

71% of Wayne County's corn, sorghum acres PIKed for 1983

Nearly three-fourths of the cropland in Wayne County will be idle this summer according to figures released by the Wayne County Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service office.

Figures released by ASCS Director Ray Butts show that 71 percent of the county's corn and sorghum acres will be taken out of production. Of the 1,209 farms in the county, 701—or 58 percent—are enrolled in acreage reduction programs.

A breakdown of the ASCS figures shows that 314 farms are enrolled in the 10 to 30 percent PIK program. Another 164 farms had their whole farms approved in the program. A total of 223 other farms are involved in a 20 percent acreage reduction program.

"Farmers are realizing they have to participate to make the program work," said Butts.

BUTTS SAID that 118,960 acres are considered corn and sorghum producing acres in Wayne County. Of that total, 42,016 acres is included in the 10-30 percent PIK program, 20,785 acres in whole farm approval and 21,753 in the 20 percent plan.

The total number of acres which will be idle is 84,554. That is 71 percent of the total corn and sorghum acreage. The conserving use acres for corn and sorghum, which is figured using percentages of acre reduction, totals 45,451 acres. Nineteen farms in the county raise wheat and seven of them will participate in an acreage reduction program. Three are enrolled in 20 percent acreage reduction and four had their whole farm approved. Of the 740 acres in wheat, 73 acres will have 20 percent reduction and 274 are whole farm approved or 100 percent. Barley farmers are eligible only for 20 percent reduction and 18 of the county's 750 farms are enrolled in the program. With 22,292 wheat acres, 746 are in the acreage reduction program.

STATEWIDE FIGURES show that Nebraska ranks third in the nation in corn and sorghum acreage idled with a total of 4,410,927 acres. Iowa is first in the nation and Illinois is second. However, Nebraska has 42.6 percent of its corn and sorghum enrolled in acreage reduction, a figure which is higher than either Iowa or Illinois.

Elliott evaluates obstacles, opportunities

Wayne State inaugurates seventh president

Wayne State College inaugurated its seventh president Saturday afternoon during ceremonies in Ramsey Theatre on the college campus.

Alan Cramer of Wayne, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Nebraska State Colleges, presented Dr. Ed Elliott with the presidential medallion.

Elliott, former vice president at Wayne State, was named president last July following the resignation of Dr. Lyle Seymour.

REPRESENTATIVES of several colleges and universities, as well as Wayne State faculty members and other community residents were among those attending the inauguration.

Special music was provided by Anthony Garlick, Wayne State professor of fine arts, and by the Wayne State Concert Choir, under the direction of Cornell Runesrud.

Among those on hand to extend greetings to the new college president were Jane Trower, staff assistant to Gov. Robert Kerrey, and Ruby Pedersen, vice president at Wayne State.

Greetings also were extended by Mayor Wayne Marsh, Howard Schmidt, president of the Faculty Senate, Steve Oelken, president of the Student Senate, Kirt Hutton, representing the Alumni Association, and Wayne State Foundation President Bob Carhart.

IN HIS inaugural address, Elliott outlined the challenges facing higher education and the expectations he has as president.

Citing several reasons why challenges exist, Elliott said institutions of higher learning have, in recent years, fallen steadily behind funding levels required to maintain programs of excellence.

"Revenues from all sources have not kept pace at minimum funding levels with any dollar values of the last two decades," he said.

Elliott added that industrial and technological changes and resources have moved faster than comparable adjustments in higher education, and advances in computer technology and the "information explosion" have required tremendous adjustments.

'Our responsibility will be to clarify higher education as an industry, an industry investing in human capital, an industry that pays maximum dividends on its product in both the short and long run.'

Winside welder's business sparking

By Randy Mascoll

The sparks seen flying in a downtown Winside business late at night are probably those made by welder Artc Magwire.

Magwire, 27, opened Winside Welding Shop on the last day of February at the east end of Winside's business strip. The metal building was finished the day before he opened for business.

Although the set hours of the welding shop are from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. six days a week, Magwire can usually be found in his shop anytime before 10 or 11 p.m.

"WELDING IS in my blood. I get everything coming through my door," Magwire said.

Winside's Welding Shop has been in operation only three weeks but already Artc has had some unusual requests for welding jobs.

"Mister, can you fix my trike?" asked a small girl as she pushed her tricycle through the doorway of the shop several days ago. Minutes later the young girl was peddling the vehicle down the sidewalk with a big smile on her face.

Farm magazine features Carroll woman

By Randall Howell

Kristin Loberg has worked her way from the cornfields of rural Carroll to the front page of a statewide farm publication.

The 23-year-old wife of rural Carroll farmer, Dan Loberg, Kris is featured in a full color cover of the March 19 Nebraska Farmer, a semi-monthly farm magazine published in Lincoln.

And inside, Kris, the daughter of a rural Wayne dairy farmer, commands two pages (story and photographs) on the Carroll Irrigation Association (CIA) with Don Spitzel, Wayne County extension agent.

THE STORY, written by the magazine's associate editor, Don McCabe, updates Nebraska farmers on the two-year-old association's western Wayne County activity in irrigation scheduling.

Kris, the daughter of John R. and Marilyn Anderson, rural Wayne, has ramrodded the scheduling for the association since the June 1981 start-up.

The CIA's formation was first documented in stories and photographs in the June 4, 1981, edition of The Wayne Herald and the June 5, 1981, edition of The Sundowner, a monthly farm newspaper published by The Wayne Herald Publishing Co.

The CIA start-up story, which had statewide impact, was featured on the front page of both The Wayne Herald and The Sundowner.

"I'M HAPPY and honored by Kris told The Wayne Herald Tuesday night. "Irrigation scheduling is getting good publicity, and hopefully more people are becoming aware of what we're doing," said the young farmwife, who appears on the cover of the Nebraska Farmer in a photograph showing her checking moisture blocks in a cornfield with late-July growth.

"They (Nebraska Farmer) talked to me last summer near the end of July, and then came out to take some pictures and interview me," explained Kris, whose husband is the son of Glen Loberg, rural Carroll farmer.

Dan and his father, who farm together, are CIA members.

A SIMILAR photograph, but in black and white, is repeated inside (page 11) the Nebraska Farmer, along with another showing Kris with irrigation scheduling paperwork.

"They also talked with Don (Spitzel) and (Tom) Dorn," said Kris. Dorn is a University of Nebraska Northeast Station irrigation specialist and the man who trained Kris for the CIA job.

Cable TV battle heavily lobbied

By Melvin Paul
Nebraska Press Association

In one of the more heavily lobbied legislative battles this session, public power districts and rural and municipal electric systems are asking the legislature to grant them legal authority to provide their customers cable television service.

The utilities failed in a similar effort last year when their bill died for lack of time, so they're back for another try.

In a recent public hearing, Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, sponsor of LB 559, said public ownership of cable systems is essential to providing service to many among an estimated 600,000 rural Nebraskans for whom private cable firms have refused to provide service for economic reasons.

DECAMP WARNED the committee that if the legislature fails to enact permissive legislation such as LB 559 so rural Nebraskans may be served, a popular initiative is likely.

A series of news media, telephone industry and private cable company representatives assailed the bill as unconstitutional and as dangerous governmental control of a sophisticated information medium.

Paul Jensen of Lincoln, representing the Nebraska Broadcasters Association called the bill before the committee, LB 559, "a direct attack on our free enterprise system."

Jensen and other opponents of the bill argued that it's not going to be any more economical for a public utility than for a private company to provide cable service to a farm house located miles away from the nearest neighbor.

SUPPORTERS of the bill argued that the absence of a profit give public utilities the right to provide service where private companies can't.

The bill last week was still awaiting action by the Public Works Committee.

The advent of the computer age has presented the legislature with a difficult tax question this session.

Should computer software — or a computer program which is normally contained on a magnetic tape cassette, a disk or punch cards — be considered a tangible good subject to the sales tax, or should it be considered an intangible and therefore tax-free?

IF LAWMAKERS determine software is like a book or a painting or a musical recording, it will be considered a tangible good subject to taxation.

If they determine it is more like a will produced by an attorney or house plans developed by an architect it will be considered primarily an intangible, therefore exempt from the sales tax.

At stake is an initial $1.8 million a year for the state general fund, and presumably much more in future years as the computer industry continues to grow.

The state Department of Revenue has asked the legislature this year specifically to include software under the state sales tax law.

On Feb. 25, lawmakers voted 26-21 during first round debate to kill LB 196, a Revenue Committee bill to levy the tax on software.

But the vote didn't bring the legislative debate to a close.

THE REVENUE Committee voted last Wednesday to attach the contents of LB 196

by amendment to LB 17, a measure dealing with the tax status of the water purchased to wash cattle.

The committee advanced LB 17 and the software amendment to the floor on an 8-0 vote, and another floor debate is expected later in the session.

Lawmakers reached the halfway point of their 90-day session last week, and on Monday of this week began meeting in all-day floor sessions.

Until now, they've been devoting half of their days to public hearings on the more than 600 bills that have been introduced.

IN DEALING with the glut of legislation, lawmakers have designated 106 bills as priorities.

Under their rules, that means the designated measures take precedence in Speaker William Nichol's scheduling.

Those without the priority designation just may have to lay over until next year.

Among the bills with priority designations, and therefore likely to be debated this year, are those dealing with a state lottery, the proposed delay of the state takeover of county Medicaid payments and creation of a beef checkoff board.

Bonding bill opens door on road debt

The session passed the halfway mark on Wednesday as the legislature completed its 45th legislative day.

Public hearings will be completed this week and the rest of the 90-day session will be spent debating the bills on the legislative floor.

Floor debate is becoming more interesting now as the emphasis gradually shifts from public hearings to discussion before the entire legislature.

senator merle von minden

ON TUESDAY, much of the morning was spent on LB 344. This bill would authorize the state to issue $100 million in bonds with the proceeds to be used for the construction of roads and bridges.

The bill failed to advance to Select File on a vote of 21-19. Although it received a majority of the votes cast, it did not get the 25 votes which are necessary for advancement.

The major drawback to the bill is that, by allowing the Nebraska Highway Bond Commission to issue bonds, we are actually allowing the state to go into debt.

The Highway Trust Fund must pay back the bondholders when the bonds mature, plus interest, which in this case, was estimated to be almost 40 million dollars.

THE STATE can build a lot of roads and bridges for that amount of money. I voted against the bill because it is just not my philosophy to put the state into debt.

I realize the roads are in need of repair, but I think the availability of more federal funds due to the 5 cent per gallon gasoline tax increase will bring in the additional money we need to start repairing our highways.

I would rather see our roads repaired in increments as the state can afford it rather than fixing everything now and leaving a large debt as a burden for future taxpayers.

LB 199, which increases the annual park permit to $10 advanced to Final Reading on Monday. I was disappointed that efforts to reduce the entry fee were unsuccessful. It looks like passage of the bill is now assured.

THE "CABOOSE BILL," LB 179, also advanced to Final Reading on Thursday. According to the bill, whenever a railroad operates a freight train in this state, the rear car of the freight train will have to be a caboose.

Safety was cited as the main reason for the bill. As trains become longer, the chances are greater that a collision may occur near the rear of the train without being noticed by railroad personnel.

Fires were also a possibility as sparks from the train ignite dry grass. Having a manned caboose at the rear of the train would reduce the risk of a fire or an accident going unnoticed and possibly prevent loss of life and property.

A bill to create a beef checkoff program advanced to Final Reading on Thursday with little debate.

LB 19 creates the Nebraska Beef Industry Development Board which will participate in research, education, market development and promotion of the beef industry.

Funding for the board will be provided by collecting a 25-cent fee for every head of cattle sold in the state. Funds collected by the checkoff cannot be used to promote a candidate for public office or to influence legislation.

I think this will be a good program which, hopefully, will enjoy the success that the corn and wheat checkoff programs have today.

Tax index time has come

By Cheryl Westcott
Nebraska Farm Bureau

The term "tax indexing" is probably not as well known as the evil it seeks to correct, namely bracket creep.

Many Americans have experienced bracket creep, the unwelcome phenomenon that occurs when inflation causes a raise in salary to push the wage earner into a higher tax bracket, with the higher tax liability offsetting any advantage of earning more.

On an individual level, bracket creep is demoralizing. For the country and the government as a whole, it holds other dangers.

TO EXPLAIN the problem it's easiest to talk in terms of the solution. That's where tax indexing comes in. Indexing of the personal income tax is now scheduled to begin in 1985, but there are efforts to repeal it.

According to Marlin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, an indexed tax system prevents inflation from pushing individuals into higher tax brackets and increasing the share of income taken in taxes.

This is achieved by increasing each of the "bracket points" by the rate of inflation during the previous year.

Feldstein cites this example: In 1984, the 18 percent tax bracket will include incomes between $16,000 and $20,200. If consumer prices rise by 5 percent in the year ending Oct. 1, the 18 percent tax bracket for 1985 would be adjusted to range from $16,800 to $21,210.

THE PERSONAL exemption also would increase from $1,000 to $1,050. Thus an individual whose income increased as much as $1,010 would remain in the same bracket and not be pushed into the 19 percent bracket.

For the individual, tax indexing sounds like a good deal, and it is. It is also a good idea for government. If indexing were repealed before it starts (and 1984 is an election year), bracket creep would raise taxes higher and higher, which Feldstein points out would permit Congress to finance ever greater amounts of government spending without having to vote explicitly for an increase in tax rates!

Alternatively, it would permit Congress to reduce the budget deficit over time, without any cuts in government spending — without any examination of hard realities — by just waiting while tax receipts grow.

Feldstein estimates that the repeal of indexing would yield additional tax revenue of $17 billion in 1984, $30 billion in 1987 and $44 billion in 1990 if inflation continues its gradual decline over the next few years.

If inflation averaged 6.5 percent for the next five years, extra tax revenue in 1988 would be about $80 billion instead of $44 billion.

FELDSTEIN WARNS that repeal of indexing would give Congress a strong incentive to pursue inflationary policies. Without indexing, increasing inflation would generate additional revenues, while giving Congress the opportunity to make occasional tax cuts, again without re-examining needs and priorities.

If indexing were repealed, the economist warns that it is the lowest income taxpayer who would suffer the greatest relative tax increase. Those with the lowest income benefit most from the standard $1,000 personal exemption and the $3,400 zero bracket amount.

And because tax brackets are narrower at lower incomes, bracket creep is more pronounced. Feldstein explains that eliminating indexing would cause the 1985 tax liability of those with incomes under $10,000 to rise by more than 9 percent, while the tax liability of those with incomes over $100,000 would rise by less than 2 percent.

Of course, Congress could vote further tax cuts for the lower income groups that would offset the effects of bracket creep, because the overall vast increase in tax revenue would offset the crust thrown to those at the bottom of the scale.

FELDSTEIN WARNS that even discussing repealing indexing in Congress has ramifications — by raising the possibility, it increases the risk of high inflation in future years and thereby keeps current long term interest rates higher than they should be. And the discussion deflects attention from difficult decisions about spending and tax changes that should be included as part of the budget process.

The economist notes that there is no natural constituency to become alarmed about the repeal of indexing, although it has the potential to impact on every taxpayer.

It is ironic that an issue which can have such pervasive effects doesn't seem to be exciting nearly as much interest as a lesser concern that impacts on a smaller and more identifiable constituency. Without some group to carry the banner, Congress can readily resist the small pressure that comes its way.

What if comes down to, is that an unindexed tax system is a hidden way of increasing taxes while removing pressure to cut government spending or even honestly examine the value of various programs. Those who believe in political accountability and in examining the direction of government should also be in favor of indexing.

On the move

Wayne is on the move again.

After a long, quiet winter, the city has jumped into spring with a number of exciting projects that signal progress on several fronts.

Construction is expected to begin soon on long-needed irrigation system improvements at the Wayne golf course.

Wayne Industries is applying for a state Department of Economic Development loan to construct a speculative building to attract more industrial development.

A long-awaited Environmental Protection Agency grant for the city's new multi-million dollar sewage treatment plant has been approved and bids are about to be let for the project.

The Wayne Municipal Airport improvement project, which has been on the drawing boards for several years, has been funded with a grant through the federal Department of Transportation's Airport Improvement Program.

The Wayne-Carroll School Board has given the go-ahead on the district's planned expansion of vocational education facilities at Wayne High School. Wayne city officials are applying for a state grant that could underwrite up to 80 percent of a proposed street and sewer improvement project in the Roosevelt Park Addition.

The city's request for state Department of Roads priority on the reconstruction of Seventh Street (Highway 35) through the Wayne has been granted.

The Wayne Chamber of Commerce's long search for a professional to fill the position of executive vice president is over with the appointment of Anne F. Svoboda, Clutier Iowa. She is expected to start April 1.

The Wayne Community Council, an arm of the Wayne-Carroll School District, has established a Community Resources File to help teachers tap into the expertise of area residents to enrich classroom programs.

The chamber has established the Wayne Centennial Steering Committee to begin actively planning and organizing the city's 100th birthday celebration next year.

And, Wayne State College has just inaugurated a new president, Dr. Ed Elliott, who is actively committed to the future of the college and the community.

Those are just a few of the positive signs of progress in and around Wayne.

Taken individually, or collectively, they reflect the attitude of a city on the move.

DWI dilemma

Nebraska led the nation in 1982 with a 31 percent reduction in traffic fatalities when comparing the 1982 toll of 261 with the 1981 toll of 378.

Included in the 118 fewer fatalities were 90 fewer alcohol-related fatalities reported. In 1982 there were 99 alcohol related fatalities reported compared to 189 in 1981.

Even though the total number of alcohol related fatalities dropped significantly, it is still alarming to note that 37 percent of the 1982 traffic fatalities were alcohol related.

The 1982 traffic death toll was the lowest since 1949 when 258 deaths were recorded. Other notable achievements include: June, September and December all had the third lowest fatality totals ever recorded for those months, the first time since 1945 that seven different months had fewer than 20 fatalities.

Holiday periods also recorded successful reductions; the memorial holiday period with no fatalities was the lowest since 1962, the New Years holiday with no fatalities was the lowest since 1963, the July 4th period with two fatalities was the fewest since 1966, and the Labor Day count with one fatality was the fewest since 1971.

What makes these totals even more remarkable is that total vehicle miles traveled in Nebraska were down by less than one percent. Nebraska drivers do indeed deserve to be complimented for their achievement in making 1982 one of the safest ever on Nebraska roadways.

However, preliminary totals indicate law enforcement agencies arrested more individuals for DWI in 1982 than any previous year. The previous high number of statewide arrests for DWI was 1979, when 9,433 were arrested.

Saturday, Sunday performances

Wayne Community Theatre staging 'Blithe Spirit'

"Blithe Spirit," Noel Coward's smash comedy hit of the London and Broadway stages, will be presented this weekend by the Wayne Community Theatre.

The hilarious farce, under the direction of Juli Burney, will be presented in Ley Theatre on the Wayne State campus on Saturday, March 26 at 8 p.m., and on Sunday, March 27 at 2 p.m.

Ley Theatre is located on the second floor of the Brandenburg Education Building.

THE INGENIOUS plot of "Blithe Spirit" tells how Charles Condomine (Rudy Froeschle) invites into his placid summer home an eccentric, breezy lady medium (Helen Russell) in order to learn the jargon of the occult for a book he is writing.

Little does Charles or his lovely second wife Ruth (Jan Merriman) dream that the seance staged by the medium will summon back Charles' first wife (Alice Froeschle) who is now "passed over" for seven years.

ELVIRA, the lady from beyond, still charming and mischievous, appears and proceeds to torment Charles by reminding him of their life together.

Of course, only Charles can see her. A floating vase, handed to her out of thin air, finally convinces Ruth that Charles is not losing his mind — that the first wife is indeed in the room.

Elvira has a ghostly plot in mind — if she can make a ghost of Charles, life in the spirit world will have more appeal for her.

However, her plans go awry.

RUDY FROESCHLE was born in Hazen, N. D. and has lived in Wayne for five years. He is a graduate of the University of North Dakota with a degree in American

She has been in charge of makeup for most productions.

Froeschle has served on the board of directors for three years and currently is president of Wayne Community Theatre.

Prior to coming to Wayne, she was the director of the Idaho Falls Community Theatre and taught drama in high school.

She has been professor of theatre at Wayne State College since 1958. She has written and produced a full-length children's play and several one-acts.

Her hobbies are crossword puzzles, sewing, puppetry and play writing.

Wildcats prepare for season opener

The men's and women's track teams at Wayne State College will open their 1983 outdoor season with a home quadrangular on Tuesday, (March 29).

Veteran Wildcat track coach Dr. LeRoy Simpson and his squad have 11 dates on their schedule plus the NAIA national meet in late May in West Virginia.

Highlights of the schedule come on Thursday, April 14 in the annual WSC Invitational, and Saturday, May 14 when Wayne State hosts the NAIA District 11 championships in WSC's Memorial Stadium.

The men's track squad will be bolstered by a strong contingent of middle-distance runners, according to Dr. Simpson.

He pointed to 400 meter runners Troy Brende, Dan Kenkel, and Tod Heier as the top participants in that event.

Another strong event should be the 800, according to Dr. Simpson. Top figures in that event include Heier, Jeff Krelfels, and Bryce Lambley.

Heading up the sprinters should be Pat LaPadula. Lambley will carry the load in the distance events.

In the field events, top returnees include Scott Driver in the pole vault; Joe Ortmeier in the high jump and triple jump; and weight men Ron Berrle and Tim Buenz.

Top competition within Nebraska is expected to be provided by perennial powers Doane and Kearney State. National contender Pittsburg State is again expected to dominate the Central States Intercollegiate Conference.

THE LADY WILDCAT track team, which earned a Top 20 finish in the NAIA last season, will have its work cut out if it hopes to match last year's success, according to Dr. Simpson.

At the front of the list of returnees is junior All-American Kelley Peterson. She participates in the hurdles and sprints as well as the short relay for Wayne State.

WSC's other All-American, junior Janet Lee, is questionable thus far due to a health-related problem. Lee is a standout in the 800 and 1500 meter races. Marian Borgmann is being counted on in the 200 and 400 meter races plus both the short and long relays. Also expected to score in the 400 are Connie Starman and newcomer Cindy Heesacker.

Returning high jump standout Vicki Wamberg will also run a leg of the long relay, according to Dr. Simpson. Stacy Moore will also run on that relay and the 400 meter hurdles.

Pittsburg State should again claim the ESTC title, according to Dr. Simpson, while Kearney State and Midland join the Lady Cats as contenders in the district.

THE 1983 WAYNE State track schedule includes: March 29 — Home meet (Men-WSC, Morningside, Dordt, Women - WSC, Dordt, South Dakota).

March 31 — at Kearney Relays.

April 5 — at Dordt Relays (Sioux Center, Iowa).

April 9 — at Bronco Invitational (Hastings).

April 16 — Triangular at Lincoln (Nebraska-Westeyan, Tarkio, WSC).

April 19 — at Dutch Relays at Orange City, Iowa (Men only).

April 23 — at Doane Relays (Crete).

April 27 — at chamber of Commerce Meet (Madison, S.D.). May 6-7 — at Central States Intercollegiate Conference Championship (Emporia, Kan.). May 14 — NAIA District 11 championships. May 26-28 — at NAIA National Championships, Charleston W.V.

Due to a bill passed by the Nebraska Legislature in 1978, an Art Selection Committee at Wayne State College is seeking artwork of any form to be placed in and around the newly renovated Education and Humanities Buildings on the Wayne State campus.

Dr. James O'Leary, chairman of the Art Selection Committee, said existing artwork may be purchased or the committee may commission new works.

O'Leary also noted that since the funds are public money and the artwork will be used to beautify public buildings, the public is encouraged to participate in the selection process and is welcome to look at the slides of materials submitted.

Interested artists should submit a current resume and color slides of existing artwork to the Art Selection Committee, Office of the Vice President, Wayne State College, Wayne, Neb., 68787. Deadline for applications is March 25.

'Spring Skies' showing in college planetarium

A number of bright and interesting objects in the nighttime sky highlight the program "Spring Skies," which is being presented at Wayne State College on Sunday afternoons at 3:30 p.m., according to Planetarium Director Carl Rump, associate professor of math/sciences.

The presentation will emphasize the re-emergence of the brightest planets visible from earth. The most recent imagery provided by NASA's interplanetary probes also will be included in the program.

All of the programs are free and open to the public. Special showings can be arranged for school groups and organizations by appointment.

For more information, contact the planetarium at Box 77, Wayne State College, Wayne, Neb., 68787, or phone (402) 375-2200.

Contract agreement is reached

Wayne State faculty members will receive a five percent pay raise for the second half of the school year as a result of an agreement reached by the State Colleges Education Association (SCEA) and the Board of Trustees.

An agreement was reached after almost 11 months of negotiating according to Dr. J.S. Johar, president of the SCEA.

Under the contract, faculty members at Wayne State, Kearney State and Peru State will be awarded a five percent raise for this half of the school year. The contract does not affect the first half of the year. In addition, the higher two ranks of faculty at Kearney will receive an additional $345 per person.

JOHAR, a WSC professor, said former Gov. Charlie Thone's proposed budget cuts slowed down contract negotiations. He said the contract could possibly have been signed in July but was postponed to see the outcome of Thone's proposal.

The contract is effective from July 1, 1982 to June 30, 1983 but will remain in effect until a new contract is signed. Copies of the contract are being made available to faculty members.

Rank minimums were increased at the three state colleges represented by the SCEA. Chadron State is not a member of the association. The minimum wage for an instructor was increased from $13,550 to $14,100, the minimum for an assistant professor increased from $16,800 to $17,485, the minimum for an associate professor was raised from $19,450 to $20,445 and a full professor's minimum wage was increased from $23,580 to $24,535.

JOHAR SAID a request has been made for a future substantial budget increase in faculty salary discretionary funds for the purpose of moving toward salary equity on a rank-average basis at Kearney, Peru and Wayne.

He added that the request asks for the increase if and when discretionary funds are available by the Nebraska Legislature.

The SCEA president said that instructors are not eligible for tenure while assistant, associate and full professors are eligible.

DR. J.S. JOHAR looks over the new faculty contract.

Photography: Randy Mascall

Tenure simply says that a professor cannot be fired without just cause, Johar pointed out. "Tenure faculty can be fired if there is just cause. But, it must be proven," he said. Two new Board of Trustees members have been appointed and are subject to Legislature approval. They are Thomas Morrissey of Tecumseh and Pete Kotsiopoulos of Kearney.

Blind actor, musician appearing

The Wayne State College Student Activities Board will sponsor the appearance in March of Tom Sullivan, singer, composer, entertainer, actor, and author.

Sullivan will present his lecture/concert series at 8 p.m. March 29 in Ramsey Theatre.

The presentation is free to students, and the public will be admitted for a $3 charge.

SULLIVAN'S life story was made into the movie, "If You Could See What I Hear." That movie also will be shown on the WSC campus as part of Sullivan's appearance.

According to WSC student programmer Julie Livingston, "If You Could See What I Hear" will be shown free to WSC students at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. on Monday, March 28 in Ley Theatre.

On Tuesday, March 29, Sullivan will present a workshop for handicapped students, dormitory resident assistants and resident directors. The time and place for that workshop has not yet been confirmed.

SULLIVAN is blind since he was a baby. Born prematurely, he was fed too much oxygen while in an incubator and a film developed over his eyes.

He makes a point of telling people he was not born blind, though he can't remember ever seeing. Sullivan attended Providence College and Harvard University and earned his degree in child psychology. During those years, his athletic achievements included 37 skydives, Olympic class wrestling, and rowing with the Harvard crew.

Music also has been important in Sullivan's life and several of his songs are included in "If You Could See What I Hear."

Along with his professional and athletic achievements, Sullivan has been active in a number of humanitarian organizations dedicated to encouraging other people to overcome their handicaps.

Faculty profile

Professor of music James Day likes Wayne State College because it's a place where "you can be an individual."

"There's enough activity to take part in that you feel like you're a part of it and not an outsider. You're not buried in masses of people."

A PART of Wayne State's music faculty for the past 23 years, Day himself has attended what he calls "huge schools."

He received his bachelor of arts degree from the Conservatory of Music at the University of Missouri in Kansas City, and then studied at the Juillard School of Music in New York City.

Later, he completed work on his master of music degree at the University of Kansas.

He also did educational specialist work at Pittsburg State Teacher's College, and advanced graduate studies in music at Florida State University at Tallahassee, as well as at the University of Southern California at Los Angeles.

BEFORE coming to Wayne State in 1959-60, Day taught high school music in public schools in western Kansas. He is originally from Osawatomie, Kan., which is near Kansas City.

Day has studied piano with such greats as Ann St. John, Rosina Lhevinne, John Crown and Edward Kilenyi.

He has made solo appearances with the Kansas City Philharmonic, the Sioux City Symphony, and with the Wayne State orchestra as well.

ON CAMPUS, Day serves as director of the Wayne State College Special Program Series, and in the past was Music Educator's

James Day

National Conference faculty sponsor.

He also has worked closely with the International Studies program since its inception in 1969-70, and this year will serve as co-director of the Scandinavia trip. He also is assisting with the England/Scotland trip.

ACCORDING to Day, he enjoys Wayne State for a number of reasons.

One is the fact that there exists "a very pleasant atmosphere among the faculty as a whole. You couldn't find a better place for an atmosphere of having free rein in your classroom to develop and try new ideas."

Day and his wife, Bonita, have one son, Scott, who is seven.

President

THE NEW president also cited society's expectations of higher education and the public's declining confidence in agencies of the federal and state governments as being "particularly difficult" for higher education.

"In addition," he said, "we face the internal turmoil and conflict of knowing the significant obligation that higher education has to preserve and expand knowledge, as well as to serve the public, to be a general critic of society, to not always give in to society's whims, and to sometimes isolate and insulate, not assimilate."

ELLIOTT SAID Wayne State's goal is to capitalize on each of the challenges and to use the emotion that is generated to help build a new environment of opportunity and creativity.

"It is a time to be open, creative, spontaneous thinkers, intent upon finding new ways of doing more with less, to be more effective rather than to be more efficient."

ELLIOTT added that Wayne State must re-examine its commitment to get to the 21st century as a viable, dynamic, quality institution.

"The new information society and the new knowledge industries are forcing a re-examination of society's traditional technologies and of higher education's 'business as usual' mentality."

IN HIS ADDRESS, Elliott said his personal commitment to confront today's challenges and to pursue them as tomorrow's opportunities is based upon several assumptions.

Elliott said persons in higher education must be more receptive to models that originate outside their own environment.

"Second," he said, "it is important to assume that there are enough available resources to fund programs."

"Scarcity of resources is not the primary problem," he added. "The primary problems are politics and values."

"It is essential that national and state political leaders have an articulated philosophy of higher education and that they be willing to act upon that philosophy."

NOTING THAT Wayne State College has never been fully tested in her ability to respond to change, Elliott said the ability to respond to change is limited only by the college's willingness to confront the unknown.

"Our intellectual resources and human capabilities are unlimited," he said, adding that when confronted with a need to change, time is of the essence.

In addition, Elliott said college administrators today must "rethink" the way they administer higher education.

"We must think and act from an institutional and not a disciplinary perspective. Cooperation, not competition, will be required."

ELLIOTT SAID Wayne State in the month and years ahead will face nearly as many obstacles as opportunities.

One of the greatest challenges and opportunities, according to Elliott, will be the computer.

Elliott said he believes the greatest challenge will be to adequately deal with the exploding potential and availability of computer software, and to provide educational experiences to those who come to the college already computer literate.

"The potential of the computer," said Elliott, "is being felt in virtually all quarters of the campus."

ELLIOTT SAID student population shifts also are affecting the campus as never before.

"As our student population grows older it affects our teaching techniques."

"There are increased challenges to faculty knowledge brought by students who have tested their own thoughts and actions in the so-called 'real world.'"

The college president said 23 percent of today's full-time students are 23 years or older, while 80 percent plus of the part-time students are over the age of 23.

"These so-called non-traditional students bring to the college new pressures and new challenges."

ANOTHER CHALLENGE, according to Elliott, "is that of demands by external agencies — both state and federal."

Elliott also cited a "tenured and aging faculty and staff" as an area of concern at Wayne State, pointing out that a fairly rapid turnover of faculty and administrators occurred until the late 1970's, allowing new people to bring new ideas.

Elliott said neither faculty nor administrators will be moving in large numbers in the near future, and that those on board must rethink their professional responsibilities to ensure a steady flow of new ideas.

Economic uncertainty, he said, also is a major concern and an opportunity.

"Economic uncertainty," said Elliott,

"will require major decisions about campus priorities and the focus will be to reshape campus programs."

Elliott added that to create an environment in which this type of evaluation can occur, funding of higher education must be returned to a place of highest priority.

"Our responsibility will be to clarify higher education as an industry, an industry investing in human capital, an industry that pays maximum dividends on its product in both the short and long run."

IN CLOSING, President Elliott said all who enter Wayne State with a degree objective, and who leave with that goal accomplished, must possess a guaranteed product.

"We will focus on insuring that our stamp of approval — the awarding of a degree — is based upon solid, well tested academic standards."

"That, more than any other factor, will carry our institution forward as a 21st century college."

"That will be your assurance and mine that this institution of higher learning is worthy of our support, our commitment, and our loyalty."

ELLIOTT, A native of Missouri, received his undergraduate education at William Jewell College in Liberty, Mo., earning an AB degree.

He earned his MA degree in health and physical education from Teachers College, Columbia University in New York City, and his Ed.D. degree in health and physical education from the University of Northern Colorado, Greeley.

During his continuing studies, he was instructor at Harrisonville High School, Mo.; Excelsior Springs Public School, Mo.; The Trinity School, New York; and The City University, Queens College, New York.

He later became department chairman and athletic coach at Missouri Valley College, Marshall, Mo.

ELLIOTT JOINED the staff of Wayne State College in 1971 as director of graduate studies, later becoming dean of special studies, vice president of academic affairs, and vice president of the college.

In addition to past and present memberships in numerous professional societies and special activities, he holds positions on several national advisory boards and boards of directors.

"They called back about a month ago to go over a few more details because we hadn't finished up the (1982) season when they were up here for the interview," explained Kris, who also is women's chairman of the Wayne County Farm Bureau.

McCabe, the Nebraska Farmer staffer who wrote the story, also contacted Spitz, who was instrumental in the start up of irrigation scheduling in Wayne County, a few weeks ago to update the story.

HE ALSO informed the extension agent that the CIA article would appear in the statewide magazine's March 19 issue.

"I thought they did a good job...I was real satisfied," explained Spitz, who helped the rural Carroll farmers organize the CIA.

"It's a first for me...to have something I was involved in make the front page of the Nebraska Farmer," he said.

"We haven't made any plans yet for 1983 because of the PIK (payment-in-kind) program," Spitz told The Wayne Herald.

Spitz said with the PIK program seeping in for farmers, he would be getting together with Kris for 1983's irrigation scheduling plans.

KRIS, WHO will be facing her third year as the CIA's irrigation scheduling ramrod this season, said she was getting "a lot of phone calls" from people she knows.

"The neighbors are razzing me a bit, but that goes along with it," said Kris, who gave birth to the couple's first child, Beth Ann, on Feb. 17.

"I'd sure like to see if (irrigation scheduling) flourishes in our local area...it needs to get a firm base here and we certainly have a lot of ways we can improve it," Kris added.

Kris, who handled 23 pivots during the first year and carried them through the 1982 season, hired Patty Fuchs of Belden to help with the CIA project.

Kris and her hired hand installed the blocks in each field, read them weekly and took the information to the extension office for processing through the Agnet Irrigate program.

THE COMPUTER processed information is returned to the participating farmers, who pay for the service.

The participating members, who get information on when and where to start and stop irrigating, are within 5 miles of each other.

Kris also added a 'scouting' service last season, which kept irrigators updated on corn borer and rootworm activity in the fields.

The scheduling ramrod took insect counts to Keith Jarvi, Northeast Station entomologist, who then makes insecticide application recommendations.

Jarvi trained Kris in insect scouting, which is an optional service for the CIA irrigators, and also involves a fee.

HOWEVER, Kris' father, who is active in 4-H and Wayne County Farm Bureau, puts in a claim for some of his daughter's firsthand farm training.

"There's certainly some satisfaction in seeing your kids follow in your footsteps when it comes to farming," he told The Wayne Herald Tuesday night.

"It was quite a thrill to see her on the cover (of the Nebraska Farmer)," said Anderson, who was working to save the life of a breach-birth of a dairy calf when contacted by The Wayne Herald.

"We've subscribed to the Nebraska Farmer for years and I don't necessarily think it's the final word in farming, but when they do things like that I have to think good things about them," he said with the smile of a proud father on his face.

Another unusual job involved repair work on an aluminum boat after a pair of water skis damaged its backside.

Magwire also has a fully portable setup. He took advantage of that system last week when the door fell off of a woman's pot belly stove.

ARIC, WHO was born in Wakefield but lived most of his life in Norfolk, became interested in welding at age 14. He studied welding for one year at Norfolk.

After he graduated in 1974, Magwire got a job as a welder for Nucor Steel of Norfolk. He received on-the-job training as he spent nine years in that position. Aric also welded on his own.

He has wanted to start his own business for several years but couldn't afford to leave his job at Nucor until recently.

Now, Aric has all of the welding he wants. His job involves general repair of farm and business equipment, specialization in stainless steel, the manufacturing of hog confinement gates and hay feeders and all types of general welding.

THE NORFOLK High graduate does hard surfacing and will soon begin rebuilding drive shafts. He says there should be plenty of drive shaft work as long as there are four-wheel drive vehicles.

Other work which Magwire does includes the building of goose neck trailers and straightening of frames. During harvest season, Aric will be on call 24 hours a day.

With plenty of work to do, Magwire said delayed shipments of steel are holding him up.

The veteran welder plans to begin one of his biggest projects Monday. He was awarded the contract to build a new roof on Winside's water tower and would like to get started early in the week.

Aric has lived in the country near Winside for the past three years with his wife and three children.

Disk and dat

Common, everyday objects can look like bizarre, foreign objects when viewed through the camera's eye. Even the appearance of traditional farm equipment can be altered entirely with unusual angles and closeup examinations.

Symmetrical patterns and geometrical shapes may not be less apparent in a mathematics book than on a farm. Rectangles, squares, circles, trapezoids, triangles, ellipses and many varying shapes can be found everywhere.

Whether it be a disk, a planter, a plow, a rotary hoe, a harrow, a combine or a tractor there is an artistic beauty to be found somewhere within the borders of the machinery.

Farm programs available

Eight young farm couples from across Nebraska are participating in the Nebraska Farm Project; which they are prepared to share with their surrounding communities. Over the past year and a half they have received training in developing and conducting humanities-oriented programs to enlighten, educate and entertain fellow Nebraskans.

These programs are now available to any organization at no charge.

Contact coordinator Barb Hanson at (402) 476-8815 for additional information about the Nebraska Farm Project and about the specific programs available in your area. You may also contact any of the couples noted on the attached sheet for additional information.

Tian Nebraska Farm Project has been sponsored by Farmers Union of Nebraska, under the direction of the organization's State President Neil Oxtan, and has been funded by a grant through the Nebraska Committee for the Humanities. Armed with resource material covering such theme areas as land, economics, rural image and rural community, and aided by humanities consultants (see attached list), these couples have spent the past year preparing oral histories, slide/tape presentations, standing vital and shared concerns and heritage.

Nebraska tops appropriations

Despite lean budgets, state, county and city governments have appropriated a record $185.6 million for saving soil and water in fiscal 1983, an increase of nearly $16 million over fiscal 1982.

"Many state and local governments, while feeling their own budget pinches, still have appropriated 10 percent more this year for soil and water conservation," Peter C. Myers, chief of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service, said.

"They agree that soil erosion is one of America's most serious resource threats, and that a strong agriculture is important to their economy."

Nebraska ranks first in the country with $2,506,702 contributed by the state and $14,980,215 given locally for a total of $17,486,917.

Cow finds way back to calf

Anyone walking the sidewalks in Allen last week might have walked smack dab into a wall on the sight of a cow trotting down Main Street.

Main Street of Allen was one stretch of the six-mile route which was followed by a cow owned by Truman and Darlene Fahrenholz of rural Allen.

The family purchased 46 head of cattle from Cliff and Dwight Gotch and drove them six miles, through Allen, to their farm. All of the cows Fahrenholz bought were ready to have calves.

The next day, Truman counted 45 cattle instead of 46. He went back to Gotch's farm land and found the missing cow and a newborn calf on the stubble land which they had originally left.

Fahrenholz said the cow had given birth before she was moved to his farm and returned 24 hours later to be with her calf. "We couldn't find the calf but she knew where she had left her," Fahrenholz said.

The cow apparently retraced her steps and had to cross Highway 9 during the west to east trip. She traveled down Main Street and was spotted by neighbor Swede Lindahl "barrelling down a country road" on her way back to her calf.

Fahrenholz joked to Gotch: "That's a heck of a way to sell cattle. You sell them and they go back home so they can be resold."

Truman said he planned to let the cow and calf stay on the stubble for a couple of days and then transport them via horse-trailer to his farm.

Dairy producers honored

Twenty Nebraska dairy producers were honored here Thursday, (March 17), as members of the "Gold Elite Club," signifying that their herds produced more than 625 pounds of butterfat per cow for a year or more.

The herd owners received awards provided by the Nebraska State Dairymen's Association at the organization's annual meeting.

The Gold Elite Club, new this year, was established to focus recognition on the most outstanding dairy herds in the state in terms of butterfat production. At 20 were Holstein herds.

of 525 to 574 pounds of butterfat, while bronze awards went to owners of 23 herds averaging between 475 to 524 pounds of butterfat.

Last year, under the same production criteria for the three categories, there were 84 gold awards, 102 silver awards and 108 bronze awards.

A list of area award winners and the pounds of butterfat produced by their herds in 1982 follows:

the farmer's wife

by pat meierhenry

As I said, I didn't plan to marry a farmer. Actually, I didn't plan to marry at all. I was going to be totally dedicated to my work, a director of nurses or a matron at an orphanage. If I did decide to forego the solo life, it would be with a doctor, and we would dedicate ourselves to saving lives.

Well, we do save lives here, but they are bovine, and I should have gone to veterinary college instead of nursing school.

I did grow up on a farm, but my Dad had old-fashioned ideas about a female's place. It was alright for a girl to milk cows, but when there was a calf to be pulled, my brother helped.

The first time I saw an animal born was after I was married. My father-in-law raised sheep; and one day when I came home from work at the hospital, he was standing over a poor ewe who had been laboring all afternoon. He said she wasn't going to live, so I suggested a Caesarian section. He cut the jugular to put the poor thing out of her misery, quickly slit the abdomen, and we had baby twin lambs. I bottle-fed them, and they got to be pets.

The next animals I helped with were the dairy calves. I was shocked to see how a calf puller was used. Then, the Big Farmer decided to raise his own feeder calves and bought some stock cows. My education began in earnest.

Unlike humans, calves depend largely on their father for characteristics of size. Like humans, they tend to be born at night, and there is an automatic increase in number of births in the middle of a snow storm. Heifers calving for the first time are the ones that cause the grey hair. If the calf is too large, Mom will need help. And there isn't much leeway for time.

This is why the man with stock cows is looking tired these days. He's checking "his girls" every two or three hours. I never thought I'd be jealous of a bunch of cows! The local vet gets to looking a bit ragged, too.

He gets called when the puller doesn't do the job. And this is why yours truly is looking tired. I have this problem: I don't sleep soundly until all my family is bedded down. I lay awake until 11 p.m. check is made. Then I hear our son leave at 2 a.m. and worry until he gets back. Then I hear the Farmer leave at 5 a.m. and worry some more. I am determined I'm not taking a nocturnal turn. But sometimes, I think I might as well.

Heifers also don't understand when you are trying to help them. Chasing one around a muddy yard, in the wind, at 3 a.m., can be a most frustrating experience.

Finally, you get her in the barn (the delivery room) and assist her. Then, you worry about the calf. Will the mother claim him? Can he get up? Will he suck? Does he need the heat lamp? Does Mom have milk? If the calf is born in the mud or the cold, the LeBoyer method may have to be used.

A French obstetrician named LeBoyer believes in making birth as quiet and non-traumatic as possible — one of the characteristics of his method is placing the newborn into a warm bath. This is the quickest way to warm a chilled calf — thank heaven, the hired man's tub is close to the obstetrical suite!

If the calf isn't strong enough to suck, he's tube fed. It's essential for him to have colostrum. Sometimes we use some from dairy friends. Sometimes, the mother is milked — this is not the best way to be sure of living long enough to collect social security!

If he sucks, and acts lively, and doesn't get scours or pneumonia, he and his mother move out of the barn to make room for more. And that's just the beginning. Can you imagine the price of steak if the Farmer was getting union wages, with time and half for overtime?

Swine housing tips given

Open front swine housing ratings range from acceptable to excellent in land grant university tests, a University of Nebraska extension livestock specialist said at the National Pork Congress in St. Louis on March 10.

Robert Fritschen said Nebraska tests distinguish between an open-front house, which producers can't close temporarily during winter, and a modified-open-front (MOF) house that's more adjustable.

DURING WINTER, Fritschen said, producers close off the MOF's south front with Plexiglas or a curtain, blocking off the open south side.

National Pork Producers Association polls recently said 30 percent of U.S. hogs are raised in MOF finishing houses, he noted.

MOF houses use pig body heat to warm the building and specially designed air inlets to ventilate it naturally, he said, without the mechanical ventilation and the supplemental heating enclosed systems require.

Fritschen cautioned producers to baffle the ceiling slot and avoid leaving it too far open across the roof line during winter.

Left unattended or unmanaged, the slot becomes an air inlet on the east end and an air outlet on the west end, he said, reversing usual air flow and overly cooling the east end.

PRODUCERS SHOULD close the ceiling slot about one-half the length of the building starting from the east end, he said, to better equalize temperatures from end to end.

Still, he said, because air generally moves from east to west through the building, it's usually slightly warmer in the west end. He recommended producers place younger pigs at the warmer west end, and larger pigs, which produce more heat and can better withstand cold, in the east end.

The roof should be well insulated, he said, and should have a vapor barrier and smooth ceiling. These features are critical to the successful performance of the mono-slope MOF, he said.

Fritschen didn't recommend using room dividers since they disrupt east to west air flow. At least try the building without room dividers for 18 months, he said.

He advised that if north-side slot inlets are cut above doors on the back, or low, side of the building, those slots should be lightly closed during winter. Cold air entering above the sleeping area drops rapidly, causing pigs to sleep elsewhere and dung in the sleeping area.

Figure 1. During winter, air enters through the ceiling slot near the east end, and exits the building via the slot near the west end. Consequently, it is important to use a baffle and close the ceiling slot from east to west for approximately half the length of the building.

Figure 2. During winter air enters from vents or openings in the lower half of the high side (usually a south-facing) convection currents and thermal release off the pigs warms the air which follows the slope of the ceiling. The warm moist air then escapes the building via the baffled slot at the roof line on the high side of the building.

THE RESULTS of cold air in the sleeping area, regardless of source, are poor performance and undesirable dunging patterns, he explained.

Studies indicate the MOF house may offer lower odor or gas accumulation risk than environmentally controlled units, he said.

The only way to eliminate hog odors is to quit producing hogs, he said — the problem is always there, but it can be controlled by careful manure management.

When odors get too powerful, he said, producers should review the whole manure management system and determine the cause rather than trying to correct the effect.

Some producers move feeders closer to dunging channels or slotted areas to allow more complete feeder filling, he said. But when they do this, pigs tend to dung in the corner, where the upper end of the feeder meets the pen divider, messing that area of the pen.

"Perhaps a better rule of thumb is that where pens are narrower than 6 feet, locate the feeder in the pen divider against the rear wall. The large volume feeders we've grown accustomed to using outside are not appropriate for inside confinement since they take up unnecessary space and otherwise disrupt air flow."

FRITSCHEN OFFERED the following tips to producers:

— During severe winter weather, close the ceiling vent from east to west until air is going out and not coming in.

— A 2-foot alley is adequate for moving hogs from pen to truck, but if sorting and weighing occur there, a wider alley should be considered — about 3 feet wide.

— The mesh pen divider over the slotted area effectively draws pigs over slots to dung.

— The 2-inch dropoff from solid to slotted floor area contributes to good dunging patterns.

— Slopes in excess of one-half inch per foot contribute nothing to cleanliness or pig well-being. Trowel or float all surfaces.

— A 5-foot to 6-foot back wall seems to work well, 5 1/2 feet long being most common among producers.

— Open up about one-third of the back wall for summer cross ventilation. Adjust the setting of the back door to regulate fall and spring air flow.

— Zone heat usually isn't necessary during winter if pigs weigh at least 40 pounds. Zone heat can be provided with catalytic or infra-red heaters. Hot-water floor heat is less common than overhead zone heat. Below-floor insulation is considered cost effective for growing pigs but not for finishing pigs.

— Small roof doors above pentline feeders can be used to fill feeders from a grinder mixer. Seal doors carefully to prevent water leaks. It lowers construction costs to use the feeder as part of the pen divider. The feeder's upper end should be against the back wall when pens are more than 6 feet wide.

— Put the alleyway along the dunging area to avoid entering pens to adjust baffles.

— Most drinking taps don't waste as much water as cups do. Place them above the dunging area. Install them so they won't freeze during winter.

— Sprinklers over the dunging area are cost effective for pigs 120 pounds to market weight.

GROWING CALVES ON SILAGE RATIONS

How should a 400-500 pound steer calf be grown for greatest profit potential?

If he's to go into the feedlot immediately after growing, an optimum gain is about 1 3/4 pounds daily until he reaches 700-750 pounds. This is fast enough that gains are reasonable in terms of both feed costs and fixed costs. It's also slow enough that most of the calves will not be too fat when they reach market weight.

Good quality corn silage plus about 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 pounds of 40 percent protein will usually produce 1.6 to 1.9 pounds or near a 1.75 pound average daily gain. The supplement should have some calcium, phosphorus, trace minerals and vitamin A for most efficient gains.

If alfalfa is added to the ration, protein supplement can be reduced or even eliminated. But it will reduce rate of gain unless corn is added. Alfalfa is lower in energy than corn silage per pound of dry matter.

If enough alfalfa is added to the ration, protein supplement (this requires four to five pounds of good quality hay), you'll need to add about two to three pounds to bring the energy up high enough for the 1 3/4 pounds daily gain.

Some feeders like to feed additional grain with a corn silage and supplement. You can increase gain by doing this, but you will usually increase the cost of gain by this practice. Also, it will tend to make cattle fatter by the time they reach market weight.

At Northeast Station, cattle fed corn silage and supplement gained 1.8 pounds daily in a two-year wintering test. Feeding three pounds of corn per head daily increased gain to 1.9 pounds and six pounds of corn along with silage produced a gain of two pounds per head daily.

Winter gains were most costly, and there was a trend toward more expensive gains over both the growing and fattening when grain was fed along with silage.

As for sorghum silages, they have less energy per pound of dry matter, and they are also usually wetter than corn silage. Because of this, daily rate of gain is usually one fourth pound lower for the better sorghum silages and may be as much as one half pound per day less in those that have little or no grain.

To compensate for this difference in energy and to get the 1 3/4 pound daily gain, you'll usually need to feed about two to three pounds of grain with sorghum silage and protein supplement. With Sudan sorghum silage you'll probably need to feed four to five pounds of grain per head daily for the 1 3/4 pound gain.

In feeding alfalfa, it takes about four to six pounds of grain and all the alfalfa they'll eat. No protein supplement should be needed.

AGRICULTURE: IT'S YOUR HEARTBEAT, AMERICA

The closest most people come to agriculture is in the supermarket. Overlooked is the effect agriculture has on the community outside that market.

Agriculture affects the community far beyond simply supplying shelves in grocery stores. Equipment, chemicals, transportation, processing, marketing, financial services, management services, communications, energy, education — plus all the businesses it takes to support them — employ thousands of people whose paychecks depend on agriculture.

Those paychecks go to pay for food, clothing, entertainment, housing, energy, taxes and countless other services involving businesses and organizations which in turn employ thousands-upon-thousands of people.

Here, in our state, agriculture means jobs — the ability to pay for goods and services. As agriculture goes, so goes the local economy.

Every March National Agriculture Day is celebrated. It's a day set aside to recognize producers for the tremendous risk they shoulder, to honor them for their productivity. It is deeply appreciated and well deserved.

But today farmers and ranchers need something more. They need your active support for agriculture not only one day a year, but every day. You'll be helping yourself and your neighbors, too.

For America it means food on the table; and for many Americans here in our part of the country it means jobs. And a way of life.

Agriculture: It's your heartbeat.

Art competition planned for high school students

A high school art student from the First Congressional District of Nebraska will have an opportunity to have his work displayed in the nation's Capitol, Congressman Doug Bereuter announced at the close of a visit to Nebraska.

Bereuter said he will cosponsor an art competition in the First District as part of "An Artistic Discovery," a nationwide activity of the Congressional Arts Caucus of the House of Representatives.

WINNING ART from each participating district will be placed on display this summer in a corridor leading to the United States Capitol. In addition, Bereuter said he will display the second place entry in his Washington office in the Longworth House Office Building and the third place entry in his district office in Lincoln.

Each of the 123 high schools in the First District will be invited to submit one entry by April 12 with judging to be done by recognized First District artists.

In addition to having their entries placed on display, the three top contestants will also receive plaques and flags flown over the Capitol from Bereuter. Honorable mention entrants will receive certificates.

Bereuter said plans are being developed to place the entries on exhibit in various communities of the First District prior to Memorial Day.

He said he is sponsoring the competition to encourage creation and expression among high school art students. The competition is open to high school students only and informational material is being sent to high school principals and art teachers later this week.

HONORARY CHAIRMAN for the First District competition will be Louise Bereuter, wife of the Congressman. She taught art in Nebraska prior to the Congressman's election in 1978 and, in addition to teaching in northern Virginia, has assisted with illustration of the Congressional Club Cookbook since moving to the nation's Capitol.

And a dash of this

Pinches of this and dashes of that spiced up the batch of soup made by District 51 second grade student Jennifer Swinney as a special project last week.

As a culminating activity in the expanded second grade reading program, Jennifer was given an outside reading assignment by her teacher, Ruby Nelson. To report on the book she read, entitled "Beautiful Soup," Jennifer made "Puzzle Soup" by scratch. She said it was so-named because it was hard to make and she was puzzled.

Jennifer, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stacy Swinney, is a member of her school's top reading group in Mrs. Nelson's special reading program. Mrs. Nelson said that because Jennifer has done so well in reading, language and spelling she was given the outside assignment.

Ingredients of the soup included beef broth, salt, calsup, beef bouillon, soup bone meat, celery, onions, frozen mixed vegetables, pearled barley, onion and garlic powder and organo. As the soup cooked, members of the first and second grade classes got to test the taste. When it was done, the students shared the soup for dinner.

Once a qualified claimant has had a homestead exemption application approved, there is no need to refile, unless there is a status change. If the status changes a new application must be refiled. (Example: The first application is filed and there is only one of the married couple who is 65 or over. When the spouse becomes 65, a new application should be filed. If an application was rejected or disapproved a new application must be filed. A change of ownership or new address requires a new application to be filed. Also, if a mobile home has been traded for a different mobile home, a new application must be filed.)

It shall be the duty of any owner of property who has been granted a homestead exemption thereon, to notify the county assessor of any change of the homestead exemption status of such property occurring during any year. Failure to report such changes will result in a severe penalty and lien on such property. Any person who has permitted the improper and unlawful allowance of such homestead exemption on his property shall, as an additional penalty, also forfeit his right to a homestead exemption on any other property in this state for the two succeeding years.

All applications must be filed with the County Assessor on or before April 1, 1983. Forms will be available at the office of the County Assessor.

Anyone having questions, concerning homestead exemptions, please call the County Assessor's office 375-1979.

Earn 9.844% Tax-Free***

Put your money in our IRA instead of the IRS

As you probably know, IRA is a retirement plan for all wage-earners, regardless of whether they may have a retirement plan where they work. At the same time, it doubles as an immediate income tax shelter. Briefly, here's how it works:

1. You can open an IRA account, right now, at Columbus Federal with as little as $100.
2. Your funds can earn money market rates, currently 9.844%, in amounts of $100.00 or more.
3. Your annual contribution to IRA is limited to $2,000, providing you have earned at least that amount. The limit is $2,250 for married couples, in which only one spouse is employed, or $4,000 for couples if both spouses are employed.
4. You have until April 15, 1983 to contribute for 1982, and your IRA contribution is totally deductible from your 1982 earned income - and that includes all earned interest.
5. You can start drawing on your fund once you reach age 59½. Funds are subject to income tax upon withdrawal. Withdrawals before that age are subject to substantial penalties.

* Tax deferred until retirement, when you would be in a lower tax bracket, 9.844%. Is the effective annual yield earned on a 9.50% annual interest rate.

This could be the beginning of a really fine retirement plan. Stop by our office for complete details.

At H&R Block we guarantee our work.
This year with over 100 changes in the tax laws and forms, you have more chances of making a mistake. And that could mean an IRS audit. If H&R Block prepares your taxes and you're audited, we go with you at no added cost. Not as your legal representative, but to explain how your taxes were prepared. If you make a mistake and you owe additional tax, you pay only the tax. We pay the penalty and interest.

Our service makes Valley the top name in irrigation.

Your system's down. Your crops need water. If you own a Valley system, you can rest easy. You know that no part is ever more than 48 hours away. Parts we don't stock we can order from our regional warehouse. Our priority parts program sees to it that critically needed parts get on a plane or truck from the factory, usually within hours, at no extra charge. On top of that, the factory backs us up with a summer emergency response program that puts technical service people on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week, holidays included.

We specialize in servicing and rebuilding or plan systems needing help. We can convert you to low pressure and a new drive train.
