Nuclear freeze forum

"In two years, Aug. 6, 1985, we will recognize the 40th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima.
"There can be no victors in a nuclear war."
Those were the opening remarks of Allen O'Donnell, director of programs at Wayne State College, during a Public Affairs Institute Tuesday afternoon at the college.
SPEAKING BEFORE a crowd of nearly 500 area high school students, college students and community residents, O'Donnell said the nuclear freeze campaign "came upon us a few years back," and that the cold war may best be represented in the nuclear arms race.
O'Donnell was moderator for a panel forum in Wayne State's Ramsey Theatre to debate the issue of "A Nuclear Freeze: Plausible or Not."
Taking part in the panel discussion were Dr. Leo Sartori, Professor of Physics at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and a former advisor to the SALT II negotiations in Geneva, Switzerland; Dr. Russell Palmer, chairman of the department of philosophy and religion at the University of Nebraska-Omaha; Lt. Col. James E. Laney, representing the Strategic Air Command and United States Air Force; and Stephen Kane of the Public Affairs Division of the U.S. Department of State.

IN HIS opening comments, Palmer told the audience gathered for the program that the question is whether or not the United States can afford to freeze with its nuclear arsenals at the current level.
"We are talking about 16,000 megatons of nuclear weapons in the current arsenals of both the United States and Russia," said Palmer.
Palmer compared one megaton to that of one million tons of TNT, enough to fill a freight train 300 miles long.
"All of the fire power of World War II amounted to just three megatons," Palmer went on to explain, "and that includes the two atomic bombs dropped on Japan."
Palmer added that the current combined arsenals of both the United States and Russia total enough fire power to equal that of 6,000 World War II.
"Even if we have a nuclear freeze we still have all this fire power in our present arsenal."
"THERE IS something we can do," emphasized Palmer.

WSC Public Affairs Institute panel ponders national nuke nemesis

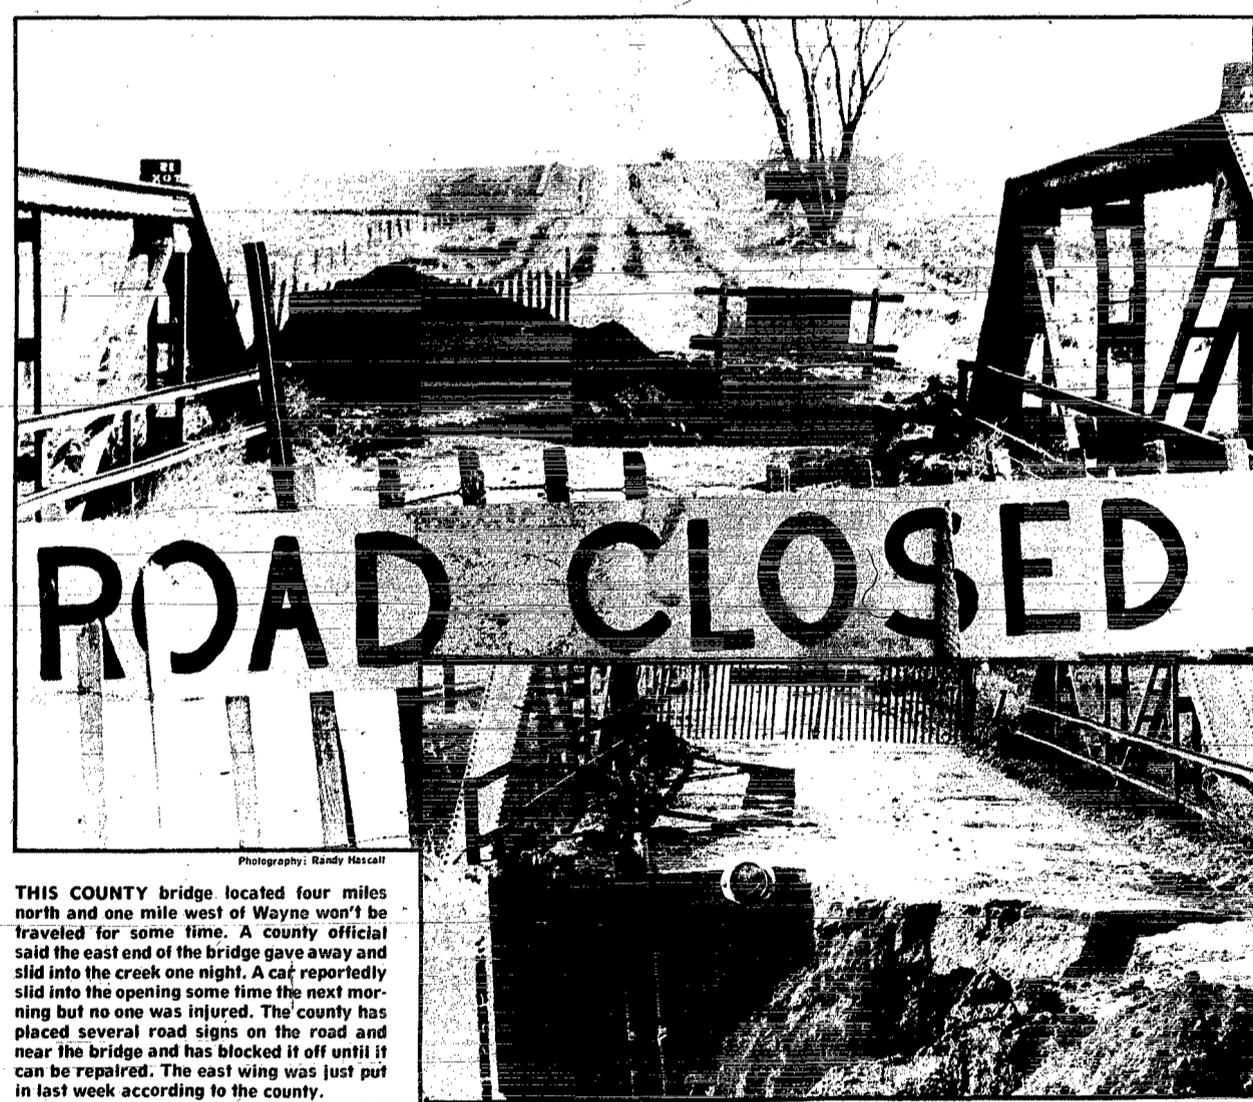

"That is to call a halt to the nuclear arms race."
Palmer added that a bilateral freeze is essential and would be verifiable by existing means of verification.
"We are already monitoring what goes on in the USSR," said Palmer, "and it could even be argued that a total freeze would be easier to verify just because both sides would stop where they are now, and any activity would mean a violation."
Palmer also cited nuclear parity as a reason to call for a freeze and said the United States and Russia are roughly equal in strategic nuclear power.
"Both nations already have more than enough nuclear weapons to destroy each other many times over," Palmer pointed out.
"The question is not who is ahead, the question is how much is enough."
"It is naive to think we can keep on escalating the nuclear arms race and not have nuclear war as a result."

Highway widening work set for Laurel

Some Laurel residents may see a large part of their front yards turned into concrete as part of a highway improvement project.
The Nebraska Department of Roads has announced its plans for a significant facelift of Highway 15 from Laurel to the Concord Spur.
The most significant change will be the widening of the roadway from its current 24 feet to 42 feet within the Laurel city limits.
CURRENTLY being considered by the Laurel City Council is the sale of about one-fifth of an acre of land south of the city swimming pool and the Lions Club Park along the roadway to the State.
City administrator L. J. Mallatt said he is recommending the sale of land because he sees little detrimental effect and some possible landscaping benefits.
Mallatt said the land, which the city is unable to mow now because of the steep slope, creates an eyesore.
The State, said Mallatt, would partially fill in the area, creating a gentler slope which could be mowed and trimmed.

THIS COUNTY bridge located four miles north and one mile west of Wayne won't be traveled for some time. A county official said the east end of the bridge gave away and slid into the creek one night. A car reportedly slid into the opening some time the next morning but no one was injured. The county has placed several road signs on the road and near the bridge and has blocked it off until it can be repaired. The east wing was just put in last week according to the county.

Wayne to get grant

The city of Wayne will receive a $1.5 million grant from the Environmental Protection Agency to upgrade its sewer system, Rep. Doug Bereuter's office announced Tuesday.
According to a Bereuter aid, Wayne will receive $1,537,500 in federal funds for a sewage treatment project. The state and local governments are required to contribute $256,250 each, bringing the total cost of the project to $2,050,000.
Wayne's current sewage system doesn't meet federal standards and the city is required to make changes. A bio-disc operation will be set up near the Wayne sewer lagoon, which is located east of town. That new operation will meet environmental standards.
A STRUCTURAL building will be constructed north of the lagoon and will house a laboratory, refining equipment and storage facilities. Rotating discs will be used to process waste at the plant.
City Administrator Phil Kloster explained that the city is switching from a 100 percent lagoon-type system to a mostly mechanical system. Man-made equipment will break down most of the sludge. The lagoon presently provides a natural breakdown.
Wayne Mayor Wayne Marsh said the city applied for the grant "a long time ago" when it was learned that Wayne's sewer pond didn't meet federal standards.
Kloster said the scheduled bid opening is April 26. Bids will be opened that day and the results will be presented to the City Council at its regular meeting that night.
THE CITY'S share of the total expense will be paid through revenue bonds that are paid off through bonds collected on water and sewer bills, Kloster said.
The federal money accounts for 75 percent of the estimated cost of the project while the state and city are required to pay 12 1/2 percent of the costs each.

Village's volunteer rescue squad gets $500

A Winside native who died at the Wayne Care Center at age 89 has left $20,000 to Providence Medical Center of Wayne.
Virginia Chapin McCain died Sunday, Feb. 27. Her last will and testament provides Providence Medical Center with a sum of $20,000 with interest to be used for upkeep and maintenance of the Chapin Room. According to the will, the use of the funds shall be determined by the Benedictine Sisters and the governing board of PMC.
Hospital administrator Marci Thomas said the Chapin Room at the hospital was named after Mrs. McCain following her donation of furniture and funds for the room and two administrative offices when the hospital was built.

THE WILL of Virginia Chapin McCain also gives $500 to the Winside Fire Department Rescue Unit to assist in the purchase of needed equipment.
A sum of $7,000 has been left so that interest can be used to assist a Winside High School graduate in the study of veterinary medicine specializing in the care of small animals.
The recipient is to be chosen by the superintendent of the school and the local veterinarian of Winside. The candidate for the scholarship must have a proven love for small animals and promise to practice in a city no larger than Wayne.

The scholarship is established in memory of Mrs. McCain's pet dog which awakened her in time to escape a fire at her Winside home in 1977.
THE REMAINDER of Mrs. McCain's estate is bequeathed to four beneficiaries. Ten percent will be given to St. Anselm's Episcopal Church of Wayne in the form of an endowment under which the interest may be used by the church.

VIRGINIA CHAPIN was the last direct descendant of the prominent Chapin family which settled in the Winside area and for whom Chapin Township was named.
She married and divorced Arthur McCain of Springfield, Mo. and later returned to Winside. She donated her parents' Indian artifact collection to Wayne State College and it is now on public display at U.S. Court Library.
In 1978 Mrs. McCain set up a $3,000 endowment for a Montie V. Chapin music scholarship to Wayne State College for piano or organ students. The scholarship was Ten percent will be given to the Benedictine Sisters of Kansas City with no restrictions as to use.

Forty percent of the remaining estate will be left to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Foundation as an endowment to be used exclusively for research and study in order to ascertain the cause and cure of osteoporosis, a disease from which Mrs. McCain suffered.
Creighton University will be given the other 40 percent of the remaining estate for the same purpose.

established in her mother's memory.
Her father, Arthur Chapin, bought approximately 1,700 acres near Winside in 1880. Included in Mrs. McCain's estate, according to Kenneth Olds, Wayne attorney and personal representative, are 240 acres in Wayne County; 640 acres in Sheridan County, North Dakota; 160 acres in Yuma County, Colorado; and her Winside residence.
Mrs. McCain is a graduate of Winside and Wayne high schools. Her body was donated to the Nebraska Anatomical Association of Omaha for medical research. Survivors include cousins, nieces and nephews.

Pancake feed Thursday

The Wayne Kiwanis Club's annual Pancake Feed flips into high gear at 5 p.m. Thursday (St. Patrick's Day, at the City Auditorium.

The feed, which represents the club's major annual fundraiser, continues "until there are no more hungry mouths" at the auditorium, according to Ken Berglund, chairman.

Kiwanis Club members volunteer for the annual event, which has become a Wayne tradition that supports youth activities here.

THIS YEAR'S feed, which is expected to draw 1,000 area pancake lovers, is focusing on the Club's 1982-83 international theme — "Make Every Child Special," according to Bill Dickey, Kiwanis Club president.

Funds will help underwrite the club's sponsorship of youth activities, such as the annual Kiwanis Scholastic Awards Banquet, which is scheduled for May.

Other projects the fundraiser generates money for include the annual Kiwanis Junior High Track Meet in May, the July Kiwanis Swim Meet, a spring Junior High School Basketball Tournament, the Kiwanis Youth Golf Tournament and the Wayne Special Olympics.

DURING THE pancake feed, Kiwanians prepare and serve the food after weeks of organization and planning.

Kiwanis committees handle arrangements from ticket sales to clean-up, according to Berglund.

Tickets will be available at the door for pancake eaters who were unable to buy them in advance.

Ticket sales chairman is Tom Jones, the Wayne postmaster. Adult tickets are $2.50 and tickets for children under 12 are $1.

Speeding tops cops list

Speeding raced to the top of the list for Wayne Police Department cases last month.

According to the monthly police report, issued recently by Police Chief Vern Fairchild, 15 speeding arrests were made during February with another 30 warnings issued for a total of 45 cases.

The 15 speeding arrests netted $303 in fines with three cases remaining on the court docket at the end of the month.

NO OTHER arrest category or warning category came close to the speeding total for the month, according to the police report.

Police made 34 arrests during the month, compared to 44 during February of 1982. The arrests generated $638 in fines with eight cases remaining on the court docket at the end of the month.

Arrests included four cases of failure to dispose of a parking ticket within 15 days, three invalid registrations, two consuming alcohol on a public way and two thefts.

Police also made arrests for a stop sign violation, a traffic signal violation, careless driving, driving while intoxicated, reckless driving, criminal mischief and obstructing traffic.

POLICE ALSO handled three speeding cases and three invalid registration cases carried over from January.

In addition, a January driving while intoxicated case was handled in February. The case involved a $250 fine and probation.

Nearing half the 61 warnings issued by police in February involved speeders.

Warnings were also issued for traffic signal violations, improper turns, reckless driving, an illegal U-turn, and a stop sign violation.

Also, police issued 22 warnings on parking violations, including seven for wrong side and left-side-to-curb cases.

Police also issued 227 parking tickets during the month, compared to 229 during the same month last year.

overnight on-street parking ban in the city, according to the report.

Police also issued violation cards to 23 motorists, including eight for no license plate, six for no drivers license, four for no headlight, three for no taillight and two for no registration.

Of the 23 issued, 13 cases were corrected during the month, according to the report. That compares to 53 issued and 24 returned corrected during February of 1982.

Police investigated 11 traffic accidents on public streets during the month, less than half the 26 logged for February of 1982. Only one private-property traffic accident required police investigation.

DURING THE month, police received 161 complaints or requests for service, compared to 140 during February 1982.

Police personnel handled 2,291 radio and 1,136 telephone messages during the month.

Some 40 of the telephone messages utilized the 911 emergency number, but police considered only 22 of those justified.

The department sent 542 teletype messages and received 1,774 during the month.

Police also handled 14 criminal complaints and made two criminal arrests during the month.

Only one dog was impounded, but seven motor vehicles were confiscated by police.

Lawmakers want taxing authority

viewpoint

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent

Nebraska may soon lose its status as the only state in the nation in which an administrative body rather than the Legislature sets tax rates.

State lawmakers last week voted 25-19 first-round approval to a bill which would return exclusive authority for setting sales and income tax rates to the Legislature.

Currently, the five-member state Board of Equalization routinely sets the tax rates to accommodate legislative spending and to provide a treasury reserve.

BECAUSE THAT power is statutory rather than constitutional, the Legislature may intervene in the normal process to dictate what the tax rates shall be. Lawmakers did so last year when they specified a 3.5 percent sales tax rate in statute for 1982.

Sen. Dave Newell of Omaha, cosponsor of LB 169, argued that the rate setting has never been the apolitical administrative action that it was intended to be.

Tax rate setting was one of the hottest issues in the 1982 gubernatorial race.

LB 169 calls for the governor to recommend tax rates to the Legislature when he presents his budget recommendations early in the legislative session.

BEFORE ADJOURNING, lawmakers would enact a bill establishing tax rates.

The tax commissioner and four legislators would review the adequacy of tax rates when the Legislature is out of session, and recommend to the governor whether he should call it into special session to consider changes in the rates.

Gov. Bob Kerrey, who as governor chairs the equalization board had endorsed LB 169. The Kerrey administration has backed off somewhat from its recommendation to close the seven state Department of Economic Development field offices.

DED DIRECTOR Don Dworak told the Legislature's Appropriations Committee on March 7 that the administration now wants to retain field offices in Lincoln, North Platte, Norfolk and Scottsbluff.

Dworak said the administration still wants offices in Omaha, Kearney and Alton to be closed.

In his Feb. 1 budget address to the Legislature, Kerrey recommended elimination of all seven offices, which are staffed by nine employees, at a savings of $225,000.

Dworak said further review of the budget impact of the proposed closing caused the administration to revise its recommendation.

AFTER REVIEWING reports, Dworak said he concluded that more than half the service contacts made by the field office staff members would have to continue to be made by central office employees in Lincoln after the offices were eliminated.

The closing of three field offices would result in an estimated savings of $124,000 annually, Dworak said.

Although the proposed service cut has been the subject of criticism by officials in the affected cities, Dworak said budgetary rather than political considerations caused the administration to back off the recommendation to close all the offices.

A majority of state lawmakers recently snuffed out the opposition of a small but determined band of smokers in their midst to adopt a rule change which will benefit visitors to legislative hearings who don't like to breathe others' smoke.

ON A 32-4 vote, they amended their legislative rules not only to outlaw smoking at public hearings, but also when senators meet in committee executive session to decide the fate of the bills before them.

Under the new rule, a legislative committee could suspend the anti-tobacco rule if a majority of members vote to do so.

The rules change was adopted after 90 minutes of some of the most impassioned debates seen thus far in the session. The change was proposed by Sen. Merle Von Minden of Allen.

Sen. Dave Newell of Omaha, a smoker, led the opposition to Von Minden's proposal. Sens. Cal Carsten of Avoca, Bob Clark of Sidney, George Fenger of Bellevue, Gary Hannibal and Marge Higgins, both of Omaha, joined Newell in voting against the rule change. All are smokers.

Go for it

The time is right.

And, Wayne Industries is going for it.

The organization's proposal for a speculative building to attract more industrial development to Wayne is a solid sign that community leaders are determined to see the city grow.

Furthermore, the fact that the speculative building proposal is being handled through an application for a state Department of Economic Development low-interest loan, is another indication that the community is willing to pay its own way for that development.

That Wayne Industries is not seeking a handout (government grant) to get the wheels of industrial development turning again may seem insignificant to many.

However, the difference between the loan approach and the handout approach is not lost on those community leaders who want this city to stand on its own feet when it comes to the future.

Last week's City Council approval of Wayne Industries loan application was another significant sign that the desire to increase the city's industrial growth is broad based.

Indeed, the time is right for just such a move and the future for industrial development in Wayne is bright.

Undaunted by the recent recession, Wayne Industries representatives are well aware that this city offers prospective business and industry a living and working environment that can effectively compete with any area of the state.

If the loan application is successful, the community will be well on its way to demonstrating a faith in its own future at a time when most cities are pulling away from tomorrow and licking the wounds from yesterday.

The go-for-it attitude of community leaders supporting the Wayne Industries development proposal reflects the resolve and resourcefulness of a city determined to grow and geared for challenge.

Certainly, tomorrow's problems of growth and development are worth solving. And, Wayne has the wherewithal to solve them.

That makes all the difference in a world overwrought with yesterday's disappointments.

Building blocks

With the ultimate goal of creating permanent, private-sector jobs throughout the state, the Small Business Revitalization Program (SBRP) has been created in Nebraska.

By creating a strong partnership between state government and the private sector, this program can provide public/private financing and other forms of financial assistance to health, growing small and medium-sized businesses throughout the state. Our goal is to raise $7.5 million in small business development financing in the program's first year.

Nebraska, along with 20 other states, was selected to be part of the Small Business Economic Revitalization Program, with the purpose of merging small business growth and job creation as part of the national economic recovery strategy outlined by the Reagan administration.

Nebraska is taking an aggressive stance on this program, since about 80 percent of new jobs are created by small business.

While contributing the most to a state's economic base in terms of tax revenues and private sector jobs, small business at the same time requires long-term financing to afford sizable investments in new plants and equipments.

In some cases, however, the supply of expansion capital is inadequate, while in others, capital may be available but lenders and businessmen may not know of a program's existence or how it may be used with other financing to make the project feasible.

The key to the success of the SBPR in Nebraska and other states is the Business Financing Specialists who are trained in creative uses of financing and other areas of small business development.

These specialists are available to analyze any commercial financial situation, recommend a financial package, put together applications and presentations, and work with the project to its successful completion.

This is an innovative, effective system that has been tested and proven in other parts of the country.

A smoke generated some fire

In one of the fiercest debates so far this session, the Legislature adopted a rule on Friday, March 4, which prohibits smoking in legislative hearings unless a majority of the members on each committee vote otherwise.

A small group of senators were opposed to the rule change and succeeded in holding up a final vote on the measure for almost 90 minutes.

I didn't expect so much controversy when I proposed the rule change, but despite the efforts to defeat it, it was clear from the final tally of 32-6 that a large majority of the Legislature favored the change.

senator merle von minden

ON WEDNESDAY, March 9, LB 125 advanced to second reading. I introduced this bill when it was brought to my attention that a problem was developing in my district and had the potential to develop elsewhere.

LB 125 addresses the situation where a developer comes into town, builds a large development area and pollutes the city council for streets, sewer, water, and other improvements.

Under current law the city has no choice but to provide the requested improvements. The problem arises when the developer can't sell his houses and walks away without paying the assessments on the development property.

Of course, the city has a lien on the property until there is a foreclosure. However, spending tax dollars for the improvements without compensation by the landowner forces the city and its taxpayers to become, in effect, bankers for the developer until foreclosure takes place.

THE SOLUTION to this rather complicated problem is LB 125. It would give the city council the authority to deny requests from a developer for improvements if, in their judgement, the development was a bad commercial venture which would put them in the position I have explained above.

The discretion of the city council would only apply to requests from landowners with existing improvements who only desired an additional improvement such as a paved street, for example.

I think this legislation is needed because it offers protection from bad business judgment of developers who, under the current law, can force our cities and towns to share in their loss from an ill conceived project.

LB 199, which raises the cost of an annual park permit from $5 to $10, was discussed again last Wednesday. I'm opposed to the increased fee, but I don't think there is enough opposition to defeat it.

WE WERE ABLE to attach an amendment which allows one duplicate at half the price of the original permit. This makes the price $10 for one permit and $15 for a permit and one duplicate.

The Legislature also advanced LB 169 to select file on Tuesday. This bill allows the Legislature to set the tax rates and the speaker of the Unicameral, along with the chairman of the Appropriations and Revenue Committees to request the Governor to call a special session for the purpose of raising taxes.

I am against the bill because it takes the power to set tax rates away from the state Board of Equalization.

Passing LB 169 would take this power away from these state-wide elected officials which, in effect, is taking the power to set the tax rates away from the people.

Farm program PIKed over

By Cheryl Westcott
Nebraska Farm Bureau

Most everybody has probably heard as much as they want to about the payment in kind program.

Oh, those affected would still pay attention if some of the "details" were worked out — such as the tax liability problem — but otherwise many of us feel as if we've been PIK-ed to death.

Rarely has so much information been produced by so many sources in so short a time. In late December-early January, when the PIK program was first anticipated and then announced, everyone was scrambling for any scrap of information.

NOW, ONLY a couple of months later, every logical source of ag information — and some unlikely ones as well — has issued a mountain of material on the program.

USDA — land grant universities, farm organizations, ag chemical and equipment manufacturers, conservation groups, banks...the list gets longer every day.

Happily, the information overload can be expected to decrease substantially after the sign-up deadline and the initial weeks of the program.

At the risk of adding to the overload, I'd like to suggest that all of this has had some benefit beyond its potential for reducing supplies: "The realities of farming have been impressed upon the general public in a big way."

AT THE LEAST, the average viewer or reader has learned that prices are low because supplies are high, making the point that the farmer is one of few businessmen who do not set the price for the product they produce.

The average American might also begin to understand how much risk is involved in farming, and might even have some appreciation for the farm families who accept that risk to produce food for all of us.

This is all elementary to farm and ranch folks, of course. But I assure you it's a revelation to a lot of people. I can recall my own views of a few years ago, before I became involved in agriculture.

I was a city kid, but I had several uncles who farmed nearby, mostly corn and wheat, and it seemed to me they had an easy life.

SURE, THEY were busy between planting and harvest, but then they had the whole winter off. I assumed they planted their crop, tended it for a few months, harvested it, got their money for it and that was that.

When I began to work as an agricultural news reporter, I was amazed to learn about the risks involved, about the need for farmers to be good managers the year around, about the difficulties of getting a price that would cover costs of production.

I had no idea marketing was so complex. I'd never heard of the ASCS or farm programs or the futures market or the difficulty of even getting into farming.

And I was surprised to learn that the corn fed to cattle was not the same as the roasting ears my mother froze in the fall.

BECAUSE OF the PIK program, more Americans are expanding their view of farming beyond the storybook picture of the red barn and the pastoral countryside.

Farmers are interviewed about how PIK will affect their situation and TV crews visit farm homes, detailing the costs of buildings and equipment and money, the involvement of the whole family in the farm, and the relationship of prices to the prosperity of that family.

And perhaps the audience even begins to understand that farming is as much a way of life as a way of making a living.

This is all to the good, and it goes a long way to offset the urban image of the farmer as a slow moving not-too-bright yahoo. It also helps to counteract the negative impressions left by a small group of farmers getting violent at a farm foreclosure sale, never mind the thousands of other farmers who have met their debt obligations, despite the personal sacrifices required.

IF NOTHING else, it enlightens those who think milk originates in the grocery store or that it's the farmer who's responsible for most of the cost of a piece of meat the store.

Hopefully the image more people are beginning to have about farmers and agriculture is that most farmers are good producers and good managers, who accept and learn to deal with a level of risk that would make most people more than uncomfortable.

Hopefully they have an appreciation for those who choose this way of life, more empathy for their situation and some feeling that "if you eat, you are involved in agriculture."

For this we can say, "thank you, PIK."

Kivett said the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Salem Church, as it was known when the church was organized, is a unique product of Swedish-American Church architecture. The Rev. Robert V. Johnson, Salem's pastor, said a symbol will be placed on four maps signifying that a historical place is located in Wakefield. Pastor Johnson noted that registration of the church this year is of particular significance since the congregation is celebrating its 100th birthday with many events scheduled throughout the year.

"Being on the diet together made it easier for both of us. We helped and encouraged each other every step of the way. Coming in to the Diet Center every day helped to provide us with the incentive to keep at it even when we were discouraged. We have much more energy now than before. And most important, we feel we have learned a pattern of new eating habits that will make it possible to control our weight permanently. The Diet Center plan worked for us!"

THE LADY WILDCATS (practicing here) won two of five ball games to place fourth in the Oklahoma Baptist Softball Tournament over the weekend.

Southern wins

WSC softball team places 4th

The Wayne State College softball team opened its 1983 season on unfamiliar soil this past weekend as the Lady Wildcats participated in the Oklahoma Baptist University softball tournament in Shawnee, Okla.

The 17-member team and Coach Sue Kovar will make their first home stand against rival Kearney State this Saturday, (March 19) in a doubleheader scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. On Tuesday, March 22, the Lady Cats will travel to Omaha to take on the squad from St. Mary's College in a pair of games slated to start at 3 p.m. Both match-ups are part of NAIA District 11 softball action.

The weekend's games left the Lady Wildcats with a 2-3 record and a fourth-place finish in the tourney. Finishing ahead of Wayne were the three teams which handed WSC its three losses, Southwest Missouri State in first place, and Pittsburg State and Okalahoma Baptist, who tied for second. Northeast Okalahoma State ended up in the fifth-place spot, followed by Friends College, Kearney State and Harding College.

Wins in the tourney included a 9-2 margin over Harding College on Friday and a 4-2 victory over Kearney State on Saturday morning.

WAYNE STATE opened the tourney on Friday against host school Oklahoma Baptist and was defeated 4-1. The Cats were unable to muster anything more than five singles at the plate.

Lady Cat Sue Walter scored the only WSC run on a single by junior Lori Johnson in the top of the first inning. OBU used a total of seven hits to come up with its winning margin as Sherry Telschaw took the opening loss of the season on the mound.

LADY CATS turned around to capitalize on nine Harding College (Ark.) errors and win their first game of the season 9-2 on Friday.

While the Wayne team committed four errors, it was able to overcome them by rapping out nine hits. Sophomore Laurie Owens claimed the victory on the pitching mound for Wayne.

IT WAS like seeing a familiar face a long way from home on Friday as the Lady Cats met up with and defeated Nebraska state college foe Kearney State 4-2 in a game suspended Friday after two innings due to darkness and continued on Saturday.

Lady Wildcats Lori Johnson and Deb Janssen had a heyday in the batter's box, as Johnson went 2-for-3 with two RBI's and Janssen came up with two hits in four times at bat.

Johnson also scored two runs, crossing the plate on a Sherry Telschaw single in the second inning and, along with Carmen Dosechol, took advantage of a KSC error to score her second in the third inning. Telschaw was the winning pitcher for Wayne.

WAYNE STATE fell to eventual tourney champ Southwest Missouri State 4-1 in its second game on Saturday.

The Lady Cats scored their lone run in the top of the fifth, when Lori Johnson got on base with a triple and was brought home on a hit by senior Deedee Recic. Southwest managed two runs in the top of the seventh to seal the win. WSC pitcher Telschaw moved her record to 1-2 with the loss.

PITTSBURG STATE was the final opponent for the Lady Wildcats in the two-day tournament and defeated Wayne State 4-2. Wayne's Lori Johnson came across home for the first score in the second inning and popped up a fielder's choice in the bottom of the sixth inning to bring in Sue Walter for the second run.

Five marks set

School records are broken

Outstanding performances by several members of the young Wayne State College Lady Wildcat basketball squad resulted in a number of school records being broken and tied during the 1982-83 season.

Freshman Deb Nygren topped the record-setting list by breaking two school records. The 5-11 center hit 16 field goals on her way to scoring 37 points in a win over Peru State College, which broke the school record of 15 field goals in a game held by the late Connie Kunzmann.

Nygren also broke another

Kunzmann-owned record at the free throw line, stepping up to the stripe a total of 173 times compared to the old record of 146.

Janet Lee, an aggressive defensive player throughout the season, established a school record for steals in a game, taking the ball away from the opponent a total of 11 times during a loss to Hastings College early in the season.

Freshman Sheri Campbell tied the school record held by Kunzmann for free throws made in a game, hitting a perfect 10 for 10 from the line in the 74-70 loss to Hastings College. Another freshman, Donetta Shultz tied Julie Brinkman's school record for assists made in a game with 10 against the College of St. Mary's, a game the Lady Cats won 71-66 last December.

Umpires clinic planned in Wayne

A softball umpires clinic is being planned April 17 in Wayne. Time and location of the clinic have not yet been established.

Addition to reserve wrapup

A wrapup story on the Wayne High School junior varsity boys basketball team, which ran in the last issue of The Wayne Herald, was not complete.

A paragraph was inadvertently left out of the paper. The following paragraph should have been included with the story.

Sophomore Pete Warrne dished out 37 assists and made 23 recoveries to rank high on the team in those categories. He hit 35 percent of his shots from the field and scored 51 points.

Laurel Relays planned March 31

The annual Laurel-Concord Relays will open the track season for most Class C and D schools in northeast Nebraska. The meet is scheduled Thursday, March 31 at the Wayne State College track.

Kerrey proclaims Wildlife Week

Governor Bob Kerrey recently proclaimed March 20-26 as 1983 National Wildlife Week in Nebraska.

Theme for the event is "This is Your Land: Public Land Belongs to All of Us." Only one percent of Nebraska is dedicated to wildlife and recreation lands.

Each year during National Wildlife Week, school children across the state study issues pertaining to that year's national observance theme, as well as conservation of Nebraska's wildlife, habitat and recreational lands. Education kits, provided by the National Wildlife Federation and distributed to teachers and youth group leaders by the Game and Parks Commission, provide the basis for student instruction.

In conjunction with Wildlife Week, the third annual "Recycle for Wildlife Campaign" is being planned. Money raised by groups or individuals by recycling aluminum, used oil and newspapers is used to purchase wildlife habitat land across the state.

For more information on the recycling campaign, write or phone the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission Omaha Office, 1313 Farnam, Omaha: 554-2144.

Randy's Recap

By Randy Hascall

NU in NIT

Even with the expanded field of 52 teams in the NCAA basketball playoffs, Nebraska didn't cut the mustard. Next year the Cornhuskers should get a NCAA bid.

The tournament has been expanded so much it has almost become a joke. Maybe someone should start a third national basketball tournament to include all of the teams that don't receive bids to play in either the NCAA or the NIT.

Nebraska did receive an NIT tournament berth and it is nice to see the Huskers in a post-season tourney even if the tournaments are overrated.

Missou has a shot

Don't count Missouri out of the NCAA's Final Four. The Tigers have a shot if they can get past Houston.

North Carolina, Louisville, Indiana and Virginia are other top contenders for a Final Four spot. Kentucky and Arkansas also could surprise a few ball clubs. It seems that just about every year at least one underdog sneaks into the semifinals.

Major Leagues get ready
Major League baseball teams are involved with spring training and the exhibition season. It won't be long before the first ball is cracked out of the stadium over an outfielder's outstretched arm.

I've been thinking about my predictions for the upcoming season and will be releasing them shortly. For the past few years I have been printing predictions that readers make. I'll continue that tradition again this season so get out your pen and pencils and send them in.

Big Red in Wakefield

The Big Red football players will be in Wakefield Saturday night to take on the Wakefield W-Club alumni in an exhibition basketball game. Nebraska's seniors are scheduled to meet up with the Wakefield team at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the Wakefield High School gym.

Advance tickets will sell for $2.50 for adults and students in 7th through 12th grades and $1.50 for elementary students. At the gate the charge is $3 for adults and $2 for elementary students.

Proceeds of the event will be used to purchase a new basketball scoreboard for the Wakefield gym. Stop on by if you want to watch the action and grab a few autographs.

Kids to wrestle

Also on tap Saturday is the annual Wayne Jaycees Wrestling Tournament at the Wayne-Carroll High School gym.

More than 300 wrestlers are expected to be on the mats and as usual there will be some good wrestlers from this area. These are the future high school varsity grapplers and they could use a little added encouragement. If you aren't busy, drop in and watch the competition.

Track's ahead

The recent change (for worse) in the weather has track coaches sweating that things will change for their season openers. Wayne boys and girls open their season next Thursday in the Columbus Lakeview Invitational. We hope that the weather will be nice for the early opener. Preview stories on the Wayne teams will be included in the Wayne Herald soon.

The final week of March has one golf meet and two track meets scheduled. The Scotus Relays are scheduled on Wednesday and the Laurel Relays will be held on Thursday of that week. History has shown that cold winds and precipitation often hinder those meets. Let's hope that's not the case this year.

Black belt

Winside man wins judo title

Bob Bowers of Winside is the new Midwestern judo champion. He claimed the title on March 6 at the Midwestern Judo Association Open Championship held at Des Moines. Bowers won all four of his matches in the 10-man, 156-pound division. Following the tournament, the Midwestern Judo Association Promotional Board announced that Bowers has been promoted to first-degree black belt. The promotion surprised Bowers who had tested for first degree brown belt prior to the tournament.

The promotional board elected to skip first degree brown belt due to Bowers' outstanding competition record. His advancement from beginner to black belt is one of the fastest on record in the state according to Leroy Renner of the Norfolk Judo Club. Bob said his wrestling background was a contributing factor in his rapid advancement in the sport of judo. He was a Class C state wrestling champion in 1975 and a state runner-up in 1974.

Bowers farms west of Winside. He and his wife, Janice, have one daughter, Jessica. Bob received his judo training at the Norfolk Judo Club.

Two champions

Wrestlers place

Two first place medals, four seconds, three thirds and six fourths were won by Wayne elementary wrestlers in the Neligh Invitational held Saturday.

Fourth graders Jason Ehrhardt and Chris Janke both won championships in their respective divisions. Second place finishers were fourth-graders Ben Wilson and Chris Fredrickson, third-grader Jason Fink and sixth-grader Corey Frye.

Placing third were fifth-grader Brian Moore and fourth-graders Cory Wieseler and Jeff Struve. Wrestlers who finished fourth were second-graders Andy Luff and Heath DeWald, third-graders John Hadcock, Brian Gannaway and Joe Denton, and fifth-grader Matt Peterson. Coach Don Koenig's wrestlers will now compete in Saturday's Wayne Jaycee Tournament.

Baseball squad returns home with two Southern victories

After a rocky start on its "Southern Swing" to Kansas and Oklahoma, the Wayne State baseball team showed signs of coming around after a three-game series with Southeastern Oklahoma on Friday and Saturday in which the Wildcats won one and lost two.

Wayne State is idle until Saturday's scheduled doubleheader in Seward against Concordia College. The Wildcats' next action is on Tuesday, March 22 in Omaha against the Creighton University Bluejays. The home opener is on March 24 against Yankton.

Wayne State returned from its southern road trip with a 2-6 record. Included in that mark are two losses to Wichita State and one to Kansas State, both of the NCAA, and two losses to Southeastern, rated third in the nation in the NAIA.

SOUTHEASTERN OKLAHOMA'S "Savages" pounded three Wayne State pitchers for a total of five home runs in 15-4 whitewash in Durant on Friday. Rocky Thompson was the WSC starter and took the loss. He was relieved by Joe Olsen and Tim Uber.

Doug Starzl of Wakefield was the top batter for WSC, going 2-for-4 with two RBI's. Wayne State 001 000 3-4 7 3 Southeastern 134 107 x-15 14 0 WP: Marvin White, LP: Rocky Thompson.

2B: SEO-Tom Dutton, Marlin Ueltschey, HR: SEO-Dutton, Ueltschey, Tim Phelps, Martin Dean, Linden Black.

PITCHER GREG DOSTAL and Dan Hilgenkamp combined for a four-hitter to lead Wayne State to a 3-2 upset over Southeastern Oklahoma on Saturday. Dostal earned the win as he went six innings before yielding to Hilgenkamp. The game was a defensive struggle, with the teams combining for just seven hits and one error.

Wayne State got its three runs in the top of the first, as well as the only three hits the Cats would manage. Southeastern responded with a pair of runs in the bottom of the third but could not cross the plate the rest of the way. Craig Ladwig and Rich Murcek both had RBI's for Wayne State, and another WSC run came across on a wild pitch.

Wayne State 300 000 0-3 3 1 Southeastern 002 000 0-2 4 0 WP: Greg Dostal, LP: Johnson. 2B: SEO-Keeling.

SOUTHEASTERN avenged its earlier loss to Wayne State with a 3-2 win of its own on Saturday. The victory upped the Savage record to 5-3.

Wayne State managed runs in the first and third innings, while Southeastern posted a run in each of the first three innings for all the scoring the teams would manage.

Dan Hilgenkamp drew the starting assignment and scattered just six hits in the loss that dropped his record to 0-2. WSC tagged winner John Darwin for seven hits.

Greg Cruickshank had an RBI double for WSC. Craig Ladwig and Randy Heying both went 2-for-3 at the plate.

Rec team loses at Fremont

Class A competition proved tough as the Wayne recreation eighth grade boys were defeated 47-31 by the Fremont Rebels and 39-29 by Beatrice in the State Junior High YMCA Basketball Tournament held Friday and Saturday at Fremont.

The losses dropped Wayne's season record to 9-4 with Fremont administering three of the two scored 28-10 as the Rebels took control. Starter Troy Wood, who sprained an ankle in a previous ball game, didn't play in the state tournament and will be a question mark when Wayne competes in the Fremont Tournament on March 25 and 26.

Wayne took the early lead against Fremont on Friday and held an 11-7 advantage at the end of the first quarter. In the next season record to 9-4 with Fremont administering three of the two scored 28-10 as the Rebels took control. Starter Troy Wood, who sprained an ankle in a previous

Brass ensemble to perform

The Eastman Brass Ensemble, a five-member group from Rochester, N.Y., will perform at Wayne State College on Thursday, March 24, according to James Day, professor of music at Wayne State.

The Eastman Brass Ensemble tours from the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, and this is one of the few times for this group to appear in Nebraska. Day noted.

The performance will begin at 8 p.m. in Ramsey Theatre, located in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Center on the Wayne State campus.

Admission is $3.50 for adults and $1.50 for high school students and younger. WSC faculty, staff and students will be admitted free of charge, as will holders of WSC activity passes.

THE FIVE members of the ensemble include Barbara Butler, trumpet; Charles Geyer, trumpet; Verne Reynolds, French horn; Jon Marcellus, trombone, and Cherry Beauregard, tuba.

The ensemble was established in 1964, and has toured extensively in the U.S. and Canada, as well as several countries in Central America under the sponsorship of the U.S. State Department.

The program is the last in Special Programs series on the Wayne State campus for the 1982-83 school year.

'Programs of Excellence'

Grants totaling $3,000 awarded to WSC groups

Wayne State College Vice President Ruby Pedersen recently announced the awarding of nearly $3,000 in grants to several groups at Wayne State College.

The grants, which are funded through the Wayne State Foundation and range from $300 to $500, were awarded as part of the "Programs of Excellence" project.

They are used to help bring or continue special programs that would otherwise not be able to be funded by Wayne State.

David Ley, vice president of the Wayne State Foundation, was on hand to present the checks.

RECIPIENTS of the "Programs of Excellence" grants at Wayne State include: Social Science Division (Allen O'Donnell/Cliff Ginn) - for the Public Affairs Institute. Each spring and fall the Social Science division sponsors a program on a topic of current national interests. Monies are used to help bring recognized authorities on each particular subject to the Wayne State campus.

Math/Science Division (Dr. Charles Maier) - for the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum. This program concentrates on campus beautification and environmental control. In the past years, hundreds of shrubs and trees of a wide variety have been located on the Wayne State campus.

Math/Science Division (Carl Rump) - for the Fred G. Dale Planetarium. Every semester three to four programs are offered free of charge at the planetarium. Many area schools take advantage of these programs by bringing busloads of students to the planetarium.

Math/Science Division (Jewell Schock) - for the Audubon Wildlife Film Series. This series, which has been offered for the past couple of years, presents films by noted naturalists about various phases of wildlife from around the world. The naturalist who produced the film is on hand to describe the film and answer questions.

Humanities Division (Herb Meiner and Régis Tucci) - for campus radio and television programs. The programs of campus-wide interest are produced by and for Wayne State students through the campus radio station

KWSC-FM and through the campus television station, KWSC-TV. International Education (Charles Kay) - to assist in coordination and planning the logistics for WSC's annual international programs. This on-going program has, during the last 10 years, taken hundreds of people to Europe. Four programs are being offered this summer by Wayne State.

Institutional Advancement (Adrie Nab) - to assist in the development of the institutional advancement program. The institutional advancement concept is new to Wayne State and will soon be implemented to coordinate activities in areas of admissions and student recruitment, college relations, alumni relations, and financial aid.

Wayne State representing Denmark

Sixteen Wayne State College students will represent Denmark in this year's Model United Nations program, according to Allen O'Donnell, associate professor of political science at Wayne State.

The students will leave on Sunday, March 27 for New York City, and return on Sunday, April 3.

They will be staying at the Grand Hyatt Hotel, and will combine their work with the sights of the "Big Apple."

STUDENTS WILL receive three hours of credit for the trip, O'Donnell said. As representatives of Denmark, the students will play the roles of professional diplomats, he added.

In preparing for the conference, the students have been meeting once a week since Feb. 16 to familiarize themselves with the materials and information needed for the week.

Students also will meet with their "real world" counterparts, the Danish diplomats, on the morning of March 30.

This year, the students will have the opportunity to visit the Metropolitan Museum of Art, which will be displaying "The Vatican Art Exhibition: Pappy and the Arts." This is the first time that these artworks have been taken out of the Vatican.

AMONG THE 16 students going on the trip are three WSC foreign exchange students. They are Edith Okubanjo of Nigeria, a junior majoring in business management; Valentina Tobon of Columbia, a freshman communication arts major; and Diana Waris of Finland, a junior business management major.

Other participants include Charles Burney, a junior social science major from Harrington; Catherine Cameron, a senior from Blair majoring in English and history; Lowell Christensen, a junior majoring in public administration from Pilger; Bradley Davison, a junior public administration and criminal justice major from Stanton.

Also, Kent Fairbairn, a senior majoring in political science and minoring in history from Treynor, Iowa; Leslie Grant, a junior sociology major with a psychology minor from Tallahassee, Fla.; Brian Holcomb, a junior social science major from Coleridge; Doug Janousek from Schuyler, a junior journalism and English major; Lisa Klichler, a political science major and Spanish minor from Fremont; Donald Kneiff, a sophomore criminal justice major from Ponca; Lee Kurpewell, a senior social science major from Leigh; Darla Sorensen, a speech communications and English major from Stapleton; and Tracy Trumble from Bellevue, a senior business administration/secretarial major.

Job, career search strategies topic of Wayne State workshop

Students and academic advisers at Wayne State College will be able to attend special workshops this month on "Building Job and Career Search Strategies."

The workshops will be Tuesday, March 22, on the WSC campus, and will be presented by Mr. Paul Curro & Associates of Omaha.

A WORKSHOP for students will be at 1 p.m. March 22 in the Nebraska Room of the WSC Student Center. Students will be "coached" in deciding on careers and locations, transferring skills to related job fields, and in what Curro calls the "hidden job market."

The 1 p.m. workshop also is open to the public free of charge.

In a related workshop, faculty and staff members who serve as academic advisors will learn how to help students implement job and career search strategies.

The advisors workshop will be from 3 to 5 p.m. March 22 in the Plains Room of the WSC Student Center.

ACCORDING TO Lin Brummels, WSC's director of academic counseling, Curro has a great ability to motivate people. Brummels said she is looking for a good attendance to the workshops, and is "hopeful that others will catch his (Curro's) excitement."

Curro works extensively as a career management consultant to both industry and education. He has conducted workshops and training in career planning for over 3000 job-seekers, students and career changers.

The workshops are sponsored by the WSC Advising Core Group, which consists of representatives from each academic division and from the department of Student Services at Wayne State College.

Faculty profile

Dr. Charles R. Maier likes Wayne State College because "it's small enough that we can do an excellent job of teaching the beginning science course, and yet we have the time that we can give students the personal attention they sometimes need."

A WSC faculty member since 1968, Maier is a professor of biology and holds an undergraduate degree in biology and a master's degree in botany, both from Emporia State College in Emporia, Kan.

MAIER WENT on to earn his doctoral degree in plant pathology from Oregon State University in 1959. He conducted his doctoral research on downy mildew of hops and its response to antibiotics.

Before coming to Wayne, Maier was a research plant pathologist at New Mexico State University at Las Cruces from 1958 to 1968. There he conducted mostly field research on fungus diseases of cotton and field beans.

Between 1958 and 1978, Maier published 45 research articles on a variety of topics.

He has been honored by membership in Beta Beta Beta, Lambda Delta Lambda, the Society of the Sigma Xi, and Phi Kappa Phi. He also has been listed in a number of honorary publications including "Who's Who in the Midwest" and "American Men and Women of Science."

ON CAMPUS, Maier co-sponsors the Biology Club and the

Dr. Charles Maier

WSC chapter of Lambda Delta Lambda.

An evergreen farm from which he sells Christmas and landscape trees keeps Maier busy in his spare time, and he is active in the Northok Antique Auto Club and the Wayne Lions Club.

Maier spends some time pitching horseshoes as well, as is evidenced by the fact that he has been WSC's intramural horseshoe champion on six occasions.

He and his wife, Barbara Jeanne, have three children, Tom, 24, Timothy, 21, and Pamela, 17.

Mutual of Omaha tour

A GROUP OF STUDENTS from Wayne State College recently toured the home office facilities of Mutual of Omaha and United of Omaha. Accompanied by their instructor, the students viewed modern business equipment and systems in operation and received a firsthand look at how their studies apply to actual working situations. Students also toured the companies' unique underground addition. The three-level office building, which is capped with a massive glass dome, has produced energy savings up to two-thirds the comparable costs for an aboveground facility. During the tour, students also learned of the variety of career opportunities available in the insurance industry.

"ALL OF US are here because we share the same goal — the prevention of nuclear war," said Lt. Col. Laney in his opening comments.

"I do not support a nuclear freeze," Laney said, adding that he represents not only himself but the Strategic Air Command and Air Force.

"The practical, political reality," added Laney, "is that a nuclear freeze would not freeze the United States in nuclear superiority."

Laney, an advocate of deterrence, argued that the modernization of strategic nuclear arsenals is essential if the United States is to show its willingness to defend itself.

"Then," added Laney, "we can work for a significant nuclear arms reduction."

Laney said deterrence provides the assurance that neither side will start a nuclear war because such a war could end only with mutual assured destruction.

LANEY ADDED that the United States must continue to modernize its forces to the point where the Soviet Union would never entertain any thoughts of attack.

"The USSR sees our form of government as one that is destined to be overcome by communism," Laney pointed out.

"No sane, rational person wants nuclear war," he added, "but I do believe the Soviet doctrine and history allows for the possibility of a nuclear war much more than ours."

"The Soviets practice for the possibility of a nuclear war — not to win, but to prevail if it comes."

Laney said a freeze sends the wrong signal and that the United States must modernize its strategic nuclear arsenal and then work for significant arms reduction.

KANE, representing the State Department, said the current administration does not support a nuclear freeze as the best way of avoiding a nuclear catastrophe.

"The President," said Kane, "stated in a recent radio broadcast that those who govern America during the nuclear age must realize that a nuclear war can never be won and must never be fought."

Kane said the administration believes a freeze today would leave the United States in a position of military disadvantage.

"The USSR has had a massive build-up during the last decade," he added, "and a freeze would preserve the USSR's advantages, giving them little incentive to negotiate arms reductions."

KANE SAID a nuclear freeze would not do "all" that much good if both superpowers reduce nuclear arms but continue to build up conventional weapons.

"The best way to achieve peace is by lowering the amount of arms to an equal lower level for both superpowers," he added.

Kane stated that the administration hopes to create an international arena in which there is a lower level and a safer level of arms.

"The administration supports, in place of a freeze, the creation of a political environment in which nuclear war is not possible," Kane said, adding that the administration has introduced initiatives in the field of arms reduction.

Kane said although there are various approaches to the nuclear freeze movement, the administration feels those paths "are not particularly constructive although the motivation is deeply sincere."

VIEWING THE possibility of a nuclear freeze from the point of U.S. national security, Sartori told Tuesday's audience he is very disturbed at hearing talk from Washington of prevailing in a nuclear war.

"There is no prevailing," emphasized Sartori.

"In considering the need for any additional weapons," he added, "we must ask ourselves in what way they will enhance our national security."

"We have enough now to deter," argued Sartori. "The weapons we have now are sufficient enough that any attacker would have to be insane to attack deliberately."

SARTORI questioned in what way newly deployed systems would help the United States.

"In no way would I feel more secure knowing we have additional weapons," Sartori pointed out.

"Nuclear war might result from a computer mix-up, panic, or false alarm. Having additional sophisticated weapons will not decrease that chance."

Sartori said he cannot see that additional weapons will add to the United States' security.

"The freeze makes sense because it will insure that the USSR will stop production of any more," he added.

"We don't know what new horrors we will face in the next 20 years," said Sartori, "but a nuclear freeze now is the first logical step in the reduction."

"To say we have to deploy more before we reduce doesn't make sense to me."

"A freeze is the one single step we can take immediately that would enhance national security in the future."

FOLLOWING HIS opening comments, Sartori asked Laney what the Soviet Union would do with its military advantages if there were a freeze tomorrow.

"If the United States has enough to deter today, then they also will deter tomorrow," Sartori stated.

"Yes, we do have adequate deterrence today, but there comes a time when deterrence no longer has credibility because our arms are outdated," said Laney, pointing out that while the United States' military forces are predominantly 20 to 25 years old, the USSR's are predominantly less than five years old.

"Say we had a freeze and the Soviet's cheated," asked Laney. "What sort of situation would we be in if the freeze doesn't work?"

"WE MUST start by accepting certain realities," added Kane.

"First, nuclear weapons are here. We can't wish them away or freeze them away."

"Second, increased nuclear technology will not reverse. It will become more sophisticated."

"The administration's strategy," added Kane, "is based on the deterrence approach not to use those weapons."

"IN THE FINAL analysis, it will be the people of this country who will direct our goals," Laney told audience members.

"You must ask yourselves what do we need to protect our national security."

"That, ladies and gentlemen, is up to you."

Students winners at Sholes mini-fair

What would you pack around a fresh egg inside a cigar box to keep it from breaking when tossed from the roof of the school?

This was the challenge the teacher, Mrs. Twyla Maxon, afforded the pupils with from the Sholes Public School. As an added incentive each would receive a prize for his ingenuity if his egg was unbroken.

ALL PARENTS were invited to attend the mini-science fair held March 4. While a ladder was being placed against the school, the pupils nervously began handing over their secret idea taped in the cigar boxes.

Two fathers, Mr. Ken Morten and Mr. Larry Wittler stood on the roof and began the egg toss over the edge, approximately 13 feet, to the ground. Then the boxes were brought into the school for the unveiling of the results.

As each box was opened, the packing showed originality, creativity and variety. The eggs had been cradled in shredded paper, damp sand, cotton batting, sponge rubber, a zip-lock bag of Knox finger jello, cotton balls and rags, a cardboard tube surrounded by foam rubber and a zip-lock bag of shaving cream between layers of bread slices, and an entire box filled with ground feed.

To the amazement and delight of the teacher and pupils, not one egg was cracked or broken.

The science fair continued with each class demonstrating science concepts or experiments.

Language Fair

The Wayne High German Club travelled to Lincoln on March 7 and attended the seventh annual University of Nebraska Language Fair. This event is a day of culture, learning, and competition for Nebraska students of Spanish, French and German.

Russian, Swedish, and Japanese were just a few of the mini classes offered to stimulate student interest in foreign language. Three foreign films were shown to the students in each of the three main languages. Most of the day, however, revolved around competition. Students participated in honors testing, music, folk dancing, drama, poster and name tag design.

Wayne High students fared well in competition. In drama, Wayne's excerpt from George Kaiser's "Gas I" earned a superior rating and placed 2nd in overall competition. The cast of "Gas I" included Lori Baker as the narrator, Bryan Schmidt, Kris Loberg, Paula McCright, Rod Porter, and Pete March as board members, and Pam Maier, as the billionaire's son.

Wayne's poster and name tags, designed by Kris Loberg and Pam Maier, each received a rating of "very good." Rod Porter, Vinni Johar, Lori Baker, and David Zahnizer competed in the Honors Test. However, the final rankings were not available at press time.

Band Concert

On Tuesday, March 8, the Wayne High Concert Band, under the direction of Ron Dalton presented its winter concert. The band played seven pieces. Featured at the concert was Dawn Droscher. She played her French horn solo "Morceau de Concerti," and was accompanied by the band.

Old memories were brought back when the band played the Golden Age of Rock and Roll, a medley of songs from the sixties and The Roaring Twenties which featured a saxophone duet and dancing girls. Shelley Emry and Gregg Elliott played the saxophone duet and Michelle Sherlock, Julie Fleming, Missy Stollenberg, Jeanne Tietgen, Amy Jordan, and Beth Schafer were the dancing girls.

Mr. Dalton now plans to start preparing the band for the Wayne State Districts coming up in April and to help individuals prepare for their solos. On March 29 the swing choir and stage band will be attending the contest at the University of South Dakota. Plans are being made for a May 10 finale concert put on by both the band and the choir.

Speech Team Competes

The Wayne High speech team attended the West Point Central Catholic Invitational on March 5. The competition was fierce and Wayne Students did not fare as well as expected.

The big winner of the day was Chris Hillier. Chris placed first in the event of entertainment speaking after making it into the final round. By the result of a coin toss, the interpretation of drama team, tied for second at the time, wound up in third place.

The team members were Kim Weander, Christy Neilsen, David Mellon, Pete March, and Shelli Schroeder. In duet acting Bryan Schmidt and Pam Maier received 4th place ranking.

After leading the event of humorous prose in the preliminary round, Pam Maier went on to place sixth in final competition. Kim Weander, a finalist in the poetry division, placed fifth. Jassi Johar placed fourth in original public address.

LOWER ELKHORN NATURAL RESOURCES DISTRICT

Now is the time for construction of conservation practices

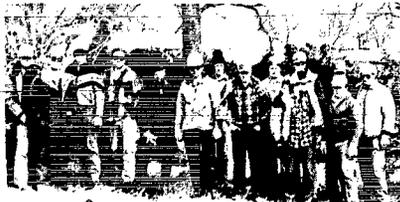

Landowners, if you have been considering putting soil conservation practices on your land, this is the time to do it! If you are enrolled in the set aside or PIK program, you can idle the land that needs the soil conservation practices. In many cases, these will be the problem areas which you would want to set aside first anyway.

By locating your PIK acres where you want to do conservation work, you are eliminating scheduling problems with a contractor. The work can be done anytime before frost next winter. This may even help you get a more attractive bid on the work from contractors.

This is also a good year for conservation work because of the assistance available to you:

1. The Soil Conservation Service is available for technical assistance, designing and staking out conservation practices on your land.
2. ASCS offices have their usual allocation of funds available to you through the ACP fund up to a limit of $3,300 for cost-sharing conservation practices.
3. The Lower Elkhorn NRD offers cost-share to landowners for dams and terrace systems.
4. Nebraska Water Conservation Program funds are available through the NRD for cost-sharing. Any of these three funds can be used in combination for larger projects.

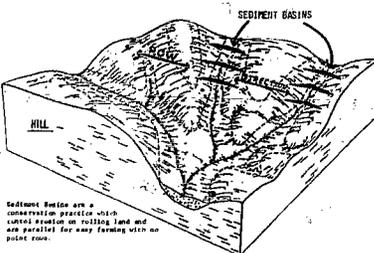

In addition to these forms of assistance, USDA has begun a new approach to controlling soil erosion and water quality problems. It is called "Targeting." In other words, additional technical assistance and cost-share funds are provided to areas which are targeted as critical soil erosion areas. Twenty-nine counties in the eastern third of Nebraska fall into this category. Additional SCS personnel are being assigned to this area to work with landowners on design and layout of conservation practices. A special ACP fund of $1,030,750 has been set aside for these 29 counties, so $33,250 is available in each county. This fund is to be used in mini-Long Term Agreements

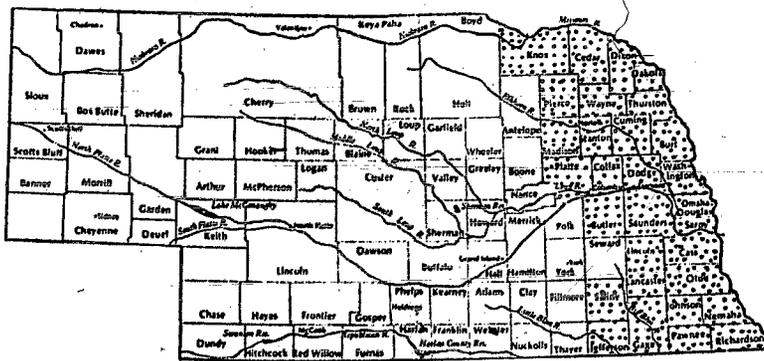

Fourteen volunteers, including Lower Elkhorn NRD Directors and Staff, participated in building of fish habitat in the Willow Creek Lake near Pierce. The habitat consists of cedar truss anchored in what will be the pool area of the lake. Participants were: Steve Olfmans, Ed Kuenzi, Ken and Wendell Newcomb, Bob Freiberg, Larry Glendy, Skip Kahler, Ken Rhodes, Dale Alswager, Johnny Messerly, Steve O'Banion, Myron Behlen, Doug Pinkley, Dennis Newland.

(LTA's) with landowners. Under these LTA's, a landowner may receive up to $3,500 cost-share annually for one to five years for constructing conservation practices.

For convenience and assistance there may never be a better time to put needed conservation practices on your land than now. Contact your local SCS office for information.

Sediment basins are a conservation practice which collect siltation on rolling land and are parallel to any farming with an erodible row.

Twenty-nine counties in eastern Nebraska have been "Targeted" for extra technical assistance and cost-share funds to control critical soil erosion problems.

Windbreak system aids crop yields

Research at the University of Nebraska Field Lab at Mead indicates that a properly designed windbreak can boost yields and more than pay for itself.

The study shows that under dryland conditions, corn yields increased 20% in the protected area of the windbreak, soy beans 18% and wheat 22%. Windbreaks used in the research project consisted of two rows of trees utilizing various combinations of redcedar, pines, green ash and cottonwood. Area of protection was considered to be up to 440 feet from the windbreak or roughly 20 times the height.

On a quarter-section of ground a farmer could establish a two-row windbreak of redcedar on the north, west and south sides of the field and 5 alternating single and double tree rows east-west every 440 feet across the field. This design would require 15 acres in the quarter section and an establishment cost of $2700.

Based on $2.50 per bushel for corn, $4 for wheat and $6 for soybeans, and the utilization of ASCS cost-share the payback period would be in 12 years. The revenue lost for no crop production in the area of the windbreak was considered. Total net revenue on the quarter section based on the previous assumptions is close to $37,000 over a 50 year period.

Since planting windbreaks is shown to increase production and income, it should be obvious that removing windbreaks is a costly practice, not only initially, but in lost production and wind erosion of soil.

Last chance to order trees

The tree planting season is a few weeks away. Of the 3.5 million Clarke-McIntyre trees available last November 1, several of the species available in the program are sold out or running low. Order trees now if you are thinking about planting a windbreak, woodlot, wildlife habitat area or for other purposes. Seedlings are available for $28 per hundred and can be ordered at your local SCS, extension or NRD office. All NRD's in northeast Nebraska have low cost tree planting and weed control services available.

Preparation for tree planting

With cooperation from the weather, tree planting may begin by mid to late March. Preparation for planting your trees, however, should have begun last fall. Especially when trees are to be planted into former grass land, the area should be fall plowed. This is to insure a good kill on the grass, stop moisture loss from the soil, and make a mellow planting bed in the spring. Weed or grass competition and poor planting conditions are the greatest causes of young tree mortality.

If fall plowing was not done, you should be sure to get the area ready this spring and work it again a few days before planting to get rid of small weeds. After planting, keeping the trees free of weeds and grass will not only improve survival, but can increase growth by 100%. In other words, you can have an effective windbreak in half the time if you put some time and effort into it.

Ag society honors locals

Gamma Sigma Delta, the honor society of agriculture, honored 76 University of Nebraska College of Agriculture students at a scholarship recognition dinner March 13 at the UNL East Union. Initiates are required to be in the upper 10 percent of their classes.

The program included presentations of the outstanding sophomore and senior awards by Ted Hartung, dean of the NU College of Agriculture, and an address by Robert L. Raun, director of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture.

Among those honored were juniors Steven Stark of Laurel and Lon Swanson of Wayne.

Vo-ag judging contest set

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln will host more than 2,500 high school-age guests during the annual vocational agriculture judging contests April 14-15, sponsored by the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Lloyd Bell, NU ag education staff member and contests coordinator, said five contests will be held on Thursday and eight on Friday.

The students, who in some cases had to hurdle district competition to qualify for state contests, will participate in a gamut of contests ranging from welding to poultry management, from entomology to milk and dairy foods inspection and from agronomy to meats judging.

Most contests involve both team and individual contests, Bell said, and some winners go on to compete in national contests held in conjunction with the National FFA Convention in Kansas City, Mo., this fall.

The state contests are held in conjunction with the Nebraska FFA Convention.

Contest winners will receive awards during a ceremony to be held Saturday morning, April 16, in the NU East Campus Union, with College of Agriculture Dean T.E. Hartung presiding. A sweepstakes awards will go to the outstanding high school vo ag contestant group, he said.

Farm Bureau plans supper

The Wayne County Farm Bureau will hold a soup supper Saturday, March 19 in the Wayne city auditorium.

Serving will be from 6:30 to 8 p.m., with a variety show to follow. All Farm Bureau members and prospective members are invited. Farm Bureau members are asked to bring a pie.

The menu will include vegetable beef, chicken noodle and chili soup. Cost is $2 for persons over 10 years of age, $1.50 for ages 6 to 10, and free for youngsters five and under.

Ag students on Dean's List

Nearly 200 fulltime students at University of Nebraska's College of Agriculture have been named to the Dean's List for the first semester, 1982-83. Students from all sections for Nebraska and four other states were named on the basis of high academic achievement, according to Dean Ted Hartung. Half a dozen area students were named to the list.

Dean's List students from this area: Tamara Malchow of Laurel (sr.), Alice George of Dixon (fr.), Desiree Williams of Allen (fr.), Steven Anderson of Wayne (sr.), Lisa Greve of Wakefield (sr.), Lon Swanson of Wayne (jr.).

Allen grad elected officer

Dave Hansen, a 20 year-old sophomore from Allen, has been elected vice president of the Alpha Tau Alpha agricultural education honorary. The list of officers was announced at a recent banquet in Lincoln.

Hansen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hansen of Allen. Alpha Tau Alpha is a national professional honorary agriculture fraternity for individuals who plan to teach vocational agriculture.

Wayne winners awarded trip

Minneapolis, Minn. is the destination for a group of six 4-H home economics judging contest winners from Wayne and Otoe counties.

"The group earned the trip after taking high individual and high team honors during the 4-H Home Economics Judging Contest at the 1982 State Fair," according to Jill Jank, extension program specialist — home economics at the University of Nebraska.

"The state contest which consisted of an oral and written part tested their knowledge in areas of food and nutrition, clothing and textiles and home environment," Jank said.

"The trip, which will be held March 24-26, is designed to serve not only as a reward, but also as an educational experience that focuses on home economics and home economics careers," she said.

Those from Wayne County planning to attend are: Valerie Bush of Carroll, Annette Finn of Carroll, Ruth Loberg of Carroll, Karen Sandahl of Wakefield and Anne Sorenson of Wayne. Sponsors for the group are Jank and Mary Temme, extension agent in home economics in Wayne County.

Funds for the trip are provided by Ak-Sar-Ben.

Irrigation Association to meet

The annual meeting of the Northeast Nebraska Irrigation Association will be held on Monday, March 21, at the V.F.W. Clubroom in Hartington. Dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m. with Jack Odgaard, director of Nebraska Water Resources Association as main speaker. After the meeting there will be a cocktail hour in the lounge.

All members and their spouses are urged to attend this meeting. Any other interested parties are also invited to attend.

PIK data report planned

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Statistical Reporting Service will issue a special report March 22 at 3 p.m., detailing, according to agency administrator William E. Kibler, the report will include data on the number of farms with base acreages and the number of farms enrolled, as well as total base crop acreage and the number of acres enrolled for feed grains, rice, wheat and upland cotton. He said the release will carry both national and state totals for each of the four program commodities.

Data, which will cover all states except Hawaii, will be summarized from raw sign-up figures channeled from county offices of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation to Statistical Reporting Service state offices and tabulated under security at USDA's Washington headquarters.

The special report also will provide state and national data on each of the program signups: acreage reduction, 10-30 percent PIK and whole farm PIK.

The report also will indicate the percent of farms and base acreage enrolled, the acres required for conservation use, the base acreage of participating farms and total permitted acreage by states.

Dairymen plan meeting

The Nebraska State Dairymen's Association will hold its annual meeting March 17 beginning at 10 a.m. at the Holiday Inn in Columbus, according to Phil Cole, University of Nebraska extension dairymen.

Featured speaker will be John White of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute. White will address association members on dairymen's self-help program at the noon luncheon.

Among the awards to be presented at the annual meeting are the Nebraska Distinguished Dairymen Award, presented by the Midland United Dairy Industry Association and the Nebraska State Dairymen's Association; Nebraska Dairy Herd Improvement Association supervisor awards and outstanding cows and outstanding herd awards, Cole said.

Advanced registration for the meeting is requested.

IRS clarifies PIK tax issue

If a farmer participates in the PIK or any other USDA land diversion program of USDA, it will be treated as being used as a farm for farming purposes and an active conduct of a farming business, a University of Nebraska district extension farm management specialist said this week.

"This ruling is in response to questions of how the new farm program would affect the provisions established for Special Use Valuation of Section 2032A of the Internal Revenue Code for estate taxes," according to Doug Ducey.

"The special use of valuation law requires that the property which is to be valued at its use value, must have been used for a qualified use (farming) for at least five of the eight years preceding the decedent death," Ducey explained.

Furthermore, such land devoted to conservation purposes in the program will be treated as material participation by the decedent operator. This is true even if the entire acreage is put in the PIK program, the specialist stated.

"By participating in the PIK farm program, qualified heirs having an interest in the land will not be affected, such as triggering the acceleration of estate tax due," he concluded.

Association elects officers

Neal Pohlman, Stanton, was elected president of the Board of Directors of the Northeast Nebraska Experimental Farm Association at the annual meeting. He replaces Edwin Fahrenholz of Allen. Other officers are Myron Nelson, Lindsay, first vice president; Lowell Johnson, Wakefield, second vice president; John Kroger Jr., Rosalie, re-elected treasurer and Carl Ward, district director at the Northeast Station, was re-elected secretary.

The board met at the Northeast Station on March 8 to hear progress reports by Northeast Station personnel and for the annual meeting. The Board made plans to host members of the University Board Regents and University Administration on their visit to the Northeast Station on May 13.

The Board identified Soil and Water Conservation, Farm Management, and increased effort in communications with mass media channels as top priority areas for improvement and/or expansion.

The Northeast Nebraska Experimental Farm Association was organized in 1954 specifically to obtain an experiment station in northeast Nebraska. The Board of Directors remains active and serves as an advisory group to the personnel at the University's Northeast Station.

Program rewarded

DON SPITZE (right) was presented an award for excellence in extension programming by Leo Lucas, dean and director of the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service. The award was given in honor of a stored grain inspection program initiated by Spitze last summer.

He developed the program to allow farmers to test their grain for insects. The state award was presented at the Northeast Station near Concord Thursday.

Early start helps

Spring drying of grain needed

By Richard Pierce
Extension Ag engineer
University of Nebraska

To date, farmers have not seen the full extent of the grain storage problems created by a late and wet 1982 harvest.

Most of the grain has been held over the winter in good condition but now needs to be dried as outside temperatures get warmer. Early spring drying is particularly critical where moisture content exceeds 18 percent.

The urgency of the problem is compounded by the fact that much of this grain already has been enrolled in the reserve program and needs to be in good condition for long-term storage.

NATURAL AIR grain drying systems need to be managed to not only minimize mold problems but also to prevent — as much as possible — over-drying of the grain at the bottom of the bin. How well these objectives are met depends on the length of time required to move a drying zone through the bin. With continuous fan operation and an airflow rate of one cubic foot per minute per bushel, two to four weeks are typically required to complete drying in the spring.

The time required to move a drying zone through the grain is primarily a function of the amount of air moved through the grain.

It is important to remember that a drying zone cannot be advanced unless the fan is operated. Therefore, the fan should be operated continuously until all the grain in the bin has been dried to a storable moisture content. Although not much drying occurs, operating the fan at night helps to keep the grain cool and slow mold development. Drying fans need to be started by mid-March at the latest so that drying can be completed before temperatures get too warm.

NORMALLY, the wettest grain will be at the top of the bin with much of the grain at the bottom being overdried. Starting the drying process in early March with continuous fan operation helps reduce overdrying problems. Even in the southeastern areas of the state where humidities are the highest, corn and milo will usually be dried to 11 or 12 percent before drying is completed in April.

The over-drying problem is more severe in the Panhandle where humidities are lower. Keeping the fans running during rainy or humid weather can actually be beneficial because this helps to minimize overdrying while still moving the drying zone.

In bins equipped with stirring devices, the fan need not be operated continuously if the grain is below 18 percent. A small savings in energy is possible if the fans are operated only during periods of favorable weather, but the date by which drying can be completed will be pushed back.

"Snow plow's going by!" Welcome words. One snow day is a treat. A day to crawl back to bed after the radio says, "no school today!" A day to catch up on the soaps, bake cookies and bread, and read that book I'd been saving. No matter we've run out of milk, we'll drink cocoa made with powdered. As long as the power's on, we won't mind.

The storm after Christmas was icy and resulted in a long power outage. The earth stove kept us warm — we even heated soup and fried hamburgers on it. But it seemed that everything we wanted to do involved electricity. We played cards. We dragged out family photos and chuckled at them. But the lamp light wasn't enough to read by.

"Sowing is no longer done with a treadle. What of all, there was no water. Makes it tough to flush! We caught enough for drinking and tooth brushing before the pressure disappeared.

The water bed cooled off. We got out comforters to pile on top of the electric blankets. And we went to bed early because there seemed nothing else to do. Battery powered clocks kept track of the time, but the batteries in the radio were long since dead. No mail, of course, so we relied on the phone for news.

Finally, the snow plow goes by. The Big Farmer has used his trusty loader to clear off the yard and the driveway. We go through one-way cuts to get groceries. And we read of an expectant mother in a rescue unit following a plow to the hospital and shudder. We smile when we hear of a determined couple whose minister married them by phone because he couldn't get to the ceremony.

As I said one day is a treat. More gives us cabin fever. Big Brother teases his sisters. We're tired of powdered milk. We're tired of each other's company. We're wondering when all the postponed basketball games will be played. We really don't appreciate the sense of isolation anymore.

We salute the guys in the big yellow snow movers. We know that they've put in many long hours again this year, and we appreciate it. We also owe kudos to the power company repair men. We are so dependent on the stuff. We don't know how the pioneers did it, and we don't care to find out!

FIRST, START WITH VIGOROUS, disease-free seed. Most seed companies kill pathogens borne within the seed by a hot water treatment. But if you suspect the seed has become infected externally, disinfect the surface by treating for 30 seconds with a household bleach solution (1 part bleach to 9 parts water) or treat the seed with a fungicide such as captan, thiram or maneb.

Watkins says to be sure to use growing containers that are sterile. Most fertilizers, seed-start trays and peat pots are relatively pathogen-free. But if seedlings are started in plastic flats, these containers can be used if they are washed, then soaked in the same household bleach solution for about five minutes, prepared as described previously, and thoroughly rinsed.

The planting medium also must be free of disease-causing pathogens, Watkins says. The best growing medium should have an adequate water-holding capacity but still allow for proper drainage.

"It's best not to use soil directly from the garden," he says.

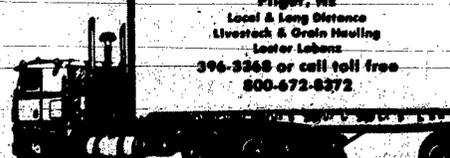

GARDENERS CAN pasteurize their own mixes by placing the mix about 2 inches deep in a flat baking pan. The mix is moistened, covered with foil and put into an oven preheated to 180 degrees F for 30 minutes.

Strict sanitary practices also must be followed when using new or disinfected labels and clean and disinfected tools when handling transplants.

Once planted, keep the plants and soil from remaining wet for long periods of time. And avoid overcrowding and wide temperature fluctuations. Locate transplants in a garden site that will promote rapid seed germination and vigorous seedling development. Watkins says post-emergence fungicide sprays or drenches with products such as benlate, captan, Truban or Benlate may help prevent damping-off in celery, eggplant, lettuce, peppers, tomatoes and many annual flowers.

Disease-resistant oats cut risk

Planting disease-resistant oat varieties will reduce the risk of losses from Crown Rot, Barley Yellow Dwarf and various smuts, a University of Nebraska extension plant pathologist reminds.

John E. Watkins says many diseases can attack oats and cause severe damage, and in some years can be a major factor in reducing oat production.

"Oat diseases annually account for millions of dollars of damage to the U.S., both through reduced yields and quality," he said.

HE GIVES the following rundown on the three major diseases of oats in Nebraska, and lists resistant varieties:

Crown rust — Infection results in reduced yields, lower test weight and increased lodging. The severity of crown rust varies greatly from year to year, depending largely on variety susceptibility and measurable rainfall from flowering through grain fill. The most effective control measure is to plant resistant varieties. Resistant or moderately resistant varieties for Nebraska are Bates, Kelsey, Lancer, Moore, Otee, Russell and Stout.

Barley yellow dwarf, a virus disease of oats, barley and wheat — The virus is transmitted from diseased to healthy plants by several species of aphids. The disease may be widespread and damaging to susceptible varieties of oats and barley in years when grain aphid populations are high. Disease symptoms are usually first seen in late May or early June as a yellowing or reddening of older leaves. Varieties adaptable to Nebraska with resistance or tolerance to barley yellow dwarf are Bates, Kelsey, Kota, Lang, Larry, Ogle, Otee, Pettis and Trio.

Loose and covered smut diseases — In both diseases, smut spores are carried on the seed where they germinate and infect the growing shoot before it has emerged from the soil. Losses in yield can be up to 40 percent. Smuts can be prevented through seed treatment with an appropriate fungicide or by planting resistant varieties. Resistant varieties are Bates, Benson, Burnett, Garland, Garry, Kelsey, Kota, Lancer, Moore, Nodaway 70, Otee, Pettis, Rodney, Russell, Stout and Trio.

TREATMENT OF spring oats, barley and wheat seed will prevent losses in yield and quality due to smuts, Watkins said. "Smut diseases of barley and oats are not considered serious problems in Nebraska, but in isolated situations they have caused up to a 30 percent yield reduction when smut-susceptible varieties were grown," Watkins stated.

Treat seed prior to planting to control smut diseases of barley and oats, Watkins stressed. The smuts that infect oats are carried on the seed surface. Some of the smut spores may lodge under the hulls and may not come in contact with the seed treatment fungicides; however, with the level of smut resistance in most oat varieties now being grown, the surface protective fungicides usually will give adequate control, he said.

Control barley smuts by treating the seed with a systemic fungicide containing carboxin.

The loose smut of barley is carried internally with the seed and can be reached only with the systemic carboxin fungicide.

IN ADDITION to smut control, treating seed with protective fungicides will prevent seed decay and seedling blights that could occur if planting conditions are less than ideal, Watkins explained. "Seed decay and seedling blights are a real possibility if wet, cool weather sets in soon after planting and slows seed germination and seedling development," he pointed out.

"When using protective fungicides, complete and thorough coverage of seed surfaces is necessary for effective disease control. Most seed treatment fungicides can be applied in the drill box, with an on the farm seed treater or by a commercial seed treater. With last year's wheat scab epidemic and the interest in treating wheat seed, seed treatment fungicides and facilities should be more available than they have been in the past," the plant disease specialist concluded.

Take Soil Samples

It's been a long winter and we're all eager to get started with spring work. But farmers need to take care of one important task before they get too heavily involved with field work. Unless soil samples were collected last fall, soil sampling should be first on the list of things to do this spring.

We used to think of soil sampling as being important for making fertilizer recommendations only. Today, we need the results of a soil test to guide fertilizer use and herbicide use as well. For many herbicides, the suggested rate is based on the soil pH as well as the organic matter content of the soil. Both pH and organic matter measurements are routine tests when a soil sample is submitted for analysis.

A deep test for residual or carryover nitrogen is also an important part of a soil testing program. If residual nitrogen is high, the amount of nitrogen needed in a fertilizer program can be reduced. On the other hand, some farmers may not be applying enough nitrogen to get these top yields. A test for residual nitrogen will produce nitrogen-fertilizer recommendations that are precise for top yields.

It no longer takes a long time to get soil samples analyzed. Results are usually returned within 10 days after they arrive in the laboratory. We have soil sample boxes and easy-to-follow instructions.

Don't Always Blame the Herbicides

Sometimes we may think a herbicide has lost its punch because it no longer does a good job of weed control. Chances are, the herbicide has not undergone any change in chemical makeup, nor has the manufacturer altered the contents of the container.

One cause for failure — along with weather, application and herbicide — could be the weeds we are dealing with.

After the same herbicide has been used for several years, the weed population in a field could shift. Weed species readily killed by the herbicide have been eliminated, permitting weed species that are tolerant to the herbicide to flourish.

Tremendously heavy populations of weeds require greater amounts of herbicides to do the job. So in some cases there could be under-application.

A third possibility could be that the weeds have developed resistance to the herbicide.

Continuous use of the same herbicide permits resistant strains within the species to survive and multiply. In numerous cases, kochia or fireweed has developed resistance to atrazine. Repeated use of atrazine on the same ground caused the emergence of a strain of kochia able to withstand rates 50 times greater than normally required.

Don't always blame herbicides for failures, it could be the weeds — or weather — or how applied.

State Fair swine plans announced

Swine producers who want barrows tested and entered in a show at the 1983 Nebraska State Fair can obtain entry forms now in anticipation of identifying March-farrowed pigs. Producers from Nebraska and other states can enter if they meet the May 1 entry deadline. This is the first year of eligibility for non-Nebraska producers.

Bill Ahlschwede, University of Nebraska extension swine specialist, said barrow entries will be tested at the Senek Boar Test Station near Wymore.

Producers can check out their hogs' performance at a cost of $5 for one hog and $7.50 for two hogs, Ahlschwede said, with the fee covering only the class entry and not fair exhibitor's passes.

The testing station assumes ownership of the hogs upon acceptance, he said, and can refuse any entry. Health certificates will be required, he said, and any barrow weighing more than 60 pounds will be rejected. Barrows from 35 pounds to 55 pounds are preferred, he said.

The tested barrows will be shown by exhibitors at the fair on Thursday, Sept. 1, the specialist said. "Pigs which fail to reach 195 pounds or have severe soundness problems will not be brought to Lincoln," he added.

At the state fair show, barrows will be judged on foot in classes, based on on-test weight, with 15-20 head in each class. The animals will be slaughtered and carcass data gathered. Cash premiums will be given for 12 places in each class of the live show, and for the first 20 places in overall carcass competition.

For more information, contact Bill Ahlschwede at: 219 Marvel Baker Hall, East Campus, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Lincoln, Ne 68583-0908; or call (402) 472-6416.

Total weed control PIK acres offer opportunity

Acres which farmers put into the 20 percent Acreage Reduction Program (ARP) or Payment in Kind (PIK) Program offer an opportunity to farmers to carry out three important management steps, University of Nebraska extension weed specialists emphasize.

John D. Furrer and Alex R. Martin note that PIK and ARP can help farmers strike back at serious weed pests, establish legumes for soil improvement and storage and return land to native grasses.

These three unique opportunities fall under the umbrella requirements of the two programs, the specialists say. They urge farmers to take a look at the total weed control needs on idled acres.

"CONSIDER PLANTING a cover crop on acres out of production," they advise. Competition suppresses weeds, and plantings of small grains, grasses and legumes definitely could hold down weed problems.

But, they caution, planting plans need to be coordinated with necessary control measures for specific weed pests. "For instance, there's no need to seed legumes if field bindweed is going to be treated with 2, 4-D or Banvel. And, if atrazine was used on the land last year, be sure to check for atrazine residue before planting expensive legume seed," Furrer and Martin warn.

In the latest issue of their Weed Science Newsletter, the agronomists offer suggestions for coping with specific weed problems, involving field bindweed, Canada thistle, milkweed and dogbane, shattercane, velvetleaf, leafy spurge, musk thistle and other troublesome weeds. Most of the treatments involve combinations of tillage practices and application of herbicides, and in some cases planting cover crops. Herbicides rather than tillage can be used on PIK and ARP acres for general weed control, the specialists point out. "No single treatment can be expected to provide season-long control except perhaps atrazine in less than 20-inch rainfall areas," they advise.

HERBICIDES CAN offer a big assist in legume establishment, Furrer and Martin added.

Excellent stands of switchgrass and big bluestem native grasses are possible on sodicide acres in one year, they say. Farmers should prepare a trashy seedbed and seed the grasses at recommended rates in early May. Appropriate preemergence herbicides can be applied at recommended rates after planting.

More detail on weed control on PIK and ARP acres and the role of herbicides in establishing legumes or native grasses for protecting land from erosion and in providing required residue cover can be obtained from Cooperative Extension Service offices around the state.

NATIONAL AGRICULTURE DAY

In 1776, nearly every American was a farmer. Today, only one American in seventy, yet we are the greatest food producing nation on earth. One-fourth of everyone who ever lived is alive today. Farmers must feed this hungry world. Today's farmers are made of the same pride, grit and independence that helped our forefathers mold this remarkable country.

And we need to continue to develop new generations of agriculturalists prepared to lead, feed and succeed. Like the farmer who plants in hope and cultivates in faith, we are as optimistic about America's agricultural future as we are proud of her past.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER
Sixty-three attended World Day of Prayer hosted by Salem Lutheran Church on March 4 at 2 p.m. "New Persons in Christ" was the theme of the service and was written by Christian women from the island countries of the Caribbean.

Mrs. Marilyn Holm presented a Bible study on the theme and ladies from the Evangelical Covenant Church sang a special musical number. The offering taken will be channeled through Churchwomen United to be distributed for mission work in this country and countries around the world.

Members on the committee planning the service were Mrs. Kermit Johnson and Mrs. Ardath Utecht from Salem Lutheran Church, Mrs. Derwin Hartman of the United Presbyterian Church and Mrs. Norman Jensen from the Evangelical Covenant Church. The 1984 service for World Day of Prayer will be held at the Evangelical Covenant Church with Mrs. Francis Muller as chairman, and Mrs. Myron Olson, co-chairman. Other members of the committee will be Mrs. Tom Turney of the United Presbyterian Church and Mrs. Burnell Grosz of Salem Lutheran Church.

PARENT-TEACHER CONFERENCES

Parent-teacher conferences will be held at the Wakefield Community Schools on Thursday and Friday, March 24-25. There will be no conferences for junior high and high school students due to a lack of parent interest in spring conferences. Any parent of a junior high or high school student who wishes to visit with a teacher should contact principal Joe Coble. Elementary students will be dismissed at 12:30 p.m. March 24 and there will be no school for these students on March 25. Junior high and high school students will have classes both days.

HOSPITAL BOARD APPOINTMENTS

The Wakefield City Council has approved the appointments of Bud Ertandson, Alvin Sundell and Mike Meyer for a second term of three years to the Wakefield Health Care Center Board. The terms will run from March 1983 to March 1986. The council also approved extending the first term of John Viken and Kenneth Packer to March 1984. The action was taken at the City Council's regular meeting March 2 at the council room.

Other board members and years their terms will expire include Joyce Kuhl (March 1984), Weldon Schwarten (March 1985), Willis Kahl (March 1985) and Norman Minola (March 1985). Russel Swigart, administrator, noted that the public is invited to attend the hospital board meetings which are held the second Thursday of each month at 7 p.m., except during the summer months when the board convenes at 8 p.m.

POPS CONCERT

The music department at the Wakefield Community Schools presented a pops concert Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium. Mrs. Diane Trohlinger is the music director.

The girls glee sang "Yesterday Once More" and "Loves Makes the World Go Round." The boys glee sang "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" and the varsity choir sang "John Henry."

"Jubilant Celebration," "Old Time Religion" and "Eternity" were presented by the triple trio. A girls trio sang "Killing Me Softly" and the sextet sang "Daydreams" and "Annie's Song." The Patriots sang "Rhythm of Life," "Toot, Toot, Tootsie" and "Yessir, That's My Baby."

"Carnival of Percussion" and "Chunk A Funk" was presented by the junior high band. The evening concluded with the Trojan band when they played "The Thunder" and highlights from Sophisticated Ladies, which included "Caravan," "Solitude," "Mood Indigo," "If Don't Mean a Thing," "Sophisticated Lady" and "Do Nothin' Till You Hear From Me."

ARTS PROGRAM

"An Hour with the Arts" will be held at the Wakefield Community Schools from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 23 in the multi-purpose room. The event will be held in conjunction with youth art month which is held in March. Art demonstrations and displays by 10 college art students will be available to the public and fellow students during the hour. Areas to be covered will include pottery, batik, weaving, drawing, pastels, calligraphy, water colors, acrylic painting, paper mache and printmaking. Mrs. Jackie Dittman, art instructor, said that art has value in the development of every child. Through meaningful art experiences children develop initiative, self-expression, creative ability and appreciation of beauty, she said.

Mrs. Dittman invites everyone to come and learn about the arts during this special time.

Our hearts are so heavy with grief for our beloved husband, father, grandfather and brother; but all of your kind deeds and comforting words have helped us through these first difficult days. We commend and thank the Laurel Rescue Squad for their fast response every time we needed them during Bud's lengthy illness. I am a 4 year old 4-3 bedroom ranch style home in Tara Ridge Addition of Wayne. I am located north of Providence Medical Center next to the Wayne State College Artbotorium area and I overlook the back nine of the Wayne Country Club. The family I have made a home for will soon divide to just mom and pop so they have decided to sell me. I have a finished basement with a large family room, grand opening automatic lawn sprinklers, electronic air cleaner, upstairs utility room, fireplace, covered patio and many other extras that must be seen to be appreciated. I am priced in the upper 70's and will be shown at open house on Saturday and Sunday afternoons, March 19 and 20, from 2 to 5 p.m.
