularly transfers, coaches can experiment, trying veterans in new positions during spring drills only, "so we don't lose ground if it doesn't work out," and the coaches can implement new formations and plays. The Wildcats were expected to return Monday, one day ahead of the rest of the students on Easter break, to resume practice. "We hope to get in 10 days of good practice in the next two weeks" leading up to the April 24 varsity alumni game in WSC's Memorial Stadium.

Randy's Recap

By Randy Hascall

CAN YOU BELIEVE this weather? Just when you think spring has arrived, Mother Nature dumps an extension onto the already too long, too cold winter season. The cold and snow hasn't done much good for the so called spring sports season. Participants in golf, baseball, track, softball and spring football have had very few opportunities to practice outdoors. The Wayne State College Invationals for boys and girls track teams were cancelled last week due to the weather. Track is a tough sport to reschedule because it is a tough, busy season. Track facilities such as Wayne State's are often in use and teams have too many events scheduled to try cram in one that has been postponed. Can you imagine trying to reschedule an invitational at a time when all 20 teams can re-gather? It's all but impossible. Getting two baseball teams together for a rescheduled game is, of course, not as difficult as rescheduling a track and field invitational. Still, it adds an extra burden on an already hectic season. Golf and softball are in about the same predicament. If the weather shapes up soon, a respectable spring sports season can still be saved. However, if winter hangs on for another week—look out!

DISTRICT 11 STATISTICS for baseball and track were released this week and Wayne State athletes were abundant among the list of leaders in various categories. In baseball, Mike Meyer, Randy Heying and Gregg Grickshank are second, third and fifth leading batters respectively with 545, 471 and 410 averages. Wayne is third behind Dana and Chadron in team batting with a .304 average. The Wildcats' earned run average of 5.94 is tops and Don Hilgenkamp has the fourth lowest ERA at 3.65. Bill Schwerz is third in RBI's with an average of 1.06 per game and third in home runs with .188 per game. Meyer is second in doubles with 312 per game. Tom Todd ranks fourth in stolen bases with five stolen bases in five attempts. The Wildcats have the third best team fielding average at .894. In men's track and field, Ron Berrie is the leader with a mark of 49.42 in the shot put at Scott Driver is second in the pole vault at 14.0, Joe Ortmeyer, Tom Ortmeyer and Scott Driver are third, fourth and sixth respectively in the high jump with marks of 6.6, 6.4 and 6.2. In the triple jump, Joe Ortmeyer is ninth at 41.0, John Berry and Ron Berrie are sixth and seventh in the discus with marks of 125.6' and 123.11. WSC players earn honors

Wayne State College Jan Jirsak's basketball team has announced the names of several Lady Wildcats who have been chosen for post-season honors by a vote of their teammates.

Named first-captain for the upcoming 1982-83 season were sophomores Maggie Alberts of Denison, Iowa, Tammy Blackburn of Norfolk and Robbie Lehr of Sioux City. Alberts was also awarded the "Most Valuable Player" award, and Lehr the award as the "Most Improved Player." Teammate Janet Lee of Albion was given the team's "Hustler" award.

Alberts, a 5'9 guard, was one of the leading scorers for the Lady Cats, with an average of 8.4 points per game. She also led the team in assists, averaging 2.3 per contest. Along with playing consistent defense, she was a team leader and a strong playmaker on the court. She is the daughter of Lavern and Jeannie Alberts of Denison.

Lady Cats sign two players

A pair of Nebraska high school seniors will attend Wayne State College and participate in the Lady Wildcat basketball program, according to WSC Coach Jan Jirsak.

The duo includes point guard Donetta Schultz from Grand Island Northwest and forward Lori Thelen of Columbus High School.

Schultz is a 5'6 playmaker from the 1982 Class B champions at GINW. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Schultz earned all conference and honorable mention all state accolades for her play for 22 1/2 GINW. "We are looking for Donetta to assume the role of floor general for us," said Coach Jirsak. "Her leadership and playmaking ability should complement the shooting ability of our existing guard corps. Thelen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benny Thelen of Columbus, averaged 17 points and nine rebounds for the 1981-82 Discoveries, while earning honorable mention all state honors. "Lori definitely possesses the size we are looking for," Coach Jirsak said of the 5'10 forward. "We think that with her height and shooting ability she should fill a forward spot

because it's the least costly investment per acre.

It's going to be harder to make farming pay off in the years to come. Harder for many reasons.
So if anything makes sense, it's to maximize the potential of the land you now farm. Irrigating with a center pivot is one way. Irrigating with a Corner System is even better.
A Corner System can irrigate 19 to 45 more acres than a regular pivot, producing extra income on acres already being farmed. That's why nearly one out of every six pivots sold today is a Corner System.
And when it comes to Corner Systems, nobody knows more than Valmont. They're proven reliable with nearly 3,000 systems in operation. That's at least 20 times more than any other brand.
Before you buy any center pivot, see us. We'll tell you how a Valley Corner System can add to your bottom line profits while being the least costly investment per acre.

Valmont dominates the field.

WSC chapter initiates three student members

The Wayne State College chapter of Pi Gamma Mu (PGM), national honorary for students with outstanding achievements in the social sciences, has initiated three new members.

The three include James Hiatt, a graduate student from Spencer and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robin Hiatt, majoring in English history, and social science; Lisa Hoising, a junior from Fordyce and the daughter of Francis and Grace Hoising, majoring in social science; and Bob Geary, a junior from Madison and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Geary, majoring in social science.

TO QUALIFY for membership, students must have at least 20 hours of social science courses in four core subject areas chosen from history, political science, sociology or anthropology, and economics or geography.

The students must be of junior standing, possess a 3.0 grade point average in the 20 hours of social science classes, and never have failed a social science course.

THIS YEAR, the WSC chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, officially the Nebraska Delta Chapter, has been included on PGM's "Roll of Distinction."

This is the highest honor a local chapter can achieve, and is based on the activities and involvement of members last year.

WSC hires engineer for radio, television

A year-long search for a college electronics engineer at Wayne State College has ended with the hiring of Earl Norman of Sioux City.

Norman, a native of Walthill, will be working with various areas throughout the college, including the radio and television facilities, the library's audiovisual lab, the set-up of the Foreign Language lab, and "a lot of other areas", according to both Norman and Dr. Ruby Pederson, head of the Humanities Division.

Norman filled the vacancy left by Doug Thompson, who moved to Minnesota last spring.

AN ACTIVE member of the Air Guard, Norman heard of the job opening at Wayne through another member, Terry Turner, who has also worked as an engineer at the college last year.

Norman began at the college early in March.

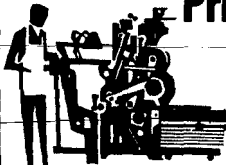

The adjustment, Norman said, is "simply learning a new phase of electronics. I like it. It's refreshing," he said. In reference to the fact that he is working closely with students, Dr. Pederson feels that the college was fortunate to have hired an engineer with the amount of experience that Norman has, and that the adjustment period is going well for everyone.

NORMAN ENTERED the Air Guard in 1950, after a two-year stint in the Navy from 1944-46.

His career in electronics began in 1955 when the Guard needed someone for the job, and he "was interested". After attending school, he primarily worked with radar, and the "life control", a device used to aim aircraft at enemy planes and ground targets.

While working out of Sioux City, he had the opportunity to travel and work in many of the states, and overseas in Italy.

CHECK with US! By Betty Addison

Q. This is, admittedly, a strange question, but if the answer is to be had, I believe you may have it. During a recent trip to Washington, D.C., my wife and I toured the Bureau of Engraving and watched dollar bills roll off the presses. My wife has since had the idea that a sheet of dollar bills would make an interesting conversation piece if framed. Is such a thing available?

A. Yes, Sheets of uncut dollar bills, suitable for framing, are available from the Bureau, at a slight premium, of course. Two-by-eight sheets and four-by-eight sheets of uncut bills, complete with a black mat and ready for mounting are available. For additional information, we suggest you write to Currency Sheet Sales, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Fourteenth and C Streets, Washington, D.C. 20228. Actually, your wife is not alone in her idea: Many visitors to the Bureau have visualized sheets of dollar bills on den walls, which is why the Bureau has made them available.

Artist

the studio site behind the framing shop. And, in the steel building is Frey's working studio, his business office, a tool shop and hundreds of feet of storage space for the couple's manufacturing venture.

Before his painting career hit its stride, Frey was a potter. Sherian continues to work in pottery.

Frey has designed, developed and built several potters' and artists' accessories, among them the Carlo Frey Potters Wheel, Artist Easel and Paint Box.

THE ACCESSORIES remain available through Mid America Art Studio. Equipment exists at the studio to mass produce the items, all of which have reached a national market for Frey, who grew-up in Liberal, Kans., where he graduated from high school in 1955.

When he was eight years old, Frey's parents moved from rural Oklahoma's Beaver County, to Liberal, where he entered the third grade.

Today, 36 years later, the northeast Nebraska artist is hanging his work throughout the country's midsection from Omaha to Scottsdale, Ariz.

LAST WEEK, the Anne Magee Gallery in Scottsdale, which recently sought and now displays his work as an exclusive representative of the Wayne artist in Arizona, sold one of five Frey paintings.

Frey's work is being handled by the gallery through the help of another Nebraska artist, Tom Talbott, who makes the initial contacts. Talbott, now of Denver, is from Broken Bow.

The Magee Gallery (of the Magee Department Store family in Lincoln) connection also has given Frey an opportunity for more exposure during the upcoming art auction scheduled for May 16 as a benefit for Children's Memorial Hospital of Omaha.

Frey, who plans to donate several pieces, will be included among a number of artists for a formal reception following the benefit auction.

IN ADDITION, the Wayne artist is planning a spring art gallery scouting tour that will take him to at least five states, including Wyoming, New Mexico, Texas, Kansas and Minnesota.

"I'm going to get out and scout galleries that I would like to have represent my work," explained Frey, who just returned from Lincoln where he conducted a three-day landscape-painting workshop for the Lincoln Artists Guild.

Frey also picked up 43 paintings that he had on display at the State Office Building in Lincoln during the month of March.

The University of Kansas graduate, who once spent a summer as an oil field roustabout, plans a one man art show at the Federal Building in Lincoln before the end of the year.

FREY, WHO WORKED part time in the advertising department of a food store chain headquarters while in high school, recently won "best of show" during the Northeast Nebraska Art Association show in Norfolk's Sunset Plaza.

Frey's "Sara in Light," took the top prize in the week long show. And, his wife took a runner up prize at the show with her "Egplant and Orange."

Frey's top winner, and another selection, will advance to statewide competition. Also, two selections entered in the Norfolk show by Sherian have reached state competition.

This month, Frey will take some 30 paintings to Neligh for a three week show at that town's Imperial Steakhouse beginning April 25.

And, in July, he's already been invited to present a show and conduct a workshop at McCook during the annual state convention of the Association of Nebraska Art Clubs.

FREY, WHO TAUGHT at Wayne State College for 10 years, earned his bachelor of fine arts degree from the University of Kansas at Lawrence in 1960.

A fast pitch softball star in his younger days, Frey also once worked in the head quarter's engineering office of Beech Air craft and spent two summers designing new signs for a firm in Hutchinson, Kans.

In 1961, while working in a two-year car dealership management program at Dodge City, Kans., Frey pitched his way to a national second-place ranking in fast-pitch softball.

Frey's skills on the mound won him a start in the national tournament, and he spent about 15 years in state fast-pitch softball tournament competition.

And, he joined the Army Reserves, later earning a commission (second lieutenant) in Officers Candidate School at Fort Sill, Okla.

AFTER A SUMMER as commander of his unit ("There was no first lieutenant," he explained), Frey returned to Liberal to begin his art career in earnest.

"I went back to Liberal and built an art studio, where I worked on portraits, sculpture and commission painting for nearly five years," he explained.

In 1965, Frey went back to school, earning his master of fine arts degree in sculpture from the University of Kansas.

"I came to Wayne," he said.

"I came to teach sculpture, but after two years I was teaching sculpture, pottery, drawing, art history and art appreciation. I taught everything but painting, which is what I'm now doing," said Frey, the son of a Kansas machinist and an accomplished photographer.

FREY CAME TO WAYNE with Sherian, whom he had met in 1963 while working at his Liberal art studio.

"I had met her father (John Miller) before we took dancing lessons together," explained Frey. "It was the dancing instructor who got Sherian and I together."

They were married in 1965.

Sherian's father, who was a pilot, and mother (Blanche) are retired in Pensacola, Fla.

They were in Wayne visiting their daughter, son in law and two grandchildren — Chad, 11, and Troy, 8 — during what has become known as the Blizzard of '82 in January.

Chad attends Wayne Middle School and Troy attends Wayne Elementary School. The Frey family lives at 309 10th Street east across the street from the WSC campus.

WHEN CARLOS TURNED 37 he quit teaching.

"I remembered when my father was 37 he said, explaining his recollection of the security in a steady job.

"I think I'm going to quit (teaching)," he told Sherian.

Frey's first art studio in Wayne grew out of a two room apartment "with one room for painting."

Then, the couple bought an old home (14 rooms) at the corner of Seventh and Logan.

Frey's perfection of the potters wheel "made us grow out of that. It grew out of my garage and the neighbor's garage and the basement and began to crowd my studio."

That's when the Freys bought their present studio on the southeastern edge of Wayne.

IT IS THERE that Frey has worked, and continues to work when he is not involved in workshops and shows, to perfect his skills as a portrait artist, developing art world recognition for his people paintings.

The busy schedule of shows and workshops, however, have not put a dent in his creative productivity as an artist.

Portrait work continues coming in from the contacts he makes at art shows and workshops. The moments left are spent with landscapes, people paintings and book writing.

Now it's teacher, sculptor, potter, inventor, painter, photographer and writer Carlos Frey.

With more than 300 portraits to his credit, Frey also has two years into a three year book writing project.

The book, a how to volume on pastel painting for beginners and advanced artists, already has a potential publisher in Lincoln — Cliff Hillegass of Cliff's Notes fame.

Photography: Randall Howell

"CLIFF BOUGHT MY paintings," explained Frey. "That's how I got to know him."

Hillegass bought paintings Frey had donated to Nebraska E-TV for its fundraising auction.

Phyllis Burger, director of special education for Education Service Unit 8 and publicly chairman for the Norfolk Arts Center, is transcribing Frey's notes and tapes for the book, which is scheduled for completion this year.

In addition to a daily painting schedule that begins long before most people face breakfast, Frey has managed to find time to handle increasing attention from the media and the art world.

He's been interviewed and taped by Channel 8 NTV of Kearney, as well as Channel 4 KTVI of Sioux City.

Also, Cablecom of Norfolk, a local access channel, has contacted Frey in connection with a videolapping session.

FREY HAS BEEN featured in both the Norfolk Daily News and Lincoln's Sunday Journal and Star this winter.

And, last fall, when NBC star Johnny Carson returned to hometown Norfolk to film his network television special, the Freys framed old movie posters and selected gift prints for the late night talk show host.

The Freys also ended up framing a piece of wallboard for Carson that featured the television comedian's signature and the year 1943. The wallboard was taken from Norfolk High School.

Stories about the Carson Frey framing connection first appeared in The Wayne Herald.

Frey, former Northeast Nebraska Art Association chairman, is not only preparing for a busy spring and summer, but also is planning an October show for the Norfolk Arts Center.

In November, the Wayne artist will open a show at Warehouse Gallery in Grand Island.

CARLOS FREY pauses during a working session at his Mid-America Art Studio on the southeastern edge of Wayne. The 44-year-old artist has been working for years to develop his talent and skills as a people painter. Frey was an associate professor of art at Wayne State College until 1975.

Dimensions

In fact, one of Frey's paintings featuring a dancing Indian was seen by Denver artist Tom Talbott, originally from Broken Bow, and became a key link in the Wayne artists invitation to hang his work in the Anne Magee Gallery in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Frey, who frequently paints at his Wayne studio on a daily schedule that has him at the canvas for 45 minutes and on break for 15 minutes, has been working and waiting for the opportunity to go public as a recognized people painter.

"I'M MOVING AWAY from portraiture," he said, explaining that the commission work always puts him in the position of pleasing someone.

"With people painting, I do it so it pleases me... then, if it pleases them, they buy it," he continued.

"I think I'm ready for it," he said. "I remained almost anonymous for years knowing that when I stuck my head out that I wanted to feel ready for that big jump...I wanted to be able to keep it up."

Frey, who remembers the insecurity he felt when he quit teaching at WSC after 10 years, said, "When I left, people asked me why I quit, particularly because I loved it. But, I felt that I was at the top of a small box. Giving that up to develop my own abilities as an artist put me at the bottom of a big box without a top on it."

THE WAYNE ARTIST has no regrets.

"That was my feeling then... and it's still true," he said. "And, I think I made the right decision."

Frey satisfies his desire to teach by conducting countless workshops on art. He recently finished a three-day workshop in Lincoln on pastel landscape painting.

"The difference is that I do them on my terms," he explained.

Despite the increasing attention he is getting throughout the nation's midsection, Frey is almost unknown as an artist in Wayne.

And, he's philosophical about that.

"Whenever you live, people there just aren't going to seek you out, you are just too close to home. I don't think Wayne knows we exist."

FREY KNEW HIS painting was portable, though.

"We knew it could be done here and shipped elsewhere," he said, explaining that he and his wife, Sherian, and their two sons wanted to stay in the community.

"We don't try to promote our paintings here, nor do we try to appeal to anyone here," he said.

Frey works to capture what he calls "the essence of a person" in his paintings.

"If (the painting) must be more than simply a mirror of the subject," he added.

"I'm trying to say something significant with my paintings without being boxed in by likeness," he recently told Lincoln's Sunday Journal and Star.

Power

KLOSTER SAID that on March 4 he was informed by the city administrator of South Sioux City that that municipality was "contemplating getting other communities together to join with them to get their own allocation" from WAPA.

This past week, South Sioux City, Wakefield, Randolph and Madison took the matter to court, according to Kloster.

Kloster said the low-cost power became available in early 1980 when WAPA determined it was going to have an excess of power available in its post-1985 marketing plan.

"The result was that WAPA lowered power levels behind its big dams," Kloster said, explaining that WAPA officials also discovered that they had used a "drier than average" base for figuring the power generation.

IN REVIEWING the post-1985 marketing plan, WAPA calculated it would have as much as 35 megawatts of extra power in the summer and 40 megawatts of extra power in the winter, Kloster said.

"Excess capacity," he said, "was only left to share the extra power with customers in the Midwest who did not have WAPA allocations," Kloster said.

So, WAPA responded applications for power allocations "only to those cities that did not have contracts with the agency," Kloster said.

Wayne had turned down a WAPA power allocation offer some years before that because, at that time, the price of fuel was low enough that the city could generate its own power at the same cost, Kloster said.

"OF COURSE, that has changed drastically today," he added. "And, that's why we were interested in and pursued the WAPA offer."

Today, city generating power is "about 20 times" greater than the post-WAPA power, according to Kloster.

Kloster said WAPA power costs about 4 of a cent per kilowatt, while it cost the city about 8 cents to generate the same kilowatt.

"It's just prohibitive for us to generate our own power when we can buy it cheaper from NPPD and WAPA," Kloster said.
