Heat doesn't hinder turnout

The Wayne County Fair may have set a record for perspiration during Hs first two days of activities. Temperatures and humidity percentages soared into the high 90s on Thursday and Friday as large crowds gathered at the fairgrounds. With no breeze to improve situations visitors to the fair were forced to suffer the consequence. Although no attendance figures were kept. Martyn Koch fair superintendent, said he felt Thursday's turnout was better than average for opening day.

The awards, which are co sponsored by Ak Sar Ren and the Nebraska Association of Fair Managers, are presented annually to owners of farms which have remained in the same family tor 100 years or more. The 192 acre Behmer farm originally was acquired by Ernes Otto Behmer on Sept. 15, 1887. Inclining is now owned by Ernes Vernon Behmer and farmed by Ton Behmer of Negrous Was acquired by Rindy statute. Defide Kai, on Oct. 26, 1887. The Rindy Kafamily acquired file land in 1945 and staff lives there. They are farming in partnership with their son Roy and his family who live on an adjoining farm.

THE SECOND night of the fair came to a close with live entertainment by Sue Powell. Powell, a 25 year old singer who has toured with Kenny Rogers and Charlie Pride, performed in fruint of a crowd which packed the grandstand. The always popular midway was busy thor sday and Ern day evenings as people took rides, played carnival games or just watched the action.

County fair time is generally a time for most people to unwind.

There is a ton of work for the organizers, the 4-H members and everyone who has any involvement with the running of the fair. But for most people it is a time to just get out, relax and have a good time.

and have a good time.

County fairs have a spot in most people's memories. Mine too.

Growing up on a farm near David Ci3y, I always looked forward to our Butler County fair. Until I was old enough to drive I usually didn't get into town very often as there was plenty to keep everyone occupied on the farm. So the fair. always gave me a chance to meet my friends and have some fun.

Like many county fairs.

Like many county fairs, ours in Butter County offered a free barbecue and musical entertainment in addition to the midway. 4-H displays and ousands of people would stand in r hours to get a free sandwich, bork and beans and potato chips some pork and bea at the barbecue.

The barbecue line was always a target of politicians who would come from miles away to pick up some votes. If also was a target of builles of all ages who would but in near, the front of fife time. I was always in line with the best of them. Maybe it was the long walt that made the sandwich taste so good. Admission fo the taltgrounds was free. People were charged for the entertainment they wanted to watch from the grandstand.

Because David City has a stock carrace track, the highlight of the fair's entertainment usually turned out to be the Friday night stock carraces. The best seats were sold early.

Entertainment varied each year from a talent show to a family of gospel singers or from motorcycle daredevils to all star rasslin'.

When I was younger I used to stay up and watch all-star rasslin' late on Saturday nights with my dad. We never took the "sport" too seriously but did watch it for fun.

I remember my dad always had me turn the sound down when Gera Speed commercials would come on. We preferred to sit back and watch the announcer's mouth move for two solid minutes.

Because I followed the professional rassiers, I bought a ticket to see the all star rasslin' at the fair one year.

Cowboy Bob Ellis, Dale Lewis and Reggie Parks were some of the "good guys" who performed. The bad guys consisted of such rasslers as the Mad Russian Stan Polaski and Dr. X—the masked villan.

I made the mistake of buying a ticket for a front row seat. I was so close I could see the missed pinches and weak elbow drops. But, like I said, I never did take the sport seriously and I still had fun.

That night in the Butler County fair, Dr. X was unmasked. Unmasked in the Butler County-fair at David City, Neb.? That was the highlight of the even and received the crowd-s-approval. I bet that rascal had rassled for ne

by randy hascall

to untile the mask but failed. Not this time

Jileft the rasslin' match feeling pretty good. I hadn't wasted my money. Instead, I was one of the fortunate hundreds who saw Dr. X without his mask. And I had a front row seat.

After the show was over that night, I went around the fair telling my friends that Dr. X had been unmasked. They wished they could have witnessed the one-time event.

I went home wondering why the Fasting promotors would pick the Butler County fair for the demise of Dr. X. There had to be bigger crowds and more money in other communities—especially Omaha.

The next morning I found out.

Reading the sports section of the Sunday World-Herald. I stumbled across a small article titled something like, "Dr. X Unmasked."

Wayne is getting better at running the district softball tournament and the complex is in pretty good shape. Overall 1 thought things went pretty good at the tournament last week.

But I heard a lot of complaints because players, themselves, were charged admission at the gate. How many lournaments do you know where players, get charged so they can play in a softball game?

I don't think that is right and I don Mhink that made a very good impression on some of the players from out of fown. Also, where Is the money going that was collected at the gate?

To the editor:

Once again. I have had the dubious pleasure of going to my hog yard only to find dead pigs fying all over the yard and in the barn. Upon several minutes of investigation, the conclusion was obvious. This was in furn confirmed by the local veterinarian. If has happened before and unfortunately it will probably happen again. Every so often there is a strange, friendly dog standing on ar near the road or on someone's place. Visiting with the neighbors, placing advertisements on the radio and in the paper produce no results. You ask so what?

Recently we spent five hours with three horses and many extra men with vehicles to round up and sort out cattle that were objectly spooked by something. This is down time when one should be doing something.

When you dog lovers abandon your family pet on a country road do you tell your children that some nice farmer will give them a good home?

Is that what you said when you dumped the female collie cross and her four pups? The black German Shephard? The brown Heinz 37 How about the small black and white fuzzy dog? If you can't take care of one dog how do you expect me to feed all of these?

When even the friendliest dogs get hungry. They form into vicious predators. They have attacked our neighbors sheep and chickens and baby pigs as well as ours. It is at this point that we have to dispose of them cruelly to protect ourselves and our property.

No. people, the kind latiness are not yearing your pets a good home. There are far lot many. When will you understand this and take care of your "problems" yourselves?

Commodity organization responds to new trends

By Cheryl Stubbendieck
Nebraska Farm Bureau

If is no great revelation to suggest that the market for agricultural products is changing. Agricultural products is changing. Agricultural products is changing. Agricultural produces, themselves are trying to change it, by creating new products or expanding export markets or by winning a larger share of market for their particular commodity.

Ag producers and their commodity organizations are not shy about encouraging the domestic consumer to eat more of their particular products. A trip to the super market anymore is reminiscent of those pre-highway beautification days when a drive in the country confronted the traveler with advertising messages one after another.

Increasingly, commodily promotions are expanding beyond the old concept of a promotional month, such as pork in October and dairy products in June.

— COMMODITY - ORGANIZATIONS both respond to trends in consumer preferences and seek to change those preferences—Last, year, the Beef Industry Council reminded us. Somehow, nothing saltsifes like beef as we watched pictures of happy family meals. Next month, the beef promoter's will begin tellingius, 'Beef Give Strength' as they seek to convince fitness conscious consumers that beef is the best choice for their active lives. COMMODITY ORGANIZATIONS both that beef is the best choice for their active lives. Tommodity organizations have good reason to seek the consumer's attention. While annual per capital road consumption in the U.S. remains at about 1,400 pounds, the composition of the American diet has changed in subtile ways. The trend toward tower per capita consumption of foods derived from animals continues, along with an increase in consumption of foods from crops. We're eating more fresh and processed fruits and vegetables, sweeteners, potato products, vegetable fats and cereals.

AMONG ANIMAL foods consumption of pouttry and fish is up, and use of red meat and dairy products has declined. Between 1970 and 1981, beef consumption dropped a little over six pounds, while use of chicken products increased 11 poinds. Still, lotal-red meat consumption was nearly triple chicken consumption in 1981.

Another significant change in our diets is the drop in milk consumption. Between 1960 and 1981, consumption of lit dairy products declined 19 percent but consumption of whole milk is down a fremendous 48 percent. At the same time, soft drink consumption is up 180 percent-for the same period. Sue Palmore, American Farm Bureau Federation director of consumer affairs, says that If every American drank one more glass of milk a day, we wouldn't have a dairy surplus. But she notes that Americans spend one-third of their food budget in eating out, often in fast food establishments which aren't conductive to milk drinking but which do foster soft drink consumption.

which aren't conductive to milk grinking but which do foster soft drink consumption.

IN POINT of fact, Americans drink more coffee, than they do milk. That's interesting loo, sinee-our number one ag import is cotiee. Perhaps we could kill two birds with one stone: drink more milk to eliminate the dairy surplus while cutting down on coffee to reduce the amount of foreign coffee beans coming into this country.

The state of the economy, of course, has a large impact on food-buying habits. The grocery bill is one of the few, non-fixed, discretionary expenses in the family budget. Any student working his way through school can tell you it's a steak dimer out on payday, and peanut butter or macaroni and cheese at home in the last days before payday.

The same is true on a larger scale with the U.S. economy consumers prefer to ear red meat and other higher cost foods when they can afford it. With continuing improvements in the American economy, the market for going after it.

And though it may clutter up our grocery ands. Consumers to look to advertising for information to make intelligent buying decitions.

tion offices available to assist individuals with complaints of this nature, and we would suggest that you make every effort to have the manufacturer remedy the problems before taking legal action.

In the future, problems like yours may be partially remedied by the passage of LB 155, also known as the "lemon law," by the Nebraska Legislature. Q. I was divorced several years ago and my ex-wife remarried. A year ago, her new husband adopted my two children, with my consent. Now the older child wants to come live with me, and I want him to live here. Is there any way I can get my child back?

A. If your son was legally adopted by your ex wife's new husband, you have no further legal rights with respect to the child. We assume from your question that the adoption actually occurred and an Order of Adoption was entered

If this is the case, you have no legal means of having your child come live with you without the full cooperation of your ex wife and her new husband.

We thought July was hot and after the first week. August't

The first days of bot, humid weather brought warnings and advice b keep your cool.* Here are a few reminders about what to do to stay healthy when the weather begins to sweller

WORKING OR exercising in a holl and humid climate Causes the body to lose a great deal of water. It's not unusual for people who work outdoors, athletes and weekend joggers to become dehydrated Without special care dehydration can be a threat to your health. The best hedge to losing too much body build through sweating is to take in plenty of liquids before and after exercising.

take in plenty of liquids before and after exercising. You may be surprised by the amount of water you lose after exercising or working. To test this, weigh yourself before and after your workout. The loss is mostly water.

A good rule of thumb is to drink at least two cups of replacement fluid for every pound you lose. If you lose more than three percent of your total body weight, you should drink enough replacement fluids before continuing any activity.

YOU NOT ONLY lose water when the body suffers from dehydra tion. Sodium and potassium also can be lost. According to our food and nutrition specialist. Katheline Riddle, it is unlikely that you will have a sodium deficiency. Most Americans con unlikely that you will have a sodium deficiency. Most Americans consume 10 to 60 times the amount of sall needed in their daily distant fact. The more you exercise or work in the heat the less sodium you have. You'r body adjusts itself to refaining sall by sweating a higher proportion of water.

A study was done where athletes were told to exercise on bicycles until they lost a pounds of sweat.

Even after tosing such large amounts of body fluid, researchers found that doily 1 to 2 percent of the total body stores of sodium, potassium and chloride had been lost.

This would suggest that replacement of water is more important than replacing minerals.

MANY PEOPLE question whether to take salt tablets or not. State pecialist Riddle warns that salf tablets are not only unnecessary, but specialist Riddle warns that salt tablets are not only unnecessary, but could also be hazardous.

She explains that as you become dehydfated, you start to sweat more water than sodium.

The sodium level in your blood increases. Taking salt tablets will only dehydrate you more by drawing water from your body into the stomach to dilute the concentration of salt from the tablets.

The best way to replace sodium and polassium is to gat a normal meal. Many loods contain sodium in amounts large enough to replace what is lost through exertion. Orange juice and bananas are nutrition sources of polassium.

WHAT IS THE best replacement fluid? Good old water is still the

"I lost 56 pounds at Diet Center!"

June, 1982

July 27, 1983

"When my doctor told me to lose weight to help me to get my blood pressure under "When my doctor told me to lose weight to help me to get my blood pressure under control. I tried hard on my own to cut back on my eating. But in months of trying, I only managed to lose five pounds. That's when I decided to try Diet Center. From June to October of 1982, I lost 39 pounds. I decided then to take a break over the winter and just try to maintain. In May of 1983, I came back to Diet Center to take off some more weight and reach my goal. By July 27, I had lost a total of 56 pounds. People tell me I look younger and I know I feel better. The support of a counselor who cares at Diet Center made the difference for me. I'd recommend Diet Center to anyone who has a problem losing weight on their own. It certainly was the answer for me."

"Last year Nebraska's independent PCAs

It's because the 14 independent PCAs in Nebraska are taxpayers like other private enterprises.

Some people incorrectly believe that PCAs are government organizations or agencies. Far from it. PCAs are simply financial services cooperatives. Our Association is whotly-owned and financially supported by local producers. We lend both our own researchs and money resed through the sale of non-government bonds in the nation's money markets. "Wall Street. It loss;s aren't repaid, or we have a loss, local members and up footing-the-bill.

So, we operate our Association on a sound and business-like basis. Our directors, who are PCA members and borrowers, are effected by local members to set policy for the Association and hire professional management. This gives us the kind of direction which enables—PCA to serve our own producers better and more completely through a professionally run organization. PCAs are not alike. Although all of the 423 PCAs in the United States are operated under the same rules and requisitions, like many businesses and industries today, each is independent and has its own management style bearing the professional style of the same publications.

industries today, each is independent arhas its own management style based on the needs of the local producers. Our PCA is unique.

Yes, we did pay taxes. Nebraska's PCAs also returned $204,046 to Nebraska PCA members in 1982 in addition to providing professional quality financial services.
