

Business loses ground

Unicameral session shows mixed results

By Melvin Paul

Gov. Bob Kerrey, who vetoed a legislative bill which would have frozen state corporate income tax rates...

wasn't as productive for businesses as other recent sessions have been.
IN ADDITION to the loss in its effort to freeze corporate income tax rates, business in the state had several other setbacks.
The state's 900 largest retailers took a beating on the passage of a bill reducing their sales tax collection fee...

ing the recently completed 90-day session. Resuscitation efforts on the ailing bill have been delayed until the 1984 session.
Lawmakers have ordered the first increase in unemployment insurance benefits in five years. They also passed a bill ordering increased workmen's compensation benefits.
THE MAJOR VICTORY for business this session was passage of the bill expanding the uses to tax-exempt revenue bond financing...

challenge from several senators who wanted to tax it.
In another business victory, Donnelly Marketing of Lincoln succeeded in attaching an amendment to a bill which will spare the firm liability for unemployment benefits for its homeworkers, who compile mailing lists from telephone directories.
Lawmakers passed a bill eliminating the legal interest rates on credit cards...

A medical center

Northeast Nebraska seems to be becoming a feeding table for future medical specialists.
In recent years, many young persons have invested time, money and hard work into futures as doctors, dentists, nurses and veterinarians.
The high number of medical careers which are being attained by graduates of area high schools is a credit to the educational institutes in this part of the state...

Agriculture myths can stand debunking

By Cheryl Westcott
Nebraska Farm Bureau
A speech to a group of retailers and a coloring book now making its way into grade schools are certainly disparate sources of agricultural information.
Let's take a look at the coloring book first. It's called "The Kernel and the Reliable American Farmer."
The Kernel (of corn) points out that Americans spend only about 15 cents in India and 65 cents in Russia...

President Robert B. Delano made this same point to a retail merchants association in his home state of Virginia on May 22. The output of these four million farmers, which totals more than $40 billion a year, is the saving grace to "this nation's distorted balance of payments..."

DELANO POINTS to a number of other myths, such as the notion that farmland is all but disappearing. In fact, it is increasing through upgraded irrigation and drainage practices and farmland redevelopment.
Then there's the litany that the family farm is giving way to "factory farms" or massive corporation agriculture, when actually only 2 percent of all American farms are truly corporation farms, and 85 percent of those are family owned or operated.
And finally, Delano says, there's the current belief that government programs such as the Payment in Kind program are the solution to farm economic problems...

A funny thing happened

Reaganomics bringing recovery

By Richard Leshar
U.S. Chamber of Commerce
Not so very long ago the headlines were filled with the dire predictions of liberal politicians and their court apologists: Supply-side economics is a failure. Cutting taxes on the American people will cause inflation. Looking twice at the federal budget for areas to reduce waste, fraud and abuse will bring widespread poverty, cause a second great depression.
The architects of our trillion dollar national debt and the bloated welfare state were positively hysterical about the evil effects of the dreaded "Reaganomics." They screamed. They shouted. They threatened to hold their breath until they turned blue.

SO WHAT is the reaction of Tip O'Neill and Ted Kennedy? Have we read embarrassed letters of apology in the New York Times? Has John Kenneth Galbraith packed his bags and joined a monastery as penance?
No, the advocates of big government have regrouped and refocused their attack. Okay, so supply-side economics does increase personal income, help Americans save and invest for the future and slash inflation and interest rates. But... it's not fair. It favors the "rich." It comes at the expense of the poor.
Having lost the economic debate the liberals are determined to win the war of words, to hide 50 years of failed economic policies behind the mask of rhetoric.
If reality is embarrassing, they will simply change it by twisting the language to make it fit the goals of big government.
Let's take a look at this Orwellian Newspeak.

IT'S UNFAIR — This appears to be the last refuge of those who wish to see the government control more and more of our paychecks and our lives. But is the Reagan program unfair?
What could be more fair, more evenhanded than to cut the tax rates for all Americans by 25 percent?
What could be more fair than to reduce inflation for all Americans from 12.5 percent to below 4 percent?
What could be more fair than to cut back excessive regulation and reduce prices for all consumers?
And those who attack the 1981 tax cuts as "unfair" now suggest eliminating the indexing provision which prevents middle income Americans from being pushed into higher and higher tax brackets. These modern day populists would allow inflation to raise the taxes on middle income Americans by more than $90 billion in the next several years and yet they scream fairness at the top of their lungs and call it an argument.

DRACONIAN BUDGET CUTS — The average annual growth of federal spending was 3.1 percent under Presidents Nixon and Ford, 2.5 percent under Jimmy Carter and is now increasing at 5.7 percent after those "draconian budget cuts" by Messrs. Reagan and Stockman. In constant dollars, spending targeted to low income individuals has jumped from $30.7 billion in 1970 to over $77 billion in 1984. And total spending on transfer payments and social programs will top $424 billion in 1984—$6,500 for every man, woman and child in the United States. There have been no budget cuts. Draconian or otherwise.
It is important that the taxpayers won the tax and budget battles of 1981. It has set America on a new path of hope and progress. But it is equally important to win this battle over the abuse of language.
If we do not, our friends in Washington will do to our language what they have already done to our economy.

Legislative session was somewhat negative for average Nebraskan, good for big bankers

This will be my last regular column and as I reflect upon the Session, I can't help but feel it was somewhat negative for the average Nebraskan. I've read the papers and heard what other Senators have said.
A banner year some are calling it. Well, if you are in the big banking business, or if you are a judge, perhaps it was a banner year for you. However, as I see it, special interests scored big in this Session, and the average taxpayer was on the losing side. Of the 632 bills introduced, 258 were passed.
Here are a few of the accomplishments of this Legislative Session. First and foremost, your taxes have been increased. LB 59 raised the sales tax by one-half percent, beginning July 1, and calls upon the Board of Equalization to raise the income tax rate from 18 to 20 percent of your federal income tax liability.
Next time you renew your motor vehicle license you will be paying a dollar a plate for the first time ever, thanks to LB 118. And don't forget the State parks. LB 199 doubled the entry permit fee, beginning in 1984, to $10 instead of $5.
ALTHOUGH MUCH was said about the need for property tax relief, the only action

senator merle von minden
My priority bill this year was LB 125, which I introduced on behalf of Wayne, although it benefits all first and second class cities. This bill gives the city council discretion in granting or denying requests for improvements in new development areas within the city limits.
LB 19, which I co-sponsored, provides for a beef checkoff to be used for research and the promotion of beef. This bill is welcomed by the beef producers of the State.
THE "LEMON BILL", LB 155, places the responsibility to repair or replace certain defects of new motor vehicles on the manufacturer.
LB 27, which reduced the corporate income tax rate in the hope of encouraging business to come to Nebraska, was vetoed by the Governor.
taken was the elimination of the Homestead Exemption which increased the average homeowner's property taxes by $17. If you find yourself in court, LB 617 has seen to it that your court costs have increased to the point where in many instances, the court costs are greater than the dollar amount of the fine you pay. Court costs in County and Municipal Courts were raised $3, and in District Court $5. This additional money will be used to give the judiciary a 28 percent raise.
LB 22, which reduced the corporate income tax rate in the hope of encouraging business to come to Nebraska, was vetoed by the Governor. This veto will cost the corporations $5 to $7 million, which the consumer in turn must pick up.

Crime victims won some ground with the passage of LB 78, making sure they be kept informed regarding the prosecution of their attackers.
The makeup of the Legislature this year was more liberal, but there were enough conservative votes to force compromises on many issues, thereby holding down state spending by a considerable amount.
DEENETTE AND I have enjoyed another Session as I represented you in Lincoln, and we will be visiting your community at some time during the interim.
Since this will be my last regular column for a while, I again want to thank the editors for bringing the columns to you readers, and I thank you for being there in the Legislature.
If I, or my staff, can be of any assistance to you during the interim, do not hesitate to call me at 635-2377, or write me at Box 127, Allen, NE 68710.

Crime victims won some ground with the passage of LB 78, making sure they be kept informed regarding the prosecution of their attackers. The bill also requires that victims' statements be taken into account during any presentencing investigation.
The makeup of the Legislature this year was more liberal, but there were enough conservative votes to force compromises on many issues, thereby holding down state spending by a considerable amount. The Legislature worked well with the Governor, nearly always doing as he desired.

Sasse claims title

Rennie Sasse of Lincoln scored a 68 on the first two rounds and never looked back as he went on to win his second Wayne Amateur Open Golf title in five years. Sasse, who last won the event in 1978, finished at 100 for the 27 holes, four strokes ahead of second place Larry Sock of Norfolk.

Bob Reeg turned in a 109 and was the only Wayne golfer to finish in the top eight. Reeg scored an eagle on the 15th hole of the final nine.

Sasse's score was an impressive eight strokes under par. He turned in scores of 34, 34 and 32 to nail down the championship. His performance was one stroke off of the tournament record of 99 held jointly by Dale Erwin and Knox Jones.

DICK SCYBERT of Atlantic, Iowa, finished third with a 105. Scybert had scores of 36, 36 and 33 to finish the day.

Larry Franzen of Sioux City was in the thick of things with a 32 on the first nine but had a 38 for the second and finished fourth at 108.

Froeschle winner of tourney

Cole Froeschle of Wayne captured the championship of the 27th Annual KCAU Major 9 junior golf tournament Tuesday. Froeschle fired a one under par 71, which included a sizzling 33 on the second nine to turn in a 148.

Mike Roarson of Sloan finished in second place with a 154 (77-77). Kyle Robar of Sioux Falls, South Dakota finished third with a 155 (84-71) while fourth-place finisher Mark Ahmann of Sioux City fired a 157 (82-75).

Tom Perry and John Carhart of Wayne also competed in the tournament. Perry turned in a 191 (100-91) and Carhart shot a 190 (88-102).

Could've broke 100

It's not that I don't like golf, it's just that the first time I played the game I quit keeping score when I broke 90--after eight holes.

The big golf grain the sky was trying to tell me something and I heard him loud and clear. The message was simple enough: "You are a rotten golfer."

That initial experience soured me on golf enough that I limited my golfing to area Pull Puff courses after that.

While I was out covering the Wayne Country Club Amateur Open Sunday, I noticed there was a lot of beer being consumed. At least I know I can hold my own there.

Don't come back, Brent.

I finally realized why it is easier for me to watch sports on television in the summer than it is the rest of the year. There's no Brent Mussberger!

Brent is another of those guys on my "Don't like and want to see fall miserably" list.

Brent is my Howard Cosell. While most people love to hate Howard, it's Mussberger who turns my stomach.

I suppose Brent knows what he is talking about and he usually seems well-informed. It's just the way he goes about telling the audience. He drones on in his irritating, nasal voice and makes you feel like you are lucky that he's even talking to you.

Jimmy the Greek's stock went up at my house when he took a poke at Brent in a New York bar last year.

Has it been 10 years?

I attended last Saturday's double header at the College World Series. While at the game, I couldn't help but reminisce about some of the great players who have played in Omaha's Rosenblatt Stadium.

It's hard to believe that it was only a little more than 10 years ago when George Brett was entertaining the fans in Omaha.

If you can't make it to a CWS game, try to catch the Omaha Royals sometime. I guarantee that AAA baseball will not disapoint you.

You'll get your money's worth by watching area Legion and Town Team baseball games. I'm sure the players would appreciate the support!

How embarrassing!

Like all loyal Pittsburgh Pirate fans, I winced every time I saw the tape of the triple play the Cubs turned in against the Pirates last Thursday at Wrigley Field.

The hardest thing for me to accept was how long it took Pittsburgh's Rick Rhoden to reach first base. The Cubbies didn't really have to hurry to make the play.

Pitchers, as a rule, aren't known as particularly fast base runners, but Rhoden needs somebody to light a fire under him. He was still a good five or six feet away from base when the throw from second reached Bill Buckner at first.

Some of my friends and I used to joke that we were happy if we could run our height in the 40 yard dash when we were in school. In my case that was six feet. One of my friends, "Big Larry" Griffing, stands 6 5 and thus was never hard pressed.

It looks like Rhoden would even have trouble matching that time.

Outnumbered

One of the morning disk jockeys on Omaha radio station Z 92 came up with an interesting comment on the College World Series pairings.

It was announced that Texas was scheduled to play James Madison in the first game of the CWS.

"That hardly seems fair," he said, "a whole state against just one guy!"

Mail-order burros

Farmer's livestock creates stir with town kids

By Kevin O'Hanlon

Lyle Cunningham is dabbling in the mail-order burro business.

Cunningham recently adopted four burros through a federal adoption program he read about in a newspaper advertisement. He adopted two jacks and two jennies and has them corralled on his 22 acres south of Carroll, where he also raises quarter horses.

The burros run wild throughout the mountainous regions of the western United States. They have reproduced to the point where their food supply is diminishing and many of the burros are starving. Instead of killing the animals, the Department of the Interior decided to put the animals up for adoption.

So far, approximately 15,000 of the burros have been adopted. The burros are free, but the adopter must pay the costs of shipping the animals. Cunningham was charged $120 apiece for his burros.

"The only catch is that you've got to take a jack for each jenny you adopt and you have to promise to keep them for at least a year," Cunningham said.

One of the jennies gave birth to a foal on May 24, approximately six weeks after Cunningham's shipment arrived. The young burro appears to be all legs and ears.

"With those great big ears you'd think she would fall over frontwards," he said.

Cunningham said the new foal has created quite a stir in town.

"About every kid in town has stopped by just to see that burro," Cunningham said. "It's been like Grand Central Station around here."

Cunningham says the foal is healthy despite the long trip the burros had from California.

The burros are rounded up and shipped by truck to their new homes. Cunningham had to pick up his burros at Valley.

"They were kind of spooky when we got them," he said. "That's understandable though, they hauled them here from California."

The burros also were "real thin and run-down," he said. "You could count their ribs and their backbones were sticking up. Honest to God — you wouldn't believe it by looking at them now."

Cunningham estimates that the burros now weigh close to 400 pounds each — about 40 to 50 pounds more apiece than when they arrived.

"They come running when you feed them," he said.

Cunningham said the burros only go through one bale of hay every four or five days. He plans to turn them out to pasture with his quarter horses as soon as his last mare is bred. That will prevent interbreeding.

The other jenny is also pregnant. Cunningham said he will take the two jacks out after the second foal is born.

"We plan to break them to drive," he said. Cunningham said that the two jacks will be used to pull a buggy as "sort of a novelty."

Cunningham said the burros are intelligent animals.

"You can't run them into wire," he said. "Horses will run right through it, but these burros will look over everything they do before they do it."

The burros also are useful for breaking club calves and colts to lead, he said.

By tying a calf or colt to the mule with a short length of rope, the mule will break the animal to lead "in about 24 to 36 hours."

"That colt won't eat unless that burro does," Cunningham said. "As long as that colt pulls on the rope, that burro won't move. You can take the wildest little colt you've ever seen and halter break it in no time."

Cunningham plans to breed the burros and "just keep them around for a novelty."

The burros' days of roaming free are over, but so are the days of starvation. Lyle Cunningham will see to that.

Dairy assessment program is set

To reduce a 14 billion-pound surplus of dairy products in government storage, a dairy assessment program has been introduced in the House of Representatives, according to Roy Frederick, University of Nebraska extension economist-public policy.

But what effect will this program have on dairy producers and consumers?

According to Frederick, "the effect of the program on producers and consumers will be minimal."

WHEN A SURPLUS of milk is produced, the government is obligated to buy up the surplus. Of the total milk products produced in 1982, the government bought 10 percent, he said.

The dairy assessment program and several topics dealing with weather impact will be discussed in detail on the Nebraska Educational Television Network series "Farm and Ranch Report," to be aired June 9 at 12:30 p.m., repeating at 9:30 p.m.

When the Reagan Administration assumed a deficit budget, the dairy program was a likely candidate for trimming. Last year alone, the government spent $2 billion on the program, and milk production continues to increase

2.3 percent each year, Frederick said.

"The bill has been passed by the House Agriculture Committee and is before the House right now but is not expected to be acted upon for about a month," he said.

THE BILL CALLS for a 50 cent assessment to be put into a "kitty" that would pay producers $10 per 100 pounds of milk for the percentage that they reduce between 5 and 30 percent. In other words, if a producer reduces his production by 10 percent, he will be paid $10 per 100 pounds of milk for the 10 percent he would have produced, Frederick explained.

Secondly, the bill would assess another 50 cent reduction in the support price per 100 pounds of milk. The current support price is $13.10. Also, another 50 cents would be assessed if the surplus of dairy products is not down to 6 billion pounds or less by Jan. 1, 1985, he said.

"The program will be cheaper than what we have now and should reduce the amount of surplus," Frederick added.

Another topic to be discussed on "Farm and Ranch Report" concerns the impact of the cool weather on the wheat harvest.

According to Ralph Neild, NU extension climatologist, the wheat harvest will be about two weeks behind schedule.

"BETWEEN APRIL 1 and now, we have been 5 degrees below normal. The normal harvest date for wheat is at the very last week in June in the east, and gets later as you move west," Neild said.

"With the harvest being pushed back two weeks, that puts it in the middle of July. At that time of year, the temperatures aren't favorable for the harvesting of wheat," Neild added.

Pasture management means quality milk

If dairy producers manage their pastures closely, they can get a better quality milk product from their cattle, according to Foster Owen, University of Nebraska extension dairyman. "A pasture can furnish lots of excellent feed. Cows can consume up to 200 pounds of fresh forage from the pasture in one day's time," he said.

Dairy producer can do several things to get maximum yields of good quality feed. "They need to keep the pasture from getting overly mature, which means from time to time clipping the grass when it's beginning to head," Owen said.

Other ways to get the maximum yield out of the pasture are to divide the pasture into three or four smaller lots and rotate the cows or to strip graze if they want to use an electric fence. Also, dairymen can use a top and bottom grazing system, he explained.

DAIRY PRODUCERS should supplement pasture-fed cows with other feed. "Some long-stem hay put out in a stack in the pasture or throwing out the equivalent of 3 to 5 pounds of hay per head per day is a good idea," Owen said.

"There is a lot of variation in pastures," Owen said. For example, immature grasses will need 12-14 percent protein in the grain mix, while older grasses will need 15-16 percent and mature grasses need 20 percent, he said. But, he added, "dairymen always should make sure the mineral needs are included in the grain mix or, if not, free choice feed."

The amount of grain cows need will vary. In excellent pastures, cows can be expected to produce 40 pounds of milk or more. In an ordinary pasture cows will produce 20 pounds of milk, but milk produced beyond that level requires cows be fed about 1 pound of grain for every 2½ pounds of milk, Owen said.

"Dairy producers want to watch that need for grain as much as possible as it changes throughout the season," he cautioned.

THREE MAIN problems are associated with pasturing dairy cows. One is a frequent drop in the fat percentage in milk. This can be helped with hay, strip grazing and buffers, Owen said. Grass and weeds often flavor the milk. To stop this, dairy producers need to remove their cows from the pasture at least two hours before milking, Owen said. Bloat is also a problem but can be stopped with hay and a bloat-guard supplement.

According to Owen, there are several reasons for pasturing milk cows: To use land not suitable for crops, to utilize an excellent feed and to eliminate most harvesting operations. But often, the amount of feed produced is much less than if harvested as hay or silage and the quality may fluctuate widely, he said.

Ag degree is awarded

The University of Nebraska School of Technical Agriculture awarded diplomas to 124 students at commencement exercises May 27. UNSTA is a unit of the College of Agriculture in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Brian Lessmann of Wayne was awarded a degree in commercial horticulture technology.

LEAD ready for round three

It's round three for the Nebraska LEAD (Leadership Education/Action Development) program.

The third group of 30 individuals, 24 in production agriculture and six in supporting agribusiness, will be selected this summer to begin the two-year program in October.

Jim Horner, LEAD program director, said young agriculturists, ages 25-40, with proven leadership potential have until June 30 to apply.

"This fall, at the same time that the newly selected group begins its program, the group selected last summer will begin its second year in the leadership development program," Horner explained.

The LEAD program is sponsored by the Nebraska Agricultural Leadership Council. Cost to participants, in addition to their time, will be transportation to and from the sites of 14 three-day seminars over the next two years, as well as two Study Travel Seminars — one within the United States and the other in the Middle East. Other seminar and travel costs are paid by the council. The fellowship received by each participant is equivalent to about $10,000 for the two-year period. Horner commented.

Interested persons should contact Horner, c/o 302 Agricultural Hall, East Campus, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb. 68583-0709; phone (402) 472-6810.

4-H camp is planned

Five Wayne County 4-Hers, ages 13-19, will participate in one of three Leadership and Environment Camps to be held at the State 4-H Camp near Halsey, June 13-17.

Leadership & Environment Camp is a teen focused camp which allows youth to learn outdoor skills and how to transmit these skills to others. The camp facilities, which include 16 modern cabins and a two-story lodge, provide an excellent learning atmosphere.

The camp program includes a variety of workshops on American Indian culture, backpacking, heritage arts, wildlife, trees, nature and several others. Campers also can select free time activities such as archery, canoeing, rifle, aerobic dance, tubing and horseshoes.

Wayne County representatives are: Steven Rethwisch, Wayne; Karen Sandahl, Wakefield; and Turena, Cynthia and Paul Waide of Winside. Steven, Karen, Cynthia and Paul are attending the camp on partial scholarships sponsored by the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resource District.

Market lamb show set

The deadline for entering the 1983 Nebraska Spring Market Lamb Show is rapidly approaching, according to Ted Doane, University of Nebraska extension sheep specialist.

Entries for the show are due June 17 in the Cooperative Extension Service office in Grand Island, Doane said. The market lamb show, slated for June 25 beginning at 10 a.m. at Fanner Park, will consist of two divisions.

The youth division is open to all 4-H and FFA members provided they haven't reached their 19th birthday by Jan. 1, 1983, Doane said. The adult division is open to any Nebraska resident 19 years of age or older. "Adult exhibitors should consider the show as a means of identifying superior sires by getting data on the sire's offspring," Doane said.

Exhibitors may enter a maximum of three lambs in the contest. An entry fee of $1 per head payable at weigh-in is required. Exhibitors may show two individuals out of a pen of three, Doane said. A minimum dry weight of 90 pounds for all lambs is required, he said. The classes will be divided by weight, not by breed.

the farmer's wife

by pat meierhenry

My family read the column about state track and hastened to correct me — Karlene, won her fourth gold in the two mile Distance running in her specialty. I understand she won a 10,000 meter race the next day!

The Big Farmer, usually proof reads this column before it gets mailed. But he missed that one because he was in bed when it was being written. I had to get it in the mail before I left on the band trip.

I WAS ONE of eight adults, who helped sponsor the band to the Dakota Days band festival in Rapid City May 27 and 28. It was fun, but exhausting. anytime you travel with 37 teenagers, you don't expect to sleep. If you do try to catch 40 winks on the bus, you get your picture taken, sometimes with chip dip on your nose!

At 11 on Thursday, sleepy people began bringing wide awake kids to the school. There was parade formation in the gym, then instruments loaded by section, uniform bags in another spot. Tall hats were placed on racks above the seats — along with food cameras, sweaters, etc.

The bus was new — Alfred is brave! It even smelled new. The driver's name was Bud Froehlich — yes, there are two — I'm not at all sure the world can handle that. And what a good driver and patient character he was. The weather was great, the motel clean, the heated pool got a lot of use. Kids were amazed at the Badlands, amused at Wall Drug, kind of scared by the aerial tram ride. Those of us who had been there before wondered if anything was really happening on Crazy Horse Monument.

WE TOOK a whole bunch of shots of the whole bunch in front of the faces at Rushmore. In fact, the photo developing companies have made a print this week picture of caves, bands, motel rooms, card games, Flinstone Village, and giant tortoises at Reptile Gardens.

There was a lot of giggling, yelling, and joke telling. Example: What do you call a cow with no legs? Ground beef!

On Friday evening, the SAC band performed for all the bands (there were 24) at the Civic Center. And we were delighted to see a home-town boy, Keith Kruger, in Air Force blue. Then four stage bands, including Winside's, did their pop numbers.

On Saturday morning, all the bands and many floats marched two miles in downtown Rapid City. Some of the bands were so large, they needed three buses to transport them. Others, including Homer, Neb., came in school buses. One was from Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada.

WE ARRIVED home Sunday evening, very tired, but ready to go again next year. We sang happy birthday to Kay one more time — she thinks a bus is a different place to celebrate. There is corn up in a lot of fields. The Big Farmer survived Ann's cooking. And I'm keeping my promise to Norma Brockmoller, Don and Marilyn Leighton, and Dave and Nancy Warnemede not to put their escapades in this space! Thank you, Curt Jeffries, for organizing the whole project.

Once we got through the pile of wash, we plunged immediately into baseball and softball. Driver's Ed began. Beans are about all that I couldn't believe it when the hay chop, per Grove on the yard this morning. I guess it is the first week in June, even though the weather doesn't feel it — you can tell by the number of weddings! No swimming pools open yet!

Enjoyed Godspell at WSC last night. Believe Juli Burney is as talented at directing as her mother is at writing. Much local talent here, too. 'Twas a really good show.

Diseases are an important aspect that must be dealt with if roses are to be grown successfully. Black spot is the most common and destructive disease of cultivated roses, followed by mildew, rust, cane blight, and certain viruses. Disease management is necessary if the full enjoyment of the rose plant is to be gained.

Black spot is caused by a fungus that survives the winter in infected canes and in leaf debris beneath the plant. This fungus produces spores in the debris and in lesions on living leaves throughout the growing season.

To prevent infections from developing, growers should remove as much leaf debris from beneath the plant as possible and initiate a rigorous fungicidal program in late May or early June. Fungicides that give good control of black spot are Daconil, Phallin, Fore or Flunginex. Susceptible rose varieties need to be sprayed thoroughly and frequently whenever conditions favor spore germination.

Cedar-Apple Rust

Mature Cedar-Apple rust galls continue to be active throughout much of the area. Recent rains promote the development of the colored spore horns or tendrils from mature galls.

As these tendrils dry, spores are released and carried on air currents to nearby susceptible apple and crabapple trees. When conditions are favorable for spore germination and fungus penetration, leaves and fruit become infected with typical rust lesions.

Growers trying to control this disease need to begin the spray program now. But, be aware that even with timely and frequent applications of fungicides, some rust infection will probably occur because of the unusually heavy spring pressure that has developed this year.

Newly formed leaf tissue may get infected before the next fungicidal application is made. Materials with greatest systemic activity or "after-infection" activity include funginex and benomyl. Fungicides offering protected activity include Zineb Mancozeb, Thiram, Ferbam and Polyrom.
