Council discusses Wayne FD pagers and street paving

The Wayne Volunteer Fire Department may be getting a new paging system to replace its present system. That was the proposal presented Tuesday night at the Wayne City Council meeting. Councilmen Keith Moseley and Jim Craun were absent from the meeting.

Wayne Fire Chief Ken "Dutch" Sizman, who officially was appointed fire chief Tuesday night, told the council that its present system, which is about five years old, is no longer being built.

THE DEPARTMENT has reviewed a Motorola replacement paging system which City Administrator Phil Kloster said has much better quality and is more reliable. The new system will cost slightly over $15,000.

A lottery update was presented by Kloster at Tuesday's meeting. He said that the list of vendors has been increased to 75, from as far away as South Yankton, Norfolk, Tekamah and South Sioux City.

According to Kloster, a concerted effort will be made throughout this week to increase the number of outlets to 100.

THE ADMINISTRATOR pointed out that lotteries are strictly "a numbers game." It takes more outlets for more ticket sales and more ticket sales for more profitability, he said.

Learning sessions are planned in the next two weeks in which city officials can meet with representatives of Papillion, Beatrice, Waverly and South Sioux City.

Kloster said the city is looking for organizations or businesses that are interested in becoming vendors.

"We have taken a cautious go at it and our approach will continue to be cautious until we see the light," said Mayor Wayne Marsh.

THE COUNCIL passed an ordinance which paves the way for street improvement in the southeast area of Wayne.

Plans call for paving on Fairground Avenue and South Windom Street to be done by the State of Nebraska. Wayne will be responsible for 25 percent of the project's cost. The ordinance makes it possible for the city to assess its share to adjoining property owners.

Kloster said construction of the eight-inch deep concrete street should take place next year.

A bid date for an electric distribution building is set for Oct. 11. Bids will be opened at that time for construction of a structure which will be used for meter testing, parts storage, vehicle storage, work space and other purposes.

The council approved the engineer's estimate of the project and advertisement of the bid letting. Completion date of the project is set at Dec. 15.

IN OTHER ACTION, the council:

—appointed Dean Bruggeman Jr. to the Wayne Recreation Board to fill an extra seat that was added to the board.

—passed ordinances dealing with public meetings, creation of improvement districts and discontinuance of utilities. The ordinances update the city's codes.

—publicly thanked Coast-To-Coast owners Jack and Leslie Hausmann for a flag which they presented to the city. "We're in need of it," Kloster told the council.

—placed on the next meeting's agenda, discussion of the current retirement program for city employees. Changes made by the Social Security office may force a change in the city's retirement program plan.

—listened to Mayor Marsh pass along a thank you from Nigerian Chief Okubanjo and his wife, Edith. She graduated from Wayne State last month.

Former county commissioner is found dead at his home

Ken Eddie, 73, of Carroll, was found dead near his home Tuesday afternoon.

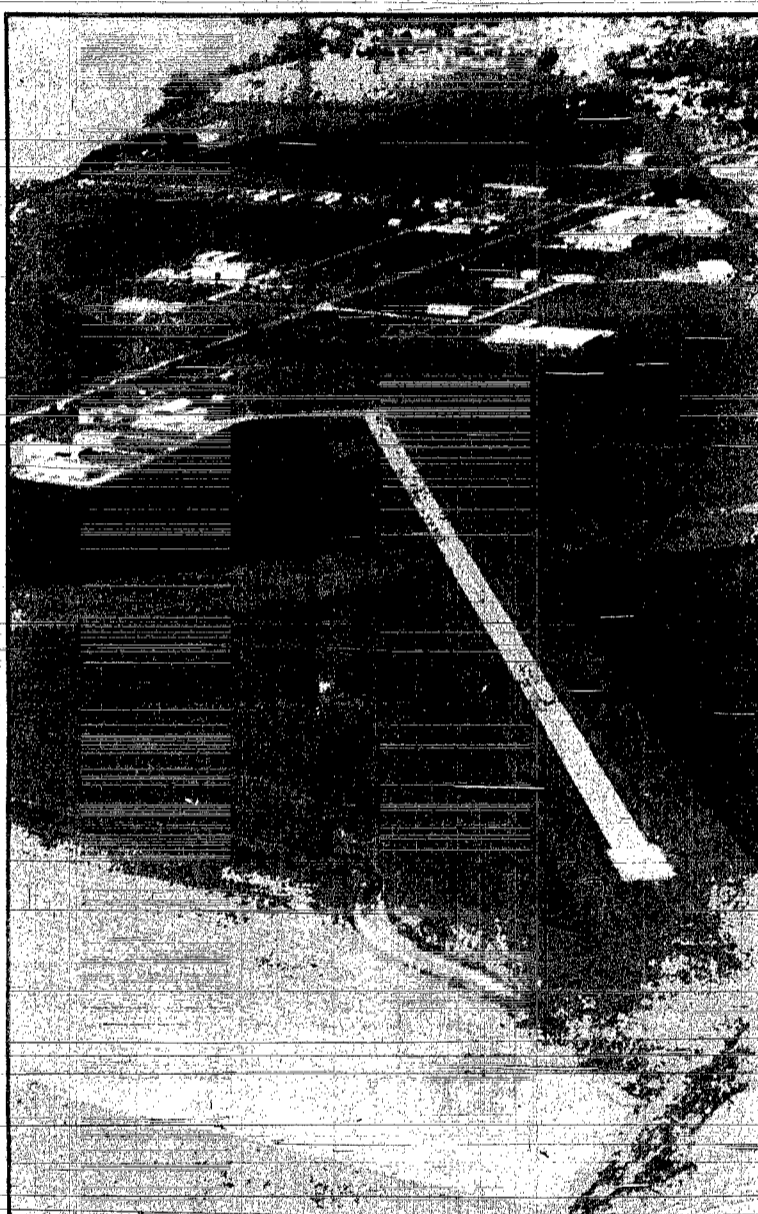

County attorney Bob Ensz said it appears the former Wayne County commissioner died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound. An autopsy is being conducted in Sioux City to determine the exact cause of death.

Eddie's body was found at approximately 2:30 p.m. Tuesday near a shed behind his house. Ensz said it is believed Eddie died sometime Monday afternoon or evening.

The Wayne County Sheriff's office investigated the death. Sheriff LeRoy Janssen was out of town Wednesday and could not be reached for comments.

Eddie resigned from his commissioner's post on Tuesday, June 7. Services are pending at Hiscox-Schumacher Funeral Home.

Aid available Bid accepted for airport runway work

A proposed Wayne Municipal Airport improvement project got a green light this week, clearing the way for takeoff. The Wayne Airport Authority Board, at its monthly meeting Monday, conditionally accepted the low bid on a project that will result in a 500-foot extension of the runway.

Also included is widening each side of the existing runway by five feet and overlaying it. The runway is presently 2,900 feet long.

A FEDERAL grant will pay for 90 percent of the project, state money will cover 5 percent and the other 5 percent will be the local share of the project.

Mitch Nissen, chairman of the Wayne board, said grading could begin this fall if all goes well. Referring to an earlier project, he reported that a newly built six-bay hangar is now completed and usable.

Dean Craun, a member of the board, said the project was originally expected to cost about $261,000. The federal grant would have been $234,900 with state and local monies totaling $13,500 each.

The engineer's estimate of the construction phase of the project was approximately $200,000. That figure included grading, paving, lighting and a runway extension.

Two bids for construction were opened by the Wayne Airport Authority Board Monday night. The board accepted the low bid of $293,047.25 which was submitted by Western Materials Company of Harlan, Iowa. The other bid of $350,088.85 was submitted by Bower Construction of Sioux City.

CRAUN SAID the large increase in construction cost was caused because of the cost of asphalt. Engineers estimated asphalt would cost $20 a ton. Western Material submitted a cost of $37.50 a ton.

The amount of asphalt needed is small by comparisons with highway and street construction, Craun pointed out. It is considered too small to warrant setting up an asphalt plant in Wayne so the asphalt will be shipped from Sioux City, making it more expensive, he said.

Land acquisition was estimated by the engineer to cost $22,000. The appraised value of the land is about $38,000, lacking another $16,000 on to the cost of the project.

The increased cost of the entire project at first appeared to throw a wrench into plans. But, a representative of the Federal Aviation Administration told the engineer he is confident the grant can be increased.

CRAUN SAID the FAA has funds left over from some projects which weren't carried out in other communities. The organization wants to use up those funds before the end of this fiscal year.

Dave Ley, secretary of the board, said Wednesday morning that he has been informed Wayne will be awarded the grant money if its project cost is reduced slightly to $372,000.

Federal funds will amount to $334,800. The state and local shares will be $18,000 each, he said.

The federal funds are general aviation funds accumulated by aviation gas tax. Craun said. He added that pilots have paid the taxes over the years.

Local funds are covered by a cash flow and from funds that have been budgeted.

Lawsuit protesting non-resident tuition is dismissed

Members of the Wayne-Carroll Board of Education learned Tuesday night that a lawsuit filed during the summer of 1982 has been dismissed.

The litigation, which was initiated by tax payers in Wayne County from Class I districts, protested the amount of non-resident tuition paid by Class I district residents.

The case was one of many across the state brought against county governments, but ultimately aimed at high school boards.

Superintendent Francis Haun told board members Tuesday night that the suit was officially dismissed because it was not properly filed. He added that court costs were assessed back to the original filers.

Haun said although approximately $2,000 in interest on money held in escrow while the lawsuit was pending is to be returned to the school district, he was recently informed by Wayne County Attorney Bob Ensz that funds are not available to pay the interest.

BOARD MEMBERS also learned Tuesday night that the district may take part in an artist-in-residence program conducted through the Nebraska Arts Council.

Board President Becky Keidel said she and Haun learned during a recent meeting with representatives of the Nebraska Arts Council and Wayne Regional Arts Council that a grant is available to conduct the program in the Wayne school district.

Through the program, Wayne resident Mary Halverstadt would conduct dance classes for one week each in all of the school buildings in the district.

KEIDEL SAID the grant, if received from the Nebraska Arts Council, would be matched by the Wayne Regional Arts Council.

If the grant is accepted, Keidel said students would be exposed to dance at no cost to the school district.

Keidel also informed the board that vocal director Rob Stueberg has requested permission to apply for a second "mini-grant" from the Nebraska Arts Council to have Halverstadt help choreograph the swing choir and, possibly, the spring musical.

The grant, if approved, would provide half of the cost of hiring Halverstadt, up to $500.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, board members were informed by Haun that the Wayne School district has been selected as a pilot school for developing a drug and alcohol program.

Haun said a federal grant, amounting to $12,832, has been approved and will support the cost of sending five representatives from Wayne Public Schools and five representatives from Santee Public School to a drug and alcohol training workshop in Wisconsin the first week in November.

The grant was written last spring by Larry Clay, psychologist for Educational Service Unit One headquartered in Wakefield.

Attending the workshop from Wayne will be Superintendent Haun and Curt Fry, high school guidance counselor. Ted Blendorman, art instructor and middle school guidance counselor, and Kathy Fink, home economics instructor.

One other representative to attend the workshop is yet to be named from the school board.

BOARD MEMBERS also heard a report from Elementary Principal David Luff concerning the special education program for 1983-84.

Luff said two cerebral palsy students are enrolled this year at West Elementary School.

In other business, board members were provided a report of school enrollments for 1983-84 and learned that an external visitation team is scheduled to visit the school Nov. 9 and 10.

The visit by the team, which is comprised of about 30 persons outside the school district, will culminate self-evaluation of the school which is conducted every seven years.

During the visit, the team will spend time in the classrooms and review school curriculum, facilities, board policies, etc.

"There really isn't anything they don't take a look at," said Haun, adding that a written report will follow the visit.

Mary's Catholic School in Wayne. The file lists several topics and speakers available to present them to school students.

Keidel said the file presently lists 38 persons who have volunteered to give 58 presentations in 17 different subject areas.

The subject areas include art, business, careers, fine arts, foreign language and culture, government, health, health-physical education, history, home economics, industrial arts, literature, mathematics, science, social studies, travel, and miscellaneous.

Keidel said the file should grow increasingly as local and area residents volunteer to make presentations on subjects they are knowledgeable in.

Haun praised the Community Council for developing the file.

BOARD MEMBERS voted unanimously Tuesday night to approve three part-time Title I positions.

They are Lauren Walton and Diane Ehrhardt, Chapter I-math, and Sandra Ostercamp, reading Title I.

Haun informed board members that a District 11 school board meeting is scheduled Sept. 19 in West Point. The State School Boards convention will be held Nov. 17 and 18 in Omaha.

Wayne-Carroll students score above average

Juniors and seniors at Wayne-Carroll High School scored consistently higher than state and national norms on ACT tests given during the 1982-83 school year.

Members of the Wayne-Carroll Board of Education were presented results of the test during their regular monthly meeting Tuesday night.

Board President Becky Keidel said she was extremely pleased with the test results, which measure student achievement in the fields of English, math, social studies and natural sciences.

In English, Wayne-Carroll students scored 21.4 compared to the Nebraska score of 18.8 and the national score of 17.8. In the area of math, Wayne-Carroll students scored 20.8, compared to 19.1 statewide and 16.9 nationwide.

In social studies, local juniors and seniors scored 22.3, while the statewide score was 18.8 and the nationwide score was 17.1. In natural sciences, local students scored 23.5, compared to 22.4 statewide and 20.1 nationwide.

"It looks like we had an outstanding group of students take the ACT test," Keidel, adding that the students scored very well. ACT tests are provided by the American College Testing Program and are used by college placement officials to enroll freshman students in private colleges and college level high school students take the ACT test on a voluntary basis. A summary provided to board members with the test results shows that at Wayne High students taking the test last year, 33 percent had minimum scores in education was excellent, while 81 percent fell in the good category. The average, 3 percent fell in the below average, and 3 percent fell in the poor category. The summary also showed that 59 percent of the students taking the test at Wayne High aspired to a bachelor's degree, while 25 percent aspired to a master's or graduate school or a professional degree.

Ag trade fair with Soviets is still on

By Melvin Paul
Nebraska Press Association

The recent downing of a Korean jetliner by the Soviets won't prevent the state of Nebraska and about a dozen Nebraska firms from participating in a Moscow agricultural trade fair next month.

Bob Valentine, director of the international division of the state Economic Development Department, said last week that he and Nebraska agribusiness representatives will follow through with plans to attend Agribusiness-USA, the Oct. 18-25 trade fair which features agricultural machinery and supplies.

Valentine said the failure of Nebraska firms to make sales would not deny farm machinery to the Soviets. Sweden, Australia, France, Great Britain and other countries are willing to supply the goods.

"WHILE WE'RE sensitive to the moral issues (of participating)," Valentine said, "we're becoming less and less inclined to shoot ourselves in the foot over these things."

Among firms planning to attend are Lockwood Corp. and ISCO of Lincoln; Valmont Industries of Valley; Sperry New Holland of Grand Island and Lexington; and Stor-Mor Inc. of Fremont.

Because of the incident, Gov. Kerrey decided against attending. He had been considering the possibility of making the trip.

DESPITE A MEAGER return from a yearlong experiment in which private bill collectors have been used to collect overdue state taxes, state Tax Commissioner Donna Karnes said she intends to continue the practice.

Karnes said the state Revenue Department has collected $8,369 from 174 overdue accounts of former Nebraskans which have been turned over to four bill collection agencies.

"I know it doesn't look like much, but it's $8,000 we otherwise wouldn't have," Karnes said.

The use of bill collectors also serves a purpose which can't be assessed in dollars and cents, Karnes said. In dealing with delinquent taxpayers, Karnes said, the mere mention of a private bill collector by a revenue department official sometimes will prompt a payment.

In all, the accounts which have been turned over for collection total $312,343. Because the department has other legal means such as property liens for dealing with in-state delinquencies, all the accounts which have been turned over to private collectors involve people who now live elsewhere.

Under authority granted by the 1981 Legislature, former Tax Commissioner Don Leuenberger began using private bill collectors in mid-1982.

The collection agencies retain between 25 percent and 50 percent of what they collect, depending on the sum involved.

THE LEGISLATURE'S newest member was sworn in last week at the Capitol.

Sen. Gordon McDonald, who is state AFL-CIO president, has replaced Steve Wiitala as the representative from the 31st District, which includes much of southwest Omaha.

After being sworn in by Secretary of State Allen Beerman, McDonald pledged to represent the views of all segments of his district, not just organized labor.

"I realize there are other entities in my legislative district besides working people, and I want them to know that a lot of my interests range far more than labor unions," McDonald told a roomful of spectators.

McDonald, a Democrat, said he expects to become involved in education, health and economic development issues.

Gov. Bob Kerrey appointed McDonald after Wiitala resigned to accept Kerrey's appointment to the Douglas County election commissioners.

McDonald, who is expected to run for election to the seat in 1984, isn't the first AFL-CIO president to serve in the Legislature. In 1976, the Sen. Bill Brennan was elected from the 9th District, which includes a large portion of downtown and central Omaha. Brennan died in 1979 before completing his term.

A smooth landing

It appears the community of Wayne is finally going to get some improvement that is needed and overdue.

Being planned are a 500-foot runway extension as well as widening and overlaying of the existing runway at the Wayne Municipal Airport.

The project has been planned for many years but a lack of funds was the main thing preventing work from beginning.

Now it looks like the city will be able to get its hands on the money that is needed for the project.

The Wayne Airport Authority met Monday night and approved low bid on the proposed runway project. Cost of the project is much higher than the engineer's estimate but it still appears federal funds are available.

An extended and widened runway will mean increased aerial transportation to and from Wayne and could open the gates for more businesses to move into our community.

If everything goes as planned, grading could begin this fall.

Biking safely

Last year more than 1,200 deaths and a half million injuries were sustained by bicyclists. Thirty-five percent of those deaths were to children 14 and younger.

The school year has begun, and more than ever, children will be on the streets riding bicycles to school and to play. Before children trek out onto the streets, a primary responsibility for the parents will be to educate themselves and their children about bicycle safety.

Operating a bicycle is a privilege. Children who are riding outside of trails and their own driveways should know the rules of bicycle safety.

FOLLOW THESE three simple rules:

- Fit the bike to the rider's size. The rider should be in control of the equipment. So don't purchase an oversized bicycle for the child to grow into. One can easily check size while sitting on the bike. If the knee is slightly bent as it rests on the foot pedal, this will indicate that the bike fits.
- Obey all traffic signals and signs. Practice proper hand signals with your children. Other riders and motorists are not mind readers. Urge children to let others know their intended destination.
- Keep bicycle in good mechanical condition. Urge children to check brakes often. Remember to oil and grease brakes and chains too.

Although statistics indicate that bicycle accidents are epidemic among children, the increased concern for physical fitness has brought more adults riding on the streets too. With this increase in adult bicycle riding, related accidents and deaths have increased nine percent over the past year.

CARRYING PASSENGERS is one of the most common and dangerous practices children make when riding. Most bicycles are built to carry one person and only one. It is never safe to carry passengers while riding a bicycle.

Corn sweeteners replacing refined sugars

By Cheryl Stubbendiek
Nebraska Farm Bureau

Eat any corn today? Chances are you have, even if the season for sweet corn is past. You may not have had any roasting ears for dinner, but it's a good bet that you've eaten corn in one of its many forms.

Nearly 2,400 grocery items include a corn product as an ingredient—and that's an increase of 500 percent during the past 15 years, according to the National Corn Processors' Association.

The fastest-growing segment of the corn products industry is high fructose corn syrup or HFCS. HFCS was developed by the A.E. Staley Company of Decatur, Ill., in the early 1970s and is now made by several corn processors.

SINCE ITS INVENTION, its share of market has been climbing. But it got its big gest boost when the soft drink industry began using HFCS to substitute for part of the sugar in cola beverages.

More recently, Coca-Cola announced it would raise the percentage of corn sweeteners in its product for 50 to 75 percent, while PepsiCo announced it will use 50 percent corn sweeteners in its beverage.

HFCS is cheaper than either cane or beet sugar. It sells for 21 to 23 cents a pound, compared with 28 to 30 cents a pound for refined sugar. But that's not the only reason food manufacturers are using HFCS in their products.

Another reason relates to nutritional labeling of food products. By replacing some of the sugar with HFCS, the manufacturer can put sugar lower down in the listing of ingredients.

The thought is that sugar-conscious food shoppers will be more likely to buy a product containing less "sugar," even though the corn syrup also is listed on the label.

IN ADDITION to producing great sweetness, HFCS adds other properties to food. HFCS makes those semi-moist, store on the cupboard shelf dog foods, pet treats, granola type snacks and breakfast bars. With HFCS, ice cream will not freeze as hard, but this has not troubled one manufacturer. It touts its product as having that "old-fashioned" texture.

HFCS is turning up in a wide variety of products. It's in breakfast cereals, condiments and dressings, many prepared foods, gum, bakery items including toaster pastries and even light beer.

Nearly all of the non-cola carbonated beverages use HFCS and, along with regular corn syrup, it's used in many candies. It's even used as a flavoring for cigarettes.

Over the past decade, sweetener consumption has remained fairly constant: from 125 pounds per capita in 1972 to 126 pounds in 1982. But during that time, high fructose corn sweetener consumption rose from one pound to 26 pounds, while granular sugar consumption dropped from 102 pounds to 77.

WHAT THIS SHOWS is a tremendous shift from beet and cane sugar to corn sweeteners and a greater demand for corn to produce HFCS and other products.

In fact, USDA figures show demand for corn for starch processing has increased from 295 million bushels in 1973 to an estimated 600 bushels this year.

And that, according to A.E. Staley figures, represents an extra 25 cents for the price of a bushel of corn.

Congress should act Telephone rates are reason for concern

By Congressman Doug Bereuter

A telephone company headquartered in rural Nebraska has projected that within the next couple of years the average monthly charge to its customers will increase 240%—to $29.36. There are predictions that the fixed portion of the telephone bill, not including long distance rates, will increase at least 75% for the average Nebraskan in 1984. In thinly-populated rural areas, telephone bills running $10 a month may double or triple to $20 or $30 a month.

Many Nebraskans have written to me about their concerns that these skyrocketing telephone rates will have a devastating effect on universal telephone service, especially in rural areas. I too am very concerned about the effects of recent FCC decisions and of the AT&T-Justice Department settlement on local phone service.

I AM COSPONSOR of a resolution, H. RES. 231, that expresses the sense of the House that the FCC should begin an investigation to determine the effect on telephone rates and service of the FCC decision and restructuring of AT&T.

The resolution requests that the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications consider legislation that will ensure the affordability of basic phone service to all Americans, and it directs state regulatory commissions (in Nebraska, the Public Service Commission) to review carefully the rate increase requests now pending before them.

In addition, I expect to cosponsor a bill that will reverse some of the FCC decisions that are likely to contribute to unreasonable rate hikes and will recognize and compensate for the additional costs of providing service to rural America. A number of bills have been introduced in recent weeks, and I am reviewing them thoroughly.

Many of them would establish a Universal Service Fund that would, in effect, subsidize local phone companies whose costs exceed the national average by a significant percentage. This is a general concept that I favor.

Congress certainly should act to insure that all citizens have access to our nationwide telecommunications network and that all citizens share the cost of maintaining that network.

IN 1974 the U.S. Justice Department instituted an antitrust suit against AT&T and its subsidiaries, Western Electric and Bell Labs. AT&T was charged with using its monopoly position to inhibit competition in the telecommunications industry. The Justice Department sought to force AT&T in order that it will be unable to use its revenues from monopoly services to subsidize telecommunications service in a competitive market.

The antitrust suit was halted on January 8, 1982, when the Justice Department and AT&T reached a negotiated settlement. AT&T agreed to divest itself of its 22 local operating phone companies (which account for two-thirds of AT&T assets).

AT&T also agreed to transfer facilities, staff and systems to the local operating companies plus provide research, manufacturing and other support services to local operating companies. Local operating companies must transfer all local distance switching and transmission capacity and customer premises equipment to AT&T.

FEDERAL JUDGE Harold Greene had final judicial approval in the termination of the AT&T antitrust suit. Judge Greene has ordered a number of changes in the settlement. The purpose of some of these changes is to lessen the increase in phone rates.

He has directed that local phone companies retain the yellow pages under their own control. This will benefit the consumer because in most states some of the cost of phone service is offset by profits from the yellow pages. Without the revenue from the yellow pages, Nebraska's phone rates would increase $2.28 a month.

Greene has also decided that local companies can continue to sell phone equipment. At present, most people rent their phones. With new technology driving phone prices down, consumers may find that it is less expensive to buy a phone.

On July 8 Judge Green handed down three more decisions. The first stated that after divestiture the Bell name and symbol will no longer belong to AT&T but to the 22 local operating companies.

The second decision pertains to equal access conversion costs. Local phone companies will have to modify their switching systems to ensure the caller easy access to long distance services offered by AT&T and its competitors such as MCI, Sprint, and SBC. In order to pay for this conversion, local phone companies would be forced to raise rates. But Judge Greene ruled that if local companies cannot recover the $2.5 billion conversion costs in ten years, then AT&T will be required to pay the remaining expenses. This should lessen costs to consumers.

Judge Greene's third decision entitles local phone companies to sue for existing patents and those issued for five years after divestiture. This will allow local companies to subsidize these patents to make equipment they can

To the editor:

The article in last Thursday's paper on the Greek Associations at Wayne State College was really something.

Mike Gannaway, the assistant dean of students at WSC, really has himself convinced that the ailing economy is, for the most part, the reason behind the dwindling number of Greek organizations at WSC. Why not—it is so easy to blame everything on that.

Conveniently left out of the article was the part pertaining to the supervision and guidance that have or haven't been offered to the various groups by Mr. Gannaway, and Dr. Max Lundstrom, the dean of Student Services. Mr. Gannaway, by the way, is also the Greek Liaison at WSC.

For example, one fraternity which recently closed was engulfed in matters relating to student discipline being offered to the group.

In fact, the matter even reached up to the level of the Board of Trustees of the Nebraska State Colleges because local college officials, in their wisdom, apparently could not resolve the problems.

Mr. Gannaway said that WSC may invite national organizations back to WSC if a renewed interest in the Greek system is shown. With out track record, I'm sure the nationals will be knocking at our doors.

I hope that the Greek system at WSC will be built up again. I also hope that an emphasis will be placed on effective and responsible leadership.

Lesson focusing on self-esteem

Learning to raise self-esteem will be the focus of a leader training session this month sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service.

The session, entitled "Liking Me, Liking You (Building Self-Esteem)," will be offered to organization representatives from extension clubs and other groups on Friday, Sept. 16 at 1:30 p.m. at the Carroll fire hall.

All interested persons are invited to attend at no charge and share the information with their clubs and organizations.

MARY TEMME, Wayne County Extension Agent-Home Economics, said research shows that a positive self-image can improve some aspects of physical health.

"The way you think about yourself — your self-esteem — can greatly affect the way you order your life," said Temme, adding that feelings of inferiority often take shape in being overly sensitive to criticism, overly critical of others and blaming them for things gone wrong, overly responsive to flattery, feeling persecuted, fearing competition, and being shy or timid in groups.

TEMME SAID Friday's lesson can help show participants positive ways of viewing themselves and increasing their self-worth.

Persons who plan to attend and have not already registered are asked to call the Wayne County Extension Service, 375-3310. Materials will be provided.

Defenses dominate

Chadron State spoils Chapman's debut

Defense — interceptions, fumble recoveries, and goal line stands. That was the name of the game last Saturday as the Chadron State Eagles made the Wayne State College Wildcats their seventh shutout victim in the last ten games with a 10-0 victory at CSC's Elliott Field. The Eagles have yet to give up a point this season.

The loss spoiled the debut of head coach Pete Chapman as the mentor of the Wildcats.

The game saw only 283 total yards in total offense as the defenses dominated and the offenses spluttered.

The Eagle's intercepted five Wayne State aerials, one which set up Ron Estes' one-yard touchdown run in the first quarter. The Eagle's returned the Wildcat pass 21 yards to the six yard line to put Chadron State in scoring position.

Despite miscues and turnovers on offense, Wayne State's defense kept the Wildcats in the game. WSC trailed 7-0 at the half.

Chadron State added a 48-yard field goal in the third period to put the tally at 10-0.

The Wildcats' offense began to show signs of coming around in the second half. A fifteen-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Terry Graver to wide receiver Scott Hallstrom was nullified by an illegal procedure penalty.

Freshman sensation Rodney McLain had 58 yards rushing on 12 carries from his I-back spot for the Wildcats. McLain also had a couple long gainers called back because of penalties.

Wide receiver Tom Wingert added to the offensive output with three snags for 32 yards.

The Wildcat defense was led by junior linbacker Kevin McArdle, who had 21 tackles. Linebacker Steve Besch tallied 13 stops and had one interception to his credit.

Other defensive standouts were Ken Kohlhof, Rick Johnson and Troy Thiem, all with eight stops. Mark Walker had seven tackles and one quarterback sack.

Another bright spot for the Wildcats was freshman punter Ted Ragone, who had a 38.9 average on eight kicks.

Wayne State will travel to Hastings this Saturday to meet the Broncos of Hastings College (2-0) in a 1:30 p.m. contest.

Wildcats' defense ranked third

Wayne State is third in total defense but last in total offense in the latest NAIA District 11 football statistical report. The Wildcats' only allowed 168.5 yards in total offense against Chadron State and rival Eagle's (168.5) and Dana College (166). The Wildcats' 119 yards in total offense against Chadron State ranks them dead-last in offensive output in the district. Rod McLain, WSC's 5-9, 185-pound freshman I-back from Racine, Wis., is ranked seventh in rushing in the district with a 58 yard per game average.

Blue Devil harriers strong at Plainview

Wayne High School's cross country team rebounded from a season opening third place finish in a triangular meet and took fifth place out of 14 teams at the Plainview Invitational last Friday.

Crofton won the meet with 26 points. The Blue Devil harriers scored 83.

The winning time in the competition was turned in by Tom Schmitz of O'Neill St. Mary's with an 18:06. Blaine Johs of Wayne was tenth with a 19:05.

Other Wayne runners were: Chris Hillier (20:15, 21st place), Pete March (21:25, 25th place), Glenn Elliott (21:51, 31st place) and David Remer (22:10, 33rd place).

Kurt Runstad turned in an 18:09 and placed tenth while David Ellis ran the course in 18:22.

Tim Greiss crossed the finish line at 20:13 and Brian Milton followed with a 20:30.

The harriers traveled to Norfolk Tuesday night to compete in a triangular meet against Norfolk and Wisner Pilger and placed third. The Blue Devils were without the services of Pete March and Blaine Johs.

"It hurt us a little that those two didn't run," said Wayne coach Harold Maciejewski.

Wayne tallied 39 points to Wisner Pilger's 20 and Norfolk's 16.

Duffy Meyer of Wisner Pilger was first with a time of 19:01.

Chris Hillier was the top finisher for the Blue Devils, finishing in eighth position with a time of 20:51.

Glenn Elliott, Dave Remer and Ted Lohberg finished ninth, tenth and twelfth respectively with times of 21:48, 22:01 and 22:13.

Maciejewski said the meet should prove beneficial for the Blue Devils.

"It was good experience for us because it was such a rough course, but that's no excuse," Maciejewski said.

Back in the dog house
Well, here I am in the dog house again. It seems somebody took offense to my account of the goings on at my apartment during the Penn State vs. Nebraska game. I'll explain myself and then drop the matter. No malice was meant when I referred to my guests (which included some Wayne State staffers) as "slobs" and "barbarians." If taken out of text, that does sound bad, but the column was supposed to be satirical. I did not intend to imply that the gathering at my place was unruly, but evidently a few people got that idea and this whole silly affair started.

Too young to die
I flew out to the Wayne State vs. Chadron State football game last Saturday aboard a six seat airplane. It was my first trip aloft in a small aircraft and I had reservations about the trip. As we taxied down the runway I visualized headlines describing the fiery crash and accounts of how the young sports editor was only 78 years old.

Sold!
As soon as we took off I noticed Dr. Ed Elliott, president of Wayne State, calmly sorting through his briefcase and catching up on some paper work. He certainly seemed calm enough, I thought — perhaps if I occupied myself with some activity I would calm down. I prayed.

The time will come
Wayne State showed signs of coming around offensively in the latter part of the game. The defense played a tremendous game. The goal line stand in the third quarter was a real gem. Like I mentioned before, it is going to take a while before Chapman has things going the way he likes. A program can't stop on a dime and change directions. Everyone that follows Wayne State football should just be glad that Chapman is at the helm, because when he gets that program going full-tilt, watch out.

Another first!
I notched another first last weekend. I attended my first eight-man football game (Wakefield at number three-rated Cole-ridge). I had my reservations about that too. "This isn't the way God meant man to play football," I thought. Boy was I in for a surprise. I was nothing but impressed with the caliber of play. Eight-man football is as fast-paced as I had heard. I don't think I could have picked a more exciting game. At the point in the second half, the game looked more like a track meet with a 65 yard touchdown run, a kickoff return for a touchdown and another kickoff return all the way down to the 23 yard line. This all came on three plays! Wakefield won the game 20-12. Jeff Coble had 118 yards on 15 carries for the Trojans while quarterback Brian Soderberg added 100. If there's a better running quarterback in the area I'd like to see him. The Trojans are ranked seventh this week by the Lincoln Journal. If they don't make the Omaha World-Herald's top ten, something's rotten in Denmark.

The hunter must also have a $7.50 1983 Nebraska Habitat Stamp to hunt any game species. Archery permits may be purchased over-the-counter from any Game and Parks office in Lincoln, Omaha, Norfolk, Bassett, North Platte, Alliance or the Ak-Sar-Ben Aquarium, Schramm Park SRA near Gretna. Habitat stamps may be purchased at any Commission office, or from any of 1,100 permit vendors across the state.

Wayne eighth graders lose squeaker, 8-6

Wayne's eighth grade football team lost a heartbreaking 8-6 game to Norfolk Catholic Tuesday afternoon.

The Blue Devils drew first blood with a 13 yard touchdown run by Matt Hillier in the second quarter. The PAT was no good and Wayne had a 6-0 lead.

Norfolk Catholic scored on an 80 yard scamper by Jerry Smith in the third quarter, made the two point conversion, and took an 8-6 lead.

Wayne's Scott Pokett ran the ensuing kickoff back for a touchdown, but the run was nullified by a clipping penalty and the score remained at 8-6 in favor of the Knights.

Hillier led all rushers for Wayne with 50 yards on six carries while Corey Frye added 30 yards on eight totes.

Hillier was two for seven in the passing department for 20 yards while Scott Sherrer caught one pass for seven yards. Scott Hammer snagged one aerial for 11 yards.

Defensively, the Blue Devils were led by Steve Cogwill with seven tackles (five solos). Jesse Zeiss (two solos, five assists) and Pokett with five tackles.

Scott Hammer added four stops while Joel Pederson fumbled one solo and three assists.

Wayne is scheduled to travel to Pierce for a 4 p.m. game next Tuesday.

NEW CHURCH DEDICATED!

Handsome Building Erected by the Presbyterians Dedicated Sunday, Sept. 3.

Impressive Ceremonies Witnessed by a Large Audience. A Short Historical Sketch of the Church.

One of the most conspicuous events that have occurred in this city was the dedication of the handsome new First Presbyterian church at 1037 N. W. Sunday, September 3, 1929. Over five hundred people assembled in this beautiful temple built by the presbyterians of this city and there were no doubt that they build a better than they know. Invitations had been issued and on this bright and beautiful Sunday morning the church was filled to overflowing and every person seemed anxious to do honor to the occasion.

By 10:30 every available seat in the auditorium, lecture room and gallery was occupied and the choir under the direction of Prof. M. B. Davis, filled the choir loft to the rear of the pulpit. Promptly at the appointed time the services began following those very nicely by Miss Clara Patton who presided at the organ. The invocation was pronounced by the pastor, Rev. D. C. Montgomery, concluding with Lord's prayer by the congregation. An anthem, "Oh, Father whose Almighty Power," was sung by the choir which Geo. Wilbur beautifully rendered a solo, entitled "A Parable." The rendition thereof attracted special attention not only from the audience but also Rev. Craig of Chicago. Prayer was then offered by Rev. G. M. Lodge, and hymn No. 113 sung. The dedication sermon was by the most able and eloquent one was delivered by Rev. W. G. Craig, D. D., L. L. D., of Chicago. Mr. Craig was listened to with the closest attention throughout as he portrayed the great need for the building of this beautiful temple of worship. His text was the 4th and 5th verses of the 2nd chapter of II Chronicles.

At the conclusion of the sermon, Mr. Craig announced that an opportunity would be given for offerings to meet a deficit by the payment of the church tax which was nearly $4,000, and in less than an hour $8,000 was collected which speaks volumes for the liberality and enterprise of Wayne's citizens. The keys were then transferred to the chairman of the Board of Trustees, after which the act of dedication was impressively carried out, concluding with the prayer of dedication by Rev. David C. Montgomery and dedication hymn number 577, and the benediction by Rev. Craig.

In the evening the church was again filled to the utmost and the scene presented was a brilliant one. The edifice being beautifully lighted with electricity. Prior to the sermon the choir rendered an anthem and Miss Gamble sang a very beautiful solo. Rev. Montgomery announced that the services made at the dedication office amounted to $2,007.00.

DESCRIPTION OF THE NEW CHURCH.
The new church building is 20x71 on the outside. The foundation is of stone and the roof is slate and the entire building is one of architectural beauty. It is a masterpiece of modern architecture. The auditorium is 45x60 with a seating capacity of 300. The lecture room is 24x40, seating 140; study 12x12, class room 8x8, choir loft 12x11, and gallery seating 100. The furniture is oak and the interior is finished throughout. The fresco work is very fine and the special features are a cross representing the "Rock of Ages," a beautiful Mary and dove, and in the dome overhead is the traditional representation of an anchor with "back-ground." This dome is fully circled with electric lights in windows are completed of hand-painted glass. The building is lighted with electricity and presents a brilliant appearance when lighted, which more than ever shows the value of Wayne's electric light system. It is so arranged with electric boards that any part of the building can be lighted by touching a button. The pulpit is lighted by a moving electric belt. Two large furnaces are used to heat the structure; two stairways lead to the gallery, so arranged as to be easy of access. A large door separates the lecture room from the auditorium, so arranged that it can be raised and the four entrances to the church. Two rows of seats on each side, and around the building is constructed handsome and durable cement walks. The building completed cost over $10,000, and one that would be credit to a city as large as Wayne. The new building project was taken up in the spring of 1927, at the annual congregational meeting while Rev. E. Van Dyke was pastor. The project was done until November, 27, when the matter was taken up, and in February, 1928, a building committee was appointed which succeeded in securing some $10,000 subscribed. In September, 1928, the contract was let to M. M. Farr, and November 15, 1928, the corner stone was laid with impressive ceremonies. On Tuesday of last week the building was completed. The old church building was sold to J. H. Goll who will tear it down and convert it into a residence.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF CHURCH.
During the spring of 1881 an article appeared in the Interior, giving a short description of the country along the Elk Horn river in northeast Nebraska. Rev. G. M. Lodge of Shelby, Iowa, having read this article concluded to visit this country, and to establish a church. He was accompanied by J. S. Love of Avoca, Iowa, made this prospective trip, traveling by rail to Wisner, Neb., thence by back to Wayne, arriving in the new village on the 13th inst. As no religious services had been held, Rev. Lodge immediately made arrangements for a service to be held in the unfinished business house of J. L. Merriam. Lumber and materials were pushed to one side, boards placed on blocks for seats, a dry goods box for a book rest. It was under these circumstances that Rev. Lodge preached the first sermon ever preached in Wayne. His text was found in Acts 20:25, which reads: "What is it to be and have become a Christian?" The audience numbered about forty, three of whom were women. Although the Baptists claim the first church organization, the Presbyterians justly claim the first religious service. During the following December, Rev. Lodge again visited Wayne and preached in the unfinished hall, and a banking house of Broadway & Patterson.

At this time the town of Wayne numbered about one hundred inhabitants and though few in numbers it was decided to organize a church, and on December 21, 1881, Rev. Geo. Little, then Synodical Missionary, came from Omaha and organized a church. A meeting for this purpose was held in J. L. Merriam's dining room. The following members were enclosed: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lindley, Mr. and Mrs. Hoffer, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Merriam, Dr. and Mrs. Love, Mrs. Wither, Mrs. John Handberg, Mrs. Anna Maxwell. Mr. Lindley was elected ruling elder, and Dr. Love and J. L. Merriam trustees. The church had services once a month for the following three months, services being held in the lecture room. The pulpit being filled on February 12th by Rev. L. Wheeler of Ponca, and on March 17th by Rev. Warner of Hooper. According to previous arrangements of the people and preparations were at hand for the erection of the present building. In the fall of that year the present lot where the church now stands, was bought of E. H. Pevay for $200, and in August of the following year a building site was bought for $1,000 of the estate of the church. The six persons who undertook this work were: C. C. Brown, J. A. Lindley, Dr. W. A. Love, W. O. Gamble, Capt. J. H. Merriam and J. L. Merriam. C. C. Brown and Dr. Love trustees. At the same time a building committee was appointed, consisting of W. O. Gamble as Superintendent, Wm. Hamilton, Am. Supr., Jessie B. Wright, Secretary and Treasurer, John Bennett, Librarian.

At the building was used for school purposes during the week it was furnished with desks which made comfortable seats for the congregation of the church. During the spring of 1882 a new school house being fully completed, it was decided to reconstruct the church. Rev. Lodge solicited aid in Iowa to aid in furnishing the church, and Mr. Beckwith secured the pulpit. In February 1883 a donation of $100 was received from Rev. Theodore C. Miller, the gift of Mr. D. W. Mc-

William, a Sabbath School Superintendent in New York City. Twenty-five dollars was also donated to reconstruct the library.

At a congregational meeting held March 3, 1883, a unanimous call was extended to Rev. G. M. Lodge and application also made for aid from the Synodical Department of the Board of Home Missions. The call being accepted Rev. Lodge was installed on April 29, 1883, and a personal relationship dissolved April 1, 1887. During this pastorate the church grew from a membership of eleven to one hundred forty-one, one hundred one by letter from other churches and forty on profession of faith.

From April 1st, 1891, till August of the same year, the congregation was without a pastor, the pulpit being supplied. During the month of August a call was extended to Rev. P. P. Baker of Wisconsin. The call being accepted he was installed on August 1st, 1891. Rev. Baker remained a pastor for four years, during his pastorate in August 1891. During this time 107 were added to the church, 61 by letters and 46 on profession of faith, of these 25 adults received the sacrament of baptism. The first of the conditions of the church was that the church members be purchased. These conditions were complied with and the present edifice was purchased at a cost of $1,000 of this amount $700 was paid during Rev. Baker's pastorate. From August 1891 until February, 1902, the pulpit was filled with supplies. The last day Rev. A. F. Ernst of St. Councils, Missouri, preached both morning and evening. A call was given to him and he came as pastor May 14, 1902, and was installed and remained on June 28, 1902. During his pastorate 144 were received into the membership of the church, 52 on profession of faith, and 92 by letter from other churches. 11 adults received the sacrament of baptism. Mr. Ernst closed his pastorate here on July 15, 1904, and departed for Chicago, Ill. His successor was Rev. J. H. Merriam, who was installed on October 10, 1904, to March, 1905. Rev. C. M. Montgomery filled the pulpit on April and on March 7, he was given a call which was accepted and he is still pastor. Since his installation thirty members have been added to the membership list of the church.

of the people and preparations were at hand for the erection of the present building. In the fall of that year the present lot where the church now stands, was bought of E. H. Pevay for $200, and in August of the following year a building site was bought for $1,000 of the estate of the church. The six persons who undertook this work were: C. C. Brown, J. A. Lindley, Dr. W. A. Love, W. O. Gamble, Capt. J. H. Merriam and J. L. Merriam. C. C. Brown and Dr. Love trustees. At the same time a building committee was appointed, consisting of W. O. Gamble as Superintendent, Wm. Hamilton, Am. Supr., Jessie B. Wright, Secretary and Treasurer, John Bennett, Librarian.

At the building was used for school purposes during the week it was furnished with desks which made comfortable seats for the congregation of the church. During the spring of 1882 a new school house being fully completed, it was decided to reconstruct the church. Rev. Lodge solicited aid in Iowa to aid in furnishing the church, and Mr. Beckwith secured the pulpit. In February 1883 a donation of $100 was received from Rev. Theodore C. Miller, the gift of Mr. D. W. Mc-

William, a Sabbath School Superintendent in New York City. Twenty-five dollars was also donated to reconstruct the library.

At a congregational meeting held March 3, 1883, a unanimous call was extended to Rev. G. M. Lodge and application also made for aid from the Synodical Department of the Board of Home Missions. The call being accepted Rev. Lodge was installed on April 29, 1883, and a personal relationship dissolved April 1, 1887. During this pastorate the church grew from a membership of eleven to one hundred forty-one, one hundred one by letter from other churches and forty on profession of faith.

From April 1st, 1891, till August of the same year, the congregation was without a pastor, the pulpit being supplied. During the month of August a call was extended to Rev. P. P. Baker of Wisconsin. The call being accepted he was installed on August 1st, 1891. Rev. Baker remained a pastor for four years, during his pastorate in August 1891. During this time 107 were added to the church, 61 by letters and 46 on profession of faith, of these 25 adults received the sacrament of baptism. The first of the conditions of the church was that the church members be purchased. These conditions were complied with and the present edifice was purchased at a cost of $1,000 of this amount $700 was paid during Rev. Baker's pastorate. From August 1891 until February, 1902, the pulpit was filled with supplies. The last day Rev. A. F. Ernst of St. Councils, Missouri, preached both morning and evening. A call was given to him and he came as pastor May 14, 1902, and was installed and remained on June 28, 1902. During his pastorate 144 were received into the membership of the church, 52 on profession of faith, and 92 by letter from other churches. 11 adults received the sacrament of baptism. Mr. Ernst closed his pastorate here on July 15, 1904, and departed for Chicago, Ill. His successor was Rev. J. H. Merriam, who was installed on October 10, 1904, to March, 1905. Rev. C. M. Montgomery filled the pulpit on April and on March 7, he was given a call which was accepted and he is still pastor. Since his installation thirty members have been added to the membership list of the church.

River rats

Down the Mississippi, to the Gulf of Mexico

By Randy Howell

When cousins John Meyer and Carroll Addison first planned a 2,000-mile boat trip to New Orleans, they had visions of floating down the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, fishing, enjoying the scenery, possibly sipping a few beers and, most importantly, relaxing.

Instead, the two dodged huge, floating logs, were whipped by large, forceful waves, nearly ran out of fuel and fought the harsh currents of whirlpools.

Badly sunburned, insect-bitten and fatigued, the cousins returned from their trek with a great respect for the river.

For anyone to make a 2,000-mile trip down the two rivers is quite an accomplishment. For Addison and Meyer to make the journey, it was even more remarkable for two reasons:

1. The two men had never before owned a boat and had virtually no boating experience.
2. The boat they used for their journey measured only 14 feet in length—considered a minnow of a boat by Mississippi River navigators' standards.

The trip was planned as a means of transportation for Meyer and Addison to attend the National VFW Convention in New Orleans.

"Anyone can buy a plane ticket or make the trip in a car," said Addison, a Vietnam war veteran who lives about four miles north of Belden and is a member of Hartington VFW Post 5283.

"I said, 'Let's either go by boat or hitchhike' and we decided to go by boat. It was one heck of an experience," said Meyer, a World War II veteran who lives near Allen and is a member of Martinsburg VFW Post 5435.

The farmers purchased their 14-foot, 1975 Silverline fiberglass boat in Yorkton.

"Anyone who, as a kid, has read 'Huckleberry Finn' would like to go down the river."

The men planned the trip about a year ago. They first bought an 18-foot flatbottom boat but later decided they needed a different style. "It's a good thing we changed our minds because we would have drowned in a flatbottom boat when we met our first low bar,"

"Anyone who, as a kid, has read 'Huckleberry Finn' would like to go down the river," they said.

In preparation, the boat, powered by a 50-horsepower outboard Mercury motor, was loaded with food supplies and gasoline. There was no communications radio, backup motor or spare battery.

The two men started out from Sioux City on Riverdale weekend July 31 and averaged approximately 200 miles a day on their 10-day journey to New Orleans.

John and Carroll received an early initiation to the river, about an hour out of Sioux City, when they met a tow boat pushing a large barge.

"There were a lot of boats on the river that day and the tow boat pilot was having fun swamping everyone," Carroll said. "It was a small tow and the channel was very narrow. Tows which are pushing or barges or just pushing one put out the worst waves."

The small boat rode to the top of one large wave and then down into the valley, giving the two boaters their first scare.

One fast boat they met north of St. Louis was pushing between 35 and 40 barges.

"I figured if Carroll wants to die here, I might just as well die here too."

John said his worst memory of the trek is from the point that the navigators first left the Missouri River and entered the Mississippi.

"We were traveling without a map and saw a sign that said, 'All boats down this canal.' So we went the way the sign told us to go. A tug boat was coming at us and there were rocks on both sides of us," John recalled. "Then there was a big sign that said, 'Do not come this way.' I figured if Carroll wants to die here, I just as well die here too."

John said speed limit signs restricted the speed of the oncoming tug and allowed them to maneuver their boat around, just in the nick of time.

Needless to say, the two travelers purchased a navigation map of the Mississippi at their first opportunity.

The boat used about five gallons of gasoline every day and resulted in another problem. The Nebraskans said they nearly ran out of gas every day.

The only place on the river between Omaha and New Orleans that sold gasoline was near St. Joseph, Mo. The two parked their boat at that barge facility and went to the office to buy some gas.

"They asked us how many thousand gallons we wanted," Carroll and John said. "They had a big hose that was used to fill up tow boats and didn't even have to turn on the gas. They just drained the hose into our gas cans."

During the rest of the journey, Carroll and John were forced to carry their five-gallon gas cans two or three miles off the river to get badly needed fuel.

The northeast Nebraska farmers said they were down to a single gallon of gas at one time and a storm was approaching. Fate seemed to be on their side as they got the boat to safety and later found a place to buy gasoline only a couple of miles away.

Carroll and John tied their boat to river banks every night and pitched their tent on the banks.

"There were some very suitable places to camp but it was hard to find a place to pitch the boat each night. We had to be careful so the tows didn't hit it or swamp it," John said.

The pair said they lost track of days during their journey. They started each day by getting up between 3 and 5 a.m. and eating breakfast which consisted of coffee, Spam and bread. Between 4 and 6 p.m. each day they looked for a place to camp.

Flloating logs, including large cottonwood trees, posed another problem for the boat and kept its navigators alert.

"Your eyes were not enough but you catch on fast," the two said.

John and Carroll said they met no small boats during the last 500 miles of their trip—just big ships. The Mississippi is channeled for large boats, the two men said.

"We were too dang dumb to know what we were doing. That's what saved us."

Another thing which had to be avoided during the last 500 miles was the current of whirlpools. The venturers said they ran across one large whirlpool that nearly gave them some trouble.

"The water yesterday, then the water dropped. It was real smooth and then it opened up. The whirlpool measured about 30 feet across. If we would have been in a smaller boat with no power, we would have been sucked under," Carroll said.

"The people down there tell stories of small boats being pulled under. Life vests don't do any good they say."

The Nebraskans said the mosquitoes on the river acted like they had never before seen human beings.

"The mosquitoes were bad. Our repellent didn't work—they loved it," John said. Other insects they encountered included sand fleas and chiggers.

The twosome had to endure extreme heat throughout the trip. "It was so hot, we had to keep moving to stay cool," they said.

The sun's intense heat took its toll on John. He was sunburned so badly his lips were bleeding. In the next trip to a town, zinc oxide was purchased for treatment of the sunburn.

The Southerners said they were shocked that the two farmers had made the journey from near South Dakota to Louisiana in such a small boat.

"People who live on the river couldn't believe it. What blew the minds of the Southern people was that we had no second engine to get out of the way of tugs if the main engine ever knicked out."

"There was no turning back. The farther south we went, the more people we met who could not believe we were on the river in a 14-foot boat."

They said there was no way they would ever take that small of a boat on the river. We were too dang dumb to know what we were doing—that's what saved us.

According to John and Carroll, one man with a 42-foot boat said he hit some waves on the river and was swamped under.

The channel down the river was well marked with mile markers each mile and buoys to mark the division between deep and shallow water.

The perils of the river didn't leave any time for the two men to cook on their boat. They had to cook food and ended up giving some away.

They also threw many pounds of flour and other goods overboard to help plane out the boat at one time. In order to get the nose of the boat tipped down properly, excess weight was thrown overboard and gas cans were evenly distributed.

John and Carroll were constantly busy. "Around every corner there was something to keep an eye on. And there was lots of fabulous scenery. Every time you turn your head the scenery is different."

Toward the end of the journey, at Slidell, Miss., the cousins spotted a boy fishing in a canal and decided to ask him for directions.

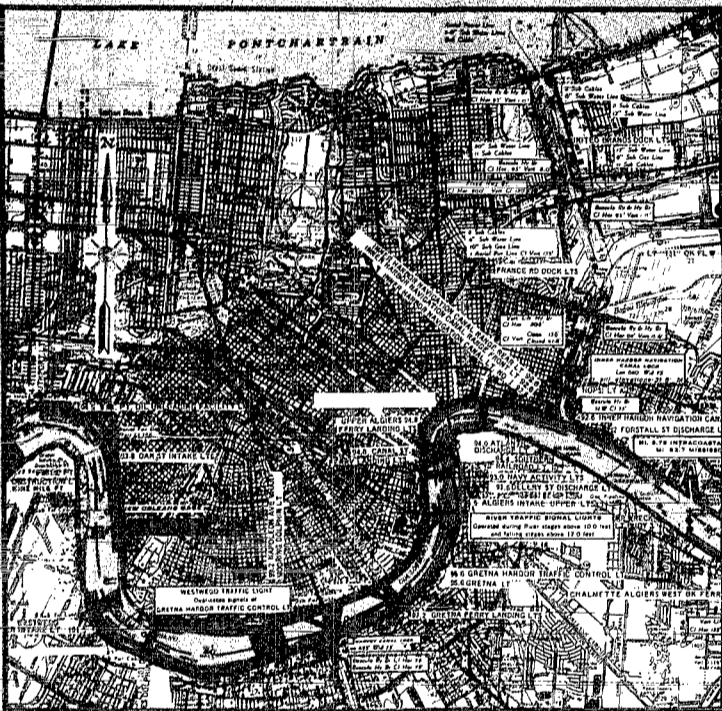

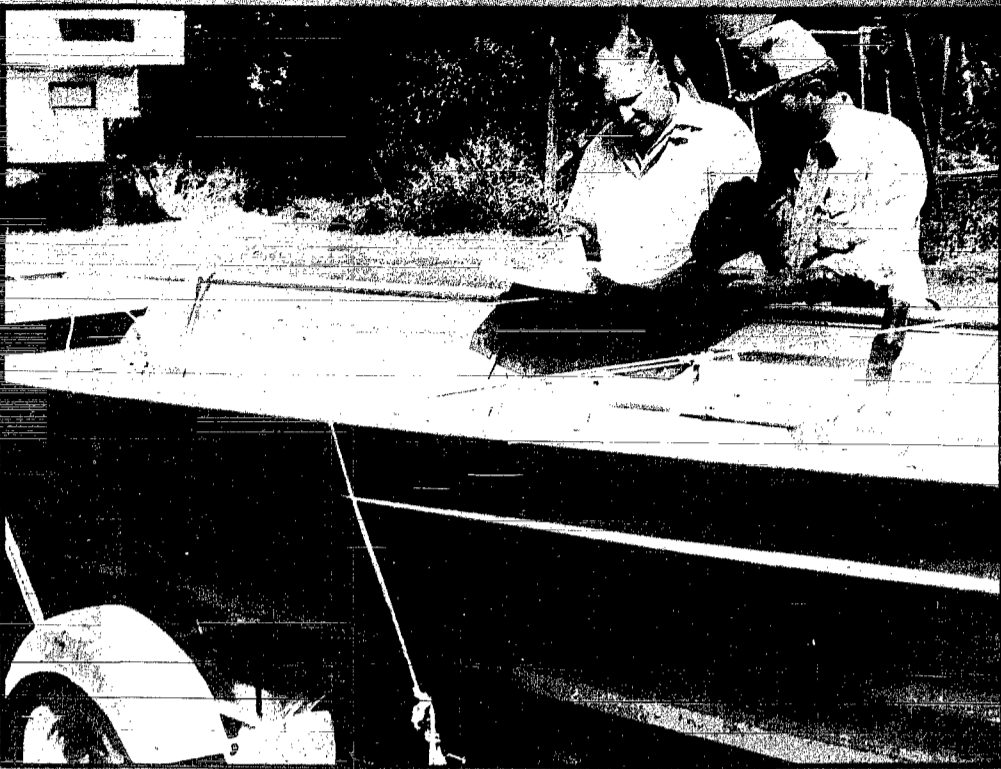

"The river is meaner than 10 junk yard dogs."

The 14-year-old boy, Joe Gomez informed the boaters they were headed for Saint Bayou. He directed them to the home of Leo Abney Sr., a close friend of his family.

The Nebraskans stopped at the Abneys in hopes of using their telephone to call Carroll's sister-in-law. The Abneys took them in and fed them a typical Louisiana meal of fried catfish, soft-shell crabs and red beans.

"They were super people. Their house was on stilts 14-feet high and they treated us like kings," they said. "We met hundreds of friendly people and only a few bad ones."

Once they reached New Orleans they had gained a new respect for the river. Taking an excerpt from a book which was written by a man who failed to make it down the river in his boat, John read, "It's like driving a car fast into an ice patch. You don't know where you're going to end up."

"The river is meaner than 10 junk yard dogs," John said. "It's all big business with big traffic. There are no recreation facilities."

"The boat constantly feels like it's trying to roll over. It dances on the river," Carroll said as he made twisting motions with his hands.

Lake Pontchartrain was one of the final stops for the Nebraskans before they attended their convention.

That journey led them down a canal through New Orleans. There were six draw bridges on the canal and they were raised to let the boat through. One was broken down and blocked the route to the lake.

Determined to see the lake after their 2,000-mile trek, the two farmers removed their windshield and motored on. They watched an oil-drifting rig burn after it was hit by lightning.

Lake Pontchartrain drains into the Gulf of Mexico. John and Carroll said they saw lots of alligators in that area. Their hides are worth $100 a foot, they said.

The trip was completed on schedule and the two men arrived at the VFW convention in time to clean up and see the opening ceremonies. The convention lasted from Aug. 12-19.

President Ronald Reagan, who spoke at the convention, stayed on the seventh floor of the Hilton hotel where the convention was held.

The entire seventh floor was reserved for Reagan's group. His security people arrived two weeks early, John and Carroll said.

After spending several days at the convention, the two men bought a boat trailer and caught a ride back to Nebraska with relatives.

"Next year's trip should be a breeze compared to this year's. The cousins are planning a 'huckleberry trip' to Montana. 'We do things kind backwards,' the men said.

Reserve corn in release status

Corn in all farmer-owned grain reserves will remain in release status through Sept. 30, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official said last week.

C. Hoke Leggett, a vice president of USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation, said storage payments for reserve corn stopped Aug. 31 and will remain stopped through Sept. 30. Also, interest will be charged on all of the loans beginning Sept. 1.

Leggett said the decision on reserve corn was made following a review by CCC of the average market price on Sept. 1, as reported by USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, adjusted to reflect the market price received by farmers.

The adjusted price on Sept. 1 was $3.32 per bushel, well above the release levels for reserves IV and V of $3.15 and $3.25, respectively.

Drought areas being assisted

The Wayne County ASCS Office is assisting drought areas in finding hay and other roughage. Many reports of hay shortages are being received, according to Erwin Morris, chairman of the Wayne County ASC committee. Some states and counties are known to have a surplus of hay or other roughage.

Producers with excess hay or other roughage may contact the ASCS office and have their product listed and made available in drought areas. The information needed in addition to the name, address and phone number is the type of hay or roughage for sale and the approximate quantity.

Potential buyers will contact the sellers directly. ASCS will not be involved in the actual sales, Morris said.

Hog show, carcass contest scheduled

The Northeast Nebraska Pork Association is planning to hold its 15th annual market hog show and carcass contest Thursday, Sept. 22 at the Pender Livestock Sales.

Premiums and trophies will be presented to the winners. Food and refreshments will be served and door prizes will be given away.

Northeast Nebraska Pork Producers Queen Denise Dempster of Dixon will help with the drawing.

Hogs which weigh less than 190 pounds will be rejected. Entries will be weighed before the show. Starting time for weigh-in is 4 p.m. A judging contest is planned at 6 p.m. Prizes will be awarded at a fall banquet.

A live hog division and carcass division are planned. The show is open to all pork producers who reside in Dakota, Thurston and Dixon counties. Entry fee is $2 per animal.

Plant-A-Tree project set

Nearly 7,000 Nebraska youths learn more about forestry through the 4-H School Enrichment project Plant-A-Tree. The Nebraska 4-H School Enrichment Program operates in cooperation with teachers and their schools to enrich curriculum.

Plant-A-Tree assists young people to become a part of a Nebraska tradition tree planting. The Plant-A-Tree project introduces members to five Nebraska tree planters, discusses the parts of tree seeds, gives examples of how tree seeds travel, discusses preparation of soil, demonstrates how to grow a seedling tree from seed, demonstrates how to transplant a tree, and offers suggestions for activities and exhibits.

Sponsored by International Paper Company Foundation of New York for nine years, the forestry program helps 4-H'ers to develop positive attitude toward the importance of conserving forest resources; to appreciate woodlands as a source of income, raw materials and enjoyment; to learn about good forestry practices and to develop skill in executing them; and to learn skills in forest management and use of forest products.

Four medals of honor are awarded at the county level, a trip to National 4-H Congress is awarded at the state level, and six $1,000 scholarships are awarded at the national level.

Computer camp is planned

A 4-H camp designed to introduce youth to computers will be offered this year by the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service Oct. 21-23 at the Eastern Nebraska 4-H Center near Gretna. The registration deadline is Oct. 1.

Tom Leisy, University of Nebraska extension 4-H youth specialist, said instruction will be geared to the TRS 80 Model III and IV BASIC and Apple II Plus or equivalent equipment.

The camp program will cover introduction to micro hard ware, introduction to micro BASIC programming, micro computer applications and new educational computer games, Leisy said.

The first 30 applicants will be accepted, Leisy said. A registration fee of $65, which covers meals, lodging and program fees, will be charged.

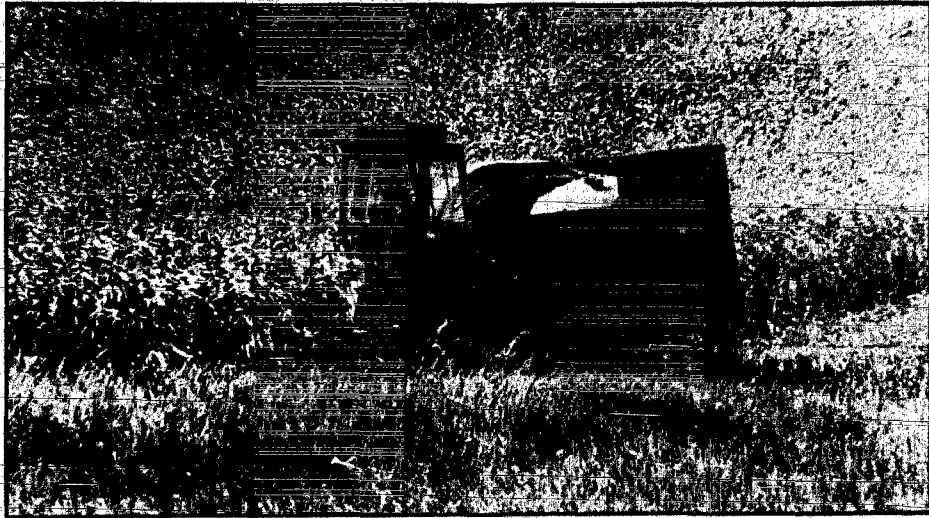

Interested persons may contact Leisy at 207 Miller Hall, University of Nebraska East Campus, Lincoln, Neb. 68583-0713 for registration forms and further information.

Carcasses video analyzed

Predicting lean and fat composition of beef carcasses has been achieved more accurately and faster with a video camera and computer than with conventional measurements applied in predictive equations for USDA grading standards.

Video image analysis should still be considered experimental at this point, H. Russell Cross, food technologist USDA's Agricultural Research Service (ARS), said.

A larger scale study in commercial settings will be needed before the automated procedure can become considered for official yield grading, Cross said. It appears that the video image analysis may be the wave of the future, providing an efficient way for the meat industry to assure consumers that they will get the leanness in beef that they desire, he added.

A full load

THE WORK begins for an area farmer who is getting a good start on chopping silage. Hillsides are busy this time of year as farmers begin a hectic job of chopping.

Forage checked

Nitrate poisoning not affected

Drought affected forage check so far this year has less nitrate content than any in previous drought situation in the last 30 years, according to Paul Guyer, University of Nebraska extension beef specialist.

"We're not likely to have a major nitrate problem this year," Guyer said.

However, some forages have a high nitrate content under normal and excellent growth conditions, he added. "Sudan and sudan sorghum cross are often high in nitrate and, when made into hay or green chop, should be fed with caution," Guyer stressed.

THE SAMPLE having the highest nitrate content among those tested at the NU biochemistry department lab was from sudan or sudan sorghum cross and it was not under drought stress, he said. "The situation is not likely to get worse, but the potential is always there," he added.

According to Duane Rice, NU extension veterinarian, management is the key to preventing any disease. "Right now nitrate poisoning is not a problem," Rice said.

However, as Guyer also stressed, "the potential is there and could pose a problem later."

Rice added, "The possibilities of nitrate poisoning will be discussed in detail on 'Farm and Ranch Report.'"

If green chopped forage is allowed to heat in a pile for very long, it could become extremely toxic and is a potential problem, according to Robert Hill, NU associate professor of ag biochemistry.

"If green cut forage is allowed to stand in a pile or in a wagon so that it heats, then the bacteria will convert nitrate into nitrite which is 10 times as toxic," Hill said.

THEREFORE, Hill warned, green chopped forage "should be chopped as fed" and not chopped in a two day supply.

Under normal conditions, Hill said, "the nitrogen in silage decreases to a safe level during the ensiling process." But since drought damaged crops are cut and fed to animals without any processing, the nitrogen level may or may not be toxic.

According to Hill, the "rule of thumb toxic level is 1.5 percent potassium nitrate (2,160 parts per million nitrate nitrogen) in a total ration." And, although Hill said he has not yet had any samples of nitrate high forage, if drought conditions persist, he expects to see some.

Eastern Nebraska's drought may prove a blessing in disguise for farmers and ranchers in the Sandhills, according to Bruce Anderson, NU extension forage specialist. Supplies of hay in eastern Nebraska are likely to be short, Anderson said, and some of the more plentiful western alfalfa and prairie hay likely will be shipped east.

"There isn't much activity yet, but within the next two months, there will be some people looking for hay," Anderson said.

Residues detected with on-farm test

Nebraska farmers or veterinarians can now check live cattle on the farm for traces of antibiotic residues with a test developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The easy-to-perform test shows overnight whether animals are free of problem residues and ready for slaughter.

"The Live Animal Swab Test is the first tool available to quickly and inexpensively check for antibiotics before slaughter and will decrease the possibility of animals with violative residues going to slaughter," said Stan Wallen, project leader for the USDA Residue Avoidance Program in Nebraska.

"UNTIL NOW, residues could be detected only by laboratory tests of carcass tissue. If violative levels were found, carcasses were condemned," the University of Nebraska extension food scientist said. "Producers can avoid such violations by performing LAST routinely, as the 'last' step before the animal leaves the farm," Wallen said.

LAST requires no laboratory know-how and most supplies are not costly, farmers can buy an incubator or make one from a picnic cooler or a heavy cardboard box," he said.

The test can be performed on urine from cows, calves and heifers. USDA scientists are working on a similar test for blood from cattle and other species and are developing a food test as well.

The test is performed using a petri dish, a harmless type of bacteria, cotton swabs and a small paper disc containing the antibiotic neomycin," Wallen said.

"The farmer coats the gel in the petri dish with the bacteria and places the neomycin disc on the gel. Then cotton swabs are dipped in the urine sample and put on the plate to incubate overnight. The incubator's warmth permits the bacteria to grow on the gel except where antibiotics are present."

WALLEN SAID producer organizations have joined USDA in encouraging farmers to perform LAST routinely and to market animals only after the test shows no antibiotics are present. When the test shows antibiotics, the animal should be retested in two or three days.

"The test is adapted from the Swab Test on Premises, which USDA inspectors use in slaughterhouses to check carcasses for antibiotics," Wallen said. "It has been used on cull dairy cows since early 1979 and was expanded to all types of animals under USDA inspection in 1982."

Step-by-step instructions for performing the LAST test and for building incubators are available from Phil Cole, extension dairyman, Department of Animal Science, 205 Marvel Baker Hall, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb. 68583-0908.

The instructions are available in USDA Handbook No. 631, "How to Perform the Live Animal Swab Test for Antibiotic Residues," or on an audio tape cassette of the same name.

Sudan for silage
Sudan Sorghum is better adapted to green chopping than to ensiling. This is because of its high moisture content at a stage when it is a high quality feed. For an ensilage feed close to the value of corn silage, it would need to be cut at about three to four feet tall. To insile this material would require wilting it down to about 65 to 70 percent moisture. Since the crop wilts very slowly, this silage is seldom cut for silage.

The quality of sudan sorghum grasses drop rapidly with advanced maturity—whereas yield will continue to increase. The best stage to cut them will depend on intended use. If a wintering ration is needed, digestibility is not so important, so it is suggested that the farmer delay as late as practical, but before lodging becomes a problem. If it is to be fed to growing cattle, then it's best to harvest before heading or as soon thereafter as possible.

Will, if possible, reduce moisture to an ensiling level. Higher levels can be tolerated in a trench or stack without excessive seepage. For dairy cattle, it should be cut after four feet tall for added yield, but well before heading. Again, considerable wilting is needed for insiling.

Fall weed control
Weeds treated in the fall with good results include winter annuals such as mustard weed and brome grasses, biennials such as dandelions, field bindweed and Canada thistle.

Downy brome and pennycress in alfalfa can be most economically controlled with Simazine (princep). Other good herbicides for this use are Sencor, Lexone and Sinbar. These should be applied in October. One overlooked is the usefulness of fall treatment of dandelions in the lawn. The ester or amine form of 2, 4-D applied in October will help keep them in check.

For control of musk thistle in pastures and waste area the following rates are recommended per acre:

- Tordon at 6 to 8 ounces in pastures only during October, November
- 2.4 D at 1 1/2 to 2 quarts during October
- 2.4 D with Banvel at 1 quart to 1 1/2 quart, respectively

Of these herbicides, 2.4 D is the most economical for field bindweed control. Roundup with Banvel, 2.4 D with Banvel and Tordon are possible alternatives for control of bindweed.

Hot dry weather adversely affects field bindweed control with herbicides. It is best to wait for cooler temperatures and better moisture, usually late September or October, before treating bindweed.

Cool season grasses fare as well as native grasses

Steers gained just as well grazing cool season grasses all summer as they did on native pasture in a three-year study at the Northern Great Plains Research Laboratory, Mandan, N.D.

Lenel Hofmann, research agronomist, USDA's Agricultural Research Service, told members of the American Society of Agronomy here today that smooth brome grass and Russian wildrye produced just as much beef during summer grazing as did native pasture.

Normally, he said, cattlemen graze their cattle on cool season grasses in the spring and hold the native pastures for use later in the season on the theory that native pastures hold up better during the summer.

Cool season grasses provide more early season forage than native pastures and are much easier to establish than native grasses on cropland and strip mined land.

Hofmann's research in 1980 through 1982, showed that yearling steers grazing smooth brome grass or Russian wildrye throughout the grazing season, about 120 days, gained just as well as steers on native pastures.

"It appears from our limited study that ranchers could reseed grasslands to grass species, such as the ones we tested, and have the option of season long grazing as well as the more rapid and earlier growth," Hofmann said.

the farmer's wife

by pat meierhenry

I sang with John Denver last Saturday night — me and 10,000 other lucky people.

We sang "Sunshine on my Shoulder" and "Follow Me", and a whole bunch of others, while he stood on a rotating platform and played his guitar. What an entertainer — he did the whole show by himself and had the audience captivated.

He's the same little guy with the boyish face you see on TV, with contacts replacing the glasses, and so dynamic in person.

I'VE NEVER even seen a 12 string guitar before. He played some special numbers on it. I wish everyone at Carroll could have heard "The Bells of Rimee," a Welsh song. The Devaney Center is a marvelously versatile entertainment center. It really beats Ak Sar Ben with the performers in the center like that.

Plus, we've watched basketball games and gymnastic meets, and lots of state wrestling tournaments in it. The seats are comfortable, the temperature controlled, sound and lighting work well, and it certainly beats the old coliseum (Thanks, cigarette smokers!).

John remarked that there had also been a crowd on Saturday afternoon, which he thought was good, since Big Red had a home game. He had been told that on football Saturdays, the stadium becomes the third largest city in Nebraska!

THAT STADIUM has really changed over the years, too. When I was growing up 45 miles west of Lincoln, we could watch Nebraska football for 50 cents for knothole tickets on the north and south bleachers. My hero in those days was a blonde fellow named Bobby Reynolds.

Even when I was going to school in Lincoln, we were often offered tickets.

A lot of people bought season tickets, but didn't worry much if they got to very many games. I sat in doctor's seats, or faculty seats, or student seats; there was always room.

Our capital city is still a great town, whether you are there for state fair or football or just to catch one of the shows in the Devaney Center.

Since it's where the Big Farmer and I met, we have a lot of fond memories of it. Valentino's was a filling station and quick stop until the owner got hold of that fabulous pizza recipe. Wish we had bought shares.

WE WERE ALSO married there, 23 years ago. His old housemother came because she said she had to see it to believe it!

We certainly did not walk off into the sunset and live happily ever after.

Marriage, especially to a farmer, is definitely not a bed of roses. And when the people involved are also stubborn, it can make things complicated. (Yes, dear, I admitted it.)

We've discovered that love is a lot of things, like sifting up with a sick child, arguing about the bank account, and sticking together, through thick and thin.

Marriage takes work, and commitment, even when you're tired, or discouraged, or blue, or disenchaned.

WE CAN RELATE to the story of the reporter interviewing a couple observing their 60th anniversary. "Tell me," she asked, "in all those years, did you ever once think of divorce?" "Divorce?" The little old lady answered, "No. Murder, maybe, but never divorce."

One thing about life with the Big Farmer, it is almost never dull. And we are agreed on some things, like The Carpenters and Barbara Streisand and John Denver.

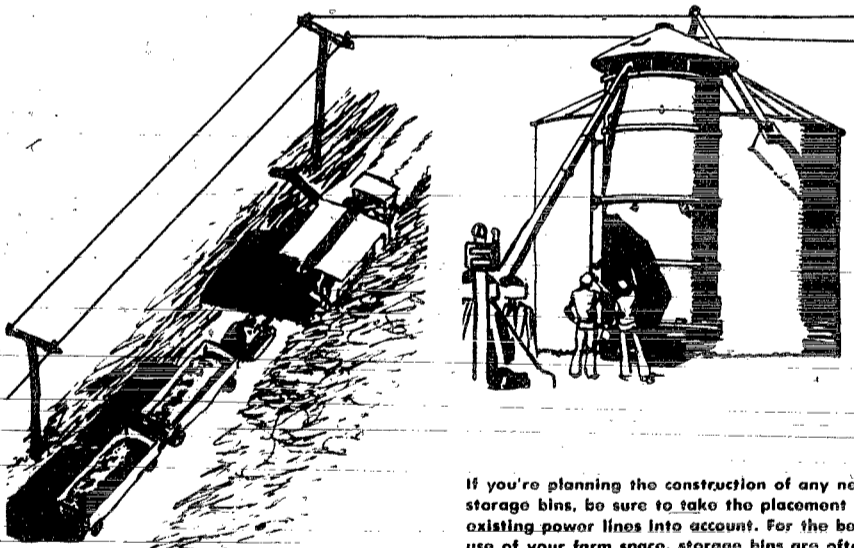

When John sang "Falling Out of Love" and "Seasons of the Heart" and I remembered that Annie is divorcing that sweet, idealistic, peace-lovin' man, my heart ached for him.

I definitely would not want to go through life alone. So Happy Anniversary, Mike; here's to 23 more. And thank you for being so patient.

You'll probably have extra stars in your crown for staying with me all this time.

HARVEST WITH SAFETY

We want to keep you as our most valued customer

More often than not, power lines follow property lines. You may be lulled into a dangerous complacency when you're right in the middle of your crop field, because you know for sure no power lines are over your head. When you reach the end of your field and turn your equipment, there's a very good chance power lines will be nearby. Always be alert to power lines on your property lines. They may even be hidden by trees or brush, so you must take precautions to ensure your equipment doesn't make contact.

If you're planning the construction of any new storage bins, be sure to take the placement of existing power lines into account. For the best use of your farm space, storage bins are often erected along property lines. Again, that's just where the power lines usually are.

If you simply can't find adequate space to construct those bins away from power lines, why not contact your electric power supplier for some advice. Someone will be sent to your farm to survey your potential building sites and work with you in order to come to the best possible results. Your complete safety and comfort are prime concerns to your electric power supplier. We'll be happy to assist you in developing a safer farm. Harvest with safety and you'll continue to enjoy a productive life and a productive farm.

Education activities

Audobon society plans ahead

The local Elkhorn Audubon Society is planning a series of education activities for the upcoming winter months.

Biology professor, A. J. Schock of Wayne State College reports this year's highlights are three Audubon film tour speakers who have traveled the world making educational films. Tom Diez will present a program and narrate two films entitled "Adventures in Penn's Woods" and "Northwest Adventures" starting at 8 p.m. on Nov. 8 in the Ramsey Theater at WSC.

Jon Panos will present "Okavango" an African based film on Feb. 15 followed by Arthur Twomey on "Saguara Country" on March 20. More information on the film series can be obtained from the biology department at Wayne State College or the local Audubon chapter.

These speaker/film presentations will offer a variety of information from the beauty of wildlife photography to the geological history of the area.

The public may also be interested in attending the monthly meetings held in either Norfolk or Wayne on an alternating basis. The meetings usually concern an entertaining topic presented in the form of a guest speaker or a special film.

This month's meeting is on the topic of wetlands. A film by the title of "American Wetlands" will also be shown followed by a discussion of the pros and cons to the proposed raising of the water level in Lewis and Clark lake. The meeting starts at 7 p.m. in the Carhart Science building on Wayne State College Campus, Tuesday, Sept. 13.

The local Audubon chapter president, Ed Brogie, also reports that the chapter is now publishing and outstanding newsletter entitled, "The Elk Horn", on a monthly basis under the direction of the secretary Kathy Albrecht. The newsletter features current happenings in conservations and legislation, entertaining articles, as well as games and puzzles.

For more information on membership to the Elkhorn Audubon Chapter contact Kathy Albrecht, RFD, Emerson; 68733.

Volunteers needed to aid IRS program

Volunteers and sponsoring organizations are needed to help others with their federal and state income tax returns as part of the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) and Tax Counseling for the Elderly (TCE) programs sponsored by the Internal Revenue Service, the IRS said.

VITA/TCE volunteers assist taxpayers, often elderly, lower income, handicapped or non-English speaking individuals, who need explanations of the special credits and deductions for which they may qualify.

VITA/TCE volunteers, frequently college students, law students, or members of professional business and volunteer organizations, receive a training course in basic income tax law and return preparation, the IRS said. VITA/TCE instructors and training materials are provided by the IRS.

Training is conducted at a location convenient to volunteers and generally starts in November and continues through December of each year. Training classes run from three to five days, depending on the experience of volunteers.

VITA/TCE programs can be sponsored by local civic or fraternal organizations, educational institutions, churches and social groups. For the convenience of taxpayers who cannot travel, most VITA/TCE volunteers provide assistance in their own neighborhoods at schools, churches, libraries, civic and social facilities.

Persons or organizations interested in the VITA/TCE program should contact the IRS by calling toll-free, 800-424-1040, or if in the Omaha area exchange, 272-3594.

CAMP ASSURANCE ANNIVERSARY
The 35th anniversary of Camp Assurance was observed Sept. 3 and 4. Camp Assurance is a Christian campground located a half mile north of Belden and is sponsored by the American Missionary Fellowship, formerly the American Sunday School Union.

The campsite was rented from Fred Boysen in about 1948 and later was purchased. The primary purpose of the camp was for summer Bible camps for interested youth from ages 8 through high school.

Early camps were held in a tent. In 1948, Kenneth Saunders, then superintendent of Northeast Nebraska ASSU, built the first structure — a kitchen, dining room and girls dorm combination building. At a later date a combination chapel, office and boys dorm was built, also rest rooms with showers. All building was done with volunteer labor by men from northeast Nebraska.

A number of people were recognized for their part in the camp's growth and for reaching influence. Greetings were sent by Kenneth Saunders and wife by way of tape recording. The Howard Petersons gave greetings and encouragement in person as well as Frank King. They were both former missionaries on this field. Orvid Ellis and wife Bonnie of Arthur, Iowa are current local missionaries. Orvid acted as emcee for the occasion.

Ralph Schram and wife had a part in the program. They were influenced by Camp Assurance to go into home missionary work. Numerous other former campers are serving as pastors, home missionaries and foreign missionaries all influenced by their Camp Assurance experiences.
