One hour makes a big difference

ONE HOUR CAN make a big difference in Nebraska's unpredictable weather. The picture of Wayne State College students sunning and relaxing in the Willow Bowl was taken at approximately 1:45 p.m. Thursday. The other photo of hail and rain coming down on cars in Wayne's Main Street, was taken about one hour later. It didn't take long for the sunshine and 80-degree weather to turn to a rain-and-hail storm.

Effort builds to preserve county courthouse

A group of individuals is spearheading an effort to save Wayne County's existing courthouse. Several weeks ago, 10 Wayne County citizens formed a committee called Citizens Aligned to Save The Landmark from Distinction (C.A.S.T.L.E.).

The group is hoping to convince voters that Wayne's courthouse has historical and architectural value and should not be torn down.

to be informed that there are other viable alternatives," said Loreta Tompkins, chairman of the group.

Members of the organization have been putting up display posters and information sheets throughout the county.

"We don't deny that renovation is needed to make the building more efficient and bring it up to the requirements of the state fire code. This needs to be done," Mrs. Tompkins said. "But we feel that it is unnecessary to take such a drastic measure as to tear such an enormous building down when there are better solutions to some of the problems presented to the public."

The group has suggested that vault space requirements could be reduced by microfilming records. Additional vault and storage space could be created in the basement of custodian's living quarters, the group has contended.

statements that the existing courthouse would last only 25 more years. However, they pointed out that the architect was referring to the mechanical systems, namely the furnace and air conditioning.

The mechanical systems would last only 25 years in a new building also, they added. Mrs. Tompkins said the group believes the courthouse will serve indefinitely if repaired and maintained.

The architect indicated at an earlier courthouse meeting that the present building was found to be structurally sound.

The group has charged that some of the proposed renovation figures have been inflated. Mrs. Tompkins said they question the estimate of $71,000 to replace the state roof.

"There are castles in Europe that have had slate roofs since the 12th century," she said.

THE COMMITTEE also would like to see the existing windows repaired instead of replaced.

"Our committee feels that the county doesn't need to go into debt for the courthouse work. We feel that it can be done over a three to four year period using the $500,000 on hand (sinking fund) plus revenue-sharing funds of $100,000 annually," Mrs. Tompkins said.

The group believes that the courthouse is solidly built but has been seriously neglected. "It would be far cheaper to restore it than to destroy it and build new," Mrs. Tompkins said. The committee has suggested that work should be done on the courthouse at a cost of $61,000 to comply with fire codes. An elevator to meet handicapped requirements should be built at a cost of $65,000.

The attic should be insulated and storm windows should be added to the building, the committee has suggested.

Wayne County voters will be asked on the May 15 primary election ballot to decide whether to construct a new courthouse or keep the existing one.

WSC alumni chapters pick representatives

Officers have been elected to head local and national chapters of the Wayne State Alumni Association. Freeman Decker of Wayne was elected president of the national chapter. Tom Fuchler of Omaha was chosen vice president and Kirk Hutton of Wayne will serve as secretary-treasurer.

At the local level, Bob Jordan was elected president. Lauren Walton was elected vice president and Chuck Kay was elected secretary-treasurer.

SIX COMMITTEES have been formed to help guide the Wayne Chapter of the Wayne State Alumni Association.

The Alumni Association Membership Committee consists of Dan Baddorf, Gary Boehle, Cap Peterson, Bob Jordan, Linda Baddorf, Sheryl Jordan, Karen Jones and Kirk Hutton. Craig Tiedtke will chair the Governmental Relations committee. Jim Hummel will chair the Student Recruitment committee. Deryl Lawrence will chair the Alumni Job Search committee and Chuck Kay will chair the Special Projects committee. No chairman has yet been named to the Social committee.

ship committee is designed to increase awareness among Wayne State graduates and friends of the college to seek support for the alumni association. The Wayne Regional Club will actively assist in organizing regional clubs in other cities.

The Governmental Relations committee will assist Wayne State to increase knowledge and understanding of the programs and needs of the college among legislators, governmental officials and other constituencies of the college.

The Student Recruitment committee will inform college-bound students about Wayne State College educational opportunities and assist the admissions office and others in recruiting selected students.

The Scholarship and Fundraising Activities committee will assist the Wayne State Foundation in various fundraising activities designed to provide financial assistance to WSC and its students.

The Social committee will organize annual social activities for graduates and friends of Wayne State College, assist in the college in making homecoming plans, and help organize other social opportunities for members, such as national and international travel programs.

The Alumni Job Search Assistance committee will establish a placement network for newly graduated alumni as well as alumni looking for new positions and those seeking to life someone.

The Special Projects committee will allow each organization to seek out special projects to which they feel committed and hope to accomplish for the benefit of Wayne State.

Presidents Society off to good start

The Wayne State College Presidents Society has been in existence only a couple months but already the organization has 26 members and $24,000 has been generated through contributions.

Kirk Hutton, executive director of the Wayne State Foundation, said he is pleased with the response the club has received and added that he expects its early success to continue to grow.

Hutton said the Presidents Society will become one of the vehicles which will allow the foundation to "help the college move forward in qualitative ways."

THE PRESIDENTS Society allows for various levels of contributions. There are five categories of individual membership and four categories of corporate membership in the organization.

Life members are those individuals whose cumulative lifetime gifts to Wayne State College for all purposes amount to $100,000 or more.

Roger Nelson of Wayne has offered to join the Presidents Society at the life member level for estate planning, in addition to joining as an associate member.

ASSOCIATE MEMBERS are those individuals who contribute $500 or more a year. Persons who contribute $1,000 or more are members of the club, anyone contributing $2,500 or more is a patron member, and a contribution of $5,000 or more qualifies an individual as a distinguished member.

The contributions are applicable to the educational and general budget during the year of a person's membership.

Corporations, businesses, professional organizations or foundations that donate $2,500 or more become corporate associate members. Corporate members are corporations contributing $5,000 or more, corporate sustaining members contribute $10,000 or more and corporate leadership members contribute $20,000 or more.

HUTTON SAID the Presidents Society is an active organization that meets periodically throughout the year. The society supersedes any previous donor clubs, Hutton said.

He explained that all members of the society will be encouraged and given the opportunity to have enquire to the offices of the president and vice president. They also will be invited to participate in various social activities.

The society's funds will be used to attract and retain quality teachers; make scholarships and grants-in-aid available to students; help purchase institutional resources such as equipment, books and other materials for teaching; and insure budgetary flexibility.

New employees start today at Wayne Herald

Chuck Hackenmiller

The Wayne Herald has two new faces on its staff beginning this week. Chuck Hackenmiller of Dyersville, Iowa takes over duties as sports editor today (Monday). He replaces Kevin O'Hanlon who resigned in mid-March to accept a job with the Beatrice Daily Sun.

Wayne State College graduate Jackie Osten will begin to serve a three-month interim term as assistant editor. Society editor LaVon Anderson is taking a three-month leave of absence to help her husband Tom at Anderson Lumber Company in Wakefield.

CHUCK AND his family, wife Mary Ann and one-year-old son Ryan, moved to Wayne Friday.

Hackenmiller, age 29, worked the past 3 1/2 years as news reporter and photographer at the Dyersville Commercial, a weekly newspaper with a circulation of 4,300. His duties included sports writing, general news reporting, feature writing and all aspects of photography.

Prior to his career at Dyersville, Hackenmiller worked more than four years as assistant news editor of The Monitor Review in Stacyville, Iowa. His writing there included sports, government and features.

Chuck was a member of the Dyersville Jaycees, the Dyersville Sportsman Club, the Catholic Order of Foresters and the Dyersville Community Chorus.

MISS OSTEN graduated from Wayne State College in May of 1982 with a bachelor of science degree in broadcast communications and journalism.

She will earn her master's degree in physical education at Wayne State's commencement ceremonies on Sunday, May 6.

Jackie's journalism experience includes working one school year as co-editor of the Wayne State student newspaper, the Wayne States. She also served one term as sports editor of the Wayne States.

Since graduating from WSC, she has worked as assistant sports information director of the college. She also worked one full school year as sports information intern at Wayne State.

The 24-year-old came to Wayne from Leigh.

eddie's brother

by randy hascall

Being a parent is one of the hardest things in the world. It's also one of the greatest things in the world.

I try not to get too carried away with columns about my family but with only four "Eddie's brother" columns left, I figure I can squeeze one in.

Our son is a little more than two months away from leaving the "Terrible Twos" for good. And really they weren't so terrible. Oh they had their moments; believe me.

During this period of time Barb and I have seen our son's moods change drastically in just a few seconds—something that couldn't possibly be inherited.

One moment he can be playing with a make-believe friend and a moment later he will be lying on his stomach, kicking his feet into his mattress during a temper tantrum because we didn't let him have a piece of candy before supper.

One of the tough things about being a parent is deciding when to give in and when to hold your ground. Scooter knows we give in more easily when we're in public.

He is still at that age where he closes his eyes when you play hide and seek and thinks that you can't see him.

He's at an independent age that has done his dad some good. When we make him wear a seat belt during trips in the car, he usually insists that Mom and I wear ours.

His independence carries over to getting dressed each day. He doesn't like to have someone pick out his clothes for him and dress him.

He has a look of satisfaction when he walks out of his bedroom with his shirt on backwards and his shoes on the wrong feet. He also gets frustrated when he can't get his pants zipped up or his shirt buttoned by himself.

Barb and I try to prepare Scooter for school which is a short two years away. But, I can't see his kindergarten teacher bribing him into counting to 10 or reciting part of his alphabet by giving him horseback rides. That's what I do now.

Children always know when to approach their parents with smiles. Our son's smile is always the biggest when he wants something. "Let's make malls, Dad," he will say with a big grin and a twinkle in his eyes. It's not easy to look your child in the smiling face and reply, "No way."

It's great that our son is at the age where he enjoys storybooks. But, it gets tiresome reading "The Wizard of Oz" to him eight times a day. Especially when he has memorized most of the words.

All of a sudden the nightcrawlers in our yard are "yucky." A year ago, Scooter thought about eating one. He still helps his dad dig fishing worms but picks the nightcrawlers up carefully when he puts them in the can.

We spent Easter on Barb's parents' farm near O'Neill and our son had a great time helping feed the cattle and seeing the cats and dogs.

He looked forward to helping Grandma collect eggs from the henhouse. Dropping a freshly-laid egg, he had picked out of a nest, Scooter looked up at his grandma and said, "It was hot, Grandma."

Once back in the house, our little shaver looked concerned when he saw his uncle filling a syringe with medicine.

"We're going to give your little, sick calf a shot," the uncle explained. "Don't give my little calf a shot." Scooter replied showing concern over the small, defenseless calf and the long needle. "Give the big calf the shot."

This is the same child who takes the pages out of his mother's Better Homes and Gardens cookbook when she talks on the telephone too long.

Without these people, Duane Schroeder, Darlene Dunklau, Merrill Hale, Paul and Bernice Peterson and Melva Eurnau, this drive would not have been a success and thank them very much.

generosity of these local donors the auction would not go.

I want to invite all of the people of the Wayne area to tune in NTV starting Friday, April 27 at 6:30 and all of the following week to the NTV Auction '84.

There are more than 3,500 items on the auction and you will have your opportunity to call in on 800 numbers and bid on an item you want to buy.

Is new the best?

To the editor:

Some thoughts and questions on building a new courthouse... Does the courthouse cost tell the whole story? Does one consider a fee of building without encountering some unseen problems in a new building, too.

Will the material in the new courthouse building uphold as good and as many years as the old one? Will the flat roof on the courthouse need repair before the old one? Will there be an expense while building the new courthouse? And do we need more taxes?

Property owners will pay more for the new courthouse. Higher taxes means tougher payments on real estate owners.

Higher taxes means higher rent. Can we afford it? Is it worth it?

Imagine buying a lovely home with chandeliers. Then to find yourself huddled in the corner of this lovely home, trying to keep warm. Need I say more.

People love the new But become blue

With the TOU's. People content with the old Happiness they behold Less cash to unfold.

Q: Can your employer set a mandatory retirement age for all employees, or is this only governed by state or federal laws?

A: The laws of the State of Nebraska cover employers with 25 or more individuals, while the Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) covers employers with 20 or more employees.

Both acts protect employees who are more than 40 years of age but less than 70 years of age from discrimination on the basis of their age. Accordingly, an employer who has set a mandatory retirement age which is more than 40 but less than 70 has probably violated both state and federal laws.

In certain circumstances, an employer may require retirement based upon the employee's inability to perform job duties which are genuinely and directly related to the performance of the job.

Where employees in a protected age group are involved in such situations, however, they will be examined very closely and the employer will be required to document the specific validity of the requirements of the job and the inability of the employee to perform those duties.

Each case must be decided on an individual basis and, with rare exceptions, an employer may not assume that employees will no longer be able to perform the functions of the job based on their age.

If you have specific inquiries about your particular situation, you may either contact a lawyer or a representative of the Nebraska Equal Opportunity Commission, the agency which administers the state age discrimination law.

Q: Is a retarded person who is over age 21 and does not have a guardian legally responsible for bills which he or she incurs?

A: The law assumes that persons over the age of majority (19 in Nebraska) are able to manage their own property or business affairs with some degree of competency.

If an individual incurs a debt, and then fails or refuses to pay it and is sued, a court could find that the individual lacked sufficient mental capacity to understand the responsibilities and ramifications of incurring the debt. If that were the case, the debt could be voided.

However, mere retardation or weakness of mind does not necessarily constitute insufficient mental capacity. Therefore, the person would be legally responsible for debts incurred unless it could be shown that he or she did not have sufficient mental capacity to understand the business being conducted at the time of the transaction.

Mental incompetency is legally established when a person is found by a court to be incapable of understanding and acting with discretion in the ordinary affairs of life.

If a person lacks the mental capacity to protect his or her person, a guardian should be appointed. Under Nebraska law, a person's inability to manage his or her property is legal cause to appoint a "conservator" (guardian of property) for the protection of the incompetent person's property.

If a conservator is appointed by the court, the conservator becomes responsible for managing the finances of the protected person.

Legislative decisions affect Nebraska business

By Melvin Paul
Nebraska Press Association
The recently adjourned session of the Legislature made dozens of major and minor decisions which affect the way Nebraskans do business.

Although the lawmakers reduced by more than half the funding sought by Gov. Bob Kerrey for his economic development recommendations, they did enact into law the bulk of his recommended initiatives.

The key proposal in the Kerrey package was the creation of a small business development corporation, a quasi-public body which intends to form a pool of investment capital for placement in promising Nebraska businesses. The corporation, which will be organized when the new law takes effect in July, will raise the capital mainly through stock sales. A nine-member board, including seven gubernatorial appointees, will oversee the corporation.

LAWMAKERS ALSO enacted a bill to create a new division within state government to act as a clearinghouse for development of the telecommunications industry in the state at a first-year cost of $250,000.

The Agriculture and Environment Committee decided to hold for further study a Kerrey proposal to initiate a program to assist beginning farmers and ranchers. Lawmakers appropriated $100,000 to the state Agriculture Department to conduct financial seminars for farmers and ranchers.

Sen. Dave Landis of Lincoln pushed through a new law to provide a state tax credit for businesses which contribute to community betterment organizations attempting to rehabilitate economically distressed areas. The state tax commissioner would be able to approve up to $250,000 annually for such credits.

Although it was a good year for any bill which carried an economic development label, not all of them passed. One that failed would have granted a tax credit for job creation. Another which lawmakers refused to enact would have allowed cities under certain circumstances to use their eminent domain power and bond-issuing authority to take over closed factories.

THE BILL, which was introduced mainly in response to depressed conditions in the meat-packing industry, was held over for consideration from the 1983 legislative session.

Among other business-related legislation, the Legislature passes a bill which will assess a larger unemployment insurance contribution on businesses which cause the fund to pay out more than their current contributions.

Businesses registering a trade name with the secretary of state will see their fee for the service doubled to $100. Electrical contractors and electricians will also see their license fees increase.

Real estate brokers will be able to sell to home buyers insurance against structural defects, and insurance brokers and agents will no longer need individual licenses for each line of insurance which they sell.

Lawmakers overrode a Kerrey veto of a bill allowing retailers to remit sales tax collections to the state at the time their bill is paid rather than at the time the sale is made. Cigarette and petroleum distributors survived efforts by some senators to reduce the amount which they are allowed to deduct as a service fee from the taxes which they collect on behalf of the state.

street talk

This week, in honor of Wayne's year-long centennial celebration, The Wayne Herald asked five residents of Wayne Care Centre to recall one of their earliest memories of Wayne.

"I remember when I was a young girl in my early teens and there was a lady who had a store in Wayne. Her name was Mrs. Jeffrey. I always came to town with my dad and I always headed for this store. One cold day, Mrs. Jeffrey took me to a cafe and treated me to a hot cup of coffee. I remember how kind she was." — Hanna Gamble, 93.

"I helped organize Wayne's first Chamber of Commerce. I also remember helping raise money for the school's first band uniforms." — Edna Tietgen, 79.

"I remember when I was named First Lady of Wayne. Val Peterson was governor then. There were other first ladies named after that, but I was Wayne's first first lady." — Hazel Smith, 91.

"I can remember when we came to Wayne from Kansas in 1919. There had been a snow storm and the roads were so bad. Of course, there wasn't any gravel or anything in those days. We had to leave our car part ways and come the rest of the way by train." — Emma Hicks, 94.

"I remember when they had dirt streets and board walks. There was only one policeman and one of his jobs was to keep the crosswalks clean so the ladies wouldn't dirty their skirts. I also remember when there was nothing but field between Seventh St. and the college. We use to have to walk through a corn field to get to the college." — Harold Gildersleeve, 87.

Student Voice

Students Aid Cause
More than $3,000 was raised at Wayne State's annual Muscular Dystrophy Dance held April 14 at Rice Auditorium in Wayne, bettering last year's amount by $1,000.

Participants danced from 8 a.m. until midnight receiving five minute breaks every hour. At 9 a.m. Daylight Donuts furnished donuts for the dancers, at 1 p.m. the Student Union furnished sack lunches for the one half hour lunch break, and at 7 p.m. God-fathers and Pizza Hut furnished pizza and pop.

Activities during the five minute breaks include cockroach races, free throw contest, moon walk, 30's dance contest, pie throwing, limbo contest, air guitar contest and a square dance exhibition. Names were also drawn to give away T-shirts and hats. All the dancers received T-shirts for their effort.

Mark Penlerick said, "It was a lot of fun and very worthwhile." He added, "After the first four hours, I was tired. After that it was off and on, and the last three hours it wasn't really noticeable."

As Predictable as the weather
What has had 80 degree weather, a snowstorm, a tornado, a hail storm and been on excessive amount of rain? Give up? The L-C Relays!

In 1976, under the direction of Mr. Everett Jensen, a former science teacher and track-coach at Laurel High School, and Mr. John Jonas, current boys' track coach, the Laurel-Corcoran High School hosted its first L-C Relays track meet. This year's track meet was to be held April 13, but because of the rain, the meet was rescheduled for April 14.

Mr. John Jonas explained that time played very important part in setting up the meet. He went on to say that the major expense of hosting your own track meet is the cost of the medals, and that's what makes the L-C Relays stand out from other track meets is that other meets give medals for only the first three finishers of individual events, and only first place medals to the finishers of relays, while the L-C Relays give medals for all six places of all events, including relays.

Local townspeople and school staff help at the track meet by keeping score, typing the results, running the time clocks, distributing medals, announcing the finishers, and identifying the winners at the end of a race.

At one time during the course of history of the L-C Relays, there were 48 teams in the meet (24 girls' teams and 24 boys' teams). This year, however, only eight girls' teams and nine boys' teams were able to participate due to the rainy weather, and other track meets scheduled for the same day.

"This year Laurel's track teams placed in the girls' and boys' divisions. The boys placed 11th out of nine teams, and the girls placed fourth among eight teams."

The overall winners this year at the L-C Relays were Osmond in the boys' division and Hartington Cedar Catholic in the girls' division.

Satellites—Not futuristic anymore
We as humans are hopeless fanatics when it comes to gathering and disseminating information. Of the host of gadgets that have been developed to move our news faster, farther, and easier, perhaps none has affected our lives as dramatically as the satellite.

A satellite is a man-made object put into orbit around the earth, sun, or some other heavenly body, to supplement means of communication. Science fiction writer Arthur C. Clarke, author of "2001: A Space Odyssey," once commented that "Man is the only animal that could survive longer without water than without information and the means to communicate it."

An article in the "Houston Chronicle" reported that "The impact of satellite communications on the world has been phenomenal. Satellites are relatively inexpensive to build and launch and they require no maintenance. They supplement cable, radio, and microwave links, where they exist and provide their equivalent where they do not. A handful dispersed in orbits above strategic locations around the globe interconnect the entire world."

The article continued, "As a communications tool, the satellite is far more than a replacement for the telephone and wireless. It is a new capability with a proven potential for public and private services, the creation of new jobs and economic incentives and the advancement of scientific frontiers. But the best is yet to come. By the 1990's large orbiting arrays and satellite clusters now being studied by NASA will open a glittering new era of communications and services."

Some of these service will include an individual wrist watch telephone, a satellite "cop in the sky" a monitoring system used to control energy distribution and to keep track of nuclear materials, and systems used to prevent the diversion or hijacking of nuclear materials used for atomic power reactions.

Some of the beneficial ideas NASA has in store for satellites include fire detection, earth observation, border surveillance, electronic mail distribution, and information services.

Nuclear weapons aren't security

By KAREN MULHAUSER
In the 1982 elections voters in 10 states, 14 counties and more than 20 cities from Anchorage, Alaska to Saint Augustine, Florida approved separate referenda calling on the United States and Soviet governments to agree to freeze their nuclear stockpiles.

Since then public opinion polls show that a steady 80 percent of the electorate favors a mutual and verifiable halt to the testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons. This is the formal legislative language used to express the popular movement to end the nuclear arms race.

Majorities of citizens in all sections of the country, of Democrats, Republicans and independents, and of men and women support the nuclear weapons freeze. Many religious denominations and national organizations, union members, teachers and physicians, Blacks and Hispanics, young and old are freeze supporters.

IT IS A POPULAR movement that has not lost its steam over four years, as so many other enthusiasms do. The nuclear weapons freeze and other ideas for promoting peace will be issues raised in election campaigns across the country this year, including races for the Presidency, the Congress and even for delegates to the parties' national conventions. Education of these delegates by nuclear war prevention groups has already begun and pledges are being sought.

A group of moderate and progressive Republicans, the 1984 Organizing Committee, is undertaking to educate GOP delegates on the desirability of a bilateral nuclear freeze and other arms control policies, as well as on women's and civil rights and budget issues.

The leader of this group, Congressman Jim Leach of Iowa, believes that "The Republican party has become vulnerable to New Right input in partial measure because the public at large has failed to take seriously the convention process. Those of us who are deeply concerned for arms control and foreign policy issues have an obligation to take part and do what we can to build sound party platforms."

Dr. Helen Caldwell, president of Physicians for Social Responsibility, another group that educates Americans on ways to prevent nuclear war, has resigned that post in order to work actively in the political arena for pro freeze candidates.

Several political action committees have been set up to collect and spend campaign funds in behalf of the nuclear weapons control movement. Some chapters of the National Women's Political Caucus require that candidates they endorse advocate a U.S./Soviet nuclear freeze, and other groups have added arms control issues to their questionnaires for candidates.

NEITHER PRESIDENT Reagan's emphasis on military hardware to preserve peace nor Congressional Democrats' acceptance of new nuclear weapons like the MX missile and experimental space weapons is satisfactory to the peace movement.

Democratic contenders for the Presidency support the nuclear freeze but also advocate powerful new weapons that are incompatible with a freeze. Most support a sizable increase, above the inflation rate, for the military budget, though not the much higher figure sought by Ronald Reagan.

This advocacy of higher and higher military spending will not go unchallenged. Spending for national defense and other military programs has risen from $230 billion in 1981 to $335 billion this year, yet what American would say today that he or she feels more secure from nuclear war than in 1981? Certainly not a majority of Americans. According to a New York Times/CBS poll last fall, women believe by 52 percent to 40 percent that President Reagan is likely to get our country involved in a war.

That poll is an indication of the gender gap that has President Reagan's political aides uneasy. They know that in each of the last three years approximately $30 billion has been chipped from federal support for social programs and transferred to the military budget.

Programs for needy women and children and the elderly have suffered while the Pentagon enjoys a blank check for new weapons. Columnist George Will has pointed out that current non defense spending is $59 billion less (!!) than it would be were President Carter's "spending path unchanged."

DESPITE REAGAN's claims that the military was starved under his predecessors, government spending figures for each year since the end of World War II show that military spending in peacetime, after adjustments for inflation, stayed on an even keel year after year until the graph's spending line turned upward two years ago.

This year military spending will exceed the peak figure during the Vietnam War if the Administration has its way. Commitments have already been made for huge future payments on new weapons systems like the MX missile. Meanwhile the $200 billion or higher federal deficit robs the nation of investment capital that could provide jobs for the unemployed. Don't accept the wishful thinking that says defense contractors will soon be hiring the unemployed men and women now shivering in the soup lines.

Figures compiled by the Defense Budget Project show that while money for military contracts increased 15 to 20 percent in the last 15 years, the labor force in the defense industry remained static or actually lost workers in some years. Those new jobs that are developing are mostly for technicians and engineers, not for the million of less skilled people seeking work.

FOR BLACK PEOPLE the unemployment situation is a "disaster," the Urban League says. It is especially hard not only on underemployed young Blacks and single-parent families, but also for potential college students deprived of federal educational aid.

In despair they see their futures darkened by the ever rising share of the federal budget allotted for military programs, including preparations for nuclear war. They recall the words of President Eisenhower upon leaving office: "The problem of defense is how far you can go without destroying from within what you are trying to defend from without."

Impressive efforts are under way to convert the despair of so many sectors of American society—Blacks, Hispanics, women, blue collar workers, into voter registration and political participation. It is no coincidence that these efforts are linked with opposition to the dangerously high nuclear stockpile and the billion dollar tribute it extracts from social programs.

Years ago Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. warned, "A nation that continues year after year to spend more money on military defense than on programs of social uplift is approaching a spiritual death."

Karen Mulhauser is the Executive Director for the Citizens Against Nuclear War.

Citizens Against Nuclear War is a coalition of 56 national membership organizations—labor unions, church groups, environmental, civil rights and women's organizations, among others—that are working for a mutual and verifiable nuclear weapons freeze.

Diet Facts & Fallacies
NOW WITH WHAT THE LOGIC DIET CENTER

CUTTING CALORIES THROUGH PREPARATION

An important factor in weight control is the method of food preparation. You may be surprised to know that a potato and a carrot have the same number of calories, although most people think potatoes are fattening. Why?

An ordinary potato, baked or boiled, may contain only 100 calories. Mashed, with some milk added, the count rises to 150 calories. If you use a lot of butter, you can bring the total to 250 calories. French frying can make it 200 to 250 calories. If you make hash browns, you can build that count to 450 calories. Cream sauces and gravies also add additional calories and should be used sparingly. But potatoes are potatoes; it's the preparation that makes the difference.

Diet Center recommends the use of herbs in adding unusual and delicious flavors to foods

Laura Bilstein in preparation. Call your local Diet Center Counselor for additional tips.
