Herald's feature takes a look at readers' views

In an effort to improve its content and change with the times, The Wayne Herald has added a new feature on its opinion page.

In order to include a broader scope of opinions and better serve readers, the feature "street talk" will become a regular part of the Monday paper.

Each week, summer intern Michelle Kubik, a University of Nebraska journalism student, will pick a question and ask people on the street for their opinions.

Sometimes, she'll stop in a business and ask her question to an employee or customer. Occasionally, she'll drop in on neighboring communities to learn their opinions.

Comments will be published each week with pictures of the persons who were questioned. The feature will run in each Monday edition of The Wayne Herald this summer.

Judging is Friday

Only few days remain in Draw Dad contest

Approximately two dozen entries have been received in The Wayne Herald's "Draw Dad Contest" and there is still time to enter.

Deadline for entries is 5 p.m. Thursday. Any drawings received after that time, even by mail, will not be eligible for the contest. So get busy and get your entries in soon.

First and second place prizes will be given in each age division. Each first place winner will be awarded a fishing rod and reel. Second prize is an Igloo Playmate cooler.

The contest is divided into three age categories: 4 years and younger; 5 through 8 years; and 9 through 12 years. The fewest number of entries thus far have come in the youngest age group.

The rules are simple. Just make a sketch of your father on light colored paper or newsprint. On the back of the drawing, print your name, age, father's name, address and phone number. Drawings should be no larger than 8 by 10 inches. Dark ink or lead is preferred. Mail entries to Draw Dad, The Wayne Herald, 114 Main Street, Wayne 68787. Entries may also be delivered in person to The Wayne Herald's office.

Don't forget, deadline for the contest is 5 p.m. Thursday and judging will take place on Friday. All sketches will be printed in the June 20 edition of The Wayne Herald.

Centennial logo is selected

It's official! Members of the Wayne Centennial Steering Committee have selected a logo which will help set the theme for the city's 100th birthday celebration in 1984.

Committee chairman Bud Froehlich unveiled the winning logo Friday morning during the weekly Chamber of Commerce coffee in the city auditorium.

Froehlich said the logo will be used on an endless variety of items to promote the centennial.

Submitting the winning logo was Adrie Nab, director of college relations at Wayne State.

Nab, who was present for Friday's unveiling, said that in designing the logo he wanted something that would be functional for all purposes — from centennial coins and medallions to the sides of car doors.

The logo, which is drawn in a circular format, features a shield drawn on a solid background and divided into three parts with symbols representing Wayne's three major components — agriculture, education, and business and industry.

NAB DREW A farm silhouette to represent agriculture, a lamp of learning and graduation cap illustrating education, and gears and a sack of money to depict business and industry in the community.

Bordering the logo at the top are the words Progress and Prosperity, with a star at each end representing the State of Nebraska in the American flag.

The logo is bordered at the bottom with Wayne and the years 1884—1984.

Finishing off the official logo is a banner, underneath with the word Nebraska.

NAB, A resident of Wayne for the past three years, said he was "tickled to death" that his logo was chosen from among the nearly 50 entries submitted in a contest sponsored by the Centennial Steering Committee.

"I wanted to make some kind of a contribution," he added.

Nab drew a round of laughter Friday morning when he made one request from Centennial committee members.

"I would like to request that a sample of each item bearing Wayne's centennial logo be sent to State Senator William Nichol of Scottsbluff so that he knows Wayne's a vital and active community."

Nichol was quoted recently as saying that the State, in light of budget restrictions, should consider closing State Colleges at Wayne, Peru and Chadron.

NAB WAS presented a $100 savings bond Friday morning for designing the centennial logo.

Also unveiled Friday morning was the second place logo, which was drawn by Jim Cleveland of Lincoln and will be used on the reverse side of coins, medallions and other centennial articles.

Cleveland, a former Wayne resident, will receive a $25 savings bond.

Both logos become the exclusive property of the Centennial committee with all rights reserved.

City Administrator Phil Kloster, who also was present for Friday's unveiling, said Wayne businesses and organizations are encouraged to begin using the official logo on stationery, envelopes and other items to promote next year's celebration.

Kloster added that the city is planning to place the logo on the doors of city equipment.

FROEHLICH ANNOUNCED Friday morning that the Centennial Steering Committee is seeking Wayne area residents to serve on various committees for the centennial.

Activity categories where help is needed include children's activities, cultural activities, church events, sports, music and entertainment, and special events.

Co chairmen of the events portion of the celebration are Bill Dickey and Kathy Manske.

Revenue chairman Lyle Seymour said persons also are needed to help with concessions, commemorative, license and royalties, donations and the carnival.

Assisting Seymour as co chairman of the revenue committee is Daryl Frevert, newly appointed loan officer trainee at the First National Bank.

Lorraine Johnson is chairman of the publicity committee for the centennial.

"I THINK we've got a good group to start with, but now we need everybody's help," said Froehlich.

Residents who would like to help with the 1984 Wayne Centennial celebration are asked to call the city's chamber office at 375-2240.

THIS LOGO, created by Adrie Nab, was selected as Wayne's official centennial logo. Nab, director of college relations at Wayne State, said he wanted to design a logo that would be functional for all purposes — from centennial coins and medallions to sides of car doors. The logo represents Wayne's three major components — agriculture, education, and business and industry.

Back in action

TWO FIREMEN survey the situation on top of a roof. The Wayne Volunteer Fire Department had not been called to a fire for nearly a month before responding to two calls this past week. A pickup fire early in the week and a chimney fire at the Merton Marshall home on Wednesday put the department back in action.

Caught off guard

Laurel studying options in highway construction

An unpleasant surprise that caught Laurel residents off guard several weeks ago is posing a problem to the city's budget.

Laurel city officials learned at a public hearing that the city will be responsible for a $68,000 portion of a $1.2 million road resurfacing and improvement project being planned for Highway 15 between the Concord spur and Highway 20, passing through Laurel.

"We're in favor of the project but prior to the hearing we weren't advised that we would share the cost," Laurel City Administrator L. J. (Ole) Mallatt said. "The payment would strain us in some areas."

MALLATT SAID the city will continue to negotiate with the state. The two parties are currently looking at a contract which calls for a $17,000 payment each year for four years.

The administrator said he voiced an objection when the engineering statement was read at a public hearing by Eldon Poppe, the rural roads engineer for the Nebraska Department of Roads.

"We were supposed to have been notified in advance that we would have to pay $68,000 but there was a breakdown in communication," said Mallatt. "It appears we're on good terms with the state yet. We will arbitrate with them."

The proposed roadway would remain 24 feet wide, but the shoulder would be expanded from two to three feet to eight feet in width. Twenty feet outside the driving lane would be left free of obstacles as a recovery area for out of control cars.

INSIDE LAUREL'S city limits, the paved area would be widened from 24 feet to 42 feet and a new curb and gutter would be installed. Construction of a modern storm sewer, installation of brighter lights and the moving back of intersections would help the project meet state standards.

Work is tentatively scheduled to begin in 1986 and should last four or five months.

The $68,000 figure was derived from a formula determined by the state legislature in 1974 when a law was passed greatly increasing the portion of gas tax revenues handed out to cities, according to Merle Kingsbury, state highway commissioner for northeast Nebraska.

Since that time cities also have been required to contribute at the rate of double their annual gas tax allotment to state highway projects which affect them.

MALLATT SAID Laurel's allotment presents a problem for the town. According to him, about one-third of Laurel's total taxable income would be required to pay the bill.

The cost forces further study and consideration by the city council, he said. Alternatives also may be considered.

At the hearing, several other possible problems were brought to the public's attention. Concern was expressed over the additional acquisition of land which would bring the roadway within 11 feet of one house.

Another concern was the future of a cattle underpass which currently exists beneath one short span of Highway 15.

Whatever the city of Laurel decides about the project, it will take some time and thinking.

Local babysitters are told to get license or quit

By Randy Hascall

"Some area babysitters have an important decision to make in the near future. Should they continue babysitting without a license, apply for a license or give up babysitting altogether?"

A Nebraska state law, which has been in effect for several years, requires babysitting licenses for anyone who babysits for more than one family for pay.

Last month five Wayne residents were turned in to the County Welfare Office for babysitting without a license. Once a complaint is made, a Welfare Office representative investigates.

A BABYSITTER who does not have a license is then given an application form and allowed 30 days to return it. If a babysitter does not apply for a license and continues to babysit, the case is then turned over to the county attorney.

Thelma Moeller of the Wayne County Welfare Office said reports were made to her office of five Wayne babysitters who were not abiding by the law. She says this is the first time any reports have been made since she started handling those duties in January.

Since the reports were made, Thelma said people have turned themselves in and picked up applications for licenses. She pointed out that six or seven babysitters in town already had licenses.

Once filled out, the applications are sent to the State Welfare Office in Lincoln. Law also requires a visit by the fire marshal. Cost of a license is $5.

"We aren't making them quit, we're just making them abide by the state law," Moeller said. A license is just a formality that is required by law, she added.

SEVERAL BABYSITTERS who were contacted by The Wayne Herald said they don't think the law is a fair one.

"A piece of paper to me doesn't mean a thing. I wish the law could be abolished," said one Wayne babysitter. "I'm against anyone having to be licensed to babysit. I think they're taking away the rights of the parents."

The babysitters contacted by The Wayne Herald all said they informed parents they didn't have licenses before they accepted the responsibility to take care of their children. One sitter said she didn't want state inspectors snooping through her house.

"I can't see where regulations will make a better sitter," another babysitter said. "The parents should have the option of sending their children where they want."

SOME OF the babysitters who were turned in said they feel some of the requirements are silly and added that more important requirements are not included. "I think they should ask if the babysitter smokes," said one.

"The regulations say I can't feed home-canned food and I have to go along with it, I've never had any problem before," one sitter said. "They ask if you have a fire extinguisher yet they don't ask if you have a fire or smoke alarm. It's not right but the law is the law. If they would go out and catch criminals instead of bothering babysitters the time would be better spent."

"Sometimes, those without licenses make better babysitters. What hurt me was that someone was underhanded enough to turn me in. My mother was very upset," continued one sitter.

The babysitters who were turned in had experience ranging from 2 1/2 years to 23 years. One has decided to quit babysitting.

Correction

A front page story which appeared in The Wayne Herald a week ago contained a statistical error.

The article, comparing growth of the state colleges with growth of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, stated that the state colleges had a growth of 3.94 percent and UN-L's system had an increased enrollment of 52 percent. It went on to say that independent colleges had an increase of 1.42 percent and technical community colleges a decline of 1.17 percent.

The UN-L figure should have been .52 percent.

Centennial logo unveiled

ADRIE NAB OF WAYNE explains how he went about designing Wayne's official centennial logo. Nab's winning logo was unveiled Friday morning during the weekly Chamber of Commerce coffee and will be used on countless souvenirs and mementos commemorating the city's 100th birthday in 1984. His design was chosen from among nearly 50 entries submitted in a contest sponsored by the Centennial Steering Committee.

More information given on area lawn disease

Many lawns in Wayne have a yellow color and this may be the first signs of melting out disease. Melting out is considered one of the most destructive diseases of turfgrass in the Midwest.

There are two phases of symptom expression. During the cool wet months of spring and fall the leaf spot stage is most evident. Infected leaves show small reddish-brown, purple, purplish-brown, or straw-colored spots surrounded by a dark border. These lesions increase in size, generally becoming round to oval-shaped with the center gradually fading to a light brown or straw color.

The leaf spot stage does not cause permanent damage to the lawn, but if allowed to develop, will progress into the destructive melting out phase. Many lawns have already progressed to the more destructive Melting Out Disease stage.

THE MOST EFFECTIVE control for leaf spot combines the use of resistant turfgrass cultivars and the employment of proper cultural practices. When establishing a new lawn, renovating, or overseeding with Kentucky bluegrass, the recommended practice is to plant a blend of three or more improved cultivars with good resistance to leaf spot.

Kentucky bluegrass resistant varieties: Adelphi, Baron, Bonnieblue, Bristol, Birka, Cheri, Enmundi, Glade, Majestic, Parade, Sydsport, Touchdown, Vantage, Victa.

Cultural practices such as proper mowing, fertilizing, and watering are essential to maintain a healthy vigorous turf and offset some of the damage caused by Helminthosporium diseases. Kentucky bluegrass should be mowed at a height of two inches or higher and with a frequency that removes no more than one-fourth to one-third of the leaf area at any one mowing.

Fertilization can either reduce or contribute to the degree of melting out. Sufficient levels of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium help promote a more rapid recovery of severely diseased turf. However, excessive amounts of nitrogen enhance leaf spotting, thus compounding turfgrass damage.

THATCH SERVES as an ideal habitat for the growth and survival of the melting out fungi. If thatch accumulation exceeds a depth of 1/2 inch, it should be removed by power raking. Confine this practice to periods of cool weather in the spring or fall to avoid excessive injury to the turf.

Frequent, light watering often promotes increased leaf spot development. Water deeply and with a schedule that encourages deep and extensive root systems and avoids drought stress of the lawn. Most lawns need not be watered more than once every 7 to 10 days if the soil is soaked to a depth of six to eight inches with each irrigation. Early morning hours (4 a.m. to 8 a.m.) are the best for watering. Avoid watering during the evening. Leaf spot, dollar spot, rust, strip smut, and Fusarium blight are diseases that may develop rapidly when grass blades are continuously wet for six or more hours.

Cultural practices need to be designed to maintain the best turfgrass vigor whenever possible. It is important to keep the turf healthy and in good condition, particularly during hot weather when the crown and root rot stage can be most damaging.

SEVERE OUTBREAKS of leaf spot or melting out on susceptible cultivars are difficult to stop once in progress. Cultural measures will not reduce the disease in these cases and should be combined with a preventive or eradication fungicide program.

The present fungicides are most effective in controlling the leaf spot stage. Therefore, treatment must be made in the spring or fall when this phase is most active. A preventive fungicide program reduces leaf spot formation and lessens the incidence of melting out. Severe infections may require both spring and fall applications of fungicides to obtain satisfactory control.

Pork nutrition is up and calories are down

Results of the long awaited and needed nutrient composition study of pork were released recently and it shows pork is an even better calorie value than consumers thought.

The study shows pork has 197 calories in a three-ounce serving, down from 206 calories. Pork also continues to be high in thiamin, is a good source of iron, and is rich in other vitamins and minerals.

Prompting the study was the fact that existing pork nutrition information was 25 years old and significant advancements had been made in recent years in hog production and nutrition science.

ALTHOUGH SPEARHEADED by USDA, the study is the combined effort of the National Pork Producers Council, the National Livestock and Meat Board, and USDA.

The need for updated nutrient information was first recognized by the National Pork Producers Council in the late 70's when the consumer's concern over calories, cholesterol and fat first began to surface.

According to Marvin Garner, Executive Vice President of NPPC at that time, pork and other red meats were taking a beating from consumer activists and the only data to fight with was 25 years old.

Garner said the Executive Committee of NPPC realized new data was needed and authorized the Council to proceed with a request for Congressional appropriations to get a study started.

Although the appropriation was approved in the Senate, it was defeated in the House. This defeat would have meant waiting another year to start the study if not for the strong support of Senators Proxmire of Wisconsin and Eagleton of Missouri.

THROUGH THE SUPPORT of these men, the Conference Committee reinstated the research appropriation in the budget and work on the nutrient composition study of pork began in October of 1977.

During the succeeding years, producers such as Hillman Schroeder of Wisconsin and others would play an important role in working with budget officials to ensure continued funding for the project. Schroeder would also be part of an Industry team which guided the project to completion.

USDA had the primary responsibility for the study, managing the data gathering and correlating the results. Dr. Katsuo Ono, the research chemist in charge of the project said the study is the largest ever undertaken. Ono and several technicians worked on the project which took over three years to complete at a total cost of over $400,000.

The Meat Board assisted USDA in detailing breakdowns of nationwide production/consumption information to determine the correct number of samples from each geographic area. The Meat Board also outlined the details of standard cutting and cooking procedures for the study.

Consumers will benefit the most from the study with up-to-date nutrition information that shows pork supplies essential vitamins and minerals necessary in a well-balanced diet while contributing only a moderate amount of calories.

WHILE THE VITAMINS contributed by pork were no surprise, the lower calorie content of pork was good news. Through improved genetics and management, pork producers have developed a leaner hog that still produces quality meat. If measured in lard yield per hundred weight of hog, today's hog has 50 percent less fat than the hogs of 25 years ago.

As a result, today's pork has only 197 calories per 3 ounce serving compared to 214 calories in beef, 221 calories in lamb, 162 calories in turkey, and 144 calories in chicken.

Pork continues to be an excellent source of B vitamins and the highest dietary source of thiamin with one serving contributing 34 percent of an adult male's daily requirement.

Through a coordinated communications program between NPPC and the Meat Board, this important information about pork is already being distributed to the nation's food editors, health professionals and home economics professionals.

There's nothing like a class reunion to make a person feel old. You either see balding, overweight, unrecognizable former classmates for the first time in years or you feel like you're the oldest one from your graduating class.

I fell into the latter category. Thirty minutes after our 10-year class reunion began, I had already declared myself "grandfather of the class of 1973."

Before attending the banquet, I filled out the name tag which had been mailed to me. Using my head, I printed my name small. That way I could read someone else's name before he could read mine.

At the banquet I scanned the room and saw many slightly changed but familiar faces. But no one recognized me. In fact I was afraid one of my classmates, who became a bouncer, was going to escort me out of the door for crashing the Class of 1973's party.

I counted 31 classmates at the reunion and not one of them recognized me immediately. I waved and smiled at one classmate and he just stood there, assuming I was waving at someone else. I felt a little better when one person stared at my face—at point blank range—for about five seconds and said, "Hascall." He was the only member of my class who didn't have to read my name tag.

Some of my closest friends in high school didn't even know who I was. To this day they probably think some stranger stole my name tag, put it on and attended the banquet.

It's no wonder my former classmates didn't recognize me. When I graduated I weighed 115 pounds, had thick hair and 20-20 vision. Now I weigh 145, sport a receding hair line and wear glasses to aid the falling vision of my left eye.

I am getting old. My knees creak when I get out of bed. I have to bend my knees in order to touch my toes. My biceps hurt after throwing a softball. After running the bases in a league game, teammates give me CPR. Two innings later, I'm still out of breath.

My reflexes—never very quick—are slowing down. Ground balls bound off my shin, my fingers and my chest instead of falling into my glove. I keep telling myself it's just the condition of the softball field.

I used to be able to eat a large pizza and drink a pitcher of pop without seeing the scales tip.

I'm becoming more absent minded too. I nearly forgot my anniversary this year. And I've only been married four years. (Or is it five?)

I'm so old I remember hearing about Watergate in "Modern Problems" class before anyone even had any idea what was going on. I was in second grade when John F. Kennedy was assassinated.

The pocket calculator was the world's greatest innovation when I was in school. Babysitters who see my record collection want to know what the heck Three Dog Night is. In high school my friends and I worried we would be drafted to fight in Vietnam.

After all these years, I finally understand why my dad tried so hard to strike me out while pitching a baseball in the backyard. Or beat me on the golf course. Or stack hay bales one bale higher in our barn.

I can feel my youth slipping away. It's not gone but it's threatening to run away.

So in a year or two when my son wants to wrestle on the living room carpet, I'm going to pin him. When he wants to play ping pong I'm going to beat him. When he wants to go fishing I'm going to catch one more fish than he does.

I'm going to live it up while I can. My wife will call me a bully. My son will probably pout. But his day is coming and my day is going.

I'll continue to comb my hair to cover up my receding hair line. I'll wear clothes that will conceal some of that excess fat. I'll listen to new wave music and try to keep up with the latest slang.

Old age is catching up with me but I don't plan to give in without a fight. I'll get me soon enough. Until then, the battle will continue.

So it goes.

ask a lawyer

a public service of the nebraska state bar association

Q: My sister had a stroke eight months ago. She was in the hospital for about a month. Can her children sell her house and furniture, or divide it, in such a short time? My sister is in a care home, but she has improved a lot and her memory is returning. I want to know if what her children did is legal?

A: In order to sell real property, the owner of the record (as shown on the deed) must sign the sale documents or must sign papers designating an agent to sign the sale documents on his or her behalf. Assuming that there was no conservatorship proceeding in which a determination was made that your sister was incompetent to handle her own affairs, her property could not be sold unless she signed the sale papers herself, or unless she signed a power of attorney designating someone else to sign for her.

To be effective for the sale of real property, a power of attorney must be filed in the county where the land is located. You could check with the county clerk to determine if such a document was filed.

If your sister was taken advantage of, or if money or property has been taken from her, a court could require the return of the money or property. This could be done at the probate of her estate, in the event that she should die, or in the process of conservatorship proceeding. Anyone who thinks your sister is being taken advantage of may file a petition for the appointment of a conservator. The court will determine if such an appointment is necessary under the circumstances.

Conservatorship proceedings and the use of a power of attorney are two of the subjects covered in the new "Consumer's Guide to Nebraska Law." For a free single copy, send a postcard request to "Ask a Lawyer," P.O. Box 2529, Lincoln 68502.

To the editor:

On July 8 and 9 a Chicken Show will happen in Wayne. As a chicken show committee member I see four short weeks left in the year of planning.

The committee has been excited about the national media coverage for the third year in a row. It means that we are doing something unique and it means that many more people will come to experience it.

I think I voice the concern of the entire committee when I ask, "Now that the plans have been laid, will anything happen? Will there be a good parade? Will people put their talents and their zinniness to use in the talent show? Will there be participation?"

It's a little scary to think that people may travel hundreds of miles for fun in Wayne, Nebr. and find none here.

I am well aware that some folks feel that the idea of the Chicken Show is ridiculous. Of course it is. It is ridiculous and frivolous and nonsensical. It's a real escape. You won't find people worrying about their cares at the Chicken Show. Everybody can use a little irritivity now and then. What is wrong with Wayne being known for a fun time?

I enjoy Wayne as a place to live. The people here offer each other interesting opportunities. It's time to make sure that visitors are given the day of fun we've promised them. There is something you can do. Please figure out what it is and participate. Participants have more fun.

Gail Korn

School is out! And the children will head for the swings and slides on sunny summer days.

Parents need to make certain that outdoor play equipment is in good repair. Last year, thousands of children, mostly under 10 years of age, were injured on or around outdoor play equipment.

Many of these accidents could have been prevented if parents and other adults had used a checklist published by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

The checklist can be used when shopping for playground equipment and when installing or conducting maintenance checks.

SAFETY CHECKLIST:

- Buy the right-sized equipment for the child's age and size
- Make sure that all equipment has complete assembly instructions included.
- Before making a final selection check for the following danger points on playground equipment: Are there exposed bolts and screws, parts that could pinch fingers, sharp edges, hard heavy swing seats and unsafe rings or "S" hooks?
- Install swing sets a minimum of six feet away from fences, building walls, sidewalks and other play areas such as sand boxes.
- Legs of equipment can be set in concrete or stabilized by other methods. All types of anchoring devices should be placed below ground level to avoid a tripping hazard.
- Do not install equipment over hard surfaces such as concrete, brick, black top or cinders. Grass or sand is a much safer play surface.

EVEN EQUIPMENT that meets safety standards and is properly installed can be a hazard for children.

There is no substitute for a little adult supervision when it comes to playground equipment.

Parents should set down safety rules for their child's equipment. If more than one person on a swing is unsafe, children should be warned. Correcting a safety hazard before it leads to an accident is just good common sense.

There will be the inevitable spills and skinned knees, but a more serious accident could be prevented.

TO INSURE parents peace of mind a routine safety check can be made every two to four weeks depending on how much use the equipment receives.

- When checking playground equipment be sure to:
 - Tighten any loose nuts, bolts or clamps.
 - Inspect hangers, hooks, frames and connections.
 - Put tape over protruding bolts and screws.
 - Replace rusted and worn or broken parts.
 - Oil metal parts regularly, check wooden pieces for splinters, and paint metal or wood as needed.
 - Check for wear around equipment supports.
- Most importantly, make any needed repairs immediately. Don't let children use any broken equipment until it is repaired.
- Make this summer safer for your children!

Tri-County action Another win for Town Team

The Wayne Town Team used an eight-run fifth inning last Wednesday as they defeated the Norfolk team 13-3 at Memorial Field in Norfolk.

The game was called after seven innings because of the ten-run rule. Wayne was led by Herman Carroll with a homer, Neil Blohm with two doubles and Jeff Dion and Jeff Zeiss with one each.

Wayne went down in order to start the game and Norfolk countered with three runs as first baseman Rich Neeley pegged a two-run homer with Troy Jones and Gordy Winter on base.

Bill Schwartz got things started for the Wayne team in the second inning with a single. Mike Meyer and Jeff Dion both walked and Tim Pfeiffer went to first on an error by the third baseman as a run scored. Zeiss also got to first on an error, this one by Norfolk's shortstop, and Neil Blohm bagged a single as Wayne went ahead 4-3. Norfolk went down in order and Wayne did the same for the third and fourth innings. Norfolk managed two hits and a base on balls in the same two innings but failed to cross home plate.

The scoring barrage by Wayne started in the fifth as Blohm cracked his first double after Zeiss flew out to center. Starzl, Schwartz and Meyer all walked and Goeden got on with a fielder's choice.

Dion added his double, Pfeiffer a single, and Carroll put in his two-cents worth with his home run. Zeiss and Blohm both doubled as the order came around again.

When the smoke had cleared, Wayne had notched a 13-3 victory and Norfolk had suffered its first loss of the young 1983 season.

Wayne nine recovers to prevail in hitters game

The Wayne Junior Legion recovered from a five-run, first inning scoring blitz by Stanton and went on to win 15-8 in Ralph Bishop League action last Wednesday night.

Two errors and a passed ball along with a single by Todd Dorcay garnered Wayne two runs in the top half of the first inning. Stanton put men on base with a lot of help from Wayne as two errors, a walk and passed ball helped their cause.

Third baseman Randy Gamble got Wayne's bats cracking with a home run to begin the second inning.

Wayne changed pitchers in the bottom of the second inning as Coach Overin substituted Todd Pfeiffer. Pfeiffer helped settle things down as three Stanton batters struck out in the inning.

Jeff McCright, Dennis Lebscock, Todd Dorcay and Tim Heier all took advantage of wild pitching and got on base without a hit. The next two Wayne batters failed to get on but Mark Kubik had a sacrifice to his credit as Lebscock scored.

Steve Overin, subbing for Jorgensen, then hit a triple, driving in two RBIs. Pfeiffer popped out to the catcher to end the first half of the third inning with Wayne taking a 7-5 lead.

Another pitching change for Wayne saw Steve Overin go to the mound. Stanton managed to score a run with the help of a couple of passed balls and the inning ended with the score at 7-6 in favor of the visitors.

Meierhenry struck out to begin the fourth inning for Wayne. McCright then got a charity trip to first and Lebscock flew out to second. He added a base on a steal. Dorcay took a base on balls and also stole a base as Wayne was mounting quite a scoring threat.

Things continued to go awry for Stanton as Heier got on by virtue of an error and Randy Gamble was hit by a pitch and advanced to first.

Kubik struck out and Wayne had to settle for a single run in the inning.

Stanton's pitcher walked, stole second base and advanced to third on a passed ball and it looked like the hosts would manage at least one run in the inning.

Overin had other ideas for Stanton, however, and he promptly put an end to Stanton's fun by striking out the next three batters.

Stanton began to fall to pieces as Wayne came to bat in the fifth. Overin was hit by a pitch, Pfeiffer and Meierhenry got on thanks to Stanton miscues, and McCright was beamed with a pitch before Dennis Lebscock slugged a double. Heier added a single and Longe walked as Wayne chalked up five big runs.

Stanton scored two runs in the bottom half of the fifth, but that ended their scoring for the day. Overin fanned the first two batters in the sixth and the shortstop grounded out to finish the inning.

The only threat Stanton could muster in the final inning was a double by Meas with one out, but the next two batters popped out. Wayne added two runs in the sixth as Meier had an RBI double.

Wayne State hires two-sport coach

Lenny Klaver, a Wayne State College graduate and former Wildcat baseball player, has been appointed head baseball and assistant men's basketball coach at WSC, according to Athletic Director Ron Jones.

Klaver, a 1980 WSC graduate, has taught and coached at Mormon Trail Community High School in Garden Grove, Iowa, for the past three years. He was head baseball and boys' basketball coach and assistant football coach in addition to teaching duties in physical education and history at MTCHS.

He led his 1982-83 basketball squad to a 14-6 record, best in the school's history. His 1981 baseball team was 18-3 and advanced to the district finals before being eliminated.

Klaver is a native of Kamrar, Iowa, and graduated from Northeast Hamilton High in Blairsburg in 1975. He attended Iowa Central Community College in Fort Dodge from 1976-78, where he participated in basketball for two years.

After transferring to Wayne State, Klaver played baseball for the Cats. He graduated in 1980 with a Bachelor of Arts in Education degree and a physical education major.

"I'm excited and enthused about this opportunity," Klaver said. "He learned of the opening at WSC from former Wildcat graduate assistant basketball Coach Doug Hutchinson, who had been on the WSC staff for the past two years."

Klaver, who will be working towards his Master's Degree at WSC and will be on a graduate assistantship, noted, "You don't often get the chance to be a collegiate head coach as a graduate assistant." He said that while "baseball is my favorite sport to coach," he is anxious to contribute to the Wildcat basketball program as well.

"I'm going to enjoy working with Rick (Weaver, head basketball coach)," he said. "We have similar philosophies on basketball. Rick likes the fast break, the aggressive man to man defense, the pressure game. So do I."

His baseball teams will feature "an aggressive style of play. I like the running game, and I want you to initiate the action." Klaver takes over a Wildcat baseball program that has claimed the district title in each of the past two seasons.

"Baseball recruiting is coming along well," he said. "I've been in close contact with the former coaches and we have combined our recruiting efforts." Klaver replaces former co-coaches Neil Blohm and Bill Schwartz, who like himself are former WSC ballplayers. Blohm and Schwartz, who took the job on an interim basis, guided WSC to a 23-15 record, the NAIA District III title, and a spot in the NAIA Area III playoffs.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Klaver of Kamrar, Iowa, Lenny and his wife Jill recently moved to Wayne.

Midgets blast Stanton

Thirteen turned out to be a lucky number for the Wayne Midget baseball team last week as they pounded out thirteen hits in 33 trips to the plate during a 14-3 drubbing of Stanton.

Kevin Maly and Shannon Dorcay both had home runs in the game played at Stanton. Stanton failed to score any runs until the late going after Wayne held a 11-0 lead going into the bottom half of the fifth inning.

Wayne batted first and Chris Wieseler tagged a double after Maly grounded out at the top of the inning. Steve Overin belted a triple to drive in Wieseler and Dorcay drove in his first RBI with a single to end Wayne's scoring in the first.

Stanton went down in order as Anderson struck out and Melcher and Kremlack flew out.

Wayne scored its third run of the game in the second inning on an error and then held the opposition scoreless after Stanton put two men on base on a walk and a passed ball.

Larsen and Dorcay both walked in the next stanza and third baseman Rick Nelson pegged a nice single as Wayne added three runs to their tally.

The drought continued for Stanton in the third when the left fielder flew out to second and Larsen fanned the next two batters.

In the fourth, Overin got on base by virtue of an error and Larsen hit a double to drive him in as Wayne took a commanding 7-0 lead. The Wayne Midgets then added insult to injury as Dorcay boomed a round-tripper, Jeff Sherer hit a triple and Pete Warne got an RBI to his credit with a single.

Coach Hank Overin put Sherer in to pitch for the bottom half of the fourth inning and Stanton again failed to get anything going.

The Stanton coach tried the same maneuver with his pitcher but with different results, as Kevin Maly launched Wayne's second home run of the contest.

Jeff Hausemann went to the mound for Wayne in the fifth. Stanton's center fielder reached first on a passed ball and the hosts scored their only three runs of the game to end the inning.

Wayne added three in the sixth as Hausemann bagged a double and Fleming sacrificed.

The game ended as Hausemann struck out the last two Stanton batters.
