Down it goes

IN LESS TIME THAN IT TAKES for a good sneeze, this tree was dropped along Pearl Street in Wayne Saturday morning. Preparation for the removal of the tree began Friday afternoon when several of the lower limbs were removed and ones that may have presented some danger to neighboring buildings as it came down. On Saturday morning, after removing several wedges of wood from the trunk, and making sure the alignment was correct, an attempt was made to pull the tree down using a truck and cable. Unfortunately the cable snapped. The job was able to be completed by using a chainsaw.

School superintendents declare candidacy

Several school administrators are among the recently declared candidates for four at large positions on the Educational Service Unit One's board of directors.

A total of seven area men have filed candidacy papers with the Nebraska Secretary of State's office and their names will appear on the November general election ballot.

School administrators filing are Bob Jacobs, superintendent of schools at Verdigris; John Post, superintendent of schools at Bloomfield; Ervin DeBoer, superintendent of schools at Walthill; and Bill Tomcick, an elementary principal in the South Sioux district.

Also running for an at large position are incumbent Clair Hanson of Coleridge, Deryl Lawrence of Wayne and Marvin Borg, a Dixon County farmer.

Present board members who will not be seeking reelection in November are Bill Wiese, Kenneth Olds and Bill Norvell. It may be a bit unusual for district administrators to be seeking election to the ESU, however most of the administrators feel the board needs the added input of an administrator actually on the board, rather than simply in the capacity as an advisor. Jacobs, 38, has been superintendent at Verdigris for about 4 years. He received his bachelor's degree and master's degree from Northern State College in Aberdeen South Dakota. Jacobs completed a six year degree at the University of Nebraska Lincoln and is currently finishing up his doctorate degree from the University of South Dakota. Prior to coming to the Verdigris district, he was a principal in the Sterling school district.

Jacobs said he is running for the position because he is not satisfied with the level of special education services provided by the ESU in Knox county.

"We've ended up hiring our own psychologist, speech therapist and special education teacher," he said, "because we didn't get the level of services we wanted. I also think it's ridiculous to have the central office of the ESU in Wakefield."

Jacobs said with most of the staff living in the Wakefield and Wayne area it becomes difficult because of the driving time. He said that by the time the ESU staff arrives at Verdigris, their tired from the drive.

"I guess the bottom line is that I hope to be able to improve the services so they are more equally provided in an equitable manner throughout the counties the ESU serves."

Post, 39, returned to the Bloomfield school district as superintendent in 1980, following a year's work at the First National Bank in Lincoln.

He was originally hired as superintendent in Bloomfield in 1976. He has also been a superintendent in the Chester-Hubble school district, was a high school principal in Louisville and began his career as a teacher in the Crofton school system.

Post received his bachelor's degree from Wayne State College, his master's from the University of South Dakota and his specialist degree from the University of Nebraska Lincoln.

Post said he is interested in improving the efficiency of the services provided by the ESU. He added that another reason he was running was to make sure that the tax money received by the ESU is being spent as efficiently as possible.

DeBoer, 52, is beginning his sixth year with the Walthill school district as superintendent. He has previously worked for the Nebraska Department of Education and, for several years, was superintendent of schools in the Hamburg, Ia. school system.

For several years DeBoer was employed by the Adams County, Colo. school system in administrative positions both in the junior and senior high schools. He has also been the superintendent of schools in Valparaiso, Neb. and at Stapleton, Neb. He began his career as a teacher in the Coselle school system.

DeBoer received his doctorate, master's and bachelor's degrees from the University of Nebraska.

"I have a very strong concern about the special education program," DeBoer said. "For our size, we have a large number of special education students so I view the program as essential."

Although DeBoer said his district receives a more than adequate share of special education services, he is concerned with the "pigeon-hole" approach that is often used with special education students. "Each one is unique, each student is different, with their own personality and they don't often fit into the boxes we set up for them."

DeBoer also said he feels a superintendent's viewpoint is needed on the ESU board and said he can make a good contribution to the board. "I'd like to give it a try," he said.

Bill Tomcick, 34, is currently an elementary principal in the South Sioux district at Louis and Clark school and the Dakota city school. He is also the district's chapter I federal program director.

Tomcick, a graduate of Kearney State College where he earned his bachelor's and master's degrees, began his career as a teacher at North Platte, Neb. He spent two years in the Papillion school district and has been with the South Sioux system for six years.

He is currently completing graduate work on his specialist degree.

Tomcick said he is running for an at-large post with the ESU because he would like to be of service to the people in the area. "It's such a vast area to cover, I'd like to be of help with people and the ESU. I feel it will be a real challenge," Tomcick said.

Deryl Lawrence, 49, of Wayne is the director of logistics for Wayne State College where he received his bachelor's degree.

He began his career in the Englewood, Calif. school district where he taught, was a counselor and moved into the administrative area.

He returned to Nebraska and was the principal at Wayne-Carroll high school for several years before accepting the position as director of career planning and placement at WSC.

Lawrence said he is running for the position, "to be of service to the people the ESU serves."

As an educator, Lawrence said he would be bringing a different approach to the concerns of the ESU. "It's no a lot different from what I do everyday," he said.

He added that financing is a major concern of schools and districts now. "It's kind of tough now for the districts with rising costs, financial lids and budget constraints," he said. "I'd like to see the ESU providing the best education services possible with the money that is available."

Clair Hanson, 49, is running for his third term for an at-large position on the ESU board. A farmer for 20 years, Hanson said he is running in order to maintain some continuity on the board.

With members deciding not to run, he said it's important that he see some projects through.

"When I first came on the board, we had a budget of around one-half million dollars. Everything has been increasing over the years but we haven't been changing the unit administratively to keep up with the changes," Hanson said, adding that the old structure does not serve the increasing services and budget adequately.

The seventh candidate, Marvin Borg, was unavailable, at press time, for a review of his concerns of the ESU.

Although the question has come up concerning the legality of school administrators seeking post on an ESU board; apparently there are no restrictions on a candidate other than that they must be residents of the ESU when running for an at-large position, and a resident of the county when seeking a county ESU post.

Elections for ESU positions are held every two years with county and at-large elections alternating.

Ambulance delivered

A NEW AMBULANCE has recently been delivered to Wayne and has already made one run according to Providence Medical Center officials. The ambulance, which was purchased at a cost of about $33,700, has the emergency type box mounted on a 440 Ford chassis. The unit features several items past emergency units did not have such as larger oxygen tanks and a suction unit. The unit also has a unique air system used when driving in heavy city traffic or on dusty rural roads. With the flip of a switch, the emergency area becomes pressurized to prevent fumes and dust from entering the truck. The ambulance also has an improved electrical system and was purchased with special cots for use in the vehicle.

Wayne County residents to participate in study

Beginning next month, 60 residents of Wayne County will have a chance to participate in one of the largest epidemiologic research studies ever to be carried out in the United States.

During September, volunteers of the American Cancer Society will be contacting residents of the county to take part in Cancer Prevention Study II.

The study will be the Society's second major research endeavor to learn how lifestyle and environmental factors influence cancer and other diseases, and will involve more than one million American men and women from all racial, ethnic, and economic groups.

"With information provided by study participants in Wayne County and all over the country, we hope to identify those factors that increase a person's chance of getting cancer, those that carry little or no risk, and those that actually may help prevent cancer," said Donna Hansen, president of the Wayne County unit of the American Cancer Society.

Mrs. Hansen said results of the study will be used to develop programs to help people follow lifestyles that minimize their cancer risk.

A spokesman for the American Cancer

Society said the first Cancer Prevention Study, conducted from 1959 to 1972, was used to identify factors related to the development of cancer and other diseases.

The link between cigarette smoking and lung cancer and heart disease was an outcome of the study and helped to inflame the public health campaign against smoking.

The study also revealed the relationship of obesity to certain cancers, the profile of women at high risk for cervical cancer, and the role of exercise in preventing heart attacks and strokes.

"Cancer Prevention Study II will be even more timely and more inclusive than the first study, and will respond directly to public anxieties and frustrations about our environment — what is carcinogenic; and what is safe," said Dr. Robert V.P. Huffer, President of the American Cancer Society.

Lawrence Garlinkel, Vice President of Epidemiology and Statistics for the American Cancer Society, and Director of Cancer Prevention Study II, said "Since our first study was conducted, changes have taken place in the way we live, the food we eat, and the products we use. We're anxious to see how such changes have affected our health risks."

Study participants in Wayne County will be asked to complete a confidential questionnaire about their working, living, and eating habits.

Covered in the four-page questionnaire are such topics of concern as low-tar, low-nicotine cigarettes, birth control pills, coffee, hair dye, and saccharin.

Also to be analyzed are air and water pollution, occupational exposures, and low-level radiation.

Heading up the effort in Wayne County is chairman Mrs. Edward Grone. She will be assisted by Mrs. Nell Sandahl, Mrs. Richard Baier, Mrs. Wallace Anderson, Mrs. Glenn Granquist, Mrs. Alvin Anderson and Mrs. Darleen Dunklau.

Beginning Sept. 1, these volunteers will be contacting residents of the county and asking them to complete the detailed questionnaires.

Participants will be asked to return the questionnaires by the second week in September.

Once every other year for the next six years, these volunteers will help conduct the study, participating in the process of their status and whereabouts.

Wayne County residents who would like to take part in the study are asked to contact Grone at any of the following addresses:

To entering freshman from out of town, we'd like to offer a hearty welcome to the community and, to all freshman, a sincere wish for good luck as you begin your endeavor of further education.

Whether in college or high school, though separate problems will be encountered, the community is behind you, with people available and willing to aid you while in school.

We are a community and, as your studies allow, we hope you will take the opportunity to visit with the residents of Wayne. As your knowledge grows, allow us to help the process. We think you'll find Wayne a very stimulating community through the years as you not only grow in age and maturity, but in knowledge as well.

Energy aid

The Nebraska Municipal Power Pool has entered into an agreement with the Nebraska Energy Office to provide for a statewide Community Energy Management Program.

The goal of the program is to provide leadership and technical assistance to officials and citizens of Nebraska communities by assisting them to develop on going community-operated energy management activities to reduce consumption and costs.

The Power Pool will create and develop a minimum of 15 operating committees from among its membership. Contacts made with 10 Pool members to date has resulted in eight potential committees being formed.

Some of the committee activities may include, but will not be limited to, joint program planning with the State Energy Office; organize citizen workshops on various energy activities; develop an energy policy and management plan to address the problems identified; coordinate community efforts to implement energy conservation program measures.

ASK A LAWYER
A PUBLIC SERVICE OF THE NEBRASKA STATE BAR ASSOCIATION

Q. Our son was recently charged $217 for damage done to a tax he rented. We assumed some type of insurance was included in the price of the rental. Is our son obligated to pay the money?

A. If you are satisfied that you son was responsible for the damage and that the charge made for the damage is not unreasonable, your son is obligated to pay. However, you may want to make an inquiry with the rental agency to see whether any type of insurance was included in the rental price.

Normally a rental receipt is provided at the time the tax is paid for, and this receipt should indicate the terms and conditions of the rental agreement. If insurance is not provided for within this written agreement, there is probably no insurance coverage included.

If you have no written agreement with the rental agency, but you believe that the renting agent told you that insurance was included in the rental price and that this type of damage would be covered, you may have the basis of a claim against the agency.

Q. Eleven years ago, when my husband I got married, we moved on to some land owned by my father-in-law. He told us that the land would be ours, but he never put anything in writing and now he has apparently changed his mind. We have lived here all this time, and have made a number of improvements on the land. Is there any way we can get this land?

A. Our best advice is to see your lawyer. The law generally does not favor the enforcement of such agreements unless they are in writing. There are some instances where an oral contract to convey land may be binding on both parties, but that depends upon the terms of the contract and the extent to which those terms have been met.

If you have a legal question, write "Ask a Lawyer", P.O. Box 2579, Lincoln 68502. This column is intended to provide general legal information, not specific legal advice.

I feel like there should be some sort of melancholy song number playing in the back of my head this week about "where did the summer go" or "with the chill now here"...

Where did it go? It just seems like yesterday I was traveling across Iowa with a couple of rascal cats and fur all over me, heading for a new job. All I know is that it sure did go fast.

I'm an air conditioner nut. I like to listen to the drone of the unit as I fall asleep at night, also it muffles the sounds of traffic and horns blaring. But even I've stopped using it for sound effects since the old kitty calls have decided to try and nuzzle up to me during the night.

I know the farmers are, no doubt, mad about the cooler weather but, for the rest of us, it makes for some pretty nice days and cool evenings. I just hope, with this unexpected cooler weather, that it's not the warning herald of things to come.

In July, I put up with the heat, while I was strapped into that S. & M. collar bone harness, telling myself, "hey, would you rather have it 90 degrees below zero like in January?" With the summer drawing to a close however, visions of that sort of weather are once again on my mind. If it happens again this winter, why don't we just close up the entire Middle West and spread ourselves out in the South and Southwestern part of the country...

One good thing about it all is that it means football season is coming up. Better yet, it means that soon, Lute Olson and his fantastic five will be hitting the court for Iowa very soon.

Nebraska is ready for Iowa when the two football teams clash this season. Okay, Okay...Hayden has admitted he's lost about 15 starters from last year's team so it looks like Nebraska will have a chance this year against Iowa's big 10 team.

I'm not really a football enthusiast though. Oh sure, I keep up with the teams, drink the beer and act like a fool at the games, but I'm more into Iowa basketball. With a new sports complex being completed for Lute this year, the team should roll along pretty well.

That's about the only good thing you can say about the summer being over...basketball is not far off...jpf.

In 1967-68, only 50 percent of Nebraska-produced hogs received the top USDA grades of 1 or 2. By 1980, the figure was 96 percent.

During the period of only 12 to 13 years, the average backfat on a Nebraska hog decreased by one-fourth inch, while the length of the animal increased by one-half inch.

Similar progress has been made in producing leaner cattle. In the 1950's and 60's, a high percentage of Nebraska steers that were yield graded would rate 4's and 5's. Today, 5's are almost non-existent in Nebraska, and only 2 percent of our beef kill is rated as 4's.

Research by the university has involved breeding, feeding and the relationships between the live appearance of animals and their yield grades. The Cooperative Extension Service has taken lessons from research to individual producers through demonstrations, literature distribution and one-on-one contact.

Nebraska is on its way to becoming the nation's number one beef state and is growing in importance as a pork producer. I'll do everything I can to encourage these trends because all Nebraskans will benefit as we convert more of our grain to meat before it's shipped out our state.

To the editor: I wish to express my thanks to you and that of the staff here at the Northeast Station for your excellent coverage of our University of Nebraska 25th anniversary and Field Day.

To the editor: I feel compelled to write this letter to tell you and your readers about the tremendous success of the first annual Winside Community Theater production of "Jenny, the Mail Order Bride" last weekend. Since neither of the so-called "area" media chose to use their complimentary tickets to attend the production for the purpose of covering the event or for their own enjoyment someone must praise the cast, the crew, the directors and the entire community for their work and support.

What a great feeling of community pride to look across Winside's park and see nearly 250 persons on Friday evening and another 200 on Saturday enjoying themselves and participating in good old-fashioned fun!

Thank you to all who took time to take advantage of this opportunity to participate by attending and helping with this first-time community event. Winside community, I'm proud to be a part of you! It's just too bad the media didn't recognize the importance of this kind of good news in a small town.
