

Foreign language education a benefit in expanded thinking

By Cheryl Westcott
Nebraska Farm Bureau

A bill to improve foreign language education in Nebraska has made its mostly quiet way through the Nebraska Legislature, earning passage by that body on May 12.

The bill provides for an assistance program which uses audiovisual materials to teach students and help teachers to improve their own skills or begin their own language studies. Proposed funding for the bill is $55,000 for '84-85.

According to Sen. Steve Wittala of Omaha who introduced the bill, more than half of Nebraska's school districts have no foreign language programs and only a small percentage of Nebraska students have an opportunity to study foreign languages before college.

I AM A LONG-TIME advocate of foreign language instruction, perhaps because my own experiences with learning a language have been so painful. I started with hour-long French lessons on Saturday mornings when I was 10, lessons that were originally more my parents' idea than mine. But I've continued to study French off and on, formally and informally, for some 20 years.

My most recent concentrated study was at the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources where faculty members were encouraged to study foreign languages in anticipation of missions abroad in developing agricultural nations.

Being able to speak French has brought me a number of valuable experiences, such as dinner with a touring group of 80 French farmers, attended by a few IANR faculty members. It is one thing to hear that agricultural production is not very advanced in much of Europe (in part responsible for the European Economic Community's protectionist policies) and quite another to hear a French farmer talk about his labor-intensive crop production and speak excitedly about a "new" process, soil testing, an old standby here.

And it was eye-opening to learn from a visiting Rumanian (French was our common language) that he viewed our everyday abundance of food as nothing short of wonders.

There are numerous opportunities for Americans to travel abroad and learn about foreign culture and food production without knowing the language. Fellows in Nebraska's first Leadership Education/Action Development (LEAD) program talked with Japanese farmers during their travel study seminar and learned why the Japanese do not want our beef. But something is gained when the traveler can communicate in the foreign nation's language. For example, many other cultures view the passage of time differently than do we and this is reflected in their language.

IT GENERALLY is easy for the English-speaking traveler to learn about other countries, but the U.S. does not afford this same opportunity to foreign visitors traveling here. It is common abroad for citizens of many nations to know English and perhaps another language in addition to their native tongue, but the U.S. is put to shame by the comparison.

We Americans have been parochial in our attitude, choosing to think that foreigners' study of our language proves the excellence of English above other tongues. And it is true that English is a very efficient language for getting things said. But we really choose to miss an opportunity when we don't make the effort to tell others in the most effective way what we do and why.

Learning from a Japanese farmer why his country doesn't want our beef may not enhance our export opportunities, but it's possible to trace other, more direct benefits. Nebraska's Spanish-speaking foreign marketing representatives can point to numerous export sales traceable to friendships cemented by one-to-one conversations with Latin American farmers.

But for the individual who makes the effort to learn another language, the biggest benefit may be in expanded thinking—and a perspective that can encompass more than one's own experiences.

A prayer for peace, Memorial Day, 1983

By the President of the United States of America
A Proclamation

Each year, for more than 100 years, we have gathered on Memorial Day to pay tribute to those men and women who have fallen in battle, sacrificing their lives to preserve our freedom and world peace. In doing this, we are reminded that neither peace nor liberty is guaranteed, and that our natural ideals remain threatened by global conflict, economic crises, violence, and aggression.

Throughout our history, America has been a symbol of hope for all people. We must always accept the many responsibilities that this requires. Thus, we are prepared to assist other nations in their struggle for economic progress; to help those in other lands who suffer from political repression and injustice; to deter aggression by strengthening democracy around the globe; and to work tirelessly toward a world without war.

Those who have sacrificed their lives for our country serve as a reminder that our work is unfinished. With vision and purpose and a prayer in our hearts, let us dedicate ourselves to their memory.

In recognition of those Americans to whom we pay tribute today, the Congress, by joint resolution of May 11, 1950 (46 Stat. 158), has requested the President to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe each Memorial Day as a day of prayer for permanent peace and designating a period on that day when the people of the United States might unite in prayer.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, RONALD REAGAN, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate Memorial Day, Monday, May 30, 1983, as a day of prayer for permanent peace, and I designate the hour beginning in each locality at 11 o'clock in the morning of that day as a time to unite in prayer. I urge the press, radio, television, and all other information media to cooperate in this observance.

I also request the Governors of the United States and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the appropriate officials of all local units of government to direct that the flag be flown at half-staff during this Memorial Day on all buildings, grounds, and naval vessels throughout the United States and in all areas under its jurisdiction and control, and I request the people of the United States to display the flag at half-staff from their homes for the customary forenoon period.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this 4th day of April, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and eighty-three, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred and seventh.

A tough decision Nebraskans relieved of grocery tax

By Meivin Paul
Nebraska Press Association

Beginning Oct. 1, Nebraskans will be relieved of the sales tax they now pay on groceries under a bill signed into law on May 17 by Gov. Bob Kerrey.

Since 1969, Nebraskans have paid the sales tax on their food purchases, and have been reimbursed through a state income tax credit which most recently has been $28-a-person.

With enactment of LB 363, the sales tax on food is repealed and the income tax credit eliminated.

BUT RECONCILING the sales tax-income tax credit issue for 1983 caused a disagreement between Kerrey and the Legislature during the final days of the 1983 session.

As the Legislature headed for scheduled adjournment on Wednesday, debate at the Statehouse dealt with how much to reimburse Nebraskans on their 1983 state income taxes for the sales tax they pay on groceries this year.

In a letter to the Legislature informing lawmakers that he signed the grocery sales tax repeal, Kerrey endorsed a $7 credit on the 1983 state income tax returns.

The credit would negate the anticipated revenue windfall to the state by reimbursing Nebraskans for the average amount of sales tax they pay on groceries between July and September. The windfall would total $11 million during the fiscal year beginning on July 1.

STATE LAWMAKERS, however, saw the matter differently. They voted on May 18 to grant a $21-a-person income tax credit for 1983 on the theory that Nebraskans should be reimbursed for all the sales tax they paid on groceries between January and September.

The problem with the legislative proposal is that the money collected from the food sales tax between January and June will have been spent by income tax filing season next year. The higher income tax credit would likely prompt a one percentage point increase in the individual income tax rate. In other words, the state would have to raise Nebraskans' income tax rates in order to reimburse Nebraskans for their sales tax on groceries.

For tax year 1984 and after, Nebraskans would lose their income tax credit altogether.

KERREY'S DECISION on whether to sign or veto the grocery sales tax repeal may have represented his most difficult political problem during the four months he's been in office.

The decision, which he pondered for four days, left him in the middle of two major political factions which contributed significantly to his 7,800-vote victory over former Gov. Charles Thone last year.

On one side was a group of Democratic state senators, including Sens. Dave Newell of Omaha and Steve Fowler of Lincoln, who have worked for years to repeal the food sales tax.

On the other side is Omaha Mayor Mike

Boyle. His city loses $5.2 million annually as a result of Kerrey signing the bill. That leaves Boyle with the tough choice between drastic city service cuts or a major property tax increase. Statewide, the other 11 cities with local option sales taxes are expected to lose a total of $2.3 million in revenue next year.

To the dismay of Boyle and mayors in the other cities with local sales taxes, Kerrey came down on the side of the state senators who had been pressuring for repeal of the food sales tax.

LATER IN the week, Kerrey risked alienation of another group of key political supporters when he vetoed a proposed 2.5 percent pay raise for state employees.

Taking such political risks were necessary to get the state in a position to develop a fiscal year 1984-85 state budget on a sound footing, Kerrey said.

For the most part, Kerrey said, he succeeded in not financing state government by simply delaying problems until next year.

letters

To the editor:
I am greatly disturbed about something that has recently happened in the Wayne community.

Several excellent and caring babysitters may be without a job. These women have provided the Wayne area with a quality service not easily found in some towns and cities. They may have to stop babysitting because they do not have a license. A license which does not assure parents that they are loving and caring. This license just assures us that their home meets some rather worthless requirements. We have always known our babysitter did not have a license, and as concerned parents this made absolutely no difference to us! I chose my babysitter because of the responsible and loving person that she is.

Our babysitter has been a second mother to my three girls. She has babysat for us for almost 10 years, and during this time has gone through all of the stages of our children's development with us. She is an important part of our family. What gives anyone the right to tell us that she is not qualified? I feel as a parent I want this right!!!!

I think it is time for concerned parents to think about this matter and do something about it!!!!

Judicial salary increase bill survives kill motion

As you read this newsletter, the first session of the 88th Legislature will have adjourned. At the time of writing only three legislative days remain before the scheduled adjournment on May 25.

Legislative business at this time of the session centers primarily around bills on final reading. We began the week by tackling the proposed salary increase for the judiciary. LB 269 passed, but not until it had survived my kill motion. I have been opposed to LB 269 since it first came before me in the Judiciary Committee. As passed, the bill will give the judges a 25 percent raise, elevating the lowest judicial salary to over $50,000 a year.

Also on Monday, LB 73 passed on final reading and was sent to the governor for his approval. It requires elevator operators to provide greater proof of financial responsibility than under current law before they could be issued a license to operate.

THE OPERATOR will be required to file a bond certificate of deposit to cover not only all persons storing grain in the elevator but also those who hold checks issued by the elevator within five days prior to the elevator's closing. I opposed LB 73 because I feel that the stiffer financial responsibility requirements will force many small elevators out of business and result in less market accessibility for farmers.

The fourth Monday in September will hereinafter be recognized as American Indian Day as a result of the passage of LB 90. The measure is an attempt to bring recognition to the contributions of American Indians and to promote a greater understanding and brotherhood between the Indian and non-Indian citizens of Nebraska.

The lottery bill, LB 336, underwent extensive debate Tuesday before abruptly coming to an end with a successful kill motion. There was some discussion as to whether the manufacturers of slot machines and other gambling devices were behind the bill. In order to clarify that this type of gambling activity would not be allowed under the lottery bill, an amendment was attached specifically excluding them. Curiously, after attachment of this amendment, the main supporters of the bill suddenly wanted to lay it over until next year. Failing that, they were later able to reconsider the amendment and defeat it.

Another amendment was subsequently adopted which would prohibit local lotteries after 1985 and transfer lottery proceeds from the homestead exemption to the state general fund. This further alienated tentative lottery supporters and gave opponents of the bill enough votes to kill it. The lottery question may not be over yet. Talk of a motion to reconsider is going around and may be attempted in the few days remaining. Results of my questionnaire so far indicate 40 percent in favor of a lottery, 47 percent against, and 12 percent unsure. One percent didn't answer the question.

WEDNESDAY BROUGHT the reinstatement of the income tax credit for the sales tax on food. The credit had been eliminated previously when the Legislature removed the sales tax on food. If LB 17 passes this week, you will receive a $21 credit for the sales tax you paid on food prior to the sales tax removal.

Reinstatement of the tax credit has put the state budget in a bit of a bind. By not allowing a credit next year, the State had counted on using the credit dollars to fund additional state spending. Now the state has the spending obligations but no money. In defense of the legislature, I must say that the people of Nebraska were entitled to the credit for the sales tax they have paid on food. It was only right to reinstate the credit. This does create an acute money problem, however, which makes it very unlikely that any of the governor's vetoes will be overridden.

Speaking of vetoes, the governor has five item vetoes nearly $13 million in state spending. Salary increases for state and university employees were cut along with funds designated for schools providing Driver's Education to name just a couple of areas hit hard by the vetoes. While I agree with some cuts and disagree with others, the money situation is such that I don't think there will be sufficient support for any overrides.

BALLOONS ARE RELEASED from downtown Wayne proclaiming Chicken Days in July.

Hatching plans

Third annual Chicken Show slated July 8-10 in Wayne

With just over a month to go, plans for the third annual Chicken Show in Wayne are hatching rapidly.

Official announcement of the July celebration was made last Thursday night when 120 balloons proclaiming the event were released from downtown Wayne.

As of Tuesday afternoon, six balloons had been returned to the Wayne Chamber of Commerce office.

"I THINK THE idea of honoring chickens is wonderful," said Mary Ann Petersen of Lyons, Neb., who found a balloon in a roadside northwest of Lyons.

"We raise chickens and I even crochet chickens," added Mrs. Petersen.

Jamie Tripp also thinks the idea of honoring chickens "is neat."

Jamie, who resides near Tekamah, spotted a balloon last Friday while riding the bus to school. The bus driver stopped so he could retrieve the balloon from a ditch.

Other balloons have been returned to the Wayne Chamber of Commerce office from Craig, Neb., Blakesburg, Iowa and Rock Falls, Ill.

"We honor chickens every year by getting 125 and eating them," said Kerry Burrell of Blakesburg, Iowa, who found a balloon last Saturday while riding horses near Ottumwa.

"Yum, yum," added Kerry.

A SPOKESMAN for the Chamber office said July 1 is the deadline for returning balloons.

The owner of the balloon traveling the furthest distance from Wayne will receive a $100 gift certificate redeemable at participating Chamber stores.

The person who finds and returns the balloon that traveled the greatest distance will receive a free chicken shirt.

CO-SPONSORING THIS year's Chicken Show, scheduled July 8, 9 and 10, are the Wayne Regional Arts Council and Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

Publicity chairman Jane O'Leary said inquiries for the show have already been made from as far away as California.

O'Leary added that an article about the Chicken Show is scheduled to appear in the June issue of Outside, a national magazine.

In addition, the Wall Street Journal is researching an article about the show which they say will be published before the festival.

ACCORDING TO O'Leary, a large number of tables have already been reserved for the arts and crafts portion of the show, and several celebrity auction items have arrived.

Persons who have chicken collections they would like to display during the event are asked to contact Nancy Jo Powers.

There also will be a chicken poetry and essay contest, and writers are encouraged to submit entries to chairman Betty Lawrence.

O'Leary said sponsors are needed for many events scheduled during the three-day celebration, including various contests and games.

O'Leary added that sponsors may be businesses, organizations or individuals who wish to donate prizes for particular events.

Sponsors who wish to run their own contests are asked to contact Dean Bilstein, chairman of the Chicken Show committee.

A TENTATIVE schedule of events during the observance includes a chicken's hill talent show on Friday night, followed by a square dance.

Saturday's events will include a fun run, chicken parade, free omelet feed, contests and games, a water fight and chicken feed.

A "pickin' and pluckin'" contest for country musicians is scheduled to get underway Saturday evening and continue through Sunday afternoon.

DONATIONS TO the Chicken Show may be made through Kathryn Ley, and further information may be obtained from Bilstein or O'Leary.

O'Leary said chicken shirts are now on sale at Time Out, The Joyn, Pet's Beauty Salon and The Rusty Nail in Wayne. Other businesses who wish to sell T-shirts are asked to contact Kathryn Ley.

Information on individual events during the celebration will appear in upcoming editions of The Wayne Herald.

Hawkins claims state in Class D 100-meter dash

By Randy Hascall

The final stretch of Omaha Burke's track was gold-plated for Winside junior John Hawkins.

Running like a wild stallion, Hawkins won first place in the Class D 100-meter dash, placed second in the 200 and anchored the fifth place 400-meter relay team at the state track meet.

Teammate Jan Meierhenry cleared 6-4 in the high jump to place second in that event and also ran on the relay team. Those four places netted the Wildcats 28 points and earned them fourth place in the final Class D standings.

HAWKINS, WHO had Class D's fastest times in both the 100 and 200 preliminaries, nipped Tony Hansen of Wilcox in the 100-meter finals. The Winside runner was clocked in 11.40 and Hansen in 11.46.

In the 200-meter dash, Hansen gained revenge by edging Hawkins for the top spot. Hawkins ran the 200 meters in 23.32 compared to Hansen's time of 23.23.

In the 400-meter relay, Winside was in fifth place in its heat when Hawkins took the handoff. He passed up all but one runner to give the Wildcats second in the heat and fifth overall in time comparison. Team members Hawkins, Meierhenry, Dan Mundil and Dan Broekemeier posted a time of 46.34.

Meierhenry, who cleared 6-5 earlier this season, held on to place second in the high jump. Bruce Kelley of Beaver Valley jumped 6-5 to win the event.

The Winside girls sent a 400-meter relay team to state but the Wildcats didn't place. Team members are Patli Langenberg, Tammy Brudigan, Jill Boldt and Susie Peterson.

3rd place in hurdles leads WHS at state

Missy Stoltenberg is no newcomer to the state track meet. But the four-time qualifier is a newcomer to the 100-meter hurdles event this year.

The hurdles proved to be Stoltenberg's strongest event at state as she placed third in the Class B race with a time of 15.47 Saturday at Omaha Burke. Ann Troxel of Broken Bow won the event in a record time of 15.03 and Kristi Eitzman of Superior was second in 15.16.

Stoltenberg also competed in the 100 and 200 meter dashes but didn't qualify for the finals in either event. Her six team points in the hurdles rounded out Wayne's scoring.

Fran Gross, who competed in the 400-meter dash, placed fourth in her heat but didn't qualify for the finals. The 1,600-meter relay team of Lori Anderson, Jody Allen, Lisa Jacobsen and Gross missed in their attempt to place in that event.

The 400 meter relay team of Jill Mosley, Jacobsen, Gross and Stoltenberg also came up short in a quest for a medal. Jo Carlson competed in both the discus and shot put but didn't place in either event.

MISSY STOLTENBERG anchors a relay team.

Wakefield runner earns 3 medals

Shouts of "Go Nacho" could be heard among the loud cheers of the crowd at the state track meet Friday and Saturday at Omaha Burke.

Wakefield exchange student Ignacio Cuadrado—better known by his friends as "Nacho"—finished fourth in the 800-meter run, sixth in the 400-meter dash and helped the Trojans' 3,200-meter relay team to a sixth place finish.

Cuadrado ran a 51.76 in the 400 and a 1:58.89 in the 800. The relay team of Cuadrado, Gary Tullberg, Brian Obermeyer and Mike Clay recorded a time of 8:22.71.

THOSE THREE finishes gave Wakefield six points in the Class C boys standings. The Trojan girls failed to score. A false start in the 1,600-meter relay kept Suzanne Stelling, Kristi Miller, Kristal Clay and Leigh Johnson from running in that event.

Stelling, a promising freshman, competed in the 200 and 400-meter dashes but failed to reach the finals. She also participated in the high jump but didn't place.

One Laurel athlete also participated in the state meet. Scot Curry qualified for the finals of the 400 meter dash by placing third in the prelims with a time of 52.70. Cuadrado was second in 52.43.

by Kevin O'Hanlon

Well, here goes nothing!

Replacing Randy Hascall as sports editor is going to be quite a task. Randy has done an excellent job and I'm sure he'll prove to be an even better managing editor. I ask the indulgence of area sports fans while I get settled in.

This summer I'll keep plenty busy trying to cover baseball, softball and other activities. Come next fall, however, I'm afraid I might come apart at the seams.

What happened?

If you're still trying to figure out what happened to the Nebraska baseball team this year, join the crowd. After a dazzling 26-0 record-breaking start, John Sanders' charges promptly zoomed to mediocrity, winning only four of their last 13 regular season games. The Huskers finished fifth in the Big Eight with an 8-10 record and were later eliminated from the conference tourney.

Perhaps they got caught up in all the hoopla too soon and started counting their College World Series chickens before they were hatched.

I hope Tom Osborne's troops were watching, because the Nebraska football team will most likely be everybody's choice as the pre-season national champion this fall. Penn State will be without the services of Curt Warner and Todd Blackledge, but don't think the Nittany Lions are going to roll over and play dead for Nebraska during the Kickoff Classic on August 29 at the Meadowlands.

Tell me!

I'm going to use this space to ask a question that has been eating at me for years—and, to date, none of my rabid baseball fan friends has been able to adequately answer: Why in the name of Jumbo Shoenock do major league baseball parks vary so much in dimension? For example: Boston's Fenway Park measures 390 feet to the center field fence. At Yankee Stadium it's 417 feet. Tiger Stadium? A whopping 440 feet! I can't figure it out! If somebody out there knows, please let me know.

While I'm on baseball—why do the managers of baseball teams wear uniforms just like the players do? They never play! The only time they're out on the field is to chew out an umpire or talk to their pitcher.

I can't help but wonder what it would be like if this were the norm in other sports.

Imagine DePaul basketball coach Ray Meyer parading around at Blue Demon games in a basketball uniform. I'd rather not. (No offense Ray, but like they say, the legs are the first to go.)

Remember to duck

Although I'm not a golfer (Wayne Country Club golf pro Rudy Froeschle informed me that he "has missionary work to do"), I was impressed with Wayne's 18-hole layout.

I grew up in Blair where a runway (yes, the kind airplanes use) bisects the ninth fairway of the municipal golf course. Now that's a hazard!

JON MEIERHENRY takes a handoff from Dan Mundil.

Locals net ribbons at Special Olympics

Five Wayne youngsters won medals at the Nebraska Special Olympics held Thursday and Friday at Creighton University.

Marla Carmichael, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carmichael, won the 50-meter dash, the frisbee competition and placed third in the standing long jump.

Kali Jo Corbit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Corbit, won the softball throw, placed second in the 50-meter dash and competed in the frisbee competition.

Rodney Bauermeister, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Bauermeister, won the softball throw, placed third in the 30-meter dash and took fifth in the frisbee throw.

Heath Corbit, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Corbit, won the 50-meter dash, placed third in the frisbee throw and finished fourth in the softball throw.

Troy Volwiler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Volwiler, placed second in the standing long jump, third in the 200-meter run and third in the frisbee throw.

The Wayne athletes are coached by Gertrude Vahlkamp and assisted by Joni Sittman and Rod Blunck.

Increasing protein utilization can decrease cost of production

Increasing the efficiency of protein utilization in cattle feeding can potentially decrease the cost of beef and dairy production, according to Terry Klopfenstein, University of Nebraska professor of ruminant nutrition, and Rick Stock, NU extension beef specialist.

Protein is the largest ingredient supplied by the feed industry to cattle producers, and "is obviously the largest expense for the producer who raises his own basic feedstuffs," Stock said.

The NU animal scientists explained that the ruminant has two sources of protein available for physiological functions in the body: microbial protein and bypass protein.

MAXIMUM MICROBIAL protein synthesis is essential to economical protein-use in ruminants. In many cases, such as finishing cattle, the microbial protein is sufficient to meet the animal's needs.

When the microbial protein is inadequate, the only way to supply additional protein to the animal is with bypass protein. Therefore, the value of protein source for ruminants is highly dependent upon its bypass values. Most proteins are bypassed to some extent, but some bypass more than others, they said.

According to Stock, the protein requirement of the animal determines the need for bypass protein. Finishing cattle, at least those above 600-650 pounds, have a relatively low protein requirement, perform well on urea and should not be fed bypass protein (from an economical standpoint). Possible exceptions could be large mature weight cattle, bulls and cattle during the starting period. Some nutritionists, he said, recommend natural protein until cattle are on a full feed of grain.

Growing calves and lactating cows have higher protein requirements and usually require some bypass protein to make maximum gains. The growing calf, from weaning to 600 pounds, probably offers the best opportunity for use of high bypass protein sources.

Current estimates of the value of the protein in several sources is presented in Table 1 as percentages of soybean meal.

The protein in grain, especially corn and milo, is bypassed to a great extent and, therefore, the grain byproducts are high in bypass protein. Heating reduces rumen degradation of proteins and, therefore, the drying of dehydrated alfalfa, blood meal and meat meal causes them to be high bypass protein sources.

ACCORDING TO KLOPFENSTEIN, dehy is probably least predictable and because much of the 17 percent dehy contains suncured pellets, we estimate its value at only 125 percent that of soybean meal. Twenty percent dehy should not contain suncured and has given us generally good results.

THE ADVANTAGES of using the bypass protein system are as follows:

1. The amount of natural protein fed is reduced.
2. The use of urea is increased.
3. Cost of supplementation is lower.
4. Performance is maintained.

Assuming that the animal's protein requirement was met on the previous "all natural" supplement, performance could not be increased. It could only be done at a lower cost, the NU scientists said.

The cost per ton may be as high or higher than a conventional "all natural" supplement but if it is higher in crude protein, the feeding rate will be lower. Therefore, the cost per head per day should be lower.

If the supplement is not cheaper, the feed company is taking all the benefit of the bypass protein. A bypass supplement should be recommended for growing calves and maybe lactating cows, not for finishing cattle. The producer should expect gains similar to previous "all natural" supplements and should be wary of claims for increased gain, Stock said.

Curly Dock

Curly dock, a common lawn, pasture and roadside weed, produces several thousand seeds each summer. Every effort should be made to control seed production by mowing the flowering heads before or at flowering. Once the fertilization is complete, the plant is able to produce germinable seeds even under unfavorable atmospheric conditions.

Drying of flowering stalks will control the germinability of seeds for only six days after blooming. If such stalks are harvested and left to dry among mowed vegetation, such as along roadside ditches, normal seed development continues, and the seeds produced have high germination.

Burial of flowering stalks for one month after harvest does not reduce the ability of seeds to germinate normally. Tests show an improvement in germination due to burial of flower heads.

IF CURLY DOCK is to be controlled by mowing, cutting of the flowering stalks before or at blooming is the best way to control further perpetuation of this weed by seeds.

Curly dock is susceptible to 2,4-D and can be controlled by applications of this herbicide. Use 2,4-D amine on lawns and around sensitive vegetation. Some follow up generally is necessary because the chemical does not kill seeds in the soil. Curly dock is a prolific seed producer, and the seeds can remain alive in the soils for periods up to 70 years.

Bindweed in Alfalfa

—What herbicide should I use if I have a bindweed problem and I plan to plant alfalfa in August? The answer is where field bindweed infests a piece of land and a fall seeding of alfalfa is planned, treat the bindweed late spring or early summer prior to seeding.

There's no 100 percent sure cure for field bindweed infestations. One of the more effective controls is 2,4 D or 2,4 D plus Banvel applied at the bud stage. Withold any tillage prior to treatment so there's maximum emergence and foliage on the bindweed. This governs the success of herbicide treatments made in June. A repeat treatment with 2,4 D 30 days prior to seeding alfalfa should further enhance bindweed control.

Calving problems can be reduced

As a cattle producer, did your cows have too much calving difficulty this spring?

If so, a new management practice should help reduce calving difficulty next spring, according to Gene Duetscher, beef cattle reproductive specialist at the University of Nebraska North Platte Station.

"Obtain pelvic measurements on yearling heifers and use them to determine how large a calf a heifer can deliver without major difficulty," Duetscher explained.

"RESEARCH SHOWS that the primary cause of calving difficulty is the relative size of the heifer's birth canal (pelvic size) to the calf's birth weight," reported Duetscher. "We have developed a pelvic area birth weight ratio from our research which can be used with pelvic measurements to determine the calf size a two year-old heifer can deliver without major difficulty."

A veterinarian or an experienced producer can take pelvic measurements a few weeks before the breeding season. "Obtain both internal pelvic width and height measurements in centimeters and multiply them together to get the pelvic area," said Duetscher. This area can then be used in the following formula to calculate the calf birth weight a heifer can deliver:

Divide square centimeters of heifer pelvic area by the ratio of 2.0 to get the calf birth weight in pounds. Examples: 120 square centimeters divided by 2.0 equals a 60-pound calf, 140 divided by 2.0 equals a 70-pound calf.

Yearling heifers weighing 600 pounds should have an average pelvic size of 140 square centimeters. This allows them to have a 70-pound calf as a two year-old. "Heifers with small pelvic areas can be mated to an easy calving, low birth weight bull or culled from the herd," explained Duetscher.

"SOME PRODUCERS may wish to breed their largest pelvic size heifers to bigger bulls to obtain a larger, genetically superior calf," he suggested.

Research shows that larger, heavier heifers do not necessarily have the largest pelvic size. Therefore, heifers should be measured for pelvic size and mated accordingly. "Our research indicates these ratios are reasonably accurate — about 80 percent — so there are some exceptions," Duetscher said.

Bull selection for use on yearling heifers is also important to reduce calf birth weight and calving difficulty. Selectively mating bulls to heifers according to pelvic size should produce calves with less overall calving difficulty and heavier weaning weights.

Instead of measuring heifers before breeding, producers can also obtain pelvic measurements at pregnancy check time and the small ones culled. However, a ratio of 2.5 should be used at that time to calculate the calf birth weight the heifer can deliver, Duetscher concluded.

Area dairymen win awards

Each year, the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, in conjunction with June Dairy Month, recognizes some dairymen in the State of Nebraska. To receive the Outstanding Dairymen Award, the dairymen must meet the following criteria:

Grade "A": 1. Sanitation average of 94 percent or higher;

2. Added water - none detected; 3. Pesticides - none detected; 4. Antibiotics - none detected; 5. Bacteria - average 20,000 per milliliter or less; 6. Somatic cells - 15 millimeters or less or direct microscopic counts will equal 22 millimeters; 7. Time frame - January 1 through December 31; 8. Special criteria, a. Any producer suspended for any reason will become ineligible, b. Must have been a Grade "A" producer for at least 6 months to be eligible.

Area awards: Melvin Graham of Belvid; William Loberg of Carroll; Lonnie Ford of Carroll; Jack and Rhonda Werner of Laurel; John Anderson, Anderson Farms of Wayne; and Vernon Bauermeister of Wayne.

The Banvel® herbicide advantage: Knocks out velvetleaf in 8 to 24" corn.

Banvel® herbicide gets those weeds 2,4-D misses.

Banvel herbicide controls a wider spectrum of tough-to-kill broadleaf weeds in 8- to 24-inch corn than 2,4-D. Because it penetrates weed leaves. Is absorbed by the roots. Then translocates throughout the weed's fluid system for a complete weed kill—leaf-tip to root-tip. All without carryover.

Knock out the toughest broadleaf weeds in your corn...velvetleaf... cocklebur...sunflower...smartweed... pigweed...and a host of others. With Banvel herbicide.

When corn is 8 inches tall or taller, use drop nozzles. You'll direct spray below the crop canopy for better weed coverage.

Ask your ag chem dealer for better broadleaf weed control in 8- to 24-inch corn. Ask for Banvel herbicide.
