Video slots future is somewhat dimmed

The future of video lottery machines in Wayne and other Nebraska communities became dimmed somewhat this week as the Legislature advanced a bill that would prohibit the machines.

However, the bill was amended to allow the machines already in place to remain in operation until Jan. 1, 1985.

The bill, LB 744 advanced to the second round of debate on a 44-3 vote. The bill's primary sponsor, Sen. Peter Hoagland of Omaha, said he was pleased the bill was advanced but disappointed that the effective date was changed.

BEFORE THE amendment was passed on a 25-15 vote, the bill would have been implemented 90 days after adjournment of the Legislature in mid-April.

Sen. Gary Hannibal made a proposal to make regulations on the video machines stricter but let them remain legal. That proposal was defeated 25-21.

The bill still must clear the second and third rounds of debate in the Legislature before it can take effect.

Included in the amendment is a directive that machines being operated outside city or county boundaries where they are approved should be unplugged. That provision is directed at Wayne and other communities that have machines in other communities.

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, the main opponent of the bill, said he will still try to put the issue on the November general election ballot. "This is an issue the people should vote on, and I intend to see that is done," DeCamp said.

WITH THE AMENDMENT attached to the bill, video slot machines now operating in Nebraska communities can continue to be operated until Jan. 1.

It also would forbid any other communities from approving use of video machines.

Hannibal's proposal was to prohibit any video lottery activity unless voters had approved use of the machines in their city or county and they complied with state regulations.

A commission charged with regulating all aspects of voter-approved video lotteries would have been established under his proposal.

The regulations would have included restrictions on where the machines could be located and the number of machines at each location.

OMAHA SEN. Bernice Labez said the bill to make video slots legal would be inconsistent with the state's laws on other types of gambling. She cited $10 million a year in tax revenue from horse racing, bingo and pickle cards.

Sen. Elroy Hetner of Coleridge said he considers the video machines more corrupting and damaging to families than other forms of gambling currently legal in Nebraska.

Sen. Merte Von Minden of Allen, representing District 17, voted to advance LB 744. He didn't vote on Newell's proposal to delay the implementation of LB 744 until Jan. 1 and voted yes on Hannibal's proposal to keep but regulate video slot machines.

Stanton city council wants Wayne lottery machine out

Following in the footsteps of West Point's administration, the Stanton City Council will ask the City of Wayne to remove its 1 video lottery machine from Stanton.

The council voted 3-0 Tuesday night to have its attorney send a letter to Wayne issuing the request. West Point asked Wayne to remove a video machine from that town nearly 1 month ago.

Stanton Mayor Leo Hansen pointed out that his community was not receiving revenue from the machine, which is located at Hungry's Brewery.

Councilman Dave Krutz said he doesn't feel it is proper for the citizens of Stanton to help pay Wayne's taxes.

In addition to Wayne and Stanton, the City of Wayne currently has lottery machines in Tekamah, Carroll, Winside, Decatur, Pender, Craig, Wisner and Beemer. The City of Wayne received more than $1,100 in revenues from the slot machines last week, according to city hall records.

Alcohol, drug program set

Frank Carney of the Region 5 Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention Education Center Program is scheduled to be at Wayne High School tomorrow (Tuesday). Carney will meet with all interested parents and community members at 7:30 in the high school library. He will discuss attitudes, improving relations and communication between young people and parents.

The activity is part of a program being sponsored by the Wayne Public Schools to reduce student drug and alcohol abuse. Questions regarding the program may be directed to Curt Frye, guidance director at Wayne High.

Free cheese, butter, honey

Free cheese, butter and honey will be distributed in Wayne, Carroll and Hoskins this week according to Thelma Moeller, Wayne County Social Services director.

On Wednesday (March 14), the supplies will be given out at the fire hall in Hoskins, beginning at 1 p.m.

In Carroll, supplies will be distributed beginning at 9 a.m. Thursday (March 15) in the fire hall. They also will be given away beginning at 1 p.m. Thursday in the Win Side City Auditorium.

A giveaway in Wayne is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. on Friday (March 16) at the Social Services office in the basement of the Wayne County Courthouse.

Anyone who plans to collect free food will be required to present a social security card. Income guidelines will be posted with notices at the various communities.

Council race develops

Wayne's First Ward City Council race has turned into a three man battle, following the filing of Larry S. Craigston for the seat.

Craigston faces John Reider and incumbent Jim Geunert, seeking the council position for the First Ward.

Persons who have through Friday (March 18) to file for public office, according to Wayne County Clerk Dignette Morris.

Although some officials see the First Ward council seat as becoming interesting race, Mrs. Morris said several county offices have received no filings for office. If no filings are received for a particular seat, it will be filled by written ballot, she said.

New bar is hoping for full house

The King of Clubs might have an ace in the hole.

The management of Wayne's newest cocktail lounge, "The King of Clubs," thinks that "ace" is to attract a broad range of customers by offering drinks at a fair price and good service in a pleasant atmosphere.

The bar, which is scheduled to open this Wednesday, is located at 109 Main St. in downtown Wayne. The building formerly housed "George's Big Apple," a lounge that attracted a predominantly college crowd.

"We're not trying to cater to any one crowd," said Elfa Olson, whose husband Delbert will manage the bar.

"WE'LL WELCOME the college kids with open arms, but we want anyone to feel free to come in."

The Olsons' son, Dan, owns the bar with a partner, Bonnie Gregor.

Olson said the first order of business for the King of Clubs crew was to change the image of the bar.

George's Big Apple had a reputation of being a rather boisterous place at times.

"We completely redid the whole place," Olson said. "We got all new everything — we did it right."

About the only thing in the 6,000 square foot building that remains from the days of George's Big Apple is a mansard roof over the bar.

"We decided we'd have to redo the whole place to get rid of the old image," Olson said.

THE BACK BAR and storage cabinets are the same ones used in George's, but the wood has been completely stripped and refinished to restore its natural beauty. All the seats and floors have been redone.

The front of the bar will house a large game room, complete with pool tables, a shuffleboard, several video games and stools for spectators.

In the center of the building is "The King of Clubs Room," where customers can sit and enjoy drinks and conversation. The room is paneled in walnut trim and has a skylight with the King of Clubs logo.

The back half of the building has been converted into a large "ballroom" with raised tables and a dance floor measuring 50 feet by 30 feet. A raised stage is in the back of the room.

In all, the King of Clubs will seat 210 people between the bar, the game room, King of Clubs Room and the dance area.

MUSIC WILL be provided from tapes, a disc jockey or band, depending on the night.

A kitchen area is still under construction, but will not be open "until we get settled," according to Olson.

Olson said the kitchen will specialize in prime rib sandwiches. Other items, such as baked ham, roast beef sandwiches and homemade soups also will be offered.

Once the kitchen is opened, Olson said they hope to provide catering service and will also rent out the large back room for meetings and banquets.

"WE MIGHT even be open by Tuesday (tomorrow)," Olson said. "But we'll definitely be ready by Wednesday."

Olson added that she hopes people will offer suggestions to improve the King of Clubs once the doors are opened.

"I hope if we're doing anything right, that people will see it and give us feedback to suggest things."

DELBERT OLSON is manager of the new King of Clubs lounge which is scheduled to open this week.

Who makes corporate income tax payment?

By Richard L. Leshar
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Our politicians in Washington take one look at the federal deficit that they have created and announce in unison that a nice tax increase is just what the doctor ordered. Yes, they say, that would fix things, a tax hike.

The idea that they should reduce federal spending has, a priori, been ruled out as "politically impossible." Translated, this means that the politicians do not want to anger the special interest groups they have showered our tax dollars upon for too many years. The more outrageous the spending program, the more outrageous the waste of taxpayers' dollars, the more grateful the special interests are to their pals in Washington for wrangling the cash out of the hands of working Americans.

Okay. Among politicians the decision has been made: Taxes will go up. Now comes the more difficult part: Who will pay the higher taxes?

are free to go out to a movie because we no longer fill out the hated 1040 forms. Instead, corporation officials are sitting up late, filling out their income tax returns.

IT HAS BEEN a good year and the XYZ corporation issues a check to the IRS for, say, $1 million. Just where did that $1 million come from? Well, corporations, unlike the federal government, cannot just print the money in the basement. The money comes from somewhere. How did XYZ corporation earn money?

It sold electric toothpicks. Lots of them. To whom? To consumers. You and me. Thus, every penny of that $1 million in taxes came from the sale of electric toothpicks. It came from consumers. Hmmm. What started out as a scheme to tax only corporations has just cost us $1 million. I thought we weren't supposed to be paying taxes anymore.

If taxes are raised on the XYZ corporation, it will need more money. It will raise the price of electric toothpicks. You and I will pay more money for our electric toothpicks. It looks like prices went up, and they did, but what really happened is that our taxes have been raised. This wasn't the plan.

For companies of all sorts, large and small, taxes are simply another cost of doing business. Like the cost of labor or materials. And when costs go up, one of three things can happen. The firm can raise prices, lower its employees' wages, or, if it is unable to pass along the higher costs, go belly up.

In the first case, consumers pay higher prices, i.e., taxes. In the second case, workers pay in lower wages and benefits. In the third case, workers pay with their livelihoods.

There is no free lunch. The corporate income tax, just like property taxes paid by businesses, is simply a hidden tax on individuals. Politicians like these taxes because people honestly believe that they don't eventually end up paying these taxes. But this isn't so. The politicians will continue to play this shell game of hidden taxes only as long as we keep our eyes closed and let them get away with it.

THE TAXPAYERS, who, unfortunately for the politicians are also voters, are not excited about paying higher taxes. They kind of liked the 1981 tax cuts, and many of these uncooperative souls feel that their taxes are still too high.

Now some clever politicians believe they have come up with the answer to this impasse. They won't raise taxes on the American people—"Oh, no, we won't do that," they promise. They will raise taxes on corporations instead. That way, you see, the people won't have to pay higher taxes, only the corporations will.

This is a neat trick. But if it were true that the government could tax corporations and not people, why wouldn't we take this to its logical conclusion and only tax companies? Then you and I wouldn't have to pay any taxes at all. Only those nasty corporations would pay taxes. Besides, corporations don't vote.

Let's see how this would work. Assume for a moment that nirvana has arrived and there are no longer any direct taxes on individuals. All taxes are now levied on corporations. April 15 arrives, and you and I

My dad gave me 9 bits of valuable information when I was growing up. One was that every cherry pie has 1 pit. The other was that when you own a car your troubles begin. Being a foolish teenager, I thought my dad was exaggerating on the second point. I should have believed him.

The first car I owned was a brown, 1967 Rambler Rebel with plaid, fold-down front seats. I named my car "Wolfgang" and placed a plastic skull on the dash to add a personal touch. Gas disappeared in Wolfgang about at the same rate liver disappears from my plate. I didn't have to spend much time at gas stations and that was about the time that the price of gas dipped as low as 17.9 cents during a local gas war.

But like all things in life, something is bound to go wrong.

The first minor problem I encountered with Wolfgang was a faulty passenger seat. It usually worked fine whenever my male friends rode with me. But, anytime I was nice enough to give a female classmate a ride home, the seat would fold down—by itself. That was usually good for a slap on the cheek and a charge of being fresh. I swear Wolfgang had a mind of his own. The doors were the next part of Wolfgang to act up. Believe me, it was embarrassing to have to get out, walk around to the passenger side and open the door from the outside so a friend could get out.

Did you ever try explaining to your teacher that you are late for class because you were trapped in your car. Likely story, the teacher replies.

Wolfgang eventually was sold at a meager price. Despite the problems, I still have more good memories of that car than bad ones.

My second car was a bright red 1970 Malibu convertible which was a classy car in its time. It had AM/FM radio, power windows, tilt steering wheel, power top and other fancy features. Without much thought, I depleted most of my savings to buy the car. That purchase turned me into a miser during the first year of college.

The convertible was given the unimaginative name of Wolfgang II. I soon learned that the only reason for power windows is to overcome a person's laziness.

I had nothing but trouble with the window switches. Another fact of life: window switches only go bad when windows are open.

You should have seen the looks I got one cold winter when people saw me driving around with one window down.

Wolfgang II deteriorated during my impoverished college days so I put him on the auction block and sold him real cheap.

My next car was the spitting image of a Sherman tank. It had a golfball-size engine and sucked down gasoline like cows drink water.

That beauty was built to accommodate roughly 123 passengers comfortably. It cost me $300 and lasted me less than one day.

The nameless vehicle (I didn't have time to give it a name) would have lasted much longer had I not tried to play chicken with a grain truck.

After working late one night at the Herald, I was southbound from Wayne to Lincoln on almost no sleep. For some reason, I decided to catch up on my sleep as I drove in the fog near Schuyler.

It was a short nap. I prefer the sound of my alarm clock ringing to the sound of a windshield cracking and a mirror tearing off the side of a car.

Actually, I was quite lucky in the accident. My car sideswiped the truck instead of hitting it head-on. And most importantly, no one was injured. Had I hit a small car head-on, I probably would have killed someone—myself included.

I learned several valuable lessons from that experience: 1. It's not wise to sleep in a car if it's moving and you're behind the steering wheel; 2. don't ever play chicken with a vehicle that's bigger than yours.

ask a lawyer

a public service of the nebraska state bar association

Q: I own a car which I drive very little. I want to put my son's name on it so that he can have it when I no longer need it. If I do, would he be liable in case of an accident, or would he have to pay insurance on it, if he didn't drive it until it was his?
A: If you add your son's name on the car as a co-owner, it is conceivable, under certain circumstances, that he might be held liable in case of an accident, even if he wasn't driving the car at the time.
Further, you might be denied coverage on your own insurance if you were sued after an accident and had failed to notify your insurance company that you were not the sole and unconditional owner of the car.
If you want your son to have the car when you no longer need it, or would like him to occasionally use the car now, you should add him as a co-owner and as an additional insured under your existing auto insurance policy. The cost of adding him to your policy should be relatively small.
This answer is based on Nebraska law; in other states, substantially different laws may apply.

street talk

This week the Wayne Herald asked five residents of Allen what they like most about their community.

"I like the small town closeness because you know everyone. Everything is safer here than in the big cities where there is severe crime." — Shawn Mahler

"Well, the people and the school. The school has a good basketball team and good sports. That's about it." — Rod Strivens

"Living in Chicago most of my life, I can appreciate the closeness and friendliness of Allen. Here, I know everybody. In Chicago, you don't even know the people who live in the same building." — Darlene Ehrenholt

"I like the friendly people. The people are all friendly. Of course, you've gotta be friendly yourself." — Virginia Wheeler

"The people, good school and two churches. It's easy to get around, and some of our grandkids are here." — Vic Carpenter

Programs saluting women in history scheduled at WSC

The public is invited to attend several special programs this week at Wayne State College in observance of Women's History Week.

Paul Coward, an instructor in the humanities division at Wayne State and one of the organizers of the event, said the week-long observance includes special speakers, films and displays.

ON TUESDAY, March 13 the film "Great Grandmother" will be shown at 7:30 p.m. in room 319 in the Humanities building on the college campus.

The film re-enacts old diaries, engages in interviews with pioneer women, and tells the stories of women who settled the western plains.

Showing with "Great Grandmother" will be another film titled "Yellow Wallpaper," based on a short story by Charlotte Perkins.

Discussion sessions will follow both films.

THREE WAYNE women will speak about the way life was for them growing up during a panel discussion on Wednesday, March 14 at 7:30 p.m. in room 319 of the Humanities building.

Speaking will be Mildred Jones, Lucille Larson and Anna Meier. They also will discuss the differences as they see them from the time they were youngsters to the times of today.

JACQUELINE St. John, professor of history at the University of Nebraska-Omaha, is scheduled to speak on women in history during a program Thursday, March 15.

Her program will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Ley Theatre, located in the Education building on the Wayne State campus.

THE PUBLIC also is invited to view display cases which have been set up in the college library through March 25.

The display includes a collection representing three types of environments for women, including outside interests, household interests, and social interests.

There also will be a case titled "What is It?" where the public will be encouraged to test their knowledge of household items from the past.

COWARD SAID Women's History Week is being observed locally to heighten the awareness of contributions women have made to culture.

Durbala, Lingelbach pace Wildcats in Oklahoma swing

All of Wayne State's hits were singles. Players getting hits for the Wildcats were: Angi Collings, Carmel Doeschol, Maggie Alberts and Mary Guenther.

The tournament used the international tie breaker rule, which lets each team put a runner at second base to start each extra inning.

Wayne native Wacker keeps Texans healthy

The following article appeared in the Galveston (Texas) Daily News on February 26 and features Wayne native Tim Wacker, a 1971 graduate of Wayne High School.

(football) season, that's something like 12 miles. "Sometimes I feel like we as trainers are not too professional while at other times I feel we can be... I just don't think we have all the diagnostic tools we need in order to do a truly professional job.

Besides holding 2 degrees in the field, Wacker has received a certificate from the National Athletic Trainers Association and a license from the Texas Department of Health.

WACKER GREW up in Wayne, Neb., a town of 5,000 people about 80 miles northwest of Omaha. After earning his undergraduate degree in physical education and athletic training from Wayne State College in 1976, Wacker and his wife Cindy...

"DUB WAS real convincing in the interview, he's a good salesman. So I made up my mind between Dickinson and Aldine. But Dickinson was really my first choice because I knew I would have more latitude concerning a teaching assignment.

"It took (Farris) about 3 days, but he finally called. They were the longest 3 days of my life."

ORDINANCE NO. 207
AN ORDINANCE OF THE VILLAGE OF WINDSIDE, WAYNE COUNTY, NEBRASKA TO ESTABLISH A SERVICE DEPOSIT FOR ALL APPLICANTS REQUESTING UTILITY SERVICE, AND TO REPEAL AN ORDINANCE INCONSISTENT THEREWITH.
Be it ordained by the Chairman and Board of Trustees of the Village of Windside, Wayne County, Nebraska as follows:
SECTION 1. Sec. 3.103 of the Municipal Code is hereby amended as follows:
MUNICIPAL WATER DEPARTMENT, CONSUMER'S APPLICATION. Every person or persons desiring a supply of water must make application therefor to the Municipal Clerk. The Clerk shall require any applicant requesting utility service to make a service deposit in the amount of One Hundred ($100.00) dollars. Said deposit shall be applied toward any utility fees not subsequently paid by the applicant. The Clerk shall also collect any tap fees required by this Article and shall then forward the application to the Utilities Superintendent. Water may not be supplied to any house or private service pipe except upon the order of the Superintendent.
SECTION 2. That the original Section 3.103 and any ordinance passed and approved prior to the passage, approval, and publication or posting of this Ordinance and in conflict with its provisions, is hereby repealed.
SECTION 3. This Ordinance shall take effect and be in full force from and after its passage, approval, and publication or posting as required by law.
PASSED AND APPROVED THIS 5th day of March, 1984.
