THE WAYNE HERALD

Ag land drenched from past showers

Rain creates havoc

The crop situation in the Wayne, Laurel, Winslow and Wakefield rural areas fares much better than counties to the south which received overly excessive rainfall and hail during the past week.

Russell Moomaw, extension crop and weeds specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln experimental station at Concord, said the hail damage was not as critical as it was to counties southward (such as Stanton and Madison).

However, there are some areas where a crop has been planted and is now recovering from the high waters which was slow in draining. Once the water is drained, Moomaw said some farmers are considering planting soybeans within the next two weeks.

But the replanting to be completed in the area would "probably be a very low percentage," he said.

What is more drastic is the loss of topsoil caused by the heavy rains, over the past week, according to Moomaw. "There is a lot of soil erosion in a year like this when we get quite a bit of rain from these storms," he said.

Flooded or at least saturated fields over most of eastern Nebraska and increased activity of European corn borers were the major items of concern at the June 18 meeting of the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service Agricultural Climate Situation Committee.

RECENT RAINS and swollen streams resulted in water standing in a large number of Nebraska fields. NU extension crops specialist Don Hanway said the corn or soybeans will die in three or four days if standing in water.

"Draining water from flooded fields as quickly as possible is important so that oxygen can move back into the pore spaces of the soil to supply root needs," he said.

Root cells of plant seedlings, as well as growing plants in warm weather, are very active metabolically and require abundant oxygen to meet respiration needs. When oxygen is limited, Hanway said, respiration of root cells may build up carbon dioxide to toxic levels.

Ed Penas, NU southeast district crops specialist, said the nitrogen status of flooded land will also be questionable. In such cases a side or top dressing of nitrogen may be necessary.

THE SPECIALISTS cautioned Nebraska farmers to keep machine operations to a minimum, since further compaction of the soil would only add to existing problems.

NU Extension Entomologist Dave Keith said early planted corn fields should be checked now for corn borers and egg masses. Egg-laying and whorl-feeding activity is beginning, he said, and will continue for the next two to three weeks.

"It's important that farmers check each field regularly in several places to average the percent of infestation and pull occasional corn whorls and unroll them carefully to check for feeding," Keith said.

Corn borer eggs are laid in white masses on the undersides of leaves. Eggs hatch in four or five days and young borers move into the whorls to feed, leaving the characteristic "shot hole" damage.

Keith suggested Nebraska farmers call or visit local extension officers for a copy of EC84-1509, an extension pamphlet that will help them assess the need for borer treatment in their individual fields.

Corn earworm numbers are also increasing, he said, and specialists look for a lot of activity in late planted corn.

A CORNFIELD near Wisner is partially covered with water. Rainfall during the past few weeks has virtually put a stop to all field work in this area and in eastern Nebraska.

City approves pay hikes

All of Wayne city department heads will be receiving pay hikes for the upcoming fiscal year.

The Wayne City Council met early Wednesday morning and decided to grant raises to the six city department heads, which includes public works, the police chief, electrical superintendent, the city clerk, the building inspector and the Senior Citizens Center coordinator.

Receiving a straight $74 monthly salary increase will be the department head of public works, the Wayne Police Chief and the Wayne city clerk.

A $100 straight dollar increase was given to the city's electrical superintendent.

Positions of building inspector and the senior citizens center coordinator will be receiving a pay boost of 4 percent.

Councilwoman Carolyn Filler, who with Darrell Heier and Leo Hansen served on the committee to recommend the salaries for the department heads, said the committee wanted "to stay in line with what the hourly employees received [which was approximately 4 percent]."

One alternative, she said, was to give each department head a 4 percent across the board increase.

The other alternative which was recommended by the committee was to calculate a four percent increase for the public works, police chief, electrical superintendent and city clerk, then average the increase figure of the four department heads to come up with a straight $74 per month figure.

THE PUBLIC WORKS department head will receive a monthly salary of $1,919; police chief, $1,894; electrical superintendent, $2,100; city clerk, $1,824; the building inspector, an hourly rate of $4.89 and the senior citizens director, $4.68.

In other action Wednesday, the city council voted to join in with the Red Cross and Wayne Kiwanis Club in purchasing 50 season pass tickets to the municipal swimming pool, to be distributed to those youngsters who cannot afford the season pass rates or swimming lessons.

Each of the employees would contribute to a third of the cost for the 50 tickets, which would cost $20 each or $1,000.

Councilman Keith Mosley made the motion to approve the season pass purchases, saying the idea "is a good project to get in-olved with and the city should go along with the proposal."

Phil Klosser suggested the city government go along with the project, but the city should "work to find a third entity" as a replacement in the future.

Those currently with season passes would not receive refunds, Klosser specified. Those who receive the season passes from the city and service organizations would also qualify for exemption of paying the $4 swimming lesson fee.

Mosley added that the project is a "good gesture for service clubs" to become involved with.

Names of those who are eligible for the season passes will be supplied primarily by area school districts, according to a representative of the Red Cross.

Also Wednesday morning, the Wayne city council members voted approval to purchase a grader for the city street department. The cost of the grader will be $16,900 and will be paid for as a lease purchase arrangement.

The lease arrangement will be $2,900 for the first three scheduled payments and then a balloon payment of $8,200.

Share the Chair initiated

Winslow Community Improvement Committee members and other volunteers will be asking those attending this weekend's Old Settlers Picnic to "Share A Chair."

The committee's "Share A Chair" campaign has been initiated to raise funds toward purchasing new chairs and tables for the city auditorium and will kick-off this weekend's events at the community's annual celebration.

Gloria Lessmann, Winslow Community Improvement Committee co-chairperson, said the need for auditorium chairs and tables was identified by those attending May's Appreciation Night as the highest priority for community improvement.

"Anyone who has ever struggled to set up or take down the chairs and tables in the auditorium or snagged clothing on them can attest to the fact that new ones are desperately needed," Lessmann said.

THE COST of new auditorium chairs is $10 each and tables are priced at $100 each. The group would like to raise enough money to purchase a minimum of 15 tables and 250 chairs.

"To meet our goal will require all of us to pitch in by donating money to the Share A Chair campaign," said Lessmann.

She added that $723 has already been collected, with recent contributions from the Winslow Alumni Association and the Senior Citizens. The committee is aiming for an Aug. 30 deadline for their fundraiser.

Community Improvement Committee members and volunteers collecting money for the "Share A Chair" campaign will have campaign ribbons with "Share A Chair" printed on them to give to contributors.

Those who donate are cautioned to give their donations only to persons who have the ribbon.

Searching for talent

Centennial show in the making

Wayne Community Theatre board members, who have been developing the pageant for nearly a year, invite local area residents to try out for the play — whether or not they ever acted on stage before.

Auditions are scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. Sunday and continue Monday and Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Ley Theatre. The theatre is located on the second floor of Wayne State's Brandenburg Education Building.

The pageant, which has been a year in creation, goes by the title "Wayne, America—A Musical Celebration."

It chronicles 100 years of Wayne history in song, dance and story. And it will history a cast of 50 to 60 people on stage.

Helen Russell and Margaret Lundstrom researched the history and wrote the dialogue. Margaret Schultz researched and compiled the music and Mary Halverstad researched and choreographed the dances of the different eras.

Dr. Russell, who is directing the pageant, said she will need the following cast:

•Nine major speaking parts, four women and five men, with stage ages ranging from 15 to up to 60 years old.
•Fourteen to 20 dancers.
•And a male quartet and at least 20 singers for the chorus.
Rehearsals will begin July 9 and continue on weekdays from 7 to 10 p.m. in Ramsey Theatre of the Peterson Fine Arts Center. Not everyone in the cast will be required to attend every rehearsal.

PERFORMANCE dates will be Aug. 31, Sept. 1, 2 and possibly 3.

Dr. Russell notes that many of the songs in this pageant are old-time favorites — such as "My Wild Irish Rose", "Casey Would Waltz with a Strawberry Blonde", "By the Light of the Silvery Moon", "Let Me Call You Sweetheart", "You're a Grand Old Flag", "Over There", "Happy Days Are Here Again", "April Showers", "Night and Day", "God Bless America", "Rock Around the Clock", "Age of Aquarius", "Abraham, Martin and John", and "One".

DANCES WILL range from a hoe down, an Irish jig, a pony dance to tap dancing, the Charleston, the Jitterbug, rock and roll and a grand finale.

Director and playwright Russell, who has taught drama at Wayne State College for 26 years and devoted years to community theatre, gives this invitation.

"Become a proud part of Wayne history! Join in the fun and celebration by participating in "Wayne, America."

Performance June 29 and 30

"Pippin" coming to Wayne

"Pippin", the musical comedy about the son of Charlemagne who needs to find his place in life, will be presented in Ramsey Theatre at 8 p.m. on June 29 and 30.

The show is being presented by the Wayne State Theatre Department.

While looking for his place in life, Pippin must overcome several obstacles such as his father's indifference, his stepmother's coveting, a young woman's desires and a duck.

Pippin and the entire audience are guided through this quest by the Leading Player and his troupe of actors presenting "Pippin".

He directs Pippin and other characters through the show — even performing a few numbers himself.

Does Pippin find what he is looking for? The answer is coming soon to a theatre near you.

Leading cast members are Gene Bechen, Pippin; Dave Yasa, Leading Player; Merlin Lempeke, Charlemagne; Jodi Benton, Fastrada; Linda Tiensvold, Catherine; Michele Johnson, Berthe; James Foulk, Lewis; Scott Agenbrood, Theo; and the Duck as Himself.

Michele Johnson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Brockmoller of Winslow. She is a junior studying theatre and is president of APO, Theatre Honorary. She is a graduate of Winslow High School.

Other area talent in the "Pippin" production include:

Scott Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Hall of Wayne, selected as orchestra conductor. He is a graduate of Wayne State College and his past involvements have included orchestra conductor for "Godspell" and "South Pacific".

David Blendermann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Blendermann of Wayne, who is a senior studying theatre and math. He was also involved in the production of "Da", "Deathtrap" and "Godspell".

Greg Elliott, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ed Elliott, who was involved with the production of "The Music Man" and "South Pacific". He will be a senior at Wayne High School.

Tom Fletcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Fletcher of Wayne, is a junior studying Music and Theory at Wayne State College. He has been involved with the production of "The Adventures of Harlequin" (as Harlequin) and served as assistant director for "Da".

And Jennifer Ormsby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ormsby of Wayne, who is a student at Wayne Public School.

Here's an idea for Wayne area citizens who might like to do more than just watch their city's centennial from the sidelines. They could take active roles in the big pageant celebrating Wayne history, which is scheduled the end of August for the finale of Centennial Week.

New bills threaten free enterprise

Two bills which pose a threat to our free enterprise system have been quietly introduced in the U.S. House and Senate and are making quiet but quick progress.

The name of the legislation is the "Civil Rights Act of 1984." It was hastily prepared and introduced in both houses on April 12 by civil rights groups, with the help of Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.).

The bills were prompted by a Supreme Court decision called "Grove City College vs. Bell," which revolved around the question of whether or not federal funding to a particular program at an educational institution brought the entire institution under federal anti-discrimination regulations, or just the part receiving the federal assistance.

The Reagan Administration, in the person of Secretary of Education Terrence Bell, contended that only the part being subsidized should be subject to the regulations.

Civil rights groups contended the law required the entire institution to conform. The Supreme Court ruled in favor of the Administration position, with regard to Title IX of the Education Amendments to the Civil Rights Act which bars sex discrimination in educational institutions.

BUT AT THE SAME TIME, the Supreme Court ruled that federal financial assistance given to students is not distinguishable from aid to the college they attend. Thus aid to a single student is enough to bring the entire institution under federal regulation.

Not content with this far-reaching decision, civil rights groups decided to go for more. Not only do they wish to close the loophole with regard to bringing the entire institution under regulations if any part of it receives federal assistance, they also want to bring every activity in the public and private sector under regulation if any agency or person receives any form of federal assistance.

And they propose that not only Title IX be included, but also Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, the Emergency School Aid Act, the Older Americans Act and the Age Discrimination Act.

Of particular interest to agriculture, this could include all funding by USDA, including price supports, loans, food stamps, research, extension — everything.

This legislation hasn't attracted a lot of attention, because most people believe that it was intended simply to clarify the law with regard to the Grove City College decision. The House bill was voted out of the Judiciary and Education and Labor Committees on May 23, while the Senate bill is already scheduled for markup, before the end of June.

IT NOW APPEARS, based on an analysis by the Office of Management and Budget and the Justice Department, that the language of these two bills is so broad and all encompassing that the proposal constitutes a massive extension of federal power over local and state governments — and over a large portion of the private sector, since it's difficult to find any area that is not subsidized directly or indirectly by the federal government.

There appears to be a grab for federal power and could be expected to result in thousands of lawsuits.

It is difficult, of course, to take a position in opposition to civil rights legislation, but this bill is much broader than that single issue. It needs to be amended to apply only to the issue posed by the Grove City College case.

But it is quickly and quietly making rapid progress and in an election year, there's no guarantee of a presidential veto, or of Members of Congress voting against it in the first place.

If the legislation can not be narrowed to address only the Grove City College issue, it should be defeated.

Vacation in the county jail

To the editor:
Would you do me, and many other economically deprived housewives who couldn't afford a vacation again this year, a favor? Could you print an article on what crimes could get me two weeks in jail?

After hearing about what standards jails have to meet, I've concluded jail is the answer to my prayers. Imagine, having a maid on duty 24 hours a day to answer my every need. I'd think I'd died and gone to heaven! And since I enjoy a game of cards I would be nice to have 3 maids on duty from two to four so we could have a four some.

In addition to the "crime list," it would be extremely helpful if you could also publish several weeks in advance, the daily menu and recreation schedule for each jail in the area. That way I could be better prepared to choose my time and area to commit my crime.

Let us know if any counties provide miniature golf in the hall, knitting classes, Beauty Rest mattresses, and hair stylists.

I figure as a taxpayer, if I'm going to pay for it I just as well use it.

So much for satire. Seriously, why have we spent so much to make jails nice? If jail has more comforts than home, what deterrent to crime is it?

If prisoners burn their bedding let them sleep on the floor. If they plug the sink or stool let them suffer in the conditions they have brought on themselves.

If they don't like the food let them skip the meal. (Why should they be treated better than husbands???)

I am sick of footing the bill for "Standards" which do nothing to reduce crime.

Solution needed for park problem

To the editor:
After reading your article and viewpoint concerning the admittance of a handicapped child to the park and recreation program, I'd like to say pull hard and hopefully your head will pop out of the sand. It's obvious you have only one view of this "dilemma."

The questions raised in your viewpoint are easily answered with more questions.

Are we as parents certain our non-handicapped children are in "qualified care?" You said yourself the staff is usually high school youngsters. At that age I wouldn't call them qualified. Capable, yes. My daughter never had a complaint about any of the teachers and neither have I.

Is the city protected if our non-handicapped child should be hurt? I can hardly believe this program has been in existence for 20 years without some type of injury. I would think the policy would be the same for any child — call his or her parents.

In this situation the parents were paying a person of their choice to stay with their child as the child's aide. There is no expense to the city. It would certainly not be creating another salaried position within the program.

I certainly agree we need to find a solution before all realism is lost.

My son is also handicapped. He has an aide, or someone else with him almost all the time. He goes to Wayne Elementary School with the children. His aide is his helper in almost everything. The teacher is the teacher and there has never been any conflict between the two roles as far as I know.

My son is as pleased as any child with his accomplishments — even though he has had a lot of help.

Children have been "exposed" to him at school, at the pool, at the day care center, at the bowling alley, etc. They readily accept him.

An aide helping a handicapped child wouldn't be anything new to them. Why not try this solution before dumping the entire program. It really can work.

Exon proposes loan increase

U.S. Senator Jim Exon Friday introduced legislation to increase by $300 million the lending authority of the Farmers Home Administration.

"Farmers need time and access to available credit in order to make it through these tough times," Exon said. "The amount provided by the house of Representatives is simply not sufficient to go around to all the farmers who need assistance," he added.

The Exon amendment would increase the total lending authority of the Farmers Home Administration to $450 million for 1985.

In my view this would be the first year of, at least, a three year $1 billion program," Exon said. "Farming is not the stable business venture it once was and farm problems have only been complicated by insensitive and ineffective USDA policies," he added.

EXON SAID HE would offer the legislation as an amendment to the 1985 Agriculture Appropriations bill. The bill is currently pending before the Senate Appropriations Committee and is expected to be acted on by the full Senate in the near future.

Exon, who has been working on a series of proposals to provide some measure of relief from the tightening financial vice on farmers, introduced the legislation following a similar recommendation from the Independent Bankers Association of America who recently met in Omaha.

The Nebraska Senator has been working to secure more realistic Federal Reserve policy regarding agricultural loans. Last week, the Federal Reserve Board Chairman informed Exon he is issuing a directive to federal bank regulators to follow a policy of "forebearance" with agricultural borrowers.

The action came after Exon had a series of meetings and correspondence with the Federal Reserve Board Chairman.

Platte River problems

Area flood control is recommended

Endorses Platte River amendment
Following a tour of the areas of the Platte River that were so badly flooded last week — a tour that I made last May — I worked with my other colleagues from Nebraska in the House to develop a proposal that would provide $25 million for flood control and bank stabilization work along the Platte and its tributaries.

Last week I was notified by the Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Water Resources that his committee has approved that proposal, which would provide $25 million for the Corps of Engineers to establish a demonstration program on the Platte River and its tributaries to address flood control needs and streambank erosion. The proposal will be included in the omnibus Water Resources Development Bill.

Another blow to SE Nebraska
Mother Nature once again has dealt a harsh blow to the farmers and residents of southeast Nebraska in the wake of last week's heavy rains, tornadoes and flooding. Considering last summer's drought, the winter blizzards and the unending spring rains, our agriculture situation has gone through one of the longest periods of sustained adversity that I can remember.

Even before last week's disaster, flooding had been particularly severe this spring. In May, I toured several areas of southeast Nebraska; we visited the Platte River and many of its tributaries to personally examine the flooding, bank stabilization, and soil erosion in the area. We were fortunate in being able to obtain some funding from the Soil Conservation Service, especially for areas such as LeShara. I recognized, however, that more funding was needed to provide the long term solutions to flood control along the Platte.

My district staff has been and will continue to tour the areas affected by flooding and storm damage, and they have been keeping me up to date on the situation. In addition, I intend to make a special trip back to inspect the flooded areas on Monday, June 18.

Discharge Petition
I have once again signed a discharge petition that would bring H.R. Res. 243, the constitutional amendment that would require a balanced Federal budget, to the House floor. Should 218 Members sign the petition, the balanced budget amendment would come to the floor under an open rule, allowing amendment and an unlimited amount of debate.

The last time that a balanced budget amendment was brought to the floor by discharge petition, it received a majority vote, but not the 2/3 necessary for a constitutional amendment.

Adopting a spending limitation amendment would not automatically balance the Federal Budget, but, as I've said for several years, it is well past time to force the Congress to face this issue. It is imperative that the Federal government begin to exercise greater fiscal responsibility, and we need to make very clear to those who are suppressing this effort that they must mend their ways.

For example, the Surface Transportation Act recently passed by the House includes an additional $2 billion for a highway project in Speaker Tip O'Neill's hometown. The cost of that project alone amounts to more than the total assessed value of all the land in Beatrice, Fremont, Norfolk, Grand Island and Hastings!

It is time for responsible Members to vote against authorization and appropriations bills when they include unreasonable or excessive expenditures. It is for that reason that I voted against the Surface Transportation Act, against the recent Defense Department Authorization, and against a Legislative Branch Appropriations Bill that includes outrageous expenses to run Congress.

And I will continue to vote against these bills when they contain an unreasonable level of expenditures.

Just as every family has to balance its budget, just as the State of Nebraska must balance its budget, it is time for us to force the Federal government to balance its budget.

FmHA provides high security

Frank Marsh, State Director, FmHA disclosed the following "Fact Sheet 1984" information:

Despite hard economic times and predictions of massive foreclosures, the Farmers Home Administration, nation wide, stayed within 97 percent of its farm borrowers the last fiscal year (1983).

Entering FY 1984, 65,022 borrowers were still in business because FmHA went the extra mile in working out deferral, rescheduling and subordination agreements. During the first seven months of FY 1984, the agency deferred principal and/or interest payments for 1,642 farmers and rescheduled or reamortized loans for 18,477 borrowers.

FmHA subordinated its security for 10,074 borrowers enabling them to obtain loans from private lenders. In addition to these servicing efforts, FmHA continued supervision of the 36 percent of its borrowers, delinquent at the end of the first seven months of the fiscal year.

Some 1.6 percent, or 4,306, high-risk FmHA borrowers went out of business for financial reasons during the first seven months of FY 84. Of this total, 2,485 were voluntary conveyances or outright sales for financial reasons.

Transfers with assumptions of title to other borrowers numbered 310. Bankruptcies totalled 690. Foreclosures by other lenders — loans in which FmHA was the junior, or secondary, lienholder — were 592, or 2/10ths of 1 percent.

FmHA foreclosures were 229, or less than 1/10th of 1 percent. The total of such financials were 333 fewer than in the same period — October 1 through April 30 — of the previous fiscal year.

FmHA, as a federal agency, can lend only to rural borrowers unable to secure credit from a bank or other lending institutions. As a result, FmHA makes loans to the highest-risk farmers, who have been turned down by others.

The 266,500 FmHA farm borrowers account for only 11 percent of all the farm credit outstanding in the country. Loans are repaid, with interest, to the U.S. Government.

FmHA will continue its policy of going an extra mile or two with its borrowers during 1984. The agency will assist farmers, on a case-by-case basis, even if they are behind in payments due to circumstances beyond their control, provided they have kept their agreements with FmHA, are using acceptable management practices, and have properly maintained secured chattel and real estate.

FmHA expects to stay with most of its seriously delinquent borrowers again in 1984, provided that borrowers' Farm and Home Plans show that loans advanced for annual operating purposes can be repaid.

Nuclear freeze

To the editor:
We would like to express our thanks to the voters of Wayne County who signed the Nuclear Freeze/No MX initiative petitions circulated in the past few months.

Despite the June 15 ruling of the State Supreme Court that this initiative cannot be placed on the November ballot because it is not a legally binding resolution, it is obvious that the problem of nuclear war and nuclear weapons proliferation is not going to go away.

We agree with the dissenting opinion of Supreme Court Judge Shanahan that "such matters are public policy and politics — arenas . . . in which courts should be conspicuously absent" and with Governor Kerrey, who stated that "I think it's a legitimate question for the people to be asked."

Initiative supporters have collected nearly 32,000 signatures statewide and over 259 in Wayne. And, although the question of nuclear war is certainly not a partisan issue, the Wayne County Democratic Convention on June 4 passed a resolution supporting a Bilateral Nuclear Freeze and a cessation of funding for the MX missile program.

We think these figures and actions bespeak deep concern over the threat of nuclear holocaust on the part of the citizens of Nebraska. Having been denied the opportunity to express this concern at the ballot box, as has been possible in many other states, we urge concerned citizens to write the candidates for Congress and the Unicameral to let their views be known.

In this way we can let our elected officials know that change in U.S. nuclear policy is something the citizenry of this country demands.

Wayne Midgets hold at 5-0 after win over Emerson on Monday

The Wayne Midget baseball team upped its season record to 5-0 with a 11-1 win over Emerson in a game played Monday, June 18 in Emerson.

Wayne used a powerful hitting attack to gain the win as they came up with seven extra base hits including a home run, two triples and four doubles.

Dan Gross scored the opening run in the first inning off a fielder's choice by Ted Lueders with one out after walking.

Scott Baker, three-for-three on the night, hit a triple with one out in the top of the second, putting himself in scoring position. Shannon Dorcey smacked out a triple moments later to drive Baker home. Dorcey crossed the plate on a third of three walks in a row by the Emerson pitcher.

Jeff Hausman, who also reached base on a walk scored the final run of the inning on a sacrifice by Ted Lueders.

Wayne's big inning came in the third when they strung together five runs, all with just one out remaining. Scott Baker knocked out a double, and later scored on a passed ball. Shannon Dorcey followed him at the plate, advancing to first base on an Emerson error.

Jeff Hausman loaded the bases on a walk before Don Larsen rapped out a three run double to move the score to 7-0. Ted Lueders drove home the final run of the inning, bringing in Larsen with a double.

Wayne scored again in the fifth inning when Bill Melena scored after reaching base on an error.

Emerson came up with their single run in the bottom of the fifth inning by combining back to back singles and a stolen base for the run with no outs.

The final run of the game came in the top of the seventh when Jeff Hausman belted a home run with one out and no one on base.

Top hitters for Wayne included Hausman, who was two for two with a home run and single. Scott Baker had a perfect night at the plate, with a triple and two doubles in three trips to the plate.

Hausman pitched the complete game for the Midgets, striking out 11 Emerson batters on his way to giving up just two hits and two walks.

Emerson pitching staff allowed the Wayne team nine hits along with six walks and eight strike outs.

Parks affected by rainfall

Heavy rains early this week have had an effect on some park areas in the southeast portion of the state, and have hampered access to some others.

As of Thursday morning, June 14, Louisville Lakes State Recreation Area near Louisville was closed to all activity due to high water. The situation there will be re-evaluated Friday to determine whether the area may be open for the June 16-17 weekend.

High water in the area also made access to Schram Park SRA and Platte River State Park from Highway 50 north of Louisville impossible, though both these areas are open to the public.

Folks wishing to visit Platte River State park from the Omaha area may go south on U.S. 73-75 to the junction with State Highway 66, then west on State 66 to State Highway 50 at Louisville. They should then continue south on Highway 50 to its junction with the S-13E spur to South Bend, and continue on S-13E about three miles to the park entrance.

The easiest route to Schram Park SRA and the Ak-Sar-Ben Aquarium is to take Interstate 80 to the Gretna interchange and continue south on Highway 31 to the park.

As of Thursday morning, other areas affected by the weather include:

- Two Rivers SRA near Gretna, one camping area, a picnic area, the swimming beach and the trout lake were open to the public.
- RiverView Marina closed due to flooding.
- Brownville SRA was closed due to flooding.
- Ravenna SRA was partially flooded.
- Fremont Lakes SRA was very wet but open to the public.
- Indian Cave State Park near Schubert was open, but access to the cave itself and St. Derion School house was closed.
- And Schilling Wildlife Management Area closed to all activity.
- For up to the minute information of park access contact the Game and Parks Commission office in Lincoln, (402) 464-0641; or phone the park you are interested in direct ly.

"WHAT'S THAT FUNNY SMELL?"

It's not easy to tell when a kid is on drugs. But there are signs that you can look for. Read about them in our free brochure, "The Kinds of Drugs Kids Are Getting Into" and if you have any questions, feel free to ask. Because we're in a good position to tell you what abusing drugs can do to kids.

Chicken plans are sizzling

When the weather gets to be a sizzling 90 degrees in the middle of July, some people suggest it's hot enough to fry an egg on the sidewalk.
Well, that's one thing which isn't on the schedule for this year's Wayne Chicken Show, scheduled for July 13 and 14. But there are plenty of other ac tivities which will fill-out the two day agenda.

There are several events which will precede the two-day celebra tion. The first is the Chicken Show Balloon Release, scheduled for Thursday, June 21 at 7:30 p.m.

And those considering submit ting entries in The Wayne Herald Chicken Limerick Contest have until July 9 to do so. The first place limerick will receive a $10 cash prize plus will also see the limerick published in The Wayne Herald.

Also on July 9, the window displays of chicken and egg col lections are to be completed.

Electri-safety...

Things to remember during STORMS.

Electricity makes everyone's life brighter—more comfortable and productive. Yet during severe weather, electrical equipment can become damaged and thus dangerous. We want to keep you safe. So here are some life-saver reminders about downed power lines.

There's no such thing as an unloaded line

Safe at home

Take care in your car

Treat all downed power lines as if they were "loaded" or charged with electricity. Never touch one at any time. And also avoid contact with lengthy materials in the area—especially metal fences.

If power lines are down in your yard or neighborhood, bring your family and pets inside. Then call your electric utility immediately to report the location of the damage.

If you're in a car that's touching a fallen power line, stay in the car and warn others to keep away! Wait for an electric utility lineman to let you know when it's safe to get out. If your car is on fire, open the door and jump completely clear of the car before touching the ground. Don't touch the car and the ground at the same time.

Help us help you

Never try to repair damaged electrical service lines yourself. This is a job for electric utility repair crews. Instead, warn others nearby to stay away from the damaged line or lines until a qualified crew makes necessary repairs. This will help restore service the fastest and safest way possible.

SEVERAL roads and fields were under water following heavy rains this past weekend. Bridges were out, parks were totally immersed and many roads in the area were impassable because of the flooding.

Beeson to cattle show

Jack Dee Beeson of Wayne will be among some 375 exhibitors from 33 states and four Canadian provinces showing Polled Herefords at the 11th National Junior Polled Hereford Show in Des Moines July 22-26.

More than 600 entries have been made for the show that has come to be recognized as one of the largest youth events of its kind in the world.

Some $7,500 in premiums will be awarded to the youth for winners in the 20 heifer classes and the cow calf operation.

Fire Safety Seminar

An Agri-Industry Fire Safety Seminar will be presented at Western Iowa Tech Community College on Saturday, June 23 from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The seminar will provide information on potential fire hazards in agribusiness industries such as grain elevators, feed mills, seed companies, flour mills and fertilizer companies. The program is designed for the owners and managers of these agribusiness operations, as well as fire department/rescue and inspection personnel.

Presenter will be Armand Ruberti, a loss control engineer from Chicago. He will discuss the potential fire, explosion and fuel leak hazards associated with grain elevators (including concrete, all steel and frame construction), feed and flour mills, seed and fertilizer companies.

He will also tell how to help prevent disasters by utilizing thorough safety/fire inspections, employee safety awareness programs, correct maintenance and repair of equipment, proper storage of chemicals.

The seminar cost is $3 per person. For more information, contact Adull and Continuing Education, Western Iowa Tech Community College at 712/276-0380 or 1-800/352-4649.

Feed cattle down 14 percent

Nebraska cattle feeders had 1,380,000 cattle on feed on June 1, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. This inventory was down 14 percent from last year, down 15 percent from 1982 and the lowest number on feed for the month since 1980.

Feed cattle marketings for the month of May totaled 380,000, a decrease of 5 percent from 1983 but 9 percent above May, 1982. Placements of cattle into feedlots during May totaled 320,000 head. This was down 27 percent from last year, 25 percent below two years ago and the lowest placements for the month since 1977.

Crow's dealership for Wayne man

Neyron Woodward of Wayne has accepted a seed corn dealership for Crow's Hybrid Corn Company of Millford, Illinois, effective immediately.

Kenneth W. Crow, president of the seed corn firm who made the announcement, said that this dealership will cover all of Plum Creek Township in Wayne County.

Loan, purchase rates

The U.S. Department of Agriculture today issued county loan and purchase rates for 1984 crop barley, rye and sorghum.

County rates for barley grading No. 2 or better are based on the national average loan and purchase rate of $2.08 per bushel, eight cents below the 1983 level.

Sorghum grading No. 2 or better are based on the national rate of $4.32 per hundredweight, 18 cents below the 1983 rate. The rates for rye grading No. 2 or better, or No. 3 on the factor of test weight only, are based on the national average loan and purchase rates of $2.17 per bushel, eight cents below the 1983 rate.

Rescheduled on ridge planting

The demonstration of the techniques involving ridge planting, sponsored by Monsanto Agricultural Products Company, at the Ron and Merle Ring farm four miles east of Wayne was rained out on Tuesday.

The event has been rescheduled for Tuesday, June 26 at the same location.

Ring's farm is located four miles east and one third mile south of the H35 and H15 junction in Wayne.

Irrigation impact will continue

The estimated investment in center pivot irrigation in Nebraska in 1984 is more than $1 billion, or an average cost of $385 per acre under this type of irrigation system, according to a University of Nebraska extension farm management specialist.

Les Sheffield cited the figure in a talk given to the 40th anniversary symposium of the Nebraska Water Resources Association, which concluded here June 4.

He based the estimate on 23,500 center pivot systems that irrigate an average of 130 acres per system. With an average initial investment of $50,000 per well pump motor, center pivot and related components from the mid-1950s to the present time, this projects to a $1.125 billion investment for the 3,055,000 acres under this type of irrigation system, he said.

Irrigated agriculture has and will continue to have a tremendous impact on the state's agricultural economy, Sheffield said.

The economic impact from irrigation grew substantially from 1970 to 1980, Sheffield said, with irrigated acreage increasing from 3,998,000 to 7,200,000.

"The estimated impact on the Nebraska economy for these 10 years, figuring a U.S. Department of Agriculture inflation factor of 115 percent from 1970 to 1980, is over $7 billion," said Sheffield. The irrigation induced by impact is estimated on the basis of goods and services farmers buy in order to irrigate their crops, he said.

AS AN EXAMPLE, he referred to his own recent research showing estimated input purchases for $7.6 million irrigated acres in Nebraska in 1982, with commensurate benefits to the state's economy:

- Commercial fertilizers — $313,000,000
- Herbicides and pesticides — $114,000,000
- Irrigation pumping costs — $276,434,200 (based on 68,319 registered wells on Jan. 1, 1982)
- This totals $817,434,200, or an estimated average production cost of $107.56 per irrigated acre, in addition to land charges, according to Sheffield.

Irrigated agriculture in Nebraska competes with the No. 2 state, Texas, Sheffield said, but he noted that Texas is losing irrigated acres because of a decline in its ground water supplies, while Nebraska is still slowly gaining in irrigated acreage. California, with a more intensive, specialized agriculture, is still the No. 1 irrigated state with over 10 million irrigated acres.

Forty years ago, irrigation was not much of a factor in Nebraska agriculture, the specialist said. "After World War II, there were less than a million acres of irrigated crops in the state." The "spectacular" growth in irrigation has brought a parallel growth in the agribusiness firms making up the irrigation industry complex, Sheffield said.

"Our well-drilling industry has drilled more than 70,000 registered irrigation wells and are some of the best well-drilling firms in the country," he said. He cited irrigation pump manufacturers and center pivot system manufacturers and other irrigation-related industries that have grown as irrigation development has expanded. The center pivot concept got its start in Nebraska in 1953, Sheffield said, and Nebraska now has six of the 10 companies in the U.S. center pivot industry based in the state.

STILL OTHER FIRMS have contributed to higher employment and greater economic activity as a result of irrigation, he said. As a spinoff of the higher grain production on the state attributed to irrigation, there has been an upsurge in firms manufacturing storage structures for farm grain storage.

The irrigated acreage base in Nebraska has provided considerable economic stability in crop production, Sheffield said, recalling that in the mid-1970s, South Dakota stockmen shipped millions of cattle into Nebraska to winter on irrigated cornstalks. "South Dakota farmers couldn't afford, even with subsidized hay prices, to buy feed to keep their cattle herds alive," he said.

The greatest single risk for all farmers is inadequate precipitation and receiving the right amount at the right time, during the growing season, Sheffield said. "When you remove the risk (through irrigation), it has a vital influence on the stability of Nebraska's agriculture."

He pointed out that although 22.7 inches average rainfall occurs in Nebraska, very seldom is the right amount of precipitation received when needed. Irrigation has helped to solve the problem for thousands of crop producers, with approximately 40 percent of Nebraska's planted crop acreage now under irrigation.

In reference to the distressed financial situation in agriculture, Sheffield said, "I firmly believe we've seen the bottom of the economic cycle for U.S. agriculture and we'll be seeing better times ahead." He cited the current drought in the key farm production areas in the Soviet Union as a factor that may increase the volume of U.S. grain exports in the coming months, which in turn might strengthen domestic grain prices.

Road repair

COUNTY ROAD crews were busy repairing dirt roads which had caved in due to the recent heavy rains. This road is near Allen.

the farmer's wife by pat meloerhenry

When I first moved here, there was a railroad track just south of us. This area was called the Apex, because it was the highest spot in the county, and the train sometimes had to chug to make it up the hill.

The rural school the Big Farmer attended was known as Apex school. (I found out when I was the nurse for the rural schools, that many have interesting names, such as Frog Pond or Flag Pole).

And the rabbit business the Big Farmer ran for fun and profit was known as Apex Rabbitry.

These past days of heavy precipitation and flash floods, I'm very glad I live on a high spot. So far, our only casualty is Jon's basement bedroom, which took on a lot of the wet stuff on Thursday night.

I still wonder if someone is building an Ark someplace! All that mud and debris has to be awful.

Thanks to Aunt Dora's generosity, we've been picking and eating strawberries. They have to be the best fruit available. I read in Yesterday's World-Herald that they were found in America; that they were not grown in Europe before Columbus. Thank goodness he found them!

I also read in the Sunday paper about a farmer from Iowa who was worth $877,000 in 1978 and now has a negative worth of $306,000. Interest in one year's time had gone from 10 percent to 17 percent.

What struck me about the story was the fact that the man and his wife both did what "the system" told them to do — buy bigger equipment, buy more ground, and work from dawn to dusk.

The farmer was quoted, "I don't drink, smoke, boat, bowl, golf, camp out, own a horse, or take fishing or hunting trips." They've had a total of four weeks' vacation in 35 years. They've never been to Las Vegas. They've never gambled — except on the soil.

It reminded me of stories I read a couple of years ago about city people out of work. The "American way" tells us that if we work hard, and live decent lives, we will be rewarded. Lately, it hasn't been happening.

Some have been telling me that it's poor management; that farmers may be hard workers, but poor businessmen. I feel that the institutions that kept loaning money should share the responsibility. Further, the good managers are hurting, too. Low farm prices are a large factor.

Underpayment to agriculture is the root cause. Farmers are not price setters; they are price takers. They buy at retail, sell at wholesale.

Those with the right spirit are going to survive. That spirit is evidenced by the man I heard of who auctioned off his machinery and lost his farm to the lender.

A commiserating friend said, "It's no disgrace to be broke." The guy answered, "I ain't broke. I'm just temporarily out of funds!"

Our middle daughter is due home from the 4-H citizenship short course today. The temperature in Washington D.C., last week was 100 degrees.

But she's met some great kids, seen a lot of country, and hopefully, gained an understanding of our legislative process. It has its drawbacks, but we haven't seen anything we like better.

Just wish they could enact and enforce a law for moderate weather. (Maybe we really do need to stop sending ships into space).

And while they're at it, they could write a bill to make flies and mosquitoes extinct.

Tree care needed during the summer

More than 2.6 million tree and shrub seedlings distributed to Nebraska landowners this spring through the Clarke-McNary Tree Distribution Program face their roughest time during the next few weeks.

"Many of these trees receive excellent care when first planted, but are then forgotten or neglected during the summer," explained Dennis Adams, University of Nebraska extension forester.

Weeds are one of the worst enemies of new tree plantations, and for yard trees the lawnmower is a close second, Adams said.

Because young seedlings depend heavily on moisture in the top six to ten inches of soil, weeds must be controlled in the tree planting throughout the growing season, he emphasized.

NEBRASKANS SHOULD not be lulled by cool, damp weather, Adams said. "A tall, rank growth of weeds can sap surface moisture in a very few days."

Terminating the first year "critical for survival," Adams said young trees and shrubs can be severely stunted or killed by aggressive weeds or grasses.

Weeds in new tree and shrub plantations should be controlled for at least three years to ensure good survival and growth, Adams stated.

Thousands of trees are severely injured by careless use of mowing equipment, the specialist reported.

"In the same way that humans have skin to protect internal tissues; trees have a protective layer of bark. When trees are bumped or scraped by lawnmowers, the wood is exposed to attack by insects, diseases and decay. Even a small wound can lead to decay which may weaken or even kill the tree," he warned.

Do not use the tree trunk as a pivot point when mowing, he advised. Use hand tools to get weed and grass close to the trunk.

Construct a dish-shaped basin around trees and cover it with wood chips or other suitable mulch, Adams advised. "This technique not only makes it unnecessary to mow too close to the tree trunk, but also conserves soil moisture, makes irrigation easier and reduces weed and grass competition," he concluded.

Comments wanted on feed grain program

The U.S. Department is seeking public comment on some aspects of the 1985 feed grain program prior to making a decision on the program, a USDA official said today.

Everett Rank, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said USDA will study the public's recommendations along with current data on U.S. and world crop conditions and crop supply and demand before announcing the 1985 program.

Specifically, Rank said, USDA would like to receive comments on:

- The loan and purchase level;
- The established target price;
- The national program acreage;
- Whether there should be a voluntary reduction percentage and, if so, what percentage;
- Whether there should be an acreage reduction program and, if so, what percentage and how to establish the acreage bases for the acreage reduction program;
- Whether a set-aside requirement is necessary and, if so, what percentage;
- Whether there should be a land diversion program and, if so, the extent of such diversion and the level of payment;
- Whether barley should be eligible for payment purposes under the feed grain program;
- Whether malting barley should be exempt from any acreage reduction program;
- If an acreage reduction or set-aside program is necessary, whether to allow hay and grazing or acreage conservation reserve acreage;
- Provisions of the farmer-owned reserve;
- Whether to require offsetting compliance if an acreage reduction program is established;
- Whether non-recourse loans and purchases should be made available to producers who cut their corn crop for silage;
- And whether contracts that producers sign to participate in the program should be binding after the signup period.

Rank said current law stipulates that if USDA estimates the quantity of corn on hand in the United States on Sept. 30, 1985 will exceed 1.1 billion bushels, a cash land diversion program of not less than 5 percent must be provided and an acreage reduction program may be provided.

If a combination cash land diversion and acreage reduction program is offered, the total reduction may not exceed 20 percent, Rank said.

Any required reduction in excess of 15 percent must be equally apportioned between a cash land diversion program and an acreage reduction program.

The payment rate for any cash land diversion for corn cannot be less than $1.50 per bushel.

Details of program options USDA is considering are scheduled to appear in the June 6 Federal Register.

Comments should be sent to director, Analysis Division, room 3741-S ASCS-USDA P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013. The comments, which must be received no later than Aug. 6, will be available for public inspection in that room than Aug. 6, will be available for public inspection in that room during regular business hours.

Check swine feeders

Feed costs continue to represent the largest cash expense in swine production.

The amount of feed wasted by improperly adjusted or worn-out feeders can add significantly to this expense. Many pork producers are facing the decision as to whether worn-out feeders should be replaced in their finishing operations.

If a producer's feed efficiency in the finishing unit is at 4:1 because of worn-out or hard-to-adjust feeders, a new, easily adjusted feeder can easily improve this 10 percent, to 3.6:1. If pigs in the facility are gaining 1.5 pounds per day, this .4 pound improvement in feed efficiency represents a savings of .6 pounds of feed per pig per day. At a feed cost of $150 per ton, this is a potential saving of 4.5 cents per head per day.

At the typical 4 pigs per feeder space, this represents a potential savings of $65.70 per feeder space per year. For a 10-hole feeder, this is a yearly savings of $657. When multiplied by the expected life of a feeder, replacement or repair of feeders become a management tool that can't be neglected.

Fleas of pets

Now is the time to keep an eye out for flea infestations on pets.

While flea infestations usually reach their highest populations later in the summer, controlling them before they get out hand may prevent a major problem.

Fleas suck blood, causing irritation and weight loss on dogs and cats. Heavy populations can cause anemia, particularly in young, old or sick animals and cause ragged, uneven coats. Fleas also may transmit bacterial, viral diseases as well as tapeworms. Fleas also occasionally bite humans, producing small red marks with accompanying itch.

Fleas are about 1/8 inch long with a body that is compressed from side to side like a sunfish. They are brown and have no wings, but their legs are well-developed for jumping.

Fleas have four stages of development and can complete a generation in as little as three to four weeks. Adult fleas stay on the hosts to feed and deposit eggs which drop off into carpets, lawns and pet bedding.

When controlling fleas, both the animal and the infested premises need to be treated. Kennels should be regularly cleaned.

Insecticide labels should be read carefully and directions followed carefully. Not all compounds are labeled for use on both dogs and cats.

If takes considerable effort to bring fleas under control, No single application of insecticides to pets or premises is likely to provide satisfactory control.
