Architect's rendering of courthouse is released

AN ARTIST'S rendering of the proposed courthouse building.

One of the main issues facing Wayne County voters on the May 15 primary election ballot will be that of the Wayne County Courthouse.
Voters will be asked to decide whether to build a new courthouse or keep the existing one.
An artist's rendering of the proposed courthouse and area comparisons between the existing and proposed courthouses were released this week by Jackson-Jackson & Associates, registered architects who were hired by the Wayne County Board to design courthouse plans.
THE DIMENSIONS of the existing courthouse and the proposed one are broken down into room-to-room comparisons.
The area of the social services office in the present Wayne County Courthouse, including 68 square feet of vault space, is 597.25 square feet. The area of the social services office of the proposed courthouse would be 846 square feet with no vault space.
The present county agent's office has 458.5 square feet of space and 117 square feet of vault space for a total of 575.5. In the proposed courthouse, the office would have 1,998 square feet of space counting a storage room and a meeting room. There would be no vault space.
The county assessor's office now has 458.5 square feet of space and 112.5 square feet of vault space. The proposed building would have an assessor's office with 1,233.5 square feet and a vault of 325 square feet.

THE COUNTY clerk's office now has 459 square feet of space and 181 square feet of vault space. A new building would provide 676 square feet of office space and 598 square feet of vault space.
The existing county court provides 629.25 square feet of office space and 68 square feet of vault space. A new county court would have 663.5 square feet of office space and 180 square feet of vault.
The district court is 2,907 square feet in office space with 80 square feet of vault space. If a new courthouse is built the district court will have 3,793.5 square feet of office space and 216 square feet of vault space.
The treasurer's office now has 644 square feet of office space and 132 square feet of vault space. A new treasurer's office would have 767 square feet of office space and 425 square feet of vault space.
THE COUNTY commissioners' office would increase from 300 square feet of office space and 132 feet of vault space to 432 square feet of office space with no-vault space.
Two offices would become smaller in a new courthouse. The area of the superintendent of schools office is now 618.75 square feet and would decline to 472 square feet.
The veterans office, now 387.75 square feet, would drop to 252 square feet.

The courthouse plans call for the addition of two offices that currently are not included in the Wayne County Courthouse. A surveyor's office, with an area of 216 square feet, and a probation office of 966 square feet are being proposed.
IF WAYNE COUNTY voters decide in favor of construction of a new courthouse, a $1.3 million bond issue will be required.
Spread over a 15-year period, the annual repayment would be approximately $170,000, requiring a levy of about 6 1/2 cents per $100 of tax base, according to Phil Lorenzen, vice president of the Municipal Bond Department of First Mid America Inc.
If voters decide not to build a new courthouse at a cost of almost $1.9 million, the existing courthouse will be renovated. That cost could reach as high as $918,985 for total renovation. However, renovation projects could be spread over a period of years, according to need.
Using the $918,985 figure in calculations and taking into consideration interest income of $28,985, a $390,000 bond issue would be required, Lorenzen said.
The county has approximately $500,000 in a sinking fund that could be used toward either construction of a new building or renovation of the existing one.
Spread over a 10-year period, annual payments would be approximately $47,000, requiring a levy of about 2.6 cents per $100 of tax base.

Flowers and trees Plants part of centennial plans

Wayne will be getting lots of new life this summer with plans calling for trees and flowers to be planted in commemoration of the city's centennial celebration.
By the time all of the plantings are completed, Wayne will have trees in Sunnyview Park, a centennial garden at the corner of 4th and Main streets and flowers along Main Street. Trees also are expected to be planted in downtown Wayne as a community improvement project.
A special Arbor Day planting was scheduled yesterday (Easter Sunday) in Sunnyview Park. Each of the 27 mayors of the city from 1884 through 1984 will be honored with a tree planted in Sunnyview Park.
WITHIN THE CONFINES of the proposed Sunnyview Park, many of the broadleaf trees have already been planted. Current plans call for a loop drive and parking stalls along the east side of the park.
The mayors' centennial planting will be located along the north and northeast portions of the park. The planting will consist of four arcs of flowering shrubs, which at maturity will create a band-shell effect.
Shrubs will be set six feet apart in a 36 foot arc with the tallest at the back and the shortest at the outside. Plans called for the first arc and table to be placed on Arbor Day with the rest planned later.
The centennial garden, recognizing gardening efforts of 100 years ago, will be planted in the area north of The Headquarters.

Planting dates will be announced later. Anyone who is willing to donate plants should contact a member of the committee now so that the garden layout can be designed.
Committee members are: Lucille Larson at 375-1861, Nancy Jo Powers at 375-2391, Carole Schmidt at 375-2097 and Gail Korn at 375-3615.
WAYNE'S MAIN Street will be in full bloom this summer if all goes as planned by the special events committee of the Wayne Chamber of Commerce.
The committee is hoping to have flowers planted along Main Street from the Logan Creek bridge south of Wayne to the north edge of town, according to Lyle George, committee chairman.

As part of Wayne's centennial activities, plans call for approximately 8,000 petunias to be planted on a two-foot strip of ground on each side of Main Street.
Various organizations will plant the flowers at no cost to property owners, George said. In downtown Wayne where the areas are paved, planters may be used.
Persons who would like to help plant or have flowers planted on their property are asked to call George at 375-4331. The flowers probably will be planted on May 19.

Bridge out

REPAIR WORK is being planned on a bridge which recently collapsed south and east of Laurel. A wet spring has been hard on creek beds in northeast Nebraska.

Lots of work lies ahead on this particular country road before the creek will be passable.

Anyone who has any information concerning the crimes is asked to call the Norfolk Area Crime Stoppers at 371-7300. All callers will remain anonymous.

Block grant funds provide various uses

Many questions have been raised recently concerning the nature and use of community Development Block Grant funds.
The CDBG program, basically is comprised of funding from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to the State of Nebraska to be distributed to local governments for use in community development activities.
Several Wayne businessmen have recently applied for funding under one category of the four-part CDBG program.
JACK MIDDENDORF received city council authorization for his application for CDBG funds to be used in purchasing equipment for a new Dairy Queen.
A public hearing is scheduled at the next council meeting, (Tuesday), on a request from Bill Luaders for the same type of approval. Luaders plans to construct a 10,000 square foot building on property near Bill's GW, for rental to Wayne True Value.
The CDBG category under which Middendorf and Luaders submitted applications is the Economic Development program. Other categories are Community Development, Planning and Programming, and Local Government Assistance.

All activities of local governments that receive funds in any of the categories must meet at least one of three broad national objectives.
AS DEFINED by the federal government and the State of Nebraska, the objectives are: 1. Activity must aid in the prevention of slums or blight, or 2. Activity must benefit low and moderate-income persons, or 3. Activity must meet other community development needs having a particular urgency where other financial resources are not available to meet such needs.
CDBG eligible activities and program guidelines were derived from the Housing and Community Development Act Amendments of 1981.
Enacted by the U.S. Congress and signed into law by President Reagan, the federal guidelines must be followed by each state agency administering the program. The Department of Economic Development makes the final decision on fund eligibility in Nebraska.

UNDER THE Economic Development category, eligible projects must also produce private sector investment, promote diversification of the state's economy, create new permanent jobs, retain existing jobs and foster economic growth.
A wide variety of Economic Development category projects may be funded with CDBG assistance.
The projects include industrial, manufacturing, commercial, retail and service development, small business expansion and revitalization and job training activities.
However, speculative projects, bail-outs and turnarounds of failing or financially troubled businesses and industries cannot be considered.
CDBG funds must be directed to the federal and state goal of assisting healthy, growing business in securing needed financing.
One portion of the Economic Development category requires repayment to the local government from which the funds were received. The loans, primarily secured by subordinated mortgages, are to be used for fixed-asset acquisition and working capital, with restrictions.

WHEN REPAID, the funds are used by the city in further economic development activities. This is the area under which Middendorf and Luaders made their applications.
All portions of the Economic Development category must be supplemented with private and public sector financing. This includes local financial institutions, Small Business Administration, Urban Development Action Grants and Business Development Corporation of Nebraska.
The CDBG, in the Economic Development category, cannot be used to fund more than 50 percent of a project's costs.
In addition, lower percentages of CDBG funding are preferred, using the program as gap financing and only after all other funding has been explored.
IN ANOTHER category, Community Development, CDBG funds may be used for activities relating to public facilities and public works infrastructure, housing and properly improvements affecting low to moderate income people and energy conservation and weatherization. The Roosevelt Park project falls into that category.

Other projects could include comprehensive revitalization of neighborhoods and innovative community development projects such as community centers, recreational facilities and facilities for the handicapped.
Public facility-type activities require a match equal to 20 percent of the cost of each activity.
Unlike the Economic Development category, which has no application deadline, applications for funds in Community Development must be made by April 30. However, any activity in the category must meet the three federal guidelines.
A THIRD CATEGORY of CDBG fund use involves Planning and Programming. Eligible activities in this area involve action which directly and substantially relate to developing plans and instituting programs to implement CDBG funding priorities in Economic Development and Community Development.
This includes comprehensive community plans, capital improvement programs, economic or industrial development studies, public facilities plans related to an identified urgent need in such facilities, and housing studies and strategies.

A local cash match of at least 25 percent of total project cost is required and an application deadline for the municipality is May 31.
A final category of CDBG fund use involves Local Government Assistance. This area includes activities which permit local governments to more rationally and effectively determine needs, set long-term goals and devise appropriate programs. The applications also must be submitted by May 31.
EACH PROGRAM has specific requirements and restrictions. Anyone who would like more information is welcome to contact City Administrator Phil Kloster at 375-1733 or Anne Svoboda of Wayne Industries at 375-2240.
The City of Wayne is the applicant for funding in any of the categories and Wayne Industries is serving in an informational capacity as requested by the Department of Economic Development.

Misrepresentation is problem

Postal inspectors warn public

Numerous complaints nationwide are being received concerning vacation packages being offered by various firms through use of COD service.

The Postal Inspection Service has requested initial contact with the public is made via the phone or postcard to notify the recipient that they have been selected by computer to receive an exciting three-day, two-night vacation in one of 32 different major resort areas including Atlantic City, Mexico City, Canada or the all new Disney World, Epcot Center.

They are promised first class accommodations for four and as a further enticement to accept the package, a coupon for a lifetime supply of Kodak color film and several hundred dollars of vacation discount books is offered.

For their part, recipients are asked to accept a COD package through the mail usually costing $39 to cover the expenses incurred in the processing and handling of the vacation package.

Investigation by U.S. Postal inspectors disclosed recipients were led to believe no other additional payments or fees would be necessary. Upon receipt of their free gifts, however, customers noted the packages did not include transportation to or from the resort areas, many additional fees and surcharges were required, and the free film and vacation discount books were available only if additional payments were made for processing and handling.

Based on early inquiries about the travel offer, thousands of victims nationwide are losing money to this scheme. With summer approaching, similar schemes may appear. Consumers are asked to check the legitimacy of the advertisement and company before accepting a COD.

The U.S. Postal Service allows customers to read and copy the name and address of the mailer from COD mail while the mail is in the possession of a postal employee. The addressee always has the option to refuse or accept delivery of a COD article.

The majority of business people who use the mails are legitimate and ethical in the conduct of their businesses. Postal Inspectors say. To avoid problems, consumers receiving COD's through the mail should deal with reputable firms known to the consumer. If COD merchandise is unsatisfactory, the consumer should first correspond with the sender.

If consumers believe a mailer is involved in blatant merchandise misrepresentation, they may refer the information to the Chief Postal Inspector, Washington, D.C. 20260.

eddie's brother

by randy hascall

You know, it's really none of my business and nobody asked for my opinion, but I'll give it anyway. Soap operas are one of the biggest wastes of time in the world.

And the scary thing is that there are millions of soap addicts in this country. Surely, soap operas have to be some form of communistic mind control.

People have become brainwashed into thinking these trash shows have some true value.

I ate dinner (some call it lunch) with five of The Wayne Herald's female employees one day last week at a local eating establishment which has a television set.

These women take their lunch break at 12:30 each day so they can watch a soap opera while they eat. They are the very same ones who used to be as hungry by 11:30 each morning as a den of starving lions.

Now, their appetites seem to hold up until later in the day. They were so anxious to see their favorite soap that only one of them waited until 12:31 for me to come with them.

With all the ladies taking seats on the same side of the table (facing the TV), it looked like The Last Supper. It was time for "Days of Our Lives" and these women were hooked. They're great people to eat with if you don't like conversation.

The only time they spoke was during commercials and then it was just to clear up some soap opera details or fill someone in on yesterday's episode.

The ladies sat there with eyes superglued to the TV screen. They didn't realize their food had arrived until a commercial interrupted the show.

Once the soap came back on, they were eating their napkins by mistake—afraid to take their eyes off the screen.

I watched just enough of the dumb soap (about three minutes) to notice that the acting compared to that of the old "Batman" series. (Remember Robin's famous lines like: "Holy birthday cake Batman, I think we're doomed this time" and Batman's replies: "No Robin, somehow we'll find a way out of this mess.")

My opinion of soap operas can actually be summed up in three words—dumb, dumb, dumb.

Should these addicts ever be forced to miss their favorite soap for some unforgivable reason, they can get their daily fix by reading soap opera capsules in the big newspapers.

Here's the capsule report on the episode of "Days of Our Lives" that I almost watched: "Liz and Neil were married. Neil rescued Carlo Forenza, the son of Neil's deceased war buddy, from a Latin American prison. Della and Andre claimed Anna up with Tony after catching her in the dungeon. Andre revealed that he killed Renee because she had realized he wasn't Tony, but Andre admitted that Stefano hadn't ordered Renee's death. Roman, who escaped from Stefano's henchmen, was estate over Marteno's pregnancy."

Golly that sounds great, doesn't it? A person can get more laughs from those capsules than from the funnies.

I'll stick to my "Spider-Man" comic books. At least they're more believable than the soaps.

As a whole, soap operas are about as worthwhile as a German dictionary in Spanish class.

Well, I better go on to another subject before the soap addicts decide to run me out of town.

Life would be a lot simpler if everyone was comfortable at the same temperature. At The Wayne Herald, everyone is comfortable at a different temperature.

It's about like throwing a penguin, a camel, a polar bear, a rattlesnake and a sparrow into the same environment—nothing is suitable.

In the winter, co-workers Tootie and Pukee like to turn the thermostat up to 80. They wear sweatshirts and long johns and they still aren't warm. I think they were born in saunas.

They usually catch me turning it down to 60 degrees about five or six times a day. Alley and Tuesday are warm one day and cold the next. One time they'll be shivering and the next they'll be sweating.

During the summer months, I like to keep the offices nice and cool. But my degree of cool is too low for many of the workers. Lately we've been opening the front door to let some cool, fresh air in to the office.

That almost started a war with a couple employees who claim it gets too cool and windy inside.

And one chain smoker claimed that her rights were violated. She didn't have to breath fresh air if she didn't want to, she said. So it goes.

A quality structure

To the editor:

It has recently come to our attention that the voters in Wayne County are being asked to determine the fate of the historic Wayne County Courthouse. Though the building is listed in the National Register of Historic Places, we have no legal jurisdiction over the decision of whether to renovate or dispose of the courthouse. However, we do hope that the citizens of Wayne County will recognize the quality of the structure before making a decision that is irreversible.

There are many things that will undoubtedly be considered relative to the future of the courthouse. Hopefully, from our perspective, the issue of historic preservation will be one of these considerations. Historic Preservation, of course, responds to "real world" concerns—it is not simply a mumification of the past, but involves more a response to the changing needs of our world.

Today preservation emphasizes the adaptation of significant historic buildings to these changing needs. We might say that there are two different aspects to the justification of historic preservation: one is intangible and idealistic; the other is more tangible and pragmatic.

On the side of the intangible and the idealistic are concepts such as history, aesthetics, culture and character. The current Wayne County courthouse represents the ideals and aspirations of the people who built it, the ancestors of the county's current residents. Undoubtedly too the fact of its long existence in Wayne has made it a symbol of both local government, and in a broader sense, of the county itself, providing part of an identity which is distinct not only from surrounding counties but from the rest of the state as well.

Beyond historical and symbolic considerations, there is an architectural character which is clearly visible. Never again will we be able to achieve the level of skill, character and craftsmanship which is inherent in the current building. Once it is gone it can never be replaced. Too often, the reality of this loss is never felt until it is too late.

To some, perhaps, the old saying "familiarity breeds contempt" is the true reality, and it is also true that sometimes outsiders see things as uncommon or special that insiders have come to take for granted. With this in mind, we none the less feel the building is still quite special. Many of these special qualities qualified it for listing in the National Register of Historic Places in 1979.

In this regard, the Wayne County courthouse is more important to Nebraska's architectural history now than it was when it was nominated to the Register. Since then, the only other notable example of its architectural type and style, the Boone County courthouse in Albion, has been demolished. Demolition now of the Wayne courthouse would remove the last remaining example of the idealized, picturesque Richardsonian Romanesque courthouse style in the state. This particularly American style in courthouse design would be "extinct" in Nebraska.

But, one might ask, of what value are all of these "intangible" arguments when faced with the required and expensive updating of the facility? To a certain extent, an answer lies within the question.

We hope that a maintenance problem doesn't become confused with total obsolescence, nor should a required fire code update imply that the building is doomed to collapse. Many of Nebraska's finest courthouses, also listed in the National Register, have recently completed code updates at reasonable costs.

The private sector, as well, is proving that historic preservation makes good economic sense: in the past five years several million dollars have been invested in private rehabilitations of historic buildings. Significant cost benefits have been realized by fixing rather than replacing.

This is true from a variety of scales of endeavor—from retrofitting historic windows versus total replacement, to the recycling of the structural system versus building anew—demonstrating very significant savings. Again, the intangible savings in terms of the historic identity of the community amount to "icing on the cake" in these cases.

We hope that the community will consider all options before making their decision. It goes without saying that old technologies are different than new technologies, but this doesn't mean that they are inherently inferior to the new.

In order to achieve a fair assessment, it seems highly desirable to have the building inspected by a professional with skills and knowledge in historic preservation technologies—someone with a proven ability to make assessments and recommendations on antique buildings. Such inspection can make sure that the "automobile isn't discarded just because it needs a new battery."

Q: Who is responsible for enforcing a non-custodial father's visitation rights? I have specific visitation times ordered by the court, yet many times my ex-spouse won't allow me to see my son.

A: I pay child support, which is strictly enforced. I can't afford to keep going back to court constantly to have my visitation enforced. Please tell me what I can do.

A: The court that originally entered your divorce decree retains jurisdiction over your child and over the terms of your decree. The court can, for example, increase or decrease the amount of child support you pay and can alter child custody and visitation.

If your ex-wife continually refuses to allow you visitation with your son as ordered in your decree, you can ask the court to modify the decree either in terms of the amount of time you may see your son, or the amount of child support you are to pay, or the custody of your son. You cannot, however, withhold the payment of ordered child support in retaliation for your ex-wife's refusal to let you see your child. If the court determines that you are being willfully denied visitation with your son contrary to the visitation order, it can hold your ex-wife in contempt of court, which can include, in some cases, a jail term.

The court will do everything possible to assist you in securing your visitation rights but if problems exist which continue to make visitation difficult, perhaps both parties should consider counseling to alleviate the outstanding problems.

A court could even order such counseling if visitation continues to be a problem and if the court's order is being ignored.

Consumers mean business

Every man, woman and child is a consumer. And we are consumers whenever we purchase, use, maintain or dispose of goods or services. That's all day, every day, for our entire lives.

The week of April 23-29 has been proclaimed National and Nebraska Consumer Education Week by President Reagan and Governor Kery.

Consumer education can help us make decisions that are right for ourselves and for our economy.

IN TODAY'S society an educated consumer is not a luxury, but a necessity. Businesses realize this fact and strive to help consumers by providing information. The average consumer may not be aware of the information available.

Manufacturers include product information on packaging in foods, care labels in clothing, and the use and care manuals for appliances.

They don't take the time to provide this information for nothing. The manufacturer wants you the consumer to read this information. Their purpose is to help the consumer make the best use of their product.

Retail merchants also provide consumer information. You may find it in writing, but most often the retailer gives consumer information verbally. The retailer may advise you on the best paint for your home considering your particular situation.

YOUR LOCAL merchant has the advantage of being able to answer your consumer questions with specific information. Unlike a nationwide manufacturer, the local merchant knows what your needs are and can help each consumer make the best decision.

Consumers can also get help from their County Extension Office. For the past 70 years extension agents have been helping consumers by providing information to help them make better consumer decisions.

Adults and youth benefit from the Cooperative Extension Service through organized clubs or on an individual basis. Contact the Extension Service in your county when you have questions about any part of the consumer's role.

Be an educated consumer this week and every week of the year. Ask questions, read labels, and make the best decisions possible.

Knudsen's comfolt
For 23 years Harry Knudsen has run Knudsen Standard. Harry took over the business from his father, Westergaard Knudsen, at the age of 28. Westergaard owned the station 10 years before Harry took control.

Mr. Knudsen employs his son John to help with business. Harry and John work on minor repairs. Knudsen Standard also sells items for automobiles, Pennzoil, anti freeze, oil treatment, spark plugs, and oil detergent, line the racks in the station.

Mr. Knudsen does a small amount of buying and selling of new and used cars. Chevrolets, Fords, and Dodges line the side near Knudsen Standard. A full building on Main Street also holds Knudsen's Standard's automobiles.

"Business has turned out like I thought it always would, and the amount of business is real good, but too many hours are connected with the business," said Harry. Mr. Knudsen likes the advanced stages of a small town business.

"I know the customers and what they do and do not like," said Harry. Mr. Knudsen has no plans to expand his station. "I just like the small town business I have now," commented Harry.

schizophrenia is derived from the Greek words schizein (to split) and phren (mind).

The split does not refer to multiple personalities, as in the fictional case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, but rather to a splitting of thought process from the emotions.

Because schizophrenics exhibit such a wide range of symptoms, attempts have been made to classify different types on the basis of the predominant clinical symptoms. Four classes that have been named are catonic, mild, hebephrenic, and paranoid.

A person can be described as a schizophrenic if he has twelve signs or symptoms which range from thinking aloud, bizarre delusions, and poor rapport. Mrs. Susan Brandon, psychology instructor at Laurel Concord High School, describes a schizophrenic as "A person who tends to lose touch with reality."

According to Ernest R. Hilgard, author of Psychology: The Sixth Edition, "Research efforts, over the past fifty years, have failed to reveal any single pattern of family interaction that leads to schizophrenia. Stressful childhoods of various kinds may contribute to the disorder."

There is undoubtedly an interaction between genetic predisposition and family environment. Some families may be so healthy that a genetically susceptible child grows up to be normal. In contrast, some families may be so destructive that not even a child with "super healthy genes could escape unscathed."

Hilgard went on to say, "The process of schizophrenia has a history of long term, progressive deterioration in adjustment, with little chance of recovery. A reactive schizophrenic has had a fairly adequate, pre-morbid social development, the illness being precipitated by some sudden stress, such as the death of a loved one, or loss of a job; the prognosis for recovery is good."

Asked about her biggest responsibilities, Barb said, "I have to see that the kids are transported to school and home in as safe a manner as possible. I need to keep discipline and keep a regular time schedule, if possible. I instruct students in evacuation procedures, safety rules, notify parents of changes in the route, and generally try to keep everything and everyone happy." Barb is also responsible for keeping the bus filled with gas and checking other regular things such as tires, oil, and other fluids, and telling the foreman if anything is wrong.

Barb has a sincere interest in each and every one of "her kids." She enjoys showing them some of the beautiful things about nature. Barb said, "one of my favorite things is to stop the bus to look at something interesting. One day this fall, we got to watch a badger who was taking his time crossing the road. We've watched weasels, deer, foxes, and any number of animals on their daily rounds. Some of the kids are getting so that they point things out to me."

Barb uses a little child psychology to make behaving and being quiet on the bus fun. Barb said, "This year I started giving stickers for good behavior. The stickers are redeemable for treats when they get enough of them. That had a terrific effect on the noisy kindergartners and even on some of the older kids!"

Asked about her funniest experience, Barb said, "My funniest experiences involve the kids. They can always be counted on to provide something to keep the driver human. The funniest things usually involve the youngest kids who say pretty funny things in their innocence. I tell the parents that I won't believe anything that the kids say about home if they don't believe anything the kids say about the bus!"

Students of Laurel-Concord High School unanimously agree that "Barb is one of the few people who could actually make riding the bus fun!"

Expert and teacher talk schizophrenia

Schizophrenia, by far the most common of the psychotic disorders, is described by Ernest R. Hilgard as a "bizarre" behavior. The schizophrenic's behavior may include peculiar gestures, movements, and repetitive acts that make no sense to the observer, but are usually closely related to the schizophrenic's fantasy world.

"I have a great love affair going on with the kids, and it has carried over even after they have graduated. I get some of the greatest feelings when one of 'my kids' stops to talk to me just because they want to." This "love affair" refers to the relationship Barb Osborne shares with the students who ride bus number 8 to and from school each day. Barb drives bus number 8.

Barb's day begins when the alarm goes off at 5:30 a.m. She gets up, fixes breakfast for her family, and leaves for the bus barn by 7. She starts her bus route at 7:05 or 7:15, depending on the weather that day.

The route covers approximately 35 miles each time and takes about an hour and fifteen minutes to complete. Barb attends classes at Wayne State College from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day to become a high school biology and earth science teacher.

She returns from classes with a few minutes to spare before she returns to the bus barn, gets the bus, and heads for the school at 3 p.m. She waits for dismissal and greets each student with a cheery

Bereuter receives award for CLOSE-UP

CONGRESSMAN DOUG Bereuter greets Wayne native, Richard Bressler, now Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the Burlington Northern Railroad, in his Washington office. Bressler was making a presentation to Bereuter for his efforts to bring the CLOSE-UP program to Nebraska. CLOSE-UP is a non-partisan, non-philosophical citizenship education program that brings high school students to Washington for a one-week intensive study of their nation's government. More than 350 Nebraskans, including nine students and one teacher from Wayne High School, will be participating in this year's CLOSE-UP program which runs during the first week of May. Burlington Northern has been one of the principal private sponsors of CLOSE-UP, making this program possible for Nebraska students.
