'Plant supermarket' scheduled to open next spring in Wayne

By LaVon Anderson

A new concept in garden centers — a plant supermarket — is slated to open next spring in Wayne.

Kent Hall, who along with his wife Lois owns The Wayne Greenhouse, Inc., is building the new greenhouses, "with the newest technology," on a six acre tract of land located along Highway 35, east of Wayne between Logan Valley Implement Co. and Logan Creek.

Hall, a third generation Wayne Greenhouse owner, said instead of the traditional garden center, the new plant supermarket will be an 11,000 square foot building covering one fourth of an acre.

"IT'S ALL DESIGNED for the customer," said Hall, adding the steel and plastic structure will be climate controlled for the shopper's convenience, with moveable islands so the customer can shop at leisure in all directions, wide aisles, shopping carts and a check out counter.

Hall stressed that the Flower Shop will remain at its present location on East 10th St., along with the greenhouses already there.

"The Flower Shop will not be affected at all," emphasized Hall, adding that very few greenhouses and flower shops are connected. "We're a rarity," he said.

HALL SAID although he has wanted to expand his business for the past 20 years, it just wasn't possible because of the residential areas surrounding the establishment.

"When my grandfather built the greenhouses 63 years ago," said Hall, "they were located on the edge of town."

Hall said he looked for quite some time before purchasing the six acres of land next to Logan Valley Implement.

"I was waiting," said Hall, "for the right location and the right type of land."

HALL EMPHASIZED that the new plant supermarket is only the nucleus for further expansion plans.

Hall said five year, 10-year and 20 year plans call for eventually occupying the entire six acres, with approximately four acres under plastic.

During the next five years, Hall hopes to construct another 25,000 square feet of greenhouses for wholesale production, doubling that in 10 years.

"We have room to construct an additional 100,000 square feet of greenhouses," he said.

EVENTUALLY, HALL dreams of sponsoring a field day each year when customers can view test beds of new plant varieties.

"I've always wanted to do that," smiles Hall, "now I've got the land to do it."

He also dreams of constructing a small park within the six-acre area.

"We have lots of landscaping plans," said Hall, "You can bet on that."

CONSTRUCTION OF the new plant supermarket began nearly a month ago by Mark Willse Construction Co.

The service shop, which includes room for storage and potting, is being constructed by OHe Construction Co.

Hall said the plant supermarket contains no wood or glass and is constructed of insulated double thermal acrylic plastic. "It's so strong you can walk on it."

The polygal roofing material is made in Israel. "An extreme hail storm may dent it," said Hall, "but it won't break or crack."

KENT HALL, OWNER OF The Wayne Greenhouse, Inc., inspects the site of his new plant supermarket slated to open next spring.

solar energy during the day. At night, air will be blown in under the concrete floor.

The design also includes a thermal blanket which will be drawn at the eight foot level during the night to hold in solar heat gained during the day.

In addition, Hall said the building is designed with a light intensity shade which can be drawn as much as needed when the sun is too intense.

In the past, spray paint was used to reduce the sun's intensity.

For cooling purposes, air conditioned pads will be placed in the side of the structure to allow air movement.

"We're really attempting to solve the energy problem," noted Hall, adding that the building itself will lay north and south to reduce wind intensity.

HALL, WHO designed the structure, said the garden center will include a full line of garden plants as well as supplies and tools.

Managing the new center, which Hall anticipates will call for hiring an additional five persons next spring, will be his son Steve.

Another son, Scott, is majoring in music at Wayne State College and plans to graduate next spring.

Daughter LouAnn Willse is bookkeeper at the Flower Shop in Wayne. Another daughter, Lori, is employed in the receiving greenhouse for tropical plants at Bachman's in Minneapolis.

HALL SAID his new greenhouse is strictly an "instinct" project.

"I don't even think I'll take a vacation this year," he laughs, "I'm having too much fun."

PAT GROSS poses beside his Weather Service rain gauge.

Official weather watcher

By Kevin O'Hanlon

If you look all the rain gauges operated by the United States Weather Service and lined them up side-by-side, they wouldn't even cover a football field.

That, according to University of Nebraska Lincoln geography professor Bruce Kopplin, "isn't a very big area for measuring precipitation for the entire country."

That's where people like Pat Gross come in.

Gross, 42, is president of Triangle Finance in Wayne. He is also the official field observer in Wayne for the U.S. Weather Service.

The field observers, located throughout the country, collect and record data for the Weather Service, and play an integral part in making precipitation estimates and flood forecasts.

SUCH DATA has been kept in Wayne since 1914. Gross, who has been a field observer since 1964, receives no money for his duties.

"I enjoy it though, I really get caught up in it," he said.

Gross mails precipitation data to the Weather Service once a month, but immediately sends word in the event of heavy rains, wind or hail.

UN's professor Kopplin said the field observers are an indispensable part of weather information gathering.

"You can never get enough of them," Kopplin said.

Roland Smith, of the U.S. Weather Service in Norfolk, said the Norfolk office receives data from more than 250 field observers.

"Those people are a pretty dedicated bunch," Smith said. "It's an extremely useful program for us."

Doctor joins Wayne practice

The Wayne Family Practice Group has added a new face to its operation.

Dr. Todd French, a native of Norfolk, joined the establishment this July as a full-time practitioner.

French, 30, practiced in Wayne under the Lincoln Family Practice Program last winter and has returned to set up permanent residence.

UNDER THE PROGRAM, French worked with Dr. Willis Wiseman and Dr. James Lindau, who operate the Wayne Family Practice Group, during the months of November and December.

"I really enjoyed my residency before," said French, "and I'm glad to be back in Wayne."

French, a 1975 graduate of the University of Nebraska Lincoln, completed his out-state residency requirements during his two-month stay in Wayne.

THE 1980 UNIVERSITY of Nebraska graduate recently completed his total requirements to earn his family practice certification this June.

He spent three years training for his family practice residency and earned his position with Wayne's group.

"I like the small-town atmosphere of Wayne," said French, "and northeast Nebraska will always be my home."

FRENCH WAS ALSO impressed with the medical services offered in Wayne and with the modern facilities, including the hospital.

He began his work on July 11 with Drs. Wiseman and Lindau, also a graduate of the Lincoln Family Practice Group.

French had previously known Dr. Lindau, while both were fulfilling their requirements for the certification in Lincoln.

AS PART OF THE Wayne Family Practice Group, French will be available on a rotating schedule, at the group's satellite clinics in Laurel and Wisner.

French will also participate in an on-call rotation with the doctors, treating patients at both the clinic and at Providence Medical Center.

French and his wife, Terri, have two sons, Matthew, age 3 and Christopher, age 1 1/2.

Japanese relax some tariffs

It has been no secret that mid-American export interests as well as those from other regions have had a long-standing concern over trade barriers imposed by Japan on American-made products and commodities. Nebraskans, in particular, stand to benefit from a more relaxed Japanese posture to the importation of American agricultural goods and equipment.

Earlier this year, officials of Sperry New Holland, a farm equipment manufacturer in Grand Island, outlined difficulties the company was having with Japan's six percent duty on imported farm machinery.

The duty was particularly onerous because the provision for obtaining an exemption was complex and expensive.

THAT IS WHY it was particularly gratifying earlier this month when I learned the Japanese government had eliminated its tariff on agricultural tractors, renewed tariff exemptions on some other agricultural equipment, and simplified its tariff exemption procedures.

I was able to play a role in these matters and I served to illustrate the benefits of having a position on the House Foreign Affairs Committee filled by a representative from an agricultural state.

I CONTACTED American trade ambassador William Brock, and subsequently wrote to the Japanese ambassador to the United States, Yoshio Okawara, on Feb. 15.

Okawara's recent reply detailed tariff changes that the Japanese government has made since April 1.

In addition to eliminating the tariff on agricultural tractors, exemptions have been renewed on hay balers, forage harvesters, mower conditioners, air-tight silos, hay cubers, and automatic feeders.

congressman doug bereuter

Also, the director general of Japan's Customs and Tariff Bureau announced that importers of farm equipment would no longer need to submit a list of farmer customers prior to customs clearance.

Sperry New Holland officials estimate that these changes made by the Japanese government have achieved about 80 percent of the company's objectives in simplifying trade with Japan.

ANOTHER TRADE concern involving a Nebraska company was recently addressed when I asked ambassador Brock to have the United States government take steps to address the problem of unfair European subsidies of pasta products imported from the European community, particularly Italy.

Skinner Macaroni of Omaha had noted in a letter that imported pasta products come into the United States with a 10 to 15 cent per pound subsidy.

In his response to my initiative, Brock pointed out that an investigating panel of the International Subsidies Code Committee, responding to a complaint from the United States, has found that European pasta exporters are violating the subsidies code.

It now remains for the Subsidies Code Committee itself to react to the panel's findings.

To the editor:

I feel compelled upon to answer the letter that was printed in the Monday edition of The Herald concerning the ads local businesses run down at our local theatre.

First of all, quit-crowding! There aren't many towns the size of Wayne that even have theatres anymore! Furthermore, there aren't many theatres that only charge $2.75 to see a movie. It's nice to be able to go downtown on Tuesday nights and see a current movie.

The ads? Heck! Go get popcorn or something!

Perhaps some simple addition will help sooth the pain of sitting through a couple of ads. $4 for a movie in Norfolk plus $10 for gas to get there equals $14. If your car is an old oil burner like mine, add another buck on to that!

If I can save at least $11 they can show me 20 ads and I'd still stay home and frequent the local movie house.

John Waddell
Wayne

we've already paid for more than our fair share!

The increases already imposed upon us in the past several years are staggering. Has anyone's annual income kept up with these unusual increases? It's very doubtful, and we wish to express our dissatisfaction with the rate requests.

We are all fighting to keep living costs down, and this new rate increase requests is very inflationary and would defeat all of our efforts to fight inflation.

Name withheld by request

To the editor:

It was so pleasant to see the family of swans on the front page of The Herald. Such excellent photography!

Sometimes the young (called cygnets) ride on the mother's back.

Once on TV there was a musical accompaniment to the Swans dance as they glided along.

I wonder if the Carlsons have their man-made pond away and out of the sight of the highway. I hope so as there may be some trigger-happy person going by who would cause tragedy for some innocent people and animals.

We have had cats shot while out hunting in the field and their bodies were found during harvest in the fall.

Rev. Driftmeier of the Kitchen Klatzer family lives in Rhode Island close to the ocean and feeds a pair of swans which he has named Bonnie and Clyde. Also, around 200 wild mallard ducks come up along the shore for this breakfast.

If he is late getting out, some of the ducks come up to his backdoor and two stand on his boots. He also buys many bags of birdseed for the wild birds in the wintertime.

I wish more people would put out fresh water for the birds and other wildlife, and put out feed in the wintertime as I am sure most everyone wants to hear the songbirds in the spring.

No one wants a silent spring.
Anna K. Meier

To the editor:

We read that the natural gas increase proposal is again coming before our elected city council members.

It's important to note that just this week the parent company, Internorth, Inc., boosted its dividend upward by a 9.4 percent increase.

It surely doesn't look like they are losing money as has been reported earlier by those responsible for requesting the rate increases.

Further investigation of their published financial picture shows that the gas company (Peoples) in 1982 had an increase of 92 percent from the 1981 fiscal year!

Already we are in for more price increases as the U.S. Supreme Court overruled a federal agency that fought the pipeline firms' efforts to pass on higher rates for natural gas.

When and where is all this going to stop? The greed shown by these firms is appalling!

Their threat to sue to get what they want should be fought by our city (Wayne) as other cities are fighting it. Isn't that what we pay our city lawyers for?

Concerning the $48 per year, per customer increase that has been asked for, I'd like to know what are we going to get for it?

We all know the answer, nothing!! It is just a much higher base rate and all other increases go on and above it. A pure windfall for the company and totally unwarranted.

Peoples Natural Gas Co., Northern Natural Gas Co., Internorth are all one and the same.

If our local office is not getting its fair share of the profits, let them go to the parent company, not to us the consumers, because

To the editor:

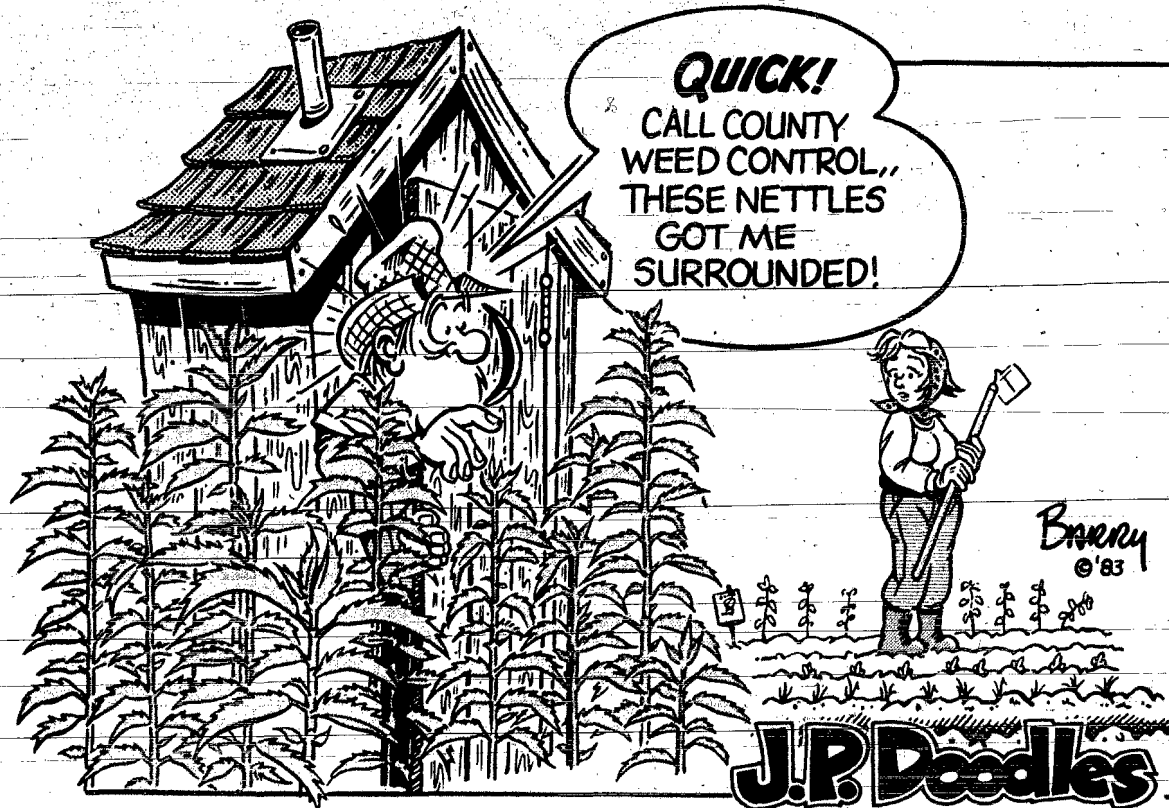

Last week our county officials appointed a commissioner in the Wayne area.

To my way of thinking, they want a new courthouse. The present courthouse is a landmark and could be restored.

The county officials should take a drive out in the country and see some of our bridges and roads. Some roads are the same as horse and buggy days.

Also, I would like to have someone explain to me of our neighboring counties having new courthouses and miles of oiled roads, and Wayne County having very few miles of oiled roads.

George Langenberg

Let's talk about it...

By Penny Rafferty, Ph.D.

Dear Dr. Penny: I'd like to share with the Mom of the 3 year old who screams for gum or candy in the grocery store and who won't take a nap when asked.

I'm the mother of four children, ages 3 months to nine years. I have found children soon tire of shopping and are more likely to cry and "carry on" when they are bored or tired from being drug from store to store.

I've seen all too many cases of "borderline-child abuse" in stores and supermarkets. The child is hit or berated for acting up when better planning by the parent would have been much easier on the child. If a child is well rested, fed and not drug from store to store they will be better behaved.

It is much better to go shopping early in the morning after a good breakfast. Going right before lunch or late in the evening is hard on everyone.

Why do we expect our children to be happy going from store to store with us when our husbands often tell us how tiring and boring it is for them.

As for sleeping, my kids seem to outgrow naps even before age two. I'd have to beat them to go to sleep because they were just not tired. And they sleep only 9-10 hours a night. Likewise, I hate to go to sleep alone. I give my kids the same consideration. We read books at bedtime and all lay down together for some nice cozy going to sleep games. They sleep when they are tired.

A book I've found helpful is Dr. Ross Campbell's, HOW TO REALLY LOVE YOUR CHILD. He explains the causes of "misbehavior." He tells how to prevent it by being understanding of the needs and limits of children.

I also like Sidney Craig's, RAISING YOUR CHILD, NOT BY FORCE BUT BY LOVE. Local bookstores may have them. The library can get them through inter library loan too.

I guess what I'm saying is that so many acts of "misbehavior" by children can be prevented by understanding the capabilities and limitations of children and not expecting them to act like adults. We need to plan better, and help children. If one of my children does "act up" in the store, like wanting something I won't buy, I pick him up and say, "I'm sorry, but we can't buy candy (or whatever!)"

If he loses control, I hold him until he feels better. Because I know how frustrated and alone I feel when I lose control of my emotions, like if I cry because I'm upset about something.

Again, I try to give the child the same consideration I'd give an adult and would like someone to give to me.

Mom, too.

Dear Mom,

Thanks for sharing such good and loving ideas.

This week The Wayne Herald asked five persons "What is your opinion of the congressional page program?"

"Based on the government's austerity program, I think the $9,500 salary a year could be put to use employing more young people, without political pull in other jobs." — Gary Van Meter, Wayne

"I think it's a profitable and wonderful educational opportunity for young people and perhaps the recent scandal will make it a safer venture, too." — Ruth Elorson, Wayne

"Pages are relatively high-paid 'gofers' but it does train young people for political careers." — John Batis, Wayne

"It's a good experience for young people. I don't think that because there has been a recent scandal, the opportunity should be ruined for the rest." — Will Davis, Wayne

"It contributes to the young people who get to participate, but I think the cost is not well-justified and they should reevaluate the program." — Ron Sladek, Wayne

Wayne Community Theatre begins annual patron membership drive

This week marks the beginning of the Wayne Community Theatre's annual patron membership drive.

Dr. Helen Russell, a spokesman for Community Theatre, said it is necessary for the producing group to seek revenue other than box office receipts in order to offer the area such outstanding full-scale musicals as "Carnival," "Fiddler on the Roof," "My Fair Lady," "Music Man" and "South Pacific," and such high quality plays as "California Suite," "On Golden Pond," "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" and "Blithe Spirit."

"THE TASK OF making Wayne Community Theatre a successful operation is the responsibility of an elected volunteer board of directors which meets monthly," explained Russell.

Russell added that most of the work for the two productions a year is done by unpaid volunteers who devote many hours of work both onstage and behind the scenes to insure the success of each show.

RUSSELL SAID future plans for Wayne Community Theatre include the hiring of a permanent managing director whose major responsibility will be to coordinate all aspects of the production, and to find a permanent home for Wayne Community Theatre.

"The group needs office, storage and rehearsal space," said Russell. "The accumulation of costumes, props, equipment and scenery over the past five years has outgrown members' basements, garages, barns and closets."

MOST PATRON memberships will expire before the opening of

"South Pacific" on Aug. 26, and Russell urges patrons to send in their contributions by Aug. 12 to insure they receive their complimentary tickets for the musical.

There are three classifications of patron memberships. With a $30 contribution, the member is listed on all theatre programs as a Patron Member, has voting privileges at all general meetings, and receives a complimentary patron admission ticket.

A patron admission ticket entitles the member to two free admissions to the fall musical and two admissions to the spring play.

With a $50 contribution, the patron becomes a Sustaining Member and is listed as such on all Community Theatre programs.

A Sustaining Member has voting privileges and receives two complimentary admission tickets.

Benefactor Members are those patrons who contribute $100 or more. They are listed on the programs as Benefactor Members, have voting privileges and receive two complimentary admission tickets.

A contribution of $5 to $25 constitutes a voting membership, but does not entitle the member to be listed on the programs or to receive complimentary admission tickets.

WAYNE COMMUNITY Theatre is an incorporated non-profit organization and contributions are tax deductible.

Persons interested in becoming contributing members should make checks payable to Wayne Community Theatre and mail to P.O. Box 345, Wayne, Neb., 68787, before Aug. 12.

Homeowners insurance is homeowners insurance, right? Wrong.

Auto-Owners homeowners insurance is different.

Not only in the way we handle claims (Auto-Owners built its reputation on fast, fair claims service). Not only in the personal attention we give (another Auto-Owners trademark). Or in the way we could save you money (our low rates are famous). But, in our whole outlook on homeowners insurance, with innovative, imaginative policies that make sure you get just what you need, for just what you want to pay.

So, if you're thinking you'd be wrong if you didn't call Auto-Owners... you're right.

Conservation tillage plots

Extension Engineers, Dr. Elbert Dickey and David Shelton, with the help of the "Rain Simulator" explained how tillage systems effect water runoff and erosion to those attending a Wayne County Conservation Tillage Tour.

Landowners in the Lower Elkhorn NRD are getting a chance to learn more about conservation tillage by personally inspecting fields in their area. The Lower Elkhorn NRD, Cooperative Extension Service and Soil Conservation Service are cooperating to help landowners try conservation tillage on their own fields.

The Lower Elkhorn NRD is paying landowners $25.00 per acre for up to ten (10) acres to cover such costs as custom planting or herbicide application. Soil testing is also provided to determine fertilizer recommendations. Extension and SCS personnel advise the landowners on tillage operations, fertilizer, and herbicides.

Tours of the demonstration plots are now being conducted in several counties to show other farmers how conservation tillage is working. Some are also demonstrating the aerial planter and tillage equipment in operation.

To qualify for payment, a plot must be on a 6% or greater slope and have at least 60% ground cover after planting. These requirements demonstrate how residue on the surface reduces water runoff and soil erosion. The residue also retains soil moisture.

If you are interested in attending a tour or simply visiting the demonstration plots yourself, contact your local SCS or Extension Office.

Summer conservation construction

The construction of soil conservation practices such as terraces, in the past, has been confined mostly to the spring and fall when the weather permitted. A combination of factors has allowed landowners, who wish to construct practices this summer, to do it without losing a year of production.

The PIK or set aside land of course is idle, and therefore, available for construction all year long. Terraces with waterways, dams and other conservation practices are eligible for cost-share through the Agriculture Conservation Program (ACP) administered by A.S.C.S. The same office administers an additional $35,250 of "Targeted" funds which are used for Long-Term Agreements (LTA) to put conservation on a landowners farm during a 3-5 year period.

Lower Elkhorn NRD budgeted approximately $300,000 for cost-share in fiscal 1983, plus administering $50,000 through the Nebraska Water Conservation Program. These cost-share monies are utilized for terrace systems and dams, and are used in combination with ACP on projects that exceed ACP's $3500 per landowner limit.

Land that is not in the PIK or set aside program may qualify for Lower Elkhorn NRD's Lands for

TERRACE INSTALLATION WITH 10' SLOPE

1. To cutlets for terraces on the same job as graded differences, but also:

- 1) Adapt plan to irregular topography.
- 2) Be easier to maintain.
- 3) Control over 50% of the agriculture chemicals applied.

Conservation Program. This program pays landowners $40 per acre to construct terrace systems between June 1 and September 15. They may also sow a small grain such as oats on these acres and harvest it. This payment is not cost-share, and does not affect cost-share payments received through A.S.C.S. or Lower Elkhorn NRD. Over $52,000 has been obligated to landowners for these payments in fiscal year 1984.

While the cost-share sources are still available for normal fall construction, this summer has turned out to be an excellent time for applying conservation. For more information, contact your local SCS office.

Energy Conservation in irrigation

Reduced low-pressure center-pivot irrigation systems can use one-third less energy than their high-pressure counterparts, but may also increase irrigation water runoff and soil erosion unless they are properly sited and managed.

Reduced low-pressure center-pivots increase the rate that irrigation water is applied to the soil, explained James R. Gilley, the UNL Agricultural Engineering professor. The greater application rate increases the potential for irrigation runoff and the erosion it causes.

A center-pivot operated at a pressure of 40 pounds per square inch (psi), compared to 80 psi for a high-pressure system can save about one gallon of diesel fuel for each acre-inch of water supplied to the crop, the scientists said. With the same pressure reduction, savings of 11.7 kilowatt hours for electric pumps, 1.5 gallons for propane powered pumps and 160 cubic feet for pumps using natural gas could be realized for each acre-inch of water pumped. The figures assume that irrigation efficiency has not been reduced in switching from a high-pressure to low-pressure system.

An acre-inch of water is enough to cover an acre one inch deep. In Nebraska, corn requires between 8 and 16 inches of irrigation water each growing season, depending upon climatic variability and location in the state.
