

March blizzard roars into Wayne

What started out as a premature April Fool's Day joke turned out to be one of northeast Nebraska's worst March blizzards in history.

Friday's early snowfall quickly melted as it hit the ground during the 31-degree weather. But, the consistent snowfall kept coming throughout Friday and Saturday to bury Wayne in 17 inches of snow.

Official weather keeper Pat Gross of Triangle Finance said Wayne's 17-inch snowfall accumulation amounts to 98 of an inch of moisture. The 17-inch figure doesn't include a possible one or two inches of early snow which melted.

ALTHOUGH NO official statistics are available, the two-day storm is one of the heaviest snowfalls ever recorded this late in the year. Reports ranged up to 21 inches of snow accumulation near Winslow. Wakefield reportedly had 16 inches of snow.

Gross said Wayne has received 4.64 inches of precipitation in March—a figure well above average.

The snowstorm led to several automobile accidents in the area. No reports were yet available from the Wayne County Sheriff's office but the office did investigate a couple of accidents.

Many motorists who dared to venture on the highways wished they wouldn't have. Cars and trucks lined the ditches of several area highways. In town, the Wayne Street Department couldn't keep up with Saturday's heavy snowfall and was forced to clear many of the streets on Sunday.

CANCELLATIONS AND postponements dominated the weekend as many residents remained in their homes. Palm Sunday services at many area churches were called off.

On Sunday, activity picked up as snow plows cleared streets and residents used scoops and snowblowers to free their sidewalks and driveways. By Monday, there were many aching backs and sore muscles caused by scooping the heavy, wet, deep snow.

The storm also had its bright spots. Giant snowmen and snow bunnies popped up around town as energetic and creative individuals took advantage of warmer weather and wet snow to get some outdoor exercise. Youngsters entertained themselves in snowball fights.

Sunshine and warmer weather early this week helped clear and dry the city's streets and area highways. Piles of snow which remain are melting and leaving behind puddles of water. It may be weeks before the soil is dry enough to let farmers work in the field or ball teams to play.

City may bid for new Civil Defense system

First, the good news: Wayne soon may get a new, citywide Civil Defense warning system.

Now, the bad news: Wayne may not get it soon enough for the traditional tornado season.

That's the upshot of a proposal presented to the City Council Tuesday night by Phil Kloster, city administrator.

KLOSTER PRESENTED the Civil Defense proposal in response to the Council's year-ago request for a review and recommendations report on the city's obsolete siren system.

Vern Fairchild, who also is city and Wayne County Civil Defense director, Kloster's proposal called for installing a new electronic warning system citywide this summer.

"Our present system is not even functional...it's down and we're not sure how long it will be down...we can't even get parts from the factory anymore," Kloster told the Council.

Kloster reminded the Council that it had requested an allocation of funds for upgrading the city's Civil Defense warning system.

"WE DISCUSSED this problem, if you remember, a year ago and were asked to include money in the budget for improvements," Kloster said.

"Vern (Fairchild) and I have spent months looking at our system...going over every aspect of it," he continued.

"And, we've brought you a proposal that would require your approval to go ahead on developing specs to bid for a new system," said Kloster, who noted that the city is spending upwards of $600 per year to repair and maintain each of the city's three old warning sirens.

"We have been in touch with a company that has an excellent electronic warning system," Kloster continued. "It would involve six installations in the city, where we now have only three."

KLOSTER SAID the system, which utilizes solid state electronics in its design, includes a public address system, plus two additional function options.

"There's only one problem...the list price is $20,000 more than we have budgeted," Kloster said.

The city has budgeted about $25,000 for upgrading the old Civil Defense warning system this year.

The Kloster-Fairchild proposal contained a financing option that would allow the city to purchase the system through a federal energy conservation plan.

UNDER THE city's agreement with the Western Area Power Administration for low-cost hydroelectric power also commits Wayne to an energy conservation program.

"We have to submit that plan for energy conservation to WAPA to meet the terms of the contract," Kloster explained.

"If we use the proposed Civil Defense system as part of the energy conservation program, the city electric department can underwrite the additional cost," Kloster continued.

Kloster explained that Forest City, Iowa, where he was city administrator before his appointment to the Wayne position, used the same plan to install a new warning system.

UNDER THE the financing proposal, the city would pre-program the new electronic warning system to go off when electric customer consumption hit a pre-designated peak power load level.

"Often the predesignated level is set, for safety, just under the brown-out, or excessive-load point," Kloster explained.

"When power consumption from summer usage, such as air conditioning, reaches that level it automatically triggers the electronic warning system," the city administrator said.

"In Forest City, you should have seen the customers back off peak consumption when they heard the sirens...it works," Kloster said.

EGGS T'GO Waldbaum's brightens Easter bunny baskets

By LaVon Anderson

A new and colorful concept in egg processing is scratching and pecking its way into supermarkets across the country — and just in time for Easter.

Eggs T'Go, a new product recently introduced by the Milton G. Waldbaum Co. of Wakefield, are hard-boiled eggs which are specially colored and sealed with a process invented in Europe.

Richard Brownell, sales manager of Eggs T'Go, said the eggs, which are colored in a variety of Food and Drug Administration-approved colors, have an extended shelf life and need no refrigeration.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Ronald Reagan will be among the first in the country to sample the Wakefield company's new product line.

Brownell said Waldbaums has been selected this year to supply the colored eggs for the annual Easter Egg Roll for children on the White House lawn.

The longstanding traditional ceremony will take place Monday, April 4.

Dave Gardner, general manager of the Waldbaum company, will join representatives of the American Egg Board and Northeast Egg Marketing Association in presenting President and Mrs. Reagan with the Easter eggs on Monday at a special ceremony at 10:30 a.m.

"WE SHIP eggs all over the United States and the world but this is the first time we have had the honor of supplying the President with eggs," stated Gardner.

Gardner said Waldbaums was asked to supply the colored eggs for the ceremony by the American Egg Board, a group that promotes egg usage in the United States.

Traditionally, eggs for the ceremony have been hand-colored which is a time-consuming process.

Equipment recently installed at the Waldbaum company will produce the 1,700 colored eggs needed for the ceremony through hard-cooking, coloring and packing, in only 15 minutes.

GARDNER WILL leave from Sioux City Sunday, April 3 at 6:50 a.m., and will arrive at the Washington, D. C. National Airport at 11:50 a.m.

Gardner said Ozark Airlines has assured the Waldbaum company that they will give the special hard-cooked eggs VIP treatment.

It is planned that the eggs will go directly from the airplane to the White House by limousine.

BROWNELL SAID the Eggs T'Go concept was developed several years ago in Europe.

Waldbaum President Dan Gardner toured the European operation last year and thought it would be applicable in the United States, Brownell added.

"The Europeans have been using this process for several years," said Brownell, adding that the Waldbaum company began the colored egg process just six weeks ago.

Waldbaums is one of two companies in the United States to adopt the European invention. The other plant is located in Portland, Ore., according to Brownell.

BROWNELL SAID the process, which is "very expensive," involves taking graded fresh eggs, hard boiling them for 10 to 13 minutes in specially designed cookers, coloring and sealing the eggs, and packaging them.

Brownell explained that the pores of the eggs are sealed during the coloring process and they may be kept on supermarket and kitchen shelves for an extended period of time.

Because of the hand labor involved, the colored eggs are more expensive than typical supermarket eggs.

The eggs, which can be colored with up to six different colors, retail at 99 cents per half dozen.

BROWNELL STRESSED that although Waldbaums has been pushing production to get the eggs into stores in time for Easter, the colored eggs will be produced year-round.

Brownell said since the process began six weeks ago the company has been operating 16 hours a day on two shifts to produce enough eggs for Easter.

Now that the Easter rush is over the company is operating on one eight-hour shift with one dozen new employees.

The protective coloring, packaging cartons, and machinery used to produce the colored eggs are all European-made.

According to Brownell, the machine can turn out 7,200 colored eggs in one hour.

THE COLORED hard-boiled eggs are being promoted by the Waldbaum company as a snack food which can be used on salads and in sack lunches.

Brownell said the sealer coating makes the eggs easier to peel.

"Those things, along with the fact that the eggs can be stored on shelves for an extended period of time, are what we hope will outweigh the cost of the eggs," said Brownell, adding "the convenience is there."

The product currently is being sold in Chicago, Omaha, Sioux City, Phoenix, St.

Council strikes garbage billing

Standing firm on its recently approved ordinance for prompt garbage fee payment, the City Council has cleared the books on a disputed billing deemed uncollectable.

During Tuesday night's meeting, City Council approved a resolution to "remove from the books" a $160.29 billing charged against Wayne Refuse Service, one of the city's two Class A garbage haulers.

The resolved dispute involved Vernon Russell, a former councilman and owner/operator of Wayne Refuse Service.

"SINCE THE last Council meeting, we have reviewed in depth an account involving $160.29," said Kloster, in reference to a billing the city has carried against Russell since last year.

Without mentioning the ongoing dispute between the city and Russell over delinquent garbage collection fees involving thousands of dollars, Kloster informed the Council that legal counsel judged the $160.29 account as uncollectable.

"We applied the original ordinance (garbage collection fees) in the way it was written, but in all likelihood this amount would be uncollectable so staff is recommending that it be stricken from the books," Kloster said.

The $160.29 dispute involves an interpretation of fees charged against Russell for garbage collection just outside the city limits, according to Kloster.

"WE ASK that this be cleared up so as to avoid causing any more undue hardship," Kloster said, in reference to Russell's recent appearance before the Council to attack the city's prompt-payment ordinance, garbage license fees and the competency of the city administrator.

Russell, who did not attend Tuesday night's meeting, brought the $160.29 billing to the attention of the City Council earlier this month during a lengthy verbal denunciation of city garbage collection policy.

Council had approved a prompt payment policy for garbage haulers after efforts to collect a month-old delinquent account, involving substantially more than the $160.29 billing, had failed.

IN OTHER action, the Council also approved a name change on a Class B liquor license (carry-out beer) held by Gary and Victoria Donner of Casey's General Store.

On Friday, police investigated a two-car accident near the intersection of Seventh and Main streets.

ACCORDING TO police, a 1979 Ford, driven by Phyllis Hamm of Carroll, and a 1974 Chevrolet, driven by William Vriska of Wayne, collided just before entering the intersection.

Police said the northbound Hamm vehicle approached the intersection in the left lane and the Vriska vehicle, approached the intersection in the right lane.

2 major tax bills moving along

By Melvin Paul
Nebraska Press Association

Two major revenue bills, one to lower merchants' sales tax collection fees and another to take the state Board of Equalization out of the business of tax rate setting, look big steps toward enactment last week.

Omaha Sen. Vard Johnson's LB 571 would reduce the sales tax collection fee received by the 500 largest among 30,000 retailers in the state.

Lawmakers voted 25-22 to advance the bill from first round consideration.

ENACTMENT of the bill, which has generated strong opposition from merchants, would enrich the state general fund by an estimated $5.3 million annually.

Currently, merchants withhold 3 percent of all sales tax revenues they collect.

Under Johnson's bill, the fee for collections greater than $5,000 a month would be reduced to 1 percent. Merchants would continue to keep 3 percent of the first $5,000 they collect in a month.

The Legislature would have exclusive rate-setting authority for state sales and income taxes under LB 169. It received 28-17 second-round approval last week, and awaits final action by lawmakers.

ALTHOUGH the Legislature may set sales and income tax rates now, it is commonly done by the five-member state Board of Equalization, which is chaired by the governor.

Rate setting was one of the hottest issues in the 1982 campaign in which Democrat Bob Kerrey defeated former Republican Gov. Charles Thone. Kerrey has endorsed the bill.

Fourteen of the 15 Democrats in the constitutionally non-partisan Legislature who cast votes supported advancement of LB 169, which was introduced by Democratic Sens. Dave Newell and Karen Kilgarrin, both of Omaha. All 18 votes against advancement were cast by Republicans.

Kilgarrin argued that the change would establish greater accountability for state tax rates. Lawmakers might be more hesitant in enacting expensive legislation if they had to cast a corresponding vote to finance the spending with higher taxes, she said.

CITING THE 1982 law that has committed the state to the $22 million takeover of county Medicaid financing, Kilgarrin said it was probably "a little bit easier to pass it because of the rate being set by the Board of Equalization."

Republican Sen. Howard Peterson of Grand Island, whose motion to kill the bill failed on a 16-28 vote, argued that passage of LB 169 would ensure frequent special legislative sessions for the purpose of setting tax rates.

The Legislature's research office has taken 1980 census data and broken it down to conform to the state's 49 legislative districts. The result, published recently, is a 301-page statistical report on the socioeconomic barometers of the districts.

Among other things, the calculations show which senators generally represent wealth and which represent poverty.

The 4th legislative district, represented by Sen. Garry Hannibal of Omaha, is the richest in the state. Its average household income is $31,606.

ROUNDING OUT the list of five senators representing the richest districts: Glenn Goodrich of Omaha (20th District), Peter Hoagland of Omaha (6th District), Shirley Marsh of Lincoln (29th District) and Jerome Warner of Waverly (25th District).

Each of the 10 richest districts are in the Lincoln or Omaha areas. The 11th richest is the 42nd District, which includes North Platte. It's represented by Sen. Jim Pappas of Hershey.

The 11th legislative district, represented by Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha is the poorest in the state. Its average household income is $11,932.

After Chambers' district, these are the senators who represent the poorest districts in the state: Marge Higgins of Omaha (9th District), John DeCamp of Neligh (40th District), Karen Kilgarrin of Omaha (7th District), R. Wiley Remmers of Auburn (1st District).

Ag exports flagged by U.S. ships

By Cheryl Westcott
Nebraska Farm Bureau

American farmers, tired of subsidies and restrictions placed on trade with the European Economic Community and other countries, were pleased when the U.S. plan to sell wheat flour to Egypt, a traditional customer of France, was announced in January.

It seemed to be a proclamation to our trading partners that the United States was ready to play hardball.

The deal calls for 1 million metric tons of U.S. flour from Commodity Credit Corporation stocks to be exported at prices competitive with those of subsidized wheat flour available from France and other European countries.

THE WHEAT is being made available under a kind of "export payment-in-kind program."

But in February, the success, profit and wisdom of the sale seemed less certain. On Feb. 22, the White House announced that cargo preference requirements would apply to the Egyptian flour deal.

This means that 50 percent of the tonnage involved must be shipped on higher-cost American flag vessels, which currently charge about $60 more per ton to ship flour to Egypt than vessels of other nations.

This requirement would raise to 44 million bushels the total of CCC ownership.

EXPRESSED ANOTHER way, the cargo preference requirement adds $30 million to the cost of the sale. Invoking cargo preference clearly hurts the prospects for future sales of this kind and threatens the CCC blended interest export credit program.

Apparently the motive for invoking cargo preference is the Reagan administration's desire to support a strong merchant marine. And the American Farm Bureau Federation has urged, funds for this purpose should either come from the Maritime Administration's budget or from the Department of Defense, but in no case from the Department of Agriculture.

The implications of cargo preference are profound.

American Farm Bureau President Robert Delano told the administration that invoking cargo preference may set a precedent "that can be used as leverage to raise maritime subsidies on other farm exports and turn off foreign sales at a time when farmers need desperately to compete with foreign governments who are imposing their own subsidies on sales."

SECRETARY of Agriculture John Block responded with his belief that cargo preference should not apply to blended credit deals, because it would hurt U.S. attempts to negotiate blended credit packages.

Next, Sen. Rudy Boschwitz (R-MN) had planned to offer a floor amendment to the Ocean Shipping Act of 1962 to exempt cargo preference from the Egypt deal and possibly all CCC blended credit sales.

However, Boschwitz withdrew his amendment at the last minute before the Ocean Shipping Act was passed on March 1. He instead sought to attach his amendment to export promotion legislation being drafted by the Senate Ag Committee and was successful on March 2.

Hopefully the Boschwitz amendment will receive favorable consideration, when it reaches the full Senate, although the powerful maritime lobby can be expected to oppose it.

IF CONGRESS does not include the amendment, the success of the Egyptian flour deal — and similar future sales — is compromised, if not scuttled, before it's even begun.

Having a strong merchant maritime seems an admirable goal, but it is objective of the Defense Department or the Maritime Administration, not the Department of Agriculture.

USDA has its own goals, which include expanding export opportunities for the nation's farmers.

Judges' salary hikes unjustified

Last Monday the legislature once again took up the issue of judges' salaries.

On a vote of 25-15, LB 269 was advanced to the Select File.

If passed, the bill will give the judges what amounts to an increase in salary of almost 26 percent.

I DON'T BELIEVE such a substantial raise is justified at this time. Almost anywhere you look, workers are taking cuts in pay in order to keep their jobs.

Iowa Beef employees went back to work with a cut in pay; the Cudahy and Schuyler plants have closed, leaving hundreds out of work; farmers and small businessmen are struggling to stay in business.

I know judges work hard and face an ever increasing caseload, but I think we must keep things in perspective. In 1979, the judges of the Supreme Court were making $43,000 a year. From 1981 to the present, their salary has been $48,315.

Under LB 269, they would make approximately $60,862 by January, 1984. County judges' salaries would increase from $28,500 in 1979 to around $51,733 under this bill.

ADD TO THIS the free office space, clerical help, library facilities and retirement program, which come with the job. Judges may not make as much money as some attorneys, but when you take these extras into consideration, things tend to even out. At any rate, you can see that judges are really not doing too bad.

senator merle von minden

LB 169 survived a kill motion Wednesday and advanced to Final Reading on a vote 27-18. This bill would take the power to set the sales and income tax rates away from the Board of Equalization and give it to the Legislature.

Under LB 169, the Legislature could pass any program it desired and then raise our taxes to fund it.

IT IS FAR more prudent and responsible to look at what the tax rates are, determine how much money there is to spend, and then work within our budget limitations.

If this bill passes, there will be no budget limitations. The Legislature already has a difficult time reducing spending when it is needed. Now they will have no incentive to do so.

A bill of importance to retailers advanced to Select File on Tuesday. Present law provides that a retailer can withhold 3 percent from the amount of taxes he collects on his sales as a collection fee.

LB 571 would set the rate at 3 percent of the first $5,000 collected each month and 1 percent of that collected in excess of $5,000.

ALTHOUGH the bill probably won't affect most of the businesses in my district, I think it will lead, sooner or later, to a cut in the percentage for those who collect less than $5,000 per month.

This is just another attempt to indirectly raise revenue for the state. Some may question the necessity of reimbursing retailers for collecting the tax, but I don't think the state could find a cheaper method.

The Legislature also advanced LB 454 to Final Reading on Wednesday. Passage will remove the ceiling on interest which banks may charge for credit card balances.

The current ceiling is 18 percent. The bill would change the rate to any amount agreed to by the parties.

LB 533, which authorizes the University of Nebraska to spend state funds to establish a regional veterinary college, was killed by committee on Tuesday.

However, on Thursday, the Legislature voted 33-8 to put the bill on General File despite the committee action.

Passage of the bill will allow the state to begin construction with the appropriated funds and a matching federal grant.

Proponents of the bill are afraid that if we don't start building now, the college will not be built, because of the possibility of losing federal funds.

The dead cow

Surplus cheese is nothing more than the bait in a bigger government welfare trap.

And, though it is not fashionable to oppose food handouts, there is little doubt that the U.S. Department of Agriculture's surplus commodities giveaway program is ill-conceived.

There is something seriously wrong with a country that operates on a rob Peter to pay Paul policy.

The sacred-cow program is nothing more than misbegotten government welfare plan that is one in a long line of decisions designed to milk the taxpayer.

In addition, there is something seriously wrong with a taxpaying citizenry that condones paying bureaucrats with tax dollars to buy cheese with tax dollars and to fabricate, at a cost to taxpayers, a fallacy that it is free.

No one would deny this country's low-income families the nutrition and nourishment needed to survive, but there are many who, by their actions, continually deny the taxpayer's right to survive an ever increasing tax burden.

Common sense dictates that you can only milk a cow so long before she dries up. And, once dry, it's a long time between drinks.

It would seem, however, that the point is lost on not only the government bureaucrats, but also on the cow that's being milked by this, and countless other welfare-state programs — the American taxpayer.

Furthermore, continued approval of the baited welfare program by city officials, without any official action on their part to halt the government's double-dipping habit, is irresponsible.

The city's second-time-around syndrome, rationalized by some empty-headed rhetoric about feeding the hungry, is only baiting the welfare trap to catch more taxpayers for an endless, expanding experiment in bread-line boondoggles.

That kind of myopic handout mentality, though common, ill-serves the public interest.

And, it's time so-called public servants were forced to account for their actions.

It's time to tell them you can't milk a dead cow.

Half a loaf

Half a loaf, of course, is better than none. But what about half-solutions? Are they solutions?

Americans confronted with the greatest crisis in Social Security in half a century should ask whether Congress is going to deal with the whole problem, or perhaps only half of it.

The most immediate problem is already upon us. Unless the system's reserve funds are augmented, the government will not have enough money on hand to cover all of the retirement and survivor benefit payments beginning with checks for July of this year.

The $200 billion system spends $17,000 more a minute than it takes in, at current levels. Between now and 1989 — the short-term, the system faces shortfalls of $150 to $200 billion, and over the long-term (75 years) $1.6 trillion.

Our only choices are to raise taxes again or gradually to reduce costs of the program. In the long-term, for example, a gradual increase in the retirement age as Americans live longer would practically eliminate the shortage by reducing future costs.

Few issues affect more Americans. Social Security long ago ceased to be a problem of the elderly.

Although one in seven Americans receives a benefit check of one kind or another, 90 percent of the workforce pays Social Security taxes. Many families pay more Social Security taxes than income taxes.

Thanks to the National Commission on Social Security Reform which issued its landmark report on Jan. 15, Congress has a bipartisan, compromise set of recommendations which offer a necessary beginning or basis for restoring full solvency to the system.

Thus, Congress needs to seek, not a half loaf, but solutions to stabilize the system into the second half of the next century.

WAKEFIELD'S GIRLS stretch out before practice.

Wakefield draws 25 girls

Wakefield High School faced an unusual predicament this spring. Because of the large number of girls out for track, the school had to purchase new uniforms.

Coach Dennis Wilbur's squad consists of 25 individuals. Of those 25 athletes, seven are returning lettermen.

The list of lettermen consists of two seniors and five juniors.

THE TWO SENIOR lettermen are Cheryl Engstedt and Dilyn Byers. Engstedt will compete in the hurdles and intermediate races. Byers, who lettered two years ago but sat out last season with an injury, will compete in intermediate races.

The four juniors are Susan Rouse, Trish Willers, Michele Meyer, Michelle Rischmueller and Debi Meyer. Rouse will compete in the sprints, Willers will run the intermediate and distance races. Meyer will compete in intermediates, Rischmueller will run distance events and Meyer will be in intermediates.

Some other promising individuals are freshmen Susan Stelling, Bobbi Peterson, Kristal Clay, Leigh Johnson and Kristi Miller. Stelling will compete in intermediates, the high jump, long jump and hurdles. Peterson is a distance runner. Clay will compete in sprints and field events. Johnson and Miller will participate in sprints and intermediates.

Wilbur is new to girls track after coaching the boys last season. He said many girls have shown good interest in the sport and adds that some talented freshmen are members of this year's team.

The Trojans were scheduled to open their season today (Thursday) in the Laurel-Concord Relays but the event has been postponed until May 2 because of the weather.

Season schedule:
Thursday, April 7—Wayne State College Invitational, 10 a.m.
Wednesday, April 13—Wakefield Invitational at Wayne State, 10 a.m.
Tuesday, April 19—Homer Invitational at Homer, 12:30.
Tuesday, April 26—Winside Invitational at Wayne State, 1 p.m.
Monday, May 2—Laurel-Concord Relays at Wayne State, 11 a.m.
Thursday, May 5—Lewis & Clark Conference meet at Wayne State, 9 a.m.
Thursday, May 12—District meet at Lyons, 9 a.m.

Laurel boys lack experience

Inexperience will be a factor as the Laurel boys track team opens its season next week. The season opener will be delayed a week because the annual Laurel-Concord Relays, which were originally scheduled today, have been postponed until May 2 due to the weather.

Coach John Jonas has 24 individuals on his squad, including five returning lettermen. With eight freshmen and eight sophomores out for track, the team will be young. Several seniors are also out for the first time in their careers so experience won't be on the Bears' side. Jonas figures his team's strength should be middle distances and distances.

THE LIST of returning lettermen includes seniors Mike Jonas, Lathan Asbra, Shane Heydon and Scott Curry and sophomore Jim Peterson. Jonas will run the 800, 1,600 and 3,200. Asbra will compete in the discus and 4x800 relay. Heydon and Curry will run the 400, 800 and 4x800 relay and Peterson will compete in the 1,600 and 3,200.

Some promising athletes are sophomores Marly Jonas, Troy

Heitman and Scott Rath. Jonas will throw the shot put and discus. Rath will run the 800, 4x800 relay and hurdles, and Heitman will compete in the hurdles, high jump and relays.

Seniors Cory Linn, Don Helms and Bill Keifer are out for the first time. Larry Dybdal is the only junior on the team.

Jonas said several other athletes could be promising. Other members of the team are Duane Anderson, Terry Anderson, Erick Christiansen, Jeff Curry, Steve Dybdal, David Helms, Brent Heydon, Jim Hubbell, Dean Jones, Derek

Lineberry and Randy Prescott

Season schedule:
Friday, April 8—Wayne State Invitational, 10 a.m.

Seven lettermen

Baseball players join Trojan team

Seven lettermen and several former baseball players are expected to form the nucleus of this year's Wakefield track team.

The elimination of baseball as a high school sport at Wakefield has given boys track coach Merlin Lahm some added talent. Lahm is in his first year as boys coach after switching from the girls team.

With the returning lettermen and new team members, Lahm should have good balance in the running events.

OF THE SEVEN lettermen, two are sprinters and four are middle or long distance runners. Seniors Rod Nixon and Mark Borg are returning sprinters. Nixon is Wakefield's only returning state qualifier. Seniors Gary Tullberg and Brent Vander Veen, junior Brian Obermeyer and sophomores Ken Meyer and Joey Borg are the returners in the middle distances and distances.

Converted baseball players who are expected to help out include sprinters Jeff Coble (junior), Wayne Guy (junior) and Brian Soderberg (sophomore), and distance runner Mike Clay (senior).

Senior Jon Stelling and

freshman Jason Erb are hopefuls in the shorter races. Freshmen Dave Webb and Kiri Roberts and senior exchange student Ignacio Cuadrado will be the other competitors in the middle and long distance races.

Wakefield's weight people are senior Paul Schopke, senior Ted Tullberg and freshman Bryon Kubik.

THE TROJANS were scheduled to open their season today (Thursday) in the Laurel-Concord Relays but the event has been postponed until May 2.

Season schedule:

sports briefs

Scotus Relays are moved back

Wayne High boys and girls track teams were forced to stay home Wednesday when the Scotus Relays were postponed due to the weather.

The event has been rescheduled April 9. The Wayne girls will compete in the event but the Wayne boys, who will participate in the April 8 Wayne State Invitational, won't attend.

Women's captains meeting scheduled

A captains meeting of the Wayne Women's Softball Association is planned at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 7 in the Board of Directors Room at State National Bank.

All teams that would like to play in the league must have representatives at the meeting.

Laurel Relays are postponed

The Laurel-Concord Relays, originally scheduled for today (Thursday), have been postponed because of the snowstorm and rescheduled for May 2 at the Wayne State College track.

Laurel track coach John Jonas said all of the teams originally scheduled to compete in the meet are still tentatively planning to participate in the May 2 meet.

Wayne State postpones activities

Several Wayne State College athletic events scheduled this week have been postponed due to the weather.

Tuesday's softball games between Wayne State and Nebraska Wesleyan have been tentatively rescheduled on May 3. Wednesday's softball games at Peru State have been moved to April 14.

The WSC home track meet with Morningside, Dordt College and South Dakota has been postponed indefinitely.

FCA banquet, Brown visit delayed

Saturday's snowstorm forced postponement of the Northeast Nebraska Fellowship of Christian Athletes banquet. Todd Brown, former Nebraska University football star, was scheduled to speak at the 7 p.m. banquet Saturday night.

The banquet has been rescheduled at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 6 in the Wayne State College Student Union. The event is sponsored by the Wayne High and Wayne State FCA organizations.

Sports errors are corrected

A couple of errors in recent sports stories were brought to our attention this week.

The name of Jason Cote was inadvertently omitted from the list of second place winners in the story about the Wayne Jaycee Wrestling Tournament. Jason placed second in Class 1 for grades 5-6.

His name was included in the breakdown of results by age and division but not in the main article.

In a separate article, some results were not included in a story about Wayne Swim Club place winners in the Midwest McDonald's Junior Olympics.

The list which was given to The Wayne Herald had Ann Perry placing first in the 100-yard IM. It did not include her third place finish in the 100 free, her fourth place finish in the 100 fly or her fifth place finish in the 50 back.

Karl Lutt's results on the same list of place winners did not include her third place finish in the 100 IM or her fourth place finish in the 50 free.

10,000 meter run planned

Hart Beverage Company and the YMCA of Siouxland have announced June 4 as the date for the fourth annual Pepsi Challenge 10,000 Meter Series Run in South Sioux City.

Medals will be presented to the top three finishers in each of 12 categories. The top male and female finishers will receive plaques, plus all-expense-paid trips to the national Pepsi Challenge 10,000 Meter Finals in New York City on July 3.

All competitors in the race will receive a free Pepsi Challenge 10,000 Meter Series t-shirt, a free 4-month subscription to RUNNER magazine, and free post-race refreshments.

Pre-registration for the race is recommended. The entry fee prior to May 30 is $6 per runner ($5 for Siouxland Runners Club members); after that date, registration is $9. Details and entry forms are available from Paul Schneider, YMCA of Siouxland, 722 Nebraska Street, Sioux City, 51101. (712) 252-3276.

The clinic, which runs from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., will also feature guest lecturers, demonstrations, small group sessions and films, along with a complete discussion of rule changes and a session on dealing with problem players. The registration fee is $30, and attendance will be limited.

Randy's Recap

By Randy Hascall

New York blues

I've said before that I feel the expansion of the NCAA Tournament is hurting both national basketball tournaments. But, that didn't stop me from following the Nebraska Cornhuskers in the NIT.

I was one of the fortunate ones who watched the Huskers pound Texas Christian in Lincoln last Thursday. I ran into quite a few other spectators from Wayne.

Believe me, the team that won that game wasn't the same one that lost to DePaul in Monday's semifinal game. Nebraska looked tremendous on Thursday but looked miserable during Monday's game.

The Big Red got off to a real slow start and didn't play anywhere near their capability in the entire game. Still, they played close and even tied the score at one point. Any kind of a surge would have surely given the Huskers the victory.

Nebraska's free throw shooting was a disaster. The Huskers outshot DePaul from the field but struggled at the line. Dave Hoppen uncharacteristically missed 8 free throws and Stan Cloudy hit only 2 of 13 field goals.

Against TCU, Cloudy was unstoppable and Hoppen was tough. Everyone has a poor game, it's just too bad that the whole team played subpar at New York.

Nebraska deserves a lot of credit this season. The fans who followed the Huskers all year are a plus to the program and recruiting. Moe Iba is proving that he is one of the finer coaches in the Big Eight.

With the addition of a couple of fine recruits, Nebraska should be even tougher next season.

Oops, Missouri

My guesses on the NCAA Final Four field made prior to the season weren't too good. And my list of teams to watch out for wasn't any better. Louisville was the only team on that list of four to reach the Final Four. I said that Kentucky and Arkansas could surprise a few teams and both just about knocked off Louisville.

Just a couple of weeks ago, I warned that Missouri could be a contender in the NCAA tourney if the Tigers could get past Houston. Next time, I'm going to look at the NCAA pairings before I say anything like that.

In sneaks Iowa. Now, I'm not a big Iowa follower like a lot of people around here are but I have seen them play enough on television and followed their season closely enough to know that they can beat any team in the country when they are hot.

If they would have played their best they could have won the NCAA tourney. I also know that they are probably the most inconsistent major college team in the country. On their off-nights they lost to some interior teams.

The Hawkeyes knocked Missouri from the tournament by dominating the Tigers. I felt Missouri played poorly in that game but part of that was the result of Iowa's performance and quality. The Hawks deserved to win.

I received a letter from Kenneth Dahl of Clear Lake, Iowa this week and he makes sure that I eat my words. Part of it goes like this:

"Were you possibly forgetting about an obvious major hurdle? I realize as you do, that the Iowa 'Hawks' have been up and down like a yo-yo this year, but any team that can beat Indiana twice should never be overlooked."

"I had planned to write to you before Iowa routed Missouri last weekend but didn't and it's possible that by the time you receive this the Hawks may be sent back home from Kansas City, but I still wanted you to know that we read your column here in Iowa."

Well Kenny, I blew it and I admit it. I promise I'll never overlook the Hawkeyes again. They did lose to Villanova but they still got by the Tigers and I have to give them credit. Next year, the Huskers might run into those Hawks in the NCAA.

Now, that Iowa's Lufe Olson has reportedly resigned to take a coaching job at Arizona I wonder who will be coaching them next season.

Medal winners to lead Winside

Two state medal winners return to solidify the Winside boys track squad.

Junior John Hawkins competed in the 100 and 200-meter dashes at last year's state meet and placed sixth in the 100. Senior Jon Melerhenry tied for sixth place in the high jump.

First year track coach Mark Freburg said those two individuals should be his team's leading scorers again this season.

FIVE OTHER lettermen should add to the Wildcats' chances. Senior Dan Broekemeier will compete in the sprints and relays, junior Scott Janke will compete in the shot put and discus, sophomore Kevin Falk will also compete in the weight events, junior Dan Mundill will participate in the high jump, sprints and relays and senior Brian Bowers will run the mile.

Eighteen individuals are out for track at Winside this year. Freburg said seniors Tony Woerdemann and Shaun Boldt are hard workers and have potential. "I don't know how our younger athletes will be."

The coach said his team shows fair speed and might do well in relay events. "We have a good chance to qualify some people for state," he added.

Season schedule:

- April 8—Wayne State College Invitational, 10 a.m.
- April 13—Wakefield Invitational at Wayne State, 8:30.

Four lettermen back for young Cats

With only one senior and two juniors on the team, the Winside girls track squad is young. Four lettermen return for the Wildcats.

Patli Langenberg, the team's only senior, will run in the relays. Other letter winners are: junior Susie Peterson in the 100 and 200-meter dashes and relays; sophomore Missy Jensen in the high jump, relays and 400; and sophomore Tammy Brudigan in the 200, 400 and relays.

Those four individuals formed last year's state-qualifying mile relay team.

The team's other junior is Rhonda Severson in the shot put and discus. Sophomore Trisha Topp and freshman Kay Melerhenry also will compete in the shot and discus.

TWO FRESHMEN and a sophomore fill the other positions on the team. The freshmen are Teresa Brudigan and Jill Boldt. Becky Janssen is the sophomore. Winside coach Jim Winch said he is not yet sure in which events those three individuals will compete.

The Wildcats were scheduled to compete today in the Laurel-Concord Relays but that meet has been postponed until May 2.

Winch said his team should be strong in the sprint relay and mile relay. Other strong points should include Jensen in the high jump, Brudigan in the 200 and 400 and Severson in the discus.

Season schedule:

- April 13—Wakefield Invitational at Wayne State, 8:30.
- April 19—Beemer Invitational at Wayne State, 1 p.m.

Weights may be Bears' best

The weight events should be strong for this year's Laurel girls track squad. Coach Doug Siepkas has 16 girls on the team which is scheduled to open its season next week in the Wayne State Invitational.

The Bears originally were set to open their season today (Thursday) in the Laurel-Concord Relays but weather moved that meet back to May 2.

Four lettermen are back to strengthen this year's squad. Siepkas said his team is young and lacks experience.

high jump. Lindsay will compete in the mile relay, 400 and 800.

Other seniors on Laurel's team are Sandy McCorkindale in the shot put and discus and Marcine Rath in the sprints.

Siepkas is hoping some first timers will come on strong for the Bears. Junior Carol Osborne will participate in the high jump and sprints, junior Paula Selbert will compete in the 800 and 1,600, sophomore Debbie Kint will throw the shot and discus, sophomore Renee Vanderhelden will high jump and run the sprints and sophomore Theresa Anderson will run the sprints.

Stage came on strong in those events late last season. Thompson alternated on last year's fine two-mile relay team but the other three team members graduated.

"We are young and have a lot of inexperience. We have people who haven't run before," said Siepkas.

Season schedule:

- Thursday, April 7—Wayne State Invitational, 10 a.m.
- Friday, April 15—Wakefield In-invitational at Wayne State, 8:30.

Tuesday, April 19—Beemer Invitational at Wayne State, 1 p.m.

Tuesday, April 26—Winside Invitational at Wayne State, 11 a.m.

Monday, May 2—Laurel-Concord Relays at Wayne State, 9 a.m.

Thursday, May 5—Lewis & Clark Conference meet at Wayne State.

Thursday, May 12—District meet.

RETURNING LETTERMEN are senior Patsy Thompson, senior Kim Sherry, junior Carla Stage and sophomore Carl Lind-say.

Thompson will compete in distance races, the 800-meter run and the two-mile relay. Sherry will compete in the sprints and long distances. Stage will compete in the shot put, discus and

OTHER FRESHMEN are Michelle Joslin and Nancy Dempster in distance races, Janelle Anderson and Michelle Loberg in sprints and hurdles and Shelly Bus in the shot and discus.

According to Siepkas, the shot put and discus should be strong areas for the Bears. He said

WSC receives federal funding notification

Wayne State College (WSC) has received notification of tentative funding levels for the 1983-84 school year from the U.S. Department of Education's office of student financial assistance.

According to Chuck Kay, director of financial aid at WSC, a total of $124,500 will be available to students through college work-study programs. Kay said $221,831 will be available for loans through the National Direct Student Loan program, and $52,870 will be awarded to students through Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants.

KAY ALSO anticipates that over 800 students will receive Pell Grant awards totaling $900,000, and an additional 1,200 students will receive Guaranteed Student Loans worth $2.5 million.

State aid sources will add another $300,000 toward the expenses of college students, and $30,000 in scholarships will be provided through the Wayne State Foundation.

KAY SAID the total of these sources of aid to students at Wayne State College for the 1983-84 school year will be about $4.5 million, which he added is "absolutely great."

Students who have yet to apply for financial aid for next year can pick up financial aid forms at Kay's office, room 202 of the Hahn Administration Building on the WSC campus.

Education and the media

DEAN BILSTEIN OF WAYNE Radio KTCH talks to an education specialist class at Wayne State College. Bilstein, along with Wayne Herald co-editor LaVon Anderson, spoke to the class last Wednesday night on education and the media. Since the program was approved last fall, several students have begun work on their education specialist (Ed.S.) degrees at Wayne State. The Ed.S. degree is an advanced degree beyond the master's level which prepares students for superintendent and other central office positions in schools.

Faculty profile

In comparison to the students he's worked with in the eastern United States, Dr. Fred Webber thinks Wayne State College students are the more genuine.

He also likes the diversity of the faculty and the size of the college and town of Wayne.

DR. WEBBER has been professor of math at Wayne State since 1965. Before coming here, he taught high school math in Montana, was an instructor of math at Bowling Green University in Ohio, and a graduate assistant in math and education at Indiana University.

He also taught at Gauhati University in India. He earned his bachelor of science degree from East Montana College in 1958, his master's and education specialist degrees in 1962 and 1964 from Bowling Green University, and his doctor of education degree from Indiana University in 1971.

WHEN HE'S not in the classroom, Webber likes to travel, hunt, garden, and collect coins. He also has an interest in a farm, he said.

Dr. Webber is a member of the Lions Club, Men's Club, St. Mary's Church, serves as treasurer of St. Mary's School Board, is corresponding secretary for Kappa Mu Epsilon math honorary, and belongs to the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, the Nebraska Association of Teachers of Mathematics, and the National, Nebraska, State College and Wayne State Education Associations.

He also is a negotiator for the SCEA and his wife, Connie, have two children, Susan, 7, and Stephen, 5.

Foreign language department planning Culture Day at WSC

In a group effort to increase awareness and importance of foreign languages and appreciation for many cultures, the Wayne State College department of foreign languages will sponsor Culture Day on Saturday, April 9, in the WSC Student Center.

Culture Day activities will begin at noon with a $2.75 luncheon and several speakers.

Included will be state Senator Steve Willata of Omaha, and Dr. Roberto Esquenazi-Mayo, director of the Institute for International Studies and coordinator.

THROUGHOUT the day there will be cultural displays in the Student Center, and several folkloric dance groups will perform.

Scheduled to appear at the Irish dancers from O'Neill, Czech dancers from Clarkson, Italian dancers from Omaha, and a troupe called the Omaha Dancers which represents several different cultures.

A schedule of the performances will be available that day. A special event for school children attending Culture Day will be a "sneak preview" featuring excerpts from the upcoming children's play, "The Magic Horn of Charlemagne," presented by the WSC theatre department.

The preview will be at 4 p.m. in Ramsey Theatre of the Fine Arts Center.

A PARADE of costumes will be held at 4 p.m. and prizes will be awarded for the best costumes.

Anyone can enter the parade, and the public is encouraged to participate. Anyone wishing to participate in the parade of costumes should contact the WSC foreign language department.

The WSC theatre dance class, under the direction of Mary Halverstadt, will give an afternoon performance, and will be followed by dance demonstrations by foreign exchange students from such countries as Japan and Malaysia.

"TRAVELOGUE" movies depicting different countries will be shown from noon on in the Student Center, and a special movie presentation of "The Man of Iron" will be at 7 p.m. in Ley Theatre in the Education Building.

"The Man of Iron" offers insight to the tumult of recent events in Poland, and features the appearance of Solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

The movie will be introduced by Dr. Bobby Lupack, a WSC faculty member who returned from Poland last year after teaching there on a Fulbright Scholarship.

IN THE evening, WSC students can attend a dance from 8 until midnight. There will be a 50 cent charge, and proceeds will be used for foreign language scholarships.

All the events of Culture Day will be in the WSC Student Center unless otherwise noted.

With the exception of the evening dance, they are all free and open to the public, and are designed to be fun and educational for children and adults.

Microcomputer Fair slated

Educational applications of microcomputers will be emphasized at a Microcomputer Fair, to be held Friday, April 8 at Wayne State College (WSC), according to Carole Schmidt, instructor of information services.

The fair will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., and will be held in the Instructional Resources Center, located on the second floor of the U.S. Conn Library on the Wayne State Campus.

PRESENTATIONS will begin on the hour, Schmidt said, in Room 201 of the library. At 10 a.m., Wayne Middle School Librarian Faunell Bennett will talk about "Administering NABELS on the Microcomputer."

Literacy Through Graphics." Fred Hofer from Educational Service Unit, in Fremont will speak on "Microcomputer Usage in ESU 2 Schools" at 11 a.m.

"Don't Bother Me - I'm Learning," a videotape showing student, teacher and parent involvement in an elementary classroom using microcomputers, will be shown at noon.

At 1 p.m., Lyle George from the Computer Farm in Wayne will demonstrate "Word Processing," and at 2 p.m. Wayne Middle School Librarian Faunell Bennett will talk about "Administering NABELS on the Microcomputer."

IN ADDITION to these sessions, a dozen sales representatives will display their wares at the fair, and will be available to answer questions, Schmidt added.

These salesmen will represent the Computer Farm of Wayne; 2001 Computer Store of Norfolk; A-B-Disk and I.B.M. Corporation of Sioux City, Iowa; Milliken of Columbus; Stenograph School Supply of Lincoln; Midland Media System of Bellevue; and Digital Corporation, Encyclopedia Britannica, Eyegate Media, Radio Shack, and Software Source, all of Omaha.

THE FAIR is free of charge and open to all WSC students and faculty, as well as the general public.

Those attending will be asked to make recommendations to help the library staff evaluate and select new materials, Schmidt said.

Coffee and cookies will be served during the fair, she added, and a door prize will be given away.

Commendation Professor cited for work with WSC Arboretum

Dr. Charles Maier, professor of biology at Wayne State College (WSC), recently received a Nebraska Statewide Arboretum (NSA) Commendation for his work with the WSC Arboretum.

The award culminates five years of work with the WSC Arboretum for Maier, who served as curator and now serves as botanist.

Earl Larson, director of WSC physical plant, is the current curator.

SINCE MAIER began his work on the arboretum at WSC, over 300 trees and shrubs have been planted north of the campus to create a Nature Center.

The Nature Center includes an ecological study area, a 2-mile jogging trail, and a soon-to-be marked nature trail in Ecological Study Area planted with prairie plants.

When WSC applied for membership in the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum, there were 83 species of trees and shrubs at the WSC site.

At this time, there are about 135 species, Maier said, and he hopes to eventually establish over 200 species of trees and shrubs on campus.

LABELING THESE plants also is part of Maier's work with the WSC Arboretum. About 300 of the plants on campus have been marked, and about that many remain to be labeled.

The Biology Club, some of Maier's biology classes, and Alpha Beta Sigma social fraternity have helped Maier with the labeling process, he noted.

The Willow Bowl Trail also was recently completed under Maier's direction. Various points are marked by wooden, numbered posts, and an accompanying brochure guides the tourist through the campus, describing the various plants along the way.

This trail was recognized in "The Seed" magazine recently, Maier said. The magazine noted that "The active interest of the administration, Larson, and Maier has created a useful and educational resource for the campus and the community."

Maier and the WSC Arboretum also were awarded $300 recently by Wayne State College as a "Program of Excellence."

Winning the Commendation Award from the NSA, Maier explained, was like winning an Academy Award in that so many other people helped to make the WSC Arboretum a success.

Some of these people include WSC President Ed Elliott, who recommended the award for "Program of Excellence"; Max Lundstrom, dean of student services, who initiated the project; Charles Kay, director of financial aids, who helped with fund raising; the Wayne State Foundation; and individuals who made donations of money or plants through private contributions and the "Plant Two Trees" program.

'Spring Skies' showing

"Spring Skies," a program highlighting a number of bright and interesting objects in the nighttime sky, is now showing at Wayne State College's Dale Planetarium on Sunday afternoons at 3:30 p.m., through April 17.

The planetarium is located at the south entrance of the Carhart Science Building at Wayne State.

The presentation will emphasize the re-emergence of the brightest planets visible from earth, and the most recent imagery provided by NASA's interplanetary probes.

The showings are free and open to the public. Special presentations can be arranged for school groups and organizations.

Culture Day to be held

Wayne State College's foreign language department will sponsor Culture Day on Saturday, April 9, on the college campus.

Activities begin at noon with a $2.75 luncheon and special speakers including Senator Steve Willata of Omaha and Dr. Roberto Esquenazi-Mayo from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Several folkloric dance groups performing throughout the day include the Irish dancers from O'Neill, Czech dancers from Clarkson, Italian dancers from Omaha, and a troupe called the Omaha Dancers which represent several cultures.

Other events include a preview of the upcoming WSC children's play, "The Magic Horn of Charlemagne," a parade of costumes, a performance by the WSC theatre dance class, and travelogue movies.

A dance in the evening will end the day's activities. With the exception of the dance which charges a 50 cent admission, all other activities throughout the day are free and open to the public.

Speakers at conference

Jim Paige and Hilbert Johs of Wayne State College were speakers at the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics Conference held March 24-26 in Sioux Falls, S. D.

Their presentation was on "Fractions for the Exceptional Learner."

The regional conference drew over 1,000 elementary, secondary and college mathematics teachers from the seven-state North Central Area.

Easter message reminder of Jesus' presence

In the following Easter message provided for readers of The Wayne Herald, the Rev. Kenneth A. Edmonds, pastor of the First United Methodist Church, reminds Christians that Jesus is a living and loving presence.

grave so as to contain the remains of its occupant.

"Make it as tight as you can. Call out the National Guard, patrol it night and day, just to see that this eccentric carpenter from Nazareth with his crazy ideas doesn't get loose."

What was there to fear? Dead men don't walk out of their graves. His friends buried him. Why would they want to extract a corpse from its resting place?

The music of a contemporary song tells it, "Yesterday he died for me, yesterday, yesterday he died for me, this is history."

Now, if that was all there was to it, what difference would that make? It was a grand display of self giving love, but that has been done by thousands.

I BELIEVE in yesterday. Yesterday he who said, "Destroy this temple and in three days I will build it again," unwrapped the cloth from around his head, left it neatly folded by the pillow and proceeded to leave his tomb empty and bare.

He talked with Mary. He walked with two pilgrims on the lonely Emmaus road. He was touched by a doubting Thomas. He ate fish with Simon.

They said it happened, those people who were there, and who am I to say that it didn't happen.

That was yesterday. Yesterday his closest friends were cringing cowards hiding behind the closed and bolted doors of an upper room.

Yesterday those same men became bold and daring crusaders walking into the mouth of martyrdom because they experienced the living presence of this Jesus who had been crucified, dead, and buried.

THE MUSIC continues. "Today he lives for me, today he lives for me, this is victory."

We are "NOW" conscious. What do we really care about yesterday. This is today.

Some men taken out of the bush country of South Africa were exposed to space technology. They were given a ride in a jet liner at 35,000 feet.

When they were interviewed about their impression of it all, everyone was astonished by what fascinated them most.

It was an ordinary water faucet. How could anyone get water out of a chrome pipe connected to a wall?

Most of their experience was a sort of a fairytale, but the faucet and water were "NOW."

They lived with thirst and the prospect of drought. They knew what it was to search for water. This faucet gave promise of life-giving water.

WHAT HAS yesterday to say to today. Where I live, where I work, where I play, where I am entertained, where I worship?

The jet planes will fascinate me, but what can touch me?

Death has a finality about it. It can inspire beautiful deeds and extract fond memories, but it cannot continue touching and healing.

Life can. Life is "NOW." Life is today.

SO IT WAS that day that people found that Jesus had become an inescapable living reality.

They went to the garden to weep, but he was not in the tomb. They went to a room to remember and he was there. They went fishing, and he was there. Everywhere they went they found his presence.

I know of yesterday, but today I can know a living presence of Jesus.

Today I sin and he helps me back on my feet. I have fears and he is my friend.

I am tempted and he is my strength. I have sorrow and he is my comfort.

Today, that faucet of life-giving water is in my room. I can turn it on and experience the refreshing and cooling water of his loving presence.

The music concludes, "This is mystery."

Leukemia in Children

Smoking is responsible for about 83 percent of lung cancer cases among men and 43 percent among women—more than 75 percent overall—warns the American Cancer Society.

Sun Safety
Avoid the sun between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., wear protective clothing and use a sun-screen preparation, advises the American Cancer Society.

"The retail market we're looking at is women between the ages of 25 and 54," said Brownell. "They make the greatest amount of buying decisions at the supermarket level.

Brownell said Waldbaums is looking at other markets, including institutions, stadiums, pubs and taverns, and airlines.

"We're even hoping to convince potato chip companies to be a distributor for the colored eggs," said Brownell.

BROWNELL SAID although some risk is involved in marketing the colored eggs, the Waldbaum company feels there is a demand for the product.

"There is a certain amount of risk," said Brownell, "but farmers face risks every day, too.

"We are selling a new concept to consumers and we need to educate them on that concept.

"Consequently, we're going to have to invest more money on consumer education."

THE WALDBAUM company, a major supplier of fresh and processed eggs from its own flock and other flocks in Iowa, South Dakota, Minnesota and Nebraska, was founded in 1950 by Milton G. Waldbaum.

DR. WALDBAUM, a practicing physician in Omaha, is chairman of the board. Dan Gardner is president and general manager in charge of day-to-day operations.

The company, which today employs over 350 persons, produces fresh eggs and a variety of egg products for noodle, cake mix and salad dressing industries, as well as bakers, confectioners and other food manufacturers.

In the late 1960's, Waldbaum and Gardner started Big Red Farms at Wakefield. Today, the company controls production from more than three million birds.

In addition, Gardner Growers Farm has five pullet growing houses each holding 60,000 chicks to supply layers. Contract flocks make up the balance necessary to keep the company supplied.

License was amended to reflect the name change to Donner Development Inc. with a manager's option.

According to Kloster, the manager's option places the Class B liquor license responsibility in the hands of an on-site store manager in the absence of the owners.

Council also passed a standard ordinance required by the Environmental Protection Agency to facilitate the funding of the federal and state grant that will help underwrite 80 percent of the city's soon-to-be-built waste-water treatment plant.

COUNCIL, IN what amounted to a financial formality, also approved the recall of $350,000 in combined utility revenue bond anticipation notes.

The recall was necessary, and preliminary, to the implementation of the city's newly adopted bonding plan for water and sewer improvements, including funding the municipal portion of the new treatment plant.

Before adjourning, Council approved plans and specs for bids, to be received by April 26, on a new digger-derrick for the city's electric department.

The city is splitting the bidding, publishing separate specs for the unit's chassis and for the derrick.

KLOSTER SAID the unit will replace two units in the department, one of which was sold last year.

The other, a 1973 digger, will be traded in on the new digger-derrick, he said. The other unit, sold by the city, was a department ladder truck.

Engineering estimates on the new unit come in at about $83,000, according to Kloster, who said the city had budgeted for $75,000 without the trade-in factor.

The new digger-derrick will be used to install poles and for top-of-the-post electrical line work, he said.

Council also accepted the resignation of George Macklin from the Villa Wayne board and approved Mayor Wayne Marsh's appointment of Norbert Brugger to fill the vacancy.

System

"FURTHERMORE, this system has the public address option that would allow the city to warn or inform people right in their neighborhoods on how long to stay off the system," Kloster said.

"The peak-load warning plan meets WAPA requirements," he added.

According to Kloster, the electronic warning system being reviewed by the city is radio-signal triggered, but has built-in protection against accidental set-off from such things as aircraft radio or garage-door openers.

"It also has a battery-backup system, if the power goes out completely," he added.

Kloster said that any one of the six proposed installations could be activated independently of the entire system.

"IF THE city was going to shut down the water system in a neighborhood for repairs, the residents in just that area could be informed without involving the entire city," he explained.

Kloster also noted that the towers could be activated on site or from the Police Department.

"As you can see, we have a very outdated, outmoded system in place right now," Kloster said.

"The new electronic systems have so much more to offer and are much more effective," he said. "If you approve of the joint-funding proposal, we can go ahead on preparations for plans and specs."

Kloster said he would like the city to go to bid on the system for an installation contract approval in late April or early May.

ACCORDING TO Kloster, the company promises 30 to 60-day delivery, which means "early summer installation."

Kloster said the new system would be "almost 100 percent foolproof," except for lightning because it has no moving parts.

He also told the Council that the city should require a minimum of a one-year warranty on such a system.

"These electronic systems are popular with the nuclear plant people since the NRC (Nuclear Regulatory Commission) has mandated on-site warning devices," Kloster continued.

Kloster also explained that the proposed warning system features fixed-speaker components that significantly reduce repair costs.

Council unanimously approved the proposal to prepare plans and specs for a new system.

Breeding for leanness in hogs may pay in future

Selecting breeding swine for leanness generally has slowed if not stopped in the last six years but possibilities for further progress are good.

This view is expressed by animal geneticist Gordon E. Dickerson of USDA's Agricultural Research Service (ARS). A member of the staff of the Roman L. Hruska U.S. Meat Animal Research Center, Clay Center, Dickerson conducts studies at Lincoln on the effects of genetic changes for alternative management, marketing and breeding systems.

The scientist suggests that future price incentives for producing lean pork eventually will lead to a decrease in the average percentage of fat in hog carcasses from the present plateau of about 30 percent. Chicken and turkey carcasses are in the range of 10 to 15 percent.

IT COSTS money to produce fat that consumers don't want.

A computer model of pork production that Dickerson and his colleagues at the University of Nebraska developed shows how genetic changes affect input costs and total retail value of meat that is produced. Post-doctoral geneticist Gary L. Bennett, graduate assistant Michael W. Tess and Dickerson observed that generally the most important swine breeding objective could be breeding for leanness.

There's one kicker. Breeding for leanness is not likely to become more important unless prices that farmers receive will be based on retail value of the meat rather than on live weight.

"If you're not being paid for lean value, little is gained by increasing leanness," says Dickerson. "One reason is that faster lean gain requires more protein feed supplement and increases cost of the hog's diet. Also leaner sows will have higher feed requirements."

Will there be a trend toward realistic premiums for leanness? The breeder has to try to look ahead. One way or another, Dickerson says, it seems that markets must move toward paying for the real meat value in market hogs.

A means of achieving more realistic prices could be widespread use of some trustworthy system of animal identification and carcass grading on the basis of lean yield, Dickerson says. However, until lean hogs become more prevalent or yield grading is generally practiced, many packers may be reluctant to discriminate on the basis of yield because of fear that producers may not bring enough hogs in to keep the individual packer's slaughter lines operating steadily at full tilt.

ALSO HOLDING back further movement toward leanness with pork stress syndrome (PSS) — a malady that causes death losses of hogs on their way to market and soft pork. But Dickerson says research at Iowa State University and in Europe is pointing to ways that this hindrance may be overcome.

PSS may result primarily from the expression of one major gene that can be identified by testing pigs with the anesthetic gas, halothane. Young pigs that have received the PSS gene from both parents become rigid under halothane testing. Further research on the halothane test will be needed to establish its usefulness as a selection tool to reduce the frequency of PSS in breeding stock, Dickerson says.

Bulging or double muscling has been associated with PSS. But it's not necessary to have bulging muscles to have a lean animal, the researcher says. Breeders who have selected for leanness by visual appraisal of muscling with backfat probes or ultrasonic techniques can help breeders in-identify lean hogs that don't necessarily have bulging muscles, Dickerson says.

If improvements in selection for leanness and payment of adequate premiums for lean come about, the consumer will benefit. For every pound of lean pork the producer consumes, there would be less overhead investment in feed and non-feed costs on the farm.

THE RESEARCHERS' production system model was used to indicate how a given reduction in percentage of carcass fat changes the cost of producing pork under various sets of conditions. Information in the model comes from multidisciplinary research on genetics, energy metabolism, physiology, meats, management and marketing.

According to the model, a 20 percent decrease in body fat content along with a 20 percent increase in growth rate in hogs marketed at a given age should reduce total costs per pound of carcass lean by about 14 percent. That's a 5 percent reduction in total costs per pound of live weight.

Assuming that the producer is getting paid for hams and pork chops instead of live weight, it's more important to make that decrease in fatness than it is to make that increase in growth rate, especially if marketing is at a fixed weight, says Dickerson. Moreover, the heritability for fatness is almost twice as high as it is for growth rate. However, without a premium for leanness, less fat actually increases costs and faster gains are beneficial only if pigs are marketed at the heavier weights for the same age.

"This research on modeling has toned down our excitement about growth rate, especially when the growth rate is associated with heavier sows with higher overhead costs," says Dickerson. "It has highlighted the potential importance of reducing fat and increasing litter size."

In breeds used to produce replacement crossbred gilts, increasing leanness is more important and faster growth is nearly as important as these goals are in breeds used only to sire market pigs. That's because of the byproduct market barrows produced with the gilt replacements.

Cattle inventory build up levels

Nebraska cattle producers should not be misled by initial bearish trade reaction to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's annual cattle inventory report, according to a University of Nebraska extension economist.

At Wellman noted that inventory estimates for nearly all classes of cattle and the 1982 calf crop estimate were somewhat above average guesses by trade observers ahead of the report. But Wellman said that fundamentally the report has positive implications for the cattle industry over the next couple of years.

The inventory estimates indicated the cyclical buildup in U.S. cattle numbers stopped last year after only three years of expansion from the 1979 cyclical low.

THE LEVELING off in numbers is contrary to earlier expectations that a buildup would continue into the mid-1980s, Wellman explained. That would have been the typical pattern of expansion, based on the history of the cattle industry.

Little change in beef production is expected this year and beef supplies appear unlikely to increase much during the 1984-85 period, he predicted. Stronger cattle prices in that period are likely, particularly if the general economy recovers later this year as expected and the upturn continues during 1984-85.

The NU economist said shorter-term implications of the report, however, are less favorable for cattle producers. The indication of larger-than-expected supplies of yearling-type steers and heifers for potential feeding or slaughter could keep feedlot placements at higher levels than expected this spring, Wellman pointed out. If so, feedlot marketings could remain above 1982 level during the last half of the year, he added.

The report estimated the number of cattle and calves on U.S. farms and ranches Jan. 1 at 115.2 million head, nearly the same as a year earlier. The number of cows that have calved was estimated at 49.1 million head, 2 percent below a year earlier, with beef cows down 3 percent and milk cows unchanged. Heifers for beef herd replacement were estimated at 4 percent below a year earlier and heifers for milk cow replacement were unchanged. The 1982 calf crop was estimated at 44.4 million head, down 1 percent from the previous year but somewhat larger than the preliminary estimate last July.

CATTLE NUMBERS in Nebraska were estimated at 7.2 million head, down 1 percent from Jan. 1, 1982. Beef cows in Nebraska were estimated at 2.03 million head, down 6 percent. Milk cows, at 121,000 head, were down 1 percent.

Wellman said the national decline in cow inventory reflects both larger cow slaughter during the past year and apparent movement of many heifers originally planned for the breeding herd to feedlots instead. Cow slaughter during 1982 at nearly 7.4 million head was 11 percent larger than in 1981. About 45 percent of the heifers held for herd replacement on Jan. 1, 1982, were either slaughtered or are presently on feed, in contrast to about 30 percent in the previous year.

The inventory estimates and the January quarterly cattle on feed report indicate steers and heifers weighing more than 500 pounds not on feed or held for herd replacement on Jan. 1 were about 3 percent above a year earlier. Calves not on feed were down 2 percent.

The decline in calf numbers was expected, Wellman said, but the increase in heavier weight cattle was surprising based on earlier inventory estimates and the large number of cattle placed on feed during the last half of 1982.

THE ECONOMIST said the decisions of cattle producers about the size of their breeding herds will be an important influence on beef supplies and cattle prices over the next few years. Liquidation of breeding stock would add to current slaughter and further reduce future beef production potential.

Further cutback in cattle inventories is not expected at this time, considering ample feed and roughage supplies and limited alternatives for use of resources in many areas, Wellman analyzed. It's possible that cattle inventories will hold close to present levels during the next couple of years, he concluded.

Breakthrough in swine nutrition announced

What is described as a breakthrough in soybean nutrition for swine was announced at the Midwest Section meeting of the American Society of Animal Science.

A study reported by M.A. Crenshaw, graduate student, and Murray Danielson, swine nutritionist at the University of Nebraska's North Platte Station, showed that sows during gestation can effectively utilize raw soybeans as the main source of supplemental protein compared to soybean meal.

And, more importantly, their study showed no detrimental effect from raw soybean consumption, but rather an increase in pigs weaned per litter.

Previous research reports have consistently indicated that raw soybeans retarded performance when fed to growing-finishing pigs. Growth inhibitors were reportedly responsible for the poor performance from raw soybean consumption.

However, the new research from NU's North Platte Station suggests that the growth inhibitors present in the raw soybeans are not a problem in mature breeding swine, since no differences in sow weight changes during gestation or lactation occurred between groups.

In addition, there were no differences in number of pigs farrowed alive, average birth or weaning weight. Crenshaw said that the group fed raw soybeans during gestation has a survival rate of 92 percent, while those on the soybean meal diet had a survival rate of 82 percent — or a 10 percent greater survival rate in favor of those sows fed raw soybeans during gestation.

Since raw soybeans contain less protein by weight than soybean meal, it requires more soybeans per ton of feed than if meal is used as the supplement. At the present time, however, it appears more economical to feed raw soybeans.

STORED GRAIN PROBLEMS

As the weather warms up I'm sure that there will be increasing problems with stored grains. This will be especially true this spring because much of the corn was stored at higher than desirable moisture.

Stored grain insects are inactive as long as grain temperatures are below 40 or 50 degrees F. As the grain is warmed in the spring and early summer, insects become more active, and in a range of 60 to 90 degrees reproduction and feeding increases rapidly. Careful observation of grain as it is warmed may prevent serious problems in late summer and early fall.

Grain should be examined every 14 days until temperatures reach 55 to 60 degrees, then every week. Take probe samples from at least four areas at bin walls (where grain will warm more rapidly), one from the center, and at least one on the surface.

Screen over grain grading sieves and check for live insects. When one or more weevils and/or grain borers or five or more borer bugs are found per quart of grain, some action should be considered. Grain can be moved and treated with premium grade malathion as it is augered into a new site, fumigated if it is to remain in an infested bin, or fed to livestock.

Malathion should protect grain up to nine months if the grain moisture is below 13 percent. The chemicals are broken down at higher moisture levels, and may not last more than three or four months in high moisture grain. Fumigation should not be considered until grain temperatures reach about 60 degrees F. At lower temperatures, fumigants are not reliable, or are very slow acting. When a decision is made that fumigation is the best answer, consider commercially applied fumigants.

In larger quantity bins, commercial fumigation may be less expensive and more effective than farmer applied fumigants. In any case, investigate the cost of self applied and commercially applied fumigants. Usually a few phone calls are sufficient.

You can borrow from ASCS office a complete set of equipment for checking stored grain for temperature, insects, and moisture.

POTATO PLANTING TIME

Whether you plant your home garden potatoes by the sign of the moon, by Good Friday, or later in the month, there are several points to consider.

Potato vines make a great deal of growth during cool spring weather. Therefore, if you are thinking about potatoes in your garden, plant them as soon as the weather permits.

Cut the tubers leaving one or two eyes per ounce of seed piece. Leave the seed pieces in a dark, cool place to callous overnight.

Insist on certified, disease free, seed potatoes. Seed pieces should be planted four inches deep, spaced one foot apart in the row and the rows should be spaced three to four feet apart, depending on cultivation procedures.

Seed pieces should be dusted with a suitable fungicide and protected from drying winds and hot sun until planted.

Oversupply should be cut

With initial estimates of acres enrolled under the Payment-in-Kind program in hand, University of Nebraska extension economist Roy Frederick said it appears the nation's farmers have "taken a pretty good-sized step towards solving the current grain oversupply situation."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture Tuesday afternoon released the number of acres enrolled in the acreage reduction program, and those figures show farmers across Nebraska will idle 4.4 million acres of corn and milo.

NEBRASKA BASE acreage for those crops runs about 10.4 million acres, Frederick said. Idled acres amount to about a 42 percent reduction.

Nationally, "we're talking about idling 39.4 million acres out of a 101 million acre base — that's a very large drop," he said.

Frederick said some of those acres would be marginal land, but with such a large enrollment, "it's going to involve some good acres."

Frederick said he had no doubts that production will be going down.

Iowa and Illinois, states with traditionally lower participations in acreage reduction programs than Nebraska, showed surprising signup levels, he said.

IOWA HAD 82 percent of its corn and milo acreage enrolled in one of the three program options, he said. Illinois farmers enrolled 73 percent of that state's corn-milo base acres, he said.

Last year, Frederick said, Illinois farmers enrolled only 18 percent of corn and sorghum acres in the Acreage Reduction Program (ARP). Moreover, there won't be much chance to back out after signup this year because PIK is an "ironclad" contract, he pointed out.

Wheat didn't show as large an enrollment as did corn and sorghum, probably because this year's crop is already in the ground. Nationally, about 35 percent of the acreage base will be idled. In Nebraska 30 percent of the base will be idled.

Basing price predictions on initial PIK enrollment estimates, Frederick said he expected a "positive price reaction."

While remaining cautious about prices at harvest time, Frederick predicted initial price gains for corn, wheat and sorghum.

IS A SECOND year of PIK needed? "Perhaps we won't need PIK next year. It depends on the weather effect on next year's harvest," he said.

Frederick said farm-supportive companies would benefit eventually from the reduced acreage. "Sales depend on more than what happens in one year for farm machinery," he explained, adding that farm equipment sales could begin to show improvement by mid-1983. However, the negative impact on seed corn and fertilizer sales will be quite dramatic, he said.

As for the political effects of PIK enrollment, Frederick said he hadn't heard any reaction from Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block, but that "I would think he should be quite happy."

Historically, the initial estimates of PIK enrollment indicate it may bring the highest level of any government acreage reduction program he said, with the 1956 Soil Bank program a possible exception.

Farmers across the country "probably have pulled more acres out of production than have ever been pulled out before," he said.

Lead Seminar is planned

The public is invited to participate in the festivities marking the final seminar of LEAD I, Friday, April 8. The banquet ($10 per person) will be at 6:30 p.m. at the Villager Motel, 5200 "O" Street, Lincoln. After dinner and a brief ceremony, keynote Charles Plumb, former Vietnam POW, will speak on "My America."

LEAD I is completing its two-year intensive leadership education program (fourteen 3-day resident seminars, a 2 week Study Travel Seminar (U.S.) and three weeks in Japan and China). LEAD II, another group of 30, is nearing the end of year one, and applications for LEAD III are now being processed.

Anyone interested in attending is asked to RSVP this week.

58 percent of farms in PIK

More than half of the farms in Wayne County are enrolled in acreage reduction programs according to the Wayne County Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service.

Figures released by ASCS Director Ray Butts show that 701 of the county's 1,209 farms will participate in the programs. The conserving use acres for corn and sorghum totals 45,451 acres. Seventy-one percent of the base acres are enrolled in the program.

A breakdown of the ASCS figures shows that 314 farms are enrolled in the 10 to 30 percent PIK program. Another 164 farms had their whole farms approved in the program. A total of 223 other farms are involved in a 20 percent acreage reduction program.

Crop insurance applications due

April 15 is the last day to apply for crop insurance for barley, corn, grain sorghum, oats and soybeans in Wayne County according to Vernon E. Overbeck director for the Lincoln Region of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC).

Crop insurance covers unavoidable loss of production from damage caused by adverse weather conditions, insects, plant disease, wildlife, earthquake or fire. "Insurance begins when the crop is planted," Overbeck stated.

Producers may choose from three coverage levels: 50-, 65-, or 75-percent of the established farm yield for insurance protection. Three optional price elections for valuing production lost or damaged also are available.

For additional information about the Individual Yield Coverage (IYC) plan, or to sign up, producers should contact their local, authorized crop insurance agent before the April 15 deadline.

Tractor test results given

The new Nebraska Tractor Test Data summary booklet, including nearly 200 tractor models, has been published and can be purchased at Cooperative Extension Service offices around the state.

The cost for single copies of the booklet is $1.50 plus mailing charges, with a sliding fee for larger quantities.

Tests conducted at the University of Nebraska Tractor Testing Laboratory measure power take off and drawbar performance, sound levels of various models and fuel efficiency.

The booklet contains abbreviated reports on all new tractors on the U.S. market, according to Louis Leviticus, NU Tractor Testing Lab chief engineer. "We had the highest power take-off measured so far in Nebraska and some of the best fuel economy measurements in Nebraska," he said.

Single copies of individual test reports, or a yearly subscription to tractor test reports as they are printed and the summary booklet at the end of each testing season, are available for a fee from the NU Tractor Test Laboratory, East Campus, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb. 68583-0832.

Insured oats, barley planting

April 30 is the final planting date for insured spring barley and oats in Wayne County, according to Vernon Overbeck, Director for the Lincoln Region of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC).

"Acres of barley and oats planted by April 30, insured by FCIC (or by a private company reinsured by FCIC), must be reported by May 31 to receive full crop insurance coverage," says Overbeck.

Acreage planted after April 30 must also be reported on the May 31 acreage report as being planted too late for insurance.

Farmers unable to plant prior to April 30 because of excess moisture conditions may sign a 20 day late planting agreement, which permits insurance coverage, but provides for a lower bushel-per acre guarantee due to the late planting," Overbeck explained.

Farmers wishing additional information about the new late planting agreement should contact their local, authorized crop insurance agent.

Swine project camp planned

4-Her's 12 years of age and older, 4-H parents and leaders are invited to attend a 4-H swine project camp to be held at the Northeast Station near Concord on April 8 and 9.

The program will start with registration from 5 to 6 p.m. on Friday, April 8 and close on Saturday about 3 p.m. Registration fee is $2 and should be paid by April 4. Additional information and registration forms are available at local Extension offices. The camp is being sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service. Program leaders are Mike Brumm, Extension Swine Specialist and Roy Stohler, 4-H Specialist.

Livestock judging scheduled

Livestock judging teams from Future Farmers of America high school chapters in Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, and Minnesota, will be competing for trip honors in the Sioux City Invitational, scheduled for Friday, April 8 at the Sioux City Stockyards.

Approximately 50 schools from the four-state area are expected for the 33rd annual event, one of the Midwest's largest and oldest FFA livestock judging events, according to LeRoy Barnes, contest manager. Each school is permitted to enter two judging teams as opposed to a limit of one in past years.

Contestants will place eight classes of livestock: two divisions of slaughter steers, slaughter heifers, feeder steers, barrows, gilts, slaughter lambs, and feeder pigs. In addition to team and individual awards, the three highest scoring senior students will each receive a $200 L. Van Kuhl scholarship to be used at any school offering agricultural education.

The scholarships are presented in honor of Kuhl, former Sioux City Stockyard's president who worked closely with earlier contests prior to his retirement in 1980.

the farmer's wife

Folks, the price of steak just went up! This past weekend was a stockman's nightmare. Remember, I said little calves like to arrive in snowstorms. This one was the worst—cold, wet, heavy snow that soaked through the insulated coveralls, and piled up higher than the overhauls. (The hair dryer dries them quickly.)

Our college girl was home on spring break; walking up and down a muddy lane, getting up at night to check cows, and moving calves out of the weather. On Saturday and Sunday, the kids and the farmer walked, or crawled, a mile to the calf barn. The married hired man spent the weekend with the single hired man, near the barn, because he couldn't get home. Faces are red with wind burn, and backs are aching from lugging hay and calves.

The opposite problem from the cow not claiming her calf is an over-protective Mama who won't let you near her babe to get it out of the mud and snow, and we had a few of those.

In order to feed the cattle in the feed lot, the bunks had to be cleaned with scoops; and the big tractor with chains barely pulled the feed wagon through the wet snow.

This time, I ran out of eggs. But my good neighbor always has enough supplies for a month, so I walked there to borrow. When I sunk belly deep in the snow, our big black Lab "helped" by licking my face. But I never saw anything of a St. Bernard with a cask around his neck.

Monday morning, when Jon and I were trying to get the cars unstuck and started, he remarked that everything that could go wrong was going wrong. I replied that that was Murphy's Law, and he said, "Murphy must have been a farmer!"

They had missed two exciting basketball games—they are very proud of their Nebraska round ball team.

Through all of the bad weather, Sue's only request was for homecooked food. She observes her 20th birthday this week. After all the lessons, braces, slumber parties, music and athletic events; after all the arguments, tears, disappointments, and triumphs; after worrying over career choices and colleges, she is actually becoming a mature young lady. No thanks to us, parents make all their mistakes on their first one. Happy Birthday, Sue—we love you. And thanks for all your help last week.

Thanks too, to all of you who have responded positively to this attempt to share our way of life. A blessed Easter to you, and happy Spring. (I hope!) I tend to agree with the fellow from Sioux City who said Tom Peterson is a dead man!

Alfalfa increases weight gain

Alfalfa hay added to ammoniated corn cobs and corn husks increased average daily weight gain and feed efficiency of calves fed the mix in research conducted by University of Nebraska ruminant nutritionists.

Bob Brandt, a graduate assistant in ruminant nutrition, presented the study's results at the 16th annual American Society of Animal Science midwestern section's meeting.

Terry Klopfenstein, NU ruminant nutrition professor, said using combine tailing, or "husklage," offers producers a future alternative to feeding calves more expensive corn silage, but that ammoniation methods need refinement before calf growers can afford to adopt the practice.

CALVES FED ammoniated corn residues gained weight faster and more efficiently than those fed untreated residues, he said. The researcher added protein, mineral and vitamin supplements to both treated and untreated husklage.

When the researchers added alfalfa hay to the treated residues and untreated residues, average daily gain and feed efficiency improved in both cases.

When fed ammoniated husklage with a 15 percent and a 30 percent alfalfa supplement, calves gained 1.6 and 1.72 pounds per day, respectively, compared to a 1.4 daily gain when calves were fed just alfalfa hay, according to data collected during the 117-day feed trial.

And calves fed treated husklage mixed with alfalfa gained about .7 pounds per day more than calves fed with untreated residues with alfalfa mixed in, Klopfenstein said.

He said that, overall, alfalfa hay improved calf performance more when it was mixed with treated residues than when mixed with untreated residues.

KLOPFENSTEIN SAID the process of ammoniating corn residues could eventually replace corn silage on grower-feeder calf operations, but that producers would probably continue to finish cattle for market with grain.

Corn silage prices rise and fall with corn prices, he said, but only harvest costs affect husklage expenses. Usually, he explained, farmers would be harvesting their own grain and could then collect the residues, after feeding calves.

Current corn prices favor cattle feeders, he said. However, if corn prices rise above the $3 per bushel level, and if researchers can find inexpensive methods to treat corn residues with ammonia, then the process could benefit calf growers, he said.

to get a 1982 tax-break

Don't forget to make your IRA contribution, or if you don't have one, open yours before you file your 1982 income tax. There's still time!

Deposit up to $2,000. Your total contribution is tax deductible. And with an employed spouse, up to $4,000. Married couples with one employed worker can deposit up to $2,250. Even the earned interest is tax-deferred until you start withdrawing at retirement when you'll probably be in a lower tax bracket.

Unlike some plans, there are no fees or commissions to pay on a Midwest Federal Individual Retirement Account.

The money you save for your retirement is insured safe up to $100,000 by the FSILIC, an agency of the U.S. Government.
