Wayne gearing for May 1 lottery startup

All signals appear to be going for a May 1 municipal lottery startup in Wayne. Though the city has less than two weeks to formalize rules and procedures, May 1 remains the target date for Wayne's first lottery ticket sales, according to Phil Kloster, city administrator.

And, during a Wednesday breakfast meeting to review Tuesday's successful referendum results, Kloster suggested that the City Council be prepared to consider and approve the necessary ordinances and resolutions to implement the municipal lottery by May 1.

"THERE IS going to be a critical time element to get underway by May 1," Kloster told several members of the Council during the early morning session at the Wayne State College Student Center.

"The wheels are going to have to start turning today with some formalities to consider on Tuesday evening (April 26 - the next Council meeting)," Kloster explained.

"Today we need an idea just where we are going," Kloster continued.

Wayne's proposed lottery question was passed by city voters Tuesday 355 to 314, which represents nearly a 53 percent simple majority and meets state law requirements for implementation.

However, Wednesday's special Council review session was unable to muster a quorum to transact official business.

WITH ONLY four of the eight councilmen present, Kloster explained the city's legal counsel, Ken Swarts, would be drafting the necessary implementation ordinance and a resolution outlining the rules for lottery participation.

According to Kloster, the implementation ordinance and rules resolution would be ready for consideration at Tuesday's regular Council session.

Also attending Wednesday's special session were Mayor Wayne Marsh, City Clerk Norm Melton and John Lambert of Lithographics Marketing, Lincoln.

Lambert, who has been working with the city for two months as a planning and marketing consultant for the municipal lottery, answered marketing and promotional questions.

IN ADDITION, Lambert explained the working mechanics of bringing the municipal lottery on line.

Kloster told the group that most cities contemplating a lottery had been bombarded by marketing firms from New Jersey to Las Vegas.

"We felt, in fact we insisted, we wanted to work with a firm that would go along with our desire to have the lottery handled as much as possible by the city," Kloster said, noting that Lithographics Marketing was chosen on that basis.

"For instance, the Wayne Herald will do nearly all the printing, which is important," Kloster explained.

Kloster told the group that it was Council's responsibility to "set the parameters" for a functioning lottery.

ACCORDING TO Kloster, those rules would involve such things as limiting the age of participation to persons 18 years of age and older, which is a state law requirement.

Kloster indicated that the planning to date would utilize Lambert's firm and the city staff to make necessary adjustments in the lottery, once the groundrules are set.

The month-to-month fine tuning would involve ideas "to make it more creative," Kloster said.

He noted that those adjustments could involve a variety of things, particularly changes in prize distribution.

Kloster explained that while state law established the percentage of prize money that must be distributed, the city is free to structure the awards in any number of combinations.

FOR INSTANCE, the city could award one May prize and then come back with a June proposal to award one first prize and several consolation prizes.

"With the work we've done, we're optimistic that we can have the best lottery in Nebraska and the most creative one," Kloster continued.

Those present at the meeting discussed rules that would bar Council members, the city administrator and possibly the city clerk's staff from participating in the municipal lottery.

In addition, Kloster suggested the city sell tickets from May 1 until May 30, the last Monday of the month.

He also suggested that the first lottery drawing be held on June 2, the first Thursday of that month.

"IT LOOKS like a go," Mayor Marsh told the group during the discussion.

Election turnout low

Voters approve Wayne lottery

Wayne voters have approved a municipal lottery, which is expected to get underway on May 1.

Approval came Tuesday during a citywide referendum that saw just under 25 percent of the registered voters turn out to give the lottery question a 53 percent simple majority victory margin.

However, voters in Wayne's 2nd Ward, in the northeast quadrant of the city, rejected the lottery question with a 55 percent majority of votes cast.

THAT WARD was the only one of the city's four precincts to reject the municipal lottery question, which passed citywide on an unofficial 355 to 314 vote total.

Wayne's 4th Ward delivered the victory votes with nearly 59 percent of the ballots favoring the proposed municipal lottery.

In fact, 4th Ward voters contributed nearly 83 percent of the referendum's citywide 41-vote victory margin by carrying the question with 34 ballots.

Though the city's 1st Ward reflected the referendum's citywide turnout percentages, the tally was all but cancelled by the 2nd Ward vote.

WITH 190 ballots counted in the 1st Ward, the city's largest, voters approved the municipal lottery question 101 to 89 for a 52.8 percent precinct victory margin.

Actually, 191 1st Ward voters cast ballots, but one ballot was spoiled and could not be counted under law.

That 12-vote margin in the 1st Ward was all but cancelled by the 2nd Ward's 11-vote defeat of the municipal lottery question.

In the city's 2nd Ward, 99 voters cast ballots, defeating the proposal 55 to 44, or by 55 percent.

The city 3rd Ward voters gave the proposal a 6-vote margin with 188 ballots cast.

Pirate's 'Pops' slugs home run in WSC talk

Aging Willie Stargell is no longer a Major League baseball batting champion. But, he looked as fit and trim as ever as he spoke to an audience of approximately 150 in Wayne State's Rica Auditorium Monday night.

"Pops" made a name for himself by clubbing baseballs over fences for 21 years. Today, he still looks like he could knock the seams off a fastball.

Stargell, 41, gave a 20-minute talk and then fielded questions from the audience for another hour. Questions covered various baseball topics, with emphasis on Willie's opinions on issues.

THE MAJOR League veteran told the audience that early in his career shotguns were put to his head in Southern towns and his life was threatened if he played baseball. But, he said he made up his mind to continue his baseball career despite the threats.

And what a successful career it was. Stargell played for the Pittsburgh Pirates for his entire career. He is the only Pirate to ever hit more than 400 home runs and was a National League All-Star as an outfielder and a first baseman.

He led the Pirates to the '79 World Series title and was named "Most Valuable Player" for the series and for the National League season.

"I'm lucky and each and every one of you is lucky," he told the audience, "because we have good health."

IN A PRESS conference prior to Monday night's engagement, Stargell told members of the media that he decided to retire because he had reached his goals.

He led the National League in home runs and RBIs, hit over 200 in a season, played in seven All-Star games and earned two World Series rings. "I ran out of things I could do. I have lived my dream," he said.

When asked what advice he has for young players, Stargell replied, "After you get out of college, give it a lot of thought."

Willie said that the late Roberto Clemente was, without a doubt, the best baseball player with whom he had ever played. "He was as close as a brother to me."

STARGELL TOLD Monday's audience his feelings on the banning of Willie Mays and Mickey Mantle from baseball because of their employment with casinos.

"I think it's terrible. I can't see why they should be penalized," he said. "They're doing a lot of positive things like working with little league players. They aren't allowed to gamble and I don't think they should be barred from baseball."

In a time of free agency, Stargell said he remained with Pittsburgh because he had no reason to go elsewhere. According to Stargell, free agency has its good and bad points.

Baseball, he said, gave him an opportunity to travel around the world and compete against some of the finest athletes in the world.

When questioned about the designated hitter rule, Stargell said it is good in many ways and takes away from the game in other ways. "The DH rule is a thing that's coming. I think the National League is looking at it a little closer," he stated. "You're asking a pitcher to throw more pitches but you're giving a guy on the bench a chance to hit."

RESPONDING TO other questions, Stargell said he didn't like the baseball strike but felt it was something the players were almost forced to do.

He said Juan Marichal, day in and day out, was the toughest pitcher he faced during his career. He added that Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale and Steve Carlton weren't far behind.

Chicago's Wrigley Park was his favorite ball park to bat in—especially when the wind was blowing out. Montreal's Andre Dawson is the best offensive player in the game today and is capable of winning the triple crown, he said.

When questioned about a possible drug abuse problem in the Major Leagues, the baseball great said that he feels the problem has been blown out of proportion.

Aluminum bats won't be used in the big leagues because the ball rebounds off the bat at such a velocity it could kill somebody, said Stargell. Expansion of the Major Leagues has its "up sides and down sides," he said in response to another question. "Pitching is the name of the game. Good pitching always stops good hitting," he said.

STARGELL'S LIGHT-HEARTED side showed with these comments:

—I never liked playing baseball in San Francisco. In fact I had a standing reward to anyone who, with no one in the stands, would blow up the ball park. (When asked to name his least favorite ball park in which to hit).

—We always thought the American League was the little leagues and the National League the big leagues. (When asked why the National League dominates the All-Star games).

—I think they're taking bets in Vegas. (When asked how long Manager Billy Martin will last with the New York Yankees).

THAT GAVE the referendum a 51.5 percent 3rd Ward victory with 97 voters in favor of the lottery and 91 opposed.

Voters in the 4th Ward, the city's second largest voting precinct, approved the proposal 113 to 79 for a 34-vote margin — 58.8 percent.

The combined 3rd and 4th Ward totals represented 40 of the referendum's 41 winning votes, or 97.5 percent of the victory margin, after the 1st and 2nd Ward voters essentially traded ballots.

Furthermore, because of the lottery question's 35-44 defeat in the 2nd Ward, the city mustered only a 7-vote margin outside the 4th Ward.

That margin was multiplied nearly five times in the 4th Ward to bring about 355 to 314 margin on the lottery question.

WITH 670 votes cast and 669 counted, the citywide referendum turnout was 24.7 percent of the 2,710 registered Wayne voters.

And, in the 1st Ward, the city's largest voting precinct, 191 out of 722 registered voters cast ballots (with one ballot spoiled) for a 24.7 percent turnout — the exact total turnout for the citywide referendum.

In the 2nd Ward, the city's smallest, 99 out of 497 registered voters cast ballots for a 19.9 percent turnout.

And, in the 3rd Ward, the city's third largest precinct, 188 out of 707 registered voters cast ballots for a 26.5 percent turnout.

The city second largest precinct, the 4th Ward, saw 192 out of 734 registered voters cast ballots for a 26.1 percent turnout.

ELECTION RESULTS show that the election's smallest turnout came from the city's smallest precinct — 2nd Ward, which defeated the proposed lottery.

And, while Wayne's largest voting precinct, 1st Ward, reflected the voter turnout citywide, it took the city's second largest, 4th Ward, to deliver 83 percent of the victory margin.

Voters in the 1st Ward contributed a 12-vote margin for the lottery, double the 6-vote margin in the city's 3rd Ward.

Polls were open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., and the unofficial election results were posted at the Wayne County clerk's office by 8:30 p.m.

Results were in from the 3rd Ward and the 4th Ward by 8:15 p.m.

BY NOON Tuesday, only 206 voters had cast ballots citywide, with 2nd Ward reporting the lowest forenoon turnout at 31. The 2nd Ward's polling place is the National Guard Armory.

Only 47 4th Ward voters had cast ballots at the City Auditorium by noon, but 63 had reported to Villa Wayne, the 1st Ward's polling place.

Poll watchers at the United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall reported the highest forenoon voter turnout with 65.

At 4 p.m., 4th Ward and 3rd Ward voters were evenly matched with 103 ballots cast in each precinct.

Voters in the 1st Ward were not far behind with 102 ballots cast by 4 p.m. And, 2nd Ward counted 55 votes by 4 p.m.

Lottery

And, in response to questions, Kloster reminded the group that money generated from the lottery would not only have to go through the city's budgeting process, but would by law be earmarked to offset property taxes dollar for dollar.

Kloster cautioned that city property taxes represent only about 24 percent of the total property tax burden for Wayne residents.

The property tax burden also involves levies for county and school district budgets, both beyond the city's fiscal authority.

Lambert urged the group to be mindful of the need to establish a network of ticket dealers and to recognize that the key to the lottery's success involves ticket purchases.

LAMBERT NOTED that promotion of the municipal lottery needed to be professional from the very beginning.

He also noted that since laws prohibited traditional advertising for lottery promotion, the city is faced with launching an effective "word of mouth" campaign.

Editor's note: The following copy is a speech on Special Olympics written by Winside High School senior Judy Bauermeister. She earned fifth place in the state speech contest.

The sun is beating down on hundreds of people standing in lines. For almost a year, the people standing together have had one thing in common. All have been dreaming of and working toward one goal.

A runner carrying a torch makes her way through the crowd and lights the Flame of Hope. Suddenly a voice thunders across the loudspeaker welcoming all who are there. The National Anthem is played by the band and then the previous voice says, "Let me win... but if I cannot win... let me be brave... in the attempt."

As these last words have been repeated, there are cheers of joy and excitement heard from everyone. The event has begun.

The time: early afternoon. The place: Omaha, Nebraska; the people: mostly athletes; the event: the three-day state meet of the Special Olympics.

This is a sight many see in Nebraska every year in May. It is a sight that I, myself, have seen many, many times. At this point many of you may be asking yourself such questions as "What is the Special Olympics?" or "Who is it held for?"

President Kennedy once said that a nation's greatness can be measured by the way it treats its weakest citizens. Many nations are now helping to make their weakest citizens strong and whole through the Special Olympics.

The Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. foundation was established for the study of mental retardation in 1946. In 1963, the foundation, in conjunction with the American Alliance for Health, Physical Recreation and Education, formed a physical fitness program for the mentally retarded.

Until that time the physical well-being of the mentally retarded had been of little concern. Everyone agreed that "normal" people needed to be physically fit but the mentally retarded did not have these same needs.

In 1968, the Kennedy foundation and the Chicago Park District decided to try an experiment. They formed the Special Olympics for the mentally retarded and invited participation from all over the country.

Many experts said that the mentally retarded could never run 300 yards, swim the length of a pool or even travel many, many miles away from their homes and institutions.

But as the opening parade started, the children proved these experts wrong. As they marched past the stands they hear cheers of joy and excitement from their friends and family and the band was playing just for them for the first time in their lives.

Once the games began, the children displayed a spirit of courage and determination that overcame all labels people had put on them.

Since 1968 the Olympics have grown beyond anyone's dreams. Early in the spring of 1970 the Special Olympics were established here in the state of Nebraska. The Special Olympics is a non-profit organization that is run strictly on charity and donations.

Some of your favorite places to eat may also be some of the favorite charity franchises of the Special Olympics. Burger King and McDonalds are two of the main contributors. Other contributors are the Legion, the Kiwanis Club and the Shriners.

Since its foundation in the U.S., the Olympics have grown immensely. Now more than one million mentally retarded individuals take part in the Special Olympics each year. During this time of growth, the goals of the Special Olympics grew and changed also.

The ultimate goal of the program is to create opportunities for sports training and athletic competition for the mentally retarded. Other goals are to give the child a "feeling of belonging" by offering him a membership with certificates, meets and awards and to instill in the retarded child a "sense of pride" by giving him a chance to win a ribbon or medal, letting him compete at bigger events at higher levels, or simply to receive a cheerful smile and a warm hug regardless of winning or losing.

As the old saying goes, "It's not whether you win or lose; it's how you play the game." In the Special Olympics this holds true also for the many games in which to compete.

There are sports for all kinds of weather and all kinds of kids. Every aspect of track and field is offered. Other sports offered are gymnastics, swimming, diving, floor hockey, polo hockey, bowling, frisbee-disc and wheelchair events.

Because of the popularity of volleyball, basketball and soccer they are offered in both team play and individual skills competition. There are also winter sports offered featuring Nordic and Alpine skiing and ice skating.

AREA PARTICIPANTS in the Wayne Special Olympics enjoy the day during the activities at the Wayne State College track. Cool weather and brisk wind kept some participants out of the meet but the ones who competed had plenty of fun.

The event relied almost entirely on volunteer help. The Wayne Kiwanis Club and Wayne State College jointly sponsored the event. Herbert Roof, assistant professor of education, helped organize the meet and education students served as volunteers for the various events. Contestants competed in a softball, frisbee throw for accuracy, frisbee throw for distance, standing long jump, high jump, 50-meter run and 200-meter run. Pictured clockwise beginning with lower left photo: Kali Corbit; David Kvols; Heath Corbit; Rick Kenny; David Ackman; Troy Volwiler; Rodney Bauermeister; Kali and Heath Corbit. All are area athletes who either represented Gertrude Vahkamp's TMR class or Region IV.

And no one ever goes home a loser because each participant receives a ribbon in that division. A division is determined by three factors: age, handicap and ability. No one is ever disqualified because they are too old to compete in the Olympics although they must be age eight as of Jan. 1 of the year in which they are competing. Then the divisions are broken down into age groups such as every two years—8-10 or 10-12. But as the age of the participant increases, the age span of the division may also increase.

The next factor determining a division is handicap. There are two types of handicap: implement and non-implement. An implement is anything aiding in the ability to participate. This might include artificial limbs, leg or arm braces, crutches or walkers.

A wheelchair is sometimes considered an implement although more often it is put into a division all by itself.

The last factor determining a division is the ability of the participant. Some athletes do things better than others so obviously a child who throws a ball 30 feet cannot compete against one who throws 75 feet. Therefore, the participants with approximately the same ability are put into the same division.

In order to compete at the state meet the participant must have competed at an area meet. These meets are broken down into districts or chapters held every May or June. There is also an international meet which is held every fourth year. This year the meet will be held in Baton Rouge, La. Maybe I will see a few of you there or earlier at an area meet.

I have high hopes riding on a very dear friend of mine who has been competing in the Special Olympics since he was able to walk at the age of nine after many years of surgery, braces and crutches. Who's my friend? My brother, Rod, and he has taught me the true meaning of the oath he repeats each year in May.

Let me win.
 But if I cannot win,
 Let me be brave
 in the attempt.

Bereuter to visit Laurel

Congressman Doug Bereuter will meet with northeast Nebraskans regarding agricultural issues Friday evening at the Laurel city auditorium.

The meeting, one of a series of advisory meetings throughout the First Congressional District, is open to the public. Bereuter said, "I hope anyone who has an interest in agricultural issues will attend. A special invitation is not necessary."

The session will begin at 7 p.m. with adjournment scheduled for 9:30.

Following a brief introductory statement by Bereuter, participants will be divided into small groups to consider four major areas of agricultural concern: 1) the 1983-84 Farm Program and Credit Needs, 2) Long-Term Farm Programs (1985 Farm Bill), 3) International Trade Issues, and 4) Soil and Water Conservation.

Bereuter said he has found such meetings to be helpful to him in the past. "The views expressed in similar meetings in previous years and earlier this year in other parts of the district afford me the opportunity to hear directly from that part of my constituency most directly affected by the federal government's farm programs."

Last chance to order trees

The spring tree planting season is now here. This year, over three million Clarke-McNary tree and shrub seedlings (25 species) have been available to Nebraska landowners. The Nebraska Forest Service began shipping tree orders on March 21. Several species of trees and shrubs are sold out, but a good selection of trees and shrubs are still available.

Landowners who plan to plant trees or shrubs in their wind-break woodlot or wildlife planting should order immediately. April 18 is the last day for order to be received by the Clarke-McNary program.

The cost of the seedlings is $23 per hundred, including postage and handling. Orders can be placed at your local County Extension office, Soil Conservation Service of Natural Resources District office.

37th Truckers' Day planned

For area truckers, all roads will lead to the Marina Inn, South Sioux City, on May 13. That's the site of the 37th annual Farm to Market Truckers' Day which last year drew more than 1,200 people.

Registration opens at 8:30 a.m. Dozens of exhibitors will present displays of all types of trucks, trailers, equipment and services.

Pioneer truckers, those who have been in trucking for at least 40 years, will be honored at the noon luncheon. Afternoon activities include a fashion show by Younkers of Sioux City.

Evening events include a social hour, banquet and dance. The new trucker's queen will be crowned by 1982 Queen Kim Stamer of Granville, Iowa.

Entertainment will be by Leroy Van Dyke, who gained fame with his self-penned first recording, "The Auctioneer." Appearing with him will be country-western beauty Diane Jordan.

All activities are included in the ticket price of $40 per couple ($25 per single). Tickets are available from Jim Sarff, Hartford Insurance, 103 Livestock Exchange Building, Sioux City, Iowa 51107.

Symposium set in Lincoln

Parents and professionals will gather May 11-13 for the sixth annual Building Family Strengths Symposium at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education in Lincoln.

Each May the symposium draws 600 to 700 people to Lincoln from across the nation. Presenters this year represent 70 universities, agencies and organizations in 29 states and Canada.

More than 100 keynote addresses, workshops, demonstrations and meetings are planned for the symposium, sponsored by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln (UNL) College of Home Economics Department of Human Development and the Family and the UNL Division of Continuing Studies.

The symposium attracts a diverse audience including parents, grandparents and other family members; nursery school, elementary, high school and college teachers; ministers and religious educators; counselors, psychologists, social workers and other mental health professionals; extension staff, nurses and doctors, students and others interested in the well being of families. Their diverse backgrounds make for a creative mix of ideas.

State 4-H conference slated

Plans for the 65th annual Nebraska State 4-H Conference are nearing completion, according to John Orr, University of Nebraska extension 4-H youth development specialist.

According to Orr, all award winners should register before May 10. The final deadline for all registrations is June 1. "Early registration delegates will receive first choices of activities," Orr said.

The state conference will be held June 20-24 on the NU East Campus, according to Orr. The conference is designed to provide 4-H members with information "that will be a foundation for career and personal development and to provide an opportunity for young people to share in the planning of the Nebraska 4-H program," Orr said.

The conference cost is $70. To register, youths should return a completed registration form with a F-0-21-80 form to their extension agent, Orr added.

Acreage reduction may affect insects

Crop acreage reductions caused by the Payment-in-Kind program have many farmers wondering about the possible effects on insect problems, according to Bob Roselle, University of Nebraska extension entomologist.

"The important thing is the weather at the time of egg laying and establishment of insect larvae," Roselle said.

In the case of corn, reduced acres mean that many corn rootworms, hatching from eggs in June, will starve, Roselle explained. "Rootworms cannot survive in high numbers on legumes, grasses or weeds, which will be their only remaining food choices on idled acres," he added.

"AN OVERALL reduction of rootworms should result and may have favorable implications for 1984," he added.

Insect outlook in relation to PIK will be discussed in detail, along with other topics, on the Nebraska Educational Television Network series, Farm and Ranch Report, to be aired April 21 at 12:30 p.m. The usual repeat time of 9:30 p.m. Thursday will be pre-empted by a public television auction. However, the show will be repeated Saturday, April 23 at 7:30 a.m.

European corn borers, which over-winter in the previous year's corn stalks, should survive in higher numbers because of the mild winter and reduced tillage on idled acres, Roselle said.

"This means that more borer moths will concentrate on laying their eggs in relatively fewer acres. This could mean a higher potential for first generation corn borers," Roselle said.

Planting corn in 1984 on land idled in 1983 and allowed to grow to weeds could increase the potential for infestations by other soil insects. These would include wireworms and white grubs, and possibly even cutworms and grasshoppers, he added.

"MANY FARMERS are interested in planting legumes on PIK acres because of their soil-building and holding characteristics. Therefore, acres of sweet clover and alfalfa are expected to dramatically increase. For alfalfa and sweet clover planted this spring, this increase should have little effect on insect problems, Roselle said.

"However, if the program continues for another year or two, sweet clover weevils could build to damaging levels," he said.

"What they do this year is going to influence what they do next year," Roselle concluded.

Insects are not the only problem farmers are worrying about. Rain and unseasonable snow promises to delay the spring planting season for row crops as it did last year, according to NU agronomist Dale Flowerday.

"There isn't much you can do about it. Just don't get into the fields too early," he advised.

"SINCE FARMERS cannot get into the fields, they should take this time to get everything ready to go. Check all of the machinery so that when the fields are dry enough to get into everything will be ready," he said.

"Farmers don't need to change their hybrid yet," Flowerday cautioned, but stressed that to avoid more problems, "don't go out into the fields when they are still wet."

STANDING WATER forms a broken reflection of a farmstead south of Wayne. Rain and melted snow left huge puddles of water in most area fields. Farmers are hoping for a lot of sunshine and a little wind to dry things out.
