Dr. Ed Elliott, far right, was named president of Wayne State College by the board of trustees of the Nebraska State College board on Saturday. Dr. Elliott has been with WSC for 11 years, most recently as vice president of

WSC president is appointed

Dr. Ed Elliott, an 11 year member of the Wayne State College administration and current vice president of the college, was appointed president of Wayne State by the board of trustees of the Nebraska State Colleges on Saturday morning.

Announcement of the appointment was made by J. Alan Cramer, Wayne, president of the board of trustees. The appointment is effective immediately.

Dr. Elliott replaces Dr. Lyle Seymour who recently resigned from the position and is now executive director of the Wayne State College Foundation.

"DR. ELLIOTT'S experience and overwhelming acceptance and endorsement by the faculty, administration and staff at WSC as well as the greater Wayne and Northeast Nebraska communities were major factors in his selection," Cramer said.

Dr. Elliott, who was appointed vice president of the college in 1980, has formerly served WSC as vice president for academic affairs from 1975 to 1980; dean of special studies from 1973 to 1975 and director of graduate studies from 1971 to 1973.

For about seven years, before coming to WSC, Dr. Elliott was department chairman of health, physical education and recreation at Missouri Valley college in Marshall, Missouri. He has been an instructor of physical education at City University of New York, Queens College division, and for several years was a high school general science and social science instructor.

Dr. Elliott completed his doctorate in education in 1969 at the University of Northern Colorado, Greeley, Colo; his masters degree from Columbia University, New York, New York in 1964 and his associate bachelor's degree from William Jewell College, Liberty, Missouri in 1960.

Elliott, 43, and his wife Sandra have three sons, Glenn, Gregg and Grant.

ON THURSDAY, July 8, the Wayne State presidential selection committee unanimously voted to recommend to the board of trustees that Dr. Elliott be appointed to the position. Serving on the selection board were board of trustee members Cramer, Keith Kemper, Alliance, Georg Rebersdorf, Omaha and Carroll Thompson, Lincoln.

Over 90 applications were received for the position. The applications were reviewed by the trustee's presidential selection committee and narrowed to 37.

The remaining applications were then reviewed by a local review and comment committee composed of members from the WSC faculty, administration and student body. Wayne area citizens including alumni, chamber of commerce members and officers, members of the second guessers club and Dr. Bob Cox president of Northeast Technical Community College, Norfolk.

Following a rating of the 37 candidates by the local committee, the trustee's selection committee interviewed the top four applicants.

AFTER THE INTERVIEWS were complete, members of the selection committee conducted interviews and visitations with the applicant's colleagues, local businessmen and citizens from the applicant's area.

Final approval of Dr. Elliott's appointment was agreed upon by the board of trustees during a special conference call Saturday morning.

It is expected Dr. Elliott will receive $47,500 annual salary, $4,000 annually for housing expenses, along with health insurance and two weeks vacation per year.

Following his acceptance of the appointment, Dr. Elliott outlined some of his own personal goals, explained his philosophy of higher education and the hopes he has for WSC.

"AT THE OUTSET," Dr. Elliott said, "I'm looking forward to the job. It's an awesome responsibility but, in accepting the appointment, I'm looking forward to the personal challenges. It's not going to be all peaches and cream but with our excellent faculty, staff and community support we can continue to move forward as an educational institution."

In outlining his goals for the new administration, Dr. Elliott cautioned "remember, these are strictly my own goals. I have not yet met with the department chairmen nor faculty."

Number one for Dr. Elliott will be to continue to improve the quality of the educational programs at WSC. "We must continue to direct our attention to achieving and maintaining a high level of quality within our programs. This will not be too difficult in some areas," he said.

"I'm really pleased with our faculty and staff. We're lucky in having a tremendous foundation laid in this area by my predecessors and I hope to continue to build on this past work," Dr. Elliott said.

ANOTHER GOAL OF Dr. Elliott deals with inflation and the current economic situation we face as a nation.

"We must buttress the institution against a decade of economic turbulence. I don't want the economic situation to become a turbulent time for WSC or a traumatic time for our faculty and staff," Dr. Elliott said.

"Unless the national economy improves within the year, we are all going to be faced with some very difficult decisions and lowered tax support."

"The chief operating officer of any institution must insure that the effects of the tax support decrease are minimized with regards to it's effects on the programs," Dr. Elliott explained.

"To do this will require the collective efforts of the faculty, staff, students and administration. It's a tough decision, to do more with less or to do less in a better way."

Another goal for Dr. Elliott will be to increase the visibility of WSC in the area.

"I WANT PEOPLE to know that Wayne State College is the academic and cultural institution primarily for Northeastern Nebraska and what we can offer for the entire state and Western Iowa," Dr. Elliott said.

In outlining his plan, Dr. Elliott said WSC will increase it's visibility through the area's community leaders, service organizations and news media.

Dr. Elliott indicated the need of stressing WSC as a regional educational institution. To achieve this he intends to increase the communication between WSC and the communities it serves.

A firm believer in strategic planning, Dr. Elliott said this will be the key to achieving some of his goals and keeping WSC moving in the right direction.

"WITH EFFECTIVE planning and goal formation, from the basic level up to the top, we will be able to manage any reallocation of resources without disrupting the lives of our people or discontinuing programs," he said.

"In simple terms this means bringing a greater flexibility to the budget process." Dr. Elliott however is under no illusion of achieving immediate results. "All things take time and the hopes I've expressed will take years to complete. With planning however these goals will be achieved or will change as it becomes necessary."

In expressing his own philosophy of higher education, Dr. Elliott said he is a believer in a strong broad background.

"I think an institution should focus fundamentally on a core of liberal educational experiences for students.

"GENERAL EDUCATION is the core, the hub of the educational wheel but it is not gained at the expense of ignoring professional and career development. That's the capstone to a liberating educational experience," he explained.

"Back in the 1960's, the trend was toward a very diverse education with students sampling various educational experiences that may or may not have integrated well," he said. "That's the key to a broad background. It must be integrated in some fashion toward the final goal."

"WSC in the past, has been known for our excellent teacher education programs and that's still true today," Dr. Elliott said, "but we also offer high quality, excellent programs in other areas such as math, science, business education, and many other areas. These are the spokes on the educational wheel for our students."

With budget cuts forcing program changes and in some cases, the complete deletion of programs in college across the country, athletics has come under fire on many campuses with opponents saying they do not contribute to the educational process.

IN RESPONSE, Dr. Elliott said, "athletics at WSC are a very important part of the educational process, of socialization and learning to deal with people. They also represent one very strong area that brings diverse groups together on campus and in the community."

"People often forget they also are the lab for our physical education and recreation majors," Dr. Elliott said.

"We have a balanced athletic program and I think we are known for having competitive teams," he said.

"All in all, we have a good staff and I hope we can focus a little more attention in an effort to upgrade athletics to the extent that we can at WSC," he added.

WITH AN OPEN admissions policy, Dr. Elliott believes WSC has an obligation to students graduating from accredited high schools to help them hone their skills toward receiving their bachelors degrees.

"Not everyone is baccalaureate material," Dr. Elliott said, "but WSC must give the student a fair chance to complete a degree program without diluting our educational standards."

All in all, Dr. Elliott views the appointment as an exciting personal and professional challenge. "I'm extremely happy and look forward to working with our faculty, staff and community members toward the betterment of WSC," he said.

Space colonies are predicted

by Michelle Kubik

"The space explorers of today will become the space utilizers of tomorrow," according to NASA representative Robert Neal. At the end of the decade earth people should see 10 or 20 of our kind living in space and at the turn of the century we should expect hundreds of people to be living up there. "Of course, they'll be allowed to come back to earth for visits every two weeks or so," Neal added.

Johnson Space Center in Houston has developed a program for establishment of a permanent station in orbit. "It will be built," Neal explained, "by piecing together modules as they are sent into space." This program, entitled SOC by the Johnson Center, will enable man to totally utilize space in the future.

The space shuttle, NASA's biggest project right now, is a very popular issue. The shuttle, now in its fourth test flight, is involved with performing experiments on board. The experiments are designed by private industry, foreign nations and students from schools around the nation. "Students from the University of Utah have designed an experiment which is going to be tried on STS-4 and a Minnesota student had his experiment done earlier on STS-3," Neal said.

"NOT JUST ANYONE gets their experiments performed," he said, "one launch of the shuttle costs 30 million dollars and time for experimentation is precious." Astronauts also have to perform tests outside the shuttle to find the effect of contaminants on the space environment.

"In November," Neal said, "the first operational shuttle will go up into space. STS-5 will house a 4-person crew, rather than the usual two and will be involved with extensive utilization of space."

"Plans are also being made," Neal added, "for a woman to be stationed on the space shuttle. In January, a woman astronaut will accompany STS-7 into orbit." According to Neal, NASA's main aim for the future is to finally utilize space based on findings from previous explorations.

ROBERT NEAL, a NASA representative for three years, was in Wayne on Thursday afternoon to present a briefing for area teachers on the lunar disc which they can obtain for learning purposes. The lunar disc, available out of Johnson Space Center in Houston, contains three moon rock and three soil samples brought back by Apollo flights 11-17. Teachers also receive slides, films and other learning materials with the disc.

"The purpose of supplying samples as educational materials," Neal said, "is to inform and to stimulate young people's interest in science and math. Our society will need highly technical and well-trained people for the future," he said "but we must get them started early in this field."

"Teachers will be a big influence," Neal said, "and they must be properly briefed on the uses and security of the lunar disc." A group of about 35 teachers and other interested individuals attended the Thursday afternoon session on security.

"SECURITY PROCEDURES FOR the disc may seem outrageous," Neal remarked, "but we can't take any chances. These people are under strict authorization and must have the disc in their possession at all times."

The process for obtaining a disc starts at the security briefing, where teachers are given a signed certificate that proves they have been instructed properly for security measures. They are also registered with the main office of NASA in Houston.

To request its use, a letter is written to NASA using the affiliation of the school. Teachers include the dates they wish to have the disc and the facts concerning where, when and by whom they were briefed. Most importantly, they must include their entire plan for security of the lunar disc. "A complete plan must be sent to NASA," Neal emphasized, "including the safe it's going to be kept in, teachers who will handle it and even what officials have access to the safe's combination."

WHEN THE DISC arrives at the post office, an agreement must be signed and sent back to NASA immediately. After that, the disc is completely under the school's jurisdiction. "Some towns like to make a big production out of the disc's arrival," Neal said, "there was a school in Pennsylvania which had a parade from the post office to their school in honor of the lunar samples."

If the disc is transferred from one teacher to another, a form must be filled out and signed indicating the exchange. "The disc must be locked in the safe every night," Neal explained, "and it must be the only article kept there. We don't want any excessive funds attracting criminal attention."

"It is also permissible to display the disc at a club meeting, or some type of exhibition," Neal said, "but it must be under tight guard at all times."

"NASA is entitled to inspect the security facilities at any time," Neal said, "and they can judge whether the lunar disc is being used correctly or not." A form must be filled out and returned with the disc, commenting on how it was used and the benefit received.

"IF THE DISC is lost, stolen or damaged," he emphasized, "the FBI is notified immediately and they start an investigation. This is a priceless possession," he added, "and it's impossible to replace something that has no monetary value."

Neal finished the session by allowing the group to view the six-sample disc through a microscope and supplied them with reading material. The program will continue through July 21 and there are tentative plans for a three-day trip to the Smithsonian Institution after completion of the course. Nothing definite has been set.

Up in smoke

A MID-MORNING fire at the Ray Angler farm resulted in the loss of a barn, several stored items and about 25 chickens on Wednesday. Four trucks responded to the blaze from the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department at 9:09 a.m. Firefighters battled the blaze for about two hours, trying to contain the fire to the immediate area. A power line above the barn had to be disconnected by REA crews and smoldering trees around the area were kept wet by firefighters to prevent any spreading of the fire. The cause of the fire was not determined. A total damage estimate has not yet been made.

Good choice

We applaud the actions of the trustees of the Nebraska State College board for the quick decisive action taken to fill the void left following the resignation of Lyle Seymour as president of Wayne State College.

For a position of this type, competition runs high with applicants' credentials, experience and personality the telling factors. With that in mind, we thank each trustee for allowing Wayne area residents to have input into the selection process. We also thank those local residents for giving their time to the local committee.

Although the choice may have been difficult to make, we feel no one better could have been chosen to fill the position than Dr. Ed Elliott. His experience at WSC, in the field of education and in administrative positions makes him the perfect choice to take over the reins of power.

We thank Lyle Seymour for his years of service as president; congratulate Dr. Elliott on his appointment and thank the trustees and area residents for their selection.

Agreement needed

"Between 1973-1975, we heard the outcry of many urban Congressmen and consumer groups demanding that there be regulation of Soviet access to the U.S. grain market," reports Erv Friehe of McCook, NE, State Affairs Chairman of the Nebraska Wheat Growers Association. "While wheat growers don't favor limited access to their production especially in this new 'free market' era, they are also realistic," says Friehe. "They know that political animals will opt for short term political gain over long term economic good judgment."

Such seems to be the case in Washington today. The Reagan Administration appears to be getting in position to simply engage in economic dislocation and discomfort for the Soviet Union. It's high time that the same administration consider the economic dislocation and discomfort of U.S./Nebraska farmers (wheat growers, specifically).

"Relating this to the U.S./USSR LTA (Long term grain agreement), the real world of the grain trade is quite clear. . . without an LTA the international grain trade, U.S. grain suppliers and the USSR will be highly intimidated and uncertain as to supply assurance, accessibility to U.S. grain and delivery logistics," adds Friehe.

"What all this amounts to, either by chance or choice, is a trade restriction or more bluntly, a defacto grain embargo. It is clearly amazing that Washington continues to ignore economic reality. A new LTA with the USSR is simply an insurance policy to (in this case wheat and corn) U.S. farmers to market and export a large amount of U.S. products. The question now is whether or not Washington will learn from past mistakes. They are experiencing the economic devastation to the U.S. from grain embargoes but are they willing to repeat those mistakes for short-term political and foreign policy gain or the expense of farmers, and in fact, the total economy (jobs, productivity, etc.)?"

"Wheat growers could stand by and watch this potentially disastrous situation unfold but we've learned that lesson many times over. It's better to expose trade factors, whether negative or positive, as they develop rather than trying to react later," said Friehe.

I was happy to see this week that Governor Jerry (junior space cadet) Brown of California, signed into legislation a bill allowing Chinese restaurants in California to serve Peking duck.

The duck bill, as it's been called, will allow chefs to finish the process of cooking Peking duck in the traditional manner by hanging the cooked duck in the open air for several hours for a crisp skin and to seal in the juices.

Health officials in the state had been harassing oriental restaurants since January, telling them that according to state regulations, food must be kept either below 45 degrees or about 140 degrees in order to minimize bacterial growth.

The chefs say they've been making Peking duck for centuries and it hasn't poisoned anyone yet. Spices used in the preparation supposedly control the bacterial growth.

At any rate, the restaurants got together, started badgering the legislature for action and the duck bill was approved.

As Governor Brown said at the signing, the duck bill "proves once again that state government can respond if the problem is lasty enough."

The more I read and listen to actions taken by state governments, the more I wonder how we ever manage to get along with them.

Here in Nebraska I think people have the right idea using the Unicameral. It sure is a lot easier to keep track of what's going on. Being from Iowa it was always a little confusing...the house and senate seemed to be in a contest as to which could sponsor the dumbest and least needed legislation.

One example, there was a debate that lasted several days a few years back. It was over whether or not sheets had to be ironed before use at motels in the state...you might say it was a rather pressing issue.

If you want to be a legislative observer, you must come at it with the idea in mind that it is not that much different from watching a circus or a comedy show.

It's really entertainment loaded with thrills, drama and don't forget the clowns.

lots of clown- it's politics, that's about all you can say.

There is a very wicked nasty rumor floating around in some circles which is being spread by vicious people. Let me clear it up once and for all...I was not chewing gum and running at the same time when I met recently with a very unfortunate personal accident. And even though I was in extreme pain I remained at the scene to aid in rallying the troops onward through two more games...now that's dedication to the team. Take that you rumor mongers—Df.

Highway progress aids state economy

Genuine progress in improving Nebraska's highways is now being made at a time when other states' roads are in near catastrophic condition because those states don't have funds to keep their highways in shape.

By June of this year Nebraska had not only put up for bids all but six highway projects scheduled in the one-year 1981-1982 construction program, but also 14 of the 18 projects in the standby category for that year and ten projects from the 1982-1983 construction program.

"In contrast, in my first year as governor, there were 20 projects which were carried over from the previous year's construction program of my predecessor.

Last year we had only three projects carried over from the previous year. The larger carryover this year is due to the legal entanglements involved in the bid-rigging investigation. Because of this matter, two lettings had to be canceled and one delayed. This meant that several complex projects were taken out of the bidding because they couldn't be completed yet this construction year.

Rigging of bids by highway contractors was uncovered by federal grand juries and appears to be widespread across the nation. Many other states are taking no action but are leaving the problems solely to the federal government.

Not so in Nebraska. Rest assured that all those who are found guilty of violating Nebraska statutes will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Every effort will be made to have those convicted make restitution to the state. Integrity of public funds must be our first and foremost concern.

Nebraska has replaced uncertainty over how much state money will be available for highway construction with certainty through stabilized funding with the legislature appropriating a fixed amount for highways each year.

A good highway system is one of the most important factors in creating agricultural, commercial and industrial prosperity. We're putting more miles under construction this year than we thought possible, and that's good news for Nebraskans.

ASK A LAWYER
A PUBLIC SERVICE OF THE NEBRASKA STATE BAR ASSOCIATION

Q. We bought a house six months ago and had it inspected for termites prior to closing the sale. We were told there were no termites. Now we have them. Is there any length of time that an inspection like this is guaranteed? What recourse do we have?

A. It is possible that you have grounds for a legal action against the termite inspection company and/or the former home owners, depending on a number of factors.

First, did you have a contract of any kind (written or oral) with the termite inspection company either expressly guaranteeing their inspection for a certain period of time, or implying that the work was guaranteed? If not, or if that period of time has elapsed, is it possible that the termite damage was there at the time of the inspection and the company was negligent in not discovering it? You would probably need a "second opinion" from another inspection company to answer this question.

You know of no standard length of time for which an inspection of this type is "guaranteed" it is, of course, possible that the termites were not present at the time the inspection was done. If this is the case, and if you had no guarantees against termite damage from the inspection firm, you probably have no grounds for an action against them.

If you are looking to the previous home owners for some relief, your likelihood of success will depend on whether or not they knew about the damage and failed to mention it to you, or whether they made any false representations to you concerning the absence of termites. Talk to the lawyer who assisted you with your home purchase to determine what, if any, recourse you have.

Q. We are an older couple with a home and not much else in the way of assets. We still have a small mortgage on the house. If some kind of medical catastrophe should hit us, or some other financial disaster, could our home be taken away from us?

A. When a person fails to pay a creditor, for whatever reason, that creditor must file a lawsuit to obtain a judgment against the debtor. If the debtor does not pay the judgment as ordered by the court, the creditor may require the sheriff to "attach" or gather certain items of property owned by the debtor, and to hold these items for sale.

The law allows the debtor to "exempt" certain assets from this sale, so that the debtor will retain some assets in all cases. If for some reason your home had to be sold by the sheriff to pay a judgment, the proceeds of the sale would be distributed in the following order: (1) The mortgage holder would be paid in full. (2) You would receive up to $6,500 in cash as your homestead exemption. (3) The judgment would be paid. (4) Any remaining money would be given to you, assuming there are no other judgments, taxes or assessments which are unpaid. Such a foreclosure sale would be unlikely in the event that the value of your home, or your equity in it, does not exceed the $6,500 which would be allowed you as a homestead exemption. However, a creditor could file a lien against your house, which would have to be cancelled by the payment of the debt before you could sell your house.

An additional avenue of relief in a situation like yours might also be provided by one of the various bankruptcy plans available under federal law.

The best way to avoid such a problem is to make sure that you have adequate insurance coverage in such areas as health, home-owner, automobile and other areas.

To the editor:

An article appeared in the Omaha World Herald recently concerning "back-masking" on albums and records. Back-masking is a process in which a record has a hidden message inscribed in it that can be heard only when the disc is played in reverse. These hidden messages can be picked up at a subliminal level in our minds when the record is played forward. The article cited examples of anti-shopping messages under background music, and messages enclosed into movie theatre breaks. There is evidence that proves that the human brain can decode messages that have been recorded backwards.

Many popular rocks contain back-masking, some with satanic messages, and some with impermanent messages. Led Zeppelin's song "Stairway to Heaven" contained the message, "live for satan" and "there's power in satan." Pink Floyd's album Wall contained the message "congratulations, you have just discovered the secret message."

Representative Bob Dorman, R-California has introduced a bill to Congress requiring that songs with hidden messages bear this warning: "Warning: This record contains backward masking that makes a verbal statement which is audible when this record is played backward and which may be perceptible at a subliminal level when this record is played forward."

Representative Dorman insists that the people have a right to know what they are hearing and that his efforts in pushing the bill through Congress are an attempt at truth in advertising.

I personally support Representative Dorman's bill. Everyone has the right to know what they are listening to and to choose what they want to listen to. Back-masking is deceitful because a person is picking up messages subconsciously. He cannot protect himself from the message because he is not aware of what he is listening to. I personally would not want my children to listen to a record that pushed satan, nor would I want my children to listen to music that subconsciously told them how to vote. We, in this country, have a right to know and to choose. I urge everyone to write their Congressman and tell him how you feel about Congressman Dorman's bill. In this way we can be assured of what we're listening to, and thus protect ourselves and our children.

If you wish to write Congressman Bereuter, his address is: The Honorable Congressman Bereuter, House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

Wayne holds on to gain revenge

It looked like it could be an instant replay of an earlier season Wayne-Laurel battle but Wayne's Juniors held off a possible rally to turn the tide and drop Laurel 7-4 Thursday night.

Laurel's Kelly Robson, who hit a home run to beat Wayne in the first meeting between the teams, grounded out in a similar situation this time. The make-up game was played at the Wayne city ball park.

DOUG JAEGER drove in Heier with a single and Chad Dorcey drew a walk to bring home Lebsock. Wayne made its lead 5-0 when Allen scored again in the second ining. He singled, moved to second on an error, stole third and came home on a balk. Laurel got on the scoreboard in the third inning as Jamie Johnson and Mike Jonas scored on Dave Marquardt's two-out single. Johnson and Jonas both singled.

Runs by Allen and Heier in the fourth inning gave the hosts a 7-2 advantage. Laurel committed three errors that inning and Jaeger drew a bases-loaded walk.

The five-run deficit was cut in half as Jim Casey and Brian Marquardt scored in the top of the seventh inning. Two bases loaded walks brought in the runs. A strikeout and narrow out on a grounder to the shortstop ended the game.

Wayne had only four hits in the game while Laurel had eight but the hosts took advantage of walks and errors. Jonas, Dave Marquardt and Phil Martin each had two hits in the losing effort.

Wayne is scheduled to host Wakefield tonight (Monday) and host Pender on Friday. Laurel will entertain Wisner on Friday.
