Storm damages trees, power lines

A severe winter storm swept through the area Tuesday, dumping up to 12 inches of heavy wet snow in some areas and causing numerous problems from rapidly deteriorating road conditions to power outages.

As of midday Wednesday, Wayne's city light crews were still working to restore power to part of the city. As a result of the continuing work, as of press time, light superintendent Dan Kohls was unavailable for comment on the situation.

Vern Schulz, superintendent of Wayne's street department, said his crews began work early Tuesday afternoon, clearing the main routes in town.

"According to the weather reports we knew better weather was expected on Wednesday and Thursday so we didn't do a lot of road clearing, mainly just the emergency and main routes," Schulz said.

He added that their main problem involved broken tree limbs and branches. "Yesterday (Wednesday) we'll mostly be concerned with the clean up," he said.

Law enforcement authorities report few problems as the result of the storm.

Wayne's police chief Vern Fairchild said there were a couple of minor accidents. Wayne's sheriff Scotty Thompson reported a couple cars in ditches in the county and one minor accident out near Mike Perry's Chevrolet. No traffic injuries were reported due to the storm.

With sunny skies and warmer temperatures returning to the area, it's expected road conditions will rapidly improve.

The level of damage caused to farm crops as the result of the storm as yet is unknown. However with the harvest lagging behind last year's time table, no doubt the surprise storm caused considerable damage.

THIS FELLOW DOESN'T seem to mind the surprise winter weather that hit the state on Tuesday, dumping up to 12 inches of snow in some areas, causing power outages and driving problems. With leaves still on the trees, the heavy snow caused numerous tree limbs and branches to break off during the afternoon and evening, causing clean up problems for the following day.

Orin Zach

Manager is hired

The Wayne Airport Authority has recently appointed Orin Zach as the new airport manager and fixed base operator.

Zach replaces Al Allen, who, along with his wife, resigned from the positions.

The fixed base operator position is an agreement whereby the person will operate a flight service at the airport.

Zach said he does not plan on making any changes at the airport. He will be available from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the airport.

Zach said the flight service currently has three aircraft for hire and lessons, a Cessna 150 two seater, used mostly for lessons, a Warrior four seater and Cherokee six seater.

Lessons will remain the same at $32 per hour for the airplane and $14 per hour for the instructor.

Wayne is chosen to participate in new program

After months of planning and work by the medical community and Wayne residents, a resident physician will be arriving in the city around Nov. 1 to work with Wayne's physicians and hospital.

Only recently have all the decisions been made regarding the new residency program for Wayne.

According to Dr. James Lindau, Wayne is one of four Nebraska cities that have been selected for a residency rotation program. The other cities are O'Neill, McCook and Lexington.

The residency rotation program is being offered to the communities by the University of Nebraska, both Omaha and Lincoln and Creighton University.

Previously, according to Lindau, there were three separate programs. This spring, the programs were pooled together for a more coordinated effort.

The program was set up for the specialization of family practice, an updated version of the former general practitioner specialty. There are 36 residents involved in the program.

"These people are medical doctors," Lindau said. "They have completed medical school and are licensed. If they wish, they could set up their own practice, as most do, although with a limited number of patients. The normal routine following medical school is to enter some type of residency program, specializing in some area."

Lindau said Wayne will be host to family practice residents in their second and third years of residency. The family practice residency program is a three year program.

"The idea of the program is to allow the residents a rotation period out of the urban areas," Lindau said. "The program here in Wayne is mandatory for the residents. They must rotate into Wayne or one of the other communities for two months according to the program's regulations."

There are other rotations within the program. Involving other specializations that are optional.

"When we were being considered for the program," Lindau said, "we had people writing letters and generally providing information about the community."

The costs involved with bringing residents to Wayne will be shared by Wayne's physicians and Providence Medical Center.

Lindau said, for the time being, the resident will be living in a local home while the owners are out of town.

Eventually, he said, they would like to set up some sort of permanent arrangement for a house or apartment.

"Most of the people are married," Lindau said, "and we'd like to be able to set up an apartment or small house, complete for the family to move into. This may be an area that the community can help get behind and help out with."

Lindau said he sees at least two direct benefits of Wayne being in the program. "The medical community will be gaining new input," he said. "As we show them how family practice operates in Wayne, they will be providing us with fresh perspectives and information."

Another benefit Lindau looks at is alleviating the physician shortage in the community.

With the residents so far along in the program, Lindau said many use the rotation program as a chance to see communities and possible areas where they may set up a practice following the program. With the residents working out of both Wayne's practices and the hospital, there may be some scheduling problems at first, but Lindau said he is confident they will be worked out.

What he did stress however is that the residents are doctors completing post graduate work, not interns or people who have not finished medical school. In effect, the local physicians will be volunteer faculty members.

Previously the community has hosted some medical students.

The first resident will be coming from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln with the residents following, at least until July, coming from the Omaha campus and Creighton University.

Continuing experienced leadership is the issue

Although a surprise winter storm buried much of the area under heavy snow on Tuesday and driving warnings were issued, Lt. Gov. Rolland Luedtke kept to his schedule and arrived in Wayne for an address at Wayne State College.

Due to blizzard conditions, few political supporters turned out for the speech yet Luedtke was undaunted and delivered a prepared speech and answered questions from the audience and news reporters.

Luedtke said the real issue of the campaign was between performance and promises, leadership and labels. That served as the theme for his address as time and time again he pointed out Democratic candidate Bob Kerrey's inexperience in dealing with issues that effect state government.

Luedtke said before joining government, both he and Gov. Thone had been attorneys, specializing in aiding small business.

"We know about business, how it is conducted," he said, adding that Kerrey's ten years of business experience is not an exclusive phenomenon.

"When we came in, Nebraska voters wanted a conservative government that was dollar conscience. People wanted less government, less red tape and less regulation. Charlie Thone responded with concern for the structure of government. A complete study was done with many of the recommendations implemented."

"We don't have all the answers," Luedtke admitted, "nor does the party. There are no quick fixes or miracles. Our opponent however seems to think he can spend and tax his way out of trouble. In the 30's and intervening years we've found out that it doesn't work."

"Charlie Thone did not cause all of the state's problems," Luedtke said, adding that the major cause is the national Democratic leadership who brought the nation to the brink of disaster.

Nebraska's present problem deals mainly with a cash flow situation, Luedtke said, which the legislature will have to take up during the lame duck session.

The Lieutenant Governor said the legislature will be asked to make budget cuts, probably across the board.

"We won't be second guessed," Luedtke said, "pitting agency against agency. The legislature will review every budget and asked to make across the board cuts."

For the term economy, Luedtke said one solution involves research and development.

There are federal grants that will funnel through the state into the private sector, according to Luedtke. The state is currently vying for the grants now, he said, and with the amount of laboratories across the state, Nebraska could be in the forefront of farm related research and development.

"Regarding the current state aid formula that the state supreme court has recently decided to hear arguments on, Luedtke said the administration has no particular solution.

"What we are concerned with is that everyone agrees on whatever formula is devised," he said.

"I was in the legislature when the first formula came about," he said. "Each formula has been found unconstitutional. If the legislature can agree on a formula, both urban and rural lawmakers, that is constitutional, the governor will sign it."

The administrations feeling, and Luedtke's own personal feeling about the current problems in the state with religious education is that there has been "entirely too much media attention of the problem. It's a highly emotional issue. The attention is not good either for government or religion."

"The law is the law," he said, "there's no way around it. If the legislature wants to change it, adopt some kind of immunity or exemptions and it's passed, the governor has indicated he would sign the compromise legislation."

Although many of the problems farmers and businesses face are the result of federal policies, Luedtke said state government plays an important roll by providing leadership and acting as an intermediary between the government and farmers and businesses.

State government has been criticized, he said, for officials being in Washington and abroad too much. "Charlie Thone has spent time in Washington as an elected official. He knows the ins and outs and how to get things moving when he visits as Nebraska's governor," he said.

"Something people do not understand also is that only the governor, myself or other state officials can deal with some foreign countries and markets," Luedtke said. "As in the case of Taiwan, the federal government does not recognize them so it is up to state officials to make grain and other agreements."

Part of the state leadership roll also deals with attitude, he said. Having an optimistic viewpoint about the state and the future is important.

The real campaign issues, Luedtke said, involve who is best to govern, has the confidence, experience and proven leadership. "The problems we face go back to 1932 and before. They won't go away without tough hard work," he said.

See LEADERSHIP, Page 2A

LT. GOV. ROLLAND LUEDTKE arrived in Wayne on Tuesday night in the middle of a blizzard to talk to supporters about the upcoming state elections. Luedtke stressed that the continued leadership of the Thone administration is the most important issue of the campaign, that it is necessary if the state is to weather through the rough economic times.

NPPD issues statewide warning

Three weekend fatalities in Grand Island and some "close calls" in a few other Nebraska cities have prompted the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) to issue a statewide warning on the dangers of trimming trees near electric lines.

NPPD warned Nebraskans to be extremely cautious in trimming tree limbs on their property even though it appears that the limbs may be a safe distance from electric lines. Before clearing or removing parts of trees, Nebraskans are urged to contact their nearest NPPD office or their own power supplier—if it is not NPPD—to request advice or possibly even help in trimming limbs.

NPPD has had a long standing tradition that the District will advise or even help with tree and limb removal rather than have customers face potential danger or cause costly power interruptions. Other utilities in the state have similar programs.

Three men were killed in Grand Island when a boom they were using to trim trees came in contact with a power line in Norfolk, a man escaped serious injury when a tree limb fell on an electric line causing the line to short out resulting in a ball of fire and interrupting electric service to portions of Norfolk.

Also in Norfolk, a limb trimmed from a tree fell on the electric service from the house to the power pole ripping down the line. In addition to cutting off elec-

He said he does not expect unemployment in the state to vanish immediately following the recession. "Nebraska lagged into the recession or depression and we'll have to lag out of it," he said, adding that he does not expect the unemployment problem to be cured for at least another year.

"The next four years will hold the greatest challenge state government has ever faced," he said, "involving the so called new federalism."

"Regardless who is elected on the national level, I look for the programs to be implemented. The challenge on the state level will be working with the programs and finding solutions. It's a challenge I'm looking forward to taking on," he said.

Trial coverage by the media is reviewed

By Melvin Paul

The Nebraska Press Association on November 4, Nebraska joins 38 other states who permit some sort of electronic and photographic coverage of their courts. Chief Justice Norman Krivosha recently issued detailed guidelines which permit tape recorders, television cameras and still cameras to cover court proceedings. Krivosha has allowed the photographic and electronic coverage for one year only on an experimental basis. The expanded coverage applies only to the Supreme Court, where the action is limited to attorneys and judges discussing cases which are being considered on appeal. Cameras and recorders will continue to be banned in the lower courts where trials normally involve jurors and witnesses. Both the court and the media are moving cautiously into the experiment. Krivosha's guidelines go into great detail in an effort to assure that expanded coverage remains unobtrusive and does nothing to detract from the decorum of the court.

Restrictions, for example, require that only one television camera be in the court room. Television news departments must develop a pooling arrangement among themselves to assure that footage is available to each. Last week in Lincoln, representatives of the print and broadcast media organized a coordinating committee to work out endless details of the experiment. Larry Walklin, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln journalism professor will coordinate the media coverage efforts. Advance permission for coverage must be submitted for approval of the chief justice, and Walklin will act as go-between on the requests submitted by various news organizations. Walklin will also mediate among news organizations in pooling arrangements. Walklin will head a committee which includes Don Wright of KOLN-KGIN TV of Lincoln and Grand Island; Gary Slawik of WQWT in Omaha; Ken Schrad of KLAS radio in Lincoln, and Randy Hampton, chief photographer of the Lincoln Journal-Star.

Bill Kreifel, Lincoln Journal court reporter, will prepare a critique of the early electronic and photo coverage to be shared with the media committee and the news organizations involved. Attorneys will have an opportunity to file an objection to photo and broadcast coverage if they believe expanded coverage would interfere with a fair trial. The courts would decide the merits of the objections. As the court and the media move cautiously into the experiment, both sides have expressed some serious concerns.

"Hopefully, the media will recognize the public's interest and provide an opportunity for people to hear arguments on important legislative issues and tax matters, not just sensational criminal cases," Krivosha said when he issued the coverage guidelines. Jim Fagin, news director for KLIN radio in Lincoln, said he thinks it's impossible to live up to Krivosha's hope that the experiment will result in a better educated public. "You can't do much educating when you're limited to formats (news items) of about 45 seconds," Fagin said.

Bureaucracy

This year is one of the worst that farmers have had to contend with in a long time. It began in the spring with rains delaying planting and finally, when it was completed, the rains returned, washing out acres and acres of corn, soybeans and other crops. July came and with it heavy hail damage. A cool August and September led to fears that the crops would not mature before the first killing frost. Just when farmers were preparing to bring in what crops survived, a heavy, wet snow storm hit the area, delaying the harvest further and causing untold damage to field crops. Following the damage done by July's hail storm, local and state officials surveyed the damage. The word reported by state officials was that only one out of five counties would be eligible for immediate aid, the rest would have to wait until after the harvest came in. At the rate the growing season and harvesting has progressed, there may not be a harvest if nature has its way. Farmers have been hit hard enough this year by nature without government and bureaucracy adding to the problems. Enough is enough. Locally, officials have been doing all they can. The Wayne county farm emergency board has proven their dedication to the area by their quick response to problems when they occur, through inspections and filing reports with state officials and agencies. It is at the state level where we believe the problem begins. As information progresses higher and higher up the bureaucracy level, the impact of such disasters is diminished — the human problems are lost in facts and figures. We remind currently elected officials of their mandate issued to them during the last round of elections — to cut through the red tape. Let's not lose sight of the fact that government is meant to serve the people. With this latest devastation to the farm economy, it's not a time for words and excuses, it's time for action. Farmers are known for their independence, but many need help this year through grants and loan programs. Let's get with it state officials, the ball is back in your court.

ELECTION PREVIEW

Bonding issue

EDITOR'S NOTE: Nebraskans will be voting on six issues when they go to the general election polls on November 2. So that voters can better understand these important proposals to change the state's Constitution, the Nebraska Press Association in cooperation with this newspaper has prepared a series of news reports on each of the six proposed issues. Each story in the series concentrates on a single issue, briefly defining it, explaining its purpose and finally stating the arguments for and against it. These arguments are not the actual language that will appear on the official ballot. The following is the fifth in the special public service series.

Constitutional amendment to authorize the issuance of revenue bonds for the construction of water retention or impoundment of structures for the purpose of water management and conservation.

PURPOSE: The proposed amendment would authorize the state to issue revenue bonds to finance water retention and impoundment structures, such as dams and reservoirs. The financing could be used to finance all or part of such projects. Fees levied on irrigators or other beneficiaries of the projects would be used to retire the bonds. Issuance of the bonds would be subject to the approval of three-fifths of the Legislature.

SUPPORT: As the federal government retrenches from its financing of water development projects, advocates of such projects are turning to other sources to provide funding. Millions of acre feet of water run out of the state each year, and impoundments are needed to provide water for irrigation and recharge of aquifers, amendment supporters say. Authority to issue bonds would permit an additional financing tool for construction of irrigation, recreation and flood control projects. To date, the state financial commitment to financing water impoundments has been modest. Since 1975, the state has spent $11 million through its Resources Development Fund. The economic development of the state, through a productive agricultural sector, depends on a larger commitment of funds for water development, supporters argue. Because user fees would be insufficient to finance the full cost of a major project, supporters say the bonds authorized by the amendment would most likely be used to supplement other funding sources. OPPOSITION: Opposition to the amendment is based on environmental and fiscal arguments. If the amendment spurs widespread water development, the projects built with funding from the bonds would divert water from rivers that is needed for recreation, fish and wildlife, opponents say. Fiscally, the amendment represents another exception to the pay-as-you-go philosophy of the Nebraska Constitution, the opponents argue.

Open house at the beautiful new Wayne High School will be held Sunday, Oct. 22, from 2 to 5 p.m.

10 YEARS AGO
October 19, 1972: Members of the Wakefield City Budget committee are making plans for their 23rd annual Pancake Day to be held election day, Nov. 7. Wayne County Commissioners met with two nuns, representing the Benedictine Sisters of Norfolk; members of the Hospital Foundation; Pat Gross, representing the City Council, and Charles Thomas, Wayne Hospital administrator, Tuesday and granted the extension of the present ambulance agreement for another year. Mary E. Woehler, Wayne, was treated and released from the Wayne Hospital Saturday following a three-car collision on Fourth and Main about 9:45 a.m. No one else was injured.

Different methods urged

BY M.M. VAN KIRK
NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU

Government farm program acreage set aside and diversion programs aimed primarily at reducing production of wheat and feed grain surpluses and thus improving the prices farmers receive for their products, offer an opportunity for farmers to do a better job of soil and water conservation. The horrendous soil erosion that accompanied the heavy downpours and excessive runoff in nearly all areas of the state this year demonstrated what most farmers and conservationists recognize and that is that current agricultural practices are inadequate to both short-term and long-term soil and water conservation needs. When the big rains came, destruction was greatest where farmers had used their big equipment to till and plant the easiest way, farming straight up and down the hills and over the terraces which had been installed a generation ago by those who took conservation more seriously. Bernard Den Ouden of the University of Hartford who has served as a consultant in land use and related agricultural issues for the U.S. government, for the European Common Market and for West Germany, Holland and England, recently warned that if the United States doesn't change its short-term land use philosophy, it may end up having to import a large share of its food in 40 to 50 years. Den Ouden explains that one of the major problems in land use in the world, not just in the U.S., is that the sciences do not adequately take into account the long-term effects of soil use, crop patterns and use of fertilizers. He declares that Americans have bought into a short-term view of "casualty" in which they strive to get X to cause Y and produce bumper crops, but they fail to see what is happening to the soil and to farmland. He says the view pervades our politics, business and the way we think of ourselves. He believes that creativity is as essential to the logic of our ecosystem as it is to philosophy, and that by growing only one crop on a piece of land and relying strictly on technology and commercial fertilizers and pesticides, farmers harm the soil. He contends that now is the time, in the midst of great food surpluses in this country, to put 10 to 15 percent of every farm into crops that renew the soil. He says that farmers, instead of letting the land lie idle, must be encouraged to replenish the soil. He notes that Europeans have been farming their land for thousands of years, doing an exceptional job of preserving and restoring their cropland and keeping sizeable amounts in grazing land to preserve it for future production when it is needed. One may not agree with all of Den Ouden's conclusions but they certainly coincide with the thinking of many good farmers who are conserving their soil and water through crop rotation, minimum tillage practices, maximum use of crop residues and manure, use of efficient irrigation techniques, etc. Participation in the 1983 feed grains program carries with it a requirement that producers devote to conservation uses an acreage equal to both the acreage reduction and land diversion requirements. Land diverted for permanent conservation practices will be eligible for cost-sharing payments through the USDA's agricultural conservation program. The Soil Bank program of the late 1950s and early 1960s did not have great support from the nation's farmers and was much criticized, but in retrospect it had a basis in sound conservation concepts and it encouraged farmers and ranchers to put under conserving practices a great deal of marginal land which should never have been cropped in the first place. Farmers would be helping themselves if they would enter enthusiastically, not grudgingly, into new opportunities to institute proven soil and water programs on their farms at a time when neither the nation nor world markets can absorb the huge production totals that are being turned out, some of which are on an impractical land exploitation basis.

Good decision

I am very pleased by the Administration's decision to allow the Soviets to purchase up to 23 million metric tons of grain and to provide supply assurances that the full amount will be available for up to 180 days. This decision is a direct response to a September 21 meeting that a dozen other Republican members of Congress and I had at the White House with presidential advisory James Baker, Office of Management and Budget director David Stockman, and agriculture secretary John Block. At that meeting, we emphasized that America's share of world grain exports is slipping and the country's share of total Soviet imports has dropped drastically because of our reputation as a politically unreliable grain supplier. We then followed up by directly asking the President to send a clear signal to our trading partners that we will honor our contracts and the President is now doing what we asked him to do. He is guaranteeing for a given period of time that we will deliver the grain. While this is not going to have a dramatic immediate affect on grain prices because of the large surpluses now on hand, it does restore this country's reputation as a grain supplier which was damaged so badly by the 1980 Carter grain embargo.

Fairbanks-Anderson say vows in Norfolk ceremony

Making their home in Norfolk are Mr. and Mrs. Rick Anderson, who were united in marriage Oct. 8 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Norfolk.

The Rev. Damian Zuerlein of Norfolk officiated at the 6:30 p.m. double ring ceremony.

The bride, the former Carol Fairbanks, is the daughter of Lowell and Mary Fairbanks of Norfolk. Parents of the bridegroom are Orville and Arlein Anderson of Hoskins.

Soloist was Kelly Olson and organist was Kurt Bomar, both of Norfolk.

Julie Fairbanks of Denver, Colo. registered the guests, who were ushered into the church by Bob Fairbanks of Logan, Utah, Larry Anderson of Hoskins, and Doug Prauner of Battle Creek.

The long, full sleeves were gathered at the wrists with wide cuffs finished with bias cut ruffie. The Chantilly lace bodice was attached to the skirt by an empire waistline.

The semi-full skirt, which fell to a chapel-length train, was designed in a layered effect created with Chantilly lace outlined by wide lace trim.

Her attendants were gowned in the orchid lusterlorg and satiny Chantilly dresses designed with high necklines of wide lace.

The sheer off-the-shoulder V-yokes were of point d'esprit and outlined by a wide flounce of lace over the bodice. The full, accordion pleated skirts fell from raised waistlines.

The men in the wedding party were attired in silver gray tuxedos.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Norfolk. Hosts were Dave and Linda Papslein and Jim and Elaine Fairbanks, all of Norfolk.

The cake, baked by the bridegroom's sister, Rhonda Kittle of Winside, was cut and served by Mrs. Kittle and by Mrs. Lee Pettitt of Norfolk.

Gloria Schaefer of Columbus poured, and Wilma Haterland of Columbus served punch.

Waitresses were Jodi Fairbanks and Linda Pettitt, both of Norfolk.

Ft. Hays hands WSC Wildcats their fifth setback 17-6

By Kent Probst
Wayne State SID

The struggling Wayne State offense was for the second week in a row unable to come up with a score as Ft. Hays State posted a 17-6 Central States Intercollegiate Conference win in Hays, Kan. last Saturday.

Wayne State returns home this Saturday for a 7:30 p.m. conference tilt with Washburn. The Ichabods are 0-4 after a 38-14 loss to nationally-rated Pittsburg State, who the Wildcats host in two weeks.

The Cats were unable to move the ball with any consistency against a fired-up Ft. Hays, which posted its first-ever victory over Wayne State. Wayne managed just 128 yards on the day and was unable to drive for more than one first down in any series until the final moments of the game.

A banged-up Wayne State defense performed well despite being on the field most of the day. The WSC defenders picked off four Ft. Hays passes including one for a 30-yard return by safety Ken Kohlhof for the touchdown.

Wildcat quarterback Mike Warren and Ed Jochum had a frustrating day, combining for just seven completions in 26 tries for 85 yards. The ground game fared even worse, netting 43 yards on 34 carries.

Tiger punt returner James Davis played a big part in Ft. Hays' two first-half scores. Midway through the first quarter he fielded a low Joe Walter punt at his own 47 and ran it back 22 yards to the WSC 31.

Aided by a pass interference call and an offsides penalty against the Cats, both of which produced Hays first downs, the Tigers took the ball in for the score. Tony Workman grabbed an 11-yard pass from Mike Moore for the touchdown, and Mike Ellsworth kicked the extra point for a 7-0 Ft. Hays lead.

Early in the second quarter, Kohlhof stepped in front of a Moore pass for an interception that he hooped 30 yards with to the endzone. The extra point kick failed as the Tigers held their lead.

Davis returned another low Wayne State punt 27 yards to the Wildcat 23. Hays drove as deep as the Wayne State six yard line before opting for a 25-yard Ellsworth field goal that carried them to a 10-6 halftime lead.

The third period was a defensive struggle though a bad snap on a Hays punt resulted in a one-yard kick that gave Wayne State the ball on their own 42. An interception of a Jochum pass on second down killed that opportunity. Wayne State's deepest penetration in the second half was the Tiger 39, also following a short Hays punt.

Early in the final period, Moore guided the Tigers to an insurance touchdown as he completed three of four passes on a 65 yard drive. Fullback Chris Honas burst 34 yards up the middle for the touchdown, and Ellsworth kicked the PAT for the final point of the day.

Warren accounted for the most yards offensively for the Cats, hitting five of 17 passes with one picked off for 76 yards. Jochum, who has been impressive coming off the bench the previous two weeks, completed two of nine with one interception for just nine yards.

Randy Frink led the ballcarriers with 27 yards. Tom Wingert caught three passes for 34 yards for tops in that category.

Linebacker Ron Gilbert paced the defense with 14 tackles including a quarterback sack, and an interception. Kohlhof had seven tackles and his interception return for a touchdown.

End Rick Johnson came off the bench to notch eight tackles including a sack. Tackle Mark Walker had eight tackles as well.

Safety Jay Sandy had seven stops and an interception. Cornerback Gail Nichols also had an interception in his most extensive action to date.

Wayne State hopes to drop Washburn into CSIC cellar

The Wayne State Wildcat football team will battle with the Ichabods of Washburn University in a night game set for this Saturday, Oct. 23 in Wayne.

It will be the first night game of the season for the Wildcats in Memorial Stadium. Kickoff time is set for 7:30 p.m.

Washburn will come into the match-up with an 9-6 record, including a 38-14 loss at the hands of Central States Intercollegiate Conference co-leader Pittsburg State last Saturday. The Ichabods opened their season with a 14-3 loss to Morningside College, followed by losses to Benedictine 24-10, Missouri Valley 14-6, Missouri Southern 20-0 and Emporia State 20-13.

Washburn quarterback Jeff Leiker has completed 25 of 71 passes with six interceptions for 314 yards and one touchdown. His top receiver, Aron Fass, has caught 10 passes for 124 yards. Wide receiver Steve Hardesty is second with seven catches for 81 yards.

On the ground for Washburn, running back Ron Davis has 71 carries for 296 yards and three touchdowns, averaging just over four yards per rush. Fullback Wes Warrick rushed 40 times for 157 yards and one touchdown.

"Washburn hasn't gotten the breaks this season and their mistakes have hurt us here, just as our mistakes have hurt us here at Wayne State," said Wildcat head Coach Del Stoltenberg. "They are a better team than their record indicates, with all of their games being reasonably close. We all feel that this is a game we can win."

Wayne State will be coming off a 17-6 loss to Fort Hays State which dropped their record to 4-5 on the season, 0-3 in the CSIC.

On the defensive side in the game against Fort Hays, junior defensive back Ken Kohlhof led the way with seven tackles, two batted passes and a 30-yard return of an intercepted pass for WSC's only score of the day. Linebacker Ron Gilbert totaled 14 tackles with one quarterback sack and an interception pass.

The injury situation is causing a problem on defense for the Wildcat coaching staff. Defensive tackle Steve Hawkins, freshman middle guard Jeff Borer and junior offensive tackle Paul Zelinsky all are nursing sprained ankles but are expected to play Saturday.

Defensive end Kevin McArdle suffered a bruised foot in the game against the Tigers, but should see action Saturday, as well defensive back Kurt Brosamle who is hampered by water on the knee.

Linebacker Steve Besch is questionable for Saturday's game with a knee injury. Kirk Schroeder, defensive end, will probably sit out with a shoulder separation, and defensive end Jay Fink is sidelined for the season with a spinal neck injury.

For the second consecutive year, the Wayne State junior varsity football team notched a victory over Kearney State. The Wildcats thumped Kearney 31-8 Monday afternoon at the Columbus Lakeview football field.

WSC scored two touchdowns in the first quarter and three in the fourth. Kearney scored a safety in the second period and a touchdown in the fourth.

The Wildcats gained 170 yards passing and 180 yards rushing while holding Kearney to a total of 119 yards. The Antelopes managed only 14 yards rushing in 29 carries but were held to a negative 12 yards in the first half.

Bob Norris carried the ball 13 times for 84 yards and Kent Floro carried 9 times for 80 yards.

Quarterbacks Terry Graver and Ed Jochum put the ball in the air 24 times. Graver completed 7 of 15 passes for 103 yards and Jochum hit 5 of 9 for 69 yards.

Leading receiver was Tod Heier with seven receptions for 124 yards and two touchdowns. Heier scored the game's first TD on a 10-yard pass from Graver.

The second TD was scored by Don Oakerson on a six yard run. Carlos Lagunilla kicked the point after for a 13-0 lead.

The Cats lead 13-2 going into the fourth quarter but added three more touchdowns. Scott Wilson recovered a Bob Norris fumble in the endzone for a TD. Heier caught a 35 yard pass from Jochum and Floro scampered 54

Wayne downed in meet

The third meeting between Wayne and Hartington CC went in the Trojans' favor 15-9, 15-6 Monday in first round action of the West Husker Conference tournament at Hartington.

Each team had won one match in previous meetings between the two schools. The loss Monday dropped the Blue Devils into consolation play against West Point CC, a loser to Wisner Pilger in the other first round match. Tamie Murray led Wayne with six service points and Deb Prenger had eight spikes for five aces.

The Blue Devils earned a narrow two-set victory over Pierce last Thursday 16-14, 16-14.

Tamie Murray scored nine points and made 35 good sets. At the net, Deb Prenger hit 16 spikes and had five aces and Missy Stollenberg made 13 spikes with four aces.

Wayne rallied to win the junior varsity match 11-15, 15-11, 15-8. Karen Longe led the winners with eight points and Fran Gross had five spikes with two going for aces. Pierce won the freshman contest 15-11, 15-9. Lesa McDermott topped Wayne's scoring with six points.

Randy's Recap

By Randy Hascall

WSC plans night game
Wayne State College picked a good weekend to have a night game. This Saturday's home football game with Washburn University has been scheduled for a 7:30 kickoff.

Kickoff was changed to 7:30 mainly because fall break hits the college this weekend. Classes were not scheduled Thursday or Friday.

WSC students are known as sulcasters and nearly all of them will be packing their bags for the long weekend. That's bound to take a big slice out of the expected crowd.

Many Wayne businesses are open on Saturdays and that prevents some businessmen and shoppers from attending the WSC game. In addition, the Wildcats' game usually coincide with Nebraska Cornhusker games. It's not easy when you're competing with the Big Red for fan support.

This week the Huskers are receiving regional television coverage which will put fans in front of their TV sets. Entering this game, Wayne State is 1-5 and Washburn is 0-6. Their records will also detract from some fan support.

In past football seasons, Wayne State has had to play night games against Washburn at Topeka. That had nothing to do with this year's change in schedule but now the coaches will find out what it is like to leave town early, travel hundreds of miles for a night game and then pack up and head back home after the contest.

Now, let's hope the weather is decent.

Glass girl wins gold
Diane Glass, a native of Wayne, is putting her name in a track and field record book. Now a senior at the Nebraska School for the Visually Handicapped, Diane broke four records last weekend at the North Central Association of Schools for the Visually Impaired regional track meet in Indianapolis. She won four gold medals by breaking records in the 600-meter run, the high jump, the 1,500-meter run and the three consecutive jumps event. Her time in the 600 was 2:15.20, she cleared 4-4 in the high jump, she ran the 1,500 in 5:54 and her "triple jump" mark was 6.52 meters.

Diane is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verlin Glass of Wayne. Athletes from Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Kansas, Illinois, Wisconsin and Nebraska competed in the meet.

Wakefield grad has good day
Von Porlwood, a graduate of Wakefield High School and quarterback for Concordia College of Seward, had a fine day for the Concordia football team Saturday.

Porlwood completed 13 passes in 20 attempts for 169 yards and three touchdowns. His TD passes covered 64 yards, 13 yards and six yards. He led his team to victory over Nebraska Wesleyan.

Trojan playoff hopes dimmer
A loss to Osmond last week didn't hurt Wakefield's number seven football rating but did dim the Trojans' hopes of a playoff berth in the Class C-2 playoffs.

Undeafed Humphrey St. Francis leads the C-2 district 2 with a point total of 49.8—well above any other team in the state. Wakefield now has a total of 41.5. Although it's virtually impossible for the Trojans to win their district over St. Francis, a wildcard berth is possible.

Eight teams currently have point totals higher than Wakefield's but at least two teams must lose if the Trojans are going to catch up and make the playoffs. Chances are bleak.

Weather hinders season
What a crazy fall sports season this has been!

Earlier this season, several football games in The Wayne Herald coverage area were postponed because of rain and now volleyball matches have been called because of snow.

This is the time of year when athletic contests aren't supposed to be called off. Summer rains are expected to cause postponement of baseball and softball games and snowstorms will often cause postponement of basketball and wrestling. But in late summer and autumn, the weather isn't supposed to bother activities.

Another scholarship to Sweden

Fifteen College of Agriculture students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln have been awarded $5,257 in scholarship money for the 1982-83 academic year. A $1,000 Timothy G. Hornung Scholarship was awarded to Lon K. Swanson, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Swanson of Wayne. Swanson is a junior majoring in ag economics and animal science. He is a member of the Phi Eta Sigma and Alpha Lambda Delta freshman honoraries, the Block and Bridle Club, the Ag Economics-Agriculture Club and the Alpha Zeta agricultural honorary. He has previously received the Daniel S. Bestor and the Charles Stuart Memorial scholarships.

Tree orders being accepted

The Nebraska Forest Service will begin taking orders Nov. 1 for the 1983 tree planting season, according to William Lovett, University of Nebraska associate forester. Although the total inventory is down slightly from last year, more than 3 million tree and shrub seedlings will be available under the Clarke-McNary tree distribution program, Lovett said. Selections can be made from 25 species, including seven evergreen trees and 10 deciduous trees. In 1982, more than 2 million tree and shrub seedlings were distributed to Nebraska landowners through the program, Lovett said. In addition, an AGNET computer program called TREESALES was established for ordering purposes. According to Lovett, this program was a help with inventory because "it makes sure the people get the trees they need." He added that he hopes more people will use this program when ordering their seedlings this year. Orders can be placed at Cooperative Extension Service, Soil Conservation Service or Natural Resources District offices around the state. The cost is $24.75 per hundred seedlings, including sales tax. Handling and postage charges will be $3.91, Lovett said.

Farmer Appreciation Banquet

The annual Farmer Appreciation Banquet has been scheduled for Nov. 3. Guest speaker is Dick Kimbrough, director of communication at Doane College, Crete. Glen Ellingson will be master of ceremonies. Two social hours are planned for 6 p.m. Cocktails will be served at the Fire Hall and coffee and pop will be available in the Birch Room of the Student Union, WSC. The buffet dinner is at 7 p.m. in the south dining room. Tickets will be available to the farmers until Nov. 11.

Mastitis program shows savings

The second year of a statewide mastitis control program has shown an annual saving of $156 per animal in the 32 herds tested, according to University of Nebraska extension dairy specialist Don Kubik, of the NU Northeast Station in Concord. An interdisciplinary team of NU extension specialists initiated the three-year effort to combat the extensive mastitis problems found in many dairy herds. Since May, 1980, the mastitis control demonstration herds have increased milk production by 1,191 pounds and the milk fat production by 47 pounds per cow, Kubik stated. Reports show that the herd reduced the somatic cell counts - an indicator of mastitis - more than 40 percent and reduced the incidence of infected quarters (of the udder) by more than 33 percent. Kubik said that an expanded program for dairy producers has been developed. They can obtain the services on a user fee basis of an NU extension assistant trained by the mastitis team in helping to control the problem in their respective herds.

Reserve rotation provisions

The U.S. Department amended regulations governing the farmer owned grain reserve to allow farmers to remove corn or sorghum from the reserve if the grain is in danger of going out of condition and if that grain is replaced within 15 days. The new rotation provisions - which apply only to farmers who enter into a new grain reserve agreement - allow farmers to replace reserve corn or sorghum with grain the farmer has on hand, grain bought by the farmer or grain from the farmer's new crop. Details of the new provisions are scheduled to appear in the Oct. 8 Federal Register. Comments may be sent to director, cotton, grain and rice price support division, USDA-ASCS, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013. All comments will be available for public inspection in room 3627 of USDA's South building during normal business hours.

Allen FFA students win ribbons

Eight FFA members of Allen High School attended the district dairy competition held Tuesday at Blair. Mitch Pettit, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Pettit was awarded the top purple ribbon and trophy in the junior division. In the senior division, Mike Hingst and Kevin Chase each received a blue ribbon. The junior and senior teams both received blue ribbons. Others who participated were Derwin Roberts, Rick Boyle, Brian Hansen, Kevin Malcom and Roger Clough. Torne Wilmes is instructor of the FFA class.

Power lines pose hazard

One Nebraskan has died so far this year from electrocution on the farm, compared to five such deaths last year. This year's death resulted from an improperly wired electrical system. Power lines pose the greatest danger of electrocution to farmers and ranchers, according to Rollin D. Schnieder, extension safety specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. And using a bit of common sense when working around them can prevent such tragedies, Schnieder said. One of the typical mishaps involving farmers and ranchers is bringing tall equipment in contact with power lines, he said. Hoisting irrigation pipe to remove objects plugging it can cause this contact, and fall is a common reason for this type of accident when farmers are taking pipe from fields for storage. Center pivot irrigation systems have accounted for four deaths since 1978. The accidents happened when pipe came in contact with a power line and a tree. Raising an elevator around lines on a windy day also poses risks, he said and can injure or kill more than one person. It takes several people to put one up, he explained. One gust of wind, or uneven terrain, might tip the elevator into a power line and electrocute all touching it.

Pork Producers banquet set

The annual Wayne County Pork Producers awards banquet is scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 24 at the Wayne State College Student Union. Tickets are available at First National Bank and First National Bank in Wayne. Tickets may also be purchased at the door, but the pork directors would appreciate advance sales if possible. Banquet will be Ed Nelson, farm director of WKAS-radio out of Yorkston. A Wayne County Pork Producers queen will be crowned after the meeting.

Pork queen contest is scheduled Sunday

Eight candidates will seek the title of Wayne County Pork Producers queen for 1983 at a contest planned at 1:30 p.m. Sunday (Oct. 24). The contest will be held in the Plains Room of the Wayne State College Student Union. The queen will be crowned Saturday night following a Pork Producers banquet. Each contestant will receive a sterling silver pig charm and flowers and will be a guest of honor at the evening banquet.

The person who is selected queen will receive a crown, $50 in cash and the chance to compete in the state contest. First and second runners-up will be awarded $25 in cash.

All contestants had to be single and 16 through 19 years of age. Each girl must reside on a farm in Wayne County on which pork is raised or have parents who are now actively engaged in pork production.

Judging will be based on the following criteria: 25 points on beauty, neatness and personality, 25 points on an oral essay contest, 25 points on interviews and 25 points on presentation and poise.

Contestants are Tena Bargholz, Trudy Hansen, LeAnn Janke, Yvonne Johnson, Deb Luft, Susie Petersen, Karen Reeg, Cheryl Sukup.

Tena Bargholz, the 17 year-old daughter of Elmer and Mylet Bargholz of rural Carroll, is a senior at Wayne-Carroll High School.

Trudy Hansen, 18 year-old daughter of Robert and Elaine Hansen of rural Wakefield, is in her first year at Northeast Technical School of Norfolk where she is studying to be a secretary.

LeAnn Janke, 16 year-old daughter of Byron and Pat Janke of rural Carroll, is a junior at Wayne-Carroll High School.

Yvonne Johnson, 19 year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Johnson of rural Hoskins, plans to graduate in June as a registered nurse.

Deb Luft, the 16 year-old daughter of Roger and Sandra Luft of rural Wakefield, is a junior at Wayne-Carroll High School.

Susie Petersen, 16 year-old daughter of Mrs. Kathryn Petersen of rural Carroll is a junior at Winside High School.

Vegetable oil keeps the dust down

American soybean farmers want to keep grain dust where it belongs - on the grain. A new procedure using soybean oil could prevent elevator explosions, save lives and boost soybean prices for farmers.

Grain dust - both airborne and accumulated on floors and other surfaces - has the potential to cause explosions and deterioration of air quality in grain elevators. Each year the nation's 15,000 grain elevators spend thousands of dollars to control dust. Most elevators use mechanical collection and manual cleaning systems.

Recent studies show there is another way. Spraying grain with a small quantity of edible oil prevents formation of dust in the first place. Tests conducted by Fang S. Lai, a researcher at the U.S. Grain Marketing Research Laboratory in Manhattan, Kan., show that a light mineral or soybean oil spray - 0.06 percent based on weight of grain - effectively reduces the dustiness of corn and wheat. Lai found no adverse effects on the milling and bread making properties of the wheat, and no spoilage after one year of storage.

"This is good to soybean farmers," says B.B. Sprattling Jr., a soybean farmer from Roba, Ala., and president of the

Specialist's tips

Residues reduce tillage

Fall tillage operations should leave at least 50 percent of the soil surface covered with this year's crop residues in order to adequately control water erosion next spring, according to a University of Nebraska extension agricultural engineer.

"The most important factor of any fall tillage is to leave all the residue you can on the soil surface," said NU's Elbert Dickey. "Crop residues reduce erosion in spring by shielding the soil from driving rainfall that would otherwise dislodge soil particles and carry them away in runoff."

Residues also aid in controlling wind erosion, Dickey said.

The 50 percent cover guideline applies to corn, sorghum and most other Nebraska crops including soybeans, Dickey said. "However, soybean residues are easily destroyed by any tillage. They should be left undisturbed until next spring and preferably not tilled at all," he recommended.

The 50 percent cover of corn, sorghum or other crop residues will be reduced to about 40 percent by spring because of weathering, Dickey said. This is enough residue to permit a light disking or chiseling and still leave 20 percent of the soil covered, he said.

Several studies by the NU Agricultural Experiment Station and the Nebraska Water Resources Center have shown that a 20 percent cover of residues on the soil surface reduces erosion by 50 percent of transported from the ground level to the top of elevator silos, and you have all the ingredients of an elevator explosion.

In the past 20 years, more than 400 grain elevator explosions in the United States have resulted in nearly 200 deaths and millions of dollars in damages. Last year alone 21 elevator explosions were reported to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. They resulted in 13 deaths and 62 injuries.

A panel of scientists organized by the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) recommended dust removal as the most important and easiest means of reducing the risk of elevator explosions. However, nobody likes housekeeping, not even elevator workers. In its report the panel said that "housekeeping and maintenance often are given very low priority and usually are the first tasks postponed when there is a rush of business."

According to NAS panel member George Hubbard, the panel felt oil treated grain would not be acceptable to the grain trade. The biggest hurdle to overcome is to find out if oil would significantly reduce the chance of an explosion, says Hubbard, who is commodity marketing division vice president with Cargill Inc. Of course such a system would have to be cost effective, he says.

Dust collection systems, Lai says, merely suspend an explosive mix of dust and oxygen. Combine that with an ignition source, such as an overheated motor or a fire, and a confined space, such as the elevator legs through which grain is before it would be widely adopted.

The Brownsville Public Grain Elevator in Brownsville, Texas, has experimented with the use of mineral oil for dust suppression. Elevator manager George Nicol was very pleased with oil's effectiveness in reducing dust.

"If it was our own grain, we'd be using it now," Nicol says. "I don't see how dust suspended in air in a collection system can prevent explosions. If it just provides a false sense of security."

Nicol referred to the Corpus Christi Public Elevator, which followed all recommended dust control procedures and was considered by those in the industry to be a clean operation. An explosion there last April killed nine people.

"How costly is safety?" Nicol asked. "Spraying oil is cost effective in our application. We don't have a full dust collection system, but I think suppressing is better than collecting. You're faced with the cost of collection, and then what do you do with the dust?"

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) currently approves only the use of white mineral oil as an additive to wheat for dust control. Some grain industry officials express concern about vegetable oil's stability for use as an additive.

Although Lai has found no spoilage problems so far in his tests, another option is to use soybean lecithin.

"Lecithin is more stable in the presence of oxygen and should overcome any fear of rancidity," says David Erickson, ASA's director of soy oil programs.

Another possible benefit from using vegetable oil is the control of weevils and other insects found in a grain elevator. Vegetable oil could reduce an elevator's dependence on costly chemical insecticides, explains Erickson, noting that USDA researchers found that weevils died within a day when confined with wheat faced with soybean oil.

TILLING SOYBEAN FIELDS

Some farmers till soybeans in the field after harvest. Soybeans, when compared to corn and small grains make fields more susceptible to wind and water erosion.

Information from Minnesota proves the point. On the average, one ton of plant matter remains on the soil surface for each 40/acre of soybeans produced. By comparison, 120 bushel corn leaves three tons of residue and 80 bushel small grain produces 4 tons of crop residue per acre.

The one ton of soybean residue covers 60 percent of the soil surface. After corn harvest, the residue covers 85 to 95 percent of the soil surface.

One pass of a tandem disk reduces soil cover by soybean residue to 20 percent. The reduction is much less with corn and small grain residue. Therefore, fall tillage of soybean fields is certainly not a recommended practice in northeast Nebraska.

WATCH CATTLE IN SOYBEAN FIELDS AFTER HARVEST

Severe digestive disturbances in cattle and sheep grazing harvested soybean fields have occurred in previous years and may occur again.

Some fields with an abundance of loose beans give cattle and sheep the opportunity to pick up large quantities. The beans are wet and when eaten in large amounts cause poisoning. Some animals die suddenly while others are ill for longer periods of time.

Swine, if possible, should be allowed to graze bean fields before turning in cattle. Turning in animals for a short period of time or until excess beans are grazed may be one method of control. But this method requires constant supervision.

USING SORGHUM-SUDAN AFTER FROST

Sorghum sudan should be harvested for hay as soon after killing frost as possible. Dry matter yield is at a maximum then. Forage quality can decline rapidly after frost, especially if weathering is serious. Soluble nutrients, such as sugars, some proteins, potassium, and vitamin A are lost most readily.

When cutting for hay, use a hay conditioner to crush stems for more rapid drying. Several sunny, breezy days will be needed before hay is properly cured for baling.

Do not green chop or graze sorghum sudan for two days after frost. Large amounts of prussic acid can be released for ruptured plant cells at this time. After two days, feeding of sorghum sudan can resume. After frost pay close attention to small shoots which may regrow at the base of the plants. They can be very toxic because prussic acid content is often high and livestock prefer to graze this type of growth. If many shoots are present and/or livestock are grazing them, remove cattle immediately.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT FOR FAMILY FARM

There is a lot of interest in Initiative 300—the proposed constitutional amendment which would ban corporations other than family farm corporations from purchasing Nebraska farm and ranch land. This constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot in November.

Any proposal has two sides to it and I would like to suggest some of the arguments being advanced by proponents and opponents of this proposed amendment.

PROponents SAY

- Family farms provide economic and social benefits to society.
- Eight other states, most of which are in this region of the country, already have laws to protect family farms.
- This issue has been before the Legislature many times, but with no positive results. Supporters have concluded that the only way to accomplish the desired result is through a constitutional amendment.
- Corporations do not die in the same sense people do. Therefore, concentration of land ownership could grow over a long period of time.

OPponents SAY

- The constitution ought to be a "political document", not an "economic document" that attempts to regulate the activities of buyers and sellers.
- Other states have not altered their constitutions when dealing with this issue. Instead, it's been done by statute. The latter would be much easier to amend than the constitution.
- The proposed amendment would restrict the number of buyers for those wishing to sell farm real estate.
- The proposal may violate the Equal Protection Clause of the U.S. Constitution.
- Technical flaws in the amendment could result in several years of litigation.
- I'm sure there are other arguments both for and against this amendment. But it's important that voters weigh both sides of this question and then vote accordingly Nov. 2.

Conference at Wisner

Keeping a family strong and healthy in today's world is no easy task. But there's help. The public is invited to attend an all day conference titled "Meeting Today's Challenges Together" to be held at the Wisner Pilger High School auditorium Saturday.

There is something for everyone at this conference. And that means men too. Husbands and fathers especially would benefit from attending this conference either with their spouse or alone," said Debra Schroeder, extension agent in home economics and conference co-sponsor.

Experts locally and from Omaha and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln will lead sessions addressing all aspects of family living. Topics include parenting skills from infants to adolescents to grandchildren, stress and rural farm families, dealing with losses, increasing communication techniques and listening skills, evaluating preschools and the crisis of divorce.

The opening address at 9 a.m. will be given by Assistant professor Lee Kimmons of the NU Department of Human Development and the Family on "The Importance of Strong Families".

The luncheon speaker will be Marie Huck, talking on "Looking on the Bright Side". Mrs. Huck, the mother of seven children and 12 grandchildren, writes a weekly column called "The Family Album" which appears in the Norfolk Daily News.

The conference is sponsored by the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service and is coordinated by Jadene Jurgling, extension agent in home economics in Dodge County and Ms. Schroeder in Cuming County. Contact the Cooperative Extension Service office for conference programs. Preregistration is requested by October 22.

The $8 conference fee will include a noon lunch, refreshment breaks and conference expenses.

Respiratory masks offer help

Farmers are becoming increasingly aware of respiratory hazards when moving grain, and immature, high moisture grain coming in this fall is likely to increase this danger to human health.

That's the word from University of Nebraska extension safety specialist Rollin D. Schnieder, who says that grain ranges from very clean to some in such moldy condition that kernels on top are sprouting.

"Even apparently clean grain has caused some respiratory problems with persons working in bins without any type of protection," Schnieder noted. If the grain in the storage area is short and grain dust not too evident, a person can get by with a simple dust mask, he said. But under severe conditions, he advised using a cartridge type mask and dust mask in combination.

A simple dust mask may be as low as 25 cents, with the cartridge type mask running from $15 to $20. Cartridges are made for different purposes, and the one to select for grain handling is organic gases, Schnieder said.

"We do not know all the answers on gases released from a grain pile," Schnieder conceded. However, it is known that grain in a closed bin can undergo changes if moisture content is too high. For this reason, a closed grain bin should be aired out once it is opened for grain removal.

"Most manufacturers of cartridge type masks recommend that a user not enter an atmosphere containing less than 19 percent oxygen with these masks. Since a farmer has no way of measuring the amount of oxygen, ventilation is very important, he explained.

Schnieder said he is aware of situations where farmers could not work in bins with the simple dust mask but could with the cartridge type mask. "With a cartridge mask, you are restricted, which means you might have to slow your activity to about 75 percent of working capability," he said. Masks become plugged after a period of time, which also restricts the air supply, he commented.

Exposure to grain dust can result in a malady called "farmer's lung disease," Schnieder said. Elevator or commercial grain warehouse operators are also afflicted, he noted.

Schnieder commended Lloyd Bullerman and Michael Skira from the NU Department of Food Science & Technology on research they are undertaking to isolate dusts in Nebraska grain that can affect workers who are handling grain.

More information must be provided by research on the effect of gases given off during the breakdown of moldy grain, Schnieder said. He expressed hope that funds might become available from various sources to allow further study of the problem.

Hog profits up; inventories stable

No expansion in hog production is in sight yet, despite favorable hog profits in recent months and a large supply of low-priced corn. That's the message of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's 10-state September hogs and pigs report, according to a University of Nebraska extension ag economist.

Allen Wellman said while total hog inventories were expected to be well below a year earlier, the decline in breeding stock was thought to be slowing, with numbers moving closer to a year earlier.

"The report indicates continued favorable profit conditions for hog producers over the next several months, possibly extending through the third quarter of 1983. But I still think significant expansion in farrowing appears likely in the last three quarters of 1983 and continuing into 1984. Financial pressures on some farmers may limit construction of new facilities, but ample supplies of feed grains at relatively low prices will probably bring significant production increases within present operations," he said.

The report estimated the number of hogs on farms Sept. 1 in 10 major hog states at 41.4 million head, down 12 percent from a year earlier. Market hog inventories also were estimated to be 12 percent less than last year, while breeding stock showed a surprisingly large 13 percent drop, he said.

Wellman said estimates on market hogs and total inventory were very close to average trade guesses in advance of the report. But the guesses on breeding stock had averaged around 8 percent less than last year, he said.

Sow farrowings in the 10 states during June-August were estimated to have dropped 11 percent below the previous year. Farrowing plans for September-December were estimated at 10 percent below last year. Early farrowing intentions for the December-February period were estimated at 4 percent less than the previous year.

Inventory estimates showed a very uneven pattern of change among the major hog states. Breeding stock inventories were reported at 17 percent below a year earlier in Iowa, down 25 percent in Missouri, 14 percent in Nebraska and 13 percent in Illinois. But breeding stock estimates were only 3 percent less than last year in Minnesota and Indiana, down 5 percent in North Carolina and up 1 percent in Ohio.

Farrowing plans for September-November in Nebraska were estimated to be 17 percent below a year earlier and December-February plans down 6 percent — larger declines than indicated for the 10 states.

Wellman said the inventory estimates indicate fourth-quarter hog slaughter will be 10-15 percent below a year earlier, but up moderately from the third quarter. Slaughter in the first two quarters of 1983 should be 4-10 percent below 1982 levels, based on June-August farrowings and September-November farrowing plans, but he said he expected a significant year-to-year increase in slaughter by the fourth quarter 1983.

Wellman said he expects Omaha prices for barrows and gilts during the October-December quarter to average in the $55 to $59 per hundred weight range, with January-March prices in the same general range. He said if September-November farrowing are below the previous year by around 10 percent, as now estimated, prices in the second quarter might be low to mid $50s.

"Hog prices in the last half of 1983 will be heavily influenced by the size of the December-May pig crop," Wellman said.

"Farrowing intentions for December-February" were estimated to be 4 percent below a year earlier in the 10 states. If possible, however, that actual farrowings will be somewhat higher in view of favorable profits, low corn prices and the lack of evidence of herd expansion up to this point. By the March-May quarter, farrowings are likely to be well above 1982 levels, possibly by 10 percent or more."

Wellman said that assuming somewhat stronger economic conditions and only small increases in the supplies of beef and poultry, hog prices in the third quarter should remain fairly strong — possibly near the $50 level. Fourth-quarter prices, however, could be down to the upper $40s or below, depending on actual pork supplies, he added.

The Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Governor, or the Speaker if acting as presiding officer, shall sign, in the presence of the Legislature while the same is in session and capable of transacting business, all bills and resolutions passed by the Legislature."

Proposed Amendment No. 2

A vote FOR this proposal will enable the Legislature to broaden the Industrial Development Act, under which cities and counties may issue revenue bonds to acquire, develop, lease and finance real and personal property suitable for use by manufacturing or industrial enterprises, by enabling the cities and counties to do the same for other types of business or commercial enterprises (which are not manufacturing or industrial in nature) as would be determined by statute, so long as such property is located in blighted areas defined by local ordinance and would continue to provide that such bonds would not become general obligation bonds of the issuing city or county.

"Constitutional amendment to authorize the use of revenue bonds to develop blighted property.

Proposed Amendment No. 3

A vote FOR this proposal will reduce the period of time in which owners and persons interested in real estate subject to public sale for nonpayment of taxes or special assessments may redeem such property from not less than two years to not less than six months, if such real estate is located within an incorporated city, village, or sanitary and improvement district, but will retain the present redemption period of not less than two years if such real estate is not located within an incorporated city, village, or sanitary and improvement district, or if it is the residence of the owner.

"Constitutional amendment to limit the right of redemption of real estate for nonpayment of taxes or special assessments to a period of six months when such real estate is located within an incorporated city, village, or sanitary and improvement district, except that such limitation shall not apply to real estate that is the residence of the owner of such real estate.

What color is gold?
An orange is always orange. But real gold doesn't have to be gold - not when it's real karat gold. You see, pure gold is generally considered too soft for jewelry. So to make it harder and more workable, it's combined, or alloyed, with other metals to form karat gold. The most commonly used alloy metals produce the familiar yellow gold. Other metals, however, can be used to create attractive color variations. Nickel, silver and zinc, for example, go into the making of white gold. The addition of copper results in pink gold. Although yellow gold remains the most popular choice, there is a current fashion trend towards tri-color jewelry that combines yellow, white and pink gold.
Whichever color you choose, always be sure your gold jewelry is stamped with the karat (K) mark. It's your assurance that what you're buying is real karat gold.
Nothing else feels like real gold. Nothing else makes any moment so precious.

NEW OWNER SEARS H & R BLOCK AMC REALTY

100 MAIN STREET WAYNE

Merna Stalsberg has just purchased the two existing businesses in Wayne. She has been associated with H & R Block for the past 7 years. She served as Satellite Director for the Hastings area covering offices from McCook east to the Iowa border prior to the Bellevue office being originated for the eastern part of the state. She has owned and operated the office in Seward for the past 3 years. She is happy to report that the Wayne office will remain in the same location. Starting October 1, 1982 there will be year around tax service for individuals, farms, business, sub-chapter S and corporations returns. Merna has had 10 years experience in the Sears, Roebuck & Co. York office, where she was assistant manager up until she moved to Hastings. Merna reports that the Sears store will remain in the same location, however, due to the store changing from a Merchant to an Agency there will be a few minor changes on repair parts, credit payments and orders being teletyped in daily for better service to customers. She was raised on a farm in York County, Nebraska and attended classes at Lincoln, Hastings and Grand Island Colleges. She and her family are looking forward to living in Wayne.

An unwelcome surprise

With Halloween less than two weeks away, Mother Nature played a trick on northeast Nebraska Tuesday that won't soon be forgotten.

What started out as a rainstorm, turned to sleet and then to heavy snow as this part of the state was hit by its first major snowstorm. Temperatures into the 40s and plenty of sunshine on Wednesday melted away the remains of the snow. But the storm left its mark.

The early storm may have caused more damage than any storm will throughout the upcoming winter season. Thousands of acres of ripe soybeans were smothered and buried by the wet, heavy snow. Bean fields which survived the spring's wicked rain and hail storms were now wiped out. Corn also suffered extensive damage in some areas where ears were knocked to the ground.

Tree damage was tremendous. Leaves had not yet been shed by most trees and the wet snow burdened the limbs until they succumbed and cracked. Across the community of Wayne, branches of all sizes were scattered across the yards of nearly every home.

There were also the usual problems which come with snowstorms. Families ate by candlelight as the storm knocked out power lines and forced blackouts. Ditches along slippery country roads were marked with cars which had slid off.

It wasn't a pleasant preview of what may be ahead.
