New irrigation system planned for front-nine City commits funds to golf course project

A joint financing venture between the Wayne Golf Club and the City of Wayne is expected to provide the municipal golf course with a new irrigation system on the "front nine."

Approved unanimously Tuesday night by the City Council, the venture involves installing a $57,000 irrigation system on the city-owned portion of the course, which is on the north edge of the city just east of state Highway 15.

Under the joint venture, the Wayne Golf Club will contribute $27,000 toward the system, which is expected to be installed on the city-owned property this spring.

THE CITY'S PORTION of the contract is $30,000, which will be contributed at the rate of $4,000 per year for 7½ years.

The Wayne Golf Club, which is arranging the financing for the irrigation construction project, will service the debt.

The only setback the Wayne Golf Club received in seeking the financial agreement Tuesday night involved terms rather than the total contribution.

J. Alan Cramer, a member of the Wayne Golf Club board of directors and spokesman for the group, asked the City Council for the $30,000 at the rate of $6,000 per year for five years.

However, the City Council balked at the terms and, after discussion, passed an amended resolution that met the $30,000 request, but on a longer pay-out period.

JOINING CRAMER, who also is publisher of The Wayne Herald, in the financial request were Willis Lessmann, club president, Jim Marsh, vice president, Ron Dalton and Bill McQuistan, directors, Rudy Froeschle, manager, and Don Ecklenkamp, course superintendent.

"The club is not asking for a handout," Cramer told the City Council Tuesday night. "We are asking for $30,000 over a five-year period to save and maintain the golf course."

Using a number of statistics to underpin the long-standing relationship between the city and the golf club, Cramer said the course represented an asset to the community much like other recreational parks — including ballparks, the swimming pool, the library and other public facilities.

THE PIPE USED to irrigate the city-owned front-nine (The golf club owns the "back nine" of the 18-hole golf course.) is over 40 years old, Cramer told the Council.

Indicating that the "front-nine" system was costly to repair and maintain, Cramer also indicated it was not functioning up to par.

"We need your help and cannot do this without it," Cramer said.

"We can't wait any longer (to replace the "front-nine" system) and I don't think it's going to get any cheaper," Marsh, the club's vice president, added.

Marsh told the Council that the club had a $57,000 bid that required immediate response.

He said the bid was $23,000 below the estimated cost of the project five years ago, when the U.S. Golf Association survey team put a top priority on improving the "front-nine" irrigation system.

"WE WANTED IT to be a club project," Marsh explained. "But, the more we got into it, the more we realized that the club could not swing it alone."

Under an existing agreement between the club and the city, taxpayer dollars share only in the cost of fertilizer for the city-owned front nine.

A city well provides water for the front nine, but when the new irrigation system is installed it will feed off the club's well, which already irrigates the back nine.

No major opposition to the proposal came from the Council, though Councilman Darrell Heier pressed the club to justify the city's responsibility in the proposed project.

"I have problems with it," he said. "I have to represent the people who don't use it...the people who feel they get no benefit (from the course)."

USING AN ANALOGY, Cramer explained that a number of people who don't have children willingly support the city's parks, playgrounds and libraries.

Heier, pressing his point, suggested that he was concerned about the "privateness, or exclusiveness" of the golf course as a candidate for city financial aid.

"We're a city on the move...at least I hope that we are," explained Marsh. "The golf course is an asset, including being attractive to industry."

Marsh said that if the city had to take over the operation of the golf course, which grossed some $239,000 last year, it would face a $75,000 annual bill before considering equipment and personnel — all the club's responsibility now.

Wayne's lottery question headed for April election

With a little bit of luck at the ballot box, Wayne could be headed for a municipal lottery.

Voters will make a decision on the proposed municipal lottery during a citywide referendum that could put the question on an April ballot.

That's the upshot of a resolution unanimously approved by the City Council Tuesday night.

"THIS RESOLUTION is needed by your administration so that we can proceed with putting this issue (the lottery) on the ballot," explained Phil Kloster, city administrator, before the unanimous vote.

Passage of the resolution came two weeks after the concept of a municipal lottery was introduced to the City Council during its last regular meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 8.

At that meeting, Kloster promised to present a resolution setting up the framework for a citywide referendum.

This week, the Council heard Kloster explain that the resolution "does not authorize the starting of the lottery."

KLOSTER REMINDED the Council that the resolution only authorized the city to set up the special election, which is required under Nebraska state law.

"Once the issue is decided by the voters we will have something to go on," Kloster told the Council Tuesday night.

Kloster, who is betting that the lottery question gets city voter approval, told the Council the staff would "get all the legwork done" on the information campaign.

"If we are successful, and I think we will be, then we will be ready to make decisions on how to run it," Kloster told the Council.

RESPONDING TO a question from Councilman Darrell Heier on the mechanics of running a municipal lottery, Kloster said: "That's a decision we'll have to make if we go ahead with the election...at this point it is premature to say."

Kloster, noting that the city could run the lottery or have someone from outside Wayne handle it, explained that "the more

It's haul now, pay sooner

Prompt payment is not garbage at City Hall. At least, that seems to be the spirit of an ordinance approved by the Wayne City Council Tuesday night.

It tightens the payment policy for the city's Class A garbage haulers. The ordinance, which also clears up some of the language in city transfer station payment policies, requires Class A haulers to pay up by the 15th of the month for previous-month service, according to Phil Kloster, city administrator.

"We have no cut-and-dried policy for Class A haulers," Kloster told The Wayne Herald.

Tuesday night's ordinance authorizes the city administrator to suspend or revoke a Class A hauler's license for delinquent payment.

"We presently have a collection problem with Class A haulers," Kloster said. "We have one (Wayne Refuse Service) that is 90 days past due with a bill in excess of $3,000."

Kloster said that the end of February would make the bill 120 days past due. The city administrator and several councilmembers indicated that the problem was not new and that, from time to time, it had involved more than one Class A hauler.

"However, now we really have a problem with one (Wayne Refuse Service)," Kloster said. The city's only other Class A hauler is Mrsny Sanitation Service.

Under the ordinance, the Class A haulers would be given due process rights before the City Council on regaining a suspended or revoked license.

It's run from outside the less we'll have" in the general fund.

He also said that most of the cities running their own lotteries set up rules that bar the administrator, mayor and city councilmen from participating.

The city administrator suggested that, if Wayne voters gave the lottery the go-ahead, the City Council would have to set the guidelines.

"WE'LL BE BACK at the next City Council meeting (Tuesday, March 8) with some preliminary information along those lines," Kloster said.

During a discussion before the unanimous City Council vote, Kloster said: "I think it is one way to get some money into the city to offset some of the burden falling on the pro-

Decision on power costly for customer

A number of Nebraska communities, including Wayne, have been dealt a temporary setback in a continuing effort to hang onto long-range low-cost federal electric power allocations.

Despite winning the first round of what promises to be a long court battle, the 17 cities face the prospect of having power allocation contracts reopened if a federal judge's recent ruling is allowed to stand.

The ruling would force the Western Area Power Administration, a division of the U.S. Department of Energy, to reopen contracted power allocations to four northeast Nebraska cities that missed following application procedures and deadlines.

THE CITIES — South Sioux City, Madison, Wakefield and Randolph — have sued WAPA for hydroelectric power allocations after failing to meet the federal application deadlines.

Initially, the cities failed in an attempt to obtain an injunction against WAPA for delivering low-cost power to 19 other Nebraska communities that had complied with federal application deadlines.

Pothole paradise

A MILD WINTER, plus several weeks of spring-like weather, has brought the Wayne pothole out of hibernation. Some cities have initiated an adopt-a-pothole program in an effort to fund the repair bill for stretches of city streets like this Seventh Street scene near Parnida Inc. By the looks of the city thoroughfares, Wayne could use some creative financing for what is becoming a pothole paradise.

Area gas prices hit 5-year low

Motorists are driving about the same amount, spending less and smiling more. Retail gasoline prices in Wayne have hit a five-year low.

Motorists are now paying 105.9 cents for a gallon of regular gas at most self-service pumps and some full-service pumps. That's a drop of more than 30 cents a gallon from the highest figure that was reached in Wayne.

A FIVE-CENT per gallon Federal tax on gasoline will go into effect on April 1 and may deter the local gas price from dropping below $1 a gallon.

Still, Lee Tietgen, manager of Coryell Derby, thinks the price of gas may come down a little further. He points out that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) is having difficulties setting a standard price on its oil and petroleum. England has now lowered its price so OPEC is expected to follow trend by dropping its price another seven dollars per barrel, Tietgen said.

The veteran service station manager estimates the local price of 105.9 is the lowest point since about 1977. The price of tires could also possibly drop as a result of the lower wholesale prices, he said, pointing out that a considerable amount of oil is used to produce tires.

TIETGEN SAID motorists don't seem to be buying more gasoline but added that farmers are buying more gas at the pump. They are anticipating that fuel prices will continue to decline and will wait for lower prices before placing orders to fill their farm tanks.

The highest price charged for a gallon of regular gas at Wayne stations is believed to be 136.9. The new, low rate offers no margin for profit on a gallon of regular.

Another Wayne gas station operator said that local competition has helped lower the cost of gas. He said that gasoline is now being sold at cost and added "it's hard to make a living. We're actually giving gas away."

The Midwest should be the last region to feel the effect of OPEC's dropped wholesale prices and the future of gas prices in Wayne is anyone's guess. With the summer driving season ahead, consumption is expected to increase.

But, motorists now seem to be more content knowing that they are paying the lowest price for fuel since gas climbed from the 60-cent range to nearly $1.40 a gallon.

police report

Warm, spring-like weather has slowed the frequency of fender-bender accidents in Wayne during the past week as police handled only two mishaps since last Wednesday.

However, a number of complaints, including an attempted break-in at the Rain Tree Drive-In Liquor store, have kept the department busy.

According to police, officers chased subjects from the rear of the liquor store in the early hours of Saturday morning.

THE SUBJECTS escaped, but an investigation at the scene revealed the culprits had torn a window screen from the frame.

Police contacted the owner, but further investigation revealed no entry was gained to the building.

Several hours later, at 9 a.m. Saturday, police received a report from nearby M&S Oil Co. that lettering on a company advertising sign had been stolen during the night.

In other police action, officers responded to a report of a fight in the Homelown IGA parking lot late Friday night.

When officers arrived, the fight was no longer in progress, but one party was still at the scene with minor injuries, according to police.

ON THURSDAY, police investigated a case of criminal mischief involving the breaking of a rear-view mirror on a vehicle parked in the 100 Block of Second Street west.

And, on Friday, police were called to the scene of a party at Seventh and Logan streets, where objects were being thrown on private property.

On Saturday, police recovered a lost purse belonging to a Wayne State College student living at Morey Hall.

And, on Monday, police investigated a case of vandalism involving the destruction of a school-crossing sign along Seventh Street in front of St. Mary's Elementary School.

Police also investigated a case involving the reported theft of clothes from an Eighth Street east residence.

ON TUESDAY, police investigated a minor motor vehicle accident at the intersection of Second and Main streets.

The accident involved drivers Bonnie Sprouls and Dee Dion of Wayne. Damage did not warrant a report.

Also on Tuesday, police were called to the scene of a two-car collision in the 200 Block of Windom Street.

According to police, a 1963 Ford, driven by Judy Hammer of Wayne, was backing from a private driveway when it struck a parked 1973 Chrysler, owned by William O'Brien of Wayne.

Uncashed checks a state windfall

By Melvin Paul
Nebraska Press Association

Anyone who has ever struggled to balance a checkbook knows what a good feeling it is to come to the sudden realization that there's a little bit more money in the account than you figured on.

Something like that happened to the Legislature's Appropriations Committee last week.

State Treasurer Kay Orr told the committee that she was able in one bump to increase the state general balance by $1.5 million. It's not nearly enough to lead the state out of its fiscal problems, but it helps.

ORR TOLD THE committee the increase in the general fund balance was the result of her cancelling old state-issued checks which have gone uncashed.

She said her office identified the uncashed checks from handwritten records that were maintained prior to computerization in May 1978.

State checks are honored for up to two years from their issuance, she said. Since taking office in June 1981 Orr has Sen. Rex Haberman's LB 8, address inmate idleness in city and county jails. The two bills differ slightly in their approaches, but both share the goal of putting local jail inmates to work on community improvement projects.

Schmitz, whose bill had encountered opposition from organized labor, developed his bill in consultation with state corrections director Charles Benson and state Game and Parks Commission Director Gene Mahoney.

The Game and Parks Commission has been the largest user of prison labor among state agencies, putting inmates to work at Fort Robinson, the Platte River State Park and elsewhere.

LB 500 would authorize corrections officials to house inmates overnight in state-owned facilities such as hospitals near their work site. The provisions would eliminate daily commuting from the inmate's penal institution, and thereby permit great use of prison labor.

AMONG THE items on the 1983 legislative agenda is a proposed pay raise for state judges.

Recall that last year, an election year, lawmakers sent Gov. Charles Thone a bill which granted raises to the judges and to the governor. Thone vetoed it.

Now the judges are back in an effort to rectify matters. Under LB 269, their pay would increase 26 percent in two increments between now and next January.

"It's extremely demoralizing for those on the bench," Chief Justice Norman Krivosha told the Legislature's Judiciary Committee last week regarding judges' attitude toward their pay.

THEY LAST received a pay increase in 1981.

This year's version of the judicial pay bill, would hike the salaries of Supreme Court judges to $60,863 annually in two increments between now and next January. They now earn $48,215 annually.

District court judges would see their pay raised to $56,298 annually from the current $44,691 annual salary.

County, municipal and workmen's compensation court judges would receive $51,733 annually, an increase from their current $41,068.

Income tax bill stalls in Lincoln

The Legislature was busy last week as it attempted to complete its business before adjourning for a 4-day weekend on Thursday.

In floor action Tuesday, LB 59 was passed over for consideration on the request of its introducer. This bill embodies the governor's proposal to raise the state income tax to 20 percent, retroactive to Jan. 1.

Earlier in the session there was substantial opposition to the bill and it appears now that supporters of LB 59 have doubts about its passage.

senator merle von minden

AS I STATED in an earlier column, there is no need to raise our current tax rate from 18 percent to 20 percent of our federal income tax.

A 19 percent rate (actually around 18.6 percent) if you include the corporate income tax) will be sufficient to offset the estimated reduction in state revenues because of the upcoming 10 percent reduction in federal income taxes.

I hope that message has gotten through to the supporters of LB 59 and that the proposal will be withdrawn or revised to reflect the proper rate.

The State Supreme Court was before the Judiciary Committee again arguing for a pay increase. At a salary of $44,282 a year, I had one judge tell me that it was difficult having to worry each month about where his next house payment was coming from.

IT IS DIFFICULT for me to sympathize with him when the state's workers and farmers are having trouble making ends meet or even finding a job. The bill would increase the Supreme Court judge's salaries by 24 percent.

In addition, when you raise the salaries of the Supreme Court, you automatically raise the salaries of all judges because district and county judges receive a proportionate share of the Supreme Court salary.

With economic conditions being what they are, I don't believe that now is the time to raise judges' wages.

LB 220 was scheduled for public hearing on Thursday evening. It would allow cities or villages to establish a pension plan for fire and rescue volunteers.

I AM AGAINST the bill because I don't believe it is a program that our small cities and villages can afford. Although voluntary under LB 220, it could easily be made mandatory later on.

Volunteer firemen and rescue squads perform their duties admirably and unselfishly because they know that there is a need for these services and without a volunteer program, there would probably be no fire department or rescue squad for their communities at all.

This is and has been a sufficient reason to volunteer for these organizations. I don't believe a pension plan is necessary to insure future participation.

Wednesday night was a long evening as the Judiciary Committee met at 7 p.m. to hold a hearing on LB 203 which would repeal the death penalty.

ALTHOUGH advocates of the bill claim that the death penalty is no deterrent, I don't believe that is something which can be determined.

We have no way of knowing how many people have not committed a crime because they were deterred by the possible punishment. Justice, as well as deterrence, should be a prime concern. Let us not forget the murderer's victim.

Bad news misses meat of issue

By Cheryl Westcott
Nebraska Farm Bureau

The National Live Stock and Meat Board wonders in a recent newsletter, "How come they never say 'nice' things about the meat industry?"

The question is a valid one and there are a number of answers. But consider for a moment the good things about meat that you've heard lately.

You might recall hearing or seeing the theme "Somehow, nothing satisfies like beef." That's the beef industry's campaign slogan for its own effort to promote beef.

It's an aggressive campaign, and one that is costing the industry some big advertising dollars.

The other place you hear good things about meat is in fast food commercials, including the ones promoting restructured meat, a process developed at the University of Nebraska.

NOW CONSIDER the bad things you've heard about meat.

You might recall such things as last year's report that trichinae may still be present in pork cooked in a microwave oven; or the National Academy of Sciences report linking diet and cancer; or the continuing uproar over the USDA dietary guidelines; or the more recent controversy about changing beef grading standards; or a vegetarian actor on a TV talk show claiming that meat made him feel bloated or unhealthy; or perennial complaints about meat prices.

And doubtless you've heard any number of charges made by animal welfareists: that meat animals are raised inhumanely in confinement; that they are unhappy; that their rights are being violated.

Chances are if you total the good things on one hand, you've got fingers left over. With the bad things, you probably ran out of fingers long before you exhausted your recollections.

BUT BESIDES the discrepancies in numbers, there's another interesting distinction between the good news and the bad news about meat.

Most of the good things are being said or printed because the meat industry or fast food franchisers are paying to bring you the word.

But most of the bad things are coming to you as straight news.

The meat industry—and the meat producer—is paying to tell its story, while the horror stories are broadcast or published as news, free of charge.

It is a journalistic convention, of course, that bad incidents or situations or possibilities are automatically more interesting than those that show a positive situation, and are therefore more likely to be called "news."

The meat industry is not alone in this. Young people and used car salesmen get about the same treatment.

BUT A second question arises from this cost comparison.

Why doesn't the meat industry respond to the criticism levied at it by the animal welfareists, self-proclaimed nutrition experts and others? Why not go for the free publicity rather than paying to get the word out?

In many cases, the meat industry has decided it's better to let a minor allegation pass into obscurity than to challenge it, give it new life, and have to live with it and fight it for a much longer time.

It's a case of choosing one's moments, the issues worth fighting for.

But when the charges are too virulent or large to ignore, the meat industry has made a response, sometimes drawing—as many headlines and as much airtime as the original statement.

However, making this response is no easy matter. The meat industry is not one industry, but rather a number of related groups: the National Cattlemen, Pork Producers, Meat Institute, Stockgrowers, etc.

Obviously, a consensus must be reached to have a strong position, and this cannot always be an easy matter.

ON IMPORTANT occasions, a response must be made. But this is always a defensive approach, a "guilty until proven innocent" posture.

A better approach is the one the beef, pork and lamb industries have undertaken recently: extensive consumer campaigns designed to help increase demand for their particular meat by accentuating the positive aspects of red meat, not by defending their product.

As mentioned, these are costly, diverting funds from other concerns. But for the meat industry right now, the best defense is a good offense.

Strong consumer demand will go a long way in putting "bad news" into perspective.

Fore the future

The City Council's decision to join the Wayne Golf Club for improvement to the municipal golf course was a wise one.

No doubt it will be met with some short-sighted criticism, the decision demonstrates the Council's determination to keep the long-range picture in perspective.

Because of a unique, and long-standing, golf club-city relationship, Wayne has reaped the benefit of an attractive community asset. And, though it is often criticized for being too exclusive and too private, some working figures tell a different story.

More than 200 family memberships exist. That translates into some 650 Wayne area family members — 53 memberships are from out of town — using the golf course.

About 2,600 golfers paid green fees at the course last year alone. Furthermore, the course hosted the state Class C Golf Tournament. About 100 Wayne area youngsters use the course, at no cost, during the summer recreational program.

In addition, the course is used by high school and college students in connection with golf classes. Furthermore, the golf course, which is managed and maintained by the golf club, becomes a valuable asset to the community as it develops a comprehensive plan for growth.

Though it is difficult to measure the impact in exact dollars, the course generates business in Wayne far beyond the $124,000 it grossed during the most recent golfing season.

Even to the non-golfer, the existence of a well-maintained and well-managed municipal golf course offers options that do not exist in hundreds of Nebraska communities.

The value goes well beyond recreation, though that cannot be discounted. And, Wayne has a vested interest in the golf course — an interest that is communitywide and an investment is working for the future.

Fiscal frustration

My friends and I — have a concern with the fiscal condition of our governments and are troubled with the economic condition of our society. We believe the financial problems rest primarily in the policies and actions of all levels of government, and with their intrusion into the management of the affairs of the citizens.

These governments take too great a share of the earnings of wage earners and entrepreneurs for the operation of government, and for the funding of programs and services that have little to do with the business of governing.

But we also believe that the inappropriate use of government by demands on elected officials for such actions is a major cause of too much government with taxes that are too high.

The pressures on legislators comes from organizations in our counties and cities and in the state.

Such groups and their leadership have discovered they can exist and profit from subsidies and grants and aid paid from the taxes levied on their neighbors, their employers, their members.

Our state might not be facing shortfalls in revenue, and borrowing might not be a cause of increasing federal debt had there been constraint and respect in the use of the power of government to tax.

The demands of these groups are a major contributor to the fiscal problems of government and of the economic problems of our country.

We consider these groups to be beggars at the door of the public treasury.

Winside's 13th champion

Hard work pays off as Thies wins gold

By Randy Hascall

For the past six months, John Thies has reported to school at 7:30 every morning, along with some of his teammates, to run and lift weights.

The dedication and hard work paid off Saturday afternoon as the Winside senior won the Class D 112-pound gold medal in the Nebraska State Wrestling Championships at Lincoln.

The win by Thies gives Winside an individual champion in each of the past four state tournaments. Mark Koch won a gold medal last year and Brian Foote won gold the previous two years.

WINSIDE RANKS among the top 20 schools according to most individual champions in the history of wrestling. Thies is Winside's 13th champion.

"John deserved it. He was there every morning at 7:30 to run and lift weights," said Winside coach Paul Sok. "He's one of the hardest workers and most dedicated wrestlers I've ever had."

To win the coveted gold medal, John had to dethrone Rex Marty of Leigh, last year's Class D 98-pound champion. Thies lost to Marty in last year's district finals. They hadn't met this season.

After a scoreless first period, Marty gained the upperhand in the championship match as he scored a reversal on Thies in the second period. The Winside senior countered with a reversal of his own late in the period to tie the match at 2-2.

WITH THIES starting the third period in the bottom position, the advantage was in his favor. He earned a reversal with about 35 seconds left in the match for a 4-2 edge and rode Marty out to insure the victory.

"I wanted to avoid tying up with him because he's so strong. I didn't want to get upper body with him. Going into the match I knew it was important to get the takedown right away. It's nice not to be down going into the second period," Thies said. "When I got behind I thought I could get away."

Thies finished with a career record of 54 wins and 28 losses. After a sophomore season of 10-15, he went 20-8 his junior year and 24-5 this year. He didn't wrestle his freshman year and he says that one-year layoff hurt.

The Winside senior said his goal this season was to win a state championship. Sok has had the privilege of coaching a state champion in every state tourney since he came to Winside.

PRIOR to the 112-pound finals, Sok told Thies to win the gold medal for his mother, John, who is the youngest in his family, said his parents follow him pretty well.

In addition to hard work and dedication, Thies attributes his success this season to coaching and practice against his teammates. In practice he worked out with four heavier wrestlers and coach Sok. Wrestling against state fourth-place medal winner Curt Rohde, was especially helpful he said.

As far as the possibility of continuing his wrestling career in college, Thies says he'll just have to wait and see what happens after high school.

Thies' state results with records in parentheses:

First round: pinned Ray Miller (13-8) of Clay Center in 4:20.

Quarterfinals: decisioned Doug Jordan (17-7) of Harrison 7:2.

Semifinals: decisioned Scott Garcia (23-6) of Shelton 6:0.

Finals: decisioned Rex Marty (18-6) of Leigh 4:2.

Wildcats place 10th in Class D

Winside coach Paul Sok and his team had hoped for a top 10 finish in the State Wrestling Tournament and they got it Saturday afternoon.

Led by the first place finish of John Thies, the third place finish of Brian Bowers and the fourth place finish of Curt Rohde, the Wildcats placed seventh in the Class D team race with 52 points.

But, the Wildcats fought back through the consolation bracket to give their coach a seventh place finish. Last year, Winside tied for second in Class D.

John Thies won a gold medal at 112 pounds, Brian Bowers placed third at 155 pounds and Curt Rohde placed fourth at 119. All of Winside's other wrestlers lost their matches.

Their results with records in parentheses:

126—Chris Olson (5-19) of Winside was pinned in 1:54 by state runner-up Frank Marsh (25-1) of Bertrand in the first round.

145—Mike Jaeger (13-12) of Winside was decisioned 8-0 by Roger Schledewitz (24-1) of Hemingford in the first round.

167—Jeff Thies (21-10) of Winside was decisioned 4-2 by Steve Williams (17-8) of Dorchester in the first round.

Sok had just about given up on a top 10 finish Thursday night after all but one of his seven wrestlers had lost at least one match.

Behind the strong performance of Kevin Koenig, the Wayne Blue Devils finished the State Wrestling Tournament with 18 1/2 points.

Koenig placed third at 185 pounds to give Wayne its only individual medal. Three other Blue Devil wrestlers competed in the state meet but all were shutout.

Junior Chad Janke finished his season with a 16-10 record as he was pinned in 3:39 by Shane Schlager (21-8) of Chadron. Because Schlager lost his second match 5-2 to Kenny Luther of Lexington, Janke didn't get to wrestle again.

Sophomore Tim Book was eliminated from the state competition after two matches, ending his season with an 11-16 mark. He was pinned by Kurt Mstrom (24-2) of Raymond Central in 1:35 of the first round. In the first round of consolations, Jeff Bloom (21-4) of Ord decisioned Book 4-3.

At 167 pounds, senior Gerald Monk saw his high school career come to a close when he was pinned in 3:10 by Curtis Schell (15-5) of Norris. The loss ended Monk's final season with an 18-9 record. Schell lost 11-7 to Ted Woods of Minden in the second round to eliminate Monk.

KEVIN KOENIG of Wayne uses his strength to apply pressure on Mitch Stoltenberg of St. Paul.

Koenig takes 3rd place, sets school records

By Randy Hascall

Kevin Koenig failed in his quest to become Wayne High's first state gold medal winner but the 185-pound sophomore served notice that he'll be one of the state's favorites the next two years.

Koenig lost his quarterfinal match at state but won a third place medal the hard way. He rallied through the consolations with four straight wins to take third.

His season record of 29-1 is the best in the history of wrestling at Wayne High. Since he began wrestling, Koenig has been beaten only four times. He lost once as a seventh grade freestyle wrestler, twice last year and once this year. He has nearly 90 wins in his career. He was expected to qualify for state last year but suffered a pinched nerve in his neck.

AS A FOURTH grader, Kevin began tagging along with his dad, coach Don Koenig, when he held high school wrestling practice sessions. At practice, some of the wrestlers used to grab Kevin and playfully grapple with him.

Now, most wrestlers would rather keep their distance.

Don Koenig said his son didn't begin working with weights seriously until he was in eighth grade. The weight lifting has paid off as Kevin relies heavily on his strength to restrain his opponents' tactics. Kevin had given up only four points all season until the state tournament. State runner-up and defending state champion Darin Lintner of Syracuse scored two points on Koenig before pinning him in their quarterfinal match. Kevin gave up no other points at state.

NO WRESTLER has scored a takedown on Koenig during the 1982-83 season. Kevin recorded 32 takedowns during that time. Lintner is the only wrestler who didn't yield a takedown to the Wayne sophomore as the two battled to a scoreless first period.

"I know losing was hard for Kevin but I think maybe the loss helped him in a way. He could have been in the finals but I think it was a combination of first state journey jitters and facing the defending state champ," Don said. "I'm glad he could even participate after last year's injury. He did a great job and I'm proud of him as his coach and father."

In his third place match against Mitch Stoltenberg of St. Paul, Koenig took a 2-0 lead on a first period takedown. He scored a reversal in the second period and held him in the third for a 4-0 win.

In the quarterfinal match, Kevin trailed by one point to Lintner when he made a mistake in the third period. Koenig fell to his back, Lintner forced him down and a pin was called. The entire move took a matter of just a couple seconds.

KOENIG WON'T get a chance to face Lintner in a rematch. The senior completed his high school career with a 21-3 record Saturday.

Don said Kevin needs about a three-week layoff after wrestling season. He will soon concentrate on the shot put and discus for the Wayne High track team. Last summer, Koenig lifted weights each morning at 6:30 before working at Lloyd Straight's farm.

Next year, Kevin will be back and he'll be more determined than ever to win that elusive gold medal. He is the first sophomore state medal winner his father can remember.

Koenig's route to third place at state (records in parentheses):

First round: pinned Phil Burling (12-9) of Aurora in 3:40.

Quarterfinals: was pinned in 4:32 by Darin Lintner (19-2) of Syracuse.

Consolation first round: pinned Jerry Swanson (21-4-1) of Alliance in 2:11.

Consolation second round: decisioned Dave Pieters (22-8) of Auburn 7:2.

Consolation semifinals: decisioned Brad Janousek of Norris (24-6) 6-2.

Consolation finals: decisioned Mitch Stoltenberg (24-3) of St. Paul 4-0.

BRIAN BOWERS of Winside rides Rourk Erickson of Harvard enroute to a 2-0 consolation quarterfinal win.

Rohde and Bowers finish careers with state medals

The high school wrestling careers of Winside's Curt Rohde and Brian Bowers came to successful ends Saturday as the two Wildcats claimed Class D medals in the State Wrestling Tournament at Lincoln.

Bowers finished his senior season with a 27-2 record and third place finish in the 155-pound weight class. He won his first match, lost his second and then had to win four consecutive matches to bring home the third place medal.

Rohde followed much the same route while winning his fourth place medal. He won his first match, lost his second, won the next three and then lost in the consolation finals.

Bowers defeated Sam Delsley of Red Cloud 7-2 in the third place match. After a scoreless first period, Delsley scored the match's first point with an escape in the second period. Brian took him down for two points but Delsley knotted the score at 2-2 with another escape.

THE WINSIDE senior dominated the final period as he scored a reversal and put Delsley on his back for three points and a 7-2 win.

Rohde was decisively 13-3 by Bill Shock of Hemingford. The Winside senior got off to a bad start as Shock scored a takedown and two quick near pins for an 8-0 lead in the first period.

Each wrestler scored a reversal in the second period. Curt also was assessed a one-point penalty for locking his arms. Rohde, Winside's cradle master, tried to work a cradle on Shock but the Hemingford junior stood up on him and countered the move. Shock held on for a 13-3 major decision.

Bowers' 155-pound results (records in parentheses):

First round: decisively Vaughn Drake (21-4) of Dorchester 3-2.

Second round: was decisively 6-3 by Kent Sierks (21-4) of Sandhills.

Consolation first round: decisively Jon Freeland (17-10) of Axtell 5-3.

Consolation quarterfinals: decisively Rourk Erickson of Harvard 2-0.

Consolation semifinals: decisively Darryl Bean (21-6) of Arnold 6-3.

Consolation finals: decisively Sam Delsley (24-5) of Red Cloud 7-2.

ROHDE'S 119-POUND results (records in parentheses):

First round: decisively Tim Barto (16-7) of Wilcox 11-4.

Second round: was pinned in 4:45 by Mike Meyers (7-1) of Lincoln Christian.

Consolation - first round: pinned Mike Jesse (16-7) of Cambridge in 2:10.

Consolation quarterfinals: pinned Warren Breinig (21-6) of Oxford in 2:34.

Consolation semifinals: decisively Dan Matthews (19-13) of Oshkosh 7-2.

Consolation finals: was decisively 13-3 by Bill Shock (26-3) of Hemingford.

Career Fair

Area college students invited to explore job possibilities

The business organizations at Wayne State College will offer students from 15 area colleges opportunities to explore job possibilities with potential employers at the Nebraska College Career Fair Thursday, March 3.

Main speaker for the event will be Richard Crawford, associate vice president of Dain Bosworth, Inc. of Sioux City.

ALTHOUGH Crawford has been blind since he was 15, he hasn't let that affect his career climb.

"I've always had what I wanted in my life, because I've always been willing to pay the price," he says. "I like being a winner, but I'm willing to pay the price to be a winner."

Crawford's latest venture reflects his winning attitude.

"I'm just beginning the training to become part of Sioux City's underwater rescue team. Everybody says it's so dark and mucky down there you can't see your hand in front of your face anyway. A friend told me I'd be a natural."

CRAWFORD SAID that while other team members have to adjust to the darkness of the underwater environment, he will feel more comfortable. "I'm accustomed to that anyway," he said.

In addition to Crawford's appearance, the Nebraska College Career Fair will include workshops on various career topics ranging from men/women job conflicts to interviewing and resume writing.

The fair also will provide many area businesses the opportunity to make contacts with students seeking employment.

Registration for the event will be delivered at the Ley Theatre at 9 a.m. in the WSC Student Center.

Crawford's speech will be delivered at the Ley Theatre at 9:45, and the day's activities will conclude with a "Dress for Success" style show at 3 p.m., also in Ley Theatre.

THE NEBRASKA College Career Fair is sponsored by Delta Sigma Pi professional fraternity, Phi Beta Lambda national business honorary, and the WSC Life Learning Development Center.

For more information, businesses or students may contact the division of business, Wayne State College, Wayne, Neb. 68787, or phone (402) 375-2200, ext. 245.

Faculty profile

Robert McCue

The environment at Wayne State College is "very good," according to Dr. Robert McCue, associate professor of Biology. "You get to know the students very well, and I think that's important."

Dr. McCue also had praise for his colleagues. "I'm somewhat of a 'junior partner,' and everybody in the division, especially in the biology department, has been good to me," he said.

Before coming to Wayne State a little over four years ago, Dr. McCue taught for a year at the University of Nevada at Las Vegas. Dr. McCue earned his bachelor's degree from Northern Arizona University in 1970. He served as research director in tumor research at Tulane University in New Orleans, La. while studying for his master's and doctorate degrees from Tulane which he received in 1973 and 1977, respectively.

Steele Breeze playing at WSC

One of the hottest young bands in the country, Steel Breeze, will be featured performers at a concert in Wayne State College's Rice Auditorium on Wednesday, March 2. Steel Breeze struck it big with their hit "You Don't Want Me Anymore" on RCA Records. They have since followed it up with "Lost in the 80's" and their latest, "Dreaming Is Easy."

CALIFORNIA-BASED Steel Breeze caught the attention of record producer Kim Fowley, who helped get them signed by RCA.

Steel Breeze is composed of leader/keyboardist Rod Toner, rhythm guitarist/songwriter Ken Goorabian, lead guitarist Waylin Carpenter, bassist Vinnie Pantaleoni, and vocalist Ric Jacobs.

Also appearing in concert will be featured guest Tommy Eglin, an increasingly popular performer from Sioux City, and special guest stars The Tracterz, a South Dakota-based group with a large following.

ALL WAYNE State College students, faculty, staff and administrators will be admitted to the concert free of charge, but must pick up their ticket by Wednesday, Feb. 23, in the Wayne State Student Center.

General admission for non-WSC personnel is $8 in advance and $9 at the door.

Tickets may be purchased at WSC Student Center or at the Joint in Wayne; in Norfolk at KNEB Radio, Behmer Music, and both Mid-City locations; and in Sioux City at Uncle John's and Music Land.

The reading will be held in the KWSC-TV studios in the Val

Peterson Fine Arts Center of the Wayne State campus, and is free and open to the public.

Her third collection of poems, "Precognitions of an Uneasy Guest," was a finalist in the 1981 Associated Writing Programs Award Series.

Other awards Wright has received include a 1981 Creative Artists in Public Service Grant in poetry, the 1981 Pablo Neruda Prize from Nimrod Magazine, and a Fulbright-Hays Study Grant.

Power

The attempted injunction, which was denied in federal court in Lincoln, was an ill-fated 1982 legal maneuver designed to block low-cost electric power allocations to cities such as Wayne.

The four northeastern Nebraska cities then filed a lawsuit designed to force WAPA to reopen the allocations to include South Sioux City, Madison, Wakefield and Randolph.

THE SAME JUDGE who denied the injunction found in favor of the petitioners and against WAPA, according to Phil Kloster, city administrator.

Kloster, who sought and arranged the city's allocation from WAPA, told the City Council Tuesday night that the federal judge's ruling, if allowed to stand, would cost the city $150,000 in unnecessary electrical charges by Jan. 1, 1987.

The city administrator said that WAPA attorneys have pledged to appeal the federal judge's ruling.

"As I stated a year ago, these four cities did not attend to their duties and they missed the deadline," Kloster reminded the City Council.

"THEY WENT to the courts to try to solve the problem and we won a first round victory when the judge saw no reason to deny us the power," Kloster continued.

"But now they have a summary judgement in their favor which will have a possible effect on Wayne's contract with WAPA," Kloster continued.

"The judge sided with the cities seeking the allocation," Kloster added.

"I think it is kind of a sad thing when cities fight with cities, because some don't follow the rules," the city administrator told the City Council.

"WAPA IS CONVINCED it can overturn the decision," Kloster said, noting that the city signed the allocation contract last year after meeting the federal deadline.

Kloster suggested that the lawsuit filed by the four cities would be akin to Wayne suing other communities if state grants are denied during the coming budget year.

"If the state grants for programs don't fall our way, do we sue other cities over that?" he asked, rhetorically.

"It's a very poor precedent that's being set by the federal judge in the WAPA case," Kloster continued.

"I hope the resident of the City of Wayne don't have to pay the price for their failure to follow the rules," the city administrator said.

WAYNE IS NOT a co-defendant in the lawsuit filed by the four cities against WAPA.

And, according to Kloster, the city is expected to continue getting its portion of the WAPA allocation until the matter is resolved.

"I hope the courts will resolve it in our favor," Kloster told the City Council.

The city's allocation is 35 megawatts of WAPA power during the summer and 45 megawatts during the winter, according to Kloster.

The allocation is based on a 1983 WAPA low-cost federal power marketing plan that Kloster brought to the city's attention in late 1981.

By early 1982, the city had completed the paperwork and the negotiations to meet federal requirements and was awarded the allocation.

IN OTHER ACTION, the Council passed an ordinance that sets guidelines, and a permit requirement, for tree planting in city right-of-ways.

The ordinance, which was first brought before the Council last year, represents a streamlined version of the original, according to Kloster.

Kloster said the previous ordinance, which was withdrawn, was "much more detailed" and met with City Council opposition.

Tuesday night's ordinance, according to Kloster, sets up guidelines for city residents on the planting of trees on right-of-ways, particularly as it affects public utilities.

Kloster said the ordinance was prepared in cooperation with Vern Schulz, city public works superintendent.

ACCORDING TO Kloster, the new ordinance requires a permit for planting in the right-of-ways, such as terraces (the area between the sidewalk and the street).

"The permit procedure will help the city identify potential problems with tree roots and utilities," Kloster told the Council.

Furthermore, he said, the ordinance sets up a procedure to protect the city's right to maintain the right-of-ways, if necessary, through a tree-trimming operation.

Kloster said that the newly passed ordinance does not dictate to the property owner when it comes to the variety of trees or vegetation, merely the placement when it comes to utilities.

BEFORE ADJOURNING, the Council also approved a housing ordinance that reduced the required bond for councilmembers.

Under new state law, councilmembers need only be bonded to $1,000, according to Kloster.

He said the city ordinance on the books reflected the outdated $2,000 bonding level, which was no longer required.

Kloster also informed the Council that he and Police Chief Vern Fairchild had been accepted as a municipal team to attend an August seminar on disaster preparedness.

Kloster and Fairchild, who also is city and Wayne County Civil Defense director, plan to attend the Washington D.C. seminar with some 90 representatives from throughout the country.

THE SEMINAR, which is being sponsored by the International City Managers Association through the Federal Emergency Management Agency, is being underwritten on the strength of a successful grant application filed by Kloster.

During the meeting, Council also approved the city's participation in the 1983 All-Nebraska Community Improvement Program.

And, as the Council meeting opened Tuesday night, Kloster also took a few minutes to present Mayor Wayne Marsh the "Wrecker Call of the Year" award.

The award, a miniature tow truck, was presented in honor of the mayor's recent $35 towing experience while he was on a mid-winter lake outing with his brother.

IN ADDITION, Councilwoman Carolyn Fitter received the "Fuel Cuts of the Year" award.

Kloster presented her with a wooden stick for her attendance at the Nebraska League of Municipalities energy legislation sessions in Lincoln earlier this month.

The city administrator also noted that Wayne State College art instructor Pearl Hansen's artwork was on display in Council Chambers and throughout the second floor of City Hall.

Hansen is the third artist to be featured in the city-college joint venture.

perly taxpayer for the general fund."

Councilwoman Carolyn Fitter told the City Council that she had had little voluntary response from residents, but had taken an unofficial coffee-break poll during her shift at Providence Medical Center.

"I had one call last night and the person was in favor of it (the lottery)," she explained, noting that her coffee-break poll at PMC showed 13 in favor, 2 opposed and 2 uncommitted.

"HALF THE PEOPLE I talked to live in the country and towns like Concord," Fitter explained.

"That indicates to me that if (the lottery) could bring some money in from outside Wayne," she added, "Maybe we do have a chance with the lottery."

Kloster reminded the City Council that "anything we can earn off the lottery" will help offset expected increases in the property tax burden, which he noted was already straining under reduced state and federal aid.

The city administrator noted that a prime example of funding cutbacks involved the general revenue sharing program.

"The program is scheduled to expire in September," he said.

KLOSTER SAID revenue sharing has been a crucial program for the city and that "the kinds of things it has funded could come from a lottery program."

Mayor Wayne Marsh noted that five cities in Nebraska now have municipal lotteries.

He said several more cities, in addition to Wayne, were setting up special elections on the question.

"I think we have to look at ways to generate money...and this is one way," he told the City Council.

COUNCILMAN LARRY Johnson, who indicated he had received only one call on the proposal "and it was affirmative," said he felt the majority of city residents had not heard of the lottery idea.

"The general public has no information," Johnson said.

Kloster has indicated that part of the city's legwork on the lottery would involve launching an informational campaign for voters.

He also indicated that with City Council approval of the referendum resolution, the staff would have the signal to begin launching the informational campaign.

Course

"IT'S A TWO-WAY street," Marsh continued. "We have to work together."

Councilwoman Carolyn Fitter told the Council she felt the golf course has been a "real bargain" for the city.

She expressed concern about the budget request coming "this late in the fiscal year."

Cramer quickly indicated that the club was willing to work with a proposal that would include the funding in the next fiscal year.

Phil Kloster, city administrator, not only shared Fitter's concern about the timing of the request, but also questioned the $6,000.

"The $6,000 (over five years) would be pushing it, because things aren't real good right now," Kloster told the Council.

Kloster explained that the city was beginning to get a handle on budget figures for the next fiscal year in light of lost state and federal revenue.

HE REMINDED both the Council and the club members that the city was nearing a centennial celebration in addition to other increasing budget demands.

"That will be within the next budget year also and that's making it a bit tough," he said.

Kloster said that state and federal funds were coming in below budget figures.

"We're going to be shooting from the hip for the next year," he said.

irrigation project," he added.

"Things like the airport, the parks, the golf course, are assets and if you want the community to expand we should support them."

Kloster noted that the city had a "vested interest" in the improvement project, but asked for longer payout at a lower level ($4,000 per year for 7 1/2 years).

CRAMER NOTED that the longer term financing would mean more debt service.

"But our hat's in our hand and whatever you can do will be appreciated," he added.

Councilman Gary Vopalensky introduced a motion for the full $6,000 over five years.

'I lost 88 pounds and 92 inches on the Diet Center Program!'

June 2, 1982

"I started on the program on June 2nd, the day after the Diet Center office opened in Wayne. In the 7 1/2 months I was on the program my baby, who I nursed the whole time, grew larger and I grew smaller. I learned how to buy and prepare nutritious food not only for myself but also for my family. Every day I received the help and encouragement I needed to reach my goal. Now I can do things I only dreamed about doing before. Last fall I started square dancing and this summer I look forward to taking my two little girls to the swimming pool.

People ask me if I'm going to be able to keep it off and my reply is, 'You bet! I'm having too much fun to gain that weight back!' And with the continuing help and encouragement of my Diet Center counselors, I know I can do it. You can too!"

CONTROLLING SPARROWS
Sparrows can be a real problem around the feedlot and farm buildings and need to be controlled.

During the winter months, sparrows in and around farm buildings and feedlot can be controlled by exclusion, trapping, shooting, sanitation, or toxicants. A combination of techniques works best.

Excluding sparrows is a permanent solution to bird problems inside buildings or sheltered areas. Sparrows must have shelter in order to survive Nebraska winters. So exclusion can reduce winter survival. Exclusion also can help make other controls, such as trapping, more effective. To exclude sparrows, close all openings larger than 3/4 inch, using wire, sheet metal, wood or other materials.

Shooting sparrows as they roost at night inside buildings is an effective and fast way to reduce their numbers. Use a .22 caliber rifle with birdshot; this will not penetrate a tin roof (test this for yourself with a spare piece of tin). It is best to use an older or smooth-bore rifle, with a flashlight taped to the barrel.

TRAPPING SPARROWS
Trapping house sparrows is a useful control, especially during winter months when sparrows can be attracted to a bait source. Proso millet (especially white), finely cracked corn, milo, and bread crumbs are attractive to house sparrows. For successful trapping, the sparrows must be prebaited for several days before the trap is set. When they take the prebait regularly and heavily, set the trap. Designs for various kinds of sparrow traps are available through the county extension office.

CHEMICAL CONTROL OF SPARROWS
The only toxicants registered for control of house sparrows in Nebraska are certain formulations of strychnine on grain bait, and avitrol. Avitrol is a chemical frightening agent. Neither product is legal for use against house sparrows other than in or near buildings.

If the birds are feeding in or near buildings, it might be possible to prebait and then poison them at these locations, but this work should be done only by a certified pest control applicator trained in bird control. Using these poisons without proper understanding of bird control could result in poor success, and could pose a hazard to desirable nontarget animals. The individual using these materials is responsible for using them safely and correctly.

Another important way to discourage house sparrows is to limit their access to grain or other foods. Some farmers keep a few ducks or geese in the farmyard area to help clean up grain spills. The ducks and geese do a good clean up job and provide another food or income source for the farm family.

As the warm weather nesting season approaches, remember to tear down house sparrow nests at two-week intervals. This two-week nest destruction is an effective tool in controlling their numbers.

Variety of opportunities

PIK can provide erosion protection

The federal payment-in-kind program, presents Nebraska's farmers with a variety of opportunities to protect their land from erosion according to area Soil Conservationist, Larry Wetterberg.

Farmers idling 30 to 50 percent of their land can use this time for construction of conservation practices, he said.

"Normally, the opportunity to do 'dirt work' is limited to those growing spring grain, or before spring planting and after fall harvest," Wetterberg explained. Weather permitting, mechanical practices such as terraces can be applied any time on land being idled, he added.

SET-ASIDE acreage can also fit easily into a strip cropping system, Wetterberg says. One alternative is to seed to grass and alfalfa, he suggests.

"It's a chance to divert land to establish an ongoing system. You could get half your idle land in strips rather than entire fields," he said.

Another possibility is to convert marginal land to permanent pasture, which allows the farmer to be eligible to receive income (or payment-in-kind) while getting one year's growth, he says.

A third possibility is to seed to oats and not harvest the oats, using contour strips to reduce water erosion, he says.

In addition to receiving payment or payment-in-kind for acreage set aside, farmers may also be eligible for payment for the same land set aside through a program funded by the Natural Resources Districts and the State Game and Parks Commission.

DEPENDENT ON the money made available by the Lower Elkhorn NRD, farmers can receive $30 to $50 per acre per year for land put in an oats-sweet clover rotation. The crop can be left standing at the end of the first year, and sweet clover must be left to grow the second year. Another stipulation prohibits emergency grazing during a drought, he says.

Farmers considering idling their land are encouraged to contact the local Soil Conservation Service office for more information about ways to protect the land from erosion.

Poultry returns low

Price outlook not chipper

The outlook for poultry isn't chipper this year.

At best, egg producers can expect a year like 1982. But if the national economy doesn't improve, it could be much worse. The turkey situation also depends on improvement in the national economy, although several economists think 1983 should result in improved returns over last year.

These are the predictions of Earl W. Gleaves, University of Nebraska extension poultry specialist. He based his forecast on reports presented at the Agricultural Outlook Conference sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

IN EXPLAINING the gloomy outlook for eggs, Gleaves noted that egg producers have not had favorable returns for several years. As a result of losses, producers have been reducing the number of pullets (young hens) added to the national flock since 1979. The decreases were seven percent in 1980, six percent in 1981 and another one percent in 1982. To offset the decline in replacements, hens have been force-molted and kept in production longer. About 20 percent of the flock was force-molted in 1982.

Egg producers can expect lower feed and interest costs in 1983. The hatch in the first half of the year is expected to increase over last year. But softening egg prices in the last half should cause egg-type hatches to decline, Gleaves said.

"The combination of layer numbers, force-molting and rate of lay will mean about the same number of food eggs produced in the first half of 1983 as 1982, he said. During the last half of the year, layer numbers and rate of lay will produce more eggs than were produced in the same period of 1982, he added.

The nation's slow recovery in the economy will mean the unemployed and underemployed have to work with fewer dollars to cover their expenses. Gleaves said even though eggs and poultry are usually a good buy, these people can only afford them when they are on sale. "This does not promote price strength," he said.

As a result, eggs, poultry and meat prices have been weaker than expected, with a slow recovery in the economy, there will probably be limited price gains. Gleaves said, for poultry and eggs in 1983. And there was a 28 percent drop in egg exports for the first nine months of 1982. This weak export demand is expected to continue this year.

TURKEY PRODUCTIONS increased substantially during the last half of 1981 and well into 1982, Gleaves said. The economy was expected to improve in late 1981, and with declines in import production, producers planned on a strengthening demand for turkey. But the economy weakened, export demand fell, and turkey prices declined sharply as storage stocks grew.

Gleaves said it took nine months to reduce supplies enough to begin strengthening prices the last few months of 1982. The increase in prices brought production back up in the last quarter of 1982 to equal the same quarter in 1981. Eggs in incubators on Nov. 1 and Dec. 1 and Jan. 1 indicate production could be up to 15 to 20 percent compared to the same months the previous year.

Prices took an 18-cent per pound dive, Gleaves said, after Thanksgiving, which should tend to curb optimism for 1983. Another factor that may help hold down production is the 1983 breeder intentions report. The report, Gleaves said, slated intentions to hold nine percent fewer hens than at the same time last year. Expansion may be limited by availability of hatching eggs.

"On the negative side of the outlook, even conservative economists are expecting a 3 to 4 percent increase in production in 1983 compared to 1982," he noted.

But on the plus side, turkey feed and interest costs will probably be less than last year. Storage stocks to start 1983 were 7 to 12 percent lower than for 1982. There should be a continuation of the current favorable red meat supply situation well into 1983.

SEVERAL ECONOMISTS think 1983 should result in as much as five cent per pound improved return over 1982.

"However, this depends largely on improvements in the national economy and whether or not the 'inflation, eternal optimism' of turkey producers gets out of hand," Gleaves said.

Herd expansion may begin in '83

Feeder cattle and calf producers tended to reduce debt and improve cash flow during 1982 rather than expanding cattle herds, according to a University of Nebraska agricultural economist.

Al Wellman said this resulted in a large culling of many cow herds, larger than expected non-fed steer and heifer slaughter and half to cattle inventory expansion that began in 1979.

An estimated smaller inventory of feeder cattle at the end of '82 compared to late 1981 should encourage some price increases during 1983, he said. A brighter economic picture for the United States and improving feeder cattle prices could signal better times for the cow-calf producer in 1983, he said.

FEEDER CATTLE production costs were streamlined by lowering general inflation rate and cheap forage and feed supplies accumulated during '82 and continuing into '83, he said. Cost increase rates should fall moderately lower in 1983 as most producers hold down inventories and thus have excess forage on hand, he said.

Normally, Wellman explained, large feed grain-forage supplies available at lower prices favor expanded livestock production. However, he said, the relatively poor financial situation of many producers, particularly on mixed crop-livestock farms, resulted in the selling of livestock to improve cash flow, which in turn reduced feed use.

Calf slaughter rose 11 percent in 1982, compared to 1981, he said but is expected to decline this year. More '83 calves will go into grower-stocker operations or be placed on feed. Veal production is likely to decline 8 percent to 10 percent during '83, he said.

Cow slaughter tapered off from the unexpected high levels of 1982, he said, explaining that the bulk of this increase came in states other than Nebraska and neighboring states.

CALF CROP estimates for 1982 run 1 million head lower than in 1981, and with fewer yearlings available outside feedlots, the total feeder cattle inventory temporarily is going down, he said.

Evidence of a stronger economic recovery by mid-1983 could encourage producers to hold more heifers, particularly where the cattle enterprise is a primary source of income, which would lighten feeder cattle supplies even more, he said.

A smaller Jan. 1 cow herd, and thus a smaller 1983 calf crop, will further reduce feeder cattle supplies, he added.

Feeder cattle prices and calf prices have traded in a rather narrow range lately, he said, explaining that the feeder cattle industry is planning an early 1983 cattle price rally or PIK (payment-in-kind program) to start moving feeder prices upward.

Wellman said in the best set of circumstances, yearling feeder cattle may bring more than $70 per hundredweight during the spring quarter, particularly if grazing conditions are good, fed cattle prices improve and herd rebuilding resumes. Yearling feeders may average in the upper $60 range during the second half of the year, he added.

Feeder calf prices may be more volatile, especially this spring when calf prices could rise $6 to $10 per hundredweight above yearling prices, he said.

SLAUGHTER COW prices for '83 may average in the lower $40 per hundred weight, he said, or possibly about $2 to $4 more than '81. Cow slaughter should continue to decline below comparable '82 periods, but continued low calf prices will hold down herd rebuilding and slaughter cow prices throughout the bulk of the year, he said.

Feeder cattle and calf prices rising higher than '82 levels may set the stage in the second half of '83 for encouraging expanded cattle inventories during 1984, he said.

Wellman expected managers to continue updating market information and analyses during '83. He advised evaluating forward pricing opportunities during 1983 for delivery in late '83 or 1984.

Feeder cattle growers and calf producers also must continue to examine ways to retain ownership of light cattle if prices get out of line with fed cattle prices during late '83 and into 1984, he said.

Budget problems limit 4-H

Beginning this year, 4-H will not be participating in the Land and Range Judging contests sponsored by the Soil Conservation Service and the Natural Resource Districts, according to Bill Caldwell, assistant director of 4-H and youth development at the University of Nebraska.

Caldwell cited budget reduction in travel and operating expenses as the major reason for the decision.

"Budgets have declined to the point we simply cannot afford to maintain these events," Caldwell said. "Travel, computer time and the amount of staff do not warrant our continuation in these contests."

DURING the past few years, 4-H participations in these contests has not been sufficient, according to Caldwell. "We have continued to participate hoping to increase 4-H quality and quantity. Efforts to change the timing of the contest to facilitate increased opportunity for 4-H participation have not resulted in program timing changes."

The resources used in sponsoring the judging teams will "hopefully be channeled to other program areas," Caldwell noted. Sponsorship and education leadership and support to the Range Camp at the State 4-H Camp will continue, he said. "The camp is a most positive influence, it is a greater educational experience and will continue to provide quality and support to the 4-H range project."

During the years of 4-H participation in the judging contest, the Soil Conservation Service and Natural Resource Districts "have been most cooperative, supportive and helpful," Caldwell said. "We treasure the assistance given to the judging contests and the impact this cooperation has achieved in the lives of volunteers, Extension faculty and youth."

FLBA made 291 loans

The Federal Land Bank Association of Norfolk made 291 loans totaling nearly $30 million in new money to farmers and ranchers during 1982, according to Calvin Allyn, Association president.

Of the total amount of money loaned, 29 percent was used to buy land, 30 percent to refinance real estate debt, 28 percent to refinance short-term debt, and 6 percent to make improvements. Eighteen percent of the loans went to farmers and ranchers under the age of 35, according to Allyn. He also reported that 21 percent went to people between the ages of 35 and 45, 29 percent to people 45 to 55, and 32 percent to people age 55 or older.

Allyn said the present economic situation has affected most farmers and ranchers to some extent. He said despite this, the majority are holding on quite well and are making their payments on schedule. As of Dec. 31, two percent of the loans outstanding in Norfolk were delinquent.

"That record is a tribute to the ability of our borrowers to withstand adversity," he said.

The Federal Land Bank Association of Norfolk is a farmer-owned cooperative and gets its lending funds through the sale of bonds on the nation's money markets.

NPCA sees positive signs

During 1982, the Norfolk Production Credit Association advanced $206 million in short and intermediate term operating credit to farmers and ranchers in this area, according to Association president Eldon Peters. At year-end, the association had $55.3 million in loans outstanding which was down slightly from the $56 outstanding at the end of 1981.

"We've found that farmers are generally doing an excellent job of coping with the current situation, and despite serious problems on the price side most of the borrowers are doing a good job of managing their operation," Peters said.

He said there are some positive signs in the economy that may help improve the farmers' situation in 1983. The association's current interest rate of 11.80 percent is nearly four percentage points below the February, 1981 rate. Prices of some commodities such as hogs and dairy products have been quite good and the new government set-aside program offers hope for improved corn prices in the longer term.

The Norfolk Association currently serves 600 farmers in Antelope, Cuming, Madison, Pierce, Stanton and Wayne counties with offices in Norfolk, Neligh and West Point.

Sheep Days topics set

Stanton will host Area Sheep Days on Thursday, March 3 at the VFW Club. Five topics will be covered in the 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. program and a lamb luncheon will be served at noon.

Program topics and speakers include: ewe and lamb management by Gary Ricketts, University of Illinois; utilization of lamb carcass for products by Ted Doane, University of Nebraska; sheep disease and control by Bill Kvasnicka, U.S. Meat Animal Research Center; ram testing stations by Bill Zollinger, University of Nebraska; and Nebraska Sheep Council update by Steve Gramlich, Carroll.

The Area Sheep Days is sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service and the Nebraska Sheep Council. The public is invited to attend.

4-H beef will be weighed

More than 200 head of 4-H market beef are expected to be weighed at the Wayne Sale Barn, Saturday, from 8:30 to 3 p.m. according to Don C. Spitzke, Wayne County extension agent.

Each animal will be weighed, ear tagged, and implanted with a growth stimulant. At the Wayne County fair these animals will be again weighed and their average daily gains will be calculated. Ribbons and premiums will be awarded according to their gains.

The best of the animals weighed in Saturday will be shown at the Wayne County Fair Aug. 4-7 in either the pens of three or individual market beef class.

Sharpening of management skills recommended

The economic recession has put Nebraska farmers and the agricultural industry in a financial squeeze.

Because these conditions cause individuals to want an immediate, profitable alternative to the production program they have developed over the years, they are usually susceptible to promoters who recognize and will exploit such a situation," said a University of Nebraska extension crops specialist.

Don Hanway suggested that farmers sharpen their management skills instead of producing a crop with no established market. "The present situation increases the importance of farmers trying to sharpen management so as to achieve higher yields and to hold input costs to those essential for achieving optimum yields."

ACCORDING TO HANWAY, corn, soybeans, wheat and grain sorghum are Nebraska's primary grain crops. "In 1979 these four crops represented 53.8 percent of the value added to the Nebraska economy by the farm sector."

Through the years various farmers have tried almost any crop you can mention, Hanway said, but these four are the ones chosen for widespread production because they produce in Nebraska's stressful climate and large quantities are used domestically and throughout the world.

"It's not reasonable to expect alternatives to exist that are highly profitable in the short term," Hanway said.

In the last decade, Hanway noted, Nebraska farmers have made great progress in producing corn, soybeans, wheat and grain sorghum. "If I were to choose four crops that are in demand in the world's marketplace, I really could not do better than these."

Hanway said there is no point in producing a crop without an established market.

"Perhaps a few individuals can grow some acreage of a crop like cucumbers or onions, but they must have contracts if they want an assured outlet. Expensive facilities for alcohol production or other processing won't appear just because some crop is planted. If there were millions or billions to be made, some entrepreneur would probably already have been there."

GAINS IN the production of Nebraska's four major grain crops have been impressive, Hanway noted. But, he added, more gains are possible.

"At today's prices farmers with top yields are covering all costs and probably have a profit margin." Those with yields at 1980-82 state averages are readily covering cash and most fixed costs, according to Hanway. He added that gains made since 1970-72 mean reduced unit costs of production.

"It is well to recognize, however, what a high percentage the fixed costs are of total costs," Hanway said. "The only chance for covering all costs or increasing profits is to spread these over high yields."

The way to do this, Hanway, said is by improving management skills.

"MOST FARMERS can sharpen management in ways that will increase yields with little or no increase in costs." The following are some of the key decisions involved, according to Hanway:

- Use of superior varieties and hybrids.
- Fertilization by soil test.
- Only "essential" tillages.
- Timely operations, especially planting.
- Proper adjustment and operation of equipment.

- Proper plant population.
- Appropriate pest management actions.
- Scheduled irrigations.
- Maintaining surface residues to protect land and increasing infiltration of rain.
- Careful and timely harvest.
- Preserving quality in storage.
- Effective marketing.
- Cumulative small gains become very important," Hanway said. "Improved management means a more competitive farmer in the long run."

Idled land an option

Land idled as part of government farm programs make 1983 a year of opportunity for Nebraska farmers and ranchers, a University of Nebraska extension forage specialist said last Thursday.

"Land need not be simply 'set-aside' for next year; rather, it should be improved for economic return through soil improvement, weed control or livestock feed," stressed Bruce Anderson.

Noting that idled land must be protected from wind and water erosion an weeds must be controlled on it, Anderson said land use practices that meet these requirements "can be designed to improve the economic health of most crop and livestock enterprises."

LEGUMES CAN be seeded in soil containing no atrazine carryover to build up nitrogen levels and improve soil organic matter and tilth, he said. From 40 to 120 pounds of nitrogen per acre can be returned to the soil by legumes such as sweetclover, alfalfa, hair vetch, red clover and alsike clover. "Be sure to inoculate legume seeds with the proper inoculant prior to seeding to ensure this level of nitrogen return," Anderson advised.

Crops cannot be harvested or grazed during the six principal growing months as defined by local ASC committees. "However, at any other time, grazing will be permitted," he said. Therefore, forage crops can be seeded a growth accumulated throughout the growing season with this growth grazed in late fall and winter.

Examples of forage crops that may provide grazing opportunities are legumes seeded in spring, sudangrass or cane seeded in July, and small grains seeded in August, Anderson said. "Not that erosion control and weed control must still be practiced continuously during the year, regardless of the date of seeding. In addition, winter wheat seeded last fall can be grazed or cut for hay before dough stage and not later than June 15," he reminded.

"One of the best opportunities for use of idled land is to convert land that is marginal for profitable grain production to permanent pasture or hay. Atrazine carryover is no problem for seeding big bluestem and switchgrass, two warm season grasses. In fact, use of atrazine for weed control can help to readily establish these grasses in one year," the specialist emphasized.

Other opportunities and alternatives may be available to producers. They should contact local extension agents, SCS and ASCS personnel for local practices and restrictions, he concluded.

Nebraska Farm Bureau terms recommendations unacceptable

Recommendations of the Social Security Reform Commission are inadequate and unacceptable, the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation said this weekend (Feb. 12-13) in a letter to the state's Congressional delegation.

President Bryce Neidig of Madison, speaking for the organization's 24,700 member families, said the measures proposed in the Bi-Partisan Solution to the Social Security Problem are neither viable and meaningful long-term solutions nor very good short term Band-aids."

Neidig said Social Security has been grossly expanded beyond its original purpose and the system has been given the conflicting goals of retirement insurance and welfare program. Further, "The original link between an individual's tax payments and benefits that by any measure are far in excess of lifetime contributions."

TO EFFECT true reform, Neidig said these concepts must be included in any revamping of Social Security: provision of a long-term solution; separation of the insurance and welfare functions; reestablishment of the link between tax contributions and benefits; reestablishment of reasonable benefit return compared to tax contributions; improved equity to both current beneficiaries and current taxpayers; and careful structuring to avoid harsh consequences for those poor who now depend on the system.

Neidig took particular exception to the proposed increase in the Social Security tax rate for self-employed persons, which would increase farmer's contributions to the system by 43 percent.

He recommended the "Freeze & Fix" concept. "Freeze all increases in Social Security benefits, not for six months or a year, but until Congress has put in place the necessary reforms to correct the system. A freeze won't be reducing anyone's benefits, just leaving them at current levels until reform is complete," he said.

"If Congress doesn't have the backbone and vision to go beyond the commission's recommendations, it will simply be assuring a future Congress will face a similar problem in a few years. If Congress does seriously design true long-term reform of the Social Security system, it will be one of the greatest accomplishments of recent history," Neidig said.

Recycle for wildlife

Nebraska residents, especially groups such as Scouts or 4-H Clubs, again have a chance to do their part for wildlife. Nebraska Recyclers have agreed to accept aluminum cans and newspapers with the proceeds to go to the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission. Some service stations also accept used motor oil for recycling. The money will be used for a variety of wildlife and habitat improvement projects including the purchase of wildlife lands.

The campaign is in progress now through "National Wildlife Week," March 20-26, 1983. Any individual or groups who collects $50 worth of recyclables or donates $50 will receive a framed award containing Habitat Stamps from each of the past six years.

The Nebraska Habitat Fund is supported principally by the sale of Habitat Stamps and in the six years of existence has:

1. Contracted 46,879 acres of private lands for wildlife
2. Purchased 9,853 acres of wildlife lands
3. Furnished trees, shrubs, and grass seed for Wildlife Management Areas
4. Seeded 183 miles of roadsides in 84 counties
5. Provided trees to provide landowners for wildlife and firewood

For more information about the Habitat Fund or Recycling for Wildlife, contact a Nebraska Game and Parks Commission Office.

PIK acres need cover

The Farm Program including set aside and Payment in Kind (PIK) apparently is becoming popular with Nebraska farmers. It seems to be gaining momentum and signups to idle 20%-50% of each farmer's corn base, although kept secret, will probably reach 75% in some areas.

Understandably, PIK is getting mixed reviews depending on what facet of agribusiness you are in. Resources Conservationists see the PIK program as a potential shot in the arm for soil and water conservation as well as wildlife.

Logically the land that will be taken out of production under the PIK program is the steeper more marginally productive land, which is also the most erosive land. Taking this land out of row crop production could have a very significant effect in reducing erosion.

According to a Soil Conservation Service inventory, 1,028,644 acres of land in the Lower Elkhorn NRD need some form of soil conservation practice to bring the rate of erosion down to acceptable levels. In other words down to 5 tons or less soil loss per acre, which is the approximate rate that new topsoil is formed. Soil loss on these acres presently average 22 tons per acre per year.

A cover crop seeded on these acres will save approximately 17 tons of top soil per acre per year, for the duration of the PIK program. If you were to replace that topsoil by purchasing and hauling it in at $10 per cubic yard, you would spend $115 per acre annually. That figure would not replace lost fertilizer and other additives lost with topsoil. This illustrates that the savings provided by a relatively inexpensive cover crop are very substantial.

Controlling erosion also: 1.) Keeps sediment from filling road ditches; 2.) Reduces pollution of streams by soil and agri-chemicals; 3.) Provides nesting and winter cover for wildlife.

The PIK program is an excellent opportunity for you to put permanent conservation practices on your land without losing production. By constructing terrace systems, sediment basins or dams this year you will be ready for row crop production when the PIK program ends.

Cost-share funds are available from the Lower Elkhorn NRD and local ASCS offices. For more information on seeding cover crops or permanent conservation practices, contact your local SC's office.

Windbreak trees

A limited number of trees and shrubs are still available through the Clarke-McNary Tree Program. These low cost ($28 per hundred) are available to landowners of Nebraska for windbreaks, wildlife and other purposes. Orders will be accepted for about one more month, but the selection is decreasing steadily. Order forms and further information are available at local offices of Soil Conservation Service and Extension Service.

Conservation picture award winners

The Lower Elkhorn NRD annually recognizes landowners who have done an exceptional job of soil and water conservation by presenting them with a large color photo of their farm. The photo is sponsored by local businesses who wish to show their appreciation of rural neighbors and the job they are doing. The following are the 1982 Conservation Picture Award winners and the business sponsoring their award.

- Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Anderson, Laurel; State National Bank & Trust Co., Wayne.
