Wildcats kick off head-coach search

WSC benches 3-man football staff

By Randy Hascall

A search has begun for a new head football coach at Wayne State College.

Head coach Del Stollenberg and assistants Dr. Ralph Barclay and Dr. LeRoy Simpson have been relieved of their football coaching duties. The official announcement was made at a press conference Wednesday morning.

The three-man staff has a total of 46 years of service to Wayne State. Stollenberg recently completed his 14th season as head football coach, defensive coordinator Barclay has been at WSC for 17 years and Simpson has served 15 years at Wayne State.

ALL THREE men will continue to teach at WSC and will retain any other coaching duties. The change affects only their football coaching responsibilities.

Ron Jones, athletic director, addressed members of the media at Wednesday's conference and announced the decision. He said he made the recommendation to Wayne State President Ed Elliott, who accepted the recommendation.

Jones said the search for a new head football coach will begin immediately and the position will be filled as soon as possible.

"It was the feeling of the administration that we need new leadership and direction in the football program at Wayne State College," Jones said. "There is no single factor that led to this decision—it was a variety of things. We feel a change is in the best interests of the program."

JONES POINTED OUT that Stollenberg, Barclay and Simpson will still be available for reassignment on the new coaching staff. The new head coach will be allowed to select his own staff and develop a program as he sees fit. He may reassign any of those three to another position or he may bring in other personnel.

The status of two football coaches who are considered part-time assistants, John Torzon and Ron Peck, will be left up to the new head coach. Until a replacement for Stollenberg is found, recruiting will be handled through the Wayne State admissions office and athletic department, Jones said.

The WSC athletic director said the college is looking for a "young, energetic person" to fill the coaching spot. He said the college has not talked to anyone about the job and added that there are no leading candidates.

"As applications come in, we'll look and select the best man," Jones said. "Selection will be wide open."

Jones added "Coach Stollenberg and his staff have had some good years at Wayne

Sandra Dorcey

New director is appointed for Region IV

A 26-year-old Wayne resident has been selected new Region IV Area Director of Wayne.

Sandra Dorcey, who was appointed area director in September, fills the vacancy created by the resignation of Val Wagner.

Miss Wagner, who had served as area director the past two years, resigned to further her educational studies.

MRS. DORCEY joined the Region IV agency in 1976 as a residential assistant in the Children's Center, where she worked part-time until her graduation from Wayne State College.

Later, as coordinator of the children's program, she assisted the residential programs as they moved from the custodial format to one that included more education and independent living.

In 1980 she was selected as liaison social service worker in the central office of Region IV, striving for more movement of persons out of institutions and back into the community.

Mrs. Dorcey left Region IV in February of 1981 to marry Wayne native Kevin Dorcey. They are the parents of one daughter, Sarah.

During that time she worked as a consultant for the Region.

AS AREA director, Mrs. Dorcey said she is looking toward on-the-job training programs, more contract work that can help local businesses reduce their costs, and more independent living arrangements for her clients.

"The Region IV Area Program is on the go," said Mrs. Dorcey.

"It is bringing in new ideas, and," said the new director, "it is utilizing the community's resources more efficiently and more effectively."

ROGER WACKER at simulated shuttle cockpit controls next door to Mission Control in Houston.

Shuttle simulation

Wayne native flies Columbia's re-entry computers

By Randall Howell

As a kid, Roger Wacker always wanted to be an astronaut.

Though he has yet to don a spacesuit, the childhood dream has launched the 23-year-old Wayne native into an aerospace career.

In fact, it has propelled the 1977 Wayne High School graduate into a space right next door to Houston's Mission Control for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's fifth shuttle flight.

WACKER, THE son of Herman (Bud) and Rodella Wacker of Wayne, joined the cheers and applause at 8:33 a.m. Tuesday.

That's when Columbia touched down on schedule to end its five-day space excursion at Edwards Air Force Base, in California.

The re-entry — from deorbit burn to touchdown — that was the real-time thing for young Wacker, who has worked for several months with a McDonnell-Douglas flight control entry crew in the subcontracting company's engineering and development division.

"It was perfect...a perfect landing...everything went just as planned," Wacker told The Wayne Herald Tuesday morning, only 90 minutes after the crew brought the Columbia safely home from its first commercial flight.

WACKER, WHO attended Wayne State College for a year before earning his electrical engineering degree from Rose Hulman Institute of Technology at Terre Haute, Ind., told The Wayne Herald that despite the long hours, weeks and months of pre-flight preparation, his work has just begun.

"Our work just begins now," Wacker said, explaining that analysis of post-flight data was on the agenda for the flight control entry crew.

With headquarters next door to Mission Control, perhaps the most visible part of America's space programs, Wacker and his colleagues have already begun to run computer real-flight and simulation-flight data comparisons.

"Even though we've done it four times (on other flights), the verification is not over with," he explained, obviously enjoying the success of the Columbia's re-entry.

IN WAYNE, young Wacker's parents shared the space shuttle excitement, calling their son long-distance Monday night before he faced Tuesday morning's re-entry flight.

Wacker's parents were not only excited about the Columbia's successful mission, but also about preparations for a trip to Houston to visit their youngest child this weekend.

"I'm going to give them a real tour," the McDonnell-Douglas engineer beamed over the telephone from his NASA office. "I may even let dad fly the simulator. He used to be a pilot, you know."

Power superintendent for Wayne, the senior Wacker has a 34-year municipal service record. Wacker's mother is librarian at Wayne Elementary School, a post she's held for several years.

Court sets 4 hearings in welfare fraud case

A 35-year-old Wayne woman was scheduled to appear in Wayne County Court Wednesday on three felony charges in connection with a welfare fraud case.

Marilyn Liedorff of Wayne was to appear before Wayne County Judge Stephen Finn in a preliminary hearing that has been continued since charges were brought against her in late September, according to records on file at the Wayne County Courthouse.

The charges, three counts of allegedly obtaining welfare benefits by false statement — all Class IV felonies, were filed against Liedorff by Wayne County Attorney Budd B. Bornhoft, according to court records.

LIEDORFF, WHO is being represented by court-appointed attorney Duane Schroeder of Wayne, is free on her own recognizance.

Because the case involves felony counts, it is expected to be automatically bound over to Ninth District Court.

In fact, Liedorff has the legal option of waiving the preliminary hearing at the County Court level, which would send the case to District Court for preliminary hearing and arraignment.

Charges filed by Bornhoft accuse Liedorff of allegedly obtaining larger welfare and food stamp payments than the defendant was entitled to "by means of willfully false statement."

TWO OF THE three charges involve food stamps.

The first felony charge alleges that Liedorff received the "larger payments" (aggregate value exceeds $500) from September of 1980 through February of 1981 based on a statement filed with the Wayne County Welfare office on or about July 31, 1980.

The second count, also a felony, alleges the defendant obtained food stamps "to which she was not entitled" (aggregate value exceeds $500) from July 1980 through December 1980 on the basis of a statement filed on or about July 7, 1980.

And, the third felony count, also involving food stamps, alleges the defendant obtained the assistance (aggregate value exceeds $500) beyond entitlement from January 1981 to June 1981 based on a statement made on or about Jan. 4, 1981.

BORNHOFT filed the welfare fraud case against Liedorff on Sept. 30. The court appointed Schroeder as defense attorney and continued the preliminary hearing in the case until Oct. 14.

The court has since granted five continuances, postponing the preliminary hearing from Oct. 14 to Oct. 28, then to Nov. 4, then to Nov. 12 and then to Wednesday, Nov. 17.

Information filed with the case in County Court indicates the defendant, who has three dependent children, was allegedly receiving some $428 per month in welfare assistance while holding two part-time jobs — one in Wayne and one in Webster.

Christmas giveaway underway

Wayne's holiday on-wheels Christmas season special is picking up steam. Shoppers are signing up all over town at the stores of 40 participating Wayne merchants.

And, if you shop here in northeast Nebraska's Christmas city, you still have time to register for this week's drawing.

If you win, you'll join a host of others holding keys that may unlock the door to a new car ($5,500 value) this holiday season.

AND, IF YOU don't happen to win the car, you won't have to settle for a lump of coal in that stocking of yours.

You still get a crack at being among the lucky ones on Santa's list for $9,400 worth of gasoline.

Santa's giving you six full weeks to be good enough to shop in Wayne to register for the holiday prizes this year.

The action started Monday morning, Nov. 8.

HERE'S HOW it works. Shoppers will register throughout each week in Wayne's participating stores.

On Nov. 15, the first of six Monday drawings will be held in each of the 40 participating stores.

One name will be drawn in each store. Each week, each of the 40 winners will receive a certificate entitling them to a key. Contest participants must re-register each week.

If your key unlocks the Christmas treasure chest on Dec. 23, you win a check for $5,500 toward the purchase of a new car.

WITH 40 MERCHANTS participating, there will be 40 key winners each week. That means by Dec. 23, 240 people will have keys to try to unlock the Christmas treasure chest. Only one of the keys will unlock the treasure chest for the car.

But wait, you haven't heard the best yet. After each Monday drawing for the keys, the registration forms from each of the 40 stores will be sorted by town — Allen, Belden, Carroll, Concord, Dixon, Emerson, Laurel, Pender, Pilger, Wakefield, Wayne, Winslow and Wisner etc.

AND, ON DEC. 23, one name will be drawn from each town. And, if you are not from one of those towns, there's a special gasoline-giveaway category created for you. You can't lose.

Each of those winners will be awarded $100 in gasoline from participating service stations.

The $1,400 gasoline-giveaway drawing is scheduled for 6 p.m. Dec. 23 in the Wayne City Auditorium, only one hour after the $5,500 car-giveaway drawing.

The certificate for the car is redeemable at Arnle's Ford-Mercury, Ellington Motors or Mike Perry Chevrolet-Oldsmobile — all participating merchants.

OTHER PARTICIPATING merchants include Ben Franklin Store, Bill's GW, Black Knight, Carhart Lumber Co., Charlie's Refrigeration, The Cupboard, The Diamond Center, Discount Furniture, Dooscher Appliances, El Toro Lounge, First National Bank and Fredrickson Oil Co.

Nebraska family farming trends come full circle

By M.M. Van Kirk
Nebraska Farm Bureau

One of the great strengths of U.S. agriculture—and the family farm and ranch, in particular—is the ability to adapt, adjust and change with times and conditions in order to survive and prosper.

The common admonition of economists to farmers and ranchers in the Midwest in the early 1960s was "you've got to specialize." At the time they were probably right and certainly that was the trend.

The pattern of farming for much of this century had been of diversity.

A TYPICAL FARM of the 1920s, 1930s and 1940s included a few cows to milk, with the number dependent on how many family members there were to help with the milking. The milk was separated, with the cream sold at the end of the week to a creamery to be used for butter or cheese. The skim milk was fed to the hogs.

The cows were usually a general-purpose breed, suitable for both milk production and beef, such as a Milking Shorthorn, Red Poll, Brown Swiss, etc.

Often there was a beef cow-calf herd in addition or the farm unit had a program of buying feeder cattle in the fall and feeding out a carload during the winter.

The manure from livestock operations, coupled with crop rotations and liberal use of legumes such as alfalfa and sweet clover, was important to maintaining soil fertility and tilth. Landlords generally preferred tenants who were livestock oriented.

MOST FARMS also had a hog operation, mostly farrow to finish but some were sold as feeder pigs. They were not the sophisticated units one finds today but there was emphasis on good breeding, keeping hog houses clean and having a good alfalfa patch handy for them during the warm months.

Marketing several hundred head of hogs each year was important to a small farm's success.

Nearly every farm had a flock of chickens. General purpose breeds such as Plymouth Rocks and Rhode Island Reds provided both eggs and market value as consumers prized a good roast chicken for Sunday dinner.

The Leghorn was once the popular breed for those who specialized in egg production.

Many enterprising farm wives also had a flock of ducks or geese that they dressed and sold to meat markets or special urban customers at holiday time.

IN WESTERN Nebraska many farms and ranches in the 1930s and 1940s had a flock of turkeys and older folks out in that area will recall the famous turkey cooperative facilities at Henry that was once proclaimed as the "turkey capital of the world" because of the carloads of dressed turkeys shipped out at Thanksgiving and Christmas time.

But in the late 1950s and 1960s changes came with great emphasis on "efficiency." Farmers were encouraged to specialize in cash grain production or dairying or hog production or cattle feeding, but on a large scale.

Cattle feeding trended toward development of the large feedlots that were settling up in the Texas Panhandle to take advantage of the warmer winters and the big production of feed grains there resulting from deep well irrigation.

Now that those areas are running short on water, those investors in 30,000 to 50,000 capacity lots are looking toward Nebraska's irrigated feed grain production and plentiful water.

BUT ADVERSE agricultural prices and production costs of the past three years have stressed the outside investors. Specialization locks in a losing pattern when it exists. All of a sudden, wonder of wonders, there is new emphasis on diversity.

According to an editorial in a recent issue of "Livestock Market Digest," Federal Reserve economists at Kansas City foresee the cattle industry as adjusting from a conglomerate attraction to those with smaller total herds and more farm feedlots.

The new advice is to reduce risks by diversifying one's farm enterprises. Combine cow-calf and hog operations with crop production in small and medium-sized farms, or with off-farm employment.

It makes sense because those farming enterprises which have maintained a degree of diversity have coped best with the economic stresses of the past five years. Most Nebraskans will be cheering the trend because it is a big plus for preservation of the family farm as they have known it.

CAPital idea

The organization of a Civil Air Patrol squadron in Wayne is more than good news.

Not only does it mean that area residents have an opportunity to benefit from and/or participate in a worthwhile organization, but also it is timely.

Organizational work is being done to charter the squadron, which is expected to be the 15th Nebraska unit, at a time when communities across the country are doing more and more to help themselves rather than relying on others.

The high costs, and sometimes ineffective results, of relying on others in a time of need is a lesson that's not being lost on this community.

The CAP missions are such that individuals from all walks of life can participate and benefit.

Contrary to popular opinion, for instance, you don't have to be a pilot to sign up for volunteer service in the official civilian auxiliary of the Air Force.

CAP's three principal missions involve emergency services (including communications), aerospace education and training, and leadership training.

Within the last five years, CAP squadrons have been involved in nearly 5,000 search-and-rescue or emergency-service missions.

That translates into some 400 lives saved and some 2,500 objects (such as downed aircraft) found.

Disaster relief is a significant part of squadron work. It involves airlifts of blood, medication, food and supplies into disaster areas and the evacuation of the stranded, the sick or the injured.

In addition, emergency communications — the lifeblood of emergency missions — is a CAP specialty.

Furthermore, in this age of space exploration and technological complexity, the organization also represents an educational springboard into the future.

CAP represents part of the wave of the future. And, that wave is coming to Wayne.

That's exciting, because the future is where we all are going to be living.

Farm power

The U.S. Department of Agriculture needs to play a larger role in helping farmers conserve energy, the General Accounting Office says.

But USDA officials, in responding to the GAO report, said they objected to the view of the department's role as a personal consulting service for farmers.

Farmers, who use more petroleum than any other single industry group, could reduce their total energy consumption by 20 percent through the use of conservation methods, according to USDA.

But GAO said in a recent report that farmers are often reluctant to use these methods because they fear a change from traditional production methods could adversely affect both their crop yield and income.

To change this perception, USDA needs to work through its field offices to provide farmers with more specific information on how certain conservation methods applied to their individual farm situations would be economical, GAO said.

GAO, the watchdog agency of the federal government, investigated federal efforts to assist farmers in adopting conservation methods at the request of Rep. Richard L. Ottinger (D-N.Y.), chairman of the House Subcommittee on Energy Conservation and Power.

Ottinger also asked GAO to report on energy conservation measures farmers could adopt quickly.

GAO concluded that USDA's field offices are promoting energy conservation "inconsistently and without much guidance and direction from headquarters."

Some of the agency's field personnel said they believed their efforts to promote energy conservation did not go far enough because USDA headquarters places little priority on such efforts, according to the report.

The GAO report recommended that USDA's new Office of Energy serve as a focal point to coordinate the energy conservation activities of the field offices.

But USDA told GAO its Extension Service was neither organized nor funded to perform personal services for each of the 2.4 million farms in the nation, but rather to provide information about the option and alternatives to allow farmers to make their own decision.

USDA also said it was against the idea of giving the Office of Energy a central role in promoting energy conservation.

State's belt gets tightened

LI. Gov. G. Luedtke opened the second Special Session of the 87th Legislature at 10:04 a.m., Friday, Nov. 5.

Gov. Charles Thone called the Special Session because revenue collected this year was below projections and there was a danger that the state would not have enough money to fund the budget it had passed last session.

As was the case last year when the 87th Legislature was called into its first Special Session, the choice for the legislators involved either cutting the budget so current revenues would be able to cover the cost of the reduced budget or to raise taxes to insure that there would be enough money to fund the current budget.

senator merle von minden

DURING THE week, several changes were made or attempted. The Legislature defeated Sen. John DeCamp's proposal to bring in additional revenue by expanding the tax base to include a sales tax on services, hair cuts and lawyer's fees, for example.

Also included were the labor costs of mechanical repairs. I voted against the proposal because I feel that, with the economy the way it is, a farmer just can't afford an additional expense when he needs to have his machinery repaired.

Legislative bills 1 and 2 were amended later in the week. A minor change was made in LB 2, moving the due date for sales and use taxes to the 25th day of the month after collection instead of the 15th.

LB 1 was changed significantly as a result of the adoption of recommended Appropriations Committee amendments. Instead of a 3 1/2 per cent across the board cut, requested by the governor, LB 1 now calls for a 2 per cent cut plus additional savings due to various other selected cuts and construction and renovation deferrals.

THE SUCCESS of LB 1 depends on a 1 per cent income tax increase retroactive to Jan. 1, 1982, and continuing through 1983.

Unfortunately, the mood of the Legislature was such that if LB 1 didn't pass with the 2 per cent reduction, it was unlikely that any reduction would have been possible.

With that in mind, I reluctantly voted for LB 1 because I felt that any reduction was better than none at all. However, I still feel that with the poor shape of the economy it is unfair to ask Nebraskans to pay more taxes.

By only cutting expenditures 2 per cent, the Legislature has virtually forced the State Board of Equalization to raise the income tax.

THAT WOULD make the second increase in income tax rates this year. With farmers receiving lower prices than last year for their grain and IBP workers going back to work without a pay raise, I just don't think it is right to increase their tax burden.

A 3 1/2 per cent cut was not asking for a drastic reduction. Good management can absorb a small reduction and, although painful, continue operations. Government, like you and I, must tighten its belt until the economy revives.

I appreciate the mail I have received from my constituents during this Special Session and I encourage you to contact me at any time. I will be at home at Box 127, Allen, Ne. 68710, for most of the interim period.

To the editor:

I wish to say thank you and goodbye to all my friends in Wayne I was unable to see before leaving to live with my daughter and husband in Illinois.

My John is at rest now beside my mother and father in Missouri, so he isn't alone and I'll join them when God wills it.

I am content, but I do, so miss my home and all the kind dear friends there who gave me so much help so I could grant John's last wish: To be in the home he loved and to be together to the end. We were.

God is so good to us and with His help I will find happiness here with Ruby and Ray in Illinois.

Waiting out winter

Wakefield gazebo replaces old apple tree out back

By LaVon Anderson

Jackie and Jim Wilkerson of Wakefield are counting the months — between autumn and spring — when once again they can sip coffee out back of the house.

They'll watch the budding of the fruit trees in the mini orchard they planted nearly five years ago.

They'll listen for the cry of the geese as they make their way back north after months spent in the warmth of the south.

They'll greet with smiles their Wakefield friends and neighbors who stop to say hello while out for an early evening stroll.

And in the morning, before Jim goes off to work, he and Jackie will take their cups of steaming coffee outdoors to welcome the day.

NEXT YEAR, however, Jackie and Jim won't sit in their old familiar spot — under an apple tree out back by the shed.

They'll take their coffee, instead, to sit in the gazebo Jim finished constructing nearly a month ago.

"Jim had to cut the old tree down," says Jackie. "It was a mess."

Work on the gazebo, which Jackie and Jim believe to be the only one in Wakefield, was started in spring of 1981.

It was completed last month when son Jeff helped his dad with the finishing trimwork.

"Jim's very detailed," says Jackie. "He's a perfectionist when he makes anything."

MOST OF the work on the gazebo was done in Jim's spare time in the garage out back of the Wilkerson house.

"I don't think there's ever been a car in the garage," laughs Jackie. "That's Jim's workshop."

Jim, a nutritionist in charge of formulating feed at Wakefield's Milton G. Waldbaum Co., is a former vocational agriculture teacher and puts woodworking at the top of his list of hobbies.

Natives of Oklahoma, Jim and Jackie moved to Nebraska 31 years ago when Jim accepted the position of vocational agriculture teacher at Wynot High School.

In 1960 the family moved to Wakefield and Jim continued to teach vocational agriculture at Wakefield High until 1965 when he began his work as a nutritionist with the Waldbaum company.

Wilkersons purchased their home in Wakefield in 1972 after living on farms northeast of Wakefield the first 11 years.

"I loved the farm," smiles Jackie, quick to add that she also enjoys the convenience of living in town.

SINCE PURCHASING their home 10 years ago, Wilkersons have done much to improve the landscape, including the construction of the gazebo.

Located at the end of a brick walk leading from the kitchen patio doors, the gazebo sits next to the orchard Jim and Jackie planted five years ago.

"Although we had discussed where the gazebo should be located," says Jackie, "Jim was the one who finally decided where it would be built."

"I'd put a stake in the ground where I thought I wanted it, and Jim kept moving it back to where he wanted it."

"It was kind of a pirated thing," smiles Jim. "She'd move the stake ahead in the daytime and I'd move it back after dark."

"Now that's an exaggeration," Jackie laughs.

Jim said he chose the site next to the orchard because of the view and to catch the prevailing breezes in the summer.

"IT'S A NICE little orchard," says Jackie, adding that the plums she canned this past summer came from one of the 12 trees in the orchard.

In addition to plums, the orchard contains a grape arbor and apple, pear and peach trees which Jackie hopes will be mature enough to harvest next year.

"Jim's more interested in outside work than inside work," Jackie smiles, adding that her landscaping project next spring includes having her husband of 38 years build a decorative arched bridge over the flower garden.

"Jim loves to garden. He grows a beautiful garden," says Jackie, adding lovingly, "like I said, he's a perfectionist. Anything he does is usually outstanding."

JACKIE SAYS although she had talked about a gazebo, she really doesn't know why Jim decided to build one.

"I built it mainly because my wife has wanted one for a quite a few years," adds Jim.

Working mostly on weekends, Jim said although there weren't any problems with construction, the gazebo did take a long time to build.

Last December Jim's work was halted abruptly when he entered the hospital for stomach surgery. Two days later his left leg, due to poor circulation, was amputated below the knee.

"The gazebo was good therapy for me at that time," says Jim, who following his surgery spent months in his workshop constructing the many tiny spandrels which run around the gazebo under the roof.

THE GAZEBO, a hexagon, is 10 and a half feet in diameter and seven feet high to the eave.

Sitting on a concrete base, it is supported by 4 x 4 redwood uprights at each corner. The roof is formed of 2 x 4 and 2 x 6 truss rafters with one half inch plywood roof sheathing with brown woodtone shingles.

Rails decorating the bottom were constructed of 2 x 4's and 2 x 2's.

Gingerbread spandrels running below the roof are of a ball and dowel construction, with each of the balls glued in individually to the dowel rod.

Brackets decorating each of the six corners are framed spindles sawed out of lumber.

ADDING TO the appearance of the gazebo is a cupola which Jim constructed of one half inch plywood with a sheet copper roof.

The cupola features brown acrylic windows, and, perched on top, is a brass toilet bowl float.

"That was Jim's idea," laughs Jackie, adding that the ornament on top of the cupola has generated the most comments from friends.

"The gingerbread spandrels probably add most to the total appearance," adds Jim.

JIM IS QUICK to point out that the gazebo was a family project.

"My two sons helped me a lot, as well as my wife and daughter Jodi," says Jim.

"I gave the orders," Jackie smiles.

Jodi, a sophomore at Wakefield High School, helped by carrying and holding materials that were awkward for her dad, who was still recuperating from surgery.

She also helped Jackie lay the patio block walkway from the house to the gazebo.

Also helping were sons David, who resides with his family in Norfolk, and Jeff, of Sioux City.

'Brush with death' only increases determination

Sitting at the kitchen table, a cup of coffee in his hands, 58-year-old Jim Wilkerson vividly remembers last December when he was suddenly hospitalized for stomach surgery.

"Jim went into the hospital on Sunday for stomach surgery," recalls his wife Jackie, "and on Tuesday they amputated his leg."

Just that spring, Jim had begun work on the gazebo his wife had talked about for so many years. The cement had been poured in the backyard of the couple's home, the framework was up, and construction had begun.

"You know your hands off of me, gazebo," said Jim, who was still groggy from the medication.

"I don't remember saying that," laughs Jim.

"You did," smiles Jackie. "And we all know how long it took to complete."

Wilkerson returned from the hospital on Nov. 15, and the construction of the Wilkersons' gazebo was underway.

David's son, 13-year-old Michael, also assisted his grandfather and uncle Jeff when it came time to putting the roof over the gazebo.

Other Wilkerson children include daughter Jaylynn White, who resides with her husband in Alliance, and daughter Cheri Burton, who lives with her family in Bayard.

A son, Steven, died in Vietnam 14 years ago.

SUDDENLY, Jim lay seriously ill in the hospital and work on the gazebo stopped.

"Jim's brush with death only increased his determination," says Jackie.

Jackie can now recall with a smile the time Pastor Johnson, minister at Wakefield's Salem Lutheran Church, visited Jim in the hospital and offered to finish construction of the gazebo.

"You know your hands off of me, gazebo," said Jim, who was still groggy from the medication.

"I don't remember saying that," laughs Jim.

"You did," smiles Jackie. "And we all know how long it took to complete."

"Jim was an excellent father and grandfather with his determination," says Jackie.

"He was a very hard worker and a very determined man," she adds.

and daughters Cheri and Jaylynn sew extensively. Jackie, who also loves art, says raising six children was her job.

Pointing to a stack of Christmas stockings she presently is working on, Jackie says she also enjoys needlework of all kinds and refinishing furniture.

MEANWHILE, both Jackie and Jim are looking forward to next summer when they can entertain their tea and coffee company in the newly constructed gazebo.

"I love the gazebo," says Jackie, "and I think it's romantic."

"I hope it's romantic," adds Jim with a twinkle in his eye.

An unusual invitation

Presbyterians in Wayne received an unusual bit of mail several weeks ago — a printed invitation to attend their own church services on Nov. 21.

Typographically, the announcement looked much like any other invitation announcing a special event.

Some Presbyterians wondered. There had been no mention of a special event during previous church services.

THE FOLLOWING Sunday, Pastor Robert Haas referred briefly but mysteriously to the invitation, saying only that the Nov. 21 event would have nothing to do with money.

(The church at that time was beginning its annual pledge process.)

Eventually, the minister mentioned the phrase "82 in '82" during his Sunday announcements.

More mystery and curiosity in time, a few more bits of information emerged. There would be food following the Nov. 21 service.

FINALLY, members of the congregation learned the meaning of '82 in '82.

This Sunday, Nov. 21, the church's goal is to have 82 percent of Wayne Presbyterians attend the 9:45 a.m. worship service.

THE IDEA for "82 in '82" originated with Jack and Kathy Manske, who several months earlier invited other Presbyterians to share thoughts on how to increase Sunday attendance.

Manske suggested sending out invitations to church members, and later announcing the goal. He proposed getting 80 percent of the congregation to attend church services on one particular Sunday.

The goal was upped to 82 percent when another member of the congregation suggested that, because this is 1982, the theme be "82 in '82."

WHAT'S GOING to be special on Nov. 21? "A big crowd enjoying the company of friends in church — that's what the planners expect to be special," Manske said.

SATURDAY'S FALL BAZAAR in Wayne was a chance for many shoppers to begin crossing names off of their Christmas lists. The bazaar, sponsored annually by the Wayne Community Hospital Auxiliary, featured an array of Christmas gifts as well as other handmade craft items and food, and once again attracted hundreds of area residents. Proceeds from this year's event will go towards the payment of two new heart monitors, a central station, and two portable telemetry units at Providence Medical Center.

Grace Evening Circle elects 1983 officers

New officers of Grace Lutheran LWML Evening Circle were elected at a meeting Nov. 9.

Lorraine Johnson will serve as president during 1983. Other officers are Orvella Blomkamp, vice president; Verna Mae Baier, secretary; and Bonnie Sandahl, treasurer.

The November meeting, attended by 20 members, was opened with devotions by Marilyn Rethwisch.

It was announced that Mary Lou Erxleben was elected secretary of the zone at the LWML Fall Rally held recently in Winside, which was attended by 125 area women.

A $15 donation was made to the Wayne State Foundation in acknowledgement of Bobbye and Alan Lupack who spoke to the group in October.

Miles were collected for missions, and each member received an advent calendar from Christian growth chairman Mary Lou Erxleben.

Janet Casey read "To Be a Woman," and Faunell Bennett and Marilyn Rethwisch presented the program.

Hostesses were Paula Haisch, Norma Tietz and Mary Lou Erxleben.

STAMPS were trimmed and sorted, and will be taken to St. Louis in December by Susan Vogel.

NEXT MEETING will be a salad bar luncheon at 7 p.m. on Dec. 14.

Each member is asked to bring a guest.

Faculty profile

One of the things that Russell Rasmussen likes about Wayne State College is that he has "had the privilege of working with some of the best students on campus."

He also appreciates the fact that administrators have let him teach a large number of very different courses, as well as letting him pursue his interests.

Dr. Rasmussen's interests are wide-ranging—from collecting antique toy automobiles with his son, to collecting replicas of Indian art and animal skulls.

He also enjoys camping and hiking with his family in the summer, and enjoys history of all kinds.

Russell Rasmussen

THE ALLEN native and professor of chemistry at Wayne State also belongs to a number of organizations.

He is a member of the Norfolk Antique Auto Club, and a lifetime member of both the Nebraska Historical Society and the Nebraska Ornithologists Union.

He belongs to Phi Beta Kappa arts and sciences honorary, Phi Lambda Upsilon chemistry honorary, Society of Sigma Xi science honorary, Pi Mu Epsilon math honorary, and the Fulbright Alumni Society.

Rasmussen also has memberships in the Center of American Archeology, the National and State Education Associations, and the Danforth Association.

IN HIS 13th year at Wayne State, Dr. Rasmussen started as an assistant professor. He worked his way up to full professor, and was chairman of the science division before it was combined with the math division two years ago.

He earned his bachelor of science degree from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1960. He studied in Germany for a year under the Fulbright program, and received his Ph.D. from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1970.

'Who's Who' correction

An inadvertent error was made in a story which appeared last week in The Wayne Herald regarding the list of Wayne State College students who were named to "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

Senior LaDonna Cords was listed as being the wife of Gerald Cords of Wayne.

The story should have read that Miss Cords is the daughter of Gerald Cords of Grand Island.

Financial aid workshop

All area high school counselors are invited to attend a financial aid workshop to be held at Wayne State College on Wednesday, Dec. 8, according to Charles Kay, director of financial aid.

The workshop, sponsored by the United States Office of Education, will present federal financial aid policies, regulations and procedures for the 1983-84 academic year.

Randy's Recap

By Randy Hascall

Major changes at WSC
With the dismissal of three Wayne State football coaches, the shake-up of WSC's athletic department should be complete. In the past year, four coaches and the athletic director have all either resigned their athletic duties or had them taken away.

Berniece Fulton, the only volleyball coach Wayne State has ever had, was the first to step down from her coaching duties. Now, she is a full-time teacher in the health and physical education department.

Athletic Director John Merriman also resigned his position and is now devoting all of his time to teaching. Ron Jones took over that position for this school year and had to give up his baseball coaching position in order to accept athletic director's duties.

Bill Schwartz and Neil Blöhm will handle this year's baseball coaching job.

Now, Del Stollenberg, Ralph Barclay and LeRoy Simpson all have had their football coaching duties relieved. A search for a new head coach is beginning.

In an non-athletic change, Ed Elliott was named president of the college to succeed Lyle Seymour and Ruby Pedersen was named vice-president. Those changes don't affect athletics directly but do have an indirect effect on the athletic department since both offices have some control over WSC sports.

Prior to the recent resignations, appointments and reassignments the biggest change at Wayne State in the past decade was the dropping of major sports from the athletic department several years ago.

Fulton, Stollenberg, Barclay and Merriman have no coaching responsibilities at the present time although Stollenberg and Barclay may be appointed as assistant football coaches when a new head coach is hired. That decision will be left up to the new coach and only time will tell.

All of those individuals remain on the athletic department staff as teachers. Any one of them may be assigned coaching duties in another sport and some of them probably will be given some coaching assignments.

Who will it be?

With a head coaching vacancy at Wayne State, a search is now underway. Ron Jones said the college is looking for a young, energetic person for the job.

There are many qualified coaches in the college and high school ranks and I'm sure WSC will do its best to find the best-qualified individual.

A successful high school coach who automatically comes to mind is Bob Schnitzler of Battle Creek. The Wayne State College graduate has produced some fine teams at Battle Creek and should be a candidate if he applies for the position.

There are several other fine high school coaches who should be able to step in and fill the coaching position. Rather than list the names of some worthy candidates, I'll just wait and see who applies.

Several small college coaches may see Wayne State as a step ahead in their careers. During the next weeks, WSC will be making some contacts and looking hard for someone with a Master's degree or doctorate.

Can the Wildcats compete?

Wayne State officials say the college is working to upgrade its athletic program. I hope the program does grow and prosper through the many changes.

One of the few remaining questions is: "Does the college belong in the Central States Intercollegiate Conference?"

Since joining the conference, the Wildcats have struggled through some tough times athletically. The CSIC is a strong conference and has produced some fine athletic teams. At times, it appears Wayne State may simply be outclassed.

The other schools in the conference have much larger athletic budgets and easier recruiting as well as much higher enrollments.

Personally, I would like to see Wayne State withdraw from the CSIC. However, college officials have convinced me that it is near impossible to fill a football schedule without being in a conference. And joining another conference or organizing one is just as difficult.

We'll just have to wait and see what the future has in store.

Seniors finish careers

Wildcats close with loss

Wayne State's 1982 football squad closed out a long season by dropping a 23-0 verdict to Missouri Southern at Joplin, in Central States Intercollegiate Conference (CSIC) play Saturday.

Coach Del Stollenberg's Wildcats finished at 2-8 including 1-4 in CSIC action. The Lions of Missouri Southern, 16th-ranked in NAIA Division 1, finished at 7-2-1. Their 5-1-1 league mark was good for third place behind co-champions Pittsburg State and Kearney State.

Wayne State's offense sputtered again as the Cats were shut out for the third time of the year. WSC gained just 12 ground yards and 138 total yards and turned the ball over six times.

Meanwhile the wildcat defense was pierced for 222 rushing yards and 317 total. Lion tailback Harold Noirfalise gained 140 yards on 23 carries, the best day by any ballcarrier against the Cats this season.

The outcome of the game was never seriously in doubt after Noirfalise scored twice in the first five minutes of the game that was played on the artificial turf of Southern's Hughes Stadium. Southern's first play from scrimmage.

Noirfalise broke several tackles and raced in from 59 yards out to stake the hosts to a 6-0 lead. The PAT kick was wide.

MOMENTS LATER, Wildcat quarterback Mike Warren fumbled while trying to pass and the hosts recovered at the WSC 10. Noirfalise carried it over from the one four plays later and the Lions enjoyed a 13-0 lead just five minutes into the game.

The Cats penetrated inside the Southern 30 twice in the first half but came up scoreless both times. Southern blew a chance to pad the lead when Noirfalise fumbled at the Wildcat four yard line late in the half.

The Cats fumbled on their first offensive play of the second half to set up the only score of the third period. Terry Dobbs booted a 31-yard field goal to move the score to 16-0.

Southern got their final score after a short Wildcat punt. Lion quarterback Marty Schoenthaler threw a 10-yard touchdown pass to tight end Greg Golden for the final 23-0 margin.

A 29-yard effort by junior tailback Randy Frink paced the Wildcat ground game.

Frink also grabbed three passes for 35 yards and threw a 23-yard halfback pass.

WARREN COMPLETED 10 of 23 passes for 94 yards. He finished his senior season with 733 yards and four touchdowns.

Senior linebacker Ron Gilbert was in on 15 tackles and a fumble recovery. He finished at the top of WSC tackle charts in 82 with 128 stops, and grabbed four interceptions as well.

Safety Ken Kohhof had nine tackles on the day. The junior finished with 94 stops, second only to Gilbert, and his five interceptions were best on the squad.

Start saving now for a worry-free retirement

Build a retirement fund with the money that used to go for taxes

An IRA account is the answer to saving money for a comfortable retirement. Deposit up to $2,000 a year and if you are a working couple, deposit up to $4,000. Couples with only one wage-earner can contribute $2,250. The money you save and the high earned interest are tax-deferred until you withdraw at retirement when you'll probably be in a lower tax bracket.

Make periodic deposits or in a lump sum. And you can choose Midwest Federal's automatic monthly deposit plan, if you prefer.

Unlike some IRA plans, we charge no fees or commissions. And your money works right here in the community.

Football

 State College. They have made significant contributions to the program and to the college. We thank them for their efforts."
 Wayne State President Ed Elliott, who was not present during the press conference, said in a prepared news release "I appreciate the dedication of these men. They have worked hard to make the WSC football program one that is competitive. I know that they will do everything they can to make the new head football coach's job as easy and as effective as possible."
 THE PRESS conference was open to questions following the announcement. When asked if Wayne State will continue to be a member of the Central States Intercollegiate Conference, Jones replied that WSC is tied to the conference through 1985 and added that there has been no talk of change.

When contacted late Wednesday morning and asked if there may be a problem building up of 100 many non-coaching teachers in the athletic department, Elliott replied that there is some concern. To remedy that problem, individuals will be assigned coaching duties in other sports.
 Elliott said he, Jones and Vice-President Rudy Pedersen had held discussions concerning the football staff. They discussed problems, objectives and possible resolutions before Jones submitted his recommendation to Elliott.
STOLTENBERG'S HEAD coaching career at Wayne State comes to an end with a 62-70-5 record. His 1982 squad finished the year with a 2-8 record. He is the longest-tenured coach in the 70-year history of football at WSC and his teams have won 26 more games than any other Wildcat head coach.

Prior to his career at Wayne State, Stoltzenberg, 47, coached at Scribner and Grand Island high schools. His career record is 123-97-12.
 The Nebraska City native attended Peru State College where he played halfback and quarterback, earning Little All-American honors prior to his 1957 graduation. He earned his Master's degree at Wayne State and was named head coach at WSC in 1969.
 Stoltzenberg led his 1970 Wildcats to the school's only bowl appearance in the Mineral Water Bowl. His 1977 squad, picked to finish in the CSIC cellar in its first year of competition, earned conference runner-up honors during a 7-3-0 season. Stoltzenberg was named CSIC "coach of the year" that season.
BARCLAY, 53, is Wayne's senior coach with 17 years of experience. He was graduated from Bradley University in 1953 where he was a two-time All-Missouri Valley Conference tackle and linebacker. Barclay earned his Master's degree from Bradley and his Doctorate from Columbia University.

 He coached and taught at Western Illinois University, Carthage College and Galva High School, all in Illinois. The Macomb, Ill. native's defensive units at Wayne State have often ranked among the national leaders in various statistical categories.
SIMPSON, 48, WILL continue his duties as head men's and women's track coach. He has been in charge of coaching special teams and receivers. The veteran coach attended college at Pittsburg State, Kan. where he earned both his Bachelor's and Master's degrees.
 He played football for Pittsburg and received his doctorate from the University of Arkansas.

Shuttle

THE WAYNE couple's weekend visit to Houston will catch their son in the midst of post-flight analysis.
 "What we do here is work with the six-degree freedom, man-in-the-loop simulator," young Wacker said. "That means we have a working forward cockpit."
 The McDonnell Douglas engineering and development division's primary task, as Wacker explains it, is to develop and test the onboard flight control system for the Columbia's descent.
 "That includes deorbit burn to touchdown," explained Wacker. "The working forward cockpit matches that on the shuttle and is equipped to simulate the re-entry flight."
 CALLED SES (for shuttle engineering simulation), the cockpit affords astronauts the opportunity to simulate re-entry flight during pre-flight training. "For instance, they can test the vehicle for response and find out what happens," explained Wacker, who has lived in suburban Houston since joining McDonnell-Douglas last April.

 "Mission Control is adjacent to our building," he said. "We're on stand-by during the flight to utilize SES should an anomaly (irregularity) arise during the re-entry," Wacker continued.
 "Another primary task for the SES equipment is to support the shuttle's mission evaluation Room (called MER).
 IT'S THE contractor's version of Mission Control," explained Wacker, who was a mathematics major during his one year stint at WSC.
 "It's configured similar to that at Mission Control, which is what everyone sees on television," he continued.
 "Mission Control is only the tip of the iceberg," he added. "For every control panel you see there, some 20 to 30 more exist to support that."
 Wacker said the "subsystems" are constantly auditing and monitoring all the shuttle's systems and the astronauts.

COMMANDER Vance Brand utilized the SES about a month before the flight, Wacker said. "I met him when he came over to fly the SES," Wacker continued. "He was investigating...well, you see, I had a little project...he investigated what we call PTIs (program test inputs)."
 The PTIs were executed during Tuesday morning's re-entry flight.
 "They were quick maneuvers utilized the SES about a month before the flight, Wacker said. "I met him when he came over to fly the SES," Wacker continued. "He was investigating...well, you see, I had a little project...he investigated what we call PTIs (program test inputs)."

was to become the fifth successful return of the Columbia.
 "Now we'll run real flight data and compare it with the simulation," he said.
 The information becomes an engineering and development tool for future flights.
 And, Wacker is looking forward to them. In fact, his pursuit of a masters degree is preparing the young engineer for NASA's coming space-station programs.
LOOKING FORWARD to his weekend visitors, young Wacker found it difficult to contain his excitement.
 His 63-year-old father and 58-year-old mother will fly to Houston, which is also near the couple's oldest son, Timothy, 29, his wife, Sinda, and their two children.
 The Wacker brothers have a sister, Jeannie, 27, who lives in Parsons, Kans.
 All are graduates of the Wayne school system and were active in a variety of community activities.
 The would-be astronaut, for instance, was a Wayne High School musician and winner of the John Philip Sousa award while playing in stage band here.

Farmerish feast

Storyteller says love grows on Nebraska's farms

by Randall Howell

Farmerish. That's a word that may best describe Saturday night's 11th annual Farmer's Appreciation Dinner at the Wayne State College Student Center.

More than 500 area farmer's and businessmen came to the banquet table that night to hear storyteller Dick Kimbrough of Crete talk nostalgically, if not historically, about Nebraska and Nebraskans.

The annual dinner is sponsored by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

KIMBROUGH, an author and director of communications at Doane College, Crete, hugged farmers with his anecdotal humor as he shared story after story about family farm values.

Farmerish was the word he used. Turning silk out of the sow's ear of criticism, Kimbrough explained how, years ago, he'd had some of his writing rejected by a New York publishing house editor. Kimbrough, a syndicated columnist, said the editor's letter of rejection called his manuscript, among other things, "too farmerish."

THE AUTHOR told area farmers and businessmen that anger was his initial reaction, but that he soon began to see it as a compulsion. In fact a salute to his book, "Love Grows on Farms."

Kimbrough published that book in 1978 and continued writing unabashedly about Nebraska farm life — the life he knew as a young boy growing up on a Big Springs farm.

"That book is filled with farmerish love," Kimbrough, a Kearney State College graduate.

With story after story, Kimbrough illustrated farmerish love and the role it played in his life.

LAUGHTER punctuated the evening as Kimbrough shifted from anecdote to anecdote, sharing his observations about the good life on Nebraska's family farms and in the state's small rural towns.

He applauded Nebraskans for being "involved with our neighbors." And, he saluted, with still more stories, the ability of Nebraskans to "laugh at ourselves."

Expressing a concern for what he termed is a lack of communication between country people and city dwellers, Kimbrough put Nebraska's rural residents in the vanguard of change.

"WE'RE NOT perfect, but we still represent the best value system in the country," Kimbrough told his audience.

"If we continue to hold them (the values), maybe the rest of the world will come around to our viewpoint...in fact, I already perceive a shift in that direction," the veteran teacher told the crowd.

"If we get the kind of values that are farmerish, then we have a chance to survive," added Kimbrough, who has just published another book, "Country Love," in collaboration with his wife, Bev, a Kearney native and professional artist.

"Love grows in abundance on the Nebraska farm," Kimbrough said as he closed his evening of storytelling.

KIMBROUGH'S appearance capped an evening that started with a social hour at the Wayne Fire Hall, then shifted to the WSC Student Center for the banquet and program.

Phil Kloster, city administrator, and Bob Enns, chamber president, welcomed the farmers and businessmen.

"It is important we build a solid bridge between the agriculture community and the businessmen here in Wayne," Kloster said. "One without the other would make it very difficult to survive," he added, noting that the city has renewed its emphasis on building that bridge.

KLOSTER challenged the chamber to set up an agriculture division within the coming year and to create a "seat or two" on the organization's board of directors.

"The chamber has a vested interest in your success in the rural community," Kloster continued.

Agreeing, Enns told the farmers they represent the No. 1 industry in northeast Nebraska.

"We rely very much on input from you, the farm community," he said. "We're here to honor you...we salute you."

Livestock Feeders to meet

The Northeast Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association is holding its annual membership dinner meeting, Monday, Nov. 22 at the Black Knight in Wayne. A social hour, sponsored by the Pender State Bank will begin at 6:30 and will be followed by dinner (dutch treat) at 7:30.

Dr. Robert Star, of Norden Laboratories, Lincoln, will speak on control of respiratory diseases. Jack Fisher, vice chairman of the NLFA membership committee will also speak. Everyone owning or having an interest in livestock is invited to attend.

Corn production is down

Corn production in Nebraska on Nov. 1 is now estimated at 786.6 million bushels, two percent below both the Oct. 1 estimate and the 1981 crop. Yield is indicated at 114 bushels per acre, off two bushels from last month and one bushel from the 1981 and 1979 record. Acreage intended for grain harvest remains at 6.9 million, down one percent from last year.

Irrigated corn production is indicated at 620 million bushels, five percent below last year's record. Yield is forecast at 124 bushels per acre, down three bushels from last month and five bushels from last year's record as indicated ear weights are down from earlier expectations. Acreage for grain harvest remains at five million one percent under last year.

Dryland corn production is estimated at 166.6 million bushels, ten percent above last year. Yield per acre at 87.7 bushels is up 6 bushel from last month and 9.3 bushels from last year. Acreage for grain harvest continues at 1.9 million, 30,000 acres below last year.

Sorghum grain unchanged

Sorghum grain production continues to be estimated at 134.3 million bushels, down 19 percent from last year. Yield per acre at 79 bushels is the same as last month but one bushel below last year. Acreage for harvest remains at 1.7 million acres, 17 percent below last year.

Soybean production stable

Soybean production estimate remains at a record 85.1 million bushels, eight percent above the previous record for 1981. Yield per acre of 37 bushels is unchanged from last month but one bushel below last year's record. Acreage for harvest remains at a record 2.3 million, 11 percent above last year's previous record.

Locals help set policies

Marie George of Dixon and Mildred Fahrenholz of Allen, representatives of the Dixon County Farm Bureau, attended the state preliminary policy discussion meeting of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation, held at the Holiday Inn at Kearney on Nov. 11 and 12.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss and consolidate the many recommendations to the state organization for states and national policy for 1983. The recommendations come from the 88 county Farm Bureau organizations affiliated with the state organization.

The preliminary meeting is the first step at the state level in the adoption of policy for Nebraska

Farm Bureau in 1983. Recommendations are made to the American Farm Bureau Federation for positions to be taken on national and international issues.

RESULTS OF the preliminary policy discussion meeting go next to the State Policy Development Committee, composed of 19 men and women from all parts of Nebraska plus Gerald Beattie, Dawson County farmer who as vice president of the Nebraska Farm Bureau serves as chairman of the committee.

The Policy Development Committee drafts a slate of recommendations to be voted on by the voting delegates who represent the County Farm Bureaus at the state convention which will be held at North Platte, Dec. 5-8. Commodity representation on the committee includes cattle growers, cattle feeders, hog producers, dairy men, wheat growers, corn and sorghum producers and sugar beet growers.

By such a policy development process come Farm Bureau's positions on such controversial subjects as land use planning, water resources conservation, environmental controls, taxes, farm programs, etc.

Representatives of the Dixon County Farm Bureau who will be voting delegates at the 1982 state convention are: Craig Rowland, Newcastle; Harold George, Dixon; and Larry Boswell, Allen.

Surveys are planned

The Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service is asking farmers and ranchers to participate in the important end-of-the-season crop and livestock surveys this fall, according to Jack L. Aschwege, state statistician. The Nebraska surveys are a part of the nationwide program of publishing accurate and timely Agricultural Statistics.

Aschwege points out that all individual farm information supplied will be kept confidential. The information collected from these surveys will be used in preparing State estimates of acreage and yield of all harvested crops, winter wheat seedings, cattle, hogs, sheep and chicken numbers and county estimates for major crop and livestock items.

The first set of questionnaires concerning acreage and production of fall harvested crops and winter wheat seeding will be mailed about mid-November. Surveys will also be carried out in late November and early December to obtain information on livestock and poultry numbers and winter wheat seedings.

Many cattle producers will also be surveyed in late December and early January. Some farmers will be contacted by phone or personally visited Aschwege said.

Farmer participation is voluntary but essential in providing reliable estimates on acreage and livestock numbers, he pointed out. These estimates are important if farmers, and ranchers, and their organizations are to have a sound basis for making and adjusting production, storage and marketing plans.

Aschwege said the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service will release the State and National estimates for fall seeded wheat acreage and hog inventories December 22, 1982; annual crop production January 13, 1981, and inventories of sheep in January 26 and poultry and cattle January 28, 1983.

Copies of the releases providing Nebraska and U.S. data are available upon request, free of charge to survey respondents. The National report summaries are available after 3 p.m. on the day of release on the FARMERS' 900 NEWSLINE at a cost of 50 cents per call. The number is 900-976-0404.

Low grain prices

Producers face dilemma

With low grain prices leaving little margin for error, producers face a dilemma, according to a University of Nebraska agricultural economist.

They can sell the grain despite low prices, or they can store it, which costs money and may mean building more storage facilities, Roy Frederick said.

But there's a bright spot. The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Commodity Credit Corporation announced lower interest rates for commodity and farm storage loans disbursed during November.

CCC loans for November carry a 9.75 percent interest rate, down from 11 percent. The reduction may encourage producers to choose to store grain and wait out low price doldrums, Frederick said, and it reflects a larger trend of lowering rates for all interest costs.

Frederick termed the reduction "significant," but said some of its beneficial effects depended on whether or not grain prices rise enough.

Farmers use the loans for two purposes, he explained. One is to build storage, the other to finance production.

In financing crops, the loans' effectiveness depends on whether grain prices rise enough to make paying off the loans and interest charges worthwhile.

FREDERICK EXPLAINED that farmers can either pay off the loan, or, if prices don't justify that, treat the grain as collateral and turn it over to the government.

"If the price of grain never goes up, then the interest rate reduction is no good at all because the farmers will just let the government have the grain," he said.

Frederick used corn as an example of how this worked.

What if corn prices drop, he said, is that corn prices would have to reach $2.74 per bushel to make paying the loan off profitable, considering the maximum nine-month loan period, the 9.75 percent interest rate and the average $2.55 per bushel loan rate for corn.

When interest rates stood at 11 percent, he said, corn prices needed to rise to $2.82 to bring a profit when paying off the loan.

In effect, the price of corn doesn't have to go up as much as before to make this profitable.

FARMERS USING CCC loans for storage construction can't really hand the storage facility over to the government in the same way farmers use grain as collateral on the loans.

They have to pay the loans back and interest rate reductions mean lower costs. Those lower costs may encourage more storage construction which may contribute to increasing grain prices, Frederick said.

If more farmers hold grain back from the market, the rising grain prices would be a subtle, but more significant, benefit from the interest rate reduction. Increasing grain prices during the first week of November can be attributed to more farmers holding grain from the market, he added.

While holding grain out of the market temporarily doesn't solve fundamental supply demand imbalances for U.S. grain commodities, it provides short term relief, he said.

FOUR RULES FOR HOUSEPLANT SUCCESS

Some people seem to have a "green thumb" when it comes to growing plants. But this ability is based on a lot of experience but even an inexperienced person can have success with growing indoor plants if a few rules are followed:

These basic houseplant rules involve water, light, fertilizer and soil mix.

RULE NO. 1 - SOIL MIX

Generally most vigorously growing plants will need repotting every year or two. Check the plant by gently rapping the pot on a table's edge, turn upside down and remove the soil ball from the pot. If the soil ball is heavily covered with roots, its time to repot.

The good old-fashioned potting mix useful for most plants consists of equal parts rich garden soil, peat moss, and coarse sand (or perlite). Pasteurize mixture in oven before repotting at 180 degrees F. for 30 minutes.

RULE NO. 2 - WATERING

The second rule involves watering thoroughly until water drains out the pot's bottom. Then allow the plant to dry out again before watering. Whenever you do water remember to moisten the entire soil ball. Develop a "feel" for watering.

RULE NO. 3 - FERTILIZER

A third rule for houseplant success is proper fertilizing. During winter plants are working less and need less food, so fertilize once every two months. During the summer months when plant growth is more rapid, fertilize once a month. Fertilizers that are added to the water generally show quicker results than slow-release solids or granules.

RULE NO. 4 - LIGHT

The fourth rule involves sufficient light. Although some plants enjoy or tolerate low light levels, most plants need all the light they can get during our short autumn and winter days. This means that for many plants a sunny south window is ideal during the winter.
