POPPIES ARE abundant and in full bloom at the Veterans Memorial Cemetery in Wayne. The flowers provided a colorful scene at the Avenue of Flags during Monday's Memorial Day services. Hundreds of persons gathered at Greenwood Cemetery for the annual program. The poppy seeds came from Flanders Field and were planted by Jerold Daniels and Flora Bergt.

Proposed rate increase is dealt another setback

Peoples Natural Gas Company was dealt another blow Tuesday night in its request for a natural gas rate increase.

The Wayne City Council postponed its decision at least two more weeks in order to study the request, gather more facts and figures and make comparisons with other communities.

Following the recommendation of city administrator, Phil Kloster, the council voted to table the required second reading until comparisons can be made.

KLOSTER PROPOSED that the council table, at least temporarily, the rate increase request. He said that requests for increases are "not sailing through" in other communities.

Prior to Kloster's recommendation, Dennis Ofte of Wayne presented a petition against the proposed increase. He told the council that most of the people he contacted were not prepared or able to meet the increase.

Ofte acknowledged that no business can operate at a loss without going under but asked that Peoples' tighten its belt one notch.

In response to Ofte's request, Keith Mosley of Peoples' Natural Gas Company said that his business has already taken up two notches on the belt and is on its third notch.

"I'M JUST asking for a fair and reasonable return," Mosley said of the proposed 7.36 percent increase. He added that Peoples has done things to cut its costs, such as laying off employees, converting vehicles to propane and economizing its metering system.

Mosley explained that Peoples is a separate operating business within the Northern Natural Gas Corporation and pointed out that it is supported by Peoples Natural Gas revenues.

He told the council that 1982 figures show Peoples had a negative 1.80 percent return. If the rate increase is passed that return is estimated at 4.4 percent.

Councilmen Carolyn Filter, Darrel Heler, Larry Johnson and Gary Vopatensky all directed questions to Mosley about the company and the proposed rate increase.

"I WANT a gas rate increase as little as anyone. But I want facts. I need to see facts from other communities," Filter said.

Mosley asked the council what additional information it needs and said he would be happy to supply any information that is needed, including figures from other communities and names of persons to contact.

Peoples Natural Gas' proposal calls for an identical increase of $4 per month to the minimum charge. "We've served the community well over the years. I'm talking about a fair and reasonable increase. As the rates go up from our supplier, our rates must go up," said Mosley. "We're not standing alone in our problems. Hopefully, people will understand."

Liquor ordinance approved

The Wayne City Council studied several issues and requests at its regular meeting Tuesday night. The council:

- Passed an ordinance pertaining to minors in liquor establishments.
- Approved a request for use of city property for the Chicken Show.
- Approved a resolution clarifying parameters of the Wayne Country Club.
- Killed a resolution pertaining to city employee disability policy.
- Reviewed petitions on Western Heights 2d Subdivision.
- Accepted the resignation of a member of the Villa Wayne Board of Directors.
- Formally praised the life-saving efforts of a police officer and dispatcher.

in restaurants with separate dining areas but cannot go up to the bar areas.

Bob Ensz, representing the council as a legal advisor, pointed out that Wayne currently has an ordinance which says no minor can step into a business where retail liquor is sold. The ordinance is unconstitutional, can't be enforced and should be repealed, Ensz said.

The motion carried unanimously in favor of the new ordinance.

EARLY IN the meeting, two members of the Wayne Police Department were recognized for life-saving actions. Kloster commended officer Ronald Penlerick and dispatcher Vonnie Ellis for helping save a man's life. Penlerick was presented a certificate of appreciation from the Heart Association.

Dean Bilstein, chairman of the Chicken Show, requested use of city property for the annual event and the council gave its approval.

Health insurance benefits in connection with a disability policy for city employees also were discussed by the council. A resolution which would carry an employee's health and medical insurance benefits for 12 months due to disability was presented by Kloster.

The issue was discussed and the resolution died for lack of a motion. Mayor Wayne Marsh said he feels the issue deserves further study. Options will be studied by council members.

A resolution which clarifies the parameters of the Wayne Country Club in regard to its liquor license was passed unanimously. The parameters cover the entire premises of the golf course, including all 18 holes.

REPRESENTING WESTERN Heights 2d Subdivision, Jim Coan and attorney Duane Schroeder presented a set of petitions requesting paving and sewer and water systems. The council examined the petitions.

In its final business of the evening, the council accepted the resignation of Leonard Blecke from the Board of Directors of Villa Wayne.

Draw Dad and win

Several entries have come in and many more are expected as The Wayne Herald's "Draw Dad Contest" enters its second week.

The contest is divided into three age categories: 4 years and younger; 5 to 8 years; and 9 to 12 years. The rules are simple. Just make a sketch of your father and mail it to: Draw Dad, The Wayne Herald, 114 Main Street, Wayne 68787. Or if you prefer, deliver it in person to The Wayne Herald's office.

On the back of the drawing print your name, age, father's name, address and phone number. Drawings should be no larger than 8 by 10 inches. Dark ink or lead on light colored paper or newsprint is preferred.

First and second prizes will be awarded in each age division. A new fishing rod and reel will be given for first prize and a Playmate cooler will be given for second place. The prizes would make great gifts for Father's Day.

Deadline for the contest is 5 p.m. Thursday, June 16 and judging will take place on Friday, June 17. Only two weeks remain before the contest deadline, so get busy.

Winning entries will be printed in the June 20 edition of The Wayne Herald.

Wayne lottery drawing is scheduled tonight

Tonight (Thursday) is the night many persons have been waiting for.

Tonight 13 lucky persons will win cash prizes in the first drawing of the Wayne Lottery. The winning names will be drawn beginning at 7 p.m. in downtown Wayne.

The first place winner will be awarded 40 percent of the total prize money and 12 second place winners will receive 5 percent each. The total amount of prize money will be determined by the number of tickets sold. Wayne's lottery was inflated May 1 and a drawing will be held each month. Winning numbers will be posted in city hall and at vendors or call 325-4160.

The administrator said he is pleased with the start of the lottery and added that more aggressive promotion will add to its future success. New vendors have been opened and more requests will be filled, he added.

June's lottery should show a big upturn from May, Kloster stated. Tickets for June's drawing can be purchased throughout the next 4 weeks.

Veteran carries reminder of WWII

By Randy Hascall

Chris Bargholz carries with him at all times a reminder of World War II. His reminder is a scar which was left when a sniper's bullet pierced his back and came out the front side of his shoulder in April of 1945.

Bargholz, a member of a tank destroyer outfit, had been shot at several other times but had been lucky. "Either I moved fast or their aim was off," he jokes.

In a way, he was lucky the last time too. Although the sniper hit his target, the bullet missed Bargholz' spinal column by an inch. "My rabbit's foot was in the right place," he said.

AFTER THE SHOOTING, a soldier with Bargholz turned his jeep around and drove him to first aid personnel. The main artery in Bargholz' right arm and shoulder had been pierced and he lost a lot of blood.

It took a couple of weeks for him to recover enough so he could be flown back to England. Chris said he noticed one bottle of blood he was given was labeled "English girl." "Now, I have some English blood mixed with the German," he jokes.

Bargholz was discharged in 1947—two years after he was wounded. He was awarded a Purple Heart and other medals for his dedication and bravery in the war.

BARGHOLZ HASN'T missed a Memorial Day program since he came back to the United States. He helped arrange this year's Memorial Day activities in Wayne and served as parade chairman and chaplain in the program.

Chris is adjutant and chaplain for the American Legion, adjutant and treasurer for the Disabled American Veterans, District III commander, historian and department executive committeeman for the state.

He also is a member of the Military Order of the Purple Heart, and 40 and 8—an honor society of the American Legion. Bargholz said the primary goal of veterans organizations is to help ailing vets and their families. "They're basically all there for the same purpose but follow different routes," he said.

Chris was named "Commander of the Year" and presented the statewide "Because he cares" award at the 33rd department convention of the Disabled Veterans held May 20-22.

The latter award was made for service to veterans, membership work and for showing an increase in membership. It is presented in memory of Kimberly Moore by her parents. She volunteered many hours of work at V.A. hospitals before her death at age 18.

The convention in Ogallala was attended by Bargholz and his wife Verba as well as John and Joan Schaefer of Wayne. Wayne's auxiliary was presented with certificates for Hospital and American Legion programs and an award for continuous efforts in helping disabled veterans and their families.

CHRIS BARGHOLZ has been actively involved with every Wayne Memorial Day program since World War II.

Alcohol related accidents are not pretty sights

Editor's note: This guest editorial is reprinted from the Saratoga Sun and Menominee County Journal. It was written by a Canadian highway patrolman.

This is an open letter to all parents of all young people everywhere. I am writing in response to some of the questions you ask me daily. I am not one police officer, but represent every officer in every city and town in Canada.

You may know me only as the cop who gave you a ticket last summer, but I am also the guy who lives down the street from you...and I share with you the same hope, ambition and dreams that you have for your children...

The scene is a long stretch of highway with a sharp curve at one end. It has been raining and roads were slick. A car traveling in excess of 80 miles an hour missed the curve and plowed into an embankment where it became airborne and struck a tree. At this point, two of the three young persons were hurled from the vehicle...One is killed instantly, and he is the lucky one.

A girl thrown into the tree has her neck broken and, although she was voted queen of the senior prom, she will now spend the next 60 years in a wheelchair. Unable to do anything else, she will live and relive that terrible moment over and over again many times...

The driver is conscious, but in shock and unable to free himself from under the bent, twisted steering column. His face will be forever scarred by deep cuts from broken glass and jagged metal. Those cuts will heal, but the ones inside cannot be touched by the skilled surgeon's scalpel.

The third passenger has almost stopped bleeding. The seat and his clothing are covered in blood from an artery cut in his arm by the broken bone that protrudes from his forearm just below the elbow. His breath comes in gasps as he tries desperately to suck air past his blood-filled airway. He is unable to speak and his eyes, bulged and fixed on me pleadingly, are the only communication that he is terrified and wants my help.

I feel a pang of guilt and recognize him as the boy I let off with a warning the other night for an open container of alcohol in his car. Maybe if I had cited him then, he wouldn't be here now. Who knows? I don't.

He died soundlessly in my arms, his pale blue eyes staring vacantly as if trying to see into the future he will never have. I remember watching him playing basketball, and wonder what will happen to the scholarship he will never use.

Dully my mind focuses on a loud screaming, and I identify it as the girl who was thrown from the vehicle. I race to her with a blanket, but I am afraid to move her. Her head is tilted at an exaggerated angle. She seems unaware of my presence there and whimpers for her mother like a little child.

In the distance I hear the mournful wail of the ambulance winding its way through the rainy night. I am filled with incredible grief at the waste of so valuable a resource, our youth.

I am sick with anger and frustration with parents and leaders who think a little bit of alcohol won't hurt anything. I am filled with contempt for people who propose lowering the drinking age "because they will get booze anyway, so why not make it legal." I am frustrated with laws, court rulings and other legal maneuvering that restrict my ability to do my job in preventing this kind of tragedy.

The ambulance begins the job of scraping up and removing the dead and injured. I stand by, watching as hot tears mingle with rain and drop off my cheeks.

I would give anything to know who furnished those young people with that booze. I will spend several hours on reports and several months trying to erase from memory the details of that night. I will not be alone. The driver will recover and spend the rest of his life trying to forget. I know the memory of this fatal accident will be diluted mixed with other similar accidents I will be called upon to cover.

Yes, I am angry, and sick at heart with trying to do my job. I pray to God that I might never have to face another parent in the middle of the night and say your daughter, Susan, or your son, Bill, has just been killed in a car accident.

You ask me, why did this happen? It could have happened because a young person, stoned out of his mind, thought he could handle two tons of hurtling death at 80 mph. It could have happened because an adult, trying to be a "good guy," bought for or sold to some minor a case of beer.

It happened because you, as parents, weren't concerned enough about your child to know where he was and what he was doing; and you were unconcerned about minors and alcohol abuse and would blame me for harassing them when I was only trying to prevent this kind of tragedy.

It happened because, as people say, you believe this sort of thing only happens to someone else.

For your sake, I hope it doesn't happen to you; but if you continue to regard alcohol abuse as part of growing up, then please keep your porch light on...because some cold, rainy night you will find me at your doorstep, staring at my feet, with a message of death for you.

America's biggest rip-off

It's the biggest rip-off in American history. It soaks 230 million Americans every year, and the "take" is tens of billions of dollars.

I'm talking about tax bracket creep: the way Big Government uses inflation to line its own pockets. The rip-off works like this: what cost you $100 in 1967 now costs nearly three times as much. "But so what?" you might ask yourself. While everything costs three times as much, you're earning three times as much, so everything averages out, right?

Wrong! Fifteen years ago, if you earned $25,000 a year you'd have been pretty well-off, and the government taxes you at a high rate because you were pretty well-off. Today, you may be earning $25,000, living like someone who made $8,500 in 1967, but paying rich man's taxes. Prices rise, and salaries rise along with them, but every time they go up a notch, you go into a higher and higher tax bracket with no increase in standard of living to show for it. Welcome to bracket creep!

If inflation were as bad as in some countries, you could be living on porks and beans and paying caviar-style taxes!

While bracket creep is a nightmare for working Americans, it's tons of fun for the big spenders in Congress. Without ever having to put their necks on the line by voting for tax increases, they can spend and spend, inflate and inflate, sock you with bracket creep, and laugh all the way to the bank.

Fortunately, there's a way to stop the rip-off, and it's called indexing. Indexing means that tax brackets "float" with wages and prices. No matter what happens to inflation, if you earn a moderate salary, you pay moderate taxes, and the only way government can raise your taxes is by passing a law that all can see.

Back in 1981, President Reagan passed indexing laws along with his historic tax cuts. According to the laws, indexing is supposed to start in 1985, but the big spenders are out to stop it. For them, indexing means the end of the gravy train. They argue that inflation is no longer a problem, so we have nothing to fear from bracket creep. They want us to trust them.

But with indexing, we don't have to trust them. If in one year, five years, or fifteen years, the big spenders fall back into their old tricks of inflationary binges, we'll still have indexing laws to protect us from bracket creep.

If President Reagan has his way, and indexing laws become effective in 1985, we're free from bracket creep. But if the big spenders have their way, it will be just as if President Reagan's indexing victory never happened. We'll be just like before, lined up and gawking while the big spenders take us to the cleaners with the old inflationary shell game.

Across the board

Energy conservation has become part of the American consciousness. But Americans are more likely to cut back on car or small appliance use, rather than cutting back across the board.

Many people start to conserve by turning off lights and curtailing their use of small appliances. But a typical home's energy use might be: heating and cooling — 60 percent; heating water — 15 percent; cooking and refrigerating food — 13 percent; and lighting and other appliances — 12 percent.

It's easy to see where to start: with your furnace and air conditioner. This means adjusting the thermostat down in the winter and up in the summer. It also means making the house more energy efficient by using caulking and weathersripping, insulation and storm windows and doors.

The next place to consider is appliances that use hot water — the dishwasher and automatic washer. Common sense is the watchword — for example, using them only for full loads, choosing cool water for less soil clothes.

We can control energy use in the kitchen just by thinking first. Put lids on pots, use the oven for cooking several foods at once and decide what you want before you open the refrigerator door. Using small appliances to cook small amounts of food can save energy also.

Try to cut back on everything across the board, rather than cutting back on particular items such as the car or small appliances. But turning off lights we don't need and using only our other appliances when we really need them is a good idea.

Unicameral handles 2 major issues

By Melvin Paul
Nebraska Press Association

Compared to other recent legislative sessions, the 1983 session wound down rather neatly last week.

Lawmakers this year left only a few of the major issues until the very end.

The state budget, the multibank holding company issue, the elimination of the food sales tax and the transfer of tax rate setting authority from the Board of Equalization to the Legislature were decided relatively early in the session.

Two major issues that did wait for the last few days for attention were Gov. Bob Kerrey's major economic development proposal and a bill granting an income tax credit for the sales tax which Nebraskans will pay on food during 1983.

ON WEDNESDAY, the final day of session, Kerrey's economic development bill, which had been beleaguered by legislative opposition for much of its early life, received 32-17 final approval.

In March, Kerrey asked in a speech to the Legislature for the authority contained in the bill, LB 626.

It combines three existing bond issuing agencies — the Nebraska Mortgage Finance Fund, the Nebraska Agricultural Development Corp. and the Nebraska Development Finance Fund — into a single entity to be known as the Nebraska Investment Finance Authority.

NIFA will have broad authority to issue revenue bonds to provide lower-than-market interest rates for financing commercial activity in the state. The existing bond agencies were established over the last five years to issue bonds for limited purposes — housing, farming and industrial development in substandard areas.

NIFA bond issues will be authorized by a nine-member board. Members include the state director of economic development, chairman of the Nebraska Investment Council, the state agriculture director and six gubernatorial appointees.

THE NIFA legislation requires that the board reflect a geographical and political balance, and that a share of bond financing be set aside for small business.

Opposition to the measure came mainly from senators with philosophical objections to bond financing of private enterprises. In using the bonds, the state competes with private lenders, opponents say. By increasing the number of tax-exempt bonds available to investors, senators argued, the state raises the interest rates which local governments must pay on their general obligation bonds for essential public works such as streets and sewers.

Supporters of the bill noted that tax-exempt bonds are used widely by other states, and are necessary to keep Nebraska economic development efforts competitive.

On Tuesday, the 89th day of the 90-day session, lawmakers passed a bill which will give Nebraskans a 21-a-person credit on their 1983 state income tax.

The action is expected to prompt an increase in the state income tax rate when the state Board of Equalization meets this month to review tax rates.

THE LEGISLATURE gave 36-17 final approval to LB 17, the bill which grants the credit, and Kerrey signed it.

Legislative action on the credit followed enactment of LB 363, a bill which repeals the sales tax on groceries effective Oct. 1.

The $21-a-person income tax credit theoretically reimburses Nebraskans for the sales tax they paid on food during the nine months of 1983 during which the sales tax will have been levied on grocery purchases.

When he signed LB 363, Kerrey urged lawmakers to consider a $7-a-person credit for 1983. The credit would offset grocery sales taxes paid from July through September, and would eliminate an $11 million state revenue windfall expected from the repeal of the sales tax on groceries.

Lawmakers adopted the larger credit during floor debate on LB 17.

The $21 credit is expected to cost the state $32 million next year. The revenue windfall from the grocery sales tax repeal is expected to partially finance the cost of the credit.

Social security segregation

Distinction of coverage makes little sense

In 1967, Congress placed ministers and members of religious orders under social security on a compulsory basis with certain exceptions. Congress directed members of the clergy to make payments under the Self-Employed Contributions Act (SECA) to avoid the question of direct federal taxation of religious institutions. These SECA rates currently amount to 75 percent of the combined employer-employee rate under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA). They are scheduled to increase to 100 percent of the combined rate on Jan. 1, 1984.

However, ministerial employees of churches will continue to be treated as self-employed for social security purposes and will be required to pay the higher SECA rates. This segregation of members of the clergy makes little sense, especially when most clergy are considered common-law employees for income tax purposes.

I am a cosponsor of a bill that would eliminate this distinction and place ministers and members of religious orders under the same social security provisions that will govern other church employees next year. It requires churches to match both employee and ministerial contributions to the social security trust funds. Ministers who serve several congregations and are treated as self-employed for income tax purposes will continue to pay SECA rates as before.

Devoted dancer

Wayne woman pursues career despite disability

By LaVon Anderson

Being declared legally blind has not kept one Wayne woman from realizing a dream she harbored as a child.

As a young woman, that dream turned into a "burning desire." "I'd always wanted to dance," says 32-year-old Mary Halverstadt, who is currently choreographing the Wayne State College production of "Godspell."

"GODSPELL," which opens tonight (Thursday) in Wayne State College's Ramsey Theatre, is being produced as part of a special three-week theatre course session offered at Wayne State.

Juli Burney, an instructor at Wayne State, is directing the production, which also will be staged Friday night, June 3.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. each evening and tickets are $3 at the door.

Connie Linder of Onawa, Iowa is a vocal director for the production, and Scott Hall of Wayne is directing the orchestra.

AS CHOREOGRAPHER of "Godspell," Mary said her work involves working with the entire cast, including daily warm-up sessions.

She added that although the play involves a lot of movement and cast members have only been rehearsing together for two and a half weeks, the kids have been great.

"Most of them did not have any dance background," said Mary, adding what while some have a background in theatre, others come from a vocal background.

Mary stressed that another enjoyable aspect of the production is the fact that all of the directors, including the vocal and orchestra director, work very well together.

"It's not often in a production that you find such a pleasant working relationship between all of the directors," she added.

ALTHOUGH MARY was declared legally blind several years ago, she stresses that her handicap has never interfered with her career as a dancer.

The term legally blind refers to vision that is 20/200 or worse and non-correctable.

"When you're on stage you don't have to see the audience, you just have to stay in the lighted area," laughs Mary.

"My handicap has never been a problem when I dance, and if it has, I've just automatically adjusted because of the fact I've had the condition for so long."

MARY SAID her family first noticed her vision problem when she was a seventh grader in school.

"I had always worn glasses and when I was in seventh grade the doctors began to notice that the lenses weren't correcting my eyesight."

Five years later, Mary's condition was diagnosed as progressive foveal dystrophy, involving a mutation of the genes.

Although Mary will never become totally blind, she says the condition has worsened as she has grown older.

AS A DANCER, my limited vision is not a problem. "As a teacher of dance," adds Mary, "that's a different story."

Mary explains that while most dance teachers remain at the front of the classroom, she must constantly walk among the students for closer contact.

"It's no big deal," she says. "The big deal is that I have a hard time reading."

"That's more of a frustration to me because it takes me forever to read a book."

A RESIDENT OF Wayne since last August, Mary pursued her dream of dancing while attending Kansas State Teachers College in Emporia. "I had always dreamed of taking a dance class, however the opportunity just never came along when I was younger."

Although she enjoyed the dance class, Mary set aside her dreams of dancing while working toward a triple major in mathematics, physics and chemistry, receiving her degree in 1972.

IT WAS WHILE she was attending Kansas State that Mary met her husband, Don.

The couple moved to Wichita, Kan., where Don was manager of User Services for the computer center at Wichita State University.

Mary credits Don for persuading her to continue her involvement in dance.

"Don suggested I check out the University to see if they offered any dance classes. I still had this burning desire inside."

Mary took classes in jazz, ballet and modern dance the first semester, and later became involved in the University's student performing company.

"That was in 1973," says Mary, "and from there it just sort of grew."

"I took more classes and decided dancing was something I really wanted to pursue."

MARY BEGAN assisting with various dance classes, and later was hired by the University to teach a class in dancing.

"I was working full time and only getting paid for half the time," laughs Mary, adding that because she had no degree in dance, she also had no clout.

"That's when I decided to get a master's degree in dance from the University of Colorado at Boulder."

Mary was accepted in the University's graduate program and received her masters degree in May of last year.

The following August she moved to Wayne with her husband, who is director of Management Information Services at Wayne State College.

MARY HAS BECOME involved in several dance projects since moving to Wayne nine months ago.

In addition to choreographing "Godspell," she has been hired by the Wayne Community Theatre to work as a choreographer on their upcoming fall production of "South Pacific."

In addition, she was hired by Wayne State College this spring to teach a six-week extended course in theatre dance.

Last fall, she served as a sponsor for Wayne State's Aristocats drill team, which performs at all home basketball games.

IN ADDITION, Mary has become active in the Nebraska Arts Council, where she serves as an evaluator for groups touring throughout the state.

She also has been named an approved artist in the dance division of the Arts Council and beginning Sept. 1 will do residencies throughout the state.

Mary also plans to teach several classes in dance for residents of the Wayne community this summer, ranging from creative movement for pre-schoolers to tap dancing for adults.

Choreographer Mary Halverstadt performs warm-up exercises before beginning work on the Wayne State College production of "Godspell."

Photography: LaVon Anderson

"I'D LIKE TO STAY in performing a little bit longer," says Mary, adding that one of her goals is to someday have her own performing company, either professional or semi-professional.

"I really don't think about the fact that I'm legally blind," smiles Mary, adding that one of her greatest enjoyments while living in Wichita was working as an orientation and mobility instructor helping other blind or legally blind persons.

"I DON'T LOOK at myself as being handicapped," Mary points out. "Sure you get frustrated sometimes, but you also learn to work through it."

'South Pacific' auditions set Community Theatre participation requires only desire, willingness

Wayne area residents are encouraged to audition this weekend for Rodgers and Hammerstein's Pulitzer Prize-winning musical, "South Pacific."

The play will be presented Aug. 26, 27 and 28 by the Wayne Community Theatre.

Publicity chairman Helen Russell said auditions will be held Saturday and Sunday, June 4 and 5, in Ramsey Theatre on the Wayne State College campus. Tryouts both days will be from 2 to 5 p.m.

Directing the production will be Ted Blendenman. Persons unable to attend this weekend's scheduled auditions may contact Blendenman for possible tryouts at a later date.

RUSSELL SAID convincing more people to participate in plays and musicals has been a frequent topic of discussion at monthly Wayne Community Theatre board of directors meetings.

"Many Wayne area residents probably have the desire to participate," said Russell, "but feel hesitant to audition for roles because they lack theatre training or experience."

"In community theatre," added Russell, "training and experience are not prerequisites for being cast."

Russell pointed out that the only requisites are a desire to have a good time in a unique social activity and the willingness to give of one's time and talent.

FOR PERSONS who would like to be involved in theatre productions but do not wish to be on stage, Russell said there are many important and rewarding backstage jobs essential to the finished production.

"Without set builders, painters, property crews, costume crews, stage managers, lighting technicians, publicity crews and ticket and house managers, there would be no production," Russell stressed.

"None of these jobs require experience or special training," she added.

MUSICAL HIGHLIGHTS from "South Pacific" include "Some Enchanted Evening," "I'm in Love With a Wonderful Guy," "Younger Than Springtime," "There's Nothin' Like a Dame," "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outa My Hair," "Bali Hai," "This Nearly Was Mine" and "You've Got to be Carefully Taught."

The story involves Nellie Forbush, a bright, wholesome, small-town girl and Navy nurse, who falls in love with Emile DeBique, a mature and friendly

French painter. Paralleling their love story is Joe Cable, a handsome young officer, and Liat, the beautiful, devoted Tonkinese daughter of Bloody Mary who is a shrewd entrepreneur selling souvenirs to the American sailors.

Rounding out the colorful cast are islanders, sailors, seabees, marines, nurses and officers.

"South Pacific" takes place on an island occupied by the American Navy during World War II.

Devoted dancer

Wayne woman pursues career despite disability

By LaVon Anderson

Being declared legally blind has not kept one Wayne woman from realizing a dream she harbored as a child.

As a young woman, that dream turned into a "burning desire." "I'd always wanted to dance," says 32-year-old Mary Halverstadt, who is currently choreographing the Wayne State College production of "Godspell."

"GOSPELL," which opens tonight (Thursday) in Wayne State College's Ramsey Theatre, is being produced as part of a special three-week theatre course session offered at Wayne State.

Jull Burney, an instructor at Wayne State, is directing the production, which also will be staged Friday night, June 3. Curtain time is 8 p.m. each evening and tickets are $3 at the door.

Connie Linder of Onawa, Iowa is a vocal director for the production, and Scott Hall of Wayne is directing the orchestra.

AS CHOREOGRAPHER of "Godspell," Mary said her work involves working with the entire cast, including daily warm-up sessions.

She added that although the play involves a lot of movement and cast members have only been rehearsing together for two and a half weeks, the kids have been great.

"Most of them did not have any dance background," said Mary, adding what while some have a background in theatre, others come from a vocal background.

Mary stressed that another enjoyable aspect of the production is the fact that all of the directors, including the vocal and orchestra director, work very well together.

"It's not often in a production that you find such a pleasant working relationship between all of the directors," she added.

ALTHOUGH MARY was declared legally blind several years ago, she stresses that her handicap has never interfered with her career as a dancer.

The term legally blind refers to vision that is 20/200 or worse and non-correctable.

"When you're on stage you don't have to see the audience, you just have to stay in the lighted area," laughs Mary.

"My handicap has never been a problem when I dance, and if it has, I've just automatically adjusted because of the fact I've had the condition for so long."

MARY SAID her family first noticed her vision problem when she was a seventh grader in school.

"I had always worn glasses and when I was in seventh grade the doctors began to notice that the lenses weren't correcting my eyesight."

Five years later, Mary's condition was diagnosed as progressive retinal dystrophy, involving a mutation of the genes.

Although Mary will never become totally blind, she says the condition has worsened as she has grown older.

"AS A DANCER, my limited vision is not a problem."

"As a teacher of dance," adds Mary, "that's a different story."

Mary explains that while most dance teachers remain at the front of the classroom, she must constantly walk among the students for closer contact.

"It's no big deal," she says. "The big deal is that I have a hard time reading."

"That's more of a frustration to me because it takes me forever to read a book."

A RESIDENT OF Wayne since last August, Mary pursued her dream of dancing while attending Kansas State Teachers College in Emporia.

"I had always dreamed of taking a dance class, however the opportunity just never came along when I was younger."

Although she enjoyed the dance class, Mary set aside her dreams of dancing while working toward a triple major in mathematics, physics and chemistry, receiving her degree in 1972.

IT WAS WHILE she was attending Kansas State that Mary met her husband, Don.

The couple moved to Wichita, Kan., where Don was manager of User Services for the computer center at Wichita State University.

Mary credits Don for persuading her to continue her involvement in dance.

"Don suggested I check out the University to see if they offered any dance classes. I still had this burning desire inside."

Mary took classes in jazz, ballet and modern dance the first semester, and later became involved in the University's student performing company.

"That was in 1973," says Mary, "and from there it just sort of grew."

"I took more classes and decided dancing was something I really wanted to pursue."

MARY BEGAN assisting with various dance classes, and later was hired by the University to teach a class in dancing.

"I was working full time and only getting paid for half the time," laughs Mary, adding that because she had no degree in dance, she also had no clout.

"That's when I decided to get a master's degree in dance from the University of Colorado at Boulder."

Mary was accepted in the University's graduate program and received her masters degree in May of last year.

The following August she moved to Wayne with her husband, who is director of Management Information Services at Wayne State College.

MARY HAS BECOME involved in several dance projects since moving to Wayne nine months ago.

In addition to choreographing "Godspell," she has been hired by the Wayne Community Theatre to work as a choreographer on their upcoming fall production of "South Pacific."

In addition, she was hired by Wayne State College this spring to teach a six-week extended course in theatre dance.

Last fall, she served as a sponsor for Wayne State's Aristocats drill team, which performs at all home basketball games.

IN ADDITION, Mary has become active in the Nebraska Arts Council, where she serves as an evaluator for groups touring throughout the state.

She also has been named an approved artist in the dance division of the Arts Council and beginning Sept. 1 will do residencies throughout the state.

Mary also plans to teach several classes in dance for residents of the Wayne community this summer, ranging from creative movement for pre-schoolers to tap dancing for adults.

"I'D LIKE TO STAY in performing a little bit longer," says Mary, adding that one of her goals is to someday have her own performing company, either professional or semi-professional.

"I really don't think about the fact that I'm legally blind," smiles Mary, adding that one of her greatest enjoyments while living in Wichita was working as an orientation and mobility instructor helping other blind or legally blind people.

"That's still an interest of mine and something I may become involved in again," she adds.

"I DON'T LOOK at myself as being handicapped," Mary points out.

"Sure you get frustrated sometimes, but you also learn to work through it."

'South Pacific' auditions set Community Theatre participation requires only desire, willingness

Wayne area residents are encouraged to audition this weekend for Rodger's and Hammerstein's Pulitzer Prize-winning musical, "South Pacific."

The play will be presented Aug. 26, 27 and 28 by the Wayne Community Theatre.

Publicity chairman Helen Russell said auditions will be held Saturday and Sunday, June 4 and 5, in Ramsey Theatre on the Wayne State College campus. Tryouts both days will be from 2 to 5 p.m.

Directing the production will be Ted Blendenman. Persons unable to attend this weekend's scheduled auditions may contact Blendenman for possible tryouts at a later date.

RUSSELL SAID convincing more people to participate in plays and musicals has been a frequent topic of discussion at monthly Wayne Community Theatre board of directors meetings.

"Many Wayne area residents probably have the desire to participate," said Russell, "but feel hesitant to audition for roles because they lack theatre training or experience."

"In community theatre," added Russell, "training and experience are not prerequisites for being cast."

Russell pointed out that the only requisites are a desire to have a good time in a unique social activity and the willingness to give of one's time and talent.

FOR PERSONS who would like to be involved in theatre productions but do not wish to be on stage, Russell said there are many important and rewarding backstage jobs essential to the finished production.

"Without set builders, painters, property crews, costume crews, stage managers; lighting technicians, publicity crews and ticket and house managers, there would be no production," Russell stressed.

"None of these jobs require experience or special training," she added.

MUSICAL HIGHLIGHTS from "South Pacific" include "Some Enchanted Evening," "I'm in Love With a Wonderful Guy," "Younger Than Springtime," "There's Nothin' Like a Dame," "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outa My Hair," "Bali Ha'i," "This Nearly Was Mine" and "You've Got to Be Carefully Taught."

The story involves Nellie Forbush, a bright, wholesome, small town girl and Navy nurse, who falls in love with Emile DeBique, a mature and friendly

French painter. Paralleling their love story is Joe Cable, a handsome young officer, and Liat, the beautiful, devoted Tonkinese daughter of Bloody Mary who is a shrewd entrepreneur selling souvenirs to the American sailors.

OTHER IMPORTANT characters are Luther Billis, chief wheeler-dealer of the Seabees; Stewpot and Professor, his assistants; Ngana and Jerome, Emile's part-Tonkinese children; Captain Brackett, "Old Iron Belly," the Base Commander; Commander Harbison, Second in Command; and Lt. Buzz Adams, a Navy flier. Rounding out the colorful cast are islanders, sailors, seabees, marines, nurses and officers. "South Pacific" takes place on an island occupied by the American Navy during World War II.

A netted yoke and Chantilly lace ruffle made up the bodice, with small Venice lace motif accents on the front ruffle. Satin-covered buttons extended from the neck to the middle of the back. The regular waistline featured a narrow band of Raschel lace and a satin ribbon bow in back.

The skirt was accented with a front and back pleated panel and edged with Venice lace. A Chantilly lace ruffle adorned the chapel-length train.

The men in the wedding party were attired in beige western tuxedos.

Mrs. Owens selected a rose Quilana dress with a lace bodice for her daughter's wedding, and Mrs. Lange chose a mauve Quilana dress with a chiffon jacket.

A long way from pre-fab

To learn more about their heritage, a group of Wayne eighth grade students played the role of early pioneers last week by building a sod house on the Middle School premises.

The students and instructor Dan Johnson cut the sod, rolled it, loaded and unloaded it, and constructed a sod house south of the Middle School.

The group used 3,200 square feet of sod. The sod measured two feet in width—one foot narrower than pioneers constructed their walls. The sod was stacked grass side down and dowels were run through the sod to reinforce it.

The students shingled the roof. Wooden roofs and floors were sometimes built by rich pioneers while poor ones constructed roofs of branches and tar paper with sod on top. Sod on roofs was placed grass up for better absorption.

Johnson said bachelors constructed homes about the same size as or smaller than the one built by his class. A family may have had a house that was a little bigger.

Johnson said there is room for a small stove, a rope bed and a sod bed. He said one of his future classes will try to stucco one wall and whitewash it. Another wall will be papered.

To take advantage of sunlight, a window was put on the south side of the house. Johnson said walls were sometimes stuccoed and sometimes papered with pages from department store catalogs.

Trenches were often dug around the outside of the houses to prevent flooding and erosion of the sod. Benches and other furniture were usually built out of sod.

Johnson said he wishes to thank Ken Liska for the sod and Roger Green of Wayne State College for running the sod cutter.

Wayne tops Madison to open tourney

Wayne's Junior Legion baseball team, opened the 1983 season with a 9 to 2 victory over Madison in the opening game of the Wayne Early Bird Jr. Legion Tournament played Memorial Day weekend in Wayne.

The four-team, round-robin tournament included Wayne, Madison, Norfolk and Wisner.

Wayne batted first and shortstop Tim Pfeiffer started things off quickly with a crisp single to right field on the first pitch. Pfeiffer advanced to second on a bunt by Randy Gamble but Wayne failed to score in the inning.

Randy Gamble reached first on an error by Madison's second baseman with one out in the third inning and was followed by Todd Schwartz who was aided by an error by the catcher.

Jeff McCright then hit a double to center field which was mishandled and accounted for a third Madison error. Gamble and Schwartz scored but McCright was thrown out at home.

Shaddup Ted!

Who dubbed the Atlanta Braves "America's Team" anyway? I have a feeling it was Braves owner and cable T.V. magnate Ted Turner.

Well Ted, I'm sorry, but the Braves are not my team, and the last time I checked I was an American. I'm a loyal Pirates fan and am bravely (excuse the pun) facing another season of so-so pitching in Pittsburgh. Whose team is Pittsburgh? I can see it now...every big-league team could be adopted by a nation. Pittsburgh — "Botswana's Team!"

If the fans in Pittsburgh don't start supporting the Pirates, the team might well consider moving to Botswana. A whopping 1,970 fans turned out May 16 to watch the Pirates lose to the Mets. That was the smallest crowd in Three Rivers Stadium history.

Worth the money

If you get the chance, try to make it to a College World Series game. The series runs from Friday, June 3 to Saturday, June 11 at Omaha's Rosenblatt Stadium. If necessary, a twelfth game will be played on Sunday, June 12.

Omaha is fortunate to be the host for the CWS every year. The reason that CWS officials keep the event in Omaha is because of the tremendous fan support over the years. It's an opportunity to see some future major league stars and some excellent baseball to boot.

Mystery solved

Thanks go out to Hank Overin for answering the question brought up in my last column concerning the varying dimensions of major league baseball parks.

It seems that many of the old ballparks were built in congested urban areas on limited land space. If it was only 390 feet to the center field fence, so be it.

It wasn't until 1958 that the major leagues passed a rule requiring a minimum distance of 400 feet to the center field fence.

It ain't right!

Ah, summer! Water skiing, barbecues, home-made ice cream and...football!

As much as I love the game, I am just not ready for football yet the summer months. The United States Football League's championship game is slated to be played in Denver on July 4. I rather enjoyed the yearly sabbatical from the gridiron grind. Like they say, absence makes the heart grow fonder. I have tried to avoid watching too many USFL games so as not to spoil my fun this fall.

I did watch the game between New Jersey and Michigan on ESPN May 14. I was amazed by the back judge's call after New Jersey defensive back Donnie Harris pushed, then stepped on the foot of the Panther's Anthony Carter, who was running a 30 yard fly pattern. Harris really creamed the guy. The call? A 15 yard penalty marked off from the line of scrimmage instead of the point of interference. In the NFL, Michigan would have faced a first and goal.

Jim Simpson, who was announcing the game for ESPN, commented that USFL rules regarding pass coverage are "much more lax" than the NFL's.

"Unless you hit the man over the head with a club, they're on ly going to call the 15 yard penalty," Simpson said. Geezzzz!

I hate Lott, lots

During that same USFL game, former Oklahoma quarter back Thomas Lott was returning kickoffs for Michigan. Lott must have been reminiscing about his days as a Sooner because he fumbled two kicks. I loved it.

I don't like Thomas Lott. I don't like him because he played football for Oklahoma. I don't like Oklahoma. I don't like Oklahoma because they ruined all but three of my Thanksgivings during the 1970's. I hope Lott tumbles himself right out of a job. I know that's a pretty nasty thing to wish for, but I never said I was a nice guy.

Doomed from the start

If, for no other reason, the USFL is doomed to fail because most of the league owners saw fit to give their teams incredibly stupid names.

The defunct World Football League made the same mistake. The WFL tried to be cute with such tags as the Chicago Fire and the Philadelphia Bell. Imagine sitting in the stadium and yelling "Go Bell!" Gads!

The USFL hasn't done much better with the Chicago Blitz and the Denver Gold. Give me a break.

Seventh inning Crofton barrage spoils Wayne's Tri-County opener

Just when it looked like Wayne's town team was about to notch it's first victory of the young season, Crofton decided to spoil all the fun.

Crofton took advantage of six errors and a seven-run ninth inning to down Wayne 10 to 6 in Tri-County League action last Wednesday, May 25.

Wayne led 5 to 3 going into the ninth inning.

Wayne scored one run in the second inning when shortstop Tim Pfeiffer hit a bases loaded single. Wayne added two more runs in the third and two in the eighth when Bill Schwartz notched a two-run single.

Wayne's starting pitcher Joel Ankeny rallied at the end of the eighth inning and the Crofton team went to work.

Crofton took advantage of the pitching change and scored their fourth run on a single by centerfielder Tom Kuticha with two men on and one out.

The walls caved in on Wayne when the next batter, catcher Dale Merkle, hit a three-run homer. Crofton never looked back.

The next two batters safely reached base and Mike Drozdzman tripled to drive in two more runs. Wayne changed pitchers again but Crofton still managed one more run on a Wayne error.

Wayne finished the game with five hits compared to 13 for Crofton.

Winning pitcher Darrell Mueller, who went the distance for Crofton, finished the game with 12 strike-outs.

Wayne is scheduled to host Laurel Sunday.

Wayne wins by 10-run rule

Jerry Goeden, making his first pitching start of the season, fired a four-hitter to lead Wayne's Town Team to a 13-3 victory over Coleridge Sunday night in Wayne.

Goeden gave up all three of Coleridge's runs in the first inning on a three-run homer by designated hitter Stan Janssen.

Goeden then settled down and limited the visitors to a single in the third inning and a triple in the seventh. The game was shortened to seven runs by the 10-run rule.

THE HOSTS tied the game with three runs in the bottom of the second inning. Mike Meyer reached base on an error. Goeden singled and Jeff Dion walked to load the bases. A single by Tim Pfeiffer and sacrifice bunt by Jeff Zeiss brought in three runs.

In the third, player-coach Bill Schwartz scored the winning run. He doubled and came home on a hit by Meyer. An insurance run was scored by Meyer in the sixth inning.

The game came to a premature end in the seventh inning when Wayne ignited for eight more runs. Player-coach Neil Blohm, Meyer, Goeden, Dion, Pfeiffer, Zeiss, Herman Carroll and Doug Starzl all scored. Key hits were singles by Meyer, Dion and Bill Schwartz and a double by Starzl.

Wayne is scheduled to host Laurel Sunday night in another Tri-County League game.

Grapplers receive check

The Aid Association for Lutherans local branch 1960 of Winside recently presented a check in the amount of $3,000 to the Winside Junior Wrestling Association.

Half of the money was raised at a Jr. Wrestling Tournament earlier this year. The home office of the A.A.L. located in Appleton, Wisc. donated the additional $1,500 through the cooperative benevolence program.

The money will be used to buy new wrestling mats and uniforms for Winside's Jr. wrestlers.

Kovar names Lady Wildcat softball

A dozen of the Wayne State College Lady Wildcat softball players have earned varsity letters for the 1983 season according to head softball Coach Sue Kovar.

All-American DeeDee Reic and teammate Deb Janssen were the only seniors on the squad and each earned her fourth letter as a Lady Wildcat.

A trio of juniors picked up their third letter, including Maggie Alberts, Cindy Gessman and Lori Johnson.

Four Sophomores notched their second monogram in as many years. They included Laurie Owens, Sherry Telschaw, Carmen Doeschot and Suzy Todd.

Earning their first collegiate softball letter were freshmen Teresa Durbala, Sue Walter and Barb Gemberling.

WSC announces baseball lettermen

Wayne State College baseball co-coaches Neil Blohm and Bill Schwartz have announced the names of 21 members of the 1983 Wildcat baseball team who received varsity letters.

Topping the list was senior Chico Mason, picking up his fourth varsity letter. Seniors Craig Ledwig, Tom Todd, Randy Heying and Rocky Thompson each earned their third collegiate letter with the Wildcats.

Jerry Goeden and Dan Connelly were awarded their first baseball letters.

Juniors receiving their third varsity monogram included Dan Hilgenkamp, Jeff Clark, Randy Frink, Rick Guy, Mike Hutcheon, Rich Murcek and Jeff Zeiss.

Wakefield native Doug Starzl earned his second letter, while teammates Neil Brown and Rich Neely earned their first.

A trio of sophomores picked up letters for their performances during the 1983 season. Gregg Cruickshank and Greg Dostal notched their second letter, and Jeff Scham lettered for the first time.

Darin Christensen was the lone freshman on the letterman list, earning his first varsity baseball letter.

Lady Wildcats post wins at nationals

An unheralded and unseeded Wayne State College softball squad advanced to the final eight teams in the NAIA national softball tournament last week before being eliminated from the field and closing out a rewarding 1983 season.

Coach Sue Kovar's Lady Cats went further in the touney than any other unseeded team before being turned back by a strong Winthrop (S.C.) squad. Wayne State thus ends the year with a record of 19-18.

The University of Southern Maine, eighth-seeded in the national touney hosted by Kearney State College, put WSC in the loser's bracket with a 9-1 decision in first-round action Tuesday morning. The Lady Cats stayed alive later that afternoon by eliminating Westminster (Pa.) College 7-4 in nine innings.

On Wednesday, the Lady Cats posted what has to be one of the biggest softball victories in Wayne State history when they downed second-seeded Missouri Western, the defending national champions, in a 1-0 thriller. But WSC's Cinderella hopes ended later that day when third-seeded Winthrop claimed an 11-3 win and sent the Lady Cats home.

Memorial Day services

THE MEMORIAL DAY program in Wayne was held at Greenwood Cemetery and co-sponsored by the Irwin L. Sears American Legion Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars Post and Disabled American Veterans Post and Auxiliary units. The Wayne-Carroll High School band, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts also participated. Memorial Day speaker was Rev. Jim Buschelman of St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Faculty profile

Anton Netherda, associate professor of applied science, has been teaching at Wayne State College (WSC) for 35 years longer than any other teacher currently on the staff. Netherda began his teaching career immediately after he graduated from high school in 1940. He taught for two years in rural schools before enrolling in the Navy Air Force Reserve at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1942. He was called to active duty during World War II, and returned home to Niobrara in 1946. He enrolled at Wayne State that fall and was graduated in 1948 with a bachelor's degree.

Anton Netherda

THE PART-TIME appointment to the WSC faculty he received in 1948 was made full-time in 1949. He taught English and math in the former Hahn Campus School, in addition to teaching industrial arts and safety education at the college level.

In continuing his education, Netherda received his master's degree from Colorado State College in 1952. He also has attended summer sessions at various midwestern schools.

NETHERDA is a member of the American and Nebraska Industrial Arts Association, the National and Nebraska Education Associations, the Nebraska Driver and Traffic Safety Association, Epsilon-Pi-Tau industrial arts fraternity, and the American Legion. Within the community, he has worked with the scouting program, and has served on the City Council and Planning Commission.

"MY GREATEST reward has been in the accomplishments of my students as they have gone out to establish exemplary careers and receive public recognition," Netherda said. He and his wife, Lois, have two grown children, Fred and Mrs. Steve (Jill) Mrsny.

College aid is available

There are thousands of unused college scholarships and loans for which students can and do qualify. The students' problem is to find those for which they qualify.

Student College Aid, a nationwide, computerized, scholarship locator service, with $500,000,000 of non-government awards in its data base, searches out scholarships and loans for students. Students contact the company for free information and a personalized dataform. SCA mails this information to the students.

To use the service, students fill in the dataform as completely as possible. Information as to college major, religious affiliation, club membership, etc. is requested. This information is coded into the computer. The computer searches through thousands of sources and prints out those to which the student is eligible to apply. This printout is mailed to the student, who then contacts the funding sources.

Student College Aid guarantees to furnish at least 5 listings or to refund payment along with those listings discovered. The average number of listings the students receive is 12, valued at $12,000. The fee for this service is $45. There is a discount for families with more than one student. Many freshmen, sophomores, and juniors in high school use the service as a planning tool to increase the likelihood of obtaining grants and scholarships.

SCA has added 3 new services: an Athletic Award Matching Service for women and men, $15; a 4-Year College Matching Service, $19; a Graduate School Scholarship and Loan Locator Service, $47 with a guarantee of at least 3 listings.

For free information and individualized dataforms, write Student College Aid, 3641 Deal St., Houston, Texas 77025 or phone (713) 668-7899. Please indicate year in school.

Graduation quotes clarified

A Wayne High School graduation story in The Wayne Herald carried the following quote by Co-salutatorian Dawn Dreescher: "Thus, some of us will attend college and some will seek employment, but while some may lead fulfilling lives, others may waste their lives away. We must not waste our lives. In the fast-paced technological and business-oriented society of today, we are entrenched now to join in the race and commit the years of our youth to the task of earning our living and building our future." Dawn said she went on to explain in her address that that is what we should not let happen.

Because it was a short excerpt from her speech, Dawn said she felt the statement carried the wrong implication. She would like to have the following passages added to that statement: "The path we choose must provide fulfillment. Whether or not it provides a high level of prestige or excellent earnings is irrelevant. Surely it is much wiser to find your true talent and thus allowing yourself to spend more of your life enjoyably and productively—productively that is for yourself. Thoreau believed, 'The aim of the laborer should be not to get his living, but to perform well a certain work.' "Be an individual. And above all, refuse to commit yourself to society's expectations if they are not the same as your own. The future of this country depends on the attitudes of its people. The more disoriented and dissatisfied we become, the easier we will lose the type of life and freedoms we value so highly today. A strong democratic country is built by individuals. Individuals who have dreams and wish to see them fulfilled. Individuals who are committed to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

TWO LITTLE killdeers follow their mother's much-repeated cry to safety on the outskirts of Wayne. The young killdeers were first spotted half a block off Main Street near Carhart Lumber Company. To lure an inquisitive photographer from its young, the mother acted like it was wounded. Lying on her side, the mother flapped her limp wing in the air, faking injury to a possible predator. It took the killdeer family of four (father, mother and two young) only a few minutes to make its way to the edge of town and coverage in a plowed field.

NU corn breeders help Nebraska growers compete

University of Nebraska corn breeders through their breeding programs aid Nebraska corn growers to compete with growers in the United States and the world.

Nebraska needs a corn breeding program targeted to its particular needs, said William Compton, University of Nebraska corn breeder and agronomist, because its climate differs from conditions in the eastern central Corn Belt where many breeding programs take place.

This state's hot, dry winds during summer, its wide-ranging temperature extremes between night and day, its lower humidity and wide variation in elevation mean corn varieties bred farther east don't grow as well here as they did at "home" in Iowa, Illinois or Indiana, Compton said. Nebraska corn diseases and insects are different, he added, and Nebraska farmers are more likely to irrigate corn.

NEBRASKA GROWERS depend on this region's breeders to improve corn varieties grown here at the same rate the scientist's brethren farther east improve corn there. If corn prices go down, the eastern farmers' production costs drop faster than Nebraska farmers, then our growers lose out," he said.

So, even though the NU breeders exchange seed and information with corn breeders around the country and around the world, they concentrate their own efforts on improving types of corn grown in Nebraska, he said.

Averaging an overall yield increase of about a bushel to a bushel and a half per acre per year, Compton and Charles Gardner, NU corn breeder and agronomist, aim for long-term gradual corn crop improvement.

It's a game of complex statistical measures, complicated breeding programs and luck, the two geneticists said. And the kinds of breeding programs they employ often differ from those corn breeders in private industry use.

Gardner cites his recurrent selection program as a long-term breeding program which private seed companies probably wouldn't use. He's under less pressure from the market place, he explained.

GARDNER DESCRIBED recurrent selection as "peeling off" the best 10 percent of corn varieties under review, then planting that best 10 percent of corn varieties under review, then planting that best 10 percent the next year and, again, selecting the top 10 percent. It goes on and on. He's just finished the 28th year of this type of selection for one corn variety, he said.

Gardner called this type of breeding "base population improvement" and explained that he tries to improve the varietal populations from which many inbred corn lines and corn hybrids found their source. Populations have wide genetic diversity, with many different plant characteristics "cropping" up within them.

Corn lines are created by inbreeding population members. In a sense, lines are corn "families," a consequence of about six years of self-pollination, or inbreeding. The lines are homogenous genetically and have fewer traits than more heterogeneous populations — they're "dumber" genetically because inbreeding results in fewer traits recorded in the plant's genes. They often look weak and spindly.

But if two different inbred lines are crossed, boom you have a hybrid towering over both former parents. The plants again have a wide genetic background and, if things go right, the corn out-performs past hybrids.

WHILE HYBRIDS have been restored with a wide genetic background compared to inbred lines, breeders also have gained some control over the plant's characteristics.

In U.S. history, hybridization, fueled by mechanical and chemical innovations, dramatically increased crop yields from the end of World War II through the 1960s and 1970s.

Gardner, internationally known for designing population improvement breeding strategies, attempts to increase the number of times favorable traits occur within populations and to design new breeding strategies to get this done more efficiently. He called this "basic" research.

Compton's work, also internationally known, falls more in the "applied" research area. He takes improved populations and begins inbreeding, trying to develop new and improved corn lines. When he develops new lines and identifies which of them cross to form usable hybrids, he releases these to industrial corn breeders. They might market it immediately, or refine the line further. That's why it's called applied research.

Despite a seeming difference in how the breeders describe their work, they often find themselves performing similar breeding programs, Gardner said. Also, both rely on long-term gradual crop improvement.

COMPTON LAST FALL finished the fourth 3-year cycle of what he called his reciprocal full-sibling recurrent selection system.

He starts with various unrelated corn families, or inbred lines. They're called prolific lines because they produce more than one corn ear.

Workers march between corn rows carrying bags of pollen. They cross top ears between the rows and self-pollinate bottom ears within the rows. They sequence row crosses carefully to allow for all possible genetic variation, Compton said.

During the second year, the top ear crosses are tested for yield and the "selfed" seed goes into storage. After harvest, Compton selects the top 10 percent of the crosses.

They plant that top 10 percent again the third year using selfed seed in storage, and those best performing lines are recombined, finishing the cycle's third year in NU's corn nursery.

THE BREEDERS have other long-term projects. For instance, Gardner last season finished the 10th generation of cold tolerance selection. He wants to develop varieties which can withstand cold April nights. That way Nebraska farmers can plant corn earlier.

Also, the Nebraska Corn Development, Utilization and Marketing Board has funded disease resistance selection at NU. Currently, the funding pays for selection research for lines resistant to corn lethal necrosis, caused by two interacting viruses, according to Compton; leaf freckles and wilt (Goss's Wilt), a bacterial disease; and fusarium stalk rot, caused by fungi.

The corn crew inoculated 25,000 corn plants last season in the field and in the greenhouse, Compton said.

In the field, some inoculations require "literally crawling up each row, jabbing a sharpened nail in the stalk" and inserting a toothpick impregnated with pathogen, he said.

University corn breeders have the luxury of being able to devote time and energy to long-term improvement, Gardner said, while industry breeders respond to market pressures. NU breeders can fall back to population improvement, he said, but private breeders are more likely to rely on an already established, and narrowed, genetic base for quicker improvement of inbred lines.

"A LARGE PART of their effort goes into simply crossing two elite lines and making new lines out of that," Gardner said, adding that he doesn't think that's the best way to create new lines. He recommended that private seed corn companies start more recurrent selection programs, which he said would raise the general quality of population traits and lead to better lines.

Compton agreed with Gardner's assessment of short-term industrial breeding programs and added: "My job is to see farther down the road than that" when seeking out new corn lines.

Turning the tables, Gardner said commercial seed companies have two points of view on whether university experiment stations, such as NU's Institute of Agriculture, an Natural Resources, should breed new corn lines and new corn hybrids — it depends on how much of their own money they put into research.

"The large corn companies would like to see public breeders completely out of inbred line development," except, perhaps, to check out how a newly developed breeding system works, he said.

Smaller seed companies depend more on universities to release lines which cross to form hybrids suited to the region, Gardner added, so they can compete with the larger companies.

While corporate breeders outnumber public corn breeders, Gardner said, many of the best lines still come from University research — and public breeders owe this success to long-term selection research.

Genetic improvement is sought

A worker reaches up, bends down a 7-foot corn stalk and wraps the bag fastened over the plant's tassel. He removes the bag and peers inside — golden pollen from the plant's tassel lines the bag.

Removing the waist-high shoot bag, he uncovers corn silks. Carefully avoiding contamination from airborne pollen, he pours the pollen from inside the bag onto the silk and staples the bag over what later becomes a corn ear.

Perhaps from that ear a new line will follow — one that could help feed a hungry world. Probably not though, for disappointment is more common than new corn lines.

Still the University of Nebraska corn research field crew will hang 50,000 to 60,000 tassel bags, will use 80,000 shoot bags and probably will end a summer having made 40,000 to 50,000 individual hand pollinations.

"THE LIFE of a corn breeder is to get excited," said William Compton, University of Nebraska agronomist and corn breeder. "We have new lines we get excited about all the time. Mostly it's a matter of finding out what the faults are — usually the faults cause them to be dropped."

Charles Gardner, also a NU corn breeder and agronomist, said the chances of breeding a "super line," and from that line developing a hybrid, are low.

Commercial hybrid corn companies make literally thousands and thousands of lines, and very few make it," Gardner said. The NU corn breeders try to up the percentage of usable new corn lines commercial breeders produce for Nebraska farmers. They spend much of their research time trying to improve germ plasm resources, the genetic base of corn varieties which companies inbreed and hybridize.

Germ plasm refers to genetic information recorded in plant seed DNA. Manipulating this information renders changes in plant traits, either for benefit or disadvantage, according to Compton.

The scientists manipulate this genetic information by selectively mating corn plants according to strict procedures. They might self-pollinate or "self" a plant by taking pollen (sperm) from the male tassel and pour it into female silks farther down the same plant.

THEY MIGHT backcross, which involves crossing two lines one year, planting that cross the next year and crossing back to one of the original parent lines.

They might cross between lines and test the resulting hybrid for yield the next season.

There are other breeding strategies, and they steadily get more complex as corn breeders try to improve the varieties' disease resistance, yield, standability and climate tolerance.

Primarily, Compton identifies improved germ plasm resources at NU and releases those for use by private breeders. Gardner improves base populations, the varieties from which new lines and hybrids are developed, and seeks out more efficient strategies for breeding those lines and hybrids.

Their jobs differ, but their responsibilities often overlap and they use many of the same methods, Gardner noted.

Progress comes slowly. "Overall, it may be a bushel per acre per year, maybe a bushel and a half per acre per year," Compton said.

COMPTON SAID his program emphasizes improvement in yield, standability and dropped ears. He also measures moisture at harvest. That tells him how mature the seed is and gives him a more accurate yield weight per acre.

He uses a statistical index that takes into account all those four variable qualities.

Both geneticists are well known in national and international corn breeding circles for their breeding programs. Graduate students come from many countries to study under their supervision. Their knowledge of breeding strategies often takes them to foreign lands. Gardner is known internationally for refinement of basic quantitative genetic theory. Compton for applying those theories to field research.

"I'm trying to increase the frequencies of favorable genes in populations so that through our selection program we can crank out superior lines which make superior hybrids," Gardner said.

"I'm interested in more efficient breeding systems, in the utilization of more exotic germ plasm, and in the development and application of theory that's related to those for corn improvement and for broadening the genetic base of material going into new lines and hybrids," he added.

"We have this thing called genetic vulnerability," he said, "which everybody talks about now."

Foreign corn varieties could lead to crop protection

When southern corn leaf blight swept through the central Corn Belt in 1970, lowering the region's yields by about one-third, plant breeders realized the genetic base of corn, and other U.S. crops, had narrowed dangerously.

Blame fell on Texas male sterile cytoplasm, a genetic ingredient then commonly used because it made plants sterile and eliminated expensive detasseling. That genetic ingredient also made corn susceptible to the disease.

Texas male sterile cytoplasm was rapidly dropped from U.S. corn breeding programs around the United States, but corn, and other U.S. crops, remain genetically vulnerable to disease and climatic changes, Charles Gardner said.

Gardner, a University of Nebraska agronomy professor and corn breeder, said it is a problem of too's: Too few hybrids of too similar a genetic background grown on too many Nebraska acres.

Gardner and William Compton, a NU corn breeder and agronomy professor, seek to broaden the genetic base of corn in this state.

INTRODUCING EXOTIC germ plasm, or importing the genetic information recorded in plant seed DNA from other world regions, is the easiest way to broaden corn's genetic base, Compton said.

Both scientists have drawn exotic varieties into NU breeding programs and have sent Nebraska varieties around the globe.

They interbreed varieties from South America, Caribbean Sea Islands, the Philippines, Yugoslavia, Romania, Mexico and People's Republic of China with Nebraska varieties.

The scientists combine varieties and try to find which crosses improved the Nebraska variety, or at least show promise for Nebraska corn growers.

And drawing upon exotic germ plasm may pay off for Nebraska farmers in the form of a corn plant 3 to 4 feet tall, Gardner said. Since it's so short, it allows more sunlight into the row, thus farmers could plant more per acre — more than double what they can now — and increase yields.

CALLED MEXICAN super dwarf, the plant also has some Chinese background, plus it's been crossed with what Gardner calls an elite composite. He bred this elite composite from inbred lines and hybrids which grow well in Nebraska.

Nebraska farmers commonly have 22,000 to 25,000 plants per acre, he said, but super dwarf hybrids have given Mexicans good results with 80,000 plants per acre

World genetic resources have barely been tapped, he explained. "There's lots and lots of the world's germ plasm that we haven't exploited for genetic factors."

Even though exotic varieties offer genetic material that may benefit farmers someday, transferring those genes into plants adapted to Nebraska conditions is the tricky part.

The exotic variety may be best suited to longer or shorter daylight hours than occur here, or may have adapted to a longer growing season.

It's difficult for the breeders to keep a handle on this elusive genetic information, Gardner noted, when plants dry up and die in the sun, or never flower.

"We tend to lose this stuff fairly quickly," he said. While the breeders aren't interested in preserving the trait which causes plants to die or prevents their flowering, they often lose valuable traits they'd like to retain when the plants can't handle Nebraska's climate.

TO AVOID this loss, the scientists grow Nebraska corn in regions closer to the equator, interbreeding it with local populations for several generations, then bringing it home for a try here.

"When you bring it back, you want to pick out those things which are adapted to Nebraska but which still have some exotic germ plasm," he explained.

But there's another problem. It takes time to grow the corn and see how it handles its "marriage" with an exotic variety.

Gardner and research associate, Mary Thompson-Compton, recently applied for grant money to fund electrophoresis research that could quicken the honeymoon and also increase the NU breeding program's efficiency.

Electrophoresis involves sending an electrical current through a starch gel, and following that with a staining procedure that allows scientists to view the corn gene's response to the charge. The scientists can then classify the plant's genotype and identify molecular patterns inherited from exotic varieties, Gardner said.

Thomas Compton, married to William, runs the electrophoresis lab and has explored that technique's use for adapting exotic varieties to Nebraska conditions, Gardner said, and has proved the method's usefulness in future corn and popcorn breeding at NU.

Finally, Spring arrived. Lilacs and lavender phlox and flowering trees have burst into color. Tractors have been making interesting patterns in fields all month. One friend, whose husband and father-in-law had been taking turns eating so that one was always on the tractor, informed them that they both must stop for Mother's Day dinner. They did and the entire conversation was between the two men about the farming operation! When they went back out, her mother-in-law commented, "Now, wasn't that a thrill?"

Cattle are looking less muddy and have put on some weight. The new kittens have their eyes open and are scooting around on the porch.

I was a real chicken-heart and skipped the last relay race meets. The first one I went to was windy, so I had wind burn with the sun burn. My nose had just healed when I went to the second one. Eventually, we got to the Big One — State.

That is an experience — I can't imagine what it must be like to participate in it. It's a long, hard road for these young athletes. The program says there have been Boys' state track meets since 1903. They were all one class until 1920. Girls have only been at state track since 1971, and it became a combined event three years ago.

Burke High School in Omaha is host, and they do a superb job. They have a beautiful track, surrounded on three sides by grassy slopes. Runners, jumpers, shot and discus throwers, relay teams all converge on this place for two days. They wear their school colors, which makes it a colorful sight. Even "sweats" come in colors besides grey.

Runners are assigned to lanes according to times. They take off their sweats and put them in baskets carried by girls in cute outfit fits who take them to the end of the race. Then they get "into the blocks" and wait for the starter. First they crouch, then their seats go into the air and the pistol fires, and the race is on.

Sometimes, someone "false starts", jumps the gun, and is disqualified. This is especially sad at State. We saw a hurdler on his way to a gold medal fall on the last hurdle. We saw batons fall to get handed on. We saw runners fall. Tension probably causes many of these mishaps. What a disappointment they must be.

In the middle of the track, the long jumpers and triple jumpers are landing in sand; the high jumpers and pole vaulters on mats. To the north of the field, the throwers do their thing.

When you have the longest, or the highest, or the fastest, over all classes, you walk to a stand in the center and get a big gold medal with a red, white, and blue ribbon around your neck.

Karlene Erickson won her fourth gold medal, in the 1,600 meter run, the mile. This means she has run the mile the fastest, over all, for four years. She is something to see run. She's little and pretty, and runs around in a plum-colored warm-up suit; and when she races, she runs at a steady pace the whole time and never looks the least bit winded.

If the kids don't win a medal, they try to beat the school record, or their own "personal best." Coaches are not allowed on the track. They sit on the bleachers with stop watches around their necks and pray. Parents yell and scream and cry, sometimes with pride, sometimes with disappointment. Athletes shake hands and clap each other on the back and sometimes collapse in each other's arms from effort or emotion. In my book, they were all winners. They did their best, and made it to the state meet.

It inspires me to get off my butt, I did finish a two-mile fast run this month to celebrate Hospital Week. Did you know that May was also Hypertension month, Mental Health month, Arthritis month, and Beef month? Be sure to eat more beef to celebrate!

Wayne man appointed to dairy board

Frederick Temme of Wayne was recently appointed to the board of directors of the Dairy Council of Central States, Inc. He is a district director of Associated Milk Producers and will represent that dairy cooperative on the Dairy Council board. Dairy Council of Central States is a non-profit nutrition education organization serving Nebraska, western Iowa and southeast South Dakota. It is headquartered in Omaha with offices in Sioux City and Lincoln. Temme and his wife, Joann, have been in the dairy business 25 years. In addition to their Holstein herd, they also feed beef cattle. A son, Douglas, is involved in these farming operations. The Temmes also have two daughters.

Conservation tillage has bright future

Conservation tillage systems have the potential to present Great Plains farmers with a breakthrough in production efficiency that should compare with such agricultural developments as improved cultivars, farm machinery, fertilizers, hybrid vigor and pesticides.

Orvin Burnside, professor of agronomy at the University of Nebraska, told participants in the Symposia in Agricultural Research VIII held May 16-19 in Beltsville, Md., that these "changes in tillage practices will likely culminate in systems of crop production with little or no tillage which, in retrospect, may be the most effective soil conservation practice adopted in this century."

CONSERVATION TILLAGE systems are being adopted by Great Plains farmers because they have the potential of stabilizing and increasing crop yields while conserving water, soil, labor, fuel and other production costs, he said.

Tillage (plowing and cultivating) practices have traditionally been applied, the Nebraska agronomist said, to produce suitable soil conditions for crop establishment and growth, with weed control a high priority.

Unfortunately, traditional tillage practices expose soil erosion, destroy soil structure, waste soil moisture, and cause a number of other problems, Burnside said.

Low tillage production systems, on the other hand, reduce soil erosion, conserve moisture and enable higher and more stable crop yields while requiring less energy and labor outputs.

Burnside said that U.S. farmers now use reduced tillage on over 1 million hectares and the rate of change will increase as better weed control, planting and production technology becomes available.

"But," he said, "any time one changes a crop production system new problems will arise. Specific challenges to conservation tillage include consistent weed control, delayed planting due to cold, wet soil, crop residues interfering with planting and cultivation, and adverse peer reaction to the change."

THE USDA has predicted, though, that more than 90 percent of U.S. crops will be grown with conservation production systems by the year 2010, and that in more than half of the area some form of low tillage farming will be practiced.

"There are changes afoot in agriculture," Burnside said, "that will have widespread implications. These changes in crop production methods will present new challenges to scientists, crop production specialists and farmers that will have to be solved. If the programs are to succeed, weed scientists will have to be among those in the forefront of this change in crop production technology broadly classified as conservation tillage."

We are witnessing, he added, truly a revolutionary step forward in soil, water and energy conservation as these practices are adopted.

Drying a solution

Grain temperatures important

PRUNE EVERGREENS FOR A PURPOSE
If you prune evergreen trees or shrubs do it with a purpose in mind and not because a neighbor happens to be out hacking away at his plant.

Pruning of evergreens should be done only for the following reasons:
To produce a fuller branching habit.
To replace a lost leader on upright trees.
To maintain the dwarf habit of plants such as Mugho pine.
To restrict the size of spreading evergreens.
To rejuvenate neglected shrubs.
To repair damage.

PROPER SELECTION of evergreen plants should prevent the necessity of pruning to restrict growth. Determine the upper limit of size that a plant should occupy to fit available space. Then select varieties that will not overgrow these boundaries.

When pruning any evergreen, never cut behind the area of the branch bearing the foliage. The bare wood produces few or no buds and pruning too far back on these branches will damage the appearance of the plant beyond repair.

Pruning of pines should be restricted to the current year's growth and should only be done from mid-June to mid-July. This allows new buds to set and will insure the plants retaining its fullness.

Spruces, firs, cedars and junipers should be pruned during the growing season but the time frame is not as crucial as with pine. Again, remember to keep pruning restricted to the part of the branch bearing foliage.

Since dry grain is normally held over the winter at 30 to 40 degrees F temperatures to slow mold growth, it seems contrary to recommend that this grain be warmed to 60 degrees F for spring and summer storage. However, maintaining a uniform temperature within the grain mass and keeping grain temperatures close to the average outside temperature can be just as important as maintaining low grain temperature.

If grain temperatures are much colder than surrounding air temperatures, moisture can be condensed on the grain surface. Differences in temperature also create air convection currents which result in moisture movement or migration within the storage bin. These problems can be minimized by gradually warming the grain to 60 degrees F while keeping grain temperatures within 10 degrees F of the average outside temperature.

MUCH OF THE reluctance by farmers to warm grain this spring is due to fears that warmer temperatures will result in increased mold activity and heating.

These fears are well-founded if moisture contents are not low enough—at least below 14 percent and preferably below 13 percent for corn and other starchy grains. Attempting to hold cold grain over the summer, however, is not a solution to this problem.

In the event of heating, trying to move a hot spot out of cold or frozen grain with warm, moisture-laden air results in large amounts of condensation which only adds to the problem.

The long-term solution is to get the grain dried down to a storable moisture content. In most cases, grain cannot be dried in storage because aeration fans do not move enough air to remove the relatively large amounts of water which need to be taken out of the grain.

For example, to dry 10,000 bushels of corn from 15½ to 13 percent moisture, a minimum of eight tons of water needs to be carried away with air. This situation will probably require that the grain be removed from storage and dried in a high-speed dryer.

Grain can be turned or moved from one storage facility to another to break up hot spots and caked or crusted grain. Turning of grain does not result in the removal of moisture from the grain so this practice should be viewed only as a short-term solution to storage problems.

Grassland switch gives alternative

The current farm program presents a golden opportunity for landowners to convert marginal cropland back to grassland this spring or fall. Native warm season grasses such as switchgrass, Big Bluestem, and Indiangrass provide excellent pasture. But, if you are not familiar with establishing this type of grass, there are some preparations you need to make before planting.

Probably the most important item, besides the quality of grass seed, is the condition of the seedbed. For best results, native grass should be planted in a firm, weed-free field. The best way to get the seedbed in this condition is with a cover crop.

The most highly recommended cover crop is drilled grain sorghum or forage sorghum planted as near to the contour as possible at a seeding rate of 10 to 15 pounds per acre. Hybrid sudangrass can be used, at a rate of 15 to 15 pounds per acre in 20 inch rows, planted between June 1 and July 15. If more growth is produced than desirable, the cover crop should be clipped to no less than 12 inches of stubble height.

Rows of grain or forage sorghum may also be planted at a rate from 4 to 8 pounds per acre, in rows up to 42 inches wide and harvested. If stubble is left approximately 16 inches high.

Seedlings may also be made in existing cover if it is last year's harvested grain sorghum, providing there is adequate cover to protect the grass seedling, and soil from wind and water erosion.

Native grasses are planted from November 1 to May 31 (optimum March 15 to May 15). The best type of seeding equipment is a grass drill equipped with a double disc furrow opener with depth bands and packer wheels. Fluffy and free flowing grass seeds will be planted directly into the cover crop residue without additional seedbed preparation.

Most NRDs have these drills available at a nominal charge. If you would like more information on native grasses, seeding mixtures, seeding rate and ground preparation, contact the Soil Conservation Service Office in Wayne.

SALEM CENTENNIAL

Four Sons of Salem were special guest speakers for the four-day centennial observance of the church. It was held Thursday to Sunday. The centennial theme of a Century of Grace, Growth and Service was used.

Rev. Glenn W. Lundahl presented the opening worship service on Friday at 8 p.m. with "A Century of Grace." The service featured special choir music and a procession of banners and flags.

On Saturday, an anniversary banquet was held at the school auditorium at 6:30 p.m. Dr. LaVern K. Grosz was the master of ceremonies.

Banquet speaker was Dr. Dennis A. Anderson, Bishop of the Nebraska Synod. "A Century of Growth" was his topic. Musical interludes was provided by the Salem handbell choir, the male quartet and the Gens.

During the afternoon on Saturday they held a fellowship tea for everyone at the church from 2 to 4 p.m.

On Sunday there were three worship services beginning with a Holy Communion service at 10:30 a.m. "A Century of Service" was the title of Rev. Paul K. Hanson's sermon.

At the 3 p.m. service Salem's Pastor Robert V. Johnson read greetings from other Sons and Daughters of Salem. Following this service there was a congregation supper and fellowship hour.

Theme for the evening service was "Salem's Musical Heritage." Rev. J. Orville Martin was the 7 p.m. speaker in word and music.

Rev. Lundahl was born in the rural Wakefield area and graduated from Wakefield High School. His mother, Mrs. E.W. Lundahl, still lives in Wakefield. Pastor Lundahl is presently serving a church in Boulder, Colo. He was ordained at Salem Lutheran Church in 1967 and accepted his first call at a Lutheran church in Omaha.

Doctor Grosz is also a native of Wakefield. He was born north of Wakefield and graduated from Wakefield High School. His studies have taken him to Germany and Sweden and he received his doctorate degree from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. Doctor Grosz recently moved to Lincoln where he serves the First Lutheran Church. His mother (Mrs. Walter) also lives in Wakefield.

Pastor of the First Lutheran Church in Idaho Falls, Idaho, Rev. Hanson was born in the Wakefield area, graduated from high school in Wakefield and returned to his home town church to be ordained. Rev. Hanson and his cousin, Glenn Lundahl, were ordained at Salem together in 1967. Paul's work with the Lutheran World Federation took him to Germany and Switzerland.

Rev. J. Orville Martin is the oldest son of Pastor J.A. Martin who served the Salem congregation from 1924-31. Pastor Martin's wife is the former Elzada Hyspe. Her father, A.M. Hyspe, was a charter member of Salem. Rev. Martin is retired and lives in Lindstrom, Minn.

He was ordained in 1938 at Brooklyn, N.Y. and served congregations in California and Minnesota.

LUTHERAN CHURCHWOMEN
The Salem Lutheran Churchwomen met Thursday at 1 p.m.

for a salad luncheon served by Mrs. Robert Oberg, Mrs. William Driskill, Mrs. Al Hitz and Mabel Hansen and Circle 6.

Mrs. Paula Fischer gave the welcome and Pastor Robert V. Johnson gave the table prayer before the luncheon.

The Gems sang "My Church, My Church." Ruth Boeckenhauer gave the devotions. Three daughters of Salem had the program commemorating their church's 100th anniversary. They were Mabelle Lundahl of Brooklyn, N.Y., Esther Oberg of Tanzania and Mary Beth Malloy of Oelwein, Iowa. Mabelle Lundahl has served as a parish worker and in 1981 was honored by the Bethlehem Lutheran congregation in Brooklyn for 50 years of continuous work in the church and community.

Mabelle, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Swan Lundahl, came to Wakefield in 1914 and graduated from high school. She also attended Luther College at Wahoo and Augustana College in Rock Island, Ill. Mabelle is presently translating the history of Bethlehem Lutheran Church from Swedish into English.

Esther Oberg has been serving as a missionary in East Africa since April 1981. She is currently stationed in Arusha, Tanzania serving as the secretary for the Executive of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Tanzania.

Esther was born north of Wakefield and is the daughter of Pete and Hilma Oberg. She also graduated from Wakefield High School and attended Lutheran College. Later she studied at Lutheran Bible Institute in Minneapolis. During her furloughs from Africa, Esther has attended college and received a BA degree from Wayne State Teachers College.

Mary Beth Malloy, along with her husband, has also served as a missionary. They spent three years from 1955 to 1958 in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Both taught music at the Good Shepherd School. There are no longer American missionaries in the country and the school was taken over by the Ethiopian army.

Mary Beth is the daughter of Arthur and Marie Ruback Longe and was born south of Wakefield. She graduated from Wakefield High School and received a BA degree in music from Gustavus Adolphus College in St. Peter, Minn. She is married to Dan Malloy and they have two children and currently live in Oelwein, Iowa. The Malloys own the Malloy Piano Factory and are active in the Grace Methodist Church.

Mary Beth played a piano solo. Pastor Johnson gave each one a souvenir plus the 100th anniversary history book of Salem.

The song "Immortal Invisible God Only Wise" was sung.

Mrs. Erwin Brown gave the history of the Lutheran Churchwomen. An offering of prayer was given. The song "On Our Way Rejoicing" was sung. The meeting closed with the benediction.

The next meeting will be Thursday, June 23 at 8 p.m.

BURNS MORTGAGE
The Wakefield Christian Church congregation retired the debt on the church building and parsonage on May 22 with a mortgage burning ceremony. Taking part in the service were Marlin Wright, minister of the church at the time the building was constructed, Harold Olson, Bricie Nicholson, Per Pearson, Kenneth Packer and Ron Jones, who is currently chairman of the church board.

Marty Burgus, president minister, Merle Ring, Dale Matmberg, Oral Hickerson, Roy Wiggins, Maurice Olson and John Wood were the men on the original finance, building and ground committee at the time it was built. The church was completed in 1968 at a cost of $95,000.

BIBLE SCHOOL
Vacation Bible school at St. John's Lutheran Church was to begin yesterday (Wednesday) and continue on Thursday, Friday, Monday and Tuesday. Theme for this year's lessons will be "Take it to the Lord in Prayer." Classes will begin each day at 9 a.m. and dismiss at 1:15 p.m. Children ages three through the eighth grade are invited to attend. Students will bring a sack lunch for dinner. They will have two lessons and a half-hour for project making.

The Wakefield Christian Church will have their Vacation Bible school Monday-Friday, June 13-17. The time is 9 to 11:30 a.m. each morning. The closing program will be held on Friday, June 17 at 7 p.m. Directors are May Bower and Karen Jones.

TEE BALL
Again this summer, Dick Brownell, is offering boys and girls in the second and third grades an opportunity to play T-ball. According to Dick anyone taking part in summer baseball or softball is not eligible to take part in the tee ball program.

Tee ball is played with a baseball and is batted off of a stationary stand called a tee. The intent of the program is to learn fundamentals of the game, develop coordination and good sportsmanship plus have fun.

The kids will play tee ball on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 p.m. on an area near the baseball field. Each participant will be charged $3 to cover the cost of the insurance needed.

Coach Brownell asks that the kids have their name on their ball glove and wear a shirt, jeans and a cap.

The Banvel® herbicide advantage: Knocks out velvetleaf in 8 to 24" corn.

Banvel® herbicide gets those weeds 2,4-D misses.

Banvel herbicide controls a wider spectrum of tough-to-kill broadleaf weeds in 8- to 24-inch corn than 2,4-D. Because it penetrates weed leaves. Is absorbed by the roots. Then translocates throughout the weed's fluid system for a complete weed kill—leaf-tip to root-tip. All without carryover.

Knock out the toughest broadleaf weeds in your corn...velvetleaf... cocklebur...sunflower...smartweed... pigweed... and a host of others. With Banvel herbicide.

When corn is 8 inches tall or taller, use drop nozzles. You'll direct spray below the crop canopy for better weed coverage.

Ask your ag chem dealer for better broadleaf weed control in 8- to 24-inch corn. Ask for Banvel herbicide.

Perhaps only once in a lifetime
Another will come to me
A brother or sister needing me
No handout — no request made
But needing me just the same.

Perhaps only once, Will I be wise?
Know my personal limitations? Move a mountain?
Offer a shoulder? Clearly see the needs?
Another is needing me
And the choice is all my own.

Perhaps only once in a lifetime
I will recognize the simplicity of the asking
The beauty of knowing when, the grace of how,
The courage. Perhaps only once
Another will come to me.

In a harsh, black, loving way
You've taught me this in spring green May.
