Von Minden wins voter approval

State Sen. Merle Von Minden of Allen will be a heavy favorite and challenger Gerald Conway of Wayne will be the underdog when the two battle in the general election next November.

Both will seek the District 17 seat in the Nebraska Legislature.

Charley Pride agrees to perform concerts for Wayne Centennial

Country music star Charley Pride will headline Wayne's centennial celebration, it was announced today by centennial music and entertainment chairman Alan Cramer.

Pride will perform two shows the evening of Thursday, Aug. 30, Cramer said. Wayne State Memorial Stadium will be the site of the 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. shows.

"Although we don't have a signed contract returned from Pride as yet," Cramer said, "booking agent Don Romeo of Omaha assures us that the date with Pride is firm and it is okay to announce the show."

"We need to sell between 6,500 and 7,000 total tickets for the two performances," therefore we will try to keep the prices as low as possible so that everyone can afford to attend," Cramer said. Ticket prices, locations of advanced sales and further details will be announced later.

AS A STAGE performer, Pride is one of the hottest tickets in country music, drawing sellout audiences in the United States, Europe, Australia, New Zealand and Japan. As a recording artist he has established a variety of noteworthy statistics, including more number one singles than any other recording artist.

During 1984, Charley Pride set an all time record at the famed Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo; Pride is the first artist to draw more than a million fans to his performances at the Houston Astrodome. In addition, he holds the highest single day attendance at the livestock show.

His last nine singles reached the number one position on the country charts. Pride was one of 11 children born to the family in Mississippi. Perhaps it is those roots which have made him helpful when new artists are trying to start their careers. He has had direct impact upon the careers of Dave & Sugar, Ronnie Milsap, Gary Stewart, Johnny Duncan, Johnny Russell, Janie Fricke, Razy Bailey, Earl Thomas Conley, Sylvia and now Atlanta and Sandi Powell.

ATTRACTED TO baseball prior to his musical success, Pride still goes to spring training with the Texas Rangers, where he works out with the team. An avid golfer as well, he plays in a number of celebrity programs, including his own Charley Pride Golf Fiesta, a PGA Tournament Players Series, held in Albuquerque, N.M.; a fund raiser which is well on its way to raising one million dollars for cancer research. Pride has won many awards, including the prestigious Country Music Association "Entertainer of the Year" and twice winning the "Best Male Vocalist" award. He also holds 16 additional Country Music Association nominations.

He has won Grammy Awards for "Best Country Performance, Male," for the album "Songs of Love," and "Best Sacred Performance" for the album "Did You Think To Pray."

Worldwide, he has been awarded 31 gold albums and four platinum albums (including one quadruple platinum album).

HE HAS RECEIVED the first Golden Opal Award for sales in excess of one and one-half million records in Australia.

Billboard and Cashbox magazines have repeatedly named him "Top Male Vocalist" for both albums and singles.

Pride is a familiar face on television. His credits include hosting "Country Comes

Charley Pride
Home," "The Country Music Awards" and "The Academy of Country Music Awards." Additionally, he has appeared as a featured guest on "The Grammy Awards," "The American Music Awards," "The Tonight Show," "The Today Show," "Good Morning America," "The Academy Awards," "Nashville Network," "Hee Haw," "The Tommy Hunter Show" (Canada), and "The Val Doonigan Show" (England)

Hansen, Hall advance

Courthouse proposal soundly defeated

A proposal to tear down the existing Wayne County Courthouse and build a new one was soundly defeated Tuesday. The final vote was 1,995 against building a new courthouse and 433 in favor of building a new one.

In the Wayne City Council First Ward voting, Stanley Hansen collected 141 votes to run away with the race.

He and Kent Hall appear to be headed for a head-to-head battle for the council seat in November's general election. The top two vote-getters in Tuesday's primary election qualify for the general election.

HALL FINISHED second in the balloting with 55 votes, edging Larry Creighton who had 52 votes. John Redel was fourth with 37 votes and Richard Reed collected 17 votes.

Incumbent James Craun, who resigned from the race one week ago, received 14 votes. At press-time the count was still unofficial.

The most interesting election probably was the race for three seats on the Carroll Village Board. Write-in candidate Arnold Junck was the victor in the race with a total of 67 votes.

Susan Gilmore collected 58 votes and Mark Tietz received 49 to apparently win the other two board seats. Wayne Ulrich was right behind with 47 votes and Harold Loberg collected 20.

IN THE WINSIDE Board of Education race, three candidates were eliminated from Tuesday's vote. Nine candidates were seeking six positions on the general election ballot.

Gene Jorgensen was the leading vote-getter with 196, followed by Bill Burris with 159, Dean Mann with 152, Robert Wacker with 133, Dale Topp with 121 and Richard Jenkins with 92.

The three candidates who did not advance to the November election were Deard Hamm with 80 votes, Sharon Haller with 73 and Randall Miller with 71.

IN THE HOSKINS Village Board race, write-in candidate Don Langenberg lost in his bid to win a seat. With the top two vote-getters winning board seats, Patricia Brudigan collected 72 votes and Alvin Wagner received 71 votes. Langenberg got 21 votes.

Wayne Centennial petunia planting set for Saturday

Barring a rain shower, the city of Wayne will receive a touch of color Saturday during a centennial petunia planting along Main Street.

Petunias will be planted everywhere possible where there is lawn space from north Main Street to Logan Creek south of Wayne. Nearly 60 properties will be involved in the flower planting.

Dick Carlson of Carlson Construction has volunteered to strip sod 18 inches wide from curb edges onto terraces along Main. Many property owners have been contacted and others will be contacted soon.

The City of Wayne will scrape the dirt to curb level before Saturday.

Twenty-five groups were contacted by mail to help plant flowers beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday. Anyone else who would like to help plant is encouraged to do so.

A meeting is scheduled at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow (Friday) in the Wayne City Hall to make plans for the planting. A representative of each group is asked to attend the meeting.

"If a lot of people show up, we'll have fun and not much time will be involved," said Sam Schroeder, president of the Wayne Kiwanis Club which is helping with the planting. "You'll dig a hole, stick a plant in and be all done."

Kent Hall of the Wayne Greenhouse is providing all of the petunias. Chairman of the Centennial Planting Committee is Lyle George.

Censorship has become a very frightening reality

By Anthony T. Podesta

The past few years have been productive ones for America's censors.

From the highest levels of government to local communities, and schools across America, censorship has become a frightening reality. In whatever form it takes—imposing pre-publication restrictions on government officials, blacklisting USIA speakers, denying visas to foreign speakers, weakening the Federal Freedom of Information Act, prohibiting press access to the Grenada invasion, "protecting" students from controversial books, courses, and ideas, eliminating textbook coverage of controversial events in American history—the effects of censorship are the same: It stifles the debate and diversity of discussion that traditionally have been the core of our democracy.

The government's efforts to control information and ideas are, according to government spokespersons, in the best interest of the country. The prevailing attitude: the less everybody knows, the better.

ADMINISTRATION OFFICIALS explained that press coverage of the Grenada invasion was prohibited for fear that the media weren't "on our side." General Maxwell Taylor elaborated the same attitude earlier this year when he said: "I believe strongly that people have a right to know what their forces are doing but not today, not tomorrow, but at the appropriate time."

Taylor added that not only is timing crucial to public understanding, but how the news is presented is an important ingredient as well: "If they (the people) get the information in a block, they might well know what to do with it, but when they get it piecemeal, there's just confusion."

In other words: It's dangerous for people to be left to the task of thinking and sorting things out for themselves; they might come to conclusions different from those sanctioned by the government.

The same attitude prevails among those who seek to censor ideas and information from the nation's schools. Students, the censors argue, shouldn't be encouraged to arrive at their own conclusions. Professional Texas censor Norma Gabler has explained the philosophy succinctly: "An idea will never do anyone as much good as a fact.... The problem with too many books is that they leave students to make up their own minds about things."

IN OTHER WORDS: Students should be taught what to think rather than how. They shouldn't be taught the lessons—the traditional values—that are learned from lively discussion, dissent, and debate.

Last year, for example, in 48 of the 50 states, there were documented attempts to remove a wide variety of library books, textbooks, and courses from the public schools. In a majority of the incidents, the censors' ire was provoked because the "questionable" material promoted student discussion and understanding of ideas and competing philosophies.

Library books—such as the The Diary of Anne Frank, The Grapes of Wrath, Of Mice and Men, The Catcher in the Rye, To Kill a Mockingbird—were increasingly declared undesirable because they are "sordid," "dreary," "depressing," or "just plain filthy." The problem is that such books contain ideas that the censors say are "anti-American" or "un-Christian."

Textbooks that probe searing social problems also are on the hit lists of the censors. And because such textbooks are economic liabilities, publishers consistently have begun to shy away from text materials that the censors might label "too controversial."

The result: textbooks that gloss over—or ignore—controversial periods in American and world history, literature texts that have been purged of controversial stories such as Shirley Jackson's classic, "The Lottery," sanitized dictionaries that have been cleansed of "offensive" words, and science and biology texts that contain alarmingly little mention of the theory of evolution. (In 1982, one publisher deleted the word "evolution" from the company's only high school biology text. The reason for the omission: "to avoid the publicity that would surround a controversy.")

CONTRIVERSY, it seems, has become a threat to the censors' view of the American way of life.

If the censors continue to succeed, whether at the national level or in the local schools, our nation will cease to know—and ultimately forget—the value of our democratic traditions of diversity, dissent, and debate. Those who believe in the freedoms guaranteed by the First Amendment and the Bill of Rights would do well to spread the word: Democracy is a risky business. Without controversy and confrontation and open and free debate, there is no way that it can survive.

PODESTA IS Executive Director of People for the American Way.

Trail for study

I was pleased last week when the House passed a bill that I am cosponsoring to amend the National Trails System Act and add the Oregon California Trail to its study list.

The bill, H.R. 3787, authorized the Secretary of the Interior to initiate a study of the Pony Express Trail and the California Trail for possible inclusion in the National Trails System as national historic trails.

The California Trail was one of the number of trails used by settlers and prospectors in their emigration West during the mid 1800's. The trail breaks from the Oregon Trail—already included in the National Trails Systems—at the Ralf River, in Idaho and heads southwest toward Sacramento, Calif. This trail was the main thoroughfare to California and Sutter's Mill for the 125,000 or more men, women and children who came to settle or prospect in 1848.

THE PONY EXPRESS Trail also was a major link between the East and the California frontier. Organized in 1860, the Pony Express was the most direct and practical means of communication, East to West, before the advent of the telegraph, and played a role in aligning California with the Union during the outbreak of the Civil War.

Although the Pony Express thrived only 18 months, its riders became legendary because of the daring attitudes they displayed, carrying the mail in every kind of weather and through hostile territory.

The two trails run extremely close together, and at points are right on top of each other. A portion of these trails goes through Nebraska. Because of the proximity of these trails to each other, this bill authorized the Secretary of the Interior to conduct one feasibility study of the trails corridor, though there will be two recommendations.

The House Postmaster has notified me that the volume of incoming mail is unusually heavy. Because of the unprecedented volume of constituent mail now pouring into the House of Representatives, the Post Office is experiencing a backlog of four days in delivery of incoming mail to Members' offices.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has published a brochure designed to help landowners and local governments recognize streambank erosion, its causes and effect, and the preventive measures that are available.

Called "Streambank Protection for Landowners and Local Government," the brochure outlines a plan of action to protect streambanks, and gives additional information on what should be done if professional assistance is needed. The brochure can be obtained through the Corps of Engineers Public Affairs Office, Kansas City District, 700 Federal Office Building, 601 East 12th, Kansas City, Mo. 64106.

Valuation increase not worry for farmers

By Melvin Paul

Nebraska farmland owners won't have to worry this year about increases in their valuations for property tax purposes.

In a recent opinion, Assistant Attorney General Ralph Gillan told state Tax Commissioner Donna Karen that county assessors have no authority to change farmland values in 1984 because state law says such changes must take place in odd numbered years.

County Board of Equalization and state Board of Equalization, which annually must certify property values in all of the state's 93 counties, also are barred from acting, Gillan wrote.

ALTHOUGH THE 1984 Legislature passes a law returning property valuations from a biennial to an annual basis, it doesn't take effect until 1985.

The decision seems to delay the reckoning by local and state officials with the January Supreme Court decision involving the Kearney Holiday Inn. Owners of that motel successfully challenged in court its 1981 valuation on the basis of the disparity of the valuation with those of surrounding farmland.

Attorneys for the motel didn't dispute that the $3.5 million valuation was close to actual value, which the state constitution requires. They argued instead that the valuation constituted illegal discrimination because farmland in Buffalo county was assessed at 44 percent of actual value, and the motel was at 95 percent of actual value.

The court directed that the motel's valuation be reduced to 44 percent of actual value to equalize it with the farmland.

"The decision caused an uproar last winter, and at one point, Karnes, who is one of five state officials on the state Board of Equalization, said that all of the state's officials on the state Board of Equalization, said that all of the state's counties might have to be called before the board in July to justify their valuations.

DURING THE 1984 legislative session, senators considered the possibility of sending the voters in November a constitutional amendment which would allow farmland to be valued according to a different standard than residential and commercial property.

Senators acknowledge that in practice, farmland is already treated differently than other types of property. The amendment would simply affirm current practices, senators said.

When the session was finished on April 9, lawmakers had taken no action of the proposed constitutional amendment.

In his opinion, Gillan offered another perspective on the Kearney opinion, saying that it applies only to the parties in the case, and doesn't establish new law.

Meanwhile, the revenue Department, of which Karnes is the director, is continuing its upward revisions in the Nebraska Agricultural Land Valuation Manual. A public hearing on the proposed new values, which would be applied to future farmland assessments, is expected later this year.

ON ITS EDITORIAL page, "The Lincoln Journal" expressed some skepticism about the Gillan opinion.

"On a fairness basis, we can't quarrel ferociously with trying to avoid raising agricultural land tax values at a time of great economic stress upon much of Nebraska's farming and ranching industry," "The Journal" editorialized. "The thought lurks, nevertheless, that the wish to do nothing blotted out all arguments—even legal arguments—to the contrary."

The editorial cited what seems to be a clear mandate of the state constitution: "For all tax years commencing on or after January 1, 1981, the state Board of Equalization shall annually review and equalize assessments of property among counties."

"Obviously the constitution was not written for laymen to properly comprehend," "The Journal" concluded.

American economy is growing

By Richard Leshner

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

A recent "It's Your Business" program, the U.S. Chamber's syndicated television show, focused on the "Future of Conservatism."

I was joined by Representative Jack Kemp of New York in arguing that the low, low-inflation economic policies of the past three years have successfully generated five million new jobs, increased the real income of Americans after a decade of decline, and restored America's faith in herself and her future. Kemp and I both predicted that the American people would repeat their 1980 mandate for pro-growth economic policies on November 6, 1984, by sending more conservatives to Congress.

The producers of the program earned their paychecks by finding two unreconstructed liberals to argue for higher taxes, for more government, and for the idea that big government is the friend of the taxpayers. Arguing that the American people would reject the economic policies that brought us the recovery and real growth were Senator Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio) and Joseph Rauh, a liberal activist.

to argue forcefully for an untenable position, and Metzenbaum and Rauh acquitted themselves admirably. The central reality of the tax-cut-inspired economic boom, however, made their job difficult.

To make the point that government too often hinders economic growth and stifles individual initiative and opportunity, I suggested that if Thomas Edison were to invent the light bulb today, the evening news would lead off with Dan Rather somberly announcing "gloom" and despair hit the candlestick industry today. I went on to suggest that the next morning we would find Metzenbaum introducing legislation to tax electricity, and Rauh would begin the campaign to subsidize the candlestick industry.

I am indebted to Richard DeVos, a co-founder of the Army Corporation, who presented that scenario in a recent speech. In a few words, it succinctly states three problems that plague our efforts to continue the present economic recovery.

First, it is only too believable that the news media would treat a breakthrough such as the invention of the light bulb not as a liberating force for progress but as a "problem." We have seen the press coverage of the economic recovery focus not on the tremendous increase in employment but on remaining pockets of unemployment. And polls show that many Americans believe that inflation—which has dropped from the double-digit levels of 1979 and 1980—has worsened. The news media is simply not doing a credible job if so many people can be so misinformed about an issue as critical as inflation.

SECOND, MY suggestion that Metzenbaum would immediately move to tax electricity is, sadly, all too close to his reaction to increasing energy costs in the 1970s. Oil prices were rising and Metzenbaum's response was to raise taxes on oil. New technologies and new inventions create jobs and wealth. They are to be welcomed as unadulterated good news, not beaten into the ground with taxes and ham-handed regulations.

If Thomas Edison had faced the assaults of official Washington—the reams of red tape and thousand-page tax laws—I fear he would have spent more time puttering in the garden and less time giving us the tremendous benefits of his great mind. How many potential Thomas Edisons are there today who have decided that it simply isn't worth the hassle?

Third, the idea that Rauh would push for massive subsidies to the threatened candlestick industry is taken from the speeches of liberal politicians who continue to push for subsidies for industries and companies challenged by economic change. In an efficient economy, resources, both capital and labor, must be free to move from old industries to new ones, not locked in place by politicians living in the past.

Even in France, the socialist government of Mitterand is moving to reduce the $1 billion subsidy that maintains an inefficient steel industry. It is not easy. For while the jobs "protected" by such a massive subsidy are visible, the jobs and opportunities destroyed by taking a billion dollars out of the productive sector of the French economy are never seen on the nightly news.

The American economy is growing today because it is freer than it was four years ago. Taxes are down, the regulatory burden has been lightened, and new firms and industries face a healthier environment. The American people can sense this change, and I believe they will ratify the mandate of 1980 in November. It should be a very good year for candidates who understand that the government must get out of the way of economic growth and allow progress to continue.

ask a lawyer
a public service of the nebraska state bar association

Q: What are a person's rights with regard to his or her personnel file? Do you have any right to see what is in it? If there is something negative in it, do you have the right to challenge it or put in your own explanation?

If you are applying for another job, is your present employer justified in giving all of the information in your personnel file to your prospective employer?

A: For the purpose of this answer, it is assumed that your employer is in private business. An employer has absolute control over public inspection of its files; this includes the right to prohibit an employee's access to his or her own file.

Unless contractually arranged between an employer and an employee, an employee has no inherent right to see any material in his or her file or to challenge the validity of the file's contents.

The exception to the rule would occur if an employee brought a legal action against his or her employer and the contents of the personnel file were subpoenaed.

Generally, information in the employee's personnel file may be released to prospective employers, except that if such information is false and if damage results, an action for slander or libel might also exist.

The employer would also be prohibited from communicating to a potential employer any information concerning an employee's union activity, or information about any action which the employee has taken under employment discrimination laws. For example, if the employee had filed charges based on employment discrimination laws, that fact could not be communicated to the limited rights of the employee of a private employer, the Federal Right to Privacy Act gives a federal employee a mechanism for reviewing his or her personnel file and challenging any information believe to be inaccurate.

Patterning is key

Jenny's progress continues

By Jackie Osten

Jenny Swan, 3 1/2, tries to climb on top of coffee tables she knows she shouldn't be on. She strings magazines and newspapers across the living room floor and tries to sneak away before her mother finds out. She enjoys the sights and sounds of the family's television set.

These sound like the everyday activities of a young child Jenny's age, but up until a year ago, Jenny was able to do little more than a newborn due to brain damage which occurred while she was an infant.

The daughter of Herb and Barb Swan of Pilger, Jenny suffered damage to the portion of her brain which controls muscle movement. Doctors confirmed that Jenny was suffering from a mild case of cerebral palsy and gave little hope that Jenny would ever crawl or walk. They suggested that Jenny be placed in a wheelchair.

HERB AND BARB refused to accept that alternative and spent time searching for a way in which they could help their daughter.

As a result of that determination, Jenny became involved in a program of "patterning" and is now able to crawl, "leapfrog" and learn the basics of walking. She can also see the world around her in detail, a major accomplishment in itself since she was once practically blind.

The "patterning" which has brought about the extensive change in Jenny began just over a year ago. The Swans, who lived in Norfolk at the time, learn ed of the process through another local couple whose daughter required the patterning technique.

Patterning involves a series of movements and exercises which Jenny isn't able to do completely herself. It stimulates the brain as well as develops her muscles, which accounts for her improved eyesight. At present, she only functions with 10 percent normal hearing, but her mother feels that that condition may also improve as the patterning continues.

Patterners are needed

The basis of Jenny Swan's patterning success is the volunteers who give their time to help Jenny and her family with the program.

Until recently, the family lived in Norfolk, where Jenny underwent three sessions daily with the help of over 150 volunteer patterners.

In September, Herb Swan was appointed postmaster in Pilger, and the family made the move to the town just a couple of weeks ago.

Because of the move, Jenny has lost some of her patterner volunteers, and now needs new ones from the area to help her through her program.

Barb Swan is currently seeking volunteers to help with Jenny through the aid of area media and by word of mouth.

She stresses that it only involves about an hour one day a week, and the time can be worked out to the convenience of the volunteer. Anyone interested in helping to pattern Jenny or wanting more information on the process of patterning can contact Barb Swan at 396-3593.

Volunteers will go through short training sessions with Sister Adegia in early June before beginning the patterning program.

A session of patterning can involve as many as five people, but can be done with less if necessary. Jenny's head, arms and legs are moved through a sequence of movements which imitate crawling, walking and other normal activities.

IN ADDITION, certain portions of the patterning program aid in increasing Jenny's circulation and breathing capacity.

Ideally, a full program of patterning would involve five sessions a day, while living in Norfolk, Jenny had three sessions a day which involved, approximately, 150 volunteers.

Jenny's patterning program was developed by Sister Adegia of Wichita, Kan. Sister Adegia has been involved in establishing patterning programs for both children and adults throughout the country.

Jenny's program has been restructured twice by Sister Adegia since it began on April 25 of 1983, and Barb Swan expects that it will change again when Sister Adegia visits in early June. Both times the exercises were changed to encourage different types of muscle development and coordination. The programs are evaluated every three months.

PATTERNING IS a part of Jenny's everyday life, and she looks forward to the sessions which involve volunteers that become friends of Jenny's and the Swan family.

Emotions are also a part of her patterning sessions, and Jenny giggles, squeals and sheds an occasional tear during the program. She also likes to be "ornery," according to Barb and the volunteer patterners, wriggling around and stiffening her arms and legs. No one minds though, because all of Jenny's activities are an indication of the progress she has made.

JENNY SWAN goes through a portion of her patterning program with the help of her mother and a group of volunteers from Madison.

Education on horseback

Sometimes there is more to physical education than annual physical fitness tests, touch football and softball games.

Ron Carnes, currently advanced physical education instructor at Wayne-Carroll High School is a strong believer of this principle. That's why he had half his physical education classes outdoors Monday at the Wayne Golf and Country Club.

Another group of students were at the Ralph Etter farm just a few miles north of Wayne. There, the students were given insight into the hobby of horseback riding.

Ralph and his son, John, pointed out the grooming, worming and dieting of horses. The students learned about how to saddle and bridle a horse, how to mount and dismount and how to ride a horse.

Carnes said horseback riding in physical education classes was tried last year in large open spaces — but control of the horses was difficult resulting in some students falling off the horses.

At the Etter farm, the riding horses were kept within adequate-sized corrals which allowed the students plenty of room to maneuver the animals.

"We do a lot of different things. These types of things are lifetime hobbies which the kids can enjoy when they are older," said Carnes.

'hacken' away at sports

by chuck hackenmiller

After clearing the table of dishes from the dinner table, the father went into the living room, plopped into an easy chair and began reading the sports section from a daily newspaper.

His eight-year-old son clicked on the television set just in time to catch a few minutes of the evening sportscast.

"Dad, what's an Olympics?" the young lad inquisitively asked his father.

"It's a modern revival of games played in ancient Greece which consists of athletic and sports contests involving amateur participants from nations throughout the world, held every four years in a different country," dad mentioned.

"Something athletic like what our gym teacher made us do today? He made us run through some tires, then run to the monkey bars, climb over a wall, crawl through a barrel, swing through a rope and then run fast to the finish line. I think he called it the Olympics course," said the lad.

"Sounds more like obstacle course, son," replied dad.

"Oh yeah, that was it. Dad, aren't the Russians and East Germans 'nations throughout the world.' Don't they like us or something? Why don't they want to go to the Olympics?"

"OLYMPICS, SON. Well the Russians say they don't want to participate in the summer games because they don't think the United States is a very safe country — not enough security and they fear terrorism," he said. Several other countries followed in Russia's footsteps and gave the same reason.

Actually, I think the Russians are getting a little revenge in on the United States because the Americans stayed away from the Olympics in Moscow during 1980," dad said.

The eight-year-old boy scratched his head.

"I don't understand. In little league baseball, if there is a team that's awesome — we don't quit and stay away from them. Playing a team nobody likes makes us want to win more," said the boy.

"Makes sense kid. You're saying the differences should be settled on the field and not in the political arena."

"Yeah dad. Maybe they shouldn't use all that tape at the finish line so the obstacles can start without problems."

"Olympics, son. What tape? They usually use string at the finish line" the father asked.

"Red colored tape, I guess. Billy's dad said this year's obstacle will never start or be completed because of all the red tape teams must work against."

"While we're on the subject dad, couldn't some of those officials or referees do all the security work like you said earlier?"

"The timers, race starters, basketball officials?" dad asked.

"Maybe. But I'm talking about those officials from the camera, blue jean, deodorant and aftershave companies that say they are "officials" of the 1984 summer games."

"Just some people who prefer getting in on all the action. They really don't have anything to do with actual team competition," said the father.

"Gee dad. Having the summer olympics sure can be a headache, can't it?"

"That's right lad. You might say the summer games are quite complicated."

"Like obstacles, dad?"

"You might say that, son."

You could say the above story was fabricated to stress a point.

State golf tidbits

Teams beside Wayne High School which are in the Class B state golf meet, to be played on May 17, include Albion, Chadron, Crete, Fairbury, Gering, Gothenburg, Minden, Schuyler, Superior, Waverly and West Point.

Superior will have three of the top 10 medalists from last year competing at Mahoney Golf Course in Lincoln. They finished sixth, seventh and tenth last year.

Cole Froeschle of Wayne won the Class B medalist title last year — the only defending champion returning from all of the Nebraska high school golfing classes.

Oakland-Craig's Mike Peterson and Kelly Danielson finished second and third in Class C last year and will be making a return trip to state this year.

Area-state-track representatives

Thirty cream of the crop area high school boys and girls track athletes will be competing this weekend at the Omaha Burke school to participate in the state high school track meet.

Wakefield leads in numbers of state qualifiers with 10, followed by Winside with nine. Wayne with eight, Allen with two and Laurel with one.

This is a good representation of the quality of area high school track competitors and coaching staff.

Published within this week's sports section are the dates and times of the preliminaries and finals in each event.

Good luck to all the area state track competitors.

Goofy?

Pictured on the Nebraska Schools Activities Association "Media Guide for Spring Sports State Championships" is the national mascot of high school sports — that famous Walt Disney character "Sport" Goofy.

Why "Goofy" was selected over other mascots I really don't know.

"Goofy," to me, just doesn't seem to be a true representative of high school sports.

Perhaps the official mascot was picked to take the seriousness out of high school competition — a decision I can agree with.

What's your feelings?

'The West' is alive and well

TODD BEIERMANN has been reviving the art of the old west.

ED "WILD BILL" Eldridge of Fremont, Beiermann's mentor, displays a bullwhip that is over 50 feet in length.

ROPE SPINNING is one of Beiermann's acts which he performs at area shows.

Photos and text: chuck hackenmiller

Todd Beiermann of rural Wayne may not be the quickest draw in the west, but he's learning fast.

Dressed in black western cowboy gear, Beiermann and his instructor, Ed "Wild Bill" Eldridge of Fremont performed the skills and explained the fundamentals of rope spinning, bullwhipping and fast drawing techniques last week to students at the Wayne Carroll elementary school.

"Todd is the best guy I've seen to take to this stuff naturally," said Eldridge.

Eldridge has proven his ability at being the fastest draw in the world. He has won three world championships in fast draw competition (during the years 1958, 1963 and 1973) and has been clocked at .07 of a second.

His notoriety as a fast draw placed him in roles as stuntman or making parts in up to 52 television shows and movie productions.

He began rope spinning at the age of three and began showing a true interest in the hobby when reaching the seventh grade. Later, he continued "filling out" his cowboy skills by learning how to use the bullwhip.

"My grandfather was a cousin to Will Rogers," Eldridge said.

The cowboy skills exercised last week in front of the elementary students "were hardly covered — only a quarter of what could be done," Eldridge said.

It was at a gun show in Wayne several years ago where Beiermann, who also has a gun collection, saw Eldridge perform and he became captivated in the fast draw portion of the show.

Eldridge was willing to teach Beiermann the techniques of the fast draw, rope tricks and how to use the bullwhip. During the past three years, Beiermann has worked diligently to polish these skills, practicing Tuesday nights at the local armory, weekends at the auditorium or sometime in his dining room where his wife and he reside.

"I found out I'm not as fast (fast drawing) with my left hand as with my right hand," he said.

He has provided solo performances at the Wayne Gun Show, St. Mary's spring banquet and at family reunions.

"When I started, I had no interest of doing shows. But people began asking me to do shows here and there so I began performing," said Beiermann, who now has two bullwhips and a variety of ropes to go with his collection of guns.

Last year he joined Eldridge for a kidney foundation show in Fremont which he anticipates to do again this year. When Beiermann was asked if he'd like to become another "Wild Bill," Eldridge, he replied "whatever comes up."

"Anybody that shows a genuine interest in fast draw or other skills, I will help," said Eldridge.

"This art is almost lost. It has got to be passed on. That's why I wouldn't be jealous if so many become better than me," he added.

Beiermann is one individual who plans on keeping the cowboy art and skills alive and well in northeastern Nebraska.

BEIERMANN CAN fast draw with his eyes closed.

AAUM holds convention

Women in politics

The American Association of University Women representing 29 branches across Nebraska met in Grand Island for their state convention on May 4-6.

Keynote speaker Carolin Head, legislative vice-president of the Maryland division, spoke on the theme "Empowering Women Through Political Action." She described the gender gap and noted women in history who played significant roles in promoting rights for women.

A panel discussion followed with Congresswoman Virginia Smith, Hall County Supervisor Irene Abernathy, the Hall County Superintendent of Schools and Mrs. Head discussing their political careers.

"The Future of Arms Control" was the address given by Dr. Leo Sarotri, professor of physics and political science at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. He suggested that now is the time for the public to abandon our weapons policy and really try arms control. He said it would be helpful if both the U.S. and the Soviet Union would put themselves in the other's shoes.

New officers were elected for two year terms. Dr. Doris Clafanoff, chairman of the Humanities Division of Concordia College in Seward, was elected president. Grand Island members Hazel Hammond and Loifetta Lockhorn will share the responsibilities of membership vice-president. Denise Lathrop of Ogallala was elected secretary of the division.

Given priority in legislative action was a proposal to increase the state sales tax rate for the purpose of state aid to education for property tax relief and improved teachers' salaries. Two other items of special concern are equal pay for jobs of comparable worth and violence against women and children.

Those members of the Wayne branch of AAUW attending the convention were Manjit Johar, Sheryl Lindau and Marla McCue.

Music is very much a part of Connie Webber's life.

Mrs. Webber, assistant professor of music, takes her work home with her. Besides teaching private voice lessons and music education classes at WSC, she also volunteers her time teaching music at St. Mary's Elementary School as well as directing the choir and playing the organ at the First United Methodist Church in Wayne. As a performing soprano, she often sings both on and off-campus.

Mrs. Webber received her bachelor of arts degree from Oberlin College in Ohio and went on to receive her masters degree from Kent State University in Ohio.

Mrs. Webber enjoys teaching at WSC and especially enjoys the combination of teaching individual students in private lessons as well as teaching larger classes.

Mrs. Webber came to WSC in 1966 and took a two-year leave of absence while her husband was working on his Ph.D. During those two years, she taught vocal music at the elementary and high school levels in Indiana.

She belongs to the National Association of Teachers of Singing, the Music Education Na-

For the birds

Ray Kling's hobby is strictly for the birds, but the birds sure aren't complaining. Kling, who has been retired since the fall of 1980, became serious minded four years ago about building homes for birds. His designs include barn-shaped feeders, replicas of Swiss chalets, rotating geese, feeders and wren houses of all shapes and sizes. Kling said he has used several patterns from newspapers and books, but he likes to improve with his own ideas, too.

The retired dairy farmer of 30 years chose his venture when he saw a quote in the "Omaha World Herald" stating that "it's too bad more people don't have the time to help Nebraska's birds through the winter." From then on, he was ready to give his assistance. "It frees my mind and it's something I want to do," he said. Kling works in his basement workshop constructing the birdhouses during the winter months and uses the summer days for painting the homes. "I can usually make two or three houses at a time, all in one day," he said "but a hobby is something you don't have to have done, so I like to take my time."

Kling said he has liked working with wood since he was a kid. "I always hounded the grocery man when I went to the store with my mother," he said. "I wanted our food packed in wooden crates, so I could use the scraps for building." At age 10, he built miniature replicas of a haystack, hayrack, sled and a small wheelbarrow, all of which were workable. Today he frequents lumber yards and scrounges for partial cans of paint to support his hobby. Kling doesn't produce only bird houses, but he also makes bird feeders, windmills, wishing wells and his newest project is wooden butterflies.

As a scavenger, he said he often gets strange looks at garage sales. "I bought a large basket of wooden spoons once to use as bases of the windmills," he said. "People thought I was crazy to pay good money for them." Kling has also used venetian blinds for the fans of the windmills and old broom handles as cranks on the wells. Kling said he switches from one project to another, if he gets too bored with one thing. Kling, who has made 300 to 400 bird houses over the years, has given several of his projects to friends and relatives as gifts. "My hobby does have a tendency to get away from me," he said. "I might have to start selling some of the houses in the future." Kling said he has gained a lot of knowledge about birds over the years, just through observing their habits.

"Birds are fussy," he said. "I once had a wren try his darnedest to get into one of my houses, but the hole was just too small. I had to use a rasp to make the hole bigger." Kling's feeders attract chickadees, sparrows, nuthatches, red cardinals, bluejays and several other types of birds. The feeders often attract squirrels and other unwanted guests, also. Kling said he had to grease the pole so they couldn't climb up to the feeder. Kling's wife, Jerry, said she can often see the birds scratching around and fighting for food while she does dishes and watches from her kitchen window. Kling is also convinced that the birds have some method of communication among themselves. "Whenever the feeder goes empty, business dies down," he said, "but just as soon as one customer discovers it's refilled, the rest of them are back the very next day."

Grain in reserve status

All corn in farmer-owned grain reserves IV and V will remain in reserve status through May 31, according to Everett Rank, administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. Oats also will remain in reserve status through May 31.

Scholarship details announced

Details of the new R.B. Warren 4-H educational scholarship, established in honor of the longtime University of Nebraska extension 4-H specialist and horse judge have been announced by the NU 4-H Department.

The fund, made possible by contributions from 4-H horse club members, parents, leaders and friends of Warren, will fund a varying number of scholarships each year, based on the number and quality of applicants. However, each scholarship awarded will be at least $200.

Applications must be received by 4-H officials in Lincoln no later than June 15. Eligibility requirements are: an applicant must be currently enrolled in the Nebraska 4-H program; must be a senior-graduating from high school in 1984; must not have passed his or her 19th birthday on Jan. 1 of the current year; must enroll in the NU College of Agriculture.

Youth camp set for June

The 21st annual Nebraska Range Youth Camp will be held June 11-15 at the State 4-H Camp at Lincoln. Youth at least 14 years of age but not over 18 Oct. 1 are eligible for the camp.

The program emphasized plant/soil/animal relationships, plant identification, range livestock management, ranching, economics and multiple use of land, according to Patrick Reece, extension range and forage specialist at the University of Nebraska Panhandle Station, Scottsbluff. Afternoon activities will include field trips and a visit to a local ranch. Recreation will be an important part of the camp, Reece said.

Winside dairy producer honored

Kittle Holstein Farm of Winside was honored recently by Kent Feeds, Inc., Muscatine, Iowa, in the 1984 Kent "Mr. Dairyman" contest.

The contest is an annual event based on recognition of dairymen from 12 states in the Midwest for outstanding 1983 DHIA production records. The top 20 dairy producers are recognized in four categories: 1. Herd milk production; 2. Herd butterfat production; 3. Individual cow milk production; and 4. Individual cow butterfat production.

Wayne couple honored by NK

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Luff of Wayne were recently honored at a special Nebraska Northrup King Seed Dealer's advisory council meeting held at the Grand Island Midtown Holiday Inn. They were part of a select group of 12 outstanding Northrup King dealers and wives from Nebraska chosen to represent each of the separate Nebraska geographic sales areas.

A four-hour council meeting was held where each dealer could offer to Division and District Sales Managers attending suggestions and information for improving future customer sales and service of Northrup King farm seed products.

New wheat variety released

A new hard red winter wheat cultivator has been released to certified growers for increase, according to Darrell Nelson, head of the University of Nebraska Department of Agronomy. The new variety, called Stouland, is an awned, white glumed cultivator similar in appearance and plant height to Centurk 78.

CCC rate set at 10 7/8 percent

Commodity and farm storage loans disbursed in May by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Commodity Credit Corporation will carry a 10 7/8 percent interest rate, according to CCC Executive Vice President Everett Rank.

Farmers may consider short season hybrids

"While we haven't yet reached the date to change to early maturing corn hybrids, continued cool, wet weather could force Nebraska farmers to consider that change," Don Hanway, University of Nebraska extension crops specialist, told members of the NU Cooperative Extension Service Agricultural Climate Situation Committee in Lincoln last Monday.

Conservation tillage

Proper seed spacing is important

Conservation tillage methods being adopted by many producers have increased concerns about seed placement and general planter performance when operating in residue-covered fields, according to Elbert Dickey, University of Nebraska extension agricultural engineer-conservation.

Proper seed spacing is necessary to minimize competition for the light, nutrients and soil moisture essential for crop growth. Field conditions are an important factor in seed spacing, and producers traditionally have used equipment that created a well-filled, residue-free seedbed.

THE FEATURES and attachments, as well as proper adjustment and operation, of a planter affect its primary function—placing the seed into an acceptable environment for germination and growth.

ALTHOUGH WIDE flutes loosen the soil, he noted that this is not necessary when the soil is soft away from the row, he advised keeping ground speeds below 4 mph when using fluted coulters.

GOOD SEED-TO-SOIL contact is essential for germination and seedling emergence. While older planters relied on the natural tumbling of loose soil to cover the seed, planters used in conservation tillage must have some method of moving soil back into the seed furrow, Dickey said.

Commonly used seed-covering devices include disks and knives. The knife coverer is less expensive, but may plug in residue-covered fields. The disk-type coverers will either cut or ride over the residue, thus avoiding plugging problems.

In addition, the seed must be firmed into the soil either before or after covering with soil. Seed firming devices can include: narrow seed firming wheels, press wheels or angled closing wheels.

"At this time, there is no combination of covering devices and press wheels that offers a distinct advantage in the variety of tillage and soil conditions encountered," Dickey said.

Spring storm coming

ANOTHER SPRING storm brewing on the horizon brings a threat of unnecessary rain.

Don C. Spitzer, Wayne County extension agent

this and that

Black spot of roses Roses require special care throughout the growing season. This care should include fungicidal control of black spot, a common destructive disease on roses grown in Nebraska.

Black spot is caused by fungus which remains alive throughout the winter in partially decayed plant residues. As spring temperatures become warmer, the fungus produces spores which will infect the year's foliage.

This disease continues to develop throughout the summer. Symptoms appear as black spots which have a "feathery" type margin. These lesions may vary in size from small dots to spots one-half inch in diameter.

THE INFECTED leaves tend to turn yellow and drop, often causing extension defoliation. When this occurs, the plants are weakened and become subject to winter injury and other diseases. Defoliated plants will also produce fewer blossoms the following year.

To prevent an outbreak of black spot, control should begin in the fall. The removal of old leaves and refuse surrounding the plant will help to decrease the disease potential.

Phalton or Benlate are the preferred fungicides for black spot control because they also control powdery mildew, DeCamil 2387 Dyrene, or products containing Maneb, Zineb or Captan also give good control of black spot but not mildew.

Controlling moles and gophers Moles and gophers are small burrowing animals which seldom are seen above ground. Their activity may be observed to increase near the soil surface as spring arrives and soil temperature increases.

Traps provide a sure method for removing these animals when they cause damage to lawns and gardens. Mole and gopher traps are available in most garden and hardware stores. Examples are the Victor Gopher Getter, Victor mole Trap, and DK 1 Pocket Gopher and Mole Trap. For proper use, follow the instructions that come with the trap.

Pocket gophers will feed on grain placed inside their burrow systems. Poison grain baits containing strychnine or zinc phosphide are available from retail suppliers. These products may be hazardous to dogs or cats which dig and feed on the bait or the poisoned gopher. Follow label directions, and keep all poison baits out of the reach of children.

Since moles, which are insectivores (not rodents), feed mainly on insects and earthworms, poison grain baits will not be effective in controlling them. Fumigation of moles or pocket gophers burrow systems is seldom effective.

Pocket gophers react quickly to foreign gases and plug their burrow system. Mole burrows near the soil surface are usually too porous for fumigation to be effective.

Feeding grain mixture improves performance of finishing cattle

A University of Nebraska Department of Animal Science study indicates feeding mixtures of grains in cattle rations improved animal performance and reduced the severity of possible acidosis, said an NU professor of animal science.

Project leader Dennis Brink said adding 25-50 percent whole shelled corn or rolled sorghum grain to ground high moisture corn significantly improved performance.

"Application of these results will allow cattle feeders to use grains such as high moisture corn, wheat and grain sorghum when they are economically advantageous and still maintain or improve performance," he said.

CATTLE ARE naturally foraging animals and are used to eating roughage. When they are switched to grain for finishing, the grain doesn't fill them up like roughage does, so they tend to overeat and develop acidosis.

team's research real economic importance. Many cattle feeders were starting to shy away from feeding high moisture corn and were being forced to dry the corn or switch to another grain.

After determining the advantages of adding whole corn to the ration, Brink's team tried to determine the best ratio of whole corn to high moisture corn, but could not separate the differences within the precision of the experiment.

The research, funded by a grant from the Nebraska Grain Sorghum Board, collected data for the first time on mixtures of dry rolled milo with high moisture corn. These data suggest that mixtures of dry rolled milo and high moisture corn are used more efficiently by cattle than for either grain alone.

Research in this area is continuing at NU. Brink said that in the next five years the new project will analyze different

Several personnel changes made at Northeast Station

Dr. Charles A. Shapiro assumed his duties as soils specialist at the University of Nebraska Northeast Station effective April 16. Shapiro fills the vacancy created a year ago by George Rehm's resignation. Shapiro's duties include half-time research and half-time as an extension specialist.

Dr. Shapiro was born and raised in New York State. After earning a B.S. degree in general agriculture at Cornell University in 1974, and after working on a vegetable farm and dairy in New York State, Dr. Shapiro moved to Nebraska where he completed his Masters (1978) and Doctorate (1982) in agronomy.

After graduation Dr. Shapiro worked as a research scientist for Castle & Cooke in Ecuador, South America and as consultant to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

OTHER PERSONNEL changes at the Northeast Station, according to Cal Ward, district director, are the following: Anna Marie White assumed additional duties as coordinator of home economics programs in the northeast 13-county district. She devotes half-time to this assignment, beginning April 1.

White has a B.S. from Peru State and a M.S. from Colorado State. Her experiences include teaching, work as a state extension specialist, and area extension agent. White is a native of southeast Nebraska.

His experience includes work with the U.S. Forestry service in the Black Hills. He was employed by the University of Nebraska as a forester in the Lower Loop NRD in 1982.

He is transferring from that position to the Northeast Station where he will be funded by a combination of Extension Service and Nebraska State Forestry funds.

TWO ADDITIONAL people will be working in the Northeast District under a special grant for Conservation Tillage and Conservation of Fuel and Water for Irrigation.

Kevin Fairbanks, extension engineer, serves as technician for the irrigation portion of the Energy Conservation project. His efforts will be concentrated in Antelope and Holt counties. Fairbanks and his family live in Wayne. He headquarters at the Northeast Station.

Fairbanks is a native of Spalding, attended the Nebraska School of Technical Agriculture and received a B.S. Work experience includes assistant manager of a farm supply store and computer programming.

Paul Jasa, a Thurston County native, will be spending most of time in the northeast district on the conservation tillage portion of the energy conservation project. Wayne County and portions of Thurston, Burt, and Washington Counties are selected target areas for this program.

Jasa currently lives and headquarters in Lincoln, but expects to move his headquarters base to the Northeast Station later in the spring. Jasa completed his B.S. and M.S. at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and has operated the rainfall simulator machine for the past few years.

What a relief! It does not rain for seven consecutive Sundays if it rains on Easter. I have to admit I was getting worried. We had enough of those showers Saturday night to make the roads very slick, but Mother's Day was beautiful.

It seems we are going directly from winter to summer without spring again, which really makes me mad.

I didn't get any gravel Sunday because the ruts aren't completely dried out yet. I did get a Glenn Miller cassette, which the kids say is really old-fashioned, just like me; and two "preppy" shirts, because they are constantly trying to update me.

HAD I HAD ANY spare time last week, I could have celebrated. Every time I picked up a paper, I noticed another special observance. It was National Hospital Week, for one. Lutheran Hospital traditionally observes this with a two-mile "run, walk, crawl" and a pot-luck supper, but it had to be cancelled for rain and cold.

It was also Nurse Week. I was so busy being one, I didn't have time to think about it. For the first time ever, nurses are having trouble finding jobs. When I was in school, they assured us that as long as we were "warm and still breathing", they would hire us. No longer true, hard as it is to believe.

It was Volunteer Week. This is important because donated time is what makes most worthwhile organizations happen. Sunday School teachers, room mothers, scout leaders, community improvement leaders, cancer society, heart association, kidney foundation, candy strippers and pink ladies, special olympics, post prom parties—all depend on volunteerism.

Nebraska added 4-H volunteers to its special emphasis week, and I'd like to publicly say a big thanks to Dennis and Ramona Puls and Harold and Yvonne Wittler, who have logged many years of 4-H meetings and county fairs for our Hoskins club. This takes special people who care about kids. They've been a big part of our lives.

IT WAS SMALL Business Week. There is concern for the survival of these in this day of corporations, chains, and conglomerates. The family farm is an endangered small business, also.

Homemakers shared their week with all these other worth-while things. This, too, may be on the way to extinction. Especially if one's definition of homemaker includes raising children, cooking nutritious meals; keeping the house, yard, and garden, and contributing to one's church and community.

All the special observances seemed to tie in together for me. The last, a new one, was National Fitness Testing Week. There was even a number, 800-FIT-TEST, one could dial to request the test. I hear that participation was limited. But it had something to do with lack of time because of all the other hats people wear.

We have to stay fit, or we wouldn't be able to do it all. Which reminds me that May is also high blood pressure month—better have yours checked, in case all the activity has raised it.

THIS CURRENT week is Nursing Home Week, which traditionally begins on Mother's Day. If you haven't visited one lately, make it a point to do so. One mark of a civilized society is care and respect accorded its elderly population.

As I told someone last week, "We don't put them on an ice slab and send them out to sea." Nursing homes do a good job with a sometimes very difficult task.

I took four vehicles to get to graduation exercises, yesterday. The two band members went early. Then Sue and I waited on the men to come in from chores. The Big Farmer announced that he would be coming right home because chores weren't finished, so she and I took off in her car. He came in the pickup, and left Jon in the basement! He can be grateful there was something left to drive.

I read the following on a bulletin board recently, and thought it worth sharing. Contentment is not the fulfillment of what you want, but the realization of how much you already have.

Market 'nervous' about corn prices

Which is the most important to Nebraska farmers, getting this year's corn crop planted under adverse conditions, or making sure "old corn" stored in the bin is sold at a favorable price?

Unfortunately, according to a University of Nebraska extension economist, because of a "nervous" corn market, farmers need to watch corn prices closely during the next few weeks, "just when they don't want to worry about it."

Lynn Lutgen said farmers are preoccupied with trying to get crops squeezed in between wet spells, and are more reluctant than ever to give attention to marketing strategies.

WHILE THE MARKET has dropped off since the announcement of the April 23 national grain stocks report, "I think it will recover," Lutgen said. He said the basis could narrow in Nebraska, "which could be good (for prices) at the farm level."

But he warned farmers, "if you don't watch close, the price could go up and later drop, leaving you stranded" with corn unsold.

The presence of 100 million more bushels of corn in the USDA report than the trade had expected put a bearish tone of the corn market, Lutgen explained. Corn dropped dramatically, about 20 cents a bushel, in the week after the report was issued, he said.

Lutgen said some "market observers" see July futures pushing to $3.85, with a zero basis, meaning the same price on the cash market. It would be reasonable to expect cash corn at $3.30 to $3.50 at many Nebraska selling points in late June, Lutgen said, "giving farmers another shot" at getting rid of 1983 corn.

This favorable price, if it materializes, would come at one of the busiest times in the crop season, Lutgen said, "when farmers don't have time to market grain."

"There's not much 'downside risk' in marketing corn in the next couple of months," he advised.

NOTING THAT "that market will be as nervous as an expectant mother for the next few months," Lutgen said the weather factor could precipitate wider swings in grain prices.

If the majority of corn planting is pushed past May 15, "the market could be explosive," he said.

He urged farmers with corn still on hand to look at the probable impact of this year's crop as the planting pattern emerges, on the December 1984 to March, 1985 period more than just the current situation.

A nationwide 8 billion bushel corn crop, a figure based on normal conditions, would cause a downturn in prices, he said. "If this summer we're looking at 7.4 billion bushels, new corn prices would gain strength."

Farmers who hold on to old corn all summer "are making a bet there will be two droughts in a row," Lutgen said.

market have shown a slackening off of all demand now, Lutgen said.

DESPITE A LOW carryover of soybeans this fall, a lot of factors put beans in a vulnerable position, price-wise, he said. If wet weather discourages corn planting past optimum dates, farmers will put more acres of beans, "blowing production estimates" for this year, Lutgen said.

Offering little solace to soybean farmers looking for positive signals, Lutgen said, beans could "go up or down $2 a bushel the next couple of months, depending on the conditions."

Little good can be said about the wheat market situation, the grain marketing specialist said. "It would be nice to believe that widespread winterkill and disease, such as crown rot and soil-borne mosaic — along with increased livestock feeding — would have an upward influence on wheat prices. It's not going to help. It would take a major disaster to have an impact" on the huge hold-over supply of wheat, Lutgen said.

Field scout training session is planned Monday at Concord's Northeast Station

Field scouting is becoming a standard management practice in Nebraska. Proper field scouting can provide farmers with important information concerning pests present in the field, pest populations, and proper timing of pesticide application, if necessary.

The session will begin at 9 a.m. and last until 3:15 p.m. Emphasis will be on the identification and biology of weed, insect and disease pests of corn, soybean and alfalfa. Control measures will not be emphasized but will be discussed.

Farmers, agribusiness fieldmen, summer field scouts, and any other interested persons are invited to attend. There will be no registration fee, and it is suggested that you bring a sack lunch. A comprehensive scout manual will be available for purchase at $10 a piece for those interested.

Social Security covers farm crew workers

Farm crew workers are covered by Social Security if they are paid at least $150 in cash wages during a calendar year or if they are paid cash wages by the hour, day, week, or month (or other time basis) for any part of 20 or more days a year from one employer. Dale Branch, Social Security administration district manager in Norfolk, said recently.

If there is a written agreement between the crew leader and the farmer stating that the crew leader is the farmer's employee, the farmer is the employer. If there is no written agreement and the crew leader pays the workers, the crew leader is the employer; however, if the farmer or the farmer's agent pays the workers, the employer is the one who has control over the workers on the job.

The employer is responsible for keeping a record for each worker. This record should show the worker's name, Social Security number, the amount of cash wages paid, and the amount of taxes withheld.

In general, the Social Security tax must be paid periodically to the Internal Revenue Service during the year. Federal Tax Deposit Form 511 should be used for this purpose. The frequency of payments depends on the total amount of taxes payable.

Another form, the Employer's Annual Tax Return for Agricultural Employees (Form 943), must be submitted by Jan. 31 for wages paid the previous year. If all taxes for the previous year have already been deposited, the deadline for filing Form 943 is extended to February 10.

Form W-2, the Wage and Tax Statement, is prepared at the end of the year.

Additional information concerning the responsibilities of farm crew leaders or farm employers for reporting wages and paying Social Security taxes can be obtained from any Internal Revenue Service office.

MATH TEACHER HIRED
 Supl. Heckathorn announces the hiring of a math instructor for the 1984-85 school term. Signing a contract with the Allen school is Jeffrey Schoning of Sheffield, Iowa. Mr. Schoning, who is a graduate of Simpson College in Indianola, Iowa, will be teaching math and will be assistant football and basketball coach. He has been teaching the past two years at Carson-Macedonia Community School in Iowa.

SENIOR CLASS HONORED
 The senior class was honored at a brunch held the morning of May 8 at the First Lutheran Church in Allen. It was hosted by the LCV. Hostesses were Jackie Mitchell and Gwen Jorgensen. Incoming water in an ordinary water heater Doesn't create turbulence, allows harmful sediment to accumulate.

Incoming water in a State TURBO water heater

Creates a "vortex" of turbulence that keeps sediment in suspension.

State TURBO water heaters stay energy-efficient.

Sediments in the water supply tend to settle and build up inside a water heater tank. This buildup decreases the water heater's energy efficiency and increases your fuel bills. But State Industries' new TURBO water heaters are designed to keep sediment from accumulating, so they stay energy-efficient year after year. Make sure your next water heater is a State TURBO!

It was a day when a child could forget about school for an instant and dress up like those of the "wild west" and learn about true cowboys.

That's what took place last week at the elementary schools in Wayne and Carroll as grades one through four took part in a western days atmosphere wearing cowboy hats and vests and carrying toy six shooters or rifles.

Part of the day's activities included a show by Ed "Wild Bill" Eldridge of Fremont and Todd Beiermann of Wayne as they demonstrated the arts of rope tricks, use of the bull whip and the skills of fast drawing from the hip.

In the above photo, Eldridge twirls a giant butterfly before the elementary grade school cowboys and cowgirls and at left, he demonstrates rope twirling to a young student.

Bottom photo shows the winners of the best dressed cowboys and girls. Winners from Carroll include Erica Stollenberg and Cory Brader (kindergarten), Mandi Hall and Robert Carnes (grade one), Brad Erdmann, Andrew Nelson and Dawn Smith (grade two), Chris Brader and Carrie Junck (grade three) and Duane Junck and Doug Hank (grade four).

Winners at Wayne included "Eric Wiseman" and Kathleen Pierce (kindergarten p.m.), Jessica Sievers and Bear Luff (kindergarten a.m.), Crissy McDonald and Dustin Longe (Mallette room), Angie Webb and Jason Carr (Koenig room), Mike Fluent and Britney Jones (Straight room), Joey Bartholomew and Mollie Bursell (Day room), Jessica Ormsby and Chris Brandsletter (Lubbersled room), Sarah Grandberg and Philip Hultman (Larsen room), Jack Beeson and Brielle Jones (Benshoot room), and Brent Gambale and Trisha Luff (Hamer room).
