Exon discusses various issues on Wayne visit

By Randy Hascall
Developing some type of farm bill, reducing the federal budget deficit and reaching an arms control agreement are three of the most important issues confronting the U.S. Congress, according to U.S. Senator James Exon of Nebraska.

Senator Exon discussed those three subjects, listened to comments and answered various questions at the Black Knight in Wayne, Thursday.

Exon, making stops at various northeast Nebraska communities, was a special guest of the Wayne Second Guessers.

"IT'S FUN to be out of Washington and be where the real people are," the senator said after being introduced.

Exon said Congress will be obligated to draw up a new farm bill during its 1984 session since the current one will expire.

After the PIK program and the drought, farmers probably will be back to "fence row to fence row production," Exon said.

"PIK was the only game in town. It's like a junkie shooting himself up in the bloodstream. He thinks that will solve his problems," said Exon, explaining that some follow up to PIK is needed.

THE DEMOCRATIC senator said there is no easy road but emphasized that a farm program which reduces production is necessary.

When asked if he is comfortable with the dairy bill, Exon replied, "Not entirely. Once again it was the only game in town. I hope it works."

Senator Exon said the bill might adversely affect beef and pork prices.

Addressing the federal budget deficit, Exon said the situation is "quite a shocker to a fiscal conservative like myself."

He said Washington forgets about the deficit at the end of the year because it goes away. "Because of the deficit, in my view, we're giving ourselves great difficulty with the trade balance," adding that the trade balance deficit is about double what it has ever been before.

ACCORDING TO Exon, the United States will have a trade deficit of about $80 billion by the end of the year. That means the country will have imported $80 billion more than it exported.

The U.S. needs to increase its exports and decrease its imports, Exon said. Ag products need to be high on the list of exports, he added.

In order to reduce the federal deficit, Exon is proposing a 2 percent cut across the board. Expenditures need to be cut and revenue needs to be increased, he said.

Exon said the feedback he has received indicates that people believe the government is spending too much money. He said people think there is a need to improve the defense but feel the Pentagon is not spending the money wisely.

Referring to the Food for Peace Program, Exon said this country "probably could create a lot of U.S. goodwill by giving out food instead of bullets."

TURNING HIS discussion toward an arms-control agreement, Exon said arms control may be "the issue of mankind."

"It's frightening and maddening to see the total power of the 2 super powers," he said. He added that it's even more frightening to picture everyone having those types of devices in their arsenal 6 to 8 years from now.

Exon said there probably will be no decrease and probably will be some in crease in the defense budget. But, he cautioned that the dramatic increase in defense spending must be curtailed.

He said that if there could be peace and nuclear arms could be policed, then we could see less of an increase in defense spending.

IN DEALING with the Soviets, Exon said food is the best bargaining power the United States has. "Certainly the Soviets don't need more gold or oil or armaments. But, they do need food for the tummy."

The senator suggested making better use of food trades in trying to deal with the Soviet Union. "We dare not trust the Soviet Union but we have got to try to work with them if we're going to come to some kind of agreement."

Exon was questioned about other world affairs including Lebanon. He said he opposed sending troops to Lebanon when the decision was first made.

"Where are we going to learn as Americans? In Korea we spilled blood. In Viet Nam we spilled blood," said Exon. "Why are we trying to maintain peace where there is none? Halfway around the world we're in a no-win situation."

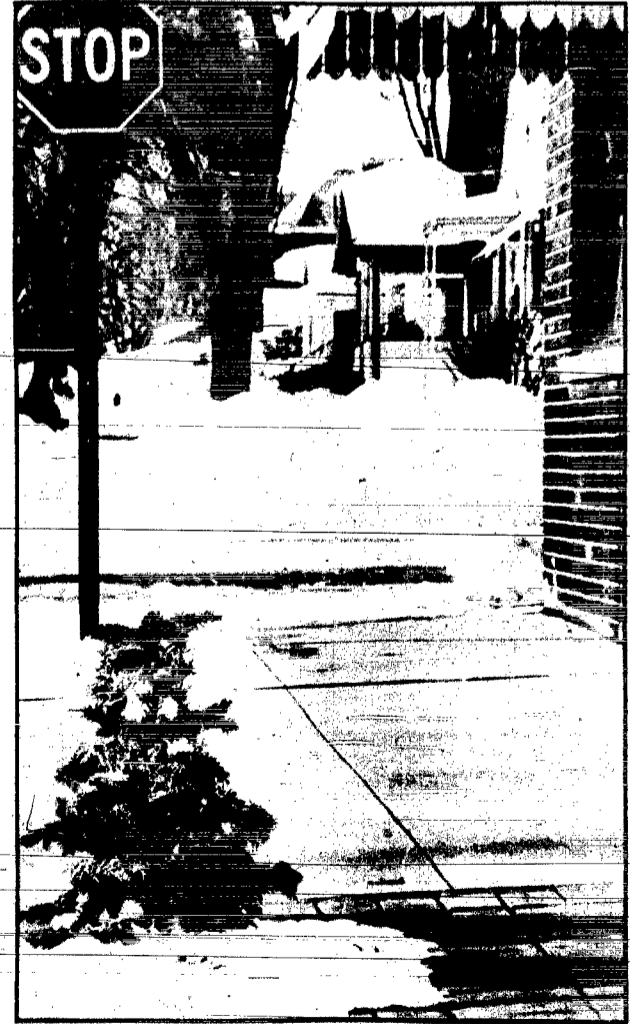

EXON SAID the president had good intentions when he involved the U.S. in Lebanon. However, the senator suggested that we need to go to the United Nations for help.

He said Latin America is somewhat different and added that he believes the president took the right action in Grenada. "I approved Grenada the day it happened. It was well planned, well timed and it worked."

"I think the Soviet Union and Castro probably have their eye on Mexico. We can't let that nation become a Soviet satellite," he said.

SENATOR JAMES EXON (third from left) talks today. The U.S. senator was the guest of the Second Guessers.

Selective Service urges registration; estimates state's compliance to be 99.8%

By Randy Hascall
Young men who have failed to register with the Selective Service System are taking a big gamble according to Van Valkenburg, Area VI Selective Service office manager.

"It is virtually impossible for a young man to go undetected," said Valkenburg, during an interview in Wayne Thursday afternoon.

He said Social Security lists and driver's license lists are used to locate individuals who have not registered. Computer technology makes it easy to determine who has not registered, he said.

FEDERAL LAW provides that every young man born on or after Jan. 1, 1960 must register with the Selective Service System no later than 30 days after reaching his 18th birthday.

Persons may register up to 120 days prior to their 18th birthdays. Failure to register could subject an individual to a $10,000 fine and possible imprisonment for up to 5 years.

Valkenburg said that is a pretty stiff penalty for failing to take about five minutes to fill out a registration card at a local post office.

"It's not a matter of if, it's when," Valkenburg said about finding the unregistered men.

It's the Selective Service System's job to see that everyone complies with the law. It is not its job to enforce the law, Valkenburg said.

A LARGE MAJORITY of young men in Nebraska have abided by the law. According to Selective Service statistics, Nebraska is maintaining a registration compliance of more than 99.8 percent, ranking 9th in the nation.

Valkenburg said his office has seen an upsurge in the number of people complying with registration and the number of people enlisting in the military since the Korean Airlines incident, the assignment of U.S. Marines in Beirut and the U.S. action in Grenada.

Valkenburg said he personally feels a high level of patriotism is the reason for the increased registrations and enlistments.

"I have seen a level of patriotism that is no less than the best we have had," he said. "Our young people are smarter, more educated and probably more opinionated."

THE SELECTIVE Service area manager said one high school student told him that freedom isn't free.

"There is the realization that others on this earth don't play by the same rules as our country," Valkenburg said. "People see the value in our country being strong. They want to protect the things and freedoms we've had for 200 years."

"Our two most likely adversaries are not at all like us. They may be more inclined to gamble. They don't have the checks and balances system we have," he said. He add ed that this country's two most likely opponents understand, above all else, brute strength.

As an example, he pointed back to former President Kennedy's strong stand for the Soviets to get their missiles out of Cuba or pay the price.

VALKENBURG SAID he believes most young men want to be a part of "what politicians, perhaps, call our ready defense posture."

Registration with the Selective Service is an integral and important part of the country's emergency preparedness, Valkenburg said.

He said ignorance is the main reason that some young men have not registered.

He said an anti-draft organization in Nebraska actively solicited for one man to publicly refuse to register and "couldn't find a taker."

Registration simply means filling out a few lines so that a person is available for call in the time of need, he added.

"For those who gamble for a cause that doesn't even exist, that has to indicate stupidity," Valkenburg said.

of failing to register," the Selective Service representative said.

Others may have forgotten to register and may think that if they register late, the "hammer of Uncle Sam will come down and smack them."

According to Valkenburg, that is not true. If someone forgot to register and comes in late, no questions will be asked, he said.

Another disadvantage of not registering is the fact that people who do not register cannot participate in the Federal Benefit Program or Federal Job Training Programs.

That issue is being tested in the Supreme Court but Valkenburg said he feels they will be upheld.

"I BELIEVE THESE federal programs are privileges not rights. People who don't obey the law, shouldn't have the right to privileges," Valkenburg said.

He used driver's licenses as an example of privileges that can be taken away if laws are not obeyed.

Registration requirements include men who already are members of the various military reserve components such as the Army Reserves or the National Guard, men who are physically handicapped, aliens intending to become permanent residents of the United States and former active duty personnel.

No increases planned Hospital board approves budget

The governing board of Providence Medical Center approved an operating budget of $1,800,540 at its annual budget meeting Tuesday.

In an effort to control costs, no increases in room rates or other direct charges are being planned for the 1984 fiscal year, according to Hospital Administrator Marci Thomas.

Due to efficient managing in 1983, it has been determined that even though the budget increased 8 percent due to salary increases, supplies and other operational expenses, Providence Medical Center should still be able to maintain quality care without increasing charges," Mrs. Thomas said.

Medicare payment, is very close to the average cost per discharge for 1983.

Under the new system of Diagnosis Related Groupings for Medicare payments, a specific amount will be paid to the hospital according to the diagnosis of a patient.

"If the efficient operation can continue, it is felt no increases are indicated. But, if occupancy should drop, or supplies take a sudden, drastic increase, or energy rates skyrocket, then the rates will again have to be evaluated as well as all other operational aspects of the hospital," Mrs. Thomas said.

Members of the governing board are Felix Dorsey, Ken Olds and Frank Prather, all of Wayne; Dennis Christensen of Pender; Larry McMasters of Wisner; and five nuns, Sister Kevin Hermen, Sister Gertrude Marie Walfer, Sister Anella Salber, Sister Agnes Walfer and Sister Salvina Sauter.

Christmas is in the air all around us. As usual, commercialization has infiltrated the holiday season.

However, by the second week of December most people are beginning to get into the Christmas spirit.

The Christmas specials on television have begun and will continue right up to the big day. There are more TV specials than there are lights on our Christmas trees.

There was the "Christmas Racoons" cartoon special—a musical tracking the adventures of three raccoons and their aardvark-like adversary, the villainous Cyril Smeer.

If you missed that one, you surely couldn't have missed "Deck The Halls With Wacky Walls." Here's what TV Guide said about that special: "The wallwalkers, six squishy multilegged creatures from the planet King Kling who can bounce, fly and stick to walls and ceilings, are sent to earth to uncover the meaning of Christmas. I hope you didn't miss that one."

Depending on what television stations you can pick up, tonight are the "Billy Graham Christmas Special" and "Santa's Magic Toy Bag."

The traditional, famous Christmas specials begin on Wednesday night. The original "Frosty The Snowman" and "Twas The Night Before Christmas" are both scheduled that night. Those are considered two of the better specials.

On Thursday night, there is "Christmas in Washington, D.C." Magnum P.I. even celebrates Christmas Eve on his show that night. That is just the Christmas programming for this week. There were some Christmas specials last week and lots more coming up in the next two weeks.

I've come up with a few Christmas ideas for some people who might be difficult to shop for.

For Lyle Bromser, Nebraska Cornhusker announcer—a good helper who can spot the line of scrimmage and the opponent's nickname.

For Governor Bob Kerrey—a video disc player with a copy of the movie, "Terms of Endearment," starring his Hollywood honey, Debra Winger.

For President Ronald Reagan—a game of "Risk" so he can send troops anywhere in the world if he wants to. Also another bottle of Grecian Formula.

For former Secretary of the Interior, James Wall—a case of laryngitis so he doesn't get in trouble by saying silly things.

For Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer—an E.T. doll to replace "out of this world" Marcus Dupree.

For rock singer Boy George of Culture Club—a new set of makeup and eye liner.

For Fidel Castro—a box of fine

Havana cigars loaded with TNT.

For Russian leader Yuri Andropov—a toy set of miniature nuclear bombs so he can get his thrills blowing them up in his living room instead of the real world.

For the city of Wayne—a few more layers of ice on the two main streets so motorists don't have to worry about losing their cars in some of the potholes.

For Wayne State College—a statue of Abraham Lincoln for people who don't like the work of art located on campus.

For Wayne State athletics—7 foot-tall, 290 pound, two sport standup who has a 36 inch vertical jump and can run the 40 yard dash in 4.4 seconds.

For Nebraska farmers—a colony of people on the moon and a grain contract to purchase Nebraska grain at astronomical prices.

For the editor of The Wayne Herald—more imagination and a better sense of humor so at least a few people will read this column each week.

Q: Should the title to real estate owned by a husband and wife read: "his name and her name," or his name and/or her name" or his name and/or her name with right of survivorship?" If the title says and/or or and/or WROS, can one of them sell without the other's permission?

A: If the title says and/or or and/or WROS, can the deceased leave a will which specifies his share is to go to someone else? If the title says and, and one spouse dies, would any legal action be necessary before the property was passed on to the survivor?

A: A "joint tenancy" should be used when it is the intention of the husband and wife to hold real estate in equal and undivided shares, with the survivor becoming the sole owner of the property upon the death of one spouse.

On legal documents establishing a joint tenancy, the names of the owners should be connected with the words, "as joint tenants" (e.g. John Doe and Jane Doe as joint tenants).

Another acceptable form would be "as joint tenants and not as tenants in common." If you have jointly owned property for which the title is worded differently, it may still be legally acceptable, but you may want to review it with your lawyer to be certain.

Some types of survivorships, such as certain bank accounts, also use the words, "with right of survivorship" (WROS) after the names of the owners. While these may not be true joint tenancies, if they are properly created they will enable the last survivor to own all of the property.

Property which is held in joint tenancy cannot be passed on according to will, because a will can only control the disposition of individually owned property. Only the last survivor may dispose of jointly owned property under the terms of a will.

It would be possible for one joint tenant to sell his or her interest in jointly owned property. However, one joint tenant could not provide a buyer with good title to the entire property.

Such a sale would have the effect of changing the joint tenancy to a "tenancy in common," in which each person owns an equal share of the property. (With a tenancy in common, when one tenant dies in common, but is passed on according to a will or according to state law if there is no will.)

This could give rise to disputes concerning the rights and obligations of the remaining owner and the new buyer.

In answer to your last question, if the property is held by husband and wife in joint tenancy, and one spouse dies, the property would automatically go to the surviving spouse without any legal action being necessary.

Until recently, it was still necessary for the surviving spouse to have an inheritance tax determination made in the county court. As long as the first spouse has died after January 1, 1983, a tax determination no longer must be made for property between spouses.

If you have a legal question, write "Ask a Lawyer," P.O. Box 2529, Lincoln 68502. This column is intended to provide general legal information, not specific legal advice. "Ask a Lawyer" is a public service of the Nebraska State Bar Association.

Chinese to purchase two million tons of United States wheat

By Doug Berester
U.S. Congress

I was pleased last week to learn that China will purchase two million metric tons of United States wheat by the end of 1983. We are in a long term agreement with China that provides for the purchase of six million metric tons of wheat and corn. With this purchase, the Chinese will fulfill their minimum 1976, leaves the United States and other exporting nations uncertain about the Japanese market.

Delivery of the 40,000 tons must be made between January and June, 1984. The import quota for early fiscal 1983 was 72,000 metric tons. For late fiscal 1982, it was 65,000 tons.

Earlier this year, when the trade dispute involving China that country informed the United States that it had come elsewhere for the wheat. Last week, the Foreign Agriculture Service announced that the Chinese charge diplomats had notified United States officials that China will purchase the two million tons of wheat yet this year.

IF YOU ARE looking for a gift for a hard to shop-for relative or a friend who has everything, you might consider a Golden Eagle Passport.

The Golden Eagle Passport is a permit valid for one calendar year, which admits the holder and a carload of guests to all federal entrance fee areas—including any national parks. The 1984 wallet sized card is currently available for $10.00 at the Homestead National Monument Center, four miles west of Beatrice on Highway 4.

While Homestead does not charge an entrance fee, many western parks do. If someone is planning a national park vacation during 1984, the golden Eagle Passport would be an ideal gift and one that is useful all year long.

This purchase will be in addition to 3.96 million tons already purchased under the agreement. Of that amount, 2.58 million tons has been wheat and the rest is corn.

THERE WAS MUCH disappointment when Japan announced a 40,000 metric ton self import quota for late fiscal 1983 (October to April). That country's Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries said that the announcement was provisional, with a second part of the quota to be announced after more is known about Japanese beef production trends.

This sort of two part announcement, which is being used for the first time since

Dec. 11-17 has been declared as "Drunk Driver Awareness Week." The Wayne Herald asked employees of five Wayne drinking establishments if they thought their customers were more reluctant to drive in light of Nebraska's new, tougher law on drunk driving.

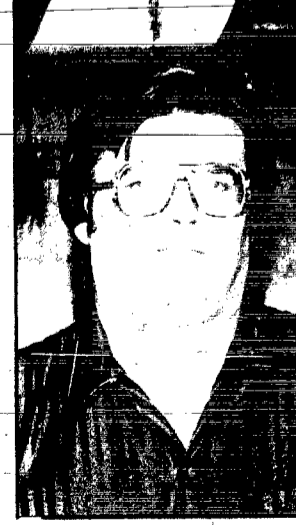

"I think more people are drinking at home. I've noticed that customers are a little more cautious. If they've had too much to drink they'll get somebody else to drive them." — Jill Mrsny, bartender, Alice's Country Tavern

"I think it's in the back of everybody's mind. People that are going on trips aren't drinking as much — they're waiting until they get to their destination." — Dick Pflanz, owner, El Toro Lounge

"I think people are more aware of it, but I don't know if they're more cautious. I really don't think it's made a difference. Beverly Olson, co-owner, The Windmill.

"They are aware to the extent if they have a considerable amount of driving to do. Personally, I'm more aware of it because I don't want to lose any customers to that. If somebody is too out of control, I want to make sure they get home safely." — Terry Waggoner, manager, Les' Steak House.

"The percentage of people that are aware of the problem has grown, but the number is still small. I know that, as a consumer, the new law has put the fear of God of the judicial system in me." — Bob Newman, manager, Melodee Lanes Lounge.

Consider safety 1st

When buying toys for children this holiday season, the National Society to Prevent Blindness, Nebraska Affiliate urges consumers to beware the following hazards before making a final purchase:
- Sharp exposed edges, points, nails, screws or pins.
- Projectile toys, such as guns that shoot darts or cork.
- Rigid interior frames that can poke through outside coverings.
- Loose parts that can become unattached, exposing sharp metal or plastic.
- Toys that shatter or break easily.
According to the Society, misuse and abuse of toys, dangerous toys and unsupervised play annually take their toll on children's eyes.
"Of special concern to the Society," says Barbara Allen, Executive Director of the Nebraska Affiliate, "are so called projectile toys. These include BB, air and spring operated guns, slingshots, bows and arrows and darts." Last available estimates show that 1,470 children between 5 and 14 years old were injured by these weapons.
"It is also important that the gift buyer consider the child before making the purchase," Mrs. Allen adds. "The toy should be suited to the child's age and any potential abuses explored. Once the toy is presented to the child, its use should be explained thoroughly."
Other eye safety tips on protecting children's eyes offered in the Society's pamphlet, "Play It Safe." Single copies are available free by writing to the National Society to Prevent Blindness, Nebraska Affiliate, 4600 Valley Road, Lincoln 68510. Requests should be accompanied by a self addressed, stamped, business sized envelope.
Celebrating its 75th anniversary this year, the National Society to Prevent Blindness is the oldest voluntary health agency nationally engaged in preventing blindness through a comprehensive program of community services, public and professional education and research.

Chamber award given

WAYNE CHAMBER OF Commerce President Randy Pedersen presents a chamber progress award to Sally Newton of the Diet Center in Wayne during the weekly chamber coffee held there Friday. Mrs. Newton, of Laurel, purchased the franchise last September with her husband Gary.

Response to injunction

FHA issues orders

In response to a temporary injunction issued in the Coleman v. Block lawsuit by North Dakota Federal District Judge Bruce Van Sickle, the Farmers Home Administration national director Charles Shuman has ordered that the agency's state directors halt all actions intended to force farmers out of business.

Judge Van Sickle's injunction applies in all states but Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kansas, Minnesota and Mississippi which have similar state class action suits.

Administrator Shuman's Nov. 15th directive states that the injunction stops FHMA from refusing to release the proceeds from the sale of crops and livestock to pay for a borrower's living and operating expenses, accelerating a borrower's loan account, foreclosing on real estate security, repossessing chattel security and attempting to force a borrower to voluntarily convey any secured property to FHMA.
