Governor praises students

Kiwanis Club recognizes scholars at Wayne High

The top-ranking scholars of Wayne City Schools got compliments, encouragement and a challenge from Governor Charles Thone Monday night.

So did the Wayne Kiwanis Club, sponsor of the honors banquet which has recognized scholastic achievement of Wayne students for the past 19 years.

Thone praised the 58 student honorees (eighth grade through senior) for accomplishments so far, but told them, "Keep up your achievement all your life."

THE GOVERNOR also complimented "the cohesiveness of organizations like Kiwanis" for their efforts to improve the quality of life at the local level.

Thone said, "No government — federal, state or local — can solve all the problems. Organizations can help solve many social and economic problems. We need citizen involvement."

The governor called for Nebraskans to share resources for the benefit of their communities.

"We have drifted too much from the volunteerism that used to prevail," he said.

THONE NOTED that in 1959 when he was an assistant to then Senator Roman Hruska, the federal government had about 50 to 60 social service programs spending $7 to $8 billion.

Now, he said, there are something like 500 programs spending about $100 billion.

"State and local governments and organizations can do better for themselves," declared Thone.

Finishing his talk to the audience of about 200 students, parents, Kiwanians and guests, the governor called upon Wayne High Principal Donald Zeiss to proceed with the honors ceremony, "and I will do what he told me, present the certificates."

THONE'S ADDRESS at Monday night's scholastic achievement banquet in the Wayne State College Student Union, culminated a weekend visit to the Wayne area.

On Sunday, the governor was guest speaker at the spring commencement exercises of Wayne State College.

He also took part in the dedication program Sunday afternoon for Wayne State's newly-renovated Education and Humanities Buildings.

On Monday, the governor was the keynote speaker at a breakfast at the Laurel City Auditorium to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the formation of the Tri-County Council of Governments (TRI COG).

A LARGE CROWD turned out for Wayne State's commencement exercises Sunday afternoon. Gov. Charley Thone was the guest speaker as 189 students received diplomas in the Willow Bowl.

Wayne State confers 189 diplomas in Willow Bowl

One hundred eighty-nine Wayne State College students received their degrees at spring commencement exercises Sunday.

Nebraska Governor Charles Thone addressed the students during afternoon ceremonies in the Willow Bowl.

Following graduation exercises, the governor attended a dedication program for Wayne State's newly-renovated Education and Humanities Buildings.

DURING GRADUATION exercises, President Seymour conferred degrees to 179 students earning bachelor's degrees and 11 students completing their master's work.

Four students graduated with scholarship honors.

To be eligible for these honors, a student must first be recommended by their division for the program. Upon completion of an independent study course, the student participates in the Senior Honors Colloquium.

Both allow the student to work on a project or research a topic that they otherwise may not normally study. The papers are then presented to the College Honors Committee, made up of faculty members from all divisions.

THE HONOR students included Marjorie Stewart Holland, wife of Bill Holland of Wisner, graduating Cum Laude with the highest honors in journalism.

The title of her senior research project was "A Case Study of District 43, Cuming County."

Julie Lynn Lanphear, daughter of Phyllis Lanphear of Hoskins, graduated Summa Cum Laude and with high honors in elementary education.

Her senior research project was entitled "Facilitation of Error and Nonerror Production on Academic Tasks and the Effects on Learning."

MICHAEL THOMAS Vcelik, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernice Vcelik of Osceola, graduated with honorable mention.

The title of his research project was "Theory Z — Theory Y: A Comparative Analysis."

Brian Charles Wansink, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wansink of Sioux City, graduated honorable mention with honors in business.

His senior research project was entitled "Control as a Function of Input Frequency to a Cybernetic Control Subsystem."

SIX STUDENTS graduated Summa Cum Laude, which requires a grade point average of 3.90 or above. Those students included Chris Lee Crosgrove, Modale, Iowa; Brenda Ann Hunke, West Point; Helen Ruth Lundin, Allen; Marlan Marie Maas, Chambers; Theresa Marie Maynard, Omaha; and David Jeffrey Warnum, Winside.

They included Lorene Stalp Fiala, Howells; Dennis Alan Fier, Wayne; Pamela Jean Koenig, Ewing; Toni Trojan Konicek, Pilger; Cathryn Poppe Tietgen, Pierce; Susan Logan Tyler, Emerson; and Ellen K. Warren, Emerson.

EIGHT STUDENTS with grade point averages of 3.70 or above graduated Cum Laude.

Casey's owner vows business will be constructed in Wayne

Gary Donner of Hartington says it's just a matter of time before his proposed Casey's General Store will be constructed in Wayne.

At Monday night's Wayne Planning Commission meeting, Donner withdrew his request for a conditional-use permit for self-service gasoline because of a technicality.

However, he says he plans to correct his mistake and re-submit his request for next month's Planning Commission meeting.

DOHNER WAS REQUIRED to contact all property owners within 300 feet in all directions from his property line. He explained that he "made an error in the 300 foot dimension" and contacted all property owners within 300 feet of the center of the lot—not the edge. Some property owners east and south of the proposed site were not contacted.

"I thought it was better I withdraw my request. If I get it right next time," Donner stated.

The proposed Casey's General Store has faced several setbacks and delays over the past several months. A liquor license, commercial zoning and a request for self-service gasoline pumps were three of the major stumbling blocks.

The proposed construction store is slated for construction at 619 Windom Street in an area zoned for neighborhood commercial ventures (B-3). The property was owned by Florence Mau.

THREE PROPERTY OWNERS in the area have filed to have some of their property rezoned from B-3 to R-2 according to Marcia Pankaskie, city planner/building inspector. The residents are David H. Ewing, Meta Ruser and Clarence Rauss.

B-3 "is intended primarily for the provision of retail and personal service facilities to satisfy the convenience goods needs of the consumer relatively close to his/her place of residence." R-2 is residential and two-family zoning.

In 1979 an ordinance was passed including the comprehensive plan of Wayne in the zoning plan. The plan rezoned Seventh Street B-3 from Main Street to near the city limits.

Ewing has filed to have his property (first two lots on west side of Windom) rezoned to R-2. Mrs. Ruser owns the west half of the last three lots on East Windom. She has filed to have the north part of the lot (lot 8) adjoining the MAU property rezoned.

Raus, who owns the east half of those three lots, has filed to have his half of lot 8 also rezoned to R-2.

MARCIA PANKASKIE said those three individuals desired to have their property rezoned but gave no clear-cut reasons.

She said the proposed rezoning should have little effect on Casey's General Store but could force Donner to move his building farther from the south property line.

ANOTHER MAIN TOPIC of the Planning Commission meeting was proposed reconstruction of 7th Street. The commission recommended to the City Council a "maintenance" plan which would consist of black toping of the street without widening.

Under the proposed plan, turn-off lanes would be constructed at Pamida, Wayne Community High School and Greenwood Cemetery, Planning Commission President Glenn Ellingson said the plan has been checked out and should take care of Wayne's problems for 10 years.

Estimated cost of the project is $200,000 with the city paying 25 percent. Vern Schools, head of the Wayne Street Department, discussed the project at Monday's meeting.

The only other discussion for the meeting concerned Hunter's Kroll's Subdivision. The commission tabled questions and discussed on that issue until next month's meeting.

Banquet for president

PRESIDENT LYLE Seymour and his wife, Ginny, enjoy one of numerous humorous stories that Tony Netherda spun, recalling his years, since 1948, as the only professor who has served on the Wayne State faculty longer than Seymour, who started in 1953. The occasion: a banquet Monday evening honoring Dr. Seymour, who will retire as president June 30, but will stay on campus as director of the Wayne State Foundation. Dr. Lyle Skov, who joined the faculty in 1953, also regaled the audience of about 140 with stories of the Seymour career. Vice-President Ed Elliott concluded with mostly serious recollections in tribute to the retired. Mrs. Connie Webber, Faculty Club president, arranged the banquet.

WSC men fourth

Lady Wildcats place second in conference meet

Buoyed by strong performances in the sprints and relays, the Wayne State Lady Wildcat Track squad fought its way into second place in the Central States Intercollegiate Conference track and field championships held at Wayne State College Friday and Saturday.

The men's squad finished in fourth place in the CSC Wayne State now turns its attention to the NAIA District 11 championships, scheduled for May 7 at Kearney State College.

THE KEARNEY STATE women and the Pittsburg State men lived up to pre meet expectations as they successfully defended their CSC team titles. Several conference records fell or were tied during the meet in perfect weather at WSC's Memorial Stadium.

The Kearney State women used superior depth to claim the women's team title. The Lady Antelopes earned one less first place finish than Wayne State, but won the meet with 164 points to 92 1/2 for Wayne State. Other team scores included Emporia State with 76, Missouri Southern and Ft. Hays State with 63, Pittsburg State with 31 1/2, and Washburn with 0.

Kelley Peterson, Wayne State's sophomore All American, set a new conference record enroute to winning the 100 meter hurdles in 14.7 seconds, a personal best. Peterson was also on the winning and record setting 800 meter medley relay team and the victorious and record tying 4 x 100 meter relay squad. In addition, she took a third place in the 100 meter dash.

Vicki Qualtes earned a first place in the 200 meter dash, and a fifth place in the 800 meter dash. She also won first place medals for her spot on the 800 meter medley relay and 4 x 100 meter relay teams that set and matched conference records.

MARIAN BORGSMANN also nabbed several first placings including the 200 meter dash title. She was on the 800 meter medley relay and 4 x 100 relay teams that won first places, and on the 4 x 400 meter relay team that earned a fourth place.

Sophomore Janet Lee provided one of the meet's high points with a stirring stretch run to win the 1500 meter race. Lisa Pyle was on the first place 800 meter medley relay squad, on the fourth place 4 x 400 meter relay team and earned third in the 400 meter dash.

Freshman Lori Schulenberg was the final Lady Cat to earn a first place, thanks to her spot on the record tying 4 x 100 meter relay team. Tracy Newberger was a close second place in the shot put, while Vicki Wamborg tied for sixth in the high jump.

Stacy Moore earned a fourth in the 400 meter hurdles and was on the fourth place 4 x 400 meter relay team. Freshman Melissa Gottschalk managed fifth place in the 800 meter run. Camie Starman rounded out WSC scoring with her spot on the fourth place 4 x 400 meter relay team.

THE WILDCAT MEN were unable to claim an outright first place as an awesome Pittsburg State track club ran away from the field. The Gorillas notched 12 first placings in the 19 events on their way to 221 points, more than double the score of runner up Kearney with 121. Ft. Hays State tallied 119, Wayne State 36, Emporia State 35 and Washburn 0.

Premier hurdler Ed Blackburn broke the conference record with a 14.1 time in Friday's 110 meter hurdle preliminaries, but was unable to match that time on Saturday's finals. His preliminary time does stand as a conference record according to CSC information director Paul Sweetgall.

Blackburn did provide a meet highlight when he and Emporia State's Mike Cole were judged to have run a "dead heat" in Saturday's 110 high hurdle finals. Official timers reviewed the photo finish for approximately 20 minutes after the conclusion of the race but were unable to determine a winner.

Blackburn was also on the second place 4 x 100 meter relay team that finished behind Pittsburg State's record setting crew. Joe Ortmeier was also a member of that relay squad, and he supplied points with a fifth place finish in the high jump.

FRESHMAN DAN KENKEL earned sixth in the 400 meter hurdles, and was on the second place 4 x 100 meter and third place 4 x 400 meter relay teams. Freshman Pat LaPadula was also a member of those two

Trojans given top seed

The top seed was awarded to the Wakefield Trojans for the Class A high school district baseball tournament scheduled May 11, 13 and 18 at Wakefield.

The Trojans were tied with Wayne for best record in the district at 7-2 but defeated the Blue Devils in their only meeting this season. That was the determining factor in selecting the top seed.

Bancroft and Laurel will meet at 4 p.m. Tuesday (May 11) in a preliminary game of the five team tourney. The winner will face Wakefield at 4 p.m. Thursday (May 13). In the other bracket, Wayne will face sixth rated Omaha South at 2 p.m. Thursday.

The winners of Thursday's games will clash at 4 p.m. on Tuesday, May 18 for the championship. The victor will advance to the Class A state tournament in Raistown.

District tournament director is Lyle Trullinger. Umpires for the district tourney will be John Torczon, Ray Welsh and Steve Farley.

Teams' records at the time of seeding: Wakefield 7-2, Wayne 7-2, Omaha South 9-4, Laurel 2-6, Bancroft 2-6.

All-conference baseball

Wayne topped the balloting in selections to the Northeast Nebraska Baseball All Conference team selected Tuesday night.

The Blue Devils placed five players on the all-conference squad while Laurel had four and Wakefield had three on the first team. Wakefield and Wayne had identical 7-2 records entering Thursday's rescheduled double header.

Wayne players who made the all-conference team were senior pitcher Todd Pfeiffer, junior center fielder Jeff McCright, junior first baseman Tim Heier, junior utility player Dennis Lebock and junior designated hitter Todd Schwartz.

Pfeiffer had a 4-1 record with 27 strikeouts, 15 hits and 11 walks at the time of all-conference selections. McCright batted .440. Heier batted .391. Lebock batted .375 and Schwartz batted .345.

Laurel's four players were senior pitcher Phil Martin, senior third baseman Dave Marquardt, junior shortstop Kelly Robson and senior catcher Brian Marquardt. Martin had a 1-3 record. Dave Marquardt batted .440. Robson batted .371 and Brian Marquardt batted .270.

Wakefield placed senior pitcher Mark Starzl, sophomore second baseman Jeff Coble and junior outfielder Mike Clay on the team. Starzl had a 5-0 record with 59 strikeouts, 10 hits and 13 walks. Coble batted .500 and Clay batted .348.

CSIC Tournament

Wayne State settles for second place

The Wildcat baseball team at Wayne State College posted a win and two losses to earn second place in the Central States Intercollegiate baseball tourney on Friday and Saturday in St. Joseph, Mo.

The Wildcats, 16-18, are scheduled to conclude their 1982 regular season this Friday and Saturday, May 7-8 against Chadron State College, with double-headers planned for both days. At stake is a spot in the NAIA District 11 playoffs scheduled for May 12-14.

According to Coach Ron Jones, in order for Wayne State to earn the top state college seed in that tourney, the Cats must win three of the four games against CSC. The top state college qualifier earns the right to face the second-place private college qualifier in the districts.

WAYNE STATE opened the tourney with a thrilling 3-2 win over host Missouri Western. Emporia State then eliminated Western in the second game before posting a 12-3 victory over WSC on Friday evening. Emporia State, the only conference baseball champion the CSIC has ever had, earned the championship once again with a 6-1 win Saturday afternoon in the double elimination tourney.

The 3-2 victory over Western would have to rank as one of the best performances by the Wildcats this season. Junior pitcher Grady Hanson won the entire nine innings, surrendering just seven hits, to up his record to 4-3.

Western jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the top of the first, and added another run in the third. Wayne State tallied two in the fourth, largely on the strength of Craig Ludwig's RBI double. The score remained knotted at 2-1 until the bottom of the eighth.

Ken Murcek led off the inning with a walk, and was moved to second on a sacrifice by Bill Schwartz. Murcek then scored the winning run on a single by Gregg Cruickshank. Hanson then retired the final three Griffin batters for the victory.

FIVE WAYNE STATE errors contributed heavily to Emporia's 12-3 win Friday evening. Wayne State actually out-hit ESU, 9-8, but the Hornets committed a single error for the big difference.

The game was tied 1-1 going into the bottom of the fifth, but ESU scored three in the fifth, two in the sixth, fourth in the seventh and two more in the eighth to make the verdict look deceptively easy. Wayne State scored single runs in the fifth, seventh, and eighth.

Randy Frink took the loss on the mound despite giving up just six hits in 6 1/2 innings. He was relieved by sophomore Jeff Clark. Tom Todd had a triple and a single to lead the offense, while Ken Murcek singled twice.

A five-run second inning was the downfall for the Cats in the 6-1 loss to Emporia for the CSIC title. Except for that inning, the Cats played superb baseball, particularly relief pitcher Dan Hilgenkamp, hitlengkamp surrendered just three hits in 7 2/3 innings of action.

Again, the Wildcats out-hit the winners, this time by a 6-5 margin. But the classy Hornets played flawless baseball enroute to the title. Mike Meyer led the offense with two singles in four at-bats. Tom Todd rapped another triple, while Rich Murcek had a double.

Starting pitcher Rocky Thompson took the loss on the mound.

These individuals were sponsored by Region IV Services Wayne, with Bob Gullickson and Karen Oswald as this year's coaches. Their trainers were Mark Shufelt, Frieda Brazel, and Cathy Hackbert.

The Wayne Federated Women's Club and the Wisner Jaycees provided contributions to these athletes in order for them to have matching team outfits to compete in.

dividual event qualify for state. The next two fastest times in individual track events also qualify but if there is a tie for the last qualifying spot, none of those tied will qualify. First place finishers in relay events also qualify.

In addition to regular qualifiers in individual track events in Classes B and C, those individuals with the six fastest times from a comparison of all districts will qualify regardless of place. In relays, additional qualifiers will be allowed if their time is among the six fastest.

There also are set standards in boys and girls field events and anyone who equals or exceeds those marks will automatically qualify.

Wayne will compete in the Class B-4 district Thursday at Pawnee Park in Columbus, Allen, Laurel and Wakefield will compete in the C-3 meet Thursday at Wayne State and Winside will compete Tuesday in the D-2 meet at Wayne State.

BASEBALL AND golf districts will also be held next week. The district baseball tourney is scheduled to open Tuesday at Wakefield and pairings have been announced.

SUMMER BASEBALL opens its baseball season and Wayne State's season will soon come to a close. The Wildcats are scheduled to host Chadron State Friday in a double-header at the Wayne city ball park. The games begin at 5 p.m.

The Cats will host Chadron at 12 noon Saturday in another double-header. Wayne needs to win three of the four games in order to earn the number one seed in the District 11 Tournament.

The four games mark the final home performance of WSC seniors Bill Schwartz and Mike Meyer of Wayne, Ken Atwood of Omaha, Dale Hensley of Shenandoah, Iowa, Kevin Williamson of Orchard and Dan Connelly of Omaha.

12 Million acres enrolled

Farmers have signed up in the 1982 acreage reduction programs 179.4 million acres of feed grain, rice, upland cotton and wheat base acreage according to figures released by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The enrolled acreage represents 79.3 percent of the 226 million acres of total base acreage.

The sign-up was required before farmers are eligible for program benefits such as Commodity Credit Corporation loans, target price protection and — for wheat and feed grain participants — eligibility for the grain reserve.

Farmers who sign up to participate in the acreage reduction programs for upland cotton, rice and wheat agree to reduce the plantings of their base acreage of these commodities by at least 15 percent while feed grain producers will voluntarily reduce plantings of their base acreage by 10 percent. The acreage taken out of production will be devoted to a conservation use.

Target prices for the 1982 crops are: barley, $2.60; corn, $2.70; oats, $1.50; sorghum, $2.60; wheat, $4.05; rice, $10.85; upland cotton, $0.71.

Nebraska figures: net farms with one or more acreage bases 90,399; number enrolled - 73,727; percentage enrolled - 31.56; total acres - 13,757,863.1; acres enrolled - 12,114,835.2; percentage enrolled - 88.06.

TRACTOR TEST RESULTS

The new Nebraska Tractor Test Data summary booklet, including nearly 200 tractor makes and models, has been published and can be purchased at the extension office. The cost is $1.50 per booklet.

Tests conducted at the University of Nebraska Tractor Testing Laboratory measure power take-off and drawbar performance, sound levels of various models and fuel efficiency.

This year's testing includes the biggest tractor tested to date at the NU lab, the Big Bud tractor. Big Bud has a maximum drawbar performance of 421 horsepower.

GRASS TETANY TIME

Grass tetany can be a problem in cattle, especially following wet weather when lush growth of grass has occurred.

Grass tetany usually occurs when cattle are feeding on lush, spring grass. Cows with nursing calves are most susceptible, with the disease occurring most often in late spring, after calving.

Cows affected with grass tetany lose their appetite, are more irritable, easily excited, and show varying degrees of incoordination. Affected animals may grind their teeth, salivate, stagger, and fall down. Some are unable to rise, exhibit convulsions and may die. Contact a veterinarian immediately if any of these signs are observed, as early treatment is quite effective.

Prevention is centered around supplying adequate nutritional requirements of magnesium. Preferably, the supplement should be given 30 days prior to turning out to grass. Provide magnesium oxide as a supplement to furnish the necessary magnesium to aid in preventing grass tetany.

One of the following simple mixtures may be used for this purpose:

1. magnesium oxide, 25 percent; dicalcium phosphate, 25 percent; salt, 50 percent.
2. magnesium oxide, 20 percent; salt, 80 percent.
3. magnesium oxide, 33 percent; cottonseed meal, 33 percent; salt 34 percent.

For each mix, adjust salt and/or the number of mineral feeders to maintain about 25-27 pounds of magnesium oxide per 100 cows per week.

2, 4-D

Cold temperature will not deteriorate the active ingredient in any of our commonly used herbicides including 2, 4-D. Low temperatures may cause separation of the ingredients through crystallization or separation of liquids.

If this has occurred, placing the container in sunlight at room temperature and rolling the container periodically will reconstitute the formulation. The herbicide will not have lost its effectiveness as a result of the low temperature storage.

Elevated floors help in swine housing

The solution to the problem of temperature management in swine housing — particularly for farrowing and nurseries — is elevated floors, according to University of Nebraska swine specialist Robert Fritschen.

Fritschen said the new idea has surfaced recently and is quite affordable for most hog producers.

ELEVATED FLOOR pig production became popular for early weaning pigs in the United States in the mid 1970s, he said. Only recently has it been adopted into farrowing production, he said, with producers testifying to its apparent success, even though research to support the practice is only now emerging.

Regarding proper temperature management in farrowing and nursery housing, Fritschen said, "At that stage, maybe as high as 90 percent of all problems having to do with baby pigs' health or death have to do with a temperature that is too low."

Fritschen said that during the past winter, a particularly rough one for pig producers, most of the death loss and incidence of scours were due to poor temperature control.

In a recent review of literature on elevated floors, Fritschen noted that a draft that increases from 20 to 40 feet per minute has the same effect as reducing the temperature 9 degrees Fahrenheit. A draft of 44 feet per minute equals one half mile per hour, he explained.

BECAUSE ABOUT 25 percent of all baby pigs die between farrowing and weaning, producers will save pigs and money by using elevated decks and farrowing crates, Fritschen said.

Since cold air follows surfaces, raising a floor one foot produces a 2 to 3 degree increase in temperature, he noted.

"We're getting to see quite a bit of this, and it's relatively inexpensive," Fritschen said. Frequently, concrete blocks stacked on top of one another can raise floors six inches at little expense to the producer, he said.

Fritschen cited research that demonstrated the following reasons for improved performance with elevated decks:

Dryer conditions for the pig — Warmer and more comfortable conditions for the pig.

Cleaner pigs — feces and urine do not build up.

Fewer microorganisms near the pig.

Less stress — post weaning slump is decreased, which means less diarrhea and better growth.

REGARDING STUDIES at Ohio State comparing cages with floor level nursery production, Fritschen said, "Wilson et al (1979) reported that weaned pigs reared in flat decks gained 26 percent faster and were 12 percent more efficient than pigs in concrete-floored nurseries. Survival was also improved in the flat decks. In this study, the decks were 12 inches above floor level where temperatures were reported to be 8 degrees F warmer than at floor level."

Reviewing a study done at the University of Arkansas, Fritschen said, "Noland et al (1981) reported on two trials in elevated nursery decks comparing different floorings... They concluded these trials indicated pigs reared on perforated floors gained slightly faster than those on concrete floors with slats. Also the expanded metal floors produced slightly better performance than the plastic coated floors. In their experience, expanded metal (uncoated) lasted about three years while the coated wire floors appear to last somewhat longer."

While research on raised farrowing crates is less abundant, Fritschen said a study by the Ralston Purina research facility at Grey Summit, Mo., (Washam, 1981) summarized 46 commercial sow operations and showed that pigs farrowed on total elevated wire floors resulted in 24.1 percent lower pig loss than those farrowed on partial slats.

While noting that research has not kept pace with the new styles of bare wire or metal floorings, Fritschen said it is generally conceded that coated mesh flooring is warmer than uncoated metal.

However, he said, the effect of the difference in pig performance is slight on a nil years while the coated wire floors appear to last somewhat longer."

Up to a pint of Banvel® Herbicide over your grass herbicide knocks out broadleaf weeds before corn is 5 inches tall.

Broadleaf weeds are at their weakest as seedlings. That's the time to hit them with up to a pint of Banvel® Herbicide as part of a two-step overlay program in your corn.

First, apply your pre-plant or pre-emergence grass herbicide as usual. Then, lay down Banvel Herbicide when broadleaf weeds germinate — before corn is 5 inches tall. (The length of a ballpoint pen is a handy measure.)

By holding back until broadleaf weeds germinate, Banvel Herbicide is ready to work when it's needed most... and over a longer period of time.

Banvel Herbicide controls dozens of broadleaf weeds in corn — even tough customers like sunflower, cocklebur and velvetleaf (buttonweed). Compared to other broadleaf herbicides, Banvel Herbicide gives you cost-per-acre advantages, a wide spectrum of control, excellent crop tolerance and no worries about carryover.

Three-part attack suggested

Beat shattercane before it gets toehold in the field

Scientists know it as sorghum bicolor. Farmers have a variety of names for it, including shattercane, wild cane, or simply, "that stinkin' weed." Whatever the name, however, shattercane is a tough weed to beat once it gets a toehold in the field.

Shattercane is a member of the sorghum family, and a relative of milo. In fact, the weed will cross-pollinate with cultivated milo, making control in that crop next to impossible.

SHATTERCANE, also known as wild cane, continued to be the state's most troublesome weed, causing significant crop losses wherever it occurs.

A MORE PRESSING problem, however, is shattercane's presence in corn and soybeans. It's a tough competitor from Nebraska to northern Texas, and along the southern part of the Corn Belt to as far north and east as Maryland and Pennsylvania.

The weed grows to a height of up to 12 feet, and is topped by an enormous panicle, containing up to 1,000 seeds. The height and top-heaviness of the stalks makes them prone to lodging, which can clog combines. But that is only a small part of the problem.

Shattercane seeds can survive buried in the soil for over a decade, and they can germinate at almost any time given proper conditions. The seeds also survive livestock digestive systems, so grazing cattle may spread them from one field to another. If a seed panicle is run through a combine, it will shatter, leaving seeds to be spread by the wind.

The key to shattercane control is deceptively simple: eliminate seeds in the soil while preventing any new seeds. A three-part attack, utilizing tillage practices, crop rotation and chemical control may be necessary.

REPEATED TILLAGE can reduce the number of viable seeds in the soil. Each tillage procedure kills shattercane plants which have already germinated, and stimulates seeds buried in the soil to germinate, where they can be killed by a later tillage pass.

Along with increased tillage, another method of shattercane control is later planting of crops. Late planting allows the shatter-cane to germinate, and the seedlings can be destroyed with another tillage trip before the crop is even planted. Later planting also allows for a delayed application of herbicide, which can then act against later-germinating seeds.

Crop rotation in shattercane infested fields can be a useful practice for reducing competition from the weed, too. Grain crops such as wheat or oats compete effectively with shattercane, which germinates later in the season. Since shattercane is of the same species as grain sorghum, control with many herbicides is extremely difficult.

However, differences in growth patterns between sorghum and the taller shattercane can be to the farmer's benefit, and he may use these differences, such as height, to fight the weed grain not affecting the shorter wheat or sorghum.

Shattercane control in row crops, such as corn and soybeans involves several tactics. Planting crops in wide rows to allow easier cultivation may be advisable. In some cases, hand-weeding may be necessary to further reduce the infestation.

FOR YEARS, herbicides used for shattercane control in corn have been members of the thiocarbamate family, with the addition of safeners to reduce the chance of herbicide injury to the crop. In recent years, however, control with some of these herbicides has become inconsistent in some areas.

Poor shattercane control actually led one manufacturer to discourage the use of its herbicide in a region roughly surrounding the Missouri River in Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri. Extensive university research suggests the problem may be due to a microbe buildup in some soils which can cause the herbicide to break down prematurely.

For corn growers who are worried about thiocarbamate breakdown in their soil, a number of other herbicide treatments provide suppression against the weed, and can keep all but the worst infestations under check for the rest of that growing season.

Shattercane suppression in soybeans is somewhat easier, so farmers may consider rotating problem fields to soybeans. A number of different herbicides provide suppression of shattercane in varying degrees. In addition, the height of the weed makes escapes easy to spot in soybean fields, and follow-up treatment can be made.

THE TENACITY of shattercane means that there is no single solution to the problem. Farmers who want to keep this weed from establishing a hold in their fields must utilize all the weapons at their disposal — proper use of herbicides, cultivation, planting techniques and crop rotation.

In addition, farmers who grow sorghum should make sure their seed is pure, and keep a sharp eye out for the beginnings of a shattercane infestation.

Remember, shattercane is a very prolific annual weed. The best method to control it is to prevent it.

Ag specialists assist farmers

The University of Nebraska extension specialists gathered around a conference table on Monday afternoons this summer will be trying to help Nebraska farmers in their battle with insects, disease, weeds and weather.

The agronomics, entomologists, plant pathologists and other specialists form the Ag Climate Situation Committee of the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service. The group will meet weekly during the growing season to review current climatic information and make recommendations for dealing with developing weather-related situations.

THE COMMITTEE began meeting in spring 1981 and last season issued advisories relative to the spring wheat freeze scare, the chinch bug threat and the pending drought, as well as week-to-week information on the progress of the season.

Ralph Neild, NU extension climatologist, originated the idea of the interdisciplinary committee which this year has 14 members. "We'd been concerned about the soil moisture situation for quite some time and we needed a way of making an assessment in advance of spring planting," he said.

In addition, as the season progressed, the various agricultural specialists at NU received a large number of calls from farmers, especially if conditions were dry. Agronomists would comment from their perspective and entomologists from theirs, Neild said, but none of the extension specialists had regular access to comprehensive weather data.

Now, however, the committee as a whole has access to a wide range of weather information. A network of volunteer cooperative weather observers in the state provides temperature and precipitation information on a weekly basis. Extension agents in county offices contact the observers for their assessment of crop conditions and enter that information on the AGNET computer system, along with the agent's own comments on the local situation.

DATA ALSO are available from first order airport weather stations, Neild said, but the most sophisticated information comes from six automated weather stations which record very detailed readings on a number of weather variables. Another eight automated stations are being added, hopefully near the beginning of the growing season.

In addition, a representative of the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service serves on the committee and shares the service's data, Neild said.

"All of this data gives us all an objective, common data base to look at," Neild commented. Because the data are available on a real-time basis, the committee can see developing weather situations, he added. As conditions develop, the committee can keep on top of situations, monitor changes, describe problems or concerns and issue pertinent advice as necessary, Neild said.

Early last spring, the committee monitored the May wheat freeze scare, Neild recalled, and advised farmers on how to determine whether to plow up and replant or to go with the surviving stand. As the season progressed, it kept farmers abreast of the moisture situation during the possible drought and kept track of developing insect and disease problems.

THE COMMITTEE meets on Monday afternoons and a report on the week's situation is mailed to the news media that same day. The information also goes on the AGNET computer network on Monday so local extension agents can have the information as quickly as possible, Neild said.

In addition, the committee's information and recommendations will be included in the Farm and Ranch Report television series Thursdays on the Nebraska ETV Network. That series begins May 13 and broadcasts at 12:30 p.m. with a repeat broadcast at 8 p.m. the same evening. Beginning June 10, the repeat broadcast airs at 9:30 p.m.

The next Ag Climate committee report is scheduled for March 29.

Study shows rural water systems in tough times

Like much of the economy today, rural water systems are also having difficult times, according to a recent study conducted at the University of Nebraska.

Dr. Paul Gessaman, professor of agricultural economics, and Teresa N. Janovsky, a research technologist, worked with data supplied by 26 rural water systems in Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, North Dakota and South Dakota. The 26 systems were selected as a sample of the 108 systems examined in the study.

THE REPORT entitled "Operational Characteristics of Rural Water Systems in Five North Central States," is based on research funded jointly by the Agricultural Experiment Stations of Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, North Dakota and South Dakota, the North Central Regional Center for Rural Development at Iowa State University, and the Economic Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"Management is critically important as rural water systems are often large, complex and expensive, and water users are typically unwilling to pay the resulting relatively high monthly water bills," Gessaman said. "When water users say no to rate increases, the system has little choice other than to scrimp on maintenance and repair," he defer-ent service payments, and to not fund depreciation," he said.

All of the water systems examined were financed under the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) Water and Waste Disposal System program and were constructed between 1970 and 1977.

Estimates indicated that 14 of 20 systems providing complete financial data had total deficits on debt service payments of $744,907, an average of $34,779 per system. Some are nearly 50 percent behind in their debt service, Gessaman said. The six systems with payments that were more than current were estimated to be ahead by about $64,932, and average of $10,882 per system.

Among the 20 systems, all seven with less than 300 regular water users were estimated to be behind on their debt service payments, Gessaman said.

THE RESEARCH revealed that debt service loads for some systems are heavy and vary from system to system. The average debt service per water user for servicing FmHA debt was estimated to be $167 per year. One system reported having a debt that would require an estimated debt service of $420 per water user per year.

In order to meet debt service payments, water rates would have to be increased substantially for some systems. However, if use of water decreased significantly due to a rate increase, a system's revenues could decline, leaving it in greater financial difficulty than before the rate increase. "For some systems there are no easy answers to revenue shortfalls," Gessaman says.

"We believe the water systems examined in this research are reasonably representative of systems in the five states," he adds.

Gessaman projects that some of the rural water systems in the Midwest "will experience severe financial pressure" in the future. "Proposed budget cuts and the recently increased interest rates for water system loans could result in greatly reduced rural water system construction in the next few years," Gessaman says.

The report is the first of three research reports focused on rural water systems constructed between 1970 and 1977 in the five North Central states. The other two reports are intended to help rural residents evaluate their water supply alternatives and to identify external effects of systems such as water system effects on land and use and local property taxes.

Make every pasture acre count.

Banvel® Herbicide makes every pasture acre count.

Musk thistle can rapidly overrun pasture grasses. When weeds move in, pasture carrying capacity drops . . . cattle compete for forage . . . daily weight gains drop . . . profits fall. Your lush pastures turn into poor pastures.

You can break the broadleaf weed takeover with Banvel® Herbicide. It effectively controls dozens of broadleaf weeds like musk thistle — and many that 2,4-D alone often misses. Banvel Herbicide circulates throughout the weed to kill the entire plant, above and below ground, from leaf tip to root tip.

If you're using 2,4-D now, put the extra punch of Banvel Herbicide in a tank mix. You'll add an impressive hit list to your 2,4-D program . . . including dogfennel and Canada thistle.

For added convenience and weed control, Banvel Herbicide can be applied with fluid fertilizers as part of a Weed and Feed program.

Governor's veto of pay raise bill causes flap

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Gov. Charles Thone's veto of a bill that provided pay raises for judges and state constitutional officers didn't settle well with some of the affected employees.

Nebraska Supreme Court Chief Justice Norman Krivosha for one was vocal in expressing his dissatisfaction. And Krivosha's sharp reaction prompted an even sharper response from Thone.

KRIVOSHA CONTENDED the veto was politically inspired. The 5 percent pay raise also would have gone to the governor and others in the Statehouse team, including the lieutenant governor and other constitutional officers.

But Krivosha was most upset about the veto applying to increases in salaries for judges. Thone, Krivosha said, had told the chief justice he would approve judge's pay raises.

Krivosha claimed Thone went against his word in vetoing the pay raises.

A response to Krivosha's complaint was sought, and Thone candidly said he was "a little goddamned-upset" by the chief justice's comments.

Thone is not noted for his public speaking ability, but he always is guarded in his use of words. The governor is not known to swear in public, and his comment about Krivosha came as a little bit of a surprise.

AT THONE'S next weekly news conference, he apologized for losing his cool and using the word "goddamn."

"It wasn't wise. It was a poor choice of the word," Thone said.

But Thone also took the opportunity to say he doesn't think the chief justice should be involved in "the political arena." The governor flatly said Krivosha should "stay out" of politics.

Thone's point is a good one; it makes sense that political involvement by judges should be kept to a minimum. But if the governor goes against his word, the only way the public can know is if someone says so — even if it's the chief justice of the Nebraska Supreme Court.

The flap between the heads of the judicial and executive branches of government seems to have died down now, but tension between the two probably will exist for some time. The barbs that were thrown were sharp, and the pain they inflicted probably won't be forgotten overnight.

THE STATE JUSTICE Department

recently revealed that its investigation of bid rigging on state highway projects indicates the illegal practice has occurred on a number of local projects.

Attorney General Paul Douglas said the investigation indicates bid rigging has occurred on at least six city projects, several airport jobs, two county jobs and, of course, a number of state highway construction projects.

Douglas said the state investigation was continuing, and information will be turned over to county authorities at the appropriate time.

In the meantime, Douglas' staff is finalizing the "ground rules" for negotiating with companies accused of bid rigging.

And as far as federal bid-rigging cases are concerned, lawyers were looking into the possibility of public service sentencing.

FINES POSSIBLY amounting to millions of dollars can be levied against firms, and their owners or chief officers can be fined and jailed. If a public service sentence were imposed, a firm might be "sentenced" to some construction project, which would be done as a "public service" — without pay.

It was unclear whether the courts would go along with public service sentencing, but the option was being considered.

And although neither state nor federal investigations are done, Douglas says the state's May bid letting will proceed as scheduled on the 27th.

THE NEBRASKA Association of Public Employees has endorsed three gubernatorial candidates — two Democrats and a Republican.

But the GOP incumbent, Gov. Charles

Thone, was not among the candidates winning NAPE's backing. NAPE is still upset about Thone's decision to defer state employee salary increases, a move that effectively gives them a 2.5 percent raise.

NAPE did endorse Democrats Bob Kerrey of Lincoln and George "Bill" Burrows of Adams, and Republican Stan DeBoer of Bertrand.

Gov. Thone has repeatedly insulted the integrity and effectiveness of our membership, while at the same time using his office to politically bully state employees," said Bill Artmann, NAPE executive director.

But his position on the other three candidates was quite different.

"This is a wonderful situation when you find three candidates for the governorship with the experience and ability to effectively lead our state government," he said.

Pat on the back

Small businesses, including those in our community, don't get enough credit for their role in keeping America at work. Small Business Week, May 9-15, seems the right time to give them a deserved pat on the back.

Big business gets plenty of media attention about layoffs and hiring plans. Yet big business creates no more than a fourth of our new jobs, nationally.

Where do the jobs come from? The dry cleaners, the data processing service, the auto repair shop, the high-tech whiz kids, and more than 11 million other small businesses.

Small firms generate two out of every three new jobs in this country.

To borrow a phrase from the Reagan Administration, small business also acts as a kind of safety net for a lot of people who lose their jobs.

During the past eighteen months, new small businesses have opened their doors at a higher than normal rate, despite all the obstacles. Economists explain that a lot of unemployed people go into business for themselves in a recession, so many that they more than offset the number of small firms going bankrupt!

The small business paycheck provides the livelihood for more than 100 million Americans. For making American work, we think small businesses deserve our gratitude.

Car fix-up-time

Spring is a great time for an all-around cleanup, fix-up of the family car.

Dirt and gravel that have accumulated through the winter can be removed from the car's interior with a household vacuum cleaner. A mild dishwashing detergent and scrub brush can be used to clean rubber or vinyl floor mats.

WINDOW CLEANERS containing ammonia will remove hazy film that has accumulated on interior window surfaces. Nicks and scratches on the car's exterior should be touched up because rust forms quickly on bare metal. A tar remover can be used on road tar or stubborn dirt before waxing the vehicle.

"A vehicle that has survived winter driving conditions also should have a mechanical checkup to make driving a breeze this summer," said Barc Wade, AAA Director of Public Affairs.

"Taking the time to prepare the car for the warm days ahead will result in better gas mileage and possibly prevent expensive repairs later," Wade said.

THE NEBRASKA AAA offers the following guidelines for seasonal maintenance that applies to most passenger cars:

- Points, plugs, fuel and air filters, condenser, ignition wires and engine timing should be checked and cleaned, replaced or adjusted as part of a routine tuneup.
- Engine oil should be replaced with proper grade summer weight or a multi-grade oil. The old sludge-filled oil filter also should be replaced.
- Check coolant-level in the radiator and its strength with a hydrometer (an inexpensive tool available at most auto or discount stores). The coolant level can be checked visibly on autos with overflow tanks. Check for cracks or holes in the cooling system hoses.
- Battery should be checked for fluids and charge. Clean any corrosion on battery cables with baking soda and water.
- Tires should be checked for proper pressure and tread wear. If the car is pulling to one side, have the wheel alignment and shock absorbers checked.
- Lubricate the car to help guard against corrosion of vital parts from moisture collected during the winter and spring.
- Check these engine fluid levels: automatic transmission, master brake cylinder, power steering and windshield washer reservoir.
- Check the tension of all drive belts and look for fraying. Press your thumb on the middle of the belt, if it gives more than a half-inch, have it tightened or replaced.
- Inspect windshield wiper blades and replace if necessary.
- Turn on all headlights and turn signals to insure proper working order.

Cutback achieved

Stern measures result in less state spending

State spending for the fiscal year beginning July 1 will be less than was appropriated last May for the current year.

This is the first time in 27 years that state spending appropriations have been less than the year before.

With the present national economy and with crucially low farm commodity prices, I felt that it was imperative to reduce spending instead of following the always upward spiral.

It wasn't easy this April to achieve appropriations $2.4 million less than those of last May. To do so required stern measures appropriate to the times.

One of the ways the cutback was achieved was by vetoing the legislature's 5 percent pay raise for state employees (October 1, 1981). My veto, which stood up against a legislature attempt to override it, provided for a 3 percent pay increase effective January 1, 1982, in view of conditions in the private sector and the fact that the increase in wages and fringe benefits of July 1, 1981 was the most generous in state history. It seemed most prudent for another three months delay in state wage increases.

governor charley thone

I also vetoed a pay raise for myself, for other constitutional officers and for state judges. My veto will mean that the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer and attorney general will be prohibited by the state constitution from having a pay raise before 1982. High salaries have never been the prime motivation among the best people who seek public office.

In good times and bad I intend to be very candid with citizens' needs. During this recession I feel that extreme restraint on state spending is required.

Artificial groundwater recharge to replenish declining aquifers

Last week I introduced a bill that would provide the Bureau of Reclamation with an entirely new approach for water resource management and development in the High Plains states. My bill gives the Bureau authority to use artificial groundwater recharge to replenish groundwater aquifers in its surface water projects.

Of course, these aquifers are the prime source of agricultural, industrial and domestic water in the High Plains region. The great demand on this source of water is gradually depleting the supply.

My bill would establish a series of groundwater recharge demonstration projects in Nebraska and seven other High Plains states, and would give the Bureau of Reclamation authority to use groundwater recharge in future projects if the congressman doug bereuter demonstration projects are successful. The Bureau does not have that authority right now.

I believe that these projects will show a feasible and cost-effective method for combating declining water tables.

AT THE APRIL 27 Nebraska Breakfast in the Senate Family Dining Room, I met with Nebraskans from the National Grain and Feed Association, the American Independent Automobile Dealers Association, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and Paralyzed Veterans of America. I also visited with a group of students from many parts of the world, all participating in the International Christian Youth Exchange.

DURING MY RECENT weekend visit to the First District I toured the Sac Fox City, site of a fire earlier; talked with Nemaha Natural Resources District officials about the South Branch project; and participated in Arbor Day festivities.

Need for agricultural research continues

By M.M. Van Kirk
Nebraska Farm Bureau

World food needs and population growth pose a continued need for agricultural research now and in the future, according to the head of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Research Service, even though at the moment this nation's farmers are struggling with low commodity prices resulting mostly from a big buildup of unsold grain.

There is no doubt but that agricultural research has helped American agriculture hold its position as the number one industry and as the world's leading international food bank, ready to fill the nation's food orders in the underdeveloped nations, there is no doubt but that there will be a continuing world market for those who have the money to buy or the goods to trade.

CONSIDER THAT if this nation's crop yields had stood still from 1963 until now, there would probably be hungry people in the United States because food supplies would be marginal and much higher priced and there certainly would not be great supplies available to export to a food-short world.

In 1963 the nation's corn crop totaled out at around 4 billion bushels. It moved up to over five billion bushels in 1971, and grew to more than six billion bushels in 1976. Next plateau was over seven billion in 1977 and in 1981 exceeded the eight billion bushel level for the first time.

The wheat crop was a little more than one billion bushels per year in 1963 and has been above two billion bushels per year since 1975. Such gains have created troublesome surpluses reminiscent of the 1950s and 1960s. But in the game of "What If?" think how much worse the ravages of inflation would have been put for plentiful food supplies and the many billions of dollars from foreign trade purchases of our agricultural supplies.

USDA RESEARCHERS point out that current agricultural research is placing new priorities on the use and improvement of soil, water and air resources, plant and animal reproduction efficiency and basic research. Agricultural research is now working on new frontiers such as genetic engineering, embryo transfer in animals, plant germplasm developments, integrated pest management and natural growth regulators for plants as well as photosynthesis and nitrogen fixation advances.

The first genetically engineered vaccine has been developed against foot-and-mouth disease in animals. It will help to ensure that this nation's livestock will not be devastated by accidental introduction of that disease, something that has worried the industry much of this century. It can be a great help to developing countries where livestock production has been decimated by the disease for decades.

Microwave detectors to determine soil moisture conditions are helping farmers to make maximum use of their irrigation water, saving on water resources, fuel supplies and expenses, and actually improving crop yields.

HARDY NEW crop varieties are being developed for better yields and providing drought, disease and pest resistant factors undreamed of even a few years ago.

A natural plant growth accelerator has been developed to help stimulate the early growth of seedlings and to spur crop yields. A technique has been developed for the cloning of superior breeds of livestock. A breakthrough has been achieved in soybean plant development which in test plot conditions indicates that in perhaps 10 years, soybean yields can be boosted to 100 bushels per acre average as compared to the present 30.

Agricultural research remains one of the best hopes for all mankind as well as for the nation's and the world's farmers and ranchers.

To the editor:

I am writing still another reply to the controversial issue of R-rated movies.

As a high school senior I have obviously been exposed to many movies; both good and bad. I feel, however, that I have been raised to know the difference between the two.

I have seen a lot of R-rated movies and do not feel that I have, in any way, been corrupted by what I've seen. There are many forms of entertainment in Wayne. Skating and bowling are fine, but I also see no harm in an occasional movie.

As far as beer parties, as mentioned in a previous letter, I resent the fact that many people here in Wayne feel that students at Wayne High cannot have fun without booze. I, for one, know that this is not true and that there is not a beer party every night, or for that matter, every weekend.

But that is not the point. Not all movies show hard; not even all R-rated movies do. I agree with the second letter published in that I feel it is a parent's responsibility to know what their children see and do until they are old enough to decide for themselves.

I am glad 12 years old and feel that my parents have taught me what is good and what is bad. There are worse things than seeing an R-rated movie.

I also do not feel I have to defend my feelings toward religion just because I see these movies or attend an occasional party; I believe in God, read the bible and attend church and therefore believe that God will not damn those of us who go to R-rated movies.

In conclusion, people's opinions differ as to what should or should not be shown. I say leave it to parents to raise their children in the way they see fit so the children can discriminate between good and bad, right and wrong etc.

It is a much simpler and smarter solution than trying to change the movie-making enterprise.

To the editor:

I went for a walk this morning. The trees are beginning to bud, the grass is growing, the wild flowers are blossoming. All around is beauty and promise as God renews the life that lay dormant through a long, cold, trying winter. There was only one discordant note. The wind was blowing, whistling and howling everywhere in its path. Then I noticed that the new leaves were still opening.

The blossoms were still beautiful, even though being assailed by unfriendly forces.

Often we find ourselves being overburdened and buffeted by the winds of job uncertainties, a poor economy, a deteriorating moral climate. What can we do? Go for it, walk, sleep ourselves in nature's healing beauty, smile at a stranger, focus on the positive. The winds make the trees grow stronger — maybe they will strengthen us also. But above all else, remember to PRAISE GOD!

More Valley Corner Systems every year, because it's the least costly investment per acre.

It's going to be harder to make farming pay off in the years to come. Harder for many reasons. So if anything makes sense, it's to maximize the potential of the land you now farm. Irrigating with a center pivot is one way. Irrigating with a Corner System is even better.

A Corner System can irrigate 19 to 45 more acres than a regular pivot, producing extra income on acres already being farmed. That's why nearly one out of every six pivots sold today is a Corner System.

And when it comes to Corner Systems, nobody knows more than Valmont. They're proven reliable with nearly 3,000 systems in operation. That's at least 20 times more than any other brand.

Before you buy any center pivot, see us. We'll tell you how a Valley Corner System can add to your bottom line profits while being the least costly investment per acre.

Invent the University, to be the best quality University that we can have for what we can afford. There are limitations on what you can spend, what the State can generate, what the taxpayers can generate. I think it's important for the future of the State and the future of our children that we have a quality institution. In the end, all we have to give our children is a quality education.

Northeast Nebraska Needs Representation On University Board of Regents

Area not represented since 1970

There hasn't been a Northeast Nebraskan on the University of Nebraska Board of Regents for 12 years. In the May 11 Primary there is no incumbent and there are four candidates for Regent, 3rd District.

Why area representation is important

If an area isn't represented, it's apt to be neglected. For example: The Northeast Nebraska Experiment Station at Concord has 1 1/2 professional people, compared with 15-to-18 at the other stations.

Class. Capable. Conviction. Country. Caring. Conservative.

Some politicians are just "not so bad." But is that really good enough? Ask anyone who's ever met him and they'll tell you: JIM KECK is a quality individual.

JIM KECK isn't one of those politicians who makes decisions only after he sees which way the wind is blowing. He believes in his positions... solid Republican positions on limited government, free enterprise and a reliance on individual liberty.

His beliefs are rooted in a real concern about Nebraska people and their problems. He'll stand up for agriculture, fiscal responsibility, a foreign policy that puts America's interest first, and Republican leadership in the Senate.

Above all JIM KECK will stand up for America. He's devoted his whole career to the national interest. Unlike a lot of politicians, he's not in it just for what he can get for himself.

This year, he's running for U.S. Senator.

Omaha Citizen of the Year in 1980. This man is more than just a retired General. He's a successful businessman, a devoted family man, and a tireless community volunteer worker.

After being stationed all over the world during his military service to America, Bobbie and JIM KECK chose Nebraska as their home. In their more than ten years here, they've been involved in more community service work than some politicians have in a lifetime. That's why JIM KECK was made Keck. Keck. Keck.

This year, support a Senator you can agree with... and respect.

THAT'S JIM KECK.

Bereuter introduces groundwater recharge bill in High Plains states

Congressman Doug Bereuter has introduced legislation that would provide the Bureau of Reclamation with an entirely new approach for water resource management and development in the High Plains states. The bill promotes artificial groundwater recharge, a concept of using available sources of surface water to replenish underground aquifers.

Bereuter's bill would establish a series of groundwater recharge demonstration projects in the High Plains states and would grant specific authority to the Bureau of Reclamation to make use of groundwater recharge in the design and construction of future projects if the demonstration projects are successful. The Bureau currently does not have that authority.

THE CONCEPT has already gained the support of water experts. Bureau of Reclamation Commissioner Robert Broadbent commented: "Congressman Bereuter and I have visited about this new and innovative approach to water development. I am excited about the prospects which this concept can offer and look forward to working with the Congressman and his colleagues on the legislation."

According to Pat O'Meara, executive director of the National Water Resources Association in Washington, "This legislation is a logical follow-on to the recently completed Ogallala Aquifer Study. I am delighted that the Congress will be giving this issue the attention which it warrants."

In explaining the need for his bill, Bereuter said, "The prime source of water for agricultural, domestic, municipal and industrial use in the High Plains region is the underground system of aquifers which underlies the region. Increasing demand upon those reserves is gradually depleting our once plentiful supply of fresh, pure groundwater in many parts of the region."

"Hydrologists and geologists have long suggested that we explore the possibility of using surface water to replenish the diminishing groundwater reserves in these areas, but we have lacked the technical knowledge, experience and authorization on groundwater recharge. I believe the research and demonstration projects will show a feasible and cost effective alternative to declining water tables," Bereuter said.

THE LEGISLATION authorizes the construction of a minimum of 12 demonstration projects to explore the feasibility of different methods of groundwater recharge with different types of soils and water, according to Bereuter. Recharge can be accomplished through a series of seepage pits, injection wells or a variety of other methods. In addition, the bill would require the Bureau to assist each state in developing its own method for the assignment of costs and benefits of groundwater recharge to project beneficiaries.

"The groundwater recharge approach is relatively new," said Bereuter, "and there are a number of questions which must be answered before any large recharge projects can be authorized. This bill will help us to obtain those answers."

"The program would target those areas of the worst declines and the best possibility for successful recharge. Projects could be located in the High Plains states of Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas and Wyoming," according to Bereuter. "An 18-month planning phase by the Bureau of Reclamation would be followed by a five-year Federal State construction and demonstration phase."

If the concept proves feasible, and I believe it will, the Bureau would then be authorized to design and construct full-scale underground storage projects to increase the supply of ground water for future years," Bereuter said. "In addition, the Bureau could where feasible, add recharge features to its existing projects."

Joining Bereuter in introducing the bill were all of those members of the Interior Committee's Subcommittee on Water and Power Resources who represent affected High Plains states. Hearings are expected by the end of May.
