Windom put on state plan

The Wayne City Council discussed two resolutions and made appointments as it breezed through a routine agenda in near-record time Tuesday night at its regular meeting.

In a 21-minute meeting, the council passed a resolution adding South Windom Street to a pavement improvement plan, upheld its earlier decision on wastewater treatment equipment and approved the appointment of Stan Hansen and Doris Walker to the Villa Wayne Board.

With Mayor Wayne Marsh out of town, Councilman Keith Mosley governed the meeting.

DISCUSSION ON the wastewater treatment equipment sent the council into executive session for about 10 minutes.

Rexnord Inc., manufacturer of Envirex equipment, had filed a protest against the city's decision to request Walker equipment in its treatment plant. A hearing on the matter was held Friday.

Earlier this year, the council accepted the low bid on the wastewater project which was submitted by Spencer Construction. That bid called for use of Envirex equipment. After several councilmen visited treatment plants in the Midwest, the council said it felt Walker equipment is superior and asked for a change from Envirex to Walker.

With Darrel Heier absent and Gary Vopalensky's seat still unfilled after his resignation two weeks ago, the council voted 4-0 to stand by its decision, requesting Walker equipment. A final decision concerning the council's choice and Rexnord's protest probably will be made by the Environmental Protection Agency of Kansas City.

THE CITY COUNCIL passed a resolution asking the state to include South Windom Street on a current plan which calls for the paving of Fairground Avenue.

Plans call for bid-letting on the Fairground Avenue project to be opened probably next spring. The council's action makes it possible for Windom to be included in that project.

The state project will be funded 75 percent by state funds and 25 percent by the city.

The council closed its meeting by approving the appointment of Stan Hansen and Doris Walker to the Villa Wayne Board.

Marlyn Koch steps down as county fair manager

The Wayne County Fair Board reluctantly accepted the resignation of Marlyn Koch as manager in a special meeting Monday night, the board said in a written release.

Koch has been manager of 13 Wayne County fairs. During his management, the fair more than doubled in size while cutting its tax support in half, the board said.

More than $125,000 was spent in building grants and capital improvements during that period. More than $75,000 was given as premiums to local 4-H members, according to the release.

"Marlyn Koch made our county fair work. His management ability was shown by election to presidency of the Nebraska Fair Managers Association," the board stated.

"His efforts on the state level were tireless. The Wayne County Fair Board and the community as a whole appreciate the retiring service Marlyn and Bonnadell (his wife) have given," the release added.

Business blooms from basement origin

What started out as a business in Lyle George's basement has now expanded into a chain of three computer stores in Nebraska. George believes the computer chain is the largest in the state.

The Wayne businessman and his partner, Dennis Cromwell of Norfolk, will open their third store Monday in Norfolk. They also own Connestoga Computers of Columbus and The Computer Farm of Wayne, which is farm oriented.

The Columbus store has been open for a couple of years and The Computer Farm is celebrating its first anniversary.

WHEN HE operated his business out of his basement, George said there were computers everywhere. Now his store at 110 North Main Street is the home office for the chain. Seven employees operate out of the Wayne office.

"Our employees and my family are very important. Without them I'd be sweeping streets," said George, who at age 26 is the youngest Apple computer dealer in a five state area.

George is a member of the TRI Dealer Council—a representative firm between Apple and its dealers. Of 190 Apple dealers, 11 are members of the council.

What has evolved into an expanding business, started a little more than a year ago, when George saw a bad computer sales presentation.

"I SAW AN opportunity," stated George, who said he went to 20 stores and saw only two competent salesmen. "We have to give driver's ed. Car dealers don't have to teach how to drive. We're into teaching. We try to make a person's investment pay off," he explained.

As part of the store's first anniversary celebration, seminars are offered this week. Seminars were held Tuesday and Wednesday nights and three more are scheduled Saturday. They include word processing at 1 p.m., spread sheets at 2 p.m. and small business accounting at 3 p.m.

George sees the computer business as a wide open field. Analysts are predicting a 200 to 300 percent growth he said. He said he and his partner are currently evaluating a fourth store site and would eventually like to have six or seven stores or a bigger chain.

The Wayne businessman said the computer chain is down-the-road oriented.

George said the business will literally become a home and office store. Business telephone systems and electronic products for home, farm and office needs are included in the plans.

ROBOTS ARE another possibility in the future plans of their business.

According to George, 80 percent of all new businesses go under in their first year. "We survived," he said.

George said the thing that has kept The Computer Farm going is that the business is miles ahead of many other computer stores. "We have experience under our belts and are in front of our competition. Our goal is to stay there. It's been tough at times but we're growing now. I learned a lot of hard lessons the first two or three months and then got a lot calmer."

Mystery farm, page from past features are added

Two new features have been added to Thursday editions of The Wayne Herald beginning this week.

Each Thursday we will publish an aerial photograph of a Wayne County farm. If you recognize the "mystery farm" as yours, stop by The Wayne Herald office and pick up a color, 4 by 5 aerial photo of your farm free of charge.

The Wayne Herald currently has a one-year supply of photos (52 in all) and will publish one each week. Keep your eyes open for your farm and win. The "mystery farm" feature begins with this issue of the Herald.

Also beginning in this issue of The Wayne Herald is a "page from the past" feature. The feature, which will appear in Thursday's editions, will reprint a page of The Wayne Herald or The Wayne Republican which was published sometime in the last century.

The page may have been published in the late 1890s, the early 1900s or any time between 1883 and 1983. The feature, which is sponsored by State National Bank and Trust Company, is in commemoration of Wayne's Centennial and will run once a week through the Centennial celebration.

School board approves 1983-84 budget

The Wayne Carroll Board of Education has approved a $2,329,742 budget for the 1983-84 school year, a total budget increase of $147,044 over the 1982-83 school year.

The approval came Tuesday night during the board's regular monthly meeting.

Superintendent Francis Haun said next year's budget calls for a state and local tax base increase of $125,656 or .0602 percent, excluding retirement fund costs.

That figure is $9,488 below the 7 percent lid imposed upon school districts.

Despite the tax base increase, Haun said the request for local property taxes is actually reduced $33,058 from the 1982-83 request of $1,311,090.

The reduction in local property taxes, according to Haun, is due to an increase of $43,599 in state aid and the anticipated full payment of non-resident high school tuition.

FOLLOWING A tour of the high school's new vocational shop addition, Haun reported on summer maintenance programs in the district.

He also reported that an external visitation team is scheduled to visit the school on Nov. 9 and 10.

The team's visit culminates self-evaluation of the school which is conducted every seven years.

Haun said the team is comprised of persons outside the school district and includes other school teachers, administrators, and state department personnel. They will prepare a written report following their visit in November.

BOARD PRESIDENT Becky Keidel reported on a town hall meeting she attended this month in Omaha. Keidel is part of a newly formed 30 member task force on the quality of education. Members of the task force were appointed by Governor Bob Kerrey.

The town hall meetings, conducted throughout the state by the task force, were designed to draw out public response on recommendations contained in the report "A Nation at Risk."

KEIDEL TOLD board members she was "very impressed with the orderly presentation and thoughtful testimony given during the meeting.

"We heard testimony both for and against every recommendation outlined in national report," said

Keidel, adding that subjects discussed at the town hall meeting ranged from merit pay for teachers to homework, the length of the school day and year, and requiring foreign language in the school.

Keidel said areas which persons attending the town hall meeting felt were not addressed well in the national report included vocational education and health and physical education.

Keidel told the board that the task force's job now is to prepare and submit a report to the Governor by the end of September.

IN OTHER ACTION Tuesday night, board members voted to retain Ken Olds as school attorney. The vote came following discussion of whether or not a different school attorney should be appointed every few years.

Voting to retain Olds were board members Arnold Emry, Jim Hummel, Cap Peterson, Neil Sandahl and Becky Keidel.

The lone dissenting vote was cast by board member Joyce Reeg.

REEG QUESTIONED the role of the school attorney and why the job was not shifted around to other attorneys every few years.

"One reason for retaining the same attorney would be because of his knowledge of the history of the school," said Keidel.

"From a personal standpoint," added Keidel, "I try to buy groceries at all the grocery stores and hardware at all the hardware stores, but we only have one family doctor and one attorney."

Board member Sandahl said he too felt that continuity was important.

"If we were dissatisfied that would be a different story," added Keidel, "but I really have no quarrel with the work that Mr. Olds has done."

BOARD MEMBER Cap Peterson said he could see problems ahead in the area of cases pending if a different school attorney was appointed every three or four years.

Before voting on the issue, board members asked Superintendent Haun his feelings on the issue.

"Very frankly," said Haun, "there are some attorneys out there that I cannot work with."

OTHER DISCUSSION included the availability of health insurance for board members.

Board member Peterson said the law states that health insurance must be made available to school board members should they choose to accept it.

Haun said he will draw up a policy concerning health insurance for board members and present it at next month's meeting.

In other action, the board agreed not to increase school lunch prices for the 1983-84 year.

Members voted to accept the low bid by Gillette Dairy for school milk.

Haun told board members he has been approached by St. Mary's School concerning the possibility of students there taking part in the school lunch program.

Haun said the price of lunch tickets would be the same for students of St. Mary's if they should choose to take part in the program.

BEFORE ADJOURNING, the board went into executive session to discuss personnel.

After reconvening, President Keidel appointed board member Arnold Emry to study staff development procedures and report to the board periodically.

Nebraskans don't understand tax spending

By Melvin Paul
Nebraska Press Association

How well do Nebraskans understand the way the state and local governments collect and spend their tax money?

Not very well, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension economist says.

'I'm afraid they don't have a very good sense,' said extension economist A.L. (Roy) Frederick recently.

AS EVIDENCE, Frederick told of a state senator who was berated recently by a constituent for an increase in state property taxes.

'We haven't had a state property tax in 15 years,' Frederick said, 'but that's an indication of where I think we are.'

Frederick said the NU extension service has revised its efforts to raise the level of public understanding of the tax system by producing additional publications about taxation and government spending in Nebraska.

The extension service recently published a 23-page report by Frederick and Bruce B.

Johnson, associate professor of economics entitled 'State and Local Government Finances in Nebraska.'

The booklet provides facts, mostly in tabular form, about taxation and spending trends in Nebraska and nationally.

FREDERICK SAID he and Johnson avoided making value judgments in the booklet. Instead, the goal in preparing it was to provide citizens with a factual background upon which they are able to make their own judgments about state and local fiscal policies.

Frederick said he considers publication of the booklet particularly timely.

'Over the last couple of years, there has been a real interest in how we're going to match up revenues with expenditures at the state level and locally,' he said.

Frederick said NU has been involved in public education about taxation in the past, particularly when the state abandoned the property tax in the mid-1960s for the current sales and income tax system. Its renewed interest has nothing to do with its tight general fund budgets which it has endured in recent years.

'I HOPE PEOPLE don't view this as self-serving,' he said. 'We were trying very hard not to make that any part of it.'

Among the highlights in the booklet:

—In 1980, state and local governments in Nebraska raised 10.6 percent more revenue on a per capita basis than 10 years earlier. The figure includes revenue from state and local taxes and from federal aid. Total general revenue of state and local governments in 1980 was $2.4 billion, compared to $911 million in 1970.

—The decade of the 1970s saw the overall state-local tax-burden shift somewhat from local property taxes to the state sales and income taxes. In 1970, property taxes accounted for 52.6 percent of all state and local tax collections. Ten years later, the percentage was 41.6 percent.

—State aid to local government, or the programs in which state sales and income tax revenue is used to offset the need for local property taxes, was $306.5 million in 1980, a $180 million increase from 1972. The increases came mainly in school aid, highway aid and reimbursement by the state for homestead and personal property tax exemptions.

FREDERICK SAID the extension service is planning other tax education initiatives, including publication of a state-local finances handbook and users would periodically receive updated material by mail. Such an effort would have to be funded by fees, Frederick said.

The list of NebGuides, the free, mass distribution pamphlets issued by the extension service, will be expanded to include more tax topics, he said. Among likely new titles is one which explains simply how the property tax system works.

'State and Local Government Finances in Nebraska' is available at no charge at county extension offices or by mail from Frederick at UN-L.

Big shoes to fill

More than a decade of management has come to an end with the resignation of Marlyn Koch as manager of the Wayne County Fair Board.

The position of fair board manager is a thankless job. Much burden and responsibility is placed on the manager's shoulders. Like too many positions, he is often criticized and rarely thanked.

Marlyn, a Wayne mailman, put in 13 years of hard work. He was dedicated to making Wayne County's fair the best possible. Yet, he always watched expenditures closely to make sure they weren't excessive.

During Koch's term as manager of the board, the Wayne County fairgrounds have seen considerable growth yet tax support declined. New buildings and improvements were added to the grounds in those 13 years.

Wayne County fairgoers have been blessed with excellent facilities, good entertainment and well-run fairs. Success has been the result of the efforts of many outstanding individuals. No one individual could make the fair the success it is. It took lots of work and selfless efforts from many people. Marlyn was one of them.

Each individual who serves on the fair board deserves lots of credit. It's a task few people are willing to undertake.

A new fair board manager must be selected. It won't be easy to find an individual willing to spend time and serve with dedication. Filling Marlyn's shoes will be a difficult task.

A security blanket

Falling prices for gasoline and home heating oil are welcome news for both the consumer and the economy. However, America must not be lulled into a false sense of energy security by these recent developments.

Many of the factors that led to the current softness in the oil market are clearly transitory and could easily reverse without warning. Indeed, it would be a serious mistake to interpret the apparent oil glut as proof that supplies will continue to be plentiful, and that it no longer is necessary for the United States to prepare for future oil supply disruptions.

The United States first became vulnerable to shortfalls in oil supplies during the 1960s. As a result of failing reserves in America and rising demand worldwide, the excess productive capacity of the U.S. slowly was stripped away.

The full impact of this change became painfully clear following the Arab oil embargo in 1973. Previously, the U.S. could increase production to make up for shortfalls in the world supply of oil. However, this time surplus production capacity could not accommodate the demand for oil. As a result, prices skyrocketed.

Oil supply shortfalls also followed the Iranian revolution and the Iran-Iraq war. As a result, prices again climbed upward, reaching $35 per barrel.

It is only now, a decade after the Arab oil embargo, that we are beginning to see the forces of supply and demand again affect the price of oil.

Numerous factors will certainly have an effect on future oil supplies. Venezuela recently announced that it is scaling down its massive development of the Orinoco heavy oil field — a reservoir estimated to contain as much as 2 trillion barrels of oil.

In the United States, Exxon recently cancelled its $6 billion oil shale project in Colorado that would have produced as much as 50,000 barrels per day. And the U.S. oil drilling rig rate, which hit a peak in December of 1981 has since declined by nearly 50 percent.

Energy conservation projects, which had been undertaken under the expectation of higher prices, are becoming less attractive due to the expectation of lower prices.

Also, consumers are beginning to shift away from smaller, fuel efficient cars back to the larger and relatively less fuel efficient vehicles for the same reason.

So, before efforts to conserve energy and develop alternative fuels are abandoned, it's important to consider that the current oil glut is unlikely to persist indefinitely.

If the U.S. bases its energy emergency preparedness policy on current levels of oil consumption and imports — and not on what the country will be consuming and importing once the economic health is restored — America could very well find itself back in the same vulnerable situation it faced during the 1973 oil embargo.

More than ever, now is the time to act to make sure America is not over the barrel during future oil supply disruptions.

A beef animal is not all steak

By Cheryl Slubbendick
Nebraska Farm Bureau

Shoppers complain about food prices in general, but if they single out one particular food, it's often steak that's deplored for its high price. Recently I saw a woman pick up a package of sirloin, check its price and put it back. She looked at me and said, 'Look what they're asking for a piece of steak. Can you believe it?'

Certainly I could, and there's a reason for it. Perhaps I should have caught up with the woman at the frozen food case, where she put a package of frozen shrimp into her cart without a second glance. (I took a second look later and saw that pound for pound, the shrimp was nearly twice the price of sirloin.)

One of the reasons steak is comparatively expensive is — this will not be news to many to you — a beef animal is not all steak. In fact, it's the non-steak portion that keeps steak prices at a reasonable level. Let's take a look at what a 1,000 pound live steer yields. (My thanks to the Salt Institute for this analysis.)

THAT STEER will yield about a 600 pound carcass and about 450 pounds of retail cuts. The choice steaks include about 45 pounds of sirloin steak and 35 pounds of T bone, porterhouse and club steaks. For a total of 80 pounds. Then there's about 65 pounds of round steak, although, of course, it's not as highly desirable as the other steaks. So, from a 1,000 pound animal, there's a maximum of 145 pounds of steak — hence the reason for the higher price of steak.

The carcass will also yield about 170 pounds of roast, 45 pounds of hamburger and about 90 pounds of stew meat and miscellaneous cuts.

The remaining 150 pounds supplies important by products. The edible ones include the variety meats, also stock and oleo oil for use in margarine and bakers shortening and oleostearine for making chewing gum and some kinds of candies.

Gelatin from bones, horns and skins is used in making ice cream, marshmallows, canned meals and gelatin desserts. In testines are used for natural sausage and for surgical sutures.

OTHER INEDIBLE by products include pharmaceuticals used for such important drugs as insulin and ACTH. Hides are used for leather, felt, certain textiles, as a base for many ointments, as binders for plaster and asphalt and as a base for insulation material. Hair goes for production of insulation and for rug pads, artists' brushes and camel hair brushes.

Inedible fats are used in industrial oils and lubricants, in soaps and glycerine, face and hand creams and lipsticks, and as fillow for tanning. Fatty acids are used in production of chemicals, detergents and pesticides, while steric acid is used to make tires run cooler and last longer.

Bones, horns and hooves end up in but tons, bone china, piano keys, glues and adhesives, animal feeds, and fertilizer, neatsfoot oil, paper, emery cloth, sand papers, combs, toothbrushes and violin strings.

All of these by products are called the 'fifth quarter' of the beef animal. It's this quarter which determines whether beef producers make enough profit to stay in business or not. It allows them to sell the carcass beef at wholesale for less than the live animal cost.

So, the next time you pick up a package of steak, remember that the other parts of the animal must also find a use, so the price of steak doesn't go too high.

Medium's messenger becomes message

By Wm. Alexander Hamilton

The death of ABC's Washington anchor man, Frank Reynolds, is noted with deep regret. People from every walk of life, to include President Reagan, have taken time to commemorate his life and his passing.

All of this attention says several things. It tells us, Frank Reynolds, was very special. He was special not because he was a broad cast journalist who pursued the truth with vigor (we have an abundance of those who will do anything for a story) but because he cared about accuracy and fairplay.

But, most of all, Frank Reynolds, was a gentleman. He knew the location of that fine boundary, between some news director's desire for improved ratings and good taste.

FRANK REYNOLDS was more than a journeyman reporter, he was a skilled commentator who had his own viewpoint. To his credit, he never tried to pass off his own views as news. While one may not always agree with his interpretation of events and their causes, to this observer, Frank Reynolds, showed the least cant, the least political bias and the most objectivity of the national television news anchors. And yes, Virginia, that includes Walter Cronkite.

And yet, the attention paid to the passing of Frank Reynolds, has a meaning going beyond the celebration of the work of this distinguished broadcast journalist and news anchorman. It tells us the medium of television has become central to our existence. The late Marshall McLuhan told us: 'The medium is the message.' That oft repeated sentence simply means the act of being on television says more than the words spoken by the person on camera or his or her actions.

We ascribe 'almost magical' powers to those who appear on television. We may not know what they are doing there. Indeed, they may be on camera for performing some heinous deed. But, warts and all (or beauty spots) there they are in living color. It is something akin to the old political saying of, 'I don't care what they write as long as they spell the name correctly.'

Historically, those who bring the news have not always fared so well. In ancient times, it was not unknown for the King who did not like the message to kill the messenger.

TODAY'S TELEVISION messenger may not, in all cases, be liked, but he or she is treated with deference and, sometimes, feared. How would you like to arrive at your place of work and find Mike Wallace and a television camera crew camped on your doorstep?

What Mike Wallace and his band of rumor mongers choose to film may not qualify as news but the fact a subject is the object of his attention makes it news. All of this may have an Alice in Wonderland ring to it but, as Walter Cronkite used to say, 'And that's the way it is.'

And that is the way most Americans obtain what they know about the world about them. Frank Reynolds was quick to point out how shallow and fleeting is television's treatment of the events of our day. Perhaps, that is why he worked so hard to bring us his most careful and painstaking distillation of what the actors on the world's stage said and did.

Frank Reynolds, the messenger, became the message because the medium he served so well has become so important. Television news can both enlighten and destroy. In the hands of Frank Reynolds, it was the medium to enlightenment.

End season at 24-8

Sixth inning homer kills Jr's title hopes

By Kevin O'Hanlon
Wayne's Junior Legion baseball team saw its hopes of a state championship snuffed out last Sunday as a three-run homer in the sixth inning broke open a tight game and gave Lincoln Arnies a 5-2 victory.

The loss knocked Wayne from the double-elimination tourney. Wayne lost its opening-round contest 14-2 to Ogallala on Friday afternoon but came back to defeat Lexington 9-4 in a loser's bracket game played Saturday.

Wayne coach Hank Overin said the losses, while disappointing, by no means took the luster off of the season. Wayne finished with a 24-8 record.

"I WAS really proud of the way our kids played and kept their composure in the area and state tournaments," Overin said.

Games against Ord and Lincoln Arnies were marred with incidents of opposing players arguing with the umpires.

"Our team really went a long way, especially when you realize that we only had two pitchers (Todd Schwartz and Todd Pfeiffer) to carry the load on the mound most of the season," Overin said.

Dennis Lebock appeared in relief several times, but not without considerable shuffling of the infield positions.

SATURDAY'S GAME against Lexington was delayed for almost two hours as a slow-moving weather system, accompanied by a steady rain, soaked the field.

As soon as the rain stopped, the umpires signaled for Wayne to come to bat and the game began.

After leaving two men on, it looked as if the game might turn out like the loss to Ogallala.

Lexington's first man up popped out to Jeff McCright in center field before the next two men got on with a single to shallow center and a base on balls.

Jim Gierhan then smashed a ground-rule double to score two runs before Rex Schnacker smacked a full-count single to right field to give Lexington a 3-0 lead going into the second.

Wayne countered with a pair of runs in the second as Mark Kubik got on with a fielder's choice that saw Randy Gamble out at second.

First baseman Tim Heier added base hit and both runners advanced on a passed ball before Jeff Jorgensen took a base on balls to load the bases.

ANOTHER PASSED BALL allowed the runners to advance and Kubik to score. Todd Pfeiffer slugged a single to score Heier as Wayne pulled within one at 3-2.

Lexington went down in order to end the second stanza.

Wayne came to bat again and catcher

Dennis Lebock blasted a full-count single down the third base line and then went to second as Lexington's first baseman was charged with an error.

Jon Meierhenry followed with a walk and Lexington-Rex Schnacker to the mound.

Third baseman Randy Gamble went down swinging with a full count for the first out.

Mark Kubik got on as his pop fly to center field was dropped for another Lexington error and two Wayne runs.

TIM HEIER took a base on balls as one run walked in and Wayne took the lead at 5-3.

Lexington's Schnacker sent the ball sailing over Jeff McCright's head and out of the ball park with two outs in the third to put the score at 5-4.

Lexington's pitching began to falter in the fourth as three walks and a passed ball allowed Wayne to tally a pair of runs.

Lexington managed several threats during the remainder of the game but Wayne's defense stiffened and held the opponents scoreless.

Wayne added a pair of assurance runs in the seventh inning off of base hits by Pfeiffer, McCright, Schwartz and Jorgensen put the final tally at 9-4.

THE CONTEST against Lincoln Arnies on Sunday afternoon was knotted at 1-1 until a three-run homer in the sixth inning set Lincoln Arnies up for the 5-2 win.

The first inning saw Wayne take a 1-0 lead as Todd Schwartz's sacrifice sent Todd Pfeiffer home. Pfeiffer had singled and advanced on an error and a base hit by Jeff McCright.

A solo home run by Lincoln Arnies' Rich Morris began the side in the second, but the next batter grounded out to Pfeiffer at short stop and Schwartz fanned the next two men.

The defenses then tightened up and it looked as if the game was headed for extra innings after five.

Lincoln Arnies' first man up in the sixth went down swinging before Doug Lierz singled. He was followed aboard as Greg Jablonske took advantage of an error.

A BASE HIT by Rich Morris scored one run and the second out came as Steve Smith filed out to Dorcey in right field.

Center fielder Phil Shirley then blasted his home run as Lincoln Arnies took a 5-1 lead into the seventh.

Wayne managed a solo run in the seventh as Randy Gamble doubled off of an error charged to the center fielder.

One out later, Gamble went home as Tim Heier belted a double.

That proved to be Wayne's last hurrah though, as the game ended with the score at 5-2.

Wayne Legion baseball coach Hank Overin said that he expects next year's Junior team to be as competitive as the 1983 squad, despite losing seven starters.

"We'll probably be in the same position as we were this year," Overin said.

The team returns starters Jeff Jorgensen at second base and Randy Gamble at third. Pat Melena, Dave Longe and Todd Dorcey all played important back up rolls this season and will be the nucleus of next year's team.

"We'll have a good starting line up and will probably be lacking a little depth next year," Overin said.

Players stepping up to the Junior ranks from Wayne's Midget team that made it to the Area playoffs are Steve Overin, Chris Wieseler, Jeff Sherer, Kevin Maly, Pete Warne, Darrin Barner, Jon McCright and Rick Nelson.

Nelson was selected as the Midget's Most Improved Player this year.

WAYNE'S JEFF Jorgensen scores against Lexington as Todd Schwartz watches and catcher Jim Gierhan waits for the throw. Wayne won the loser's bracket contest, played on Saturday afternoon after a rain delay, and knocked Lexington out of the tournament.

JEFF McCRIGHT is safe at third base, but not by much. Lincoln Arnies won the contest 5-2 with a three-run homer by Phil Shirley in the sixth inning.

Winning is easy. Hell, anybody can be a winner.

How true. How true. The above quote came from Wayne Junior Legion baseball coach Hank Overin.

Overin has seen his share of wins and losses during his playing career in AAA baseball and the 23 years he's coached Legion baseball.

I devoted an entire column to the subject of poor sportsmanship last week. After spending three days at the Class B state tournament, I think the subject needs more attention.

I hope they see it. If this somehow works its way down to Lincoln and somebody associated with the Legion tournament, I'll feel like I've accomplished something.

The Wayne vs. Lincoln Arnie game last Sunday was an embarrassment to what the Legion baseball stands for.

All the players took the American Legion "Code of Sportsmanship" before their first tournament game.

It goes like this: "I will keep the rules, keep faith in my comrades, keep my temper, keep myself fit, keep a stout heart in defeat, keep my pride under victory, keep a sound soul, a clean mind and a healthy body."

I thought that was bad. I assume that the players from Lincoln Arnie took the oath. I also assume that most of them have a reasonable command of the English language and can understand what the oath means.

Or maybe they took the oath on "How to act like a bunch of prime donnas."

I thought the display of poor sportsmanship exhibited by Ord at the district tournament was bad, but the team from Lincoln took the cake.

These guys cried and complained, threw helmets and bats, kicked the dirt, rolled their eyes, groaned — you name it.

The first base umpire finally had his fill of it and ejected a Lincoln Arnie player for yelling "Jesus!" after a call at first. (He could have yanked several others.)

At that point, one of the fans from Lincoln standing along the fence got on the umpire.

The umpire wasn't in the mood.

"If you don't watch it, you're going to be gone too," he told the fan.

The fan shot back: "You can't do that!"

Police escort. By that time it was obvious that the umpire was ready to lower the boom on the twit. (I wish he would.)

I told the Lincoln cooler that I had seen more than one umpire range a police escort out of the park for boisterous fans.

"Aw hell," he replied, "that's what the game is all about."

you've GOT to argue with the umpires!

No you don't. In all the sporting events I've played in or watched, I have always marveled at the dedication of the umpires and referees.

The umpires are out there because they love the game. Sure they get paid, but I'm sure they could list a hundred other more enjoyable ways to spend an afternoon than standing out in 100-degree heat listening to a bunch of spoiled kids bellyache about whether a pitch was higher than the batter's armpits or not.

A friend of mine from Lincoln accompanied me to the tournament and said he was embarrassed by Lincoln Arnie's display. Just play ball!

Hank Overin told me "something's going to have to be done." "It's not like the old days when the kids just went out and played ball," Overin said.

"This year, more so than any other year I've been to the state tourney, the sportsmanship just hasn't been there," he added. Overin said that he thinks part of the problem might be caused by parents expecting too much out of kids.

"They create so much pressure to win that they're taking the fun out of the game," Overin said.

"You and I can go out and play tennis and jump the net and glad-hand everybody as long as we're winning," he said. "It takes a man to be a loser. I was proud of the way our team stood up and took the loss like men."

Listen to Vic. Above my desk is a copy of an article by Vic Gold titled "Here's to the Losers" which appeared in Penthouse magazine several years ago.

It concerns the over-emphasis that Americans often place on winning. Gold knows a lot about losing. He was press secretary for Barry Goldwater and Spiro Agnew.

Gold writes: "I am a Sham fan (remember when he lost to Secretariat after running neck-and-neck for most of the Preakness?). And a Joe Frazier fan. And a Shirley Babishoff fan (four silver medals and they call her a loser). And a Bud Grant fan (four trips to the Super Bowl and as many losses). And a fan of all the kids whom we've screwed up with our ethic and who've missed the extra point or free throw, taken a third strike, run second or third or fast in the race — but not for want of effort, character or God's grace."

"Of that last point, I'm sure. For we have gone through enough in this country since 1960 to know that winning isn't everything, PERIOD — that sometimes the price isn't worth the game. Enough to teach our kids that if they should ever miss a fourth and one, it's no disgrace, for the true measure of the character of a person or a nation is not always in terms of what is obtained."

Enough, that is, to know that God, when all is added up, must love losers. He made so many of them."

He made Lincoln's Arnie didn't he?

Exposure aids cycle

People using artificial insemination in the beef industry who do not have bulls around cows prior to or during the breeding season may be "missing the boat," said a University of Nebraska associate professor of animal science.

James Kinder said because males stimulate cows to exhibit estrous cycles or go into "heat" earlier, putting sterilized bulls in with cows prior to artificial insemination could result in more cows cycling.

Only 80 percent of the cows wean calves that are exposed to bulls during the breeding season, he said. By exposing cows to bulls earlier, more cows will initiate estrous cycles, possibly resulting in a higher conception rate. Cows would be in heat more times during the breeding season, Kinder explained.

In a paper presented at the 75th annual meeting of the American Society for Animal Science at Washington State University July 29, Kinder said exposure of cows to intact or non-castrated bulls during the early postpartum or post-calving period shortens the interval from calving to initiation of estrous cycles.

Kinder said a two-year study was conducted in 1981-82 in which cows were randomly assigned by calving date and bred into two treatment groups: Eighty cows were exposed to mature, intact bulls from three to 85 days following calving.

Seventy-five cows weren't exposed to bulls until 53 days following calving, he added. Records of calving dates were kept to estimate conception rates at the estrous associated with the first postpartum estrous cycle.

"Cows, exposed to bulls at three days postpartum, initiated estrous cycles 41 days following calving; cows, not exposed to bulls until 53 days postpartum, initiated estrous cycles 62 days postpartum," he explained.

Kinder said the conception rate for the estrous associated with the first postpartum estrous cycle in the first year was 53.3 percent for cows exposed to bulls at three days postpartum, which is somewhat lower than the usual 60 percent conception rate.

ONE OF THE highlights of the University of Nebraska's 32nd annual Tractor Power and Safety Day July 28, was a demonstration of the safe use of three-wheelers on the farm. Here Richard Goodding, NU extension youth and safety specialist, describes the three-wheelers provided and ridden by members of the Piston Pushers 4-H Club of Saunders County. The event was held at the NU Field Lab near Mead.

Wheat program details given

Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has announced options for the 1984 wheat program, pending legislation presently under consideration by the Congress.

Block listed general guidelines for next year's program on July 1 which permitted farmers to make preliminary planting decisions and financial commitments for their crop, while the Congress continued deliberations on target price freeze proposals.

Since legislative action on the proposed target price freeze is now before the U.S. Senate, it is up to the Congress to decide which option they want to choose, Block said. "It is important to get this issue resolved to assist farmers in making their management decisions."

HE LISTED the following 1984 wheat program options:

— If new legislation freezes the target price at $4.30 per bushel, the acreage reduction requirement will be 25 percent and there will be a payment-in-kind program of 10- to 25 percent for farmers who divert additional land. The payment-in-kind compensation will be 80 percent of the program yield.

— If Congress does not freeze target prices and the target price automatically escalates to $4.45 per bushel, the acreage reduction requirement will be 30 percent and there will be a payment-in-kind program of 10- to 20 percent for farmers who divert additional land. The payment-in-kind com-and purchase rate will be 75 percent of the program yield.

Producers participating in the payment-in-kind program and having both reserve and regular loan grain would be required to make their reserve grain available for PIK. Those farmers who have neither will be eligible for participation in the payment-in-kind program by volunteering to harvest for payment-in-kind.

IN ADDITION:
— Land taken out of production must be devoted to a conservation use. This land must be acreage that have been devoted to small grains or row crops in 1984.
— The national average loan and purchase rate will be $3.30 per bushel. The Food and Agriculture Act of 1981 permits the loan rate to be set at this level since the season's average price for the 1983 crop is expected to be less than 105 percent of current loan rate.

Block said the current loan rate is above market clearing levels and places U.S. producers at a competitive disadvantage in world markets.

"This reduction will begin to restore competitiveness in world markets and send a signal to our export competitors that we will no longer maintain a 'high price umbrella' which allows them to undercut us in the world market," Block said.

Cattle can be checked

Test detects antibiotic residues

Farmers or veterinarians can now check live cattle on the farm for traces of antibiotic residues a simple test developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The easy-to-perform test shows overnight whether animals are free of problem residues and ready for slaughter.

"The Live Animal Swab Test Last — is the first tool available to quickly and inexpensively check for antibiotics before slaughter, and will decrease the possibility of animals with violative residues going to slaughter," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service, the agency responsible for federal inspection of meat and poultry.

"UNTIL NOW, residues could be detected only by laboratory tests of carcass tissue if violative levels were found, carcasses were condemned," he said. "Producers can avoid such violations by performing LAST routinely, as the 'last' step before the animal leaves the farm," said Houston.

"LAST requires no laboratory know-how and most supplies are not costly. Farmers can buy an incubator or make one from a picnic cooler or a heavy cardboard box," Houston said.

The test can be performed on urine from cows, calves and heifers. USDA scientists are working on a similar test for blood from cattle and other species and are developing a feed test as well.

"The test is performed using a petri dish, a harmless type of bacteria, cotton swabs and a small paper disc containing the antibiotic neomycin," Houston said. "The farmer coats the gel in the petri dish with the bacteria and places the neomycin disc on the gel. Then cotton swabs are dipped in the urine sample and put on the plate to incubate overnight. The incubator's warmth permits the bacteria to grow on the gel except where antibiotics are present."

HOUSTON SAID producer organizations have joined USDA in encouraging farmers to perform LAST routinely and to market animals only after the test shows no antibiotics are present. When the test shows antibiotics, the animal should be retested in two or three days.

"The test is adapted from the Swab Test on Premises — STOP — which USDA inspectors use in slaughterhouses to check carcasses for antibiotics," said Houston. "STOP has been used on cull dairy cows since early 1979 and was expanded to all types of animals under USDA inspection in 1982."

Step-by-step instructions for performing the LAST test and for building incubators are available from the Publications office, FSIS-TLA, Room 1163-S, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250. The instructions are available in USDA Handbook No. 601, "How to Perform the Live Animal Swab Test for Antibiotic Residues," or on an audio-tape cassette of the same name.

"Last year Nebraska's independent PCAs paid over $2,100,000 in taxes."

"Ask the person who really knows. Ask a PCA member!"

It's because the 14 independent PCAs in Nebraska are taxpayers like other private enterprises.

Some people incorrectly believe that PCAs are government organizations or agencies. Far from it, PCAs are simply financial services cooperatives. Our Association is wholly-owned and financially supported by local producers. We lend both our own reserves and money raised through the sale of non-government bonds in the nation's money markets... Wall Street. If loans aren't repaid, or we have a loss, local members end up footing the bill!

So, we operate our Association on a sound and business-like basis. Our directors, who are PCA members and borrowers, are elected by local members to set policy for the Association and hire professional management. This gives us the kind of direction which enables PCA to serve our own producers better.

and more completely through a professionally run organization.

PCAs are not alike. Although all of the 423 PCAs in the United States are operated under the same rules and regulations, like many businesses and industries today, each is independent and has its own management style based on the needs of the local producers. Our PCA is unique.

Yes, we did pay taxes. Nebraska's PCAs also returned $204,046 to Nebraska PCA members in 1982 in addition to providing professional quality financial services.

For many producers in Nebraska, PCA is smart business. That's why we say... PCA is for people who make a business out of agriculture.

Find out for yourself.

"GO AWAY FLY, I'M TRYING to work," says little Ann Cautrell of Coleridge. Ann was a guest at Craft Night Monday at the Winside city auditorium, sponsored by the Winside Public Library. Craft Night was just one of eight special "Super Reader" programs sponsored this summer by the library for youngsters of the community. Other special programs, which have been held each Monday evening, include Artist's Night, a program on the history of aviation presented by Bob Carlisle of Norfolk, Hobby Night, Science Night, Cook's Night and Athlete's Night. The grand finale program on Aug. 15 will include the presentation of "Super Reader" awards, a scavenger hunt and campfire in the park. Residents searched for shade as high temperatures plagued the area.

Small town throws big festival

The town of Dixon celebrated in style Sunday afternoon. The community of 123 residents put on a parade twice as long as the town, set up a dunking booth, held a small carnival, hosted a kids tractor pull and held a frog jumping contest in which one of its contestants literally croaked. Only two participants were entered in the frog jumping contest which took place on Main Street. The frog owned and trained by Bren Mattes won the contest by forfeit when a load which was entered was declared dead at the starting gate. Following the half-hour parade, residents lined Main Street to watch youngsters battle it out in the kids tractor pull. The day's activities ended with a charity softball game between the Dixon Demons and the KCAU Major 9 Heavy Hitters. The game dedicated the newly established ball park. The event was co sponsored by the Dixon Community Improvement Committee and the Aid Association of Lutherans Laurel branch.

Okubanjios

On behalf of my family and I, I want to express our most sincere thanks for the cooperation, care, understanding and unusual support we enjoyed from such wonderful people that occupy the City of Wayne.

Much as it is unfair to single out individual persons, it will be an act of neglect if we fail to place on record the contributions of the Wayne State College Authorities, First Baptist Church Congregation, the Mayor and City Council, the Chamber of Commerce, the Wayne High School, Wayne Elementary School, The Kiddie World, Providence Medical Center, Wayne Family Practice, Bentback Clinic and all our friends at The Wayne Herald.

We leave Wayne with pleasant memories and we shall miss your pleasant company. We say with pride and joy that Nebraska is indeed the Heart of America.

My husband joins me in saying goodbye. We shall meet again.
May God continue to bless you all.

Mrs. Edith Dettun-Okubanjo BSc.

Waiting just one more year to start an IRA will cost George $43,467.

There are rewards for starting an Individual Retirement Account early. When you do, you build more security into your retirement.

If George opens his IRA at age 25, (based on 9.50% annual interest) a $100 monthly deposit will provide him with retirement funds of $487,645 at age 65. Beginning his IRA at age 26 would provide funds of $444,178 — a loss of $43,467 for delaying one year.

Choose a plan to suit your budget now. Even $25 a month becomes a substantial retirement fund and every penny you deposit in your Federally-insured Midwest Federal IRA is deducted from your 1983 taxable income.

Midwest Federal charges no fees or commissions. Stop in our office and we'll show you what your IRA can grow to if you begin now.
