TO HELP CELEBRATE the 25th anniversary of the Northeast Station at Concord, senior citizens from the town, earlier this summer, turned out to help plant about 1,300 flowers. The flowers were planted to form the state of Nebraska with yellow flowers forming the numerals 25. The Station will be celebrating their anniversary on Tuesday in conjunction with their annual field day events. A free barbecue lunch will also be served to those attending, courtesy of the Northeast Nebraska Experimental Farm Association.

Anniversary celebration is planned by Northeast Station

On Tuesday, Aug. 24, the University of Nebraska Northeast Station at Concord will be celebrating their 25th anniversary in conjunction with their annual field day activities.

This year, there will be 15 stops in the five tours planned for the field day activities. Tours begin at 9:30 a.m.

A presentation of home canning and food preservation begins at 10 a.m. in the head quarters building featuring Laurel Brannen, extension foods and nutrition specialist.

Tours end for the noon hour and start again from 1 to 3:30 p.m. A homecoming ceremony also has been planned for returning officers of the Northeast Nebraska Experimental Farm Association (NNEFA) and other supporters. The NNEFA will also sponsor a free barbecue lunch.

Dave Sheldon, extension ag engineer, has planned a tour stop on management techniques for deck nursery swine units. As pigs go into early weaning, they require an environmental temperature of 85 degrees F.

"It's a challenge to maintain this environment during the winter and spend as little as possible on heating," said Mike Brumm, project co-researcher. Sheldon will discuss research designed to help swine producers combat increasing utility costs using hovers and alternate fan settings to ease propane and electricity bills.

At another stop, Brumm, extension swine specialist, will provide an opportunity for visitors to look over the feeder pig operation. The project is in its third year of study. Past work centered on what to feed imported pigs right after they arrive at the farm.

The information available this year concerns water medication and whether it should be used, or if one can get by without it. The interaction of various water medications and receiving diets will also be discussed, he said.

Winding up the tour list, Dr. Terry Mader, extension beef cattle specialist, will discuss details of beef cattle research on the value of newly available feed additives and implants.

He plans to talk about on-going Station beef research concerning the best number and sequence of implants needed to grow and finish steers. Also, recent findings on whole corn in stepping up cattle on high concentrate rations will be discussed.

Dave Pankekie, animal science research technician, will review management practices involved in a large production. Also, he will offer an evaluation of fermentation characteristics and feed value of alfalfa ensiled with or without microbial preservation. The results of several feeding trials with growing steers fed treated and untreated alfalfa will be discussed.

Remaining four stops will include:

- Corn production with non traditional soil additives
- Applying insecticides through center pivot irrigation
- Crop residue management for soil erosion control
- Irrigating sloping soils
- Soil insecticide research for 1982
- Interseeding soybeans and sorghum in oats
- Comparing fertilizer recommendations from soil testing labs
- Soybean herbicide performance
- Controlling second generation European corn borers

• Yard care discussion by "Backyard Farmer" TV panel

• Station dedication by Dr. Roy Arnold, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Vice-Chancellor

The whole idea of the station came about in the early 1950's when several area people got together and investigated the possibility of having some sort of experimental farm set up in the area.

In 1954, the first meeting of a newly organized group, the NNEFA, met in West Point with the late Albert Watson of Wayne, who was one of the original backers of the plan, chairing the meeting. Watson was eventually elected the first president of the organization.

The NNEFA worked to get a station started, building on the plans and operations of the two existing stations, one at Scotts Bluff and the other at North Platte.

"The station was established solely because people said they wanted and needed such a station," said Station Director Dr. Carl J. Ward who is also the district director for cooperative extension offices.

In order to raise funds for the purchase of land for the experimental farm, the association sold memberships and received donations.

While the fund drive was going on, it caught the attention of the late C.D. Haskell of Laurel.

One day, when Warren Patelfield, a NNEFA Cedar County director, was doing carpentry work for him, Haskell said he wanted to donate a half section of land to the group.

Haskell wanted to donate the land for use as an ag experiment station, and as a memorial to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John O. Haskell.

In exchange for the land donation, the NNEFA also agreed to set up a scholarship fund in the name of Margaret T. Haskell, his wife, through the University of Nebraska Foundation. A $25,000 fund was created to provide interest-free or low-interest loans for Northeast Nebraska ag students.

"One interesting thing about the land donation," Ward said, "is that if the Station ever stops the research work, the land reverts to Mr. Haskell's alumnate, Yale University."

Ward said the NNEFA was able to contribute to the scholarship fund through the money raised to purchase land.

The association, according to Ward, also still has some remaining funds to work with by supplying books and materials. They also help with the annual field days, which will be sponsoring the lunch and help with the VIP tours.

While an agronomy research program began in 1956, the land was officially deeded to the University of Nebraska in 1957, which the anniversary celebration this year is all about.

The NNEFA and the Haskell family continued to cooperate in helping the Station develop. In 1959, the Association began a second fund drive to build a headquarters building. With the Haskell's offer to match any funds raised, a total of $18,000 was available at the end of the fund drive, for the headquarters building.

A temporary extension service was set up in July of 1963 in Wayne for a five county area and by 1964, the building was completed and occupied in early 1965.

The late Richard Adkins of Osmond was a member of both the university's board of regents and NNEFA. According to Ward, Adkins secured state funds to pay for the headquarters building's construction, citing these local contributions as proof that there was public support for the idea.

Still interested in the Station's development, NNEFA loaned $4,000 to set up an experimental cattle operation. In 1967 the association, in cooperation with pork producers, conducted a third fund drive. They raised $22,000 for building a swine research facility.

"Through the years, no other station has had such local involvement as the Northeast has received," Ward said.

The people who staff the Station are also faculty members of the University of Nebraska but they are not just researchers. "Our faculty serves a dual role," Ward explained. "They are not totally into research nor are they totally extension specialists."

"It's sometimes difficult when your working on a research problem," said Mike Brumm, an extension swine specialist, "and someone comes in with a totally unrelated problem for you to work on, but this dual role does have its benefits."

Area schools schedule first day of classes

The county fairs are over, the sweltering heat of July and early August are behind us and thoughts of tired parents and school administrators turn toward the first day of school for area youngsters.

Regular classes for students in the Wayne-Carroll school district will begin at 8:40 a.m. on Monday, Aug. 30.

According to district officials, busses will run regular routes on that day and schedules will be mailed out prior to the opening day of school.

Students new to the Wayne-Carroll district should register at school offices as soon as possible.

Kindergarten sessions this year will be two sections with the morning session running from 8:30 to 11 a.m. and the afternoon session from 12:30 to 3 p.m. All other classes will begin at 8:40 a.m., with first grade dismissing at 3:15 p.m., second grade at 3:20 p.m., third grade at 3:25 p.m., and fourth grade at 3:30 p.m.

Middle school students will be dismissed at 3:45 p.m. and high school students at 3:50 p.m.

On the first day of school, seventh and eighth grade students are asked to pick up their class schedules in the gym at 8:30 a.m. Fifth and sixth grade students will find their room assignment posted outside their classroom.

Ninth grade students are asked to report to the lecture hall for orientation on the first day of school at 8:40 a.m. Tenth, eleventh and twelfth grade students are requested to report to the high school gym to pick up their class schedules at 8:15 a.m. and report to regular classes at 8:40 a.m.

Teachers will report to workshops on August 26-27.

St. Mary's Catholic school in Wayne will begin classes on Aug. 30 also. Classes will be held from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. that day. Registration for students will be held after masses on Saturday and Sunday at the school building for all students.

A new teacher, Mrs. Gary Boehle, has been hired to teach second and third grade students with Ellen Imldieke teaching kindergarten and first grade and Pat Ruther teaching fourth through sixth.

Workshops for teachers at St. Mary's will be held on Aug. 26-27.

Windside schools will begin on Monday, Aug. 23 at 8:50 a.m. and will end at 3:35 p.m.

School officials say doors will not be opened until 8:40 a.m. ESU employees will conduct hearing and speech screening test for students in grades 1-12 the morning of Aug. 31. All students are urged to make every effort to be in school that day.

"Most of our research tends to be of the applied type. The work down at Lincoln is more of the in-depth, future type," Brumm said.

Academic research at the Station now is concerned with covering the major practices of most farming and livestock methods. The station is involved in research into feeding, soil, crop rotations, weed control, conservation tillage, insect control, energy usage as well as many aspects of livestock and crop management.

The dual role of the specialists came about since the Station also serves as a district cooperative extension office. Included on the extension side at the Station is a forester, youth specialist, dairy specialists and an integrated pest-management program.

"People call it 'our' station, rather than 'the university's station,'" Ward said. "It's the way they view an institution — we're able to have greater impact on their lives because they have this close, personal feeling about the work we do."

Part of the Station's tax support purpose is to do research oriented toward Northeast Nebraska's farm needs. The Station's role as a district cooperative extension office also gives them the job of not only doing the research, but getting the resulting information out to area residents in a 13 county area.

According to Ward, the NNEFA's bylaws state the organization's objectives were to get a research facility established to focus on the area's needs, to get that information to people who could use it and in the end, to improve family living for people involved.

Ward said the Station has been fulfilling this purpose. He cites fertilization research that improved fertilizer application efficiency for farmers who follow Station guidelines. Even if only a portion of the million or so acres of corn in the Northeast district are fertilized according to the guidelines, the savings are astronomical, he said.

Other types of information and service the station provided to area residents include: • It found that the return to bromegrass pasture for fertilization was one pound of beef for each pound of nitrogen applied. Also, the combination of rotational grazing and fertilization doubled the amount of beef produced per acre.

• It developed the modified open-front

Committee warns of corn freeze this fall

One-third or more of the Nebraska corn crop will not reach maturity by normal freeze dates without unseasonably warm weather, the University of Nebraska's Ag-Climate Situation Committee said Monday.

Corn growing North of a line running Northeast from Imperial, Neb., through the West Point, Neb. area, that is not now in the dough stage or beyond, has a greatly diminished chance of maturing before freeze, according to the committee.

The committee based its findings on accumulated growing degree days through Aug. 12 plus normal expectations for additional degree days before normal freeze dates. The normal freeze date for the Wayne area is around Oct. 5-6.

The season for the state as a whole continues to be eight calendar days behind normal, the committee said.

National Guard unit nets top awards

It was a successful two weeks of training for the Wayne O'Neill National Guard unit at Fort Ripley, Minn. The unit returned recently with numerous awards including the top prize of best training award among five companies. The unit received an excellent rating by evaluators from Fort Carson who judged on various aspects of training including such things as infantry tactics, appearance, maintenance and leadership. Individually, Nebraska Company commander is Captain Stan Burst and First Sergeant is Denny Spangler. The Wayne unit is at 103 percent strength making the combined unit the highest infantry unit in the state. Spangler reported that the mortar platoon was rated extremely high and received several good comments. Approximately 20 men compose the mortar platoon. "There were a lot of hours, a lot of bugs and a lot of heat but it was a very good camp," Spangler said. Joining the National Guard units for two days at Fort Ripley were civilian guests Ralph Barclay of Wayne and Ed Proff of O'Neill.

livestock methods have combined the same swine finishing house, now widely adopted throughout the state and region. If showed that shelled, high moisture corn stored in whole form and fed that way increased the rate of gain more than similar corn stored and fed in ground form. The Station doesn't dwell on past success. And visitors at the field day and anniversary will be able to tour current research test areas. But not to sell themselves short, Station personnel will set up a tent with displays highlighting past accomplishments. Looking to the future for the Station, Ward said he would like to see further land acquisition for further research. The Station currently uses the one-half section donated by Masket along with an additional one-quarter section leased from the Masketts. Expansion of building space is also a priority for the future of the Station. "Over the past five years, crops and Questions arise though however from the effects of society such as dealing with energy concerns and economic concerns show up in all areas," Ward said. "The kinds of practices of 10 years ago are not the most profitable ones of today. Major adjustments have had to be made by farmers to keep their heads above water," he explained. "One of our major thrusts is to provide information to help shift modes of operation." Other areas the Station will be looking at in the future involves communication changes and how to get the information to those who need it in better ways. Computers, especially the micro computers, will be in the future for the Station and finding better applications of the high technology for farm use. All in all, Ward said the Station will continue to respond to the needs of the farm from conservation to livestock, housing and everything in between.

police report

An accident in front of the 7-11 store on Main street Saturday was investigated by the Wayne Police Department.

According to the report, Bradley G. Eddie of rural Carroll had stopped at the exit off Main, then pulled out and struck a Northbound car on Main driven by Dean E. Burbach, Carroll. Eddie told police that he had seen Burbach's car approaching, slow down, and he then assumed Burbach was going to turn into the store's parking lot when he pulled out and struck the Burbach car. On Friday, the department received a report of a lost dog, which was later found, and a report of a dog at large, which was later identified. Officers also responded on a complaint of loud music. People in a parking lot were found with a loud stereo and told to move out of the area.

In addition to the accident on Saturday, police reported a malfunction of the alarm at Mines Jewelry and received a complaint of someone shooting off fireworks. No one was located in connection with the incident. Officers were also unable to locate anyone at the Pamida parking lot following a report of a car "tearing around" the area. A possible breaking and entering, in progress, at a West side location was reported to the department on Sunday. Police responded but could find no one in the area. Following their return, a second call reported again that someone was in the same area but officers again could find no one prowling about.

Police responded on Sunday to a request to talk to officers. A complaint was made to the officers by an individual about a neighbor that had reportedly shot a badger. The individual wanted the badger disposed of, which the officers did.

Faulty alarms were also reported to the owner of Mines Jewelry and to the manager of Pamida on Sunday following investigations. Also on Sunday, officers aided a person who had locked their keys in their car at the Wallman's store lot, received a report of a lost dog and investigated a complaint of someone "peeling rubber" but were unable to locate a vehicle.

Monday officers responded to a bat in a house report. By the time officers arrived a friend had killed the bat. Tickets were issued following a complaint of illegal parking on Monday and a lost dog was returned following a request for aid.

Tuesday, officers responded on a complaint of a dog barking. Police patrolled the area and reported that they heard no such dog. Officers also responded on a complaint of a vicious dog at large. Police found two boys with their dog in the street, told the youths of the complaint and to keep their dog at home.

The department issued 64 parking tickets during July, up 22 from the previous time period for 1981. Of that amount, 40 were issued for no parking mid-night to 5 a.m. and 14 for no parking this side.

Officers issued 30 warnings for speeding during July; one for failure to yield, one for riding outside of the vehicle and one warning for a traffic signal violation. Violation cards were also issued for five expired registrations; four no headlight and two for no license plates.

Complaints and requests for police service calls were up by 22 over the July 1981 figure. Police received 183 calls in this category last month. The department received 15 criminal complaints during July, up by 2 over the previous period last year; cleared 4 criminal cases; investigated 8 accidents on public streets and one on private property and impounded 5 animals during the month.

A total of 79 1/2 hours were worked by uniformed officers last month, up about four hours from July, 1981. Radio dispatchers put in a total of 744 hours, up from the 728 hour figure for July, 1981.

The department's vehicles logged 3,685 miles and used 443.8 gallons of gasoline last month. That compares with 3,356 miles during during July, 1981 with 344.7 gallons of gasoline used.

Be aware

With school quickly approaching for area youngsters, buses will be out on the county, state and local roads, picking up their charges early in the morning and dropping them off late in the afternoon and early evenings.

Auto drivers, through the summer, have become accustomed to not having the large, yellow buses, starting and stopping with their charges in tow, and therefore may be taken by surprise by a stopped bus in the roadway in the coming weeks.

Drivers should be aware of the hazard the school vehicles present, especially during the first few weeks of school.

Although most bus drivers are aware of the importance of their positions and the care they must take, automobile drivers are often caught unaware.

We urge that automobile drivers exercise caution during the times when the school buses will be on the road; to be ready for a stopped bus at the base of a hill. Accidents can and should be avoided by a little more awareness on the part of drivers.

Primary to general

The purpose of the primary election is to sift out those candidates that are the least desirable of the citizens according to the wishes of those who voted, and to choose the two best, or most desirable, to have at it in the fall general election. Now that the primary is over each race has its two candidates that will be campaigning from now until November for the right to represent you in the various offices that they are running for. (There may be only one candidate in some races where only one candidate filed for a particular office.) In many of the positions that candidates are running for, it might seem that they have lost their cool completely when you realize that they are going to be working very hard all summer, staying in motels, eating chicken most every night and putting in long hours for a job that will pay only $4,800 per year, for example. (The Legislature) So what is it that drives people to put out that much energy for a position that won't even pay their expenses while they are in Lincoln serving the people? Why would a person even pay their expenses while they are in Lincoln serving the people? Why would a person even want to come down here and vote on hundreds of issues where with each vote you make someone else happy and someone else upset? Where people write nasty letters to the editor and criticize your stand on any particular issue, or come up to you during dinner and give you a piece of their mind for not supporting their point of view and, in some cases, even threaten to see that you are beaten in the next election.

There has to be reasons for wanting to do this. I know of a few Senators who feel obligated to serve simply because life in Nebraska has been good to them and they wish to repay the State and feel this is the best way they can do this. Others have a desire to make a life of politics and serving in the legislature is as good a place to start as any. Perhaps others do it as a place to make contacts which might be of use later on. And there might even be a few who were just unhappy the way things were going and felt that they could make some changes for the better.

But for whatever reason people choose to serve, we must be thankful that there are those kind of people. For without them, we would be in one heckuva shape.

ASK A LAWYER
A PUBLIC SERVICE OF THE NEBRASKA STATE BAR ASSOCIATION

Q. My hobby is taking photographs of old barns, windmills, etc. Some I have enlarged and framed and want to sell to the public. Some I use as the basis for paintings which I also want to sell. I have not asked the property owners for permission to take snapshots of their property. Are there any legal precautions I should take before selling either the framed photographs or the paintings made from my photographs — all representing someone else's property?

A. Generally speaking, there should be no legal precautions necessary for you to take photographs of barns and windmills and to sell prints of these photos or paintings made from them, even without the permission of the owners, to do so.

Q. We signed a one-year lease on our apartment with rent at $250 per month. The lease was set to expire in November 1982. Now we have received notice from our landlord that he is raising the rent. We want to move out. If we do so, can he keep our security deposit as rent money?

A. The answer to your question depends upon the terms of your lease. Some leases contain an "escalation clause" which allows the landlord to raise the rent before the end of the lease term. Usually there are some restrictions on how much of an increase would be allowed. If your lease has such a clause and the increase is within the specified amount, you could not move out without breaking the lease. If you break the lease, the landlord could use your security deposit toward unpaid rent, and could also hold you liable for unpaid rent until the end of the lease (November 1982) if he is unable to find another tenant.

A. If your lease does not contain an escalation clause, you have a right to rent the property until the end of the term for $250 per month. The rent cannot be increased during that time without your agreement, and you should not have to move out. If the landlord refuses to let you continue to live in the apartment at the agreed-upon rent, you could move out due to the landlord's breach of the lease agreement. You should obtain a mutual cancellation of the lease if you decide to move out.

A "security deposit" is paid to the landlord by the tenant to protect the landlord for rent due and not paid, and for damages caused to the premises by the tenant. If you move out because of the landlord's breach of the lease, he could not keep the security deposit as "unpaid rent" because there would be no unpaid rent. He could, however, apply it to any damages done by you during your tenancy. The Nebraska landlord and tenant act provides that, upon written request, the tenant has a right to receive, within two weeks, the balance of the security deposit and an itemization of any costs paid out of that deposit.

Look out, the liberal in me is raising its head again.

This business of constitutional amendments pending on school prayer and abortion is strongly backed by the con-pacs (conservative political action committees), but from all reports the two issues will not arise again after last Wednesday in Congress, so passage is extremely doubtful.

Whew — scared me for a bit there. Let's see, someplace in the constitution it says something about freedom of religion (along with the press so I presumably won't be stoned into never never land). Liberal thinking, the way I was pointed and chose when young, tells me people have the right to make up their own minds about things that affect their lives.

Of course that's within social boundaries. I'm broke, but I don't go over to the bank with a gun and say "gimmie all ya got lady." We temper our needs and wants against the guidelines of the majority of society. And I think that is the root, the basis for most of our social conflicts.

Someone once said that legislatures have no business trying to legislate morality...it doesn't work (i.e. prohibition, pot smokers), but we keep trying to make them do it.

Okay, prayer in schools...look, I was raised a Christian (my Druid influences come from my Celt and Irishness) and attended parochial schools, by choice (very much so but that's a beer story). I do favor the option several states have worked out for voluntary prayer. But, with an amendment, allowing prayers in public schools, I sure can see it mandated by a lot of districts all over the country, no matter what an individual or family's wishes are. Not everyone is Christian (what the heck though, they'll end up in Hades anyway, right?).

Into the nitty gritty of abortion (this I could be stoned or kidnapped for as a recent couple was). I don't believe in it myself. I'm very, very stongly against it for many reasons, but...but I have several overriding concerns: the mother, the environment, the family and rights of people.

Without getting into a lengthy discussion of the metaphysics of life, I put my money on the lady, the woman. It's ultimately her choice.

With these issues, I guess you could say I'm pretty hot about self determination. I don't enjoy being told what to do, how to live, by someone else. Who appointed them my guardian?

Well, anyway, before I boil over, I'm glad things in Congress have calmed down. It's pretty hot in Washington D.C. and, with cooler weather in January, maybe they'll be able to sort through the two matters in a more logical fashion.

The two questions though also involve overriding our courts' jurisdiction and rights under the constitution. If you favor the domino effect, see the progression? If not, see the problem?

Isn't that just how things always seem to go? Just when you need a good guy like John Wayne around, he's no longer with us.

If this were John's times (an Iowa native by the by), he'd wrangle his way up to the Dakota territory and say something like "so, you think you can just swipe our water do ya. Well, I don't, I won't, oh the heck I won't," and smack them a good one into the muddy Missouri.

Three cheers, a tip of the hat and a genuine imitation 5¢ cigar to the attorney generals of Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri, for filing against South Dakota for trying to swipe our water for their coal flows.

Sure, it's hard times, but water is water and those slowwinders are not going to get away with it Poncho.

I wonder if the Cisco Kid is still around?

Well, it's not the Chattanooga cho-cho but it is the San Diego trolley.

Finally, I've been watching this project for some time. The city decided that instead of subways (in California's no way) and commuter trains or additional buses, they'd try electric trolley service.

I remember as a youngster in Iowa's capital, the trolleys running. Everyone put them down when they could afford a car but geez, the stories growing up of parents and dates, rides to work...it just seemed like a good idea.

For some cities, it might be the answer for mass transportation. San Diego is now through ticket charges, receiving 82 percent of the operating costs of the service. Hey, that's not bad at all for mass transit systems. Of course, it won't work for all large cities, but for some it might be an answer. See you...pif.

More vacationers are persuaded to stop here

Tourism and convention business in Nebraska is growing because we are utilizing user fees paid by those travelers to attract even more visitors to our state.

In 1980 the Nebraska legislature passed, and I signed into law, a state tax on hotel and motel rentals and provided also for local option taxes on rooms.

Both the state and local governments are using this money to attract more tourists and more conventions.

Now, business of serving travelers is up over last year. Also, additional hotel motel facilities in Nebraska provide one of the few bright spots in the building construction industry in our state.

A few examples of construction underway or recently completed are the $34 million project for a new Cornhusker Hotel and a $1 million remodeling of the Hilton in Lincoln, the new $14 million Marriott and the $11 million remodeling of the Red Lion in Omaha and additions to the Grand Island Midtown Holiday Inn and the Kearny Holdome Holiday Inn.

The state measures the amount of traffic at ten Nebraska tourist attractions ranging from Scotts Bluff National Monument to the Strategic Air Command Museum and including a cross section of places both near and away from the interstate highway system.

At those 10 spots, traffic in June, 1982, was up 9 percent over June, 1981, despite the fact that traffic on Interstate 80 was up only 1.5 percent.

Flood control benefits of dams

The Bureau of Reclamation water management facilities across the West prevented an estimated $111 million in flood damage in 1981. The $111 million in prevented losses in 1981 is almost 66% above the annual average of $66.7 million for the period since 1950.

The estimated flood-prevention losses were prepared for the Bureau by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers on a project-by-project basis. The benefits are determined by the Corps by calculating the difference between the flood flows that would have occurred had the project not been constructed and the excess flows which actually occur.

Reclamation dams and related facilities capture and hold spring and summer flood flows resulting from high-country snowmelt and severe storms. The water is released in controlled volume to generate hydroelectric power, to supply water for irrigation and municipal and industrial needs, and to support fish and wildlife habitats and recreational uses.

The Bureau's Pick-Sloan Missouri Basin Program, which includes the mainstem dams in South Dakota, prevented $19.5 million in losses. Closer to home, the Elkhorn River Basin is the highest annual flood damage of any river basin in the state, with an average of around $5 million annually.

Several Lower Elkhorn NRD activities include flood control as a benefit:

- 1) Cost-share assistance to landowners for conservation practices reduces runoff from farmland which contributes to flooding.
- 2) Encourage zoning against construction in flood plains, to reduce damages when flooding does occur.
- 3) Wildlife Habitat program maintains river-bottom land in permanent cover which stabilizes banks.
- 4) Flood control and water storage dams retain high flows and release them slowly.

Hunting areas open to public

The Private Land Habitat Program provides payments to private landowners for preserving or establishing habitat on their land. The program is administered by Natural Resources Districts and Nebraska Game & Parks Commission, with 75% of the funds coming from Habitat Stamps which are sold with each hunting permit. The other 25% is funded by the NRDs.

If the landowner agrees, these areas are marked with signs showing them open for hunting, fishing, hiking, and trapping. This public access is by foot traffic only, and no vehicles are allowed.

The land which is open to public access, is still private property and should be treated as such. The landowner may evict anyone destroying property, conducting themselves in a reckless or dangerous manner.

A list of public access habitat areas is available on request from Lower Elkhorn NRD offices in Norfolk and Clarkson, the Game & Parks Commission in Norfolk or local Soil Conservation Service offices. For more information about the Wildlife Habitat Program, contact one of these offices.

Irrigation hotline reports

Lower Elkhorn NRD and Cooperative Extension personnel continue to monitor weather conditions around the District which affect the amount of moisture used by crops. Daily crop water use reports are given over area radio stations to help irrigators do a better job of water management.

Contrary to what many people believe, there is more to be gained this year by scheduling irrigations than in a dry year. By keeping a close watch on the available moisture in the crop root zone, you may find you can delay an irrigation long enough to take advantage of rain. In this way you may save one or more irrigations in a season. In addition, you may save on irrigation

Floodwaters are released slowly from Maskenthine Reservoir to prevent damage in Stanton and downstream.

The Maskenthine Lake north of Stanton is one such project which has functioned this summer to save Stanton from high water problems. On August 5, a 4" rain fell over much of the watershed in a very short time. This resulted in over 325 acre feet (acre foot - 1' deep covering 1 acre) of runoff into Maskenthine which would have gone through Stanton in a few hours. The water was contained behind the dam, and released at a rate the downstream channel could easily accommodate. In the event of a more severe storm, the Maskenthine Dam can store 1624 acre feet of flood water, which is nearly double its normal volume.

A second major project of Lower Elkhorn NRD, Willow Creek, is now under construction near Pierce. The lake will be larger than Maskenthine at 700 surface acres, which will be utilized for boating, fishing, and swimming. Flood storage in the Willow Creek project is proportionately larger at 18,875 acre feet.

Projects such as these, larger Federal projects, upland conservation treatment, and floodplain zoning are all a part of the answer in reducing flood damages in the Elkhorn basin and Nebraska.

at the end of the season by allowing available soil moisture to drop to 50% of capacity as the crop reaches maturity.

Irrigation Hotline Reports can be heard on: KHUB-AM-Fremont - 1340 - 6:25 a.m. & Noon; KHEN-FM-Norfolk - 94 - 12:15 p.m.; KTCH-AM-Wayne - 1590 - 6:50 a.m. & 12:50 p.m.; WJAG-AM-Norfolk - 780 - 7:32 a.m.

Tree sales up

The 1981-82 Clarke-McNary tree sales in Nebraska—3.42 million trees and shrubs—topped last year's total of 3.15 million.

The seedlings were sold at cost for windbreaks, woodlots, wildlife shelters and other conservation purposes, says Bill Lovett, University of Nebraska forester and Clarke-McNary director.

The vast majority of those went for windbreaks. Moisture conditions this winter and spring contributed to better sales this year than last. The best-selling tree, at 1.6 million, was Eastern Red Cedar which is well-suited for windbreak purposes.

The largest purchase, 1.68 million trees and shrubs, went to the Natural Resources Districts. Individual orders from 1,913 people averaged about 260 trees per person. The Nebraska Game & Parks Commission bought 222,500 trees and shrubs.

Seedlings were provided by the U.S. Forest Service at Halsey and Skinner Nursery in Topeka, Kansas. Tree sales for 1982 will begin November 1, so it is not too early to begin planning your windbreak. Contact your local SCS office for information and assistance.

THREE-YEAR-OLD Bryan Stroman of Hoskins poses in a rocking chair with two of his mother's original crocheted toys. The pattern for Gabriel Giraffe appears in the Summer 1982 magazine issue of Women's Circle Crochet. The beaver pattern appears in this fall's edition of Crochet World Omni Book, which came out just this month. Mrs. Kim Stroman, at left, is pictured alongside many of the other toys she has crocheted. Mrs. Stroman holds copies of Women's Circle Crochet and Crochet World magazines, which recently published her original crochet patterns.

Magazines publish Hoskins woman's crochet patterns

By LaVon Anderson

Kim Stroman of Hoskins was understandably excited last February when she picked up an issue of Crochet World, a monthly magazine publication filled with crochet patterns and ideas.

The 24-year-old Carroll native's original crochet creation, a Raggedy Ann hand puppet, was pictured, in color, on the cover of the nationally distributed magazine.

"It was pretty neat," said Kim, seated in the kitchen of the trailer home she shares in Hoskins with her husband, Scott, an employee of Dale's Electronics in Norfolk, and their three-year-old son Bryan.

Although Kim had sent other original crochet patterns into the magazine, it was the Raggedy Ann puppet that captured the attention of the magazine's editors, who decided to feature it on the cover of the February 1982 edition.

"I created the puppet for my son," says Kim, "but it was too cute to keep to ourselves."

Kim received $15 from the magazine for the Raggedy Ann pattern, which combines fabric with crochet.

Since then, Kim has had two more original crochet patterns accepted for publication.

A giraffe pattern she designed was published in the Summer 1982 issue of Women's Circle Crochet. Kim received $60 for the pattern, which won second place in a contest sponsored by the magazine, published four times a year.

The giraffe, named Gabriel, stands 21 inches tall and is done in single crochet with a yellow body, black mane and gray horns.

Another pattern, a boy and girl beaver in bibbed overalls, appears in this fall's edition of Crochet World Omni Book, which came out just this month.

Kim received $25 for the pattern of the beaver twins, which are all crocheted.

In addition, Kim says she might sell another pattern to Annie's Patterns Club, a magazine which is published in Texas and mailed to subscribers every two months, featuring a variety of patterns.

The pattern they are interested in purchasing from Kim is a crocheted cookie jar made out of two liter plastic soda bottles.

Kim says she has already sent a lion cookie jar to the magazine for their inspection and has been asked to send more. She plans to send them Siamese cat and pig cookie jars, and is working on an elephant and rabbit to send in also.

"I don't know what they'll do," she smiles.

Kim says that although her first original crochet pattern was a vase, which was rejected by Crochet World, almost all of her creations now are original and that the hardest part is putting her notes together to make the pattern.

That's where Kim's artistic abilities come in handy. She begins by drawing the article she wants to crochet.

"It's easy for me to make it, but it's hard to transcribe my notes so other people can make it," she laughs.

Kim recalls the advice given by her art teacher at Wayne High School, Ted Blenderman. "He told me that if I can draw something, I can make it. I've always remembered that," says Kim.

Kim says she especially enjoys designing crocheted toys, although she has also made plant hangers, towel holders, butterfly refrigerator decors, vests, dollies and many Christmas ornaments including snowflakes and stockings.

She presently is crocheting two afghans, one for herself and one for her mother, Mrs. Harold Loberg of Carroll.

It was Kim's family who taught her to crochet and encouraged her to submit her patterns for publication.

Kim began crocheting three years ago following the birth of son Bryan. Her teacher was her mother-in-law, Mrs. Ralph Stroman of Laurel.

"She also knits and does all kinds of crafts," Kim says fondly of her mother-in-law, who is director of the Laurel Senior Citizens Center.

Kim's side of the family also enjoys needlework and crafts of all kinds.

"Mom sews a lot," says Kim, "and my grandmother Mrs. Reynold Loberg of Carroll loves crafts of all kinds." Another grandmother, Florence Mau of Wayne, embroiders.

Kim also embroiders, sews and knits, but her first love is painting — which she took up at the age of 14.

Decorating her home are beautiful wildlife pictures — many painted on wood with oils.

Kim says she learned to paint with oil on wood from the late Vic Marquardt of Carroll.

"Vic moved to Carroll and lived down the street from my family," recalls Kim. "He found out that I liked to draw and taught me to paint on wood."

Kim says it was Vic who taught her paint with oils and if not for him she probably wouldn't be using them now.

Although Kim has sold about five of her paintings, she says she mostly paints for herself and for her family as gifts.

She usually completes about two paintings a year, although an oil painting of mountain goats, done on canvas, took nearly three years to finish.

Kim has entered the Nebraska habitat stamp contest for the past four years and hopes one year to have her drawing featured on the Nebraska stamp for hunters.

Although Kim's crochet patterns have gained her the most recognition lately, she would rather be known as a noted wildlife artist. "That would be my biggest thrill," she smiles.

Until then, Kim will continue to paint and hopes to have more crochet patterns published. And if that's not enough, Kim sews as much as time allows for her family, tends a big garden, and cares for her many house plants.

"I have lots and lots of plants," Kim says as she glances around her home. "I love plants. If I get anymore I'll run out of room."

Kim also decorates cakes, a hobby she took up when she was a senior in high school and received her first panda bear cake pan.

Before long, Kim will be toting many of her craft items to Norfolk where she plans to display them at the Northeast Nebraska Craft Show, scheduled Oct. 23 and 24 in the Norfolk city auditorium.

Kim and her family have displayed their crafts during each of the three years the show has been held.

"The craft show gets bigger and better each year," says Kim, adding that this year's show has been expanded to two days because of the many exhibitors who have expressed interest in displaying their crafts.

Among those displaying items at Kim's table this year will be her brother, Kris, 17, who took up crocheting last fall after some lessons from his sister. Kris' specialties are the little stocking cap pins he crochets for Nebraska football lovers.

Although Kim's many interests and hobbies keep her busy, she says her family is her biggest priority and always comes first.

Husband Scott enjoys woodworking and photography, and son Bryan, at age three, waits to see what new toy mom will crochet for him next.

'Music Man' upcoming

"The Music Man," a production of the Wayne Community Theatre, is in the final week of rehearsals.

Finishing touches are being made on the sets, costumes are being altered, and director Ted Blenderman leads the cast through final scene rehearsals.

"The Music Man" will be presented Aug. 27, 28 and 29 in Ramsey Theatre at Wayne State College.

The play has been described as one of the "freshest, most original and melodic musical comedies in many years."

Town team one win away from playoff championship

The Tri County League playoffs are back where they started. When the playoffs opened on Aug. 8, it was Wayne against Creighton. At the conclusion of the playoffs it is still Wayne against Creighton.

tri-county league

Wayne's town team moved one step closer to sweeping the regular season and post season Tri-County championships Wednesday night with an 11-1 romp over Coleridge. At the same time, Creighton surprised O'Neill 5-2 to set up the finals match.

Wayne and Creighton were scheduled to meet at Hank Overin Field last night (Sunday). A Wayne victory would have clinched the championship while a Creighton win would mean the teams must play again at 8:15 Wednesday to decide the title on Hank Overin Field. In the first round of playoffs, Wayne defeated Creighton 9-2.

Creighton, the darkhorse of the playoffs, improved its record to a deceiving 8-17 with the upset victory over West Division champion O'Neill. Wayne's win over Coleridge upped the locals' record to 21-3.

Wayne, playing on its home field for the fourth time in the playoffs, performed in front of a pro Coleridge crowd. With more than 80 supportive Coleridge fans in the stands, Wayne's home crowd was out numbered almost four to one.

The locals played nearly flawless baseball in Wednesday's easy win. The winners were eating pizza after the game. Andy Manes, owner of Andy's Pizza, has offered free pizza this season to anyone who hits a home run. There were two in Wednesday's triumph.

Doug Starzl earned the first pizza of the game with a two-out solo shot in the first inning. Neil Blohm cracked a two-run homer in the second.

A five-run second inning broke the game open for the hosts. Mike Meyer opened the inning with a single and designated runner Dean Carroll took over for the Wayne catcher. He moved to second on a passed ball and to third on a sacrifice bunt by Jeff Dion.

Tim Pfeiffer drove Carroll home with a single and pitcher Darrell Mueller added a base hit one out later. Jeff Zeiss lined a single to bring in two runs and Blohm cleaned the bases by lining his two-run homer.

In the fourth inning, Dave Schwartz reached base on a fielder's choice and Mueller singled. Schwartz scored from third on a sacrifice fly by Zeiss and Mueller scored on a single by Blohm.

Meyer led off the fifth inning with a base on balls and Dion followed with a base hit. Dean Carroll, running for Meyer, scored on a Coleridge fielding error.

After giving up a run to Coleridge in the seventh inning, Wayne put an end to the game with two runs in the bottom of the eighth. Dave Schwartz walked and Mueller singled. Zeiss ripped a base hit to score Schwartz for Wayne's 10th run. Two outs later, Mueller scored the game-ending run from third base on a passed ball.

Mueller, returning to pitch for Wayne after moving to Yankton several weeks ago, struck out 10 Coleridge batters and gave up only four hits. He had an equally impressive night at the plate, collecting three base hits and scoring three runs in four at bats. Zeiss and Blohm each had two hits of Wayne's 12 hits. Coleridge's leading hitter was Ed Kalin with a double and single.

Western Auto wins title

Behind keen defense and timely hits, Western Auto clinched the Y division title of the Wayne Men's Softball League Tournament Tuesday with a 7-0 shutout of Godfathers.

It was the first meeting of the two teams because Western played in A League during the regular season and Godfathers played in B League.

It was the third consecutive victory for Western Auto, which received a second round bye in the tourney. The champions defeated Logan Valley, Green-view Farm and then Godfathers to take the championship.

Godfathers, which lost to Greenview in the first round, defeated Logan Valley, First National Bank, State National Bank and avenged Greenview to earn the runner-up trophy.

Godfathers struggled at the plate with runners on base while Western Auto recorded some big hits to bring its runs across the plate.

The championship game brought a close to the men's season.

WSC netters open practice

Approximately 20 veterans and newcomers were expected to arrive at Wayne State College yesterday (Sunday) for the opening of fall volleyball practices according to first year head coach Ernie Kovar.

Kovar indicated that he expects another 10 to 15 players to check in at the beginning of the fall semester on Monday, Aug. 30.

The two-a-day drills, which will begin on Monday, will focus on evaluating each girl's individual strength and talent, refreshing the basic fundamentals and working on specific offensive plays. "If we can excel, I'd like us to become as complex a team as we can be," he said.

The Lady Wildcats face their first competition of the season on their own court in a triangular with Dordt and Concordia Colleges on Sept. 8 at 6 p.m.

Kovar is replacing Berniece Fulton, the only varsity volleyball coach in WSC history.

NOW OVER 1,500 LOCATIONS • U.S. & CANADA

WE'LL HELP YOU LOSE THAT WEIGHT QUICKLY, SAFELY, NATURALLY!

AND WE'LL TEACH YOU HOW TO KEEP IT OFF FOR GOOD.

From size 16 to size 8 — I've lost over forty pounds on the safe nutritious Diet Center program. And now I can maintain my weight with sensible eating and the behavior modification techniques I've learned with Diet Center. The Diet Center diet is not difficult or expensive to follow. The foods on the program are all familiar foods you purchase at the grocery store and prepare yourself. The five-phase Diet Center program has been successful for millions of people across the country. National statistical averages of people who lose weight on other diets and maintain their weight loss are not encouraging (98% regain their weight and often more than they lost.) But of Diet Center dieters who follow the complete five-phase program, over 60% maintain their new weight. If you had started on the program on June 1, you might have already lost 25-50 pounds as many of the people coming to Diet Center in Wayne have. Call today for your free introductory consultation. . . It could be one of the most important calls you have ever made.

Interim division heads appointed at Wayne State

The appointments of two interim division heads at Wayne State College were officially announced by Dr. Ed Elliott, president of WSC.

Vaughn Benson has been appointed the new interim head of the business division and Dr. Robert Johnson will serve as interim humanities division head. Benson replaces Dr. Neil Swanson, who has accepted a teaching position in Arizona. Dr. Johnson takes over for Ruby Pedersen, who was recently appointed to the vice presidential post at WSC.

Dr. Johnson, a professor and communication arts at WSC, has served at the college since 1958. A native of Mt. Harris, Colo., he earned his A.B. degree from Brigham Young University in 1962.

He previously held positions as an auditor and a tax preparer. He received a certificate as a Certified Public Accountant in 1977.

Dr. Elliott said, "The position of division head at WSC is one that is responsible for the day-to-day academic leadership of all components within the division. I'm pleased that Mr. Benson and Dr. Johnson have agreed to serve in their respective capacities.

"Both men are well qualified to provide the academic leadership so important to their divisions, and both are capable administrators. Both will do their part to keep the focus of their divisions at a quality level," Dr. Elliott said.

Benson, a native of Waukegan, Ill., earned his B.S. and M.A. degrees from the University of Denver.

Prior to his arrival at WSC, Dr. Johnson taught for four years at Arlington, Va. and for three years in Aurora, Colo. At WSC, he has previously served as head of the Department of Speech and as chairman for the Department of Communication Arts, both under different academic structures.

Benson, a native of Waukegan, Ill., earned his B.S. and M.A. degrees from the University of Denver. He joined the WSC faculty on a permanent basis in 1974, and has risen to the rank of assistant professor.

Park is a great place to relax

Rolling hardwood forests, the still beauty of nature, a "mule-wide" historic river, and much more introduce you to the state's newest area for getting away to the great outdoors.

A great place to relax and unwind for a weekend or longer, the Platte River State Park (also known as the Parc de La Riviere Platte) is the sixth state park in Nebraska's chain of preserved natural areas offering a wide range of camping experiences. Surrounded by the panoramic Platte Valley, the park is located just south of Louisville on Highway 50.

With a heritage that encompasses several Indian tribes, the Spanish in search of the mythical Quivera, French explorers, and fur traders and trappers, the park's history is a colorful one. The first white explorers in the area were Pierre and Paul Mallet, who dubbed the river "Platte," meaning "shallow."

The park's French subtitle is in honor of these early trailblazers. Although development is still in progress, the park offers complete facilities and abundant recreational opportunities. Trail rides and hiking paths will take you across forested ridges, a swimming pool is open afternoons and evenings for a cool dip, and tennis, bicycling, basketball, volleyball, and softball facilities are available. You can even learn the basics of target archery or make your own souvenir at an arts and crafts center. Birdwatchers and nature lovers won't want to miss the park staff

Fishing enthusiasts will enjoy dipping a line in the Platte River for bluegill, catfish and bass, and the Jenny Newman Lake will provide action on largemouth bass, channel catfish and bluegill in 1983. Special fishing workshops will also be offered in the future. Head to the beautiful Owen Landing facility, located on the lake's eastern shore, to rent a rowboat, check out sports equipment, or enjoy the sundeck and a cool drink.

Other activities for Platte River State Park campers include sundown campfire programs at the Amphitheater on Nebraska's wildlife, parks and outdoor recreation, and buffalo stew headwinds each evening, complete with buffalo stew, old-fashioned cornbread and a sing along in a secluded woodlands hollow.

And if all these activities aren't enough, there are 40 acres of pristine woodlands, rolling hills, and lush valleys to explore to your heart's content. Cross country skiers will want to try out the hiking trails during winter months, and serious backpackers can "rough it" in the rugged Siogren wilderness area. Or consult the park's daily newsletter, "The Pathfinder," for updates on all park activities and special events or workshops.

A variety of innovative overnight accommodations are provided for park visitors, including cabins, cabin-type tents, or even authentically styled teepees. Conference facilities are also available for two-day use. There are 39 cabins available, with the "camper's cabins" between one and three bedrooms and priced at $8.10 per night, and the "housekeeping cabins" containing up to four bedrooms and priced at $20.30 per night. The camper's cabins are arranged in pods and share restrooms, shower and cleaning facilities, while the housekeeping cabins come complete with all the comforts of home.
