Toastmasters are seeking members

Toastmasters, an organization designed to help people become more polished, confident public speakers, is seeking new members for its Wayne club. Membership is open to any area resident regardless of public speaking experience. The club provides members with a program to improve their abilities to express their thoughts, ideas and opinions, and develop their leadership potential. Prepared talks provide experience in organizing speeches to inform, persuade and entertain. Constructive evaluation gives the speaker the audience's reaction and helps participants develop the ability to listen critically and analytically. Anyone interested in joining the Toastmasters is encouraged to attend a meeting at 7 p.m. tomorrow (Tuesday) at Daylight Donuts. For more information, contact Doug Terrett at 375-4243 or Anne Svoboda at 375-2240.

Injuries avoided

A WRECKER pulls a livestock trailer up out of the ditch on Highway 35 just south of the Winside junction. The accident, which occurred Wednesday afternoon, involved a pickup driven by Monte Pfeiffer of Norfolk and a pickup driven by Larry Hansen of Wayne. Hansen was pulling a trailer with 7 cattle southbound when Pfeiffer's pickup crossed the intersection westbound and the vehicles collided. Only minor injuries were reported by the drivers and the cattle were uninjured.

Lift-a-thon scheduled at Wayne

By lifting up 270 people in the Wayne area will be able to raise money for Special Olympics.
The 1984 LiftAmerica program, which will lift off at Wayne Carroll High School on March 20, is designed to raise funds for the Special Olympics.
LiftAmerica is a series of nationwide, community based lifts that are conducted on behalf of Special Olympics and the National Strength and Conditioning Association, as corded to Dr. Donald Zeiss, chairman of the event at Wayne High.
"LiftAmerica is the first national fund raising program to emphasize strength training and conditioning," Zeiss said.

PARTICIPANTS WILL secure pledges toward their tested performance in optional strength training conditioning exercises.

THROUGH THE program, the NSCA will team up with Special Olympic training staffs to conduct what eventually will be a nationwide network of training schools.

Great Plains film planned today

The Lakota, One Nation of the Plains, the second of six programs being presented as part of "The Great Plains Experience" series, will be shown today (Monday) on the Wayne State College campus.
The film will be shown at 7:30 p.m. and again at 7:40 p.m. Both showings will be in the Theatre. The public is invited to attend free of charge.
"THE LAKOTA" will be presented by Dr. Ali Eminov, associate professor of anthropology at Wayne State.
The program depicts Plains Indian life and cultural adaptations prior to extensive white contact in the 19th century.
The program is narrated by N. Scott Momaday, poet, novelist and professor of literature at Stanford University.
Other "Great Plains Experience" films will be announced.
All of the films focus on the people who were responsible for the events that shaped the history of the Great Plains.
Dr. Jack Middendorf, director of U. S. Conn. Library at Wayne State, is responsible for putting together the Great Plains series, which is funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Tired of the voices

By Richard Leshar
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

The budget, be it state, local or federal, cannot be cut, we are told, because the people demand certain services. Which people demand which services? The people. And they demand all the existing services, so nothing can be cut.

Well, I, for one, am awfully tired of hearing the voices of special interest groups, amplified by the media, lobbed off on the rest of us as the voice of "the people." Somehow I doubt that "the people" look at our nation's sorry educational system and demand, not discipline in the classroom and competent teachers, but higher teachers salaries and more administrators.

The pleadings of special interest groups to preserve and expand their pet programs, all the while insisting that these demands emanate from "the people," remind me of the scene in the "Wizard of Oz" where the "great and powerful Wizard of Oz" is exposed and shouts into the microphone, "Pay no attention to the man behind that curtain."

IN THESE CASES it is the duty of taxpayers to pay a great deal of attention to the special interest behind that curtain pretending to speak for us, explaining that we want higher taxes and we want more government spending. They may. We don't.

But what about the cases where a real service is being provided? Here we must remember that real services can be provided by the private sector as well as by the government. Usually, the private sector can produce the same service more efficiently than the government. Politicians often insist that if the government did not provide a service, say, in city bus lines or garbage collection, the service would simply cease to exist.

This presupposes that there is no real demand for the service. If so, then fine. Let's get rid of it. If no one wants it, why should we pay good money in taxes to provide a worthless service? But many services now provided by the government are legitimate desires by individuals. They could, however, be provided more efficiently by the private sector. This is why the concept of privatization has become so popular in many American cities. Garbage collection, bus lines, and even fire departments are being turned over to the private sector, which is providing better service at a lower cost.

Privatization is particularly important in Europe, where the welfare state has grown so unwieldy and the entrenched political interests so powerful that budget cuts are virtually impossible. Margaret Thatcher, the prime minister of Great Britain, has been unable to pass significant budget cuts, but she has been able to sell more than $3 billion worth of government-run businesses.

The factories, telecommunications firms, and transportation companies sold to the private sector continue to provide their service or product to the public, but the competitive free market disciplines the newly privatized firms, demanding lower costs and more productivity.

CRITICS OF privatization — who, if you scratch the surface, are often the beneficiaries of some cross-subsidy from the government or other consumers — try to play down the savings to taxpayers and the greater accountability in the private sector. Their particular good or service, they argue, is special and cannot be provided by the free market, and if it could, it wouldn't save much money anyway.

It is often hard to visualize how a service currently run by the government would operate in the much different private sector. How much would be saved? How much more efficient would it be?

The benefits of privatization and private initiative in general were highlighted in a recent study that was put out by the Foundation for the Private Sector. The foundation calculated the costs imposed if the Boy Scouts of America, a well-respected private service organization, was run instead by the federal government.

The contrast was stark. In the private sector, the Boy Scouts operate with more than one million volunteers — troop leaders, pack leaders, etc. — and a budget of $187 million for national and regional offices, uniforms, and camping expenses. Put into the hands of the federal government, salaries, rent for meeting space, and bureaucratic overhead would bring the total cost of a government-run Boy Scouts of America to more than $5.4 billion, 30 times as expensive.

The next time a politician tells you that a particular good or service must be run by Uncle Sam or city hall, remember that he'd be telling you the same thing about a $5.4 billion Boy Scout program if the government had thought of it first.

After a relatively long period of relatively nice weather, Wayne once again looks like it could play host to the 1984 Winter Olympic Games.

If we just had a bobbed course, perhaps we could hold our own private mini-olympics.

It's probably a good thing we got hit by another storm. I was just beginning to think that winter was over and spring was here. If the nice weather would have held up much longer I probably would have been hospitalized for pneumonia for walking around town with no coat on.

I almost expected to see the golf course and tennis courts in use occasionally over the past several weeks.

Someone told me that the Farmers Almanac predicted 40 inches of snow for February. Although the almanac often is more reliable than many weather forecasters, I had just written off the 40-inch prediction as a bad guess.

However, if our total accumulation for the weekend is 10 or 12 inches we could still be in the running. But, it will be a long shot.

With a heavy, wet snow like this, snowmen will be popping up all over the place. The bad part is scooping walks and trying to maneuver vehicles around in this crap.

For the sixth consecutive year, I attended the Nebraska State Wrestling Championships in Lincoln.

However, this was the first year that I attended as a spectator rather than in an official capacity as a sports writer. It was fun to watch the action without having to take notes and scramble around from one mat to another.

This year was even more fun because I had a brother and nephew competing in the tourney. Both wrestle for David City High, which sent 10 wrestlers to state.

For my brother Brent, a senior, the state tournament probably will mark the end of his wrestling career. For my nephew Jess, a freshman, it is just the beginning.

My brother lost 2 close matches at state but at least he won enough matches to win a medal. He was disappointed with his finish but it was a whole lot better than I ever did in my wrestling days.

My nephew did well in his state debut although he fell 1 victory short of winning a medal. He still won 2 of his 4 matches. That's not bad for a freshman.

Maybe it's the pride I have for my 2 relatives. Perhaps it's because my brother and nephew are twice the wrestlers I ever was.

Whatever the reason, I try to convince myself that I deserve most of the credit for my relatives being good wrestlers. (But, if they were lousy wrestlers, I wouldn't take the blame)

My brother first learned to defend himself when I would make him give me his seat on the school bus. I knew he would someday be a wrestler many years ago when I turned off his favorite TV show and he tackled me by the legs.

He and my nephew both improved their wrestling skills on the farm. It takes quick reflexes and strong muscles to whip bales of alfalfa that are being thrown at you by a bully from a hay rack.

It's not easy to fight several pigs for the feed cap your uncle has taken off your head and thrown into the pen. Just ask my nephew.

Those 2 characters probably grew more hard-nosed from those games of two touch football that suddenly turned into tackle.

And they had to either learn to fight like crazy to beat me to scraps of food at the supper table or go hungry.

Aw, heck! Who am I foolin'? I didn't have any part in their wrestling success. But, it sure is fun to pretend.

I foolishly made the comment sometime last week that I may be the only person in the state to have a brother and nephew both wrestling in the state meet.

Talk about stupid statements! I hope my 3 sisters and other brother didn't say anything that dumb.

See you when the snow clears.

I REALIZE YOU'VE GOT TO PROTECT OUR INVESTMENT, BUT WHERE DO WE SLEEP?

ask a lawyer

a public service of the nebraska state bar association

Q. Can my husband and I write our own will (without an attorney) and name a personal representative(s) in it, and have it be a legal will? Does it need to be signed in the presence of witnesses? Should the will be kept in a safety deposit box, or where?

A. It is possible to write your own will. Such wills are called "Holographic" wills and are handwritten wills which need not be witnessed. To be valid, the material provisions of the will, the signature and the date of signing must all be in the handwriting of the person making the will.

This means that you and your husband should each write your own separate will. It is best to use a blank piece of paper without any letterhead, printing or writing on it.

By doing the above, you will have complied with minimum requirements for creating a valid will in the State of Nebraska. However, it should be noted that "do it yourself" wills are often the cause of litigation, will contests and problems with the title to real estate.

Even a minor error in a will can alter the way in which your property is disposed of, and your heirs would be the ones to suffer the results of an improper will. For the best results an attorney should be consulted about drafting your will.

A holographic will or any other will should be held so that it will be turned over to the appropriate parties or court upon your death.

Any person entrusted with a will is liable for damages and penalties for losing the will or otherwise failing to produce the will upon your death.

In Nebraska, many people choose to deposit their will with their attorney, with their county court, with a bank if it is the named personal representative, or in their safety deposit box. Wherever you deposit your will, let all interested parties know where it is.

Before you elect to use your safety deposit box, find out what must be done to insure it gets from the box into the hands of the appropriate parties or court upon your death.

If you have a legal question, write "Ask a Lawyer," P.O. Box 2529, Lincoln 68502. This column is intended to provide general legal information, not specific legal advice. "Ask a Lawyer" is a public service of the Nebraska State Bar Association.

street talk

This week, The Wayne Herald asked 5 Allen High School football players what they think of Lyell Bremser's announcement that he will retire from the KFAB radio crew as play-by-play announcer of the Nebraska football games.

"I think he should stay on myself. I listen to him all the time. He's a pretty good announcer and he's pro-Nebraska." — Jay Jones, junior.

"I don't really listen to him on radio that much. But he gets excited and he's pretty fun to listen to." — Mike Hingst, senior.

"I don't think the broadcasting of the game will be as good, because Bremser does it in his own special way and he gets the fans excited about the game. He'll be a hard man to replace." — Derwin Roberts, senior.

"I suppose if he wants to quit, he can quit. I suppose I'll miss him a little bit because he always knew who everybody was. It will take a little bit of color out of the game. I kind of enjoyed listening to him." — Kirk Hansen, senior.

"He reports well and I think that he knows what he's doing. Without him, I don't think they'll have quite as interesting commentary." — Shane Fahrenheit, junior.

Iris tour plans blooming

JIM HUMMEL AND ROGER Nelson of Wayne go over plans for this year's Region 21 American Iris Tour, which will be hosted by the Elkhorn Valley Iris Society of Norfolk. The tour, which will be headquartered at Wayne State College, is scheduled June 2 and 3 and will include visits to Hummel's Bubble Bee and Nelson's Iris Country gardens in Wayne. Other garden stops will be in Norfolk and Stanton. Hummel, at left, is vice president of Region 21, which includes North and South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska. Nelson, general chairman for this year's spring tour, said an estimated 150 persons are expected to take part. Guest speaker will be prominent iris grower and hybridizer Paul Black of Oklahoma City, Okla., who also will conduct a judges training session.

Marking 62nd year

MR. AND MRS. EARL Davis of Carroll will be honored for their 62nd wedding anniversary with an open house reception on Sunday, Feb. 26 from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the United Methodist Church fellowship hall in Carroll. There will be a brief program at 3 p.m., and all friends and relatives are invited. The couple requests no gifts. Hosting the event will be their sons and families, Don and Gordon of Carroll.

Supper honors Greves on 25th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Greve of Wakefield celebrated their silver wedding anniversary Feb. 8 with a supper at the Royal D Steakhouse in Emerson.

Thirty-four friends and relatives were guests. A buffet spread on the luncheon table 25 years ago served as the centerpiece.

The program included a toast to the honored couple by Mrs. Merlin Greve and two poems, "My Parents" and "Grandpa and Grandma," written by daughter Linda and read by another daughter, Mrs. Roger Leonard.

Mrs. Veril Carlson read a write up of the couple's wedding 25 years ago and Mrs. Robert Oberg read highlights of the couple's diary from 1955 to 1984.

The remainder of the evening was spent playing cards.

The anniversary cake was baked and decorated by Mrs. Keneth Thomsen using the original top from the couple's wedding cake.

Sweetheart royalty

QUEEN KARMA RAHN and King Kevin Chase were crowned during the annual FFA-FHA Sweetheart Dance Feb. 11 at Allen High School. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Vandal Rahn and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chase. Crowning the new royalty were 1982-83 Queen Pam Heckathorn and King Troy Harder. Attendees were juniors Renea French and Jay Jones; sophomores LeAnn McDonald and Ryan Creamer; and freshmen Kristi Chase and Jeff Gotch. Mistress and master of ceremonies were juniors Tammy Kavanaugh and Mitch Petit. Theme for the dance was "Tonight I Celebrate My Love For You," and colors were red, pink and silver.

winside public schools

Speech activities
The Winside High School Speech Team will begin its season Feb. 25 at the Beemer Invitational. Other contest dates are: Lewis and Clark Conference on March 5 and district on March 15.
Students making our full squad include Kerri Leighton and Tammy Brudigan in original public address; Missi Farran and Kerri Leighton in humorous prose; Becky Janssen and Susie Petersen in serious prose; Julie Harmsen and Teresa Brudigan in poetry; Mike Gable and Andy Janssen in after dinner speaking; Tammy Brudigan, Missi Farran and Tracy Topp in extemporaneous speaking; Becky Janssen and Trisha Topp in duet acting and Dan Mundt, Leah Jensen and Cindy Berg in oral interpretation of drama.

Music activities
Two students from Winside were selected to participate in the Wayne State Honor Band Festival on Saturday, Feb. 18. Kerri Leighton was chosen by taped audition to play in the wind ensemble which was directed by guest conductor Kurt Roggen.
Kim Damme played in the concert band in which students are selected on the basis of their school band director's recommendation. The concert band was directed by Wayne State College music instructor Dr. Ray Kethan. Both girls also performed in the symphonic band which is a combination of the wind ensemble and concert band.

Kerri plays the clarinet and Kim plays the alto saxophone.
On Feb. 27, 19 students from Winside High School will be performing in concert at the Clark Division conference instrumental clinic in Wynot. The concert is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for students.
On Thursday, March 1, Winside High School music students will be performing their annual pops concert. Selections from the concert band, stage band, choir, swing choir and girls' glee will be performed. The public is invited and admission is free. The concert will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Winside elementary multi-purpose room.

Communication
Over one half of Laurel-Concord high school students find it difficult to communicate with their parents and teachers. No specific reasons were stated, but the general thought was that the students didn't think their parents would understand or listen to their problems.

Elaine Heffner of "Parents" magazine, claims kids focus on their own gratification. On the other hand she adds that parents are primarily concerned with responsibility. She says if parents would give students more responsibility and trust them a little more, then communications at home would become more open.

LCHS students say the biggest thing that keeps them from opening up to their parents, is parents' prying questions. Parents won't give up until they get some kind of answer.

According to Seventeen magazine, teen-agers wanting to make requests to their parents should start out slowly by asking small favors and proving that they have enough responsibility to handle the situations. Then move up and ask for bigger requests that their parents probably would have turned down if they would have asked them right away.

Effervesce - A puzzler
What DOES effervesce really mean? This past week many Laurel-Concord students were puzzled when asked the meaning of this word, which was randomly chosen from a dictionary.

Effervesce drew some really strange responses. Of the students asked, 10 percent said it was some kind of disease. Answers varied from a skin disease caused by drinking water in Mexico and too much sun, to a nose disease caused by blowing your nose too much. Eighty percent of the students thought it was a noun—something that you could see and touch.

The responses got even stranger. One student said, "It's an action in France, that gets you life in prison—it's like murder." Another student thought effervesce was, "The name for a dead person in a casket."

Still other students had different interpretations of effervesce. One thought it was, "The ability to say what is on your mind, without hesitation." And last, but not least, one student thought effervesce was, "A natural disaster of any kind, caused by a severe change in the earth's climate."

Although all the students who were asked, put forth a good effort, and really tried, no one got close to the meaning of the word. Have you figured out the meaning yet?

The meaning of the word of effervesce is to begin to boil, or to bubble or hiss. Surprised?

Young scientists

On Saturday, Jan. 21, over 250 7th-12th grade students from all over northeast Nebraska became scientists for a day. Actually, the students were attending the Northeast Nebraska Jr. Academy of Math and Science 1984 Winter Workshop. It was a workshop for students and teachers to increase awareness in areas of science education.

The purpose of the workshop was to provide motivational activities for students, and to create a professional setting for teachers to share teaching ideas. This was the first year that elementary teachers were encouraged to attend the workshop and to share their ideas on how they teach science.

Mr. Pankratz, from Wayne State College and Mr. Ed Brogie, a Science teacher at Laurel-Concord High School, played a large part of setting up the 1984 Winter Workshop. They have been planning the workshop for the past five or six months. Other teachers and interested community members also helped work out the details of the workshop.

Mr. Brogie said, "It's a great experience for students because they get exposed to a wide variety of topics, they get to be instructed by other teachers, and they're in classes with students from other schools." Derek Lineberry, who attended the workshop, said, "It was a great chance for a person to explore the many different aspects of science and to maybe become more interested in a field that they hadn't previously thought of."

Carol Osborne, who also attended, said, "It was a good opportunity to learn something interesting and useful. I really enjoyed it and I met a few new people."

Twenty different classes were offered. They included areas from computers, astronomy, robotics, and microbiology, to experimental biology of sharks, and embryology.

Three of the twenty classes offered were taught by Laurel-Concord teachers. Mr. Gale Hamilton (Jr. High science teacher) taught "Experiments for the Jr. High Scientist." Mr. Alan Lemke (Sr. High English teacher) taught "Creative Science Through Basic Writing." Mr. Craig Rostad (band instructor) taught "Science of Musical Sound."

The day began with registration at 9 o'clock a.m. (The day was divided into two sessions, a morning and an afternoon session). The morning session began at 9:30 and lasted until 11:30 when everyone broke for lunch. The afternoon session began at 1:00 and lasted until 3:00 when a special rocket demonstration began.

Twenty one different schools from northeast Nebraska attended the day-long workshop. Over 30 students, grades 7-12, attended from Laurel-Concord.
