THE WAYNE HERALD

Public hearing scheduled

City proposing budget slightly over $7 million

The Wayne City Council has scheduled a public hearing Tuesday, July 26 at 7:30 p.m. for its proposed 1983-84 city budget.

Council members met early Tuesday morning with City Administrator Phil Kloster and Mayor Wayne Marsh for a budget work session.

Kloster said Tuesday's work session was designed to go through the budget department by department, to evaluate askings and proposals.

Although a final work session was scheduled Wednesday morning, Kloster said the total 1983-84 budget appears to be slightly over $7 million, up nearly $7 million from last year's budget of $5,058,316.

KLOSTER SAID although the total proposed budget is up from last year, the city's operating budget for 1983-84 is actually down about 2.4 percent or $11,900 from the previous fiscal year which runs from Aug. 1 to July 31.

Kloster added that the primary reasons for this year's increased budget are three major projects which the city will be involved in during the upcoming year.

Included is construction of a wastewater treatment plant at a cost of approximately $1,400,000.

Also planned during the coming year are two paving projects, on West Third St. next to the Western Heights subdivision, and two blocks on Fairground Ave.

Another project involves improvements at Wayne Municipal Airport at a cost expected to reach $250,000. Improvements at the airport include hangar work and runway extension and resurfacing.

"THE INCREASE in the city budget is summarized in those three major improvement areas," said Kloster.

"If we took out those three items plus the lottery factor the actual budget would be decreased from a year ago.

"A year from now the budget will go back down again."

KLOSTER POINTED out that in preparing next year's budget, nearly all requests the council received for appropriations were reduced before they were even put into the budget.

"The council has to look at all of the requests in light of policy decision," he explained, adding that revenues are decreasing and the city is attempting for the third straight year to increase cash reserves.

"We want to work within the limits provided by law and stay as fiscally sound as we can," said Kloster, adding that the city has now reached nearly 30 percent of the cash reserve goal set by the council.

KLOSTER SAID proposals during the next budget year include replacing the present utility billing system with computer billing, at a cost of approximately $55,000 for installation.

"The computer will provide us with much better management tools and save manpower," he added.

Other projects, which the city hopes to receive grants for to help cover costs, include replacing the Senior Citizens mini bus with a new one at a cost of approximately $20,000, and energy conservation work at Wayne Public Library.

KLOSTER SAID the 1983-84 budget shows several thousand dollars allocated in various areas for energy conservation work on other public buildings.

"That's prevalent throughout the budget as the city tries to hold down utility bills," said Kloster, adding that utilities for public buildings and grounds are projected to be 75 percent higher for the coming year than they were just two years ago.

"The city will continue to do everything it can to cut energy consumption, both heating and electricity," Kloster added.

KLOSTER SAID most departments in the city are taking a negligible cut from funds they had requested.

Cut the most, according to Kloster, was the Wayne Police Department, down nearly 10 percent from its original request.

Kloster said service in the police department will not be affected, with most of the reductions in the areas of commodities and expansion type projects.

The proposed 1983-84 budget also includes a reduction of approximately $20,000 from the budget request submitted by the Wayne Fire Department.

Kloster said next year's budget does pro

Wayne's 'daisy crazy' gardener discovers market in perennials

By Michelle Kubik

If perennials are forever, then Gail Korn's garden, just 3 1/2 miles south of Wayne, has many years left to thrive.

Gail's garden, Color Plus, features about 40 varieties of perennials and she hopes to increase that number to 60 by next spring.

Within the next two or three years, she expects her selection to number 100.

GAIL'S INTEREST in perennials began 10 years ago, when she started designing landscapes and found that people in this area had a growing desire for a constant type of plant.

She was given some plants by relatives, but now buys most of her seedlings from nurseries.

"The biggest value of perennials," said Gail, "is the fact that the garden's appearance can change every week. Because of the variety of plants I have," she added, "you can always find something new in bloom."

GAIL HAS found her biggest challenge is trying to arrange her garden according to the different blooming times of the individual plants.

A succession of plants, all with varied flowering seasons, lines the 80-foot lane from the highway to her house.

Gail knows of no other perennial gardens of this type within a 30 mile radius and she feels that her unique plants have brought her a lot of local and area business.

ALTHOUGH GAIL'S garden is unique, it is not a new idea.

"Our grandmothers have always had this type of garden," she said, "but the big plant boom did not hit until the 1970's, when the increased interest moved from house plants to outside gardens."

Gail emphasizes the economy's role in promoting perennials. "It makes sense," she said. "Why not buy something that's going to keep coming back year after year and will remain for a long time?"

PERENNIALS NOT only save money but also time. Gail said her garden can go almost two weeks with little weeding, but care of the nursery becomes a full time job in the springtime.

She must remove all "spent" blossoms once a week and "dead heading" must also be done to keep new blooms coming back.

"Keeping my garden 'spruced up' is a constant chore," said Gail, "but when I walk through it every morning and see the new blossoms, I know it's worth the time."

Gail taught herself how to care for perennials by reading books and through experimental care of her garden.

She also would like to start growing some of her own seedlings and mini roses for the garden.

TO FULLY NURTURE the seedlings, Gail is currently adding a new shop and greenhouse to her operation.

The greenhouse, which she hopes to complete this fall, is being added to the south side of an already established barn.

There are two ways to buy perennials, Gail explained. They can be purchased as holthouse grown seedlings, which take

Commissioner takes office

Saying his plans include "trying to get the roads in Wayne County back in shape," Robert Nissen of rural Wayne took office Tuesday as County Commissioner for the 2nd District of Wayne County.

Nissen, 42, was one of eight persons applying for the job vacated by Kenneth Eddle, who resigned last month with one and one-half years remaining in his term.

Nissen was sworn in by Associate County Judge Luverna Hillon during an informal ceremony preceding the regular meeting of the Wayne County Board.

NISSEN WAS appointed to office by a board made up of the county clerk, county attorney and county treasurer. According to state law, the board must review all applications and fill the vacancy within 45 days if an elected official leaves office before his term is finished.

Nissen was chosen over Bill Smith of Shales, Warren Summers of Wayne, Jack Kavanaugh, John Rethwisch and Robert Hank of Carroll, and Walter Fleer of rural Hoskins.

Nissen served as Wayne County Superintendent of Highways from 1971 to 1976.

NISSEN FARMS a quarter section of land outside of Wayne with his son Mike, 20.

"Although, my son does most of the work," he said.

His wife, Marlene, and their other son, Tom, 24, and daughter, Pam, 18, also help out. All three of the Nissen children are students at Wayne State College.

NISSEN SAID no single reason motivated him to seek the seat on the county board. "I saw it as a chance to do some work for the county and help them out," Nissen said.

As for his pledge to try to improve the road conditions in Wayne County, Nissen called that a "pretty tall order."

"It will take a while," he said, "but we're going to try."

He said that, although he hasn't had a chance to study closely the state's budget allocations for road work in the county, he wasn't optimistic about Wayne County's chances of securing much funding in the near future.

"THE ROAD program that the state just put out doesn't look like Wayne County is slated to get very much money," Nissen said.

Nissen said that resurfacing of Seventh Street (Highway 35) and shoulder work on Highway 15 south of Wayne will go on as scheduled late this year or early next year.

Although he was cautious in his assessment, Nissen said is planning to run for reelection in 1985.

County short $61,386

Schools receive tuition checks totaling $122,712

Nine Class III school districts in the area slated to receive a total of $184,101 from Wayne County for non-resident high school tuition, received checks last week totaling only $122,712.

The payments, which were for the fourth quarter of the 1982-83 school year, were $61,386 less than the amounts certified by the schools.

Wayne County School Superintendent Loren Park said the decrease in the amount of monies paid to the schools for the fourth quarter is due to a $61,386 shortage in Wayne County for non-resident tuition.

Park said funds to the nine receiving Class III schools for the fourth quarter were prorated out on the basis of monies available from the county.

PARK ADDED although the county has until Sept. 1 to distribute fourth quarter funds to eligible school districts, checks were mailed last week to allow school districts to adjust their 1983-84 budgets if necessary to allow for the shortage.

Wayne-Carroll High School, which claimed $72,702.75 in non-resident high school tuition for the fourth quarter, received $48,461.01 from the county.

and the amounts they were paid by Wayne County, included:

- Winside — claimed $44,220, paid $29,475.45; Wakefield — claimed $8,400, paid $5,999.14; Laurel — claimed $2,500, paid $1,466.41; Norfolk — claimed $13,219.04, paid $8,811.33; Pierce — claimed $14,250, paid $9,498.53; Ponder — claimed $11,985, paid $2,988.72; Wisner — claimed $10,575, paid $7,048.91; Randolph — claimed $6,250, paid $4,166.02.

THE SHORTAGE in Wayne County for non-resident high school tuition is the result of taxes levied in 1982-83 for Class I taxpayers.

In 1982, the tuition money was only partially paid to Class III school districts in the area because of litigation initiated last summer by taxpayers from Class I districts in Wayne County.

The lawsuit protested the amount of non-resident tuition paid by Class I district residents.

"AS I UNDERSTAND," said Park, "there was a balance on the books due to the funds that were frozen in the non-resident tuition court case."

"That money was on the books, so it was considered eligible for use by the County Clerk is levying taxes for 1982-83.

"When those funds were considered eligible for use in settling the 1982-83 levy, and they were subtracted from the amount of non-resident high school tuition required by the schools for 1982-83, that left an amount not sufficient to pay all the non-resident tuition."

The amount of money frozen as a result of the litigation totaled $378,555.42, while the amount of money required by the schools for 1982-83 non-resident high school tuition total ed $731,722.

COUNTY CLERK Oregretta Morris told The Wayne Herald that taxes for 1982-83 non-resident tuition were levied based on advice she received from the State Auditor's office.

"I talked to three people in the State Auditor's office," said Morris, adding that all three times she was told that if the funds are on the books they can't be ignored.

Morris said all three times she informed the auditor's office that the funds were tied up in litigation, and all three times she was told that was the way it had to be done and funds would have to be made up for the following year.

"I did exactly what I had to do under the state's direction."

"IT'S A UNIQUE situation we've never faced before and I hope we never face again," said Morris, adding "I'm not doing a thing with the 1983-84 tax levy until the state auditor is right here in this office."

Morris said if the County Superintendent's office had waited until Sept. 1 to mail out the prorated tuition monies for the fourth quarter, the county would have stood to pick up an estimated $40,000 to $50,000 in additional tax revenue.

IN EXPLAINING how the levy is set, Superintendent Park said rural students fill out cards each summer saying they will be attending a Class III school.

The cards are sent to the County Superintendent's office before the first Monday in July.

"From the cards," said Park, "our office compiles a list of eligible non-resident high school students who will be attending one of the nine Class III districts in the area."

Park explained that each Class III school board sets the amount of money they will need to collect, based upon the individual requirements for each non-resident student.

That figure also is submitted to the County Superintendent's office.

"BY THAT TIME," said Park, "we know how many students are going to attend each Class III district and how much each district is going to charge."

"Then the County Superintendent certifies to the County Board of Equalization (County Commissioners) the amount of money that will be needed to pay non-resident tuition for the upcoming school year."

"Based on that figure the commissioners set the levy that collects the tax money for non-resident high school tuition."

PARK ADDED that Nebraska school law 79-436 requires the commissioners to set the levy sufficient to pay non-resident high school tuition, based on the certificate submitted by the County Superintendent.

Park went on to explain that four times each year, in February, May, August and November, the secretary of each Class III board of education certifies to the County Superintendent the number of non-resident pupils enrolled in that high school.

"Then," said Park, "the County Superintendent certifies to the County

Treasurer. In March, June, September and December, the amount of money to be paid to each eligible school district for each quarter.

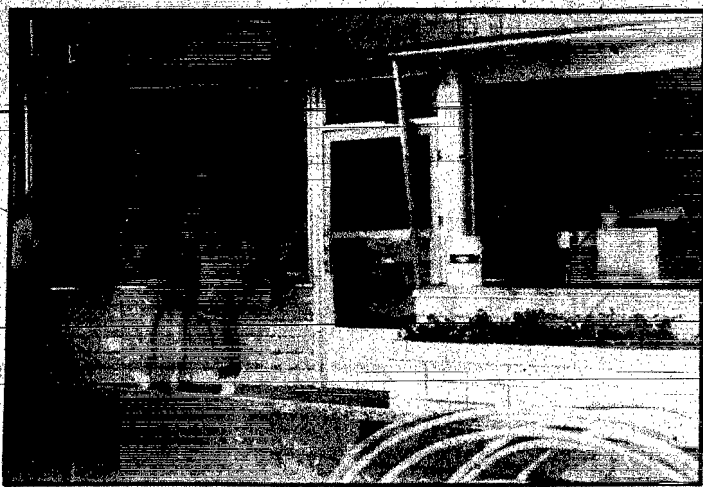

"If there is not enough money during any of those quarters, Nebraska school law 79-4,103 permits the funds to be distributed on a prorated basis."

PARK SAID last year's $61,386 shortage will have to be carried over when the 1983-84 levy is set by the commissioners in September.

He explained that while the nine Class III schools will face a shortage in non-resident tuition for the fourth quarter of the 1982-83 school year, and for the first two quarters of the 1983-84 school year, that shortage will be picked up in the third and fourth quarters of 1983-84.

"The schools will receive the money," explained Park, "but they'll just have to wait a little longer."

In addition to last year's shortage, Park cited a considerable increase by some Class III schools in setting their 1983-84 non-resident high school tuition rates as another reason for an increased tax levy for Class I taxpayers in 1983-84.

Oven explosion

DANNY WATTS, an employee of Vel's Bakery, was treated for a minor arm burn following an early morning gas explosion in the building. According to Vel Temme, the oven had apparently went out and when it was relit, the excess gas exploded. The explosion, which occurred shortly before 7 a.m. Wednesday, blew the front windows out of the bakery, but no other damage was evident. Temme said the bakery would be closed all day Wednesday, but he hoped to have the repairs done for reopening, today (Thursday).

pose to upgrade the fire department's notification system for firemen, with the city's share of the total cost about $10,000.

"MY PHILOSOPHY is to try and provide whatever department or board the best that we can realistically afford, so that they can do a good job," explained Klostler.

"If we don't have the dollars today to get it right, then let's try to get along without until we can get it done right.

"We try to do only the improvement projects as they are really needed, without putting them off too long."

KLOSTER SAID one another area in the proposed budget which "regrettably" had to take a decrease was the library department.

Klostler said nearly $800 was trimmed from the library's budget request for the purchase of books and periodicals.

"They still grew, but we reduced the amount of growth," the city administrator said, adding "it gets tough when you have to start carving into those worthwhile programs."

Klostler said another area the council will be looking at during the coming year is to request that the recreation board increase its revenue by increasing fees, with emphasis on adult programs.

KLOSTER SAID new projects slated in the electrical department during the coming year include bringing the Western Heights subdivision on line, and upgrading the south farm line with pole and wire replacement. In the water-sewer department, Klostler said the wastewater treatment plant is a big item there.

Klostler added that the city in all likelihood will be administering funds for a spec building in cooperation with Wayne industries.

KLOSTER SAID three committees were appointed at Tuesday's budget work session to evaluate wage and fringe programs for city employees, including hourly employees, department heads and administration.

The administrator said no pay increases will be given as of August until the in-depth study is completed in about two months.

ACCORDING TO Klostler, an area of concern facing the council in the coming year is revenue sharing.

"We have no idea whatsoever as to whether Congress will reapportion revenue sharing," said Klostler, adding that the present program expires in October.

Klostler said in previous years the city has received between $50,000 and $60,000.

Klostler said improvement projects which the city plans to do if the funds come through include establishing sinking funds of $17,000 for fire truck replacement and $10,000 for street sweeper replacement, and setting aside money for eventual repair of the transfer station.

KLOSTER SAID the 1983-84 budget which will be proposed next Tuesday night to the council is a balanced budget within the 7 percent lid required by the state, with expenditures in balance with revenues.

about a year to mature, or as field grown clumps, which can be divided and replanted.

"TRANSPLANTING perennials is very simple," Gail remarked. "It's the same as digging up a plant from your neighbors' yard and taking it home."

"The customer selects what they want and takes it home for transplanting." "Gail has had few complaints concerning her perennials' longevity.

Spring and fall are the recommended planting times, but hot, windy weather can be fatal times for transplanting. Gail claims she is "daisy crazy." Her personal attraction to this species has resulted in a 15-variety selection in her garden.

Another favorite of hers is the day lily. "It has so much to offer," she said. "It's a carefree flower, which blooms in every season and comes in every color."

GAIL NOTED that residents of five different states have toured her garden, in addition to visitors from the local and immediate area.

She has started assembling a full color picture catalog for visitors and prospective customers, and hopes to keep expanding her operation and selection.

Tourism promotes state revenue

Let's talk about it...

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

The best kind of tax, according to an old saying, is one that somebody else pays. To an extent, Nebraska has found such a levy in its 3-year-old lodging tax. Under the tax, the state collects 1 percent of the cost of a hotel or motel room. In addition, 21 counties take advantage of a provision of the law which allows them to add another 2 percent tax on the rooms.

By nature, then, the tax tends to favor stay-at-home Nebraskans over itinerants from other states who use hotels and motels. Because it hits out-of-staters, the tax, was extended indefinitely this year without substantive debate by the Legislature.

REVENUE FROM the tax, which last year amounted to $907,000 for the state and $1.4 million for the counties, must be spent on promotion of tourism. Expenditures include national advertising, brochures, roadside signs, booths at travel fairs and just about anything which will increase the number of tourists who stop and spend their money in Nebraska.

State officials say the tax has finally made Nebraska competitive with others in tourism promotion. The state last year ranked 36th in expenditures for tourism promotion, up from 47th in 1980.

Effective promotion of tourism potentially has great benefits for the state economy. Travelers in Nebraska during 1981 spent $1.1 billion, according to the U.S. Travel Data Center.

Gov. Bob Kerrey has suspended the controls on state purchasing and hiring which he imposed shortly after taking office in January.

In a memorandum circulated recently to directors of state agencies, boards and commissions, Kerrey said he will no longer require reviews of proposed hirings or major state purchases.

On Jan. 18, Kerrey circulated a memorandum which required that proposed purchases of more than $500 by any state agency have the prior approval of Department of Administrative Services Director Jack Sexton.

IN ADDITION, Kerrey froze merit pay increases for state employees, and required that new hiring, promotions or reclassifications of state employees have the prior approval of Sexton and Department of Personnel Director Frosty Chapman.

From now on, the purchasing and personnel decisions of state agencies will no longer be subject to the controls, according to the latest memorandum.

"In no way does this mean that we're out of the fiscal woods," Kerrey said in the memo, asking directors to continue restraint in their spending.

He asked that agency directors continue internal reviews similar to those implemented by Kerrey on a government-wide basis.

If the current Nebraska congressional district map is challenged in federal court, the state would have to justify the population variance of 0.23 percent between the most and least populous districts. Attorney General Paul Douglas said recently.

On congressional district map fashioned by the 1981 Legislature, the Omaha-dominated 2nd District is the most populous. The 1st District, which includes Lincoln, is the least populous.

DOUGLAS' OBSERVATIONS, made in a letter to Sen. Vard Johnson of Omaha, follow a June 22 U.S. Supreme Court ruling which nullified the New Jersey congressional district map because of a population variance of 0.69 percent.

In the New Jersey case, the high court took an exceedingly dim view of what many would have considered merely a slight population deviation. Its decision was viewed as a strong affirmation of the "one-man, one vote" principle first enunciated in the 1960s.

Douglas said possible justifications for the variance in the Nebraska map, if challenged in court, could be the desire of lawmakers to make the three districts more compact, respect for municipal boundaries, preservation of the cores of prior districts and the desire to avoid election contests between incumbents.

Some state Democratic Party officials have expressed interest in a court challenge based on the New Jersey case.

By Penny Rafferty, Ph.D.

Dear Dr. Penny,
A lady wrote to you about her cosmetologist's body odor.

I own my own shop and have been on the receiving end of body odor and bad breath from my customers.

I thank your advice of quietly going to the "offenders" was good but let the customer take stock of their own odor conditions first! And, also, tighten up on the heavy perfume.

We will all be happier "cleaning the air."

Dear Beautician,
Turnabout is fair play!

Dear Dr. Penny,
I am overweight and have been for as long as I can remember. My friends say I am obese and that if I become a vegetarian I'll lose weight.

They say that vegetables aren't fattening and you can eat as much as you want and not gain weight.

Have you heard this?

Dear J.B.K.

Vegetarians can be overweight, too! Weight gain occurs when you consume more than you expend. Usually the cause of overweight is overeating. The causes of overeating, however, are many.

Bad habits start slowly...one bite at a time. You did not gain the extra weight overnight. Neither, will it be lost that way. You must have the desire AND the motivation to achieve and maintain weight loss.

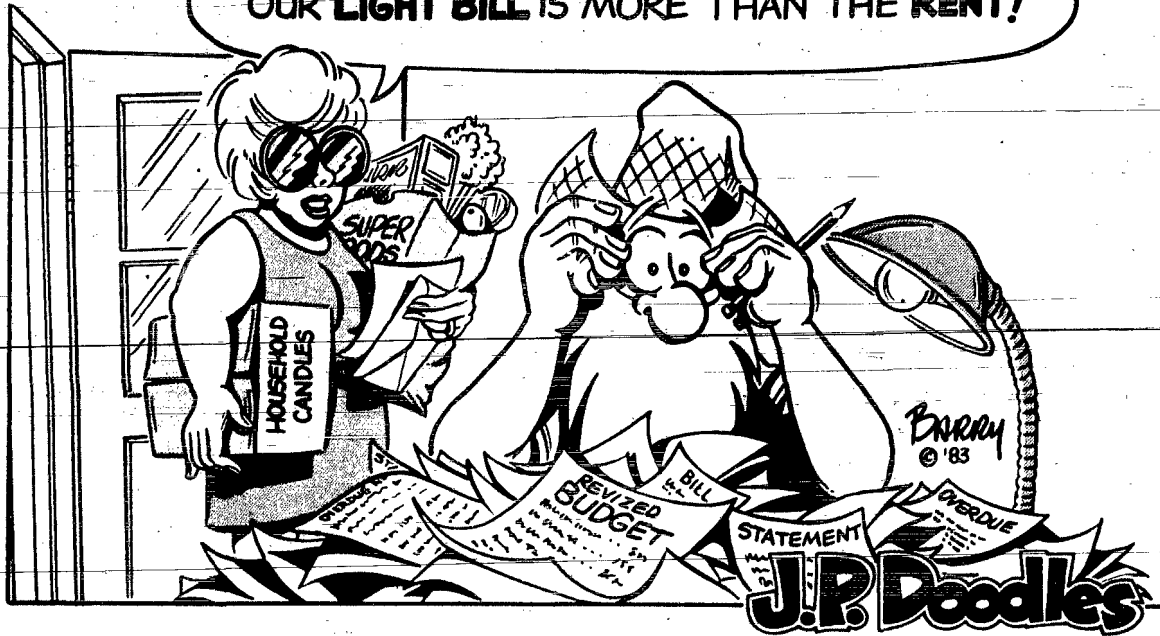

Knowledge of food values and habits can be gained with assistance from your family physician, a nutritionist and several nutrition books at your public library.

Dear Dr. Penny,
Every year, without fail, my grandmother gives me a handkerchief for my birthday. I don't use them or want them. I wonder if I should tell her to stop wasting her money or just go on putting them in the drawer.

Dear Granddaughter,
Your grandmother won't always be here to remember your birthday.

Appreciate her thoughtfulness.

PIK program creates a backlash

By Cheryl Stubbendiek
Nebraska Farm Bureau

A few months ago in this space I expressed my belief that the widespread publicity surrounding the payment in kind program would contribute much to urban understanding of the contemporary American farmer. The vast amount of newspaper space and broadcast time devoted to the PIK program and its effects would at the least tell city folks that farmers do not set the prices for their products.

Beyond that, they might understand the degree of management experience required, the large amount of risk and stress involved and the degree of commitment which causes farmers to view farming as a way of life. I saw all of this media attention as good, very good for improving farm-city relationships.

And for a while, I was convinced this was the case. Friends and professional acquaintances not in agriculture would ask me questions about the PIK program that seemed to show at least a mild interest. And a Monsanto Company report in April showed that nearly 90 percent of the people polled in a national survey said agriculture was very important to the U.S. economy.

EIGHTY PERCENT of those folks said farmers face "major economic problems," and they listed in order poor crop prices, inadequate financial returns, costs of production, farm bankruptcies and high interest rates as the farmer's major problems.

But in the fine print and the last paragraphs of the survey report, the study showed 53 percent of those surveyed opposed payments of surplus grain for not planting crops, which of course is the premise of the PIK program.

More recently I've begun to pick up on backlash to the PIK program. Some of this is apparent to even the occasional consumer of national news. But closer to home, editors of Nebraska's weekly papers speak of coffee shop talk about the PIK program being farmers' welfare. And the all-purpose jokes which serve equally well for any particular group now reflect the PIK program. "Did you hear the one about the guy who went in to the shoe shop to pick up a pair of loafers? He came out with a couple of PIK farmers."

All of this suggests to me that people in our cities and even our small towns have gained knowledge more than understanding about farming and the PIK program.

NO FARMER CARES to think he's receiving welfare and he doesn't want you or me to think so either. But there may be a parallel here: even as welfare programs for low income or disadvantaged Americans are conceived as temporary, so, too, is the PIK program. It may go two years rather than the one originally conceived. But it is designed to be temporary, as a means to help correct a problem that's been building up for a long time.

And it is a problem that affects everyone in the U.S., not just the farmer who's farming a little less this year, and maybe contemplating a long-neglected vacation. Keep those surpluses around, keep those prices too low, and there are going to be fewer farmers willing to grow food crops, with the ultimate result that prices to consumers are going to be higher.

Just as any group in the spotlight is an easy mark for a joke, so farmers are getting their share. City folks can do a lot to move beyond knowledge to understanding by resisting the temptation to go for the cheap laugh and instead make the effort to ask a farmer what his situation really is.

Abolish pages?

Senator Edward Zorinsky, citing last week's disclosure that two House members acknowledged sexual relationships with Capitol Hill pages, has once again called for ending the Congressional page program.

Zorinsky, who in six years has never appointed pages or participated in other Congressional patronage, said in the latest disclosures are the most graphic examples yet of the problems inherent with these programs.

"The page program, in particular, has the potential for creating tremendous problems," Zorinsky said. "It exposes young people to the moral decay of our society and leaves them on their own in a major metropolitan area."

"Many of them are simply not mature enough to cope with the pressures thrust upon them," he said. "It can damage them for the rest of their lives."

ZORINSKY ALSO opposes the page program on the basis of cost.

"The $9,000-plus salaries we pay these young people are not commensurate with the demeaning tasks we ask them to do," he said. "House and Senate members are perfectly capable of getting their own glasses of water and opening their own doors."

"These very fine young men and women are above such things," Zorinsky added. "Paying them $9,000 a year for these activities only encourages creation of future wards of the state."

"When we add in the cost of housing and education, the page program becomes very expensive — and its real purpose is often only to reward family members of political contributors back home," he said.

ZORINSKY SAID HE hoped the House and Senate would re-evaluate the idea of all patronage programs in the wake of the House Ethics Committee report on sexual misconduct involving pages.

He noted that other patronage programs pay young people to run automatic elevators and provide $11,000-a-year salaries for four-hour a day jobs in Capitol Hill post offices.

"Abolishing the page program and all similar patronage is one way to assure that something positive results from this latest disturbing chapter," he said.

To the editor:
It is with complete disappointment that we find ourselves having to write this letter.

Each edition of The Herald devotes two pages to the coverage of area sports activity. May we ask why then next to no coverage can be found in your paper for the girls summer softball program?

There are a number of age groups in the program, all of which have had good records this summer.

Tonight we have just returned from an exciting weekend district tournament where the 18-year old and younger girls won a birth in the state tournament to be held in Aurora the weekend of July 29.

This group of girls has a record of 17 wins, six losses for the year — and are going to represent the whole community of Wayne in the same excellent fashion they have all year long.

We feel your readers would like to have the opportunity to follow their progress.

Parents Of This
Fine Group of Girls

To the editor:
I want to congratulate the Wayne girls softball team for the great job they have done all year and especially at the district tournament held in Emerson last week.

I was proud of them winning second place. Jerry Morris and Todd Heier need to be congratulated for their coaching job too.

It would have been even more encouraging for the team to have had a better following by the Wayne community.

Good luck girls at the state tournament at Aurora!

Samantha story continues

Propaganda opportunity exploited

By W. Alexander Hamilton, Ph.D.

Uncle Yuri

Once again we find ourselves in the offices of Oglivovich and Matherovich — the USSR's leading Ad Agency. Ivan and Nickolai are discussing ways to exploit an unexpected propaganda opportunity.

"Nickolai, can you believe this little American girl, named Samantha?"

"I suppose it's possible she wrote it herself, but I'll bet the Reagan Administration made her do it."

"BUT WHY would the Americans have a little girl write to our glorious leader for world peace? Why would they have her endorse a nuclear freeze?"

"Ivan, no one can understand the Americans. For years, they had the power to destroy us with a 'first strike' nuclear attack, but they didn't do it. What fools."

"Yes, but the Americans don't have a monopoly on fools. Have you seen Andropov's draft reply to Samantha?"

"It's here on my desk. And you and I have been given the mission of cleaning it up. No way can Yuri's reply go out in this form. "Read it to me, Nicky."

D-R-A-F-T

Dear Samantha:

I read your letter with great interest. You know, you remind me of Becky Thatcher, a little girl in a book by one of our American authors whose cryptonym was Mark Twain.

I too am concerned about nuclear war. In fact, I sort of wish we Soviets had accepted the Baruch Plan back in 1946.

You weren't around then, but I was. You see the American government proposed to do away with atomic weapons. The plan was so simple we Russians decided it was a trap.

In front of the United Nations, the Americans offered to destroy all of their atomic weapons and allow us or anyone to watch. Since only the Americans had any atomic weapons it was a pretty breathtaking proposal. In a way, I wish we had taken the Americans up on their idea. Just think how many rubles the USSR would have saved if atomic weapons had ceased to exist since 1946.

BUT THERE was a catch...the Americans insisted on the right to come on Russian soil so they could look around and be sure we were not making atomic weapons. Naturally, we could not agree to that.

Since then, we have had to work very hard to produce atomic bombs. By 1950, we had our first operational nuclear weapons. And now, we have proved we can deliver more nuclear weapons than you Americans.

That is why I am so pleased that a little girl such as you, Becky, (I mean Samantha) can understand why it is necessary to have a nuclear freeze. If a child can understand this issue, there is hope that all Americans can understand it.

Thank you again for writing to me. I feel just like an uncle to you. Please come and visit me sometime.

Sincerely,
Yuri Andropov

"YOU'RE RIGHT, Ivan, Andropov's flip-flop. Someone will figure out the work of this Mark Twain character has been banned in the USSR since 1917."

"Da, but Andropov could have read Huckleberry Finn during the years he worked outside the USSR for the KGB and the Foreign Office."

"True, but he's taking a risk admitting it in this letter," said Nickolai.

"You're right, so scrub the bill about Becky Thatcher."

"Also, we can't let Yuri remind people that, in 1946, the Americans were willing to destroy the world's only existing stockpile of atomic weapons."

"RIGHT, DELETE that part, for sure."

"But, if we cut all that out, there's nothing left but our standard propaganda and the twist of our President stooping to write this little nobody schoolchild in America."

"I know, but we'll answer her letter anyway."

"Do you really think the American media will pick up on a fluff piece like this?"

"Don't worry, Nicky. CBS will pick up this one with a spoon and, when they do, we'll spring for a free trip for Samantha and her folks to the USSR," predicted Ivan.

Wayne girls win state berth via Emerson

It was a weekend full of nail-biting as Wayne's 18-and-under girls softball team won three of its five district games at Emerson July 15-17 to take second place in the tournament and earn a trip to the state Class B Championship Tournament.

The state journey, a 24-team, double-elimination affair, is scheduled for July 29-31 at Aurora's Streefer Park.

Wayne locked horns with Pender twice and won both contests while Bow Valley took two of three games from Wayne.

Wayne 2, Pender 1

In its first tournament game played on Friday night, Wayne scored two runs in the third inning to gain what proved to be the necessary margin for victory in a tight 2-1 contest.

Pender went ahead 1-0 after a scoreless first inning as the left fielder, Smith, took a base on balls, stole two bases, and went home on a sacrifice bunt.

team managed a hit in the remainder of the contest.

Bow Valley 21, Wayne 20

Wayne lost a 21-20 heartbreaker to Bow Valley on Saturday in its second game of the tournament.

The score was knotted 2-2 after one. Lisa Jacobsen scored after faking a base on balls and stealing her way to home. Lori Jacobsen walked with one out, stole two bases, and went home on a fielder's choice by Karen Longe.

Wayne was outscored 9-6 in the next two innings as Bow Valley fanned four runs in the second and five in the third off of four hits and five walks.

Shelly Janke tagged a single with one out in the second and Sarah Lebsock and Lisa Jacobsen took bases on balls.

The third stanza saw the first four Wayne batters walk before Laura Keating and Lisa Jacobsen added singles to make the score 11-8 in favor of Bow Valley after three.

and staged a furious rally in the final three innings.

Paula Koplin tripled in the fifth and went home on a passed ball.

In the sixth, Roni Johnson and Karen Longe walked and advanced on three stolen bases and a passed ball as two runs scored.

Wayne added six in the last inning as Shelly Janke singled with two runners on, and Lori Jacobsen did the same. The rally was one run short, however, as Wayne fell 21-20.

Wayne 20, Pender 12

Pender fell victim to a scoring flurry as Wayne won the Sunday "loser's bracket" game 20-12.

In the first inning, Paula Koplin singled and advanced to third on a couple of passed balls. Lori Jacobsen got on via an error charged to Pender's pitcher, and advanced to second as Sarah Lebsock took a base on balls, and Wayne tallied two runs.

Pender scored three in the first stanza as three batters walked and the second baseman, Hegne, doubled.

Wayne scored a solo run in the second as Paula Koplin tripled to drive in Jody Allen, who had singled with two outs.

The Pender girls added three runs of their own and the score stood at 6-3 in favor of Pender after two.

Both teams tallied four runs each over the next two innings.

Karen Longe singled in both innings for Wayne and Roni Johnson had an RBI sacrifice in the fourth.

Trailing 10-7, Wayne shut-out Pender in the fifth while scoring six runs. Shelly Janke took a base on balls and stole second before Amy Jordan got on via a Pender error.

The next two batters walked and Roni Johnson and Lori Jacobsen had back-to-back singles as Wayne took an 11-10 lead it never relinquished.

Pender was held to two runs in the last two innings as Wayne pounded out five hits to score seven big runs and win the contest 20-12.

Wayne 14, Bow Valley 12

Bow Valley and Wayne stood toe-to-toe for the second time last Sunday as Wayne won the game 14-12 with the help of three runs in the seventh inning.

Wayne trailed 3-2 after one inning as Karen Longe and Sarah Lebsock singled.

Back-to-back doubles in the second inning by Paula Koplin and Roni Johnson tallied another run for Wayne in the second. Wayne retired Bow Valley one, two, three in the inning as the score was knotted at three going into the third.

Laura Keating went home for Wayne's only score in the third inning after she hit a fielder's choice that saw Sarah Lebsock out at third.

Bow Valley managed a run in the inning off of a triple by Jill Kathol that scored Jean Brummer and the score went to 4-4 after three.

Jody Allen scored in the fourth inning after she reached base on a Bow Valley bloop. Lori Jacobsen also scored on a passed ball in the inning.

The score was 6-4 in Wayne's favor after Bow Valley went down while stranding three runners in the fourth.

Both teams scored eight runs in the final three innings.

Wayne scored one run in the fifth as Jody Allen singled to score Shelly Janke.

Four runs crossed the plate in the sixth for Wayne as Bow Valley was charged with three errors and Tammie Murray added a single in her first trip to the plate.

up what proved to be the winning runs in the seventh inning as Wayne won the contest 14-12.

Bow Valley 17, Wayne 12

Wayne never recovered from a 13-run third inning by Bow Valley in the championship game of the District Tournament at Emerson and went on to lose 17-12.

After jumping out to 1-0 lead in the first inning off of a Karen Longe triple that scored Paula Koplin, Wayne added four runs in the second stanza.

Tammie Murray singled after Shelly Janke got to first via an error. Roni Johnson singled with two outs as Wayne went on to take a 4-1 lead into the third inning.

The walls caved in on Wayne in the third as Bow Valley racked up 12 runs off of eight hits, four walks and a couple of Wayne errors.

Wayne's solo run in the inning made the score 14-6 in Bow Valley's favor.

Wayne countered with four runs in the fourth stanza and one in the fifth, but never recovered as Bow Valley went on to win the championship.

Wayne Tennis Open called 'big success'

The third annual Wayne Open Tennis Tournament played last Saturday and Sunday at the Wayne State College courts was termed "a big success" by tournament directors Nick and Keith Zimmer.

Sixty-nine players entered the tournament's six divisions compared to 54 last year and 42 in 1981.

Nick Zimmer said, except for a rain delay that forced Saturday's matches to last past midnight, the tournament went according to plan.

"There were some very good matches and a few surprises," Zimmer said.

Wayne's Ted DeTurk defeated top seed Jeff Forster of Walthill 7-6 (8-6) 6-4 to win the 18-and-under boys' singles competition in perhaps the biggest upset of the tournament.

Doug Rose of Wayne won his third straight Men's Open title by defeating Jeff Forster in straight sets 7-5 6-1.

Tom Roberts and Pete Vogel of Wayne captured their second consecutive Men's Open title by defeating Sunderman and Meyer of Norfolk by scores of 6-4 7-5.

All proceeds from the tournament were donated to Wayne State College to help build a new information center.

Zimmer said the tournament will continue next year.

"We would like to find a good cause and have one sponsor next year," Zimmer said. "It's a fun thing but it just takes too much time running down sponsors and we don't take any money for ourselves."

Zimmer expressed gratitude to sponsors of this year's tournament: Farmer's National Co.; Bob's Apco; The Rusty Nail; Tom's Body Shop; Midwest Land Co.; Wayne True Value; March Theaters; Ellis Barber's; Wayne Sporting Goods; The Fourth Jug; Wayne Distributing Co.; The Stollenberg Partners; Dr. Gene Lodes; Olds, Swarts and East; Carhart Lumber Co.; Godfather's

Jr's spank Pender

A nine strike-out performance by Todd Schwartz allowed the Wayne Junior Legion baseball team to send Pender packing after a 10-0 spanking last Friday night at Hank Overin Field.

Schwartz recorded five of his strike-outs in the first two innings as Pender went down in order both times.

Wayne jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead in the first off as a two-RBI double by Dennis Lebsock scored Todd Pfeiffer and Schwartz.

Pender put two men on in the third only to see them left on as Schwartz added two more strike-outs.

A Dennis Lebsock single, two errors, a passed ball and a couple of stolen bases allowed the hosts to tally two more runs in the third.

Pender went down one, two, three to start the fourth but Wayne refused to sit still and added four runs.

Jeff McCright singled with one out before Schwartz pegged an RBI single.

Lebsock, Randy Gamble, Jon Melerhenry, Jeff Jorgensen, and Tim Heier all walked, and Todd Dorcey added a sacrifice as Wayne went in front 8-0.

The visitors came up empty in the fifth and Wayne scored twice off of an RBI single by Schwartz and a walk by Melerhenry as the game ended by virtue of the ten-run rule.

Pfeiffer gets one-hitter

Wisner accommodating to Jr's

The Wisner Legion baseball team was somewhat more obliging than its Midget counterpart on Monday night. While Wayne's Midgets had to sweat out a 4-3 victory, the Juniors cruised to an 11-1 victory.

Dennis Lebsock relieved Todd Pfeiffer on the mound in the fifth inning to preserve a one-hit pitching performance.

Wisner's first man up took a base on balls and stole second, but was left high and dry as the next three men fled out.

Wayne jumped out to a 4-0 lead as Lebsock and Todd Schwartz walked, Todd Dorcey singled and Randy Gamble added a sacrifice.

Wisner countered with a solo run in the top of the second after the catcher, Erb, doubled and then scored on a passed ball.

Wayne came up empty in the second and the visitors went down in order to begin the third.

Wayne added to its lead in the bottom of the inning as Schwartz started things off with a stand-up double, advanced to third on an error, and went home as Lebsock slugged a single.

One-baggers by Todd Dorcey and Mark Kubik helped Wayne take a 9-1 lead going into the fourth.

Two strike outs and a fly ball to Melerhenry in center ended Wisner's hopes in the fourth stanza.

Wayne also came up empty in the inning, but called the ten-run rule into play an inning later after Lebsock retired the side and Schwartz added an RBI double to score Pfeiffer and Melerhenry.

Midgets win in sixth inning

The Wayne-Midgets used two runs in the sixth inning to come from behind and beat a stubborn Wisner club 4-3 Monday night at Hank Overin Field.

The teams only had seven hits between them.

Wisner stranded two men in the first inning as Steve Overin struck out the last two batters to end the threat.

Wayne tallied a solo run in the bottom of the inning after Chris Weiseler took a base on balls, and stole second and third. Rick Nelson filed out to left to end the inning.

An error by Wayne put a man on for Wisner to start the second, but the next batter grounded out and the last two went down swinging.

Wayne was stymied and went down in the second as Overin did the same to start the third stanza.

The defenses continued to dominate as Wayne stranded Weiseler and Overin.

The scoreboard finally lit up for the visitors in the fourth as the shortstop, Hass, doubled on a Wayne miscue, advanced to third on a passed ball, and went home on another error.

Wayne didn't score again until the fifth inning. Overin singled, went to second on an error charged to Wisner's shortstop, and went to third on a passed ball.

The next three men walked to send Overin home.

Wisner took the lead in the top of the sixth off of an RBI single by the shortstop and an RBI double by the right fielder, Strudhoff.

Things looked bleak for the hosts until the score was tied in the bottom of the sixth. Jeff Sherer singled and was replaced on base by pinch-runner Darrin Barner.

Barner later scored on an error on Wisner's pitcher.

The winning run came as Wisner's pitcher walked three batters to send Kevin Maly home.

Larsen notches no-hitter

Don Larsen, with one-third inning of relief from Steve Overin in the first, notched a no-hitter last Thursday night as the Wayne Midget baseball team got back on the winning track with a 8-0 victory over Pender at Hank Overin Field.

Wayne blasted Pender with 15 hits in 26 at-bats as 16 players saw action for the hosts.

The visitors stranded three men on in the top of the first after Overin came to the mound with the bases loaded and fanned the last batter.

Wayne failed to get anything going in the second as Overin was left on after he singled.

Larsen reassumed his pitching duties to begin the second inning and Pender went down in order.

Wayne scored three runs in the bottom of the second as Don Larsen and Rick Nelson both singled then advanced on a passed ball. One out later, left fielder Shannon Dorcsey sacrificed to score Larsen.

Two more runs scored as Jeff Sherer took a base on balls and Kevin Maly added a single.

Pender's fortunes continued to slide in the third as the side went down one, two, three.

The hosts added three runs in the bottom half as third baseman Don Larsen doubled and was followed on as Rick Nelson singled.

Both runners advanced on two passed balls to score one run before Jeff Sherer pegged a two-RBI double to give Wayne a 6-0 lead.

Pender only managed to get seven men on in the remainder of the game off of five walks, a sacrifice and an error, but failed to score any of them.

Wayne added two runs in the fourth and coasted to the win.

The guy's a lunatic!

A word of warning to Wayne Country Club golfers: When you see Wayne Herald managing editor Randy Hascall jump behind the wheel of a golf cart, make sure you keep him in sight. The man turns into a fiend when driving a golf cart.

Before Rudy Froeschle bans Hascall from the course, I should emphasize that Hascall is a very good driver and that nobody has been killed - yet.

Hascall was kind enough to volunteer his services as my chauffeur during the recent Wayne Country Club Open golf tournament.

"What a nice guy," I thought. "It wasn't until Hascall took the wheel and commented that 'I hope this is the last cart,' that I began to get concerned."

You have to witness the Satanic smile that comes across his face to really understand what fear is.

Rodent's beware!

After a few minutes of tearing around the course at break neck speeds (we got the fast one), my knuckles began to grow numb from lack of blood as I clung to the golf cart in terror.

"It can't get any worse than this," I thought. Hascall laid that theory to rest with a blood curdling scream of "GODDAMN IT!" and proceeded to chase one of the little devil-circles as I wondered why I didn't stay in Lincoln to take a few more journalism courses for the summer.

"Please God," I begged. "Don't let me die, and I promise that I'll say three rosaries a day for the next year!"

Well, I made it back in one piece. I just thank the Lord that golf carts don't have four wheel drive!

He never saw the Cannonballers

The impetus behind golfers' desire to bat a little ball around a field with wooden and metal clubs still eludes me.

It seems nearly as silly as rolling a giant ball down a lane to knock down wooden pins (bowling).

Professional bowler Don Carter offers one argument for bowling as compared to golf.

"The biggest difference between bowling and golf," Carter explains, "is that you hardly ever lose a bowling ball."

Carter obviously never heard of the escapades of the "Cannonballers," my old bowling team in Lincoln.

Our team captain not only lost his bowling ball a few times (the guy drinks a lot), he once had so much beer during an evening's bowling that he lost his car.

Excuuuuse me, again!

One of the girls in the office just gave me a message from an unidentified caller who was unhappy because I didn't devote any space in Monday's paper to Wayne's 18-and-under girls softball team's participation in the District Tournament at Emerson.

This brave soul refused to give his name, but left a message for me: "to get on the ball."

Well, sir, the tournament was played last Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Four of the five games were played after we went to press on Saturday morning. If you will notice, the game stories are in this issue.

I'm sorry that there hasn't been any pictures of the girl's team in action this season. As much as I would like to, I can't be at every sporting event to take pictures, etc. I often have to rely on scorebooks and second hand information from coaches to write stories.

I congratulate the girls on a fine season and wish them well at the state tournament. I hope this rookie sports writer hasn't created any hard feelings.

Elves in the night

There is one thing I wish to apologize for that is totally my fault - I think. It seems that every time I go to add up certain softball teams' records, I come up with a different total. Most of the teams are pretty good about calling in their scores, so keeping the standings should be no problem.

The only thing I can figure out is that little devils are sneaking into the office at night and typing false statistics into my computer terminal.

Either that or I just can't count. I'll try to set some mousetraps.

Thirty-five persons were at the center Monday afternoon to hear presentations by piano students of Mrs. Emil Ukan. Selections were played by Lana and Lesa Casey, Brett Fuetberth, Ann Hansen, Carmen Reeg, Angie Robinson, and Margoad Maria Sandahl.

Lana and Lesa Casey also performed a duet for the group. "Making Something From Nothing" was a feature during the afternoon.

Winning a prize for the best craft article in the children's division was Ann Hansen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Hansen, who fashioned a seed picture. In the senior division, Genevieve Craig won with a whatnot covered box. Lunch was served at the close of the afternoon.

4-H exposition deadline set

All entries for the 1983 Ak-Sar-Ben 4-H Livestock Exposition are due in County Extension Offices no later than Aug. 19, according to Sherman Berg, Ak-Sar-Ben's director of agricultural activities. The entries then must be forwarded to Ak-Sar-Ben by Aug. 24. Entry blanks and application forms are available at County Extension Offices or at Ak-Sar-Ben.

Berg announced that 4,900 Market Beef nominations have been submitted for the 1983 Exposition, the 56th edition of the event. Nominations have come from 4-H youngsters from an eight-state area for this year's Exposition, the world's largest 4-H livestock show. The eight states represented are Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, South Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, and Missouri. The show is scheduled to run Sept. 21 through Oct. 2.

The Market Beef judging will be held on Sept. 26 and 27, followed by the premium Livestock Auction. Judges for the Market Beef division will be Bob Kropp and Jarold Callihan, both from Oklahoma State University.

Ak-Sar-Ben annually hosts 2,500 exhibitors to the Livestock Show, held in conjunction with the Ak-Sar-Ben Rodeo during River City Roundup, a midwestern celebration of the area's agricultural and western heritage.

Top placings in exposition

Area 4-Hers received top placings at the 1983 state 4-H Horse Exposition held July 14, at Grand Island's Fonner Park.

Tracy Prenger, of Wayne, received blue ribbons in both the Jr. Girls Barrel Racing and Jr. Girls Pole Bending competitions.

Joedy Cunningham, Laurel, was awarded a blue ribbon in the jr. division of Boys Barrel Racing and Mike and Jeff Behmer, both of Hoskins, received blue ribbons in the sr. division.

Brad Lund, of Wakefield, received blue ribbons in both the Sr. Boys Pole Bending and the Sr. Boys Reining competitions. He also won a blue ribbon in the gelding class.

Loan, purchase rates given

The U.S. Department of Agriculture issued county loan and purchase rates for 1983-crop barley, oats and rye.

Everett Rank, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said USDA made some adjustments of county and state rates to reflect such factors as prices received by farmers, production and consumption trends and transportation cost.

Rank said county rates for barley grading No. 2 or better are based on the national average loan and purchase rate — announced earlier — of $2.16 per bushel, eight cents above the 1982 level.

The rates for oats grading No. 3 are based on the national average loan and purchase rate of $1.36 per bushel, 5 cents above the 1982 rate.

The rates for rye grading No. 2 or better, or No. 3 on the factor of test weight only, are based on the national average loan and purchase rate of $2.25 per bushel, 8 cents above the 1982 rate.

The 1983 schedule of premiums and discounts for all three crops is unchanged from 1982, he said.

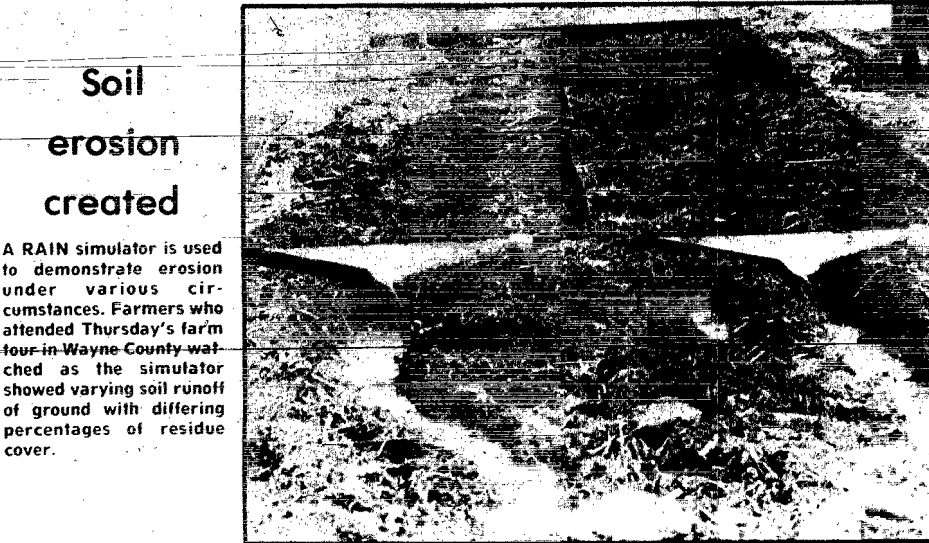

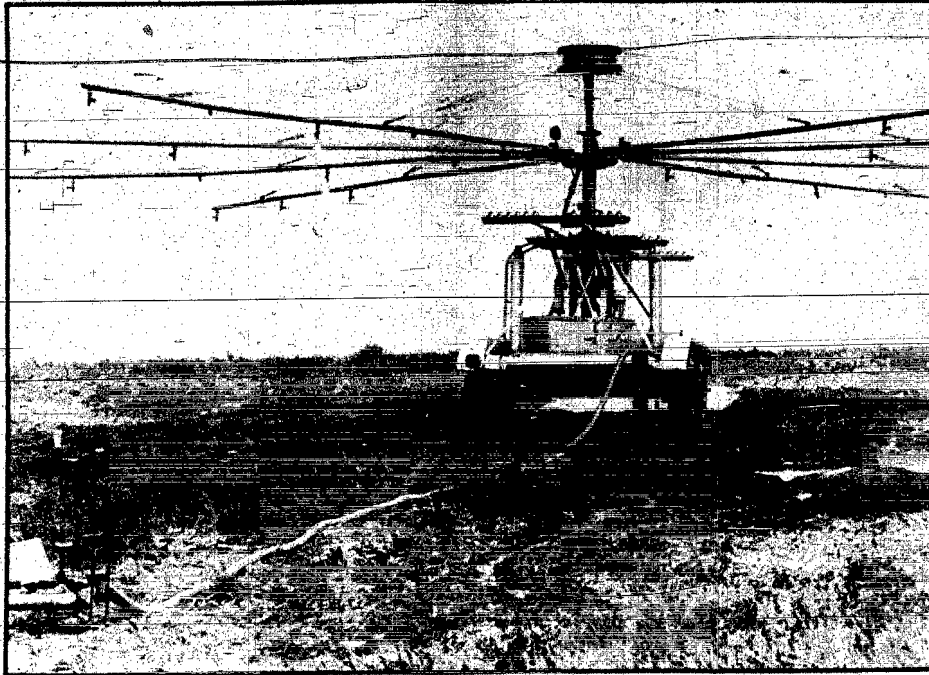

Copies of the rates are available from the cotton, grain and rice price support division, USDA-ASCS, P.O. Box 2415, Washington D.C. 20013.

Attends agricultural conference

Vocational agriculture/agribusiness instructor Thomas Wilmes of Allen High School attended the Nebraska Vocational Agricultural Association Summer Conference held July 11-14 at Kearney.

Approximately 190 secondary, post secondary, University of Nebraska Agricultural Education staff, and Department of Education staff attended the conference.

Activities included "Swap Shops" involving participation in the Lead Program, ag mechanics, computer use for record keeping, arc welding instruction, teaching by using the senses, supervising student teachers, program concerns for urban students, individualized instruction, shop construction projects, and FFA activities.

Government revenues and taxes increase

General revenue of state and local governments in Nebraska increased from $91 million in 1970 to more than $2.6 billion in 1980, for an annual increase of 10.6 percent on a per capita basis.

In 1980, about 58 percent of state and local government revenues came from taxes. Another 18 percent came from federal sources; the remainder from charges and miscellaneous sources. Nebraska ranked below all adjacent states in federal aid per capita received in 1980.

Total expenditures of state and local governments increased by more than 500 percent between 1960 and 1980. However, this increase closely paralleled growth of the Gross National Product during the same period.

EDUCATION ACCOUNTS for the largest expenditure of state and local governments—in 1980, 40 percent of all expenditures. About two-thirds of total expenditures for education in 1980 went to local public schools. In 1980, expenditures per $1,000 personal income were higher for education and highways in Nebraska than the U.S. average.

Nebraska's farm, real estate taxes more than doubled on a per acre basis between 1970 and 1979. Since 1960, Nebraska taxes on all types of real estate have been consistently above neighboring states when compared to the full value of the real estate.

These and a wealth of related data are included in a University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service publication authored by NU extension economists Roy Frederick and Bruce B. Johnson. Comparisons are based on 1980 data gathered from a wide array of federal and state official records, the latest figures available.

The publication provides a benchmark reading of fiscal trends in Nebraska and its governmental subdivisions, Frederick said, and revisions will be made continuously as new data become available. Figures for 1981 will be worked up soon, he added.

THE PUBLICATION should be of interest to government officials, elected and appointed, at all levels, and to all citizens interested in knowing about how government is financed and gathering information to make more enlightened decisions, the economists said.

In an introduction to the publication, E.C. 83-876, which can be obtained at Cooperative Extension Service offices around the state, the authors comment: "Financing state and local government services almost always involve some controversy. Public centers on 'what' and 'how'—what expenditures should be made and how revenue should be raised to pay for the desired services.

These questions are ultimately answered at the ballot box. Personal values influence the decisions voters make on candidates and causes. What's good to one person may be quite the opposite to another. Moreover, values change over time—for individuals and ultimately for society as a whole. As values shift, so do the answers to the questions (what expenditures should be made and how revenue should be raised)."

The booklet contains three sections. Section one outlines revenues and expenditure patterns for all state and local governments in the United States, emphasizing changes in the post World War II period.

Section two gives an overview of revenue patterns in Nebraska, focusing attention on taxes. Taxes are compared in a historical context within Nebraska and with other states in the region.

THE THIRD SECTION examines expenditures for state and local governments in Nebraska. Comparisons are made with other states in 1980, highlighting costs of education, highways, hospitals and welfare. An overview of population and income trends in Nebraska is included "because it indicates both the need for government expenditures and citizens' ability to pay," the authors concluded.

Grain removal under strict penalization

Erwin Morris, Chairman of the Wayne County ASCS Committee, says farm-stored grain under loan, including grain designated for the payment-in-kind program, must not be removed without permission.

"Grain under regular or reserve loan is mortgaged and if it is removed before repayment of the loan or receipt of release authorization, it is considered unauthorized removal and subject to penalty," he said.

The penalty consists of immediate repayment of the loan, plus interest, plus early redemption, if applicable, denial of further loans and possible investigation by the Office of the Inspector General.

SOME FARMERS will use their farm-stored grain loans to satisfy payment in kind requirements.

Morris said if farmers move the grain without permission they will be assessed liquidated damages according to the terms of the PIK contract as well as the regular penalty for unauthorized removal of farm stored grain.

THE ASCS PRICE support loan program provides farmers with operating cash while they bargain or hold their grain for future sales.

Variable interest rates are charged and farmers may repay the money before the nine-month maturity date.

Program regulations require that farmers notify ASCS if they intend to sell the grain, or if the grain is out of condition and needs to be moved.

If the grain is to be used for feed, the loan must be repaid before it is removed from the storage bin.

The ASCS official said farmers are fully responsible for any loss in the quantity or quality of farm stored grain under loan.

Tomato blight control
Every year we can expect tomato leaf blight (it is often called Septoria leaf blight) to develop. The disease is caused by a fungus and it develops most rapidly during periods of warm wet weather.

Although the summer may be hot and dry, the tomato plants may be kept sufficiently wet by irrigation and intermittent dew periods to cause the disease to be destructive.

ZINEB, MANEB OR a new product Bravo 500 will effectively control tomato blight when they are applied before the disease gets a good start and if they are reapplied at 10-14 day intervals during the growing season.

It is very necessary that the spray material thoroughly wets the plants for good control. This can be accomplished by adding a wetting agent to the spray solution.

There are commercial spreader stickers, but where these are not available or the amount of spraying does not warrant purchasing them, a regular household detergent will do. Add enough detergent so the spray solution readily spreads over the leaf surfaces.

THE DISEASE causes small round spots which are noticeable when the leaves are in the process of yellowing and drying.

These spots are about an eighth of an inch in diameter and have rather ashen-gray centers. Tiny black dots may be seen in the center of the spots. These are in reality sac like structures formed by the parasitizing fungus in which are produced thousands of spores (fungus seed).

When the disease is allowed to develop until there are a lot of dead leaves, it is then very difficult to bring it into check because of the large number of spores being produced in the dead leaves.

It is very important to start the spray schedule before the plants show any infection.

Presentations given

Four demonstrations were presented at the 4-H Agriculture and Miscellaneous demonstration contest at the Wayne County Extension Office July 15.

Demonstrations and ribbons were as follows: Jassi Johar and Shaun Niemann — purple ribbon for a team demonstration on "How to Produce a Better Slide Presentation."

Jason Johs — a purple ribbon for a demonstration on "Rockets."

Dean Fuelberth — a purple ribbon for a demonstration on "Artificial Intelligence."

Vini Johar — a blue ribbon for "DNA Master Plan of Life."

Jassi, Shaun and Dean will take their demonstrations to the State Fair in September.

The Home Demonstrations contest will be held July 27.

Corn borers invade

A CHECK of most corn stalks in the area will produce signs of corn borer infestation. Shot holes and actual corn borer worms can be found in the whorl of the stock. A borer, shown here, is quite small in comparison to a human thumb and identifiable by a black area.

New crop spraying is effective

It has been estimated that 65 percent of all pesticides applied to crops in the United States are applied by aircraft, according to David Wysong, professor of plant pathology at the University of Nebraska.

With the recent outbreak of corn borers in Nebraska, aerial application of pesticides may increase. To make aerial crop spraying more effective and efficient, a new analysis system that measures an aircraft's spray pattern developed at Oklahoma State University is being used in Nebraska, Wysong said.

Wysong said the new analysis system will be demonstrated at the Tractor Power & Safety Day July 28.

HE SAID the system involves placing a 1 1/2 inch wide strip of paper along a 100 foot long aluminum track, which is oriented at a 90 degree angle to the plane's flight path.

Equipment to measure the wind direction and velocity and ground speed of the plane over the track, a camera to photograph the plane as it goes over the track, each time depositing dye on a new strip of paper, Wysong said. The 300 feet of paper is taken to an analysis center, where a fluorometer senses and counts the dots of dye deposited, Wysong said. Information from all the instruments is fed into a computer, which generates either a serpentine or racetrack pattern graph.

Wysong said both high points or peaks and low points or valleys are observed on the graph. Depending on the number and severity of the two points, adjustments in the plane's spray nozzles are made or in the way a pilot flies the plane.

THE WHOLE IDEA of the analysis is to develop a more uniform deposit pattern and swath width, Wysong said. Ideally, a perfect swath width would generate a graph with a flat top.

This is the first time that this type of analysis systems has been used in this region. Before, dots of dye were physically counted, which took months, Wysong said. Wysong, who coordinates the testing, and 30 other volunteers from across the state have conducted five "fly-ins" since the system was first used this spring, he said. Each fly-in lasts for two consecutive days, testing up to 15-20 planes each day.

A second series of fly-ins is expected to begin this fall, he added.

Fly-ins are conducted under very controlled conditions so that nozzle adjustments can be made to provide the best pattern possible, Wysong said. Even under less than optimum weather, the best pattern can still be obtained.

TESTING IS OPEN to anyone, Wysong said, but for a graded fee. Members of the Nebraska Aviation Trades Association, which purchased all the analysis equipment at a cost of $23,000, can have their planes analyzed for $25, which covers the cost of processing data, he said.

Non-members are charged $125, which pays for the data processing and a year's membership in the NATA, Wysong said. All pilots must supply their own fuel.

Wysong said one fourth of the 225 registered pilots in Nebraska have participated in the fly-ins. The National AG Aviation Association will provide certificates of qualifications for each member pilot who completes the testing, he added.

"Pilots and operators are looking for ways to improve their operation and efficiency," Wysong said. "Eventually, farmers may choose pilots who have participated in the testing over those who haven't," Wysong said.

Fly-ins will continue to be held in the early spring and late fall, Wysong said. Improved aerial spraying will mean reduced costs for the farmer and possibly reduced insurance premiums for pilots, due to fewer lawsuits because of more accurate pesticide application, Wysong said.

Time to prepare

Fall alfalfa planting near

Producers need to begin preparing for fall planting of alfalfa, according to Bruce Anderson, University of Nebraska extension forage specialist.

"August is a good time to plant alfalfa, particularly for producers who usually have weed problems in the spring," he said.

First, select a good site, the specialist advised growers. "A soil that is going to be productive and have good drainage is what farmers want," Anderson said.

THE pH of the soil needs to be checked. The fertility of the soil must be correct if the alfalfa is to be productive, he said. If the pH is low, the soil may need to be limed, Anderson added.

A well-prepared alfalfa seedbed is also important. "Alfalfa should be planted in a real firm seedbed," he said.

Farmers then should select a variety that will produce well in their area, Anderson added.

Fall planting of alfalfa is one topic that will be discussed on "Farm and Ranch Report." The current program in the Nebraska Education Television Network series will be aired July 21 at 12:30 p.m., repeating at 9:30 p.m.

OTHER TOPICS on the program, hosted by Jim Randall, NU extension communications specialist, are international marketing of Nebraska's agricultural products and controlling rodents in fields.

U.S. agricultural exports were expanding very rapidly up until a couple of years ago. Today the increase in export markets is not as bright. Since this decline, several commodity groups have organized to initiate check-off programs and to promote their respective products in export markets.

According to Roy Frederick, NU extension economist—public policy, check-off boards take a small percentage of gross sales of the commodity for the specific purpose of accumulating funds to increase product utilization.

The difference between check-off boards and commodity organizations is that check-off boards have put money directly behind their efforts, Frederick explained.

THE CHECK-OFF funds available to the boards are used for whatever purpose they deem appropriate. Funds most often are used for research, advertising or sent to the national organization, he said.

The check-off boards' avowed purpose is to increase utilization of the product or to make production more efficient. "But it is fair to say that recently these boards have been trying to find new ways to use a product as opposed to increasing production efficiency," Frederick added.

The University of Nebraska also has been getting involved in developing export markets. The Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Division of International Programs has hosted several agricultural teams from foreign countries and has sent people overseas to help establish an international market for Nebraska products.

the farmer's wife

by pat meierhenry

I went to the alumni banquet of my nursing school Saturday night.

The old hospital in which I earned my stripes has been torn down, replaced by a beautiful, modern structure.

If no longer has a school of nursing, and its alumni affairs are smaller than they used to be.

THE CLASS of '53 was, of course, the 30 year reunion class. The director of nurses at York Hospital was in that class; she's also from my hometown, and she and I reminisced for a few minutes.

She was the reason I attended that particular school. She was the person in my immediate circle who had become a nurse, and she did it at Lincoln General, so Lincoln General was where I applied.

She told me her father had died three months ago of a third heart attack, and we spoke for a few minutes of "Heiny."

HEINY'S NAME, of course, was Henry, but I didn't even know that when I was growing up at Waco, the greatest little town in Nebraska.

He drove my school bus. I attended the parochial school, but I rode the school bus, as did all the kids in the area.

We never knew there was a problem about parochial kids riding the school bus.

This was because, at Waco, the busses were owned by a local trucker, Howard Rice, and leased to both schools at a cost per pupil or mile, or both.

Since they were not owned by the public school, anyone could ride.

We were two blocks from the public school and we were their guests for hot lunches, too. We paid the same price the public students did, and walked to their cafeteria.

ANOTHER THING I didn't know was that there was a problem with women's sports.

We had coed sports in grade school, and in high school, the girls had volleyball games prior to the guys' basketball contests. (We were too small for football.)

In the spring, there was baseball and softball.

The girls were conference volleyball champs seven years out of 10. The fans followed us as closely as they did the boys.

The boys didn't do as well, but the fans were always there. One of our most devoted was "Cottie," Manfred Colner, who had a small hole in his bottom lip from a skin cancer.

No student, fan, parent, or coach ever swore, clapped at the other team's mistakes, or booed the officials.

This is the truth! We had strict codes of sportsmanship.

THE FANS CONTINUED to be our fans as we graduated from high school and went on to the big city of Lincoln.

When things got tough, and they often did, I knew I couldn't give up and go home, because I would be letting all those "fans" down.

When my Dad died, and we brought his body back to the country cemetery at Waco, there they all were, waiting with a firm handshake and a comforting hug.

He and "Heinie" and "Cottie" and "Hummie" and a host of others are now gone before. But I'm sure they are all still our fans.

THE ONLY TOWN I've found that even comes close to "those dear hearts and gentle people" is Hoskins, and I've now lived there longer than I lived near Waco. They are exactly the same size.

When the kid from California was with me in Winslow the other day, he marvelled that we didn't lock the car, and that we knew the bank tellers, the postmaster, and grocery store clerks on a first name basis.

He said wistfully, "I think I'm a small-town boy at heart who happened to be born in a big city."

And, even though we envy his proximity to Disneyland and the fact that he never has to shovel snow, we think we'll stay close to rural America and count our blessings.

BY THE WAY — a news flash about Lincoln General Hospital.

It was featured in the film "Terms of Endearment" made in Lincoln this spring, and the premiere will be in Lincoln in December.

It's considered an Academy Award contender.

"Last year Nebraska's independent PCAs paid over $2,100,000 in taxes."

"Ask the person who really knows. Ask a PCA member!"

It's because the 14 independent PCAs in Nebraska are taxpayers like other private enterprises.

Some people incorrectly believe that PCAs are government organizations or agencies. Far from it, PCAs are simply financial services cooperatives. Our Association is wholly-owned and financially supported by local producers. We lend both our own reserves and money raised through the sale of non-government bonds in the nation's money markets. Wall Street's loans aren't repaid, or we have a loss, local members and up, footing the bill.

So, we operate our Association on a sound and business-like basis. Our directors, who are PCA members and borrowers, are elected by local members to set policy for the Association and hire professional management. This gives us the kind of direction which enables PCA to serve our own producers better and more completely through a professionally run organization.

PCAs are not alike. Although all of the 423 PCAs in the United States are operated under the same rules and regulations, like many businesses and industries today, each is independent and has its own management style based on the needs of the local producers. Our PCA is unique.

Yes, we did pay taxes. Nebraska's PCAs also returned $204,046 to Nebraska PCA members in 1982 in addition to providing professional quality financial services.

For many producers in Nebraska, PCA is smart business. That's why we say PCA is for people who make a business out of agriculture.

Find out for yourself.
