Allen awarded Paxson Fund

Jeff Allen, a senior student at Methodist School of Nursing in Omaha, was recently honored with the Paxson Scholarship Fund.

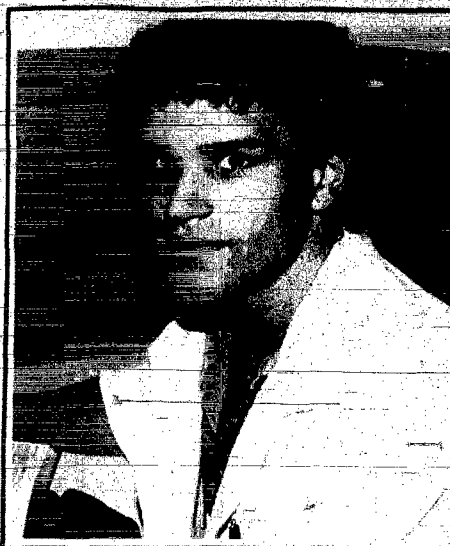

He is the son of Betty Jo Mitchell of Wayne.

Methodist School of Nursing scholarships are awarded to students on the basis of various standards, such as academic achievement, leadership ability and financial need.

The scholarships, awarded through The Nebraska Methodist Hospital Foundation, enable more young people to enter the nursing profession.

The Nebraska Methodist Hospital Foundation is committed to raising one million dollars in endowed funds for future scholarship purposes.

"With nurses from our nursing school serving here at Methodist as well as in smaller communities throughout the Midlands region, it's in our best interest to support their education financially," said Dr. Alva Clark, executive director of the Foundation.

LAUREL SENIORS GUESTS AT WAYNE
Forty-five seniors attended a Friday afternoon card party at the Wayne Senior Citizens Center.

Laurel seniors were guests. Elzada Stroman, coordinator, and Gunnar Swanson, president, were drivers of cars. The afternoon was spent playing pitch and canasta. Prizes were won by Dorothy Dangberg, Jo Maxson, Carl Thomson and Ralph Stroman.

Winning the door prize was Rena Pedersen. A lunch was served by members of the Wayne center.

CURRENT EVENTS
Current events were discussed Tuesday afternoon with chairman Gladys Petersen.

The group also viewed a travelog film by the Wayne Public Library, entitled "Hong Kong." Twenty attended.

Beef industry will face profound changes

The beef industry now faces a future which promises more change than during the past 25 years. "Which were dynamic, but stress full growth years," those attending the Diamond Jubilee meeting of the American Society of Animal Science July 26-29, were told.

Dr. Robert M. Koch, University of Nebraska professor of animal science, reviewed major accomplishments and changes in the beef industry occurring in the period 1958-1983, and projected likely developments in the next 25 years in a paper he co-authored with Dr. J.W. Algeo of Santa Ynez Research Farm, Santa Ynez, Calif.

"A broad spectrum of economic, cultural and technological factors brought about great changes in many segments of the industry," which is the largest entity of U.S. agriculture — comprising about 23 percent of all farm marketings, Koch and Algeo stated.

A MAJOR CHALLENGE for the beef industry, they said, is to utilize its competitive advantage on forage crop residues, by-products and nonprotein nitrogen, to improve its production and distribution efficiency and to provide consumers with a wide range of conveniently packaged and competitively priced products.

Consumer demand for lean yet tender, tasty beef was a force for change in the past 25 years. Koch and Algeo, researchers at the Roman L. Hruska U.S. Meat Animal Research Center at Clay Center, Nebr. and Santa Ynez Research Farm, pointed out.

A leveling off of per capita consumption of meat and animal products in the U.S. makes choices among animal products rather than additional consumption a primary consideration, he analyzed. Economics at the retail market is a factor in consumer choice, and beef faces stiff competition from chicken, which in the early 1950's carried a retail price of 80 percent of beef and now averages about 30 percent, the authors stated.

The marketing of precooked main meal entrees and specialty meat products and a host of other "table ready" beef products will increase the convenience for the consumer, they noted.

Koch and Algeo summarized a host of changes in the beef industry, many of which are seen as continuing trends into the near and intermediate future:

GENETICS — the adoption of record of performance procedures as tools for improving economic traits of breeding herds. Crossbreeding to optimize average genetic merit and utilize hybrid vigor became a widely adopted practice. Importation of "new" breeds into North America greatly increased the genetic base available to beef producers.

Reproductive efficiency — estrus synchronization, nutrition requirements for reproduction, pregnancy diagnosis, superovulation and embryo transfers.

Cattle feeding and slaughter — Commercial feeding expanded throughout the Great Plains from eastern New Mexico to Nebraska. The meat packing industry decentralized into the producing areas, and away from the river markets. Rail dressing greatly increased the number of cattle that could be killed per hour. Boxed beef, cryovac packages of primal and sub-primal cuts that move directly to stores instead of quarters, now accounts for 80 percent of beef processed.

IN A "CRYSTALBALLING" section of their paper, Koch and Algeo predicted these types of developments in the next 25 years.

Computer assisted multidisciplinary systems analysis of breeding and feeding operations will evaluate life cycle production with attention to matching genetic, nutrition and management resources.

Reproductive efficiency will be enhanced by hormonal control and multiple births.

The industry will be challenged to increase forage quality to utilize greater amounts of by-product feeds and less grains in finishing cattle. Feed grains, however, will remain the primary energy source for finishing cattle.

Rumen-regulating drugs and genetic engineering to produce more useful microflora will provide increased potential for metabolizing feedstuffs into usable nutrients.

The intact male, a simple means of increasing lean beef production, will become an important part of beef marketed.

OTHER DEVELOPING trends identified were: more cooperative marketing and other joint ventures between producers, feeders and packers; a more consumer-oriented cattle industry and increased funding of sound public information programs on the high biological value and tastiness of its products; new developments in freezing technology to overcome current consumer resistance to frozen beef; and "great changes in computerized and automated feed milling operations in computer-generated and linear programmed least cost rations."

"The U.S. undoubtedly will be called upon for greater and greater food production to meet the needs of the world's predicted Malthusian-like population expansions of the next few decades. "If, instead of shipping raw grains and other raw agricultural products, the U.S. food industry were to manufacture various food products with U.S. inventiveness, labor and capital and ship these items — as complete meals and dietary supplements — then the milling and other by-products of this production would provide an excellent food source for beef and/or other animal protein production," they outlined.

Looking into the distant future, Koch and Algeo predicted that "when monogastric (single stomach) animal species are competing directly with the human population for primary crops, such as grains, beef cattle will produce high biological availability proteins from by-products and synthetic materials which are unavailable to other species. In short, the value of ruminants (such as beef cattle) will become more important rather than less important to mankind as man's primary food resources are in shorter supply relative to human population numbers."

PIK, SS cause some confusion

Many farmers in the Northeast Nebraska area are apparently confused as to how the 1983 Payment in Kind (PIK) program relates to Social Security, Dale Branch, Social Security district manager in Norfolk, said recently.

Under the PIK program, a farmer agrees to set aside part or all of his land previously used to produce a crop in exchange for receiving surplus Federal commodities of the same crop at the usual harvest time. Commodities involved are wheat, corn, grain, sorghum, rice, and upland cotton. In general, payments under the PIK program are treated the same as other Federal agricultural program payments Branch said. They are included in the farmer's gross income. Since the PIK payments are in the form of certificates of ownership, they are not includable in gross income for 1983 until they are converted to cash for purposes of Federal income tax and the Social Security self employment tax.

HOW THE PIK payments affect receipt of Security benefits depends on when the farmer became entitled to those benefits, Branch said.

If the farmer started getting Social Security benefits before 1983, PIK income can be excluded from gross income for purposes of the annual earnings test because it is income not attributable to significant services performed after the year in which benefits began. In this case, PIK income would have no effect on the receipt of Social Security benefits.

However, if the farmer starts getting Social Security benefits in 1983, PIK income is included in the farmer's net earnings for purposes of the annual earnings test. But if this first year of retirement, a self-employed person can receive a benefit for any month he or she does not perform substantial services in self-employment regardless of total income for the year. Generally, a farmer is not considered to be engaging in substantial services if he or she works 45 hours or less a month in the farming operation.

More information about how income under the PIK program affects Social Security benefits can be obtained in the Norfolk Social Security office, located at 1310 Norfolk Avenue. The telephone number is 1-800-442-8310.

Feed raw soybeans to gestating sows

There are economic advantages to feeding raw soybeans to gestating sows, according to Mark Crenshaw, University of Nebraska graduate student in animal science and the swine operations manager at the North Platte Station.

A current NU research study has shown that "feeding raw soybeans to sows allows the producers to either market his soybeans in town or market them through his pigs," he said.

By feeding sows raw soybeans, producers should be able to save money because processing raw soybeans into soybean meal requires energy and therefore costs more, Crenshaw said.

ANOTHER REASON why the study is being conducted is to determine whether raw soybeans can be fed to gestating sows without any detrimental effects to reproductive performance.

"The study has shown that it is all right to feed raw soybeans to gestating sows, however, it is not recommended to feed raw soybeans to growing finishing pigs," Crenshaw added.

Feeding raw soybeans to sows and controlling wheat streak mosaic are two topics that will be discussed in detail on the Nebraska Educational Television Network series, "Farm and Ranch Report." The program will be aired Aug. 4 at 12:30 p.m. repeating at 9:30 p.m.

"Raw soybeans are also high in fat and feeding them to pigs is an easy way of adding fat to their diet," Crenshaw said. And this added fat may increase the survival percentage of pigs, he added.

WHEAT STREAK mosaic is a second topic to be discussed on "Farm and Ranch Report." According to Eric Kerr, NU extension plant pathologist, wheat streak mosaic has not been that much of a problem this year.

"Only spotted areas have wheat streak mosaic, but it is a small acreage compared to many years," he said.

A lack of hailstorms during the soft to medium dough stage, when the kernel is soft and when the disease would be spread into the volunteer wheat, is a good reason why wheat streak mosaic is not a problem this year, Kerr said.

However, with the PIK program, oats are being used as a cover crop in some of Nebraska's wheat growing areas. Oats can carry the wheat curl mite that carries the virus and "wheat growing adjacent to these oat fields can contract wheat streak mosaic," Kerr cautioned.

Letter from Germany

Impressions of German life shared

Editor's note: Anita Sandahl is a 1979 graduate of Wayne High School and a recent graduate of University of Nebraska-Lincoln (home economics). She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Sandahl of Rural Wakefield. Anita will reside with the first of seven host families in Germany until the first part of December. On July 27 she moved to her third host family, this one in West Berlin. Through these newsletters, Anita wishes to share her experiences and insights about her host country with 4-H'ers, and all friends of 4-H back home. Her trip is part of the International Four-H Youth Exchange Representative program.

What does a Nebraska farm girl notice when she finds herself in another country? After being here in Germany for more than a month now, I've noticed many differences.

Of course, the language difference can be overwhelming at times. But when you attempt to speak German, they are more than willing to help. I can now relate to the toddler who is always asking, "What is this?" Yes, picture books are a "big help." Beginning at age 10, German children learn English in school, along with their German and French.

Struggling through a newspaper or wishing a newscaster would please, slow down, make keeping up with current events a challenge. Speaking of television, "Did you know that Little House on the Prairie is also here in Germany? And John Wayne can even speak German!" German TV programming doesn't begin until afternoon and all of the commercials are shown in black segments.

WHETHER VINEYARD farmers, or dairy farmers, my host families' work days have been from 6:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. When they work, they work hard. Yet, they take time to relax, stopping to eat five times a day. Only the beverage changed, from wine to milk! At noon they enjoy a mid-day nap for an hour or so under their wonderful down comforters.

There are countless little differences, no braces on their teeth, the fork stays in the left hand, no lap wafers is served, women don't shave. You pay to use public restrooms, the children ride everywhere in strollers, and buggies, weekly church attendance is uncommon. Affection is displayed openly in public, teens all take dancing lessons and it is completely acceptable for girls to dance together.

Still, the similarities win out. Germans demonstrate strong family bonds and have been more than happy to open their hearts and homes to an American.

They have a strong desire for world peace. Daily they are reminded by the planes flying over and the ruins from past wars.

THE GERMANS have a wonderful sense of humor and can make you feel at home, with their hearty laughs and warm generosity. And, working side-by-side, I have learned that they too have dishes to wash, cows to milk and strawberries to pick! "Auf wiedersehen aus Deutschland!"

The International Four H Youth Exchange (IFYE) Representative Program is conducted by the National 4-H Council in support of the 4-H program of the Cooperative Extension Service. Friends of 4-H in Nebraska, the NE Council of Home Extension Clubs and the UNL Collegiate 4-H Council are helping to finance this exchange.

Alternative cropping tour set

The University of Nebraska's third annual Alternative Cropping System Field Day and Farm Tour will be held Tuesday, Aug. 23, rain or shine.

Participants will assemble at The Eastern Nebraska 4-H Center south of Gretna.

Warren Sabs, assistant director of the Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station, said the day's activities will begin with an update of Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources research on organic farming and a presentation of a position paper from IANR's Alternative Cropping Systems Task Force.

"We'll board the buses at 10:30," Sabs said. "For a tour that will include visits to a forage/livestock operation near Blair, the DeSota National Wildlife Refuge at Missouri Valley, Iowa, a farrow-to-finish swine-cow calf unit near Neola, Iowa, and the Nebraska Compost Company in Omaha." Luncheon stop is at the Blair City Park.

Further information may be obtained, and reservations made, by writing Sabs at the Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station, 109 Ag Hall, East Campus, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb., 68583-0704.

Related fatalities decline

Fatalities resulting from farm accidents in Nebraska continue to decrease, according to Rollin Schnieder, University of Nebraska extension safety specialist. "Nine Nebraska fatalities have occurred in farm-related accidents so far this year compared to 11 fatalities this time last year," he said.

The 25 fatalities that occurred in 1982 "are a far cry from the 50 to 60 fatalities per year that occurred in the 1960s and early 1970s," he said.

"Keeping our fingers crossed," it looks like the number of fatalities in 1983 will be down also, Schnieder added.

Bovine tuberculosis free

Nebraska has been recognized as the 22nd state to become free of bovine tuberculosis, a U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarian said.

"Nebraska's consistently strong tuberculosis testing program and its diligent investigations of suspicious cases have exemplified its commitment to eradication of the disease," said Dr. Dean A. Price, acting director of the North Central region of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Nebraska's last confirmed tuberculosis outbreak was eliminated in 1977.

Price said Nebraska has ranked in the top third of states in testing for tuberculosis. A total of 21,664 cattle in 1,399 herds were tested during fiscal year 1982.

Animal exposition planned

The 34th annual Meat Animal Exposition will be held on Sunday, Sept. 11 and Monday, Sept. 12, at the Norfolk Livestock Market in Norfolk.

The Ag Council of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce sponsors this event each year. Judge for this year's show will be Eldon L. Miller, of Eagleville, Mo. A major rule change that was implemented last year is that the grand and reserve grand champion steer and heifer will be required to sell.

Show rules and regulations, as well as entry blanks will be available from county agents or through vo ag instructors, or at the Norfolk Livestock Market or the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce office. Rules and entry cards will not be sent out individually.

Stalkage protein results given

Increasing levels of protein in corn stalkage improve the rate and efficiency of weight gain in growing calves, said a University of Nebraska professor of animal science.

In a paper presented to the 75th annual meeting of the American Society of Animal Science at Washington State University, Paul Guyer discussed the results of a 1980-81 study on the effect of irrigation and protein supplementation of corn stalkage on growing calves.

Guyer said stalkage was made from two high grain corn varieties grown on both non-irrigated and irrigated fields. Stalkage with high in vitro dry matter digestibility (IVDMD) — a measure of energy availability in feed — produced faster gains and feed efficiency 14 percent greater than the low IVDMD variety.

Farmers have an opportunity to decrease costs of feed by using bypass protein, Guyer said, only if they can buy it cheaper. By harvesting dryland stalkage for feed, farmers can save money and it's more nutritious.

4-h news

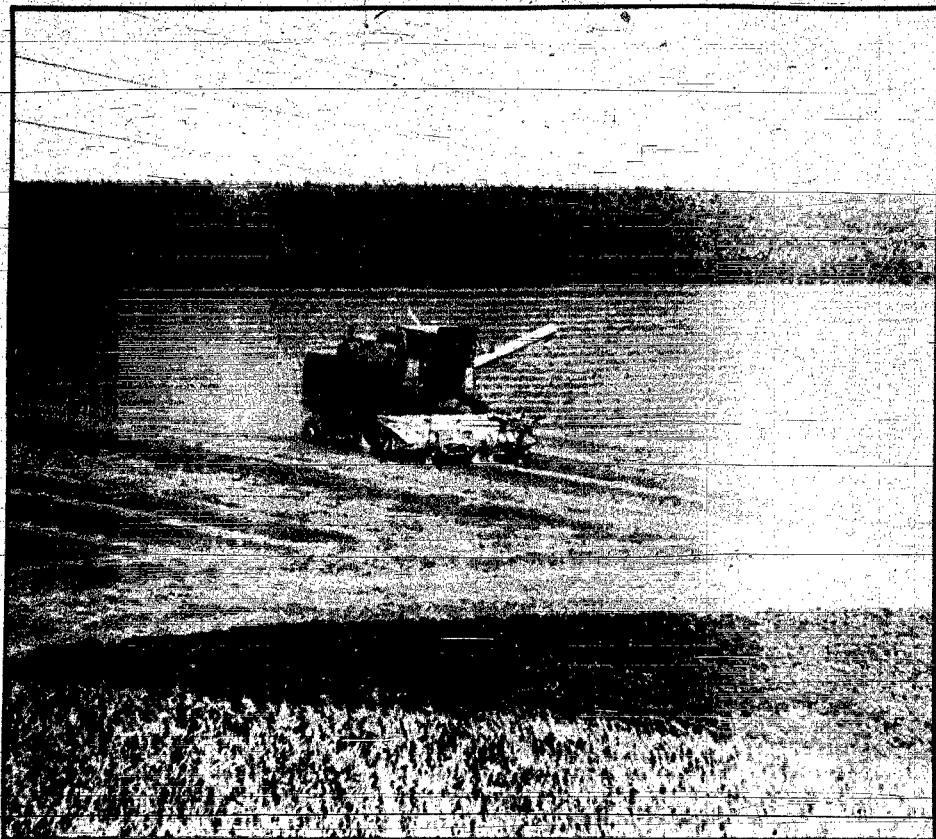

SPRINGBRANCH
The Springbranch 4-H Club met July 24 for a pre-race meeting in the Melvin Malmgren home. Entry tags and stall cards were filled out.

Cynthia Walde gave a demonstration on shearing sheep. Miss Walde was the only woman under the age of 20 who attended a sheep shearing school earlier this year at Mead.

Plans were discussed for a theme booth for the Wayne County Fair.

The final meeting of the year will be a family picnic tentatively set for Aug. 14.

Dixon, Allen 4-H'ers win Dixon County contests

Allen George, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold George of Dixon, won top honors in both the Dixon County 4-H Horticulture and Forestry Contests held July 26 at the Northeast Station near Concord.

In the horticulture contest, George scored 419 points out of a possible 455. He is a member of Dad's Helpers 4-H Club.

The junior division winner was Annetta Noe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Noe of Allen and a member of the Pleasure and Profit 4-H Club.

RIBBON PLACINGS in the horticulture contest were as follows:
Purple - Allen George and

Carolyn George, both of Dixon; Annetta Noe, Tabitha Burnham, Sandy Noe and Barbara Hansen, all of Allen.
Blue - Marc Bathke, Dixon; Doug Olson, Concord and Angela Jones, Tamie Noe, Brenda Fiscus, Marcia Hansen, Robert Kumm, Kristy Taylor and Terri Ellis, all of Allen.
Red - Dana Kluever, Allen.

PARTICIPANTS competed in the identification of plant parts and seeds, a gardening knowledge quiz, and judging of six classes of vegetables.

Allen George, Carolyn George, Barbara Hansen and Tabitha Burnham will be given an opportunity to represent Dixon County at the Nebraska State Fair Horticulture Contest. Alternates are Tamie Noe and Angela Jones.

GEORGE ALSO was the top individual in the Forestry Contest. First in the junior division was Sandy Noe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Noe of Allen and member of the Pleasure and Profit 4-H Club.

Ribbon placings in the forestry contest were as follows:
Purple - Allen George and Carolyn George, both of Dixon; Sandy Noe and Terri Ellis, both of Allen.
Blue - Tabitha Burnham, Barbara Hansen, Angie Jones, Tamie Noe, Marcia Hansen, Annetta Noe and Kristy Taylor, all of Allen.

Red - Brenda Fiscus, Dana Kluever and Robert Kumm, all of Allen.

THE CONTEST included identification of 25 trees and shrubs, answering 20 questions on forestry, and a short essay on tree development.

Teams who will be representing Dixon County in the State Tree Identification Contest are Team 1, comprised of Allen George, Carolyn George, Barbara Hansen and Tamie Noe; and Team 11, comprised of Tabitha Burnham, Brenda Fiscus, Angie Jones and Dana Kluever.

the farmer's wife

by pat melerhenry

When our oldest was old enough to join 4-H, we contacted the Hoskins Homemakers and learned to make a beach cover up and peanut butter cookies. We exhibited at the county fair and got a couple of ribbons. So when Jon was eight years old by the first of January, we talked Dad into joining the local livestock club.

The Big Farmer was never involved in 4-H when he was growing up, so he didn't know what he was getting into. That first year, Jon took a little breeding heifer named Margie to the fair, and had a lot of fun washing her and parading her around. So, the next year, Sue and Jon each took a market steer and showed them off. Since the homemaking club and the livestock club involved so many of the same families, there eventually was a merger and we became Spring Branch Club because of the name of the local creek.

IN ADDITION to steers and breeding heifers, beef members can take cow calf pairs and pens of three steers or heifers. As each kid got old enough, our entourage increased until, a couple of years ago, we had to take a very large truck to get all the animals to the fair. Since they stay there for four days, there has to be bedding and hay bales and feed along, too. In order to show a calf at the fair, they have to be halter broke to lead. They don't just naturally like to have a halter and rope on, and it isn't in the nature of a thousand pound calf to be led docily in a ring.

This training is done gradually at home, by the 4-H'er. Sometimes, in the case of a very stubborn animal, Dad helps by leading the calf behind a tractor or the pickup. The calves are washed, at home and at the fair. They are weighed, and a daily rate of gain calculated. And on show day, they are groomed within an inch of their lives. They are dried with electric dryers, combed, brushed, hooves polished, and tails curled.

HOPEFULLY, the owner gets scrubbed, too. Then they parade around for the judge. The same thing goes on with dairy calves, horses, sheep, and pigs - whatever the family raises. The newest animal in our county is the dairy goat, and our club now has a family with these. We must be the most versatile club around.

The kids stay at the fair with the animals. In case of dairy cows, they also have to be milked, with a milker run off a generator. 4-H'ers sleep in the barns on straw, in horse trailers, or, if they're lucky, in campers. I use the word "sleep" - there probably is little of that.

There is a lot of "messing around" people get thrown in tanks, romances flourish, many doughnuts and hamburgers are consumed. One year, Jon was riding a little old dairy calf and fell off and broke his arm.

One of our calves tried to run away getting off the truck and took our club leader for a ride. Last year, Kay's heifer left the grandstand parade in a very big hurry. One of our club members consistently brought calves with poor dispositions. We decided he thought he was a missionary, and was always trying to convert. Many times, the calves are bigger than the kids. Sometimes, the calves become pets and there are tears shed when they are sold.

THERE WAS a fun project called Bachelor Bob a few years ago in which boys sewed barbecue aprons and baked brownies. Our leader tells of one day before the fair when each kid, boy and girl, washed calves in between coming into the house to bake bars.

Every year, about this time, we're asking ourselves if this is all really necessary. There are always a couple critters who don't want to cooperate.

There are beans to walk when we should be working with calves. But the day we bring them all home, and breathe a sigh of relief, I can count on one of the kids saying, "Next year, Dad, I'm taking #186. She can win it."

Feedlot fly control

All insecticides are dangerous, especially highly concentrated insecticides before defoliation. Feedlot operators should use precaution to avoid illegal residues when using insecticides.

Several publications are available from the extension office on feedlot fly control.

Of the several types of pests in feedlots, the house fly and the stable fly are the most harmful. Before treating for flies you should know what type of flies you are combating.

Stable flies are blood sucking insects and feed by piercing the skin and sucking blood. They feed mainly on the lower parts of the legs of cattle. They remain on the cattle only long enough to get a blood meal and then go to a shaded area where they digest the blood.

House flies do not suck blood, but feed on organic wastes. They include the eye and nose mucus of cattle. They are annoying to cattle when present in large numbers.

Face flies breed only in the droppings of the cattle. They are suspected as having a role in pink eye infection.

Blow flies are annoying to cows in the same manner as house flies. They breed in garbage, excrement and decomposing flesh and animal matter.

Horn flies like face flies, breed only in fresh manure. They are blood suckers, as is the stable fly, but unlike the stable fly, remain on the animal all the time. They are usually only a pest of feedlot cattle in the spring or when cattle in the spring or when cattle are pasturing adjacent to the feedlot.

There are two types of control measures: sanitation and chemical control.

Sanitation includes removal of all or most of the pest's breeding grounds and the breaking up of the insects life cycle. Chemical control includes a vast number of methods for controlling pests using chemicals. Five different ways of controlling flies chemically are by the use of residual sprays, area sprays, animal sprays, dips and baits.

Vitamin A

Cattle deficient in Vitamin A appear to be 50 percent more susceptible to infestation by larvae of the common cattle grub than cattle fed a normal, adequate diet. That's because the parasites can't penetrate the animals healthy skin as easily.

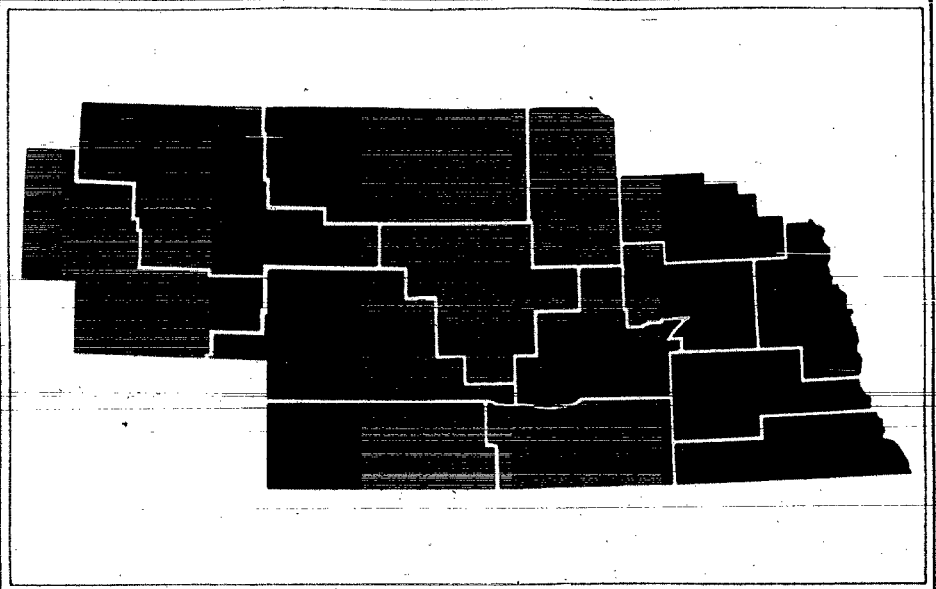

On the other hand, animals with deficiencies of Vitamin A often end up with dry, thin and scaly skin. This allows cattle grub larvae to penetrate lesions around hair follicles, mainly on the animals legs.

These were the findings of researchers at the U.S. Livestock Insect Laboratory in Kerrville, Texas.

The results are especially important to cattlemen who rely heavily on pastures and hay during the winter months. During that time grasses, which are rich in vitamin A during the growing season, lose the vitamin as they cure. Hay can also have poor quality and lose vitamin A because of improper and long storage.

AT THE UPCOMING county fairs and state fair, members of the Northeast Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association will be out in full force promoting the livestock industry. Lisa Lamplot of Thurston was selected as the 1985 State Feeders Association (NFLA) queen. Jodi Greve of Wakefield is the current Northeast Nebraska Feeder's Association queen. Both girls will be present at many of the local fairs this year. Other members of the Northeast Nebraska Feeder's Association with statewide responsibilities include the current state NFLA president, Tom Gustafson of Wakefield and current state auxiliary vice president, Mary Bruns of Pender. Above from left: Bruns, Lamplot, Tom Gustafson. Also pictured at left is queen Jodi Greve.

"Last year Nebraska's independent PCAs paid over $2,100,000 in taxes."

"Ask the person who really knows. Ask a PCA member!"

It's because the 14 independent PCAs in Nebraska are taxpayers like other private enterprises.

Some people incorrectly believe that PCAs are government organizations or agencies. Far from it, PCAs are simply financial services cooperatives. Our Association is wholly owned and financially supported by local producers. We lend both our own reserves and money raised through the sale of non-government bonds in the nation's money markets. Wall Street. If loans aren't repaid, or we have a loss, local members end up footing the bill.

So, we operate our Association on a sound and business-like basis. Our directors, who are PCA members and borrowers, are elected by local members to set policy for the Association and hire professional management. This gives us the kind of direction which enables PCA to serve our own producers better.

and more completely through a professionally run organization.

PCAs are not banks. Although all of the 423 PCAs in the United States are operated under the same rules and regulations, like many businesses and industries today, each is independent and has its own management style based on the needs of the local producers. Our PCA is unique.

Yes, we did pay taxes. Nebraska's PCAs also returned $204,046 to Nebraska PCA members in 1982 in addition to providing professional quality financial services.

For many producers in Nebraska, PCA is smart business. That's why we say PCA is for people who make a business out of agriculture.

Find out for yourself.

Demonstrators to state fair

State fair honors were given to four Wayne County 4-H'ers during the home economics demonstration contest, held July 27 at the Women's Club Room.

The team of Susie McQuistan of Pender and Terri Nuernberger of Wakefield received a purple on their demonstration, "Dot to Knot," which described the art colonial art of candlewicking. The girls, both members of the Leslie Lads and Lassies 4-H club, will give their demonstration at the state fair.

Karen Sandahl of Wakefield will be representing Wayne County at the state fair with her demonstration, "Wok Talk." Karen, a member of the Gingham Gals 4-H club, showed how to cook foods in a Chinese wok.

"Alone With the Children: What Do I Do Now?" was the topic of Kathy Leighton's award-winning demonstration. Kathy, who shared her babysitting tips, is a member of the Helping Hands 4-H club.

LORI SORENSON of Wayne was chosen as alternate to state fair with her demonstration, "Chicken Scratch." Margo and Maria Sandahl, both of Wakefield, were chosen as top demonstrators under 14 years of age. They will receive registrations to the District 4-H Camp at Ponca, given by the State-National Bank.

The top demonstrators over age 14 were Terri Nuernberger and Susie McQuistan. The girls received a trip to the Nebraska 4-H Conference, presented by the First National Bank.

The Wayne County Pork Producers will also present an award to the top park demonstration, which was given by Karen Sandahl.

Auto-Owners has 2 car insurance rates for young marrieds: Better. And better.
If you're a young married couple, chances are Auto-Owners can save you money on car insurance. Because, unlike some other companies, Auto-Owners doesn't make you wait until you're 25 years old to get good rates. You can get Auto-Owners preferred married rate on car insurance at 23. And that can save you money.
Plus, if you're married and under 23, Auto-Owners also has a reduced rate for you.
Check out our lower rates and you'll probably discover that you and Auto-Owners should get together. And that could turn out to be the perfect marriage.
