Foreign friendships Visitors from Japan and Finland enjoying stay in United States

By LaVon Anderson

"I came to the United States because it's a big experience for me, and it's nice to see what it is like here," says 17-year-old Heikki Osmonen of Finland.

"I'm interested in a lot of countries and their cultures, and America is a very popular country," smiles Tomoko Okazaki, a 17-year-old student from Japan.

Both teenagers are studying this year at Allen High School through a program entitled Youth for Understanding, one of the largest teenage exchange programs with headquarters in Washington, D.C.

HEIKKI, WHO arrived in the United States last Aug. 5, and Tomoko, who arrived Sept. 1, are both making their home with Gary and Marge Hoffman and their family while attending high school in Allen.

While both students come from towns with populations of 35,000 to 40,000, they agree that life in a small rural community certainly has its advantages.

Heikki's home is in Rauma, located on the west coast of Finland. Tomoko's home, in Tsukuba, Japan, is about an hour's drive north of Tokyo.

"Here, in Allen, we know everybody," smiles Tomoko, her dark eyes gleaming.

"Sometimes I miss the big city, but I like it here too very much," adds Heikki.

ALTHOUGH Heikki has traveled extensively, including France, England, Monaco, Italy, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Switzerland and Holland, he says he still gets homesick, "but just sometimes.

"I miss my friends the most, and my dog," he smiles. "I'm not homesick, but in Japan I go to the sea and wind surf all the time. I miss that really bad," says Tomoko.

This year at Allen marks Tomoko's second stay in the United States. At the age of three she resided in Baton Rouge, La. for a year and a half, where her father was an instructor at Louisiana State University through an exchange program for instructors.

"But I don't remember it," she laughs.

TODAY, Tomoko's father teaches physics at the University of Tsukuba, a college of about 10,000 students.

Her mother teaches violin. "I use to play violin, but I hate it," Tomoko smiles.

Her brother, 10-year-old Yoichi, is a fourth grader in Japan. Heikki has one brother, Antti, 20, who attends business school in Finland, and a sister, 12-year-old Anu.

His father, who designs kitchens, is the owner of a factory that produces kitchen cabinets. He also owns a business that sells cabinets, along with other kitchen furnishings.

Heikki's mother, Safu, works as a hairdresser.

WHEN HEIKKI returns to Finland he will complete his final two years of gymnasium school.

"It's not a school that teaches gymnastics," he smiles. "It's like your high school, but it's optional," he adds.

Heikki said Finnish youngsters start school at age seven and complete nine years of compulsory education.

From there, they can attend gymnasium school if their grades are good enough. "You have to be at least an average student to attend gymnasium," says Heikki.

Heikki said students who choose not to attend gymnasium can opt to attend a school similar to the vocational technical colleges in the United States. There they prepare for a job.

HEIKKI SAYS Finnish schools are quite different than schools in the United States and much more difficult, "except for English of course."

The Finnish school year is divided into six periods. During each period, students study only certain subjects day after day.

"For example, during one period we may have math for three hours a day," explains Heikki.

Finnish students in Finland have just two hours of sports each week with no team competition. Heikki feels that because of this, however, he is less mature than his United States friends.

AFTER COMPLETING gymnasium school, Heikki plans to attend college, "maybe in the United States," to study to be a veterinary surgeon.

Recently, Heikki spent a day at the Wayne Veterinary Clinic. "If I don't get to do that, then I would like to be an English teacher," he says.

SINCE ATTENDING school in the United States, Tomoko too has observed many differences from the school she attended in her native Japan.

"We have a lot of rules," says Tomoko. "We must wear matching uniforms, shoes and bags, and we must bow to our teachers whenever we meet them."

Tomoko says the Japanese school year begins in April and is much longer, with only one month vacation.

After completing nine years of compulsory education, Japanese students must take an examination before entering high school. Then, students attend a level of school based on the scores they received on the examination.

"If you get a good score on the examination you go to a good school," says Tomoko. "If you get a mediocre score, you go to a mediocre school."

Tomoko will have one and a half years of high school to complete when she returns home. "I think I'm in a 'good' school," she laughs.

Following high school, Tomoko plans to attend college in Japan to study cultures of underdeveloped countries.

BOTH HEIKKI and Tomoko say the study of foreign language is very important in their schools.

"We have two languages in my country," says Heikki, "Swedish and Finnish."

Heikki says although Swedish is not widely spoken, it is considered Finland's second native language and it is important to learn how to speak it.

Students in Finland also begin learning English at the third grade.

In addition to Swedish and English, Heikki has studied German and French, and is learning Spanish at Allen High School. "But I don't speak any of them very well," he laughs.

"I think studying foreign languages has made me more open-minded," observes Heikki, "and I know it is easier for me to communicate with people."

"STUDENTS IN Japan must also learn the English language," says Tomoko.

Tomoko says while students in Japan are taught English composition, many can't speak English very well because pronunciations are so different.

"I think all students, including American students, should learn a foreign language," says Tomoko, "because when you learn a foreign language you also learn about that country."

HEIKKI, WHO lists his hobbies as English horse riding, piano and "just hanging around," says he will miss his American friends very much when he returns home.

"Both Tomoko and I have made many friends that we are going to hate to leave," says Heikki.

"It's not going to be kind of hard, it's going to be really hard to leave," adds Tomoko. "I'm going to hate it."

Tomoko says if there is one thing she has learned in the United States, it is that Americans express their emotions so much.

"The Japanese don't," she says, "so it was hard for me at first to express my feelings."

Now, Tomoko says she is much more open about her feelings.

Results of poll revealed

Wakefield residents list top priorities on survey

Doctor recruitment, industrial development and improved law enforcement appear to be the major areas of concern facing Wakefield residents.

That's the upshot of a town hall meeting Tuesday night attended by over 70 residents of the community.

The meeting was called to discuss results of an attitude survey conducted last January by the Wakefield Community Club.

A DETAILED presentation of the survey results were released during Tuesday night's meeting in the Wakefield School multi-purpose room.

On hand to discuss the results were Mike Salmon, Community Club president, and Don Kuhl, chairman of the survey committee.

Diane Sheppard of Norfolk, a representative of the Nebraska Department of Economic Development, also was present to interpret survey results.

"This survey is only the first step and it is only as good as the follow-up," Sheppard told persons attending the town hall meeting.

Sheppard said the Department of Economic Development will prepare a project book listing major areas of concerns facing residents of Wakefield and resources available to them.

The project book is expected to be completed in about three weeks.

SALMON SAID about 600 Wakefield residents responded to the survey from among the estimated 1,000 that were distributed.

Of those responding, 31.5 percent were over the age of 65, 28 percent were between the ages of 45 and 64, 15.4 percent were between the ages of 35 and 44, 18.6 percent were between the ages of 25 and 34, and 6.5 percent were under the age of 19.

No results were received from persons in the 25 to 34 year age bracket.

Sixty-eight percent of those responding live in Wakefield, while 32 percent live in the surrounding area.

AREAS ON the survey in which residents said no improvements were needed included the general attitude of retail clerks (67%), the adequacy of school facilities (65.1%), adequacy of fire protection (73.7%), adequacy of rescue unit services (77.6%), the water supply (65.7%), and the friendliness of their neighbors (61.3%).

Residents completing the survey also indicated they felt there were enough suitable homes for sale in the community (80.3%), the availability of suitable housing for the elderly is adequate (63.7%), and that local industry is a "good citizen" of the community (84.2%).

Between 70 and 80 percent of those responding felt the community would benefit from drug and alcohol counseling and education and from personal and family counseling services.

WHILE THE majority of residents responding to the survey indicated their family doctor is in Wakefield (65.7%), Salmon said most of the written comments on the survey indicated residents feel a need for new doctor recruitment and/or a medical clinic.

Salmon added that while 425 (84.2%) of those responding to the survey felt local industry is a "good citizen" of the community, residents attending Tuesday night's town hall meeting expressed a need for additional industrial development.

Of those responding to the survey, results showed 43.5% feel the quality of job opportunities is poor and 42.5% feel the availability of job opportunities is poor.

Income tax question affects PIK decisions

The deadline for enrollment in the 1983 acreage reduction, land diversion and payment-in-kind programs is less than one week away so farmers have only a few days to make up their minds concerning participation in the programs.

With the Friday, March 11 deadline fast approaching, income tax questions may keep some farmers from reaching a decision until the last possible day.

The reason for the wait is that legislation concerning income tax payment is under consideration by Congress.

"FARMERS CONSIDERING participation in PIK, who are concerned about the amount of income tax due on the PIK commodities they would receive, can be assured Congress has begun to act to remedy the problem," Everett Rank, administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, has said. "That first and all-important step was taken with Subcommittee approval of new legislation on Feb. 23."

Rank was commenting on unanimous approval of a bill by the Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures of the House Committee on Ways and Means. "The bill the Subcommittee passed authorized payment of taxes on the value of the PIK commodity received until it is sold," Rank said. "While the provisions of this bill apply only to land withdrawn from production during the 1983 crop year for participation in the 1983 PIK program, it does contain all the other changes the Department of Agriculture is seeking."

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Tax Policy John Chapoton said that the treasury strongly supports legislation which would remove any disincentives in current tax law to farmers' participation in the PIK program.

"MANY FARMERS participating in PIK will have sold crops in the current taxable year which were harvested in a prior taxable year. Current law may impose a hardship on these taxpayers because they will have, in effect, income from two crops (the income from the prior year's crop that is sold, plus the income from the PIK payment) in the same taxable year," said Chapoton.

Chapoton pointed out that this might lead to market-depressing forced sales of commodities. "In addition, farmers participating in PIK will be under pressure to sell commodities to obtain cash to pay their income tax liabilities arising from PIK payments."

Amended complaint is filed

An amended complaint was filed last week against a 45-year-old Wayne man accused of allegedly taking property from Nebraskaland Petroleum Co., owners of the M & H Apco Station in Wayne.

Wayne County Attorney Robert Ensz filed the amended complaint against Jerry Langston on Thursday, deleting Count 1.

Count I charged Langston of allegedly taking property in an amount exceeding $1,000 from M & H Apco when he was employed there in January of 1980.

LANGSTON, WHO waived his right Thursday to a preliminary hearing in Wayne County Court, was bound over and is to appear in Ninth District Court, Wayne County, on April 6 at 11 a.m.

Langston still faces charges of allegedly taking property in an amount exceeding $1,000 from M & H Apco on or about Aug. 23, 1982, at which time he terminated his employment with the company.

Ensz said the charge constitutes a Class III felony, punishable by a $25,000 fine, 20-year imprisonment, or both, and a minimum of one year in the Nebraska State Penal Complex.

...by randall howell

Country boy. . .

Howdy.
I don't always have the knack of being at the right place at the right time.
In fact, my life is riddled with episodes of being at the wrong place at the wrong time, the wrong place at the right time and even the right place at the wrong time.
I've always envied those who had the knack for being in the right place at the right time.

AND, IT HAS occurred to me, on more than one occasion, that life is little more than the right sense of timing.
But, master that sense of timing is one of my unrealized goals. Maybe there's still time. I hope so.
Once in a great while, I do get lucky. And, through no fault of my own, I end-up in a pretty good place at almost the right time.
Such was the case a week ago, when I decided, at the last minute, to attend a special event in Sioux City.
Actually, I was invited to attend a banquet where some very good friends of mine were scheduled to receive a national award.

THE AWARD was scheduled during the banquet, which climaxed a week-long national convention for Silopress, makers of sealed storage farm equipment.
Now, you have to understand that in my 17 years of newspapering, I've been at hundreds of banquets and listened to hundreds of speakers and watched hundreds of awards being presented.
So, at first, the thought of spending Saturday evening in Sioux City at yet another one didn't excite me.
However, since the Silopress people are doing some interesting and exciting things — revolutionizing the concept of efficient livestock feeding, for instance — I was more than curious.

THAT, COMBINED with the fact that my good friends Merle and Ron Ring were receiving that International company's top dealer of the year award for 1982, made it even more attractive.
And, then you have to understand that it's hard for this old newspaperman to turn down a good free meal, good conversation and good company.
All three were present when the Rings extended a special invitation to me the day before the special event.
In short, I turned my schedule around and it turned out to be one of the most enjoyable things I've done in many, many months... maybe longer.

AFTER AN HOUR or so of dining by candlelight in a private room at the Sioux City Hotel as a special guest of the Rings and Silopress, I was invited to hear a motivational speaker.
The speaker had been contracted by the company to conduct a three-hour session for its dealers and sales representatives.

So, there I was...tired—and very unmotivated—after a rough couple of weeks trying to get my act together at work and at home.
In fact, I was close to burn-out. Still, I hadn't ever attended a motivational seminar...so the opportunity was just too good to pass up...and, the price was right.

MOMENTS LATER, there I was with my wife, Randy, and Merle Ring, his daughter Jeanne, Ron Ring and his wife, Ruth, getting a double dose of Charles "Life is Tremendous" Jones... I have to admit that I've been known to be something of a skeptic when it comes to that sort of thing.
But, I can honestly tell you that the three-hour session was over in a flash. I hungered for more and I hurt from laughing.
The original "Mr. T." Charlie Jones is founder of Life Management Services, a consulting firm he formed at the age of 37 after a tremendous career as a salesman in the insurance business.

AUTHOR OF a book entitled, "Life is Tremendous," Jones delivered a non-stop, get-involved, verbal and physical barrage that played on the unexpected and punched holes in the human condition with love and laughter.
It would have been impossible to take notes on his presentation, because it is an experience rather than recitation.
Jones, who lives in Pennsylvania (Three Mile Island), touched on every meaningful aspect of life in a three-hour comedic assault on the human condition.
And, though it was all delivered with smiles and laughter, the punch lines were laced with lessons on life that ranged from "laughter is the best medicine" to his experience that "nothing works."

JONES IS A reader, a thinker and a doer in an era of people caught up in watching, listening and dropping out...
Contending that one of our problems today is that we "listen too much and think too little," Jones jabbed at the jaws of complainers and shirkers — the "thumbsuckers" of life.
He threw verbal combinations that floored the "I can't's" and "I won't's" who work hard to see that "nothing works."
And, in a get-off-your-duff delivery, Jones joked with an undercurrent of seriousness, about the "walking dead" who bury themselves in a bad attitude that forces others to carry the load.

A BELIEVER in reading and memorization, Jones told the crowd about his experiences in trying to get his own son to take an interest in books.
Finally, in parental desperation, Jones put together an incentive system that took the form of a contract.
The "Reading and Memorization Agreement" he signed with his son, and now shares with those attending his seminars, is worth sharing — in part — with you.

It begins thus:
"Whereas, reading and memorization increases a person's storehouse of knowledge, increases the ability to learn, helps develop leadership characteristics, and helps to master the problems of life:

"AND, WHEREAS, reading and memorization are enjoyable exercises, helping develop an understanding of people, places and events, and broadens one's ability to place historical events in proper perspective...be it therefor agreed:"
The agreement itself is simple. It commits the parent to a reward system for each approved book read by the child.
The text of the contract continues:
"These (approved) books are to be historical fiction, autobiographical, motivational, inspirational, poetic or biographical books from our own library or from outside sources."
All applicable books will be divided into two categories: $10 books and $1 books.

"FOR AN $10 book, the reader will receive $1 to spend, $1 to file and $8 will be invested in a car and college fund.
"The $1 books will earn for the reader 50 cents to spend, 10 cents to file and 40 cents will be invested."
"The reader agrees to read each book completely and write a book report," the contract continues.
The book report is a simple, fill-in-the-blank form that provides for title information, author, publisher, number of pages, main character, theme, summary and a blank for "lesson learned" by the reader.

THE CONTRACT also outlines the memorization requirements. They read thus:
"Under the memorization program, $10 will be paid for each chapter of scripture or approved historical speech, document or poem that is memorized."
"Under the memorization program, $5 will be invested, $4 given for spending money and $1 will be for file."
That concludes the contract between parent and child, except for the signatures of both parties to the contract and a final line:
"This agreement will remain in effect until each reader reaches his/her 16th birthday, or until cancelled by either party."

JONES TOLD the crowd that it works, but that his personal experience with his son was that the kid kept the money, didn't buy his own car, and continued to borrow the family auto.
Probably got smart reading all those books.
At any rate, the idea is worth considering, if you ask me. But then, you didn't.
I just thought I'd pass it along to those of you who are tired of the television set dominating the family lifestyle.

It seems to me that Jones is right about the listening and watching.
And, I've been convinced for a long, long time that we'd all be better off if we started to read, think and act.

HOWEVER, I'M also aware of what a minority report this country boy represents.
So, for those of you who believe, maybe the contract idea will help.
For the rest of you "thumbsuckers," please forgive the book commercial that interrupted your television program.
Jones' own book stresses reading, reading and reading. And, it focuses on it as a foundation for leadership.
In fact, the book is subtitled: "Seven Laws of Leadership."
He said the book is in its 21st printing...only because the first 20 editions were blurred.

INSIDE THE cover, on the jacket flap, Jones teases the reader with some thought-provoking ideas about the price of leadership.
"Leadership...is probably the most misunderstood word in our vocabulary today," Jones writes.
"Leadership is not personality. Leadership is not position, nor is leadership endowed to a certain few," he continues.
"Leadership is that certain something that is 'bought with a price.' Bought with a price that can be paid by anyone, any time, anywhere and you are as much a leader today as you are going to be, because the price you are paying today is determining the leader you will be tomorrow," he writes.

"EVERYONE HAS an obligation as well as the privilege of leading in something," he continues.
"Leadership begins with a simple decision to pay the price and ends the moment you cease to pay it," he writes.
"The price: loneliness, weariness, abandonment, vision."
Now, I know that already some of you are saying that the country boy really got taken by this Mr. T.
But, I'm telling you, it was good to hear someone who's got his head on straight and sees things for what they are and not for what they might have been.

IT WAS A thoroughly delightful experience for me and left me with a great deal to think about.
It all made sense to me and helped me realize why this country has, in many cases, lost its will to lead.
I really think that most of our so-called leaders have lost their willingness to pay the price.
I encounter it nearly every day and have often been troubled by those who would have you believe they are leaders, when in fact they are not.
My country boy suspicions are confirmed. And, I feel tremendous about it.

Catch you in the country.

Driver ed program is in danger

By Virgil Horne
Executive secretary
Nebraska Driver and Safety
Education Association

Included in Governor Kerry's budget proposal was the dropping of driver education as a state supported program in schools. This reduces the governor's budget by $1.25 million.

These are some of the things of which people in the communities should be aware:
•Governor Kerry's budget would eliminate all reimbursement for driver education retroactive to students enrolled in classes beginning Sept. 1, 1982.

•Many school districts have already lost $80 per student because they enrolled students in September assuming that there would be reimbursement this year.

•Ninety-eight percent of the state's high schools offer driver education.

•$2.25 million will be spent by school districts on driver education.

•$1.25 million will be spent by school districts on driver education.

•If the recommended budget is approved, school districts in the State of Nebraska will have to decide to spend $1.25 million more dollars on driver education or drastically alter the program.

•Funds for the driver education reimbursement program are generated through driver license fees. If the budget is passed, will the fees for driver licenses be reduced?

•This budget cut could eliminate the help received from the individuals of the State Department of Education in the area of driver education. The special needs that are unique to each school district would no longer be met in the area of driver education.

•Support materials for classroom presentations would no longer be available from the State Department of Education.

WHAT SHOULD you do?
•Write a letter to your local senator opposing the dropping of driver education. Point out that driver education puts money back into the pockets of the senator's constituents by reducing the severity of accidents and the cost of insurance.

•Contact parent/school organizations and emphasize that the community as well as individual parents will lose the benefits of reduced severity of accidents and insurance premiums if driver education is dropped.

•Write Governor Kerry about your concerns.

•Contact service clubs and be sure to include individuals who do not have children in school, both young and old, and ask them to write letters of support for driver education.

•Write letters to the members of the Appropriations Committee to oppose the bill.

Standard of living the highest

Our self-esteem as the world's leading industrial nation has been battered somewhat but Americans still retain the highest living standard in the world, despite emergence of West Germany and Japan as highly successful competitors.

Many citizens mistakenly believe the United States has been overtaken. This error is understandable. Both West Germany and Japan have garnered large shares of the U.S. domestic auto and steel markets, and compete against us aggressively in other countries.

Japan also has been gaining on us in computers, and leads in the technology of using robots to perform repetitive manufacturing functions.

IN ADDITION, according to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the growing belief that the United States no longer has the highest living standard can be traced to misleading comparisons based on money exchange rates.

Under this system, exchange rates, which convert foreign currencies into dollars, are used to compare the Gross Domestic Product (GDP) per capita of various nations. GDP is the value of all goods and services produced by a country.

"By 1980, this type of comparison shows that the standard of living in several other countries has surpassed that in the United States," an economic analyst for the U.S. Chamber, Jennifer Brown, explained in a recent paper.

"West Germany's per capita GDP, for example, was 17 percent higher than the U.S.'s, Denmark's was 15 percent higher, while Sweden's was 31 percent higher."

THESE CONCLUSIONS are erroneous. The system has two major drawbacks. First, fluctuations in exchange rates can change relative GDP ratings even though there is no actual change in value of output.

Thus, if GDP per person is $2,000 in the United States and 4 thousand pounds in Great Britain, Great Britain has half the U.S. rate, or $1,000, when the pound is valued at four pounds per dollar.

But simply change the value of the pound to 2 pounds per dollar and rated output for both countries becomes the same, $2,000.

The other problem, according to the Chamber, is that use of exchange rates tends either to overstate or understate the value of a country's output, since rates reflect only the prices of internationally traded goods and services.

AMERICANS WILL be glad to learn that economists have devised a more accurate method of comparison, using what are known as "purchase power parities," or PPPs. These compare what it costs to buy a specified basket of goods and services in each of 34 countries.

In a recent article, "U.S. News & World Report" magazine reported that a study by the Union Bank of Switzerland also shows U.S. living standards are higher based on what paychecks will buy.

In Los Angeles, for example, an employee works only about half as long as a Londoner to pay for a basic package of goods, services and housing. Even after deductions, hourly pay in New York averages $7.60 in 12 occupations studied, including both factory and white collar workers.

In Tokyo, the average is $6.70 an hour. Yet in Tokyo a worker pays over twice as much for food, over four times as much for rent and almost twice as much for gasoline.

We're still No. 1. But can we stay there?
—U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Century of progress

Wayne's 100th birthday is less than a year away. Incorporated on Feb. 2, 1884, the city has been witness to 10 decades of progress...progress brought about through the hard work and dedication of city residents.

Those 10 decades span several generations. And, the 100th birthday will mark a once-in-a-lifetime celebration of those who are here, those who have gone before and those who are yet to come.

Wayne's history is rich because it is a record written by people who care for their community.

And, that community has, in turn, cared for them in the best tradition of the small-town spirit.

Next year, Wayne residents will celebrate far more than a birthday or an anniversary.

Wayne residents will be celebrating themselves and the quality of life in a rural town that is second to none in America.

And, so it is that the newly formed Centennial Steering Committee has urged, and continues to seek, active participation on the part of city residents.

A celebration of the magnitude befitting Wayne's 100 years of progress will require months of planning and coordination.

In addition, those 100 years represent thousands of things to thousands of different people. And, the celebration needs to accurately and appropriately reflect every meaningful aspect of the life and times of Wayne.

So, if you have any ideas, suggestions or comments about the celebration being planned, it would behoove you to get in touch with the Wayne Chamber of Commerce, which is acting as a clearinghouse for the steering committee.

It's time to stand up and be counted on for a celebration that probably won't be matched for another century.

Furthermore, if you belong to an organization, the committee welcomes its active interest and participation in the celebration.

It promises to be a celebration that will be rich in learning and leadership experiences for each and every participant.

And, though 1984 seems to be far away today, tomorrow it is just that much closer.

It's time to get the celebration spirit.

extension agent-home economics

Think of how much time the average person wastes looking for some lost item.

It seems no matter how organized you think you are, something gets misplaced. There's a lot of truth to the old paw, "A place for everything and everything in its place."

That statement sounds like the impossible dream!

BUT IT doesn't have to be a dream. The key is to not let large cluttered areas in our homes overpower us. One step at a time can refer to one drawer or shelf at a time too.

If you would like help in developing organizational skills, the leader training lesson "Can't Find It, Put Your House in Order," will show you the ins and outs.

This lesson will be presented March 11 at 1:30 p.m. at the fire hall in Winfield.

Leader training lessons are developed for Home Extension Clubs, but other groups and individuals are welcome to take part.

Please call the extension office at 375-3310 so we can be sure to have materials available.

NOW HERE are a few tips to get you off to an early start. With spring cleaning just around the corner, getting organized could be a double advantage.

Keep in mind some very important rules that apply to all areas of the home.

- 1) Put items where they will be used first.
- 2) Arrange articles so that they are easy to see, reach, and put away.
- 3) Avoid stacking items or storing more than one row deep. Use several shallow shelves or divide drawers.
- 4) Keep storage as functional and easy to use as possible.
- 5) Return items to their original place as soon as you have finished using them.

SOUNDS EASY, doesn't it? Let's get down to specifics.

First, the kitchen, possibly a center of activity in your home. Start by eliminating the clutter. Toss out chipped, broken or unusable items. They only take up space.

Look at your utensils. Are there items you never use? Give to charity or your children for their first apartment.

That was easy! Examine what is in your cupboards. Seasonal items like picnic supplies, cookie cutters or punch bowls only get used a few months a year.

Rotate these items from kitchen storage to secondary locations throughout the year. Put infrequently used items on the top shelves or in the corner cupboard.

YOU CAN USE these same ideas in the rest of the home.

Store seasonal items like sweaters, athletic equipment, bathing suits and others out of the way until you're ready to use them.

That leaves much more room in the closet and saves you time. You aren't looking through things you can't use to find what you want.

One final important rule for anyone who does not live alone. Make sure all members of your family know where to find important things like flashlights, rubber bands, etc.

Good organization is not very useful when you are the only one who knows where to find everything!

Concordia Singers coming to Winside

The Concordia Singers of Seward will perform at St. Paul's Lutheran Church at Winside on Sunday, March 13 at 2 p.m.

The 33 members of the Singers, a select chamber ensemble of Concordia College, will sing a wide variety of music appropriate for Holy Week and Easter.

THE CHOIR, under the direction of Dr. David Held, will premiere "At the Lamb's High Feast," written especially for this tour by Charles Ore, professor of organ and composition at Concordia.

Based upon a 16th century chorale tune, this composition involves choir, congregation, organ and brass choir.

Included also will be a selection of familiar chorales, hymns and religious folk songs.

THE arrangement of the program follows the outline of a Lutheran Holy Communion Order.

The selections are performed in a liturgical setting for which they were originally intended or have been adapted.

Contributing to the festive nature of the performance is the display of symbolic Lenten and Easter banners in procession.

Their performance in Winside is part of an 11-day concert tour which takes the Singers to congregations and schools in the southeastern portion of the United States.

National power ends Wayne bid

The nation's number three ranked Midland Warriors made believers out of the Wayne State Lady Wildcats Friday night with a convincing 85-42 win.

The District 11 playoff championship victory advances Midland into regional play while WSC finishes its season with a 15-19 record. Midland, now 24-2, is one of the favorites to reach the national tournament.

The Warriors dominated Friday's playoff game. The Lady

The 10 men all-district men's team and 12 men honorable mention list were made up of players from Kearney State, Doane College, Bellevue College, Hastings College, Nebraska Wesleyan, Chadron State, Concordia College, Dana College, Midland College and Peru State. Wayne State was the only college not represented on the teams.

Grady Hansen, a two-time District 11 first teamer, did not even earn honorable mention status this year. He was 13th leading scorer in the district. The 12 players above him in scoring all earned either first team or honorable mention honors.

Nygren is only WSC player on state team

WAYNE STATE players warm up for Friday's season opener.

Lady Cats open season Friday

After a 12 month sabbatical leave of absence, Sue Kovar is back to lead the 1993 Wayne State College softball team.

Ten lettermen return from last year's 16-13 team, but Coach Kovar sees the team's overall youth as a potential obstacle. "We've got a lot of young players," said Kovar, "but we just need a lot of practice time working together."

"I've got some new people in new positions, and it's just going to take some time."

THE LADY CATS will head for Oklahoma this week for their first season-opening southern road trip in five years. WSC will open its season Friday (March 11) in the Oklahoma Baptist University Tournament in Shawnee, Okla. against the host school. WSC will then meet the Eagles of John Brown University (Siloam Springs, Ark.), and Kearney State Saturday, March 12.

The Lady Cats' home schedule sports five doubleheaders, with the Kearney State Lady Lopers providing the opposition for the home opener Saturday, March 19. The other home twin bills are with Nebraska Wesleyan, Bellevue College, Dana, and Briar Cliff.

Leading the Lady Wildcat returnees are Deb Janssen (senior, Kingsley, Iowa), Lori Johnson (junior, Sioux City, Iowa), and Laurie Owens (junior, Sioux City, Iowa).

Janssen hit .323 last year and banged out a team-leading five doubles while driving in 17 runs. Johnson led the team in hits last year with 25 while putting together a .313 batting average as well as scoring 22 runs and recording 92 put outs, also both team bests.

Owens returns for her second year of competition as the club's most experienced pitcher. Last year, Owens made 11 starts and won seven of her 12 decisions to lead the team in victories while posting a 3.14 ERA.

OWENS COULD be pushed for the front line starting job, however. According to Coach Kovar, sophomore Sherry Telschaw (Omaha) "has been looking very strong" in pre-season workouts. Kovar said she plans on using both Telschaw and Owens as her two primary starters, with Maggie Alberts (junior, Denison, Iowa) slated for relief duty as well as a spot starter.

Coach Kovar added that the Lady Cats' off-season weight-training program should make a difference in their overall offensive output this year. "We've always hit well at the beginning of the year, but we usually trailed off towards the end of the year. I think we might see the weight training make a difference this year, however. Especially late in the season."

Kovar concluded, "As far as softball goes across the U.S., the conference we're in (Central States Intercollegiate) plays some of the toughest ball there is." Missouri Western of the CSIC won the NAIA national title last spring. She cited Kearney State as the team to beat this year in NAIA District 11.

Exchange

and she knows she'll cry when she leaves her American family and friends.

THE HOFFMAN family includes sons Mike, a 17-year-old senior at Allen High School, and Craig, 14, an eighth grader. Sister Jenny, six, is a kindergarten at Emerson-Hubbard School.

Hoffmans became interested in hosting a foreign exchange student last year when Mike applied to participate in a United States-Japan scholarship program to spend three months in Japan.

Although Mike wasn't chosen to take part in the program, he was one of 20 students from among the 250 applications from Nebraska who were selected to be interviewed for possible selection.

However, through the Youth for Understanding program, Mike has been selected to attend school in Denmark next year.

Mike, who leaves for Denmark this July, plans to attend college when he returns to the United States.

"IT WAS through Mike's interest in visiting a foreign country that we became so interested in hosting a foreign exchange student in our home," says his mother Marge. Mike's father, Gary, is a claims supervisor for Great West Casualty in South Sioux City.

The entire Hoffman family agrees that this year with Heikki and Tomoko has been a wonderful and fantastic experience.

"It's been great," smiles Marge.

Before leaving for their homes this summer, both Heikki and Tomoko will tour the United States for approximately two weeks.

Both are interested in sharing information about their countries with their American friends.

Clubs or organizations wishing to hear them speak or show slides are invited to contact them at the Hoffman residence.

Survey

discussed at the meeting was the adequacy of law enforcement coverage in the community.

While 14.7% of those responding to the survey felt there was no need for improvement, 34.7% indicated they were satisfied with law enforcement and 44.2% felt law enforcement services were poor.

Of the 600 persons returning the survey, 6.3% had no opinion regarding present law enforcement.

ANOTHER AREA of the survey revealed most residents purchase their medicine, hardware, groceries and lumber in Wakefield.

The survey also showed that a majority of residents receive auto parts and service locally, as well as doctor, plumber, electrician and building services.

When it comes to clothing, household appliances and furniture, most Wakefield residents shop in Wayne and Sioux City

And, most Wakefield residents (70.6%) purchase their farm implements in Wayne, as well as receiving implement repairs and service there.

SALMON SAID he was extremely pleased with the number of persons responding to the survey and the results revealed.

He said another meeting will be held in a few weeks to form special interest committees to begin work on areas of concern.

Income

and those sales may have to be made in a market flooded with commodities being sold by farmers facing the same tax problem. This may cause farm market problems that PIK is designed to reduce, and may discourage farmers from participating in PIK, thus frustrating Federal agricultural policy."

He summed up the Treasury's overall position by saying, "We believe that farmers who receive PIK payments should be treated for all purposes of the Code as if they had grown the received commodities and that participation in a Department of Agriculture program should be treated as a farming activity. We support legislation that will remove any impediment to the PIK program which current tax law may create."

The first legislative step has been taken and Rank said it "is a very important step." Ray Butts, director of the Wayne County Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service, said he is not allowed to release any information on the number of farmers who have signed up for the PIK program. That information will not be available until March 22.

Complaint

LANGSTON, wanted by law enforcement officials since last September, turned himself in to the Wayne County Sheriff's Department on Feb. 21.

He made his first appearance in Wayne County Court Feb. 24, at which time he was released on a $10,000 personal recognizance bond.

Langston, who is being represented by court-appointed attorney Duane Schroeder of Wayne, has been ordered not to leave the State of Nebraska.
