THE WAYNE HERALD

JOE DORCEY made his final rural mail delivery last Thursday after over 30 years of postal service.

Dorcey makes final delivery

Joe Dorcey of Wayne has traveled more miles on area gravel or county blacktop roads during the past 23 years than many people have traveled in a lifetime. Dorcey, who will be age 64 in September, is retiring as Wayne area rural letter carrier on July 1. His final day for delivering was last Thursday, announced Wayne Postmaster T.R. Jones.

He began his career with the postal department in 1955, working part-time driving the parcel post truck or helping out during the Christmas mailing season. Later on, he substituted for city route carriers, then became a carrier on city route one for a period of 2½ years. But it was 23 years ago when Dorcey started what would be his longest venture with the postal service — taking to the country roads and working as a rural mail carrier.

"The first vehicle I drove (as rural mail carrier) was a 1953 Ford passenger car. And I got it for $195. I drove it for about a year," Dorcey said.

"Roads are so much better now. I can't believe it. When I started, it was like they put the gravel on with a salt shaker. The roads were really graveled thin and some were dirt miles," he said.

DORCEY SAID there were about 230 families on his mail route when he first started, and he averaged losing about three farms a year. Now the list has grown to provide rural mail service to 300 families.

A lot of the old farms or homesteads are gone now, with buildings either vacated or being tenanted. But the memories are still implanted in Dorcey. He can still remember the young children who waited for the mailman to come with the afternoon mail.

"I've watched a lot of kids grow up. Some have grown and have their own families," he said.

"It's been a pleasure serving the 300 best families in the world," he added.

"I've been pulled out [from being stuck in snow or mud] by almost everyone on the route," he mentioned.

When asked if there were any displeasures which he faced in his rural carrier job, he said there really wasn't any.

"I always enjoyed working until last winter, with the bad weather and the poor road conditions," Dorcey said.

HIS TOTAL years with the Wayne Postal Service numbers 31, according to Postmaster Jones. Dorcey has served the National Association of Rural Letter Carriers as their vice-president for the Nebraska Chapter.

"He has traveled over 600,000 miles while traveling the country roads during this period. His presence will be missed in the Wayne office," Jones said.

Dorcey's route will be served by Terry Karel of Wayne, who has been his relief carrier for several years.

Jones said interviews will take place shortly for the position of part-time flexible carrier presently occupied by Karel.

Darrel Walton of the Verdigre Post Office has been transferred to Wayne and Don Hogelen has been hired as the custodian.

According to Jones, this brings the compliment of employees to the Wayne Post Office at 15. He said building remodeling plans of the post office are in the making and will be announced at a later date.

Nearly 2½ tons of food are distributed

Over 4,998 pounds of food items were distributed throughout Wayne County this past week as part of the United States Department of Agriculture's Special Distribution Program administered by the Nebraska Department of Social Services.

Gina Dunning, director of the Nebraska Department of Social Services, says the food was distributed to a total of 280 families.

"We are indebted to the Goldenrod Hills Community Action Agency and the volunteers from Wayne who helped in the distribution," Dunning said.

The volunteers assisted in the food provision process by delivering the commodities to distribution sites in Winslow, Hoskins, Carroll and Wayne.

The United States Department of Agriculture Special Distribution Program provides food commodities to families on a basis of financial need according to income guidelines. The program was begun in Nebraska in 1982 and provides tri-monthly distributions of processed cheese and other available foodstuffs.

Dollars returned to tax bodies

State dollars began flowing into city, county and school district treasuries last Wednesday.

Kay A. Orr, state treasurer of Nebraska, certified last week that tax funds of $26,312,705.12 are available for current distribution to local governments.

"Distribution of these state funds is intended by the Nebraska legislature to be a replacement for local personal property taxes lost when the Unicameral exempted agricultural animals, machinery and business inventories from personal property taxes (in 1975)," Orr said.

Aid to cities, counties and natural resource districts replaces the amounts distributed under the personal property tax relief and local governmental subdivision programs, the state treasurer noted.

According to Orr, amounts distributed to school districts are based on enrollment and other statutory criteria and are computed by the Nebraska State Department of Education.

Information supplied by the state treasury department reveals Wayne County will receive $15,431.92 in aid and $27,331.79 of homestead exemption.

CEDAR COUNTY will receive $16,398.20 in aid and $27,338.01 in homestead exemptions; Dixon County, $14,808.36 for aid and $25,267.62 for homestead exemption; Thurston County, $11,147.92 in aid and $15,737.88 for homestead exemption; Stanton County, $10,214.96 in aid, $11,378.93 homestead exemption; and Pierce County, $14,875 and $27,413 in homestead exemption.

State funds to be distributed to the city of Wayne will be $11,012.83. Other area city totals include Carroll, $517.01; Hoskins, $643.12; Sholes, $56.75; Winslow, $922.64; Laurel, $1,067.66; Wakefield, $2,364.40 and Allen, $10.66.

The Wayne-Carroll school district will receive $36,701.78 which will be divided into three categories — foundation, $30,490.97; incentive, $1,195.83; and equalization, $5,014.98.

Nearly $10,197.30 of aid will be provided to the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resource District. Technical colleges in the northeastern part of Nebraska will be receiving $253,876.34 in aid.

School districts across Nebraska received the most aid from the state treasury ($14,857,350.46) and Homestead Exemption totaled over $4.3 million. Total aid to Nebraska counties will be over $2.3 million while cities get over $2.4 million and technical colleges will receive over $2.1 million.

Gaining the least amount was the natural resource districts, which totaled approximately $98,000 in aid.

Schoolhouse fate told

Members of School District 45 voted Friday evening to auction off the 98 year old one-room schoolhouse plus its contents and also sell the land where the building and facilities are located.

The District 45 building is located approximately two miles west and one mile north of Wayne.

Approximately one acre of land where the schoolhouse and playground now stand will be sold to a neighboring landowner. The contract for the quit claim deed will be signed today (Monday).

All other school district property other than the land will be sold at an auction scheduled for Sunday, July 8. Some of the school equipment includes books, playground equipment, a coal shed and outhouses.

A special meeting of the District 45 Board of Education convened Friday night to decide the fate of the district's schoolhouse and its inside contents.

Purpose of the meeting, according to the legal notice, was to consider authorizing and directing sale of the schoolhouse, site, buildings and other properties belonging to the school district.

The whole process began last February when a petition was presented to the county superintendent's office from District 45 residents requesting the students within the district be transferred to other surrounding schools.

OF THE 22 residents eligible to sign the petition, 21 penciled in their names, according to Robert Sheckler, Wayne County superintendent.

From there, the petition was approved by the Wayne County reorganization board. The next step, gaining Nebraska state reorganization board approval, never materialized. The state's refusal was based on grounds that District No. 45 would not be transferred to a K-12 school district.

However, Sheckler said that since the required 65 percent of the residents in the district had signed the petition, the state reorganization board's denial could be overridden.

The change of school boundaries of School Districts 17, 15, 31 and 47 to accommodate the closing of School District 45 went before a public hearing on May 29.

As of June 1, District 45 became a part of the four school districts.

THIS SPELLED the end for Schoolhouse 45.

There were seven students eligible for enrollment the past school year at District 45.

Of these seven students, two will attend School District 15; two will travel to District 31 and three will be enrolled in District 17, according to Lyle Grone, president of the District 45 Board of Education.

"Our basic reason for closing was that there were not enough students in the future to make the taxpayers pay for it. It was not feasible to tax the people to keep the school going," said Grone.

Cracken' away

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Break dancing is going to break a lot of people's backs.

Pardon me for being old-fashioned and not keeping up with the times. But did I miss something between the period of disco and punk rock? Where did it all start? Does Michael Jackson have something to do with this?

Now, to those saying "Where have you been? Break dancing is in almost all the latest movies."

To that I reply "What movies? I haven't even seen the very first production of Star Wars."

All those moves and fancy steps and then throwing oneself on the ground pretending to play spin the bottle — that's just not for me and I'll tell you why.

The first and foremost is that I value my life. Secondly I don't know if our company's insurance will cover anyone who does all that flipping around, unless the employer is a circus manager. And finally, I prefer the soft beat of classy music over the "let me cram this kind of music in your ear" type of song.

To each their own style, their own dance. Who am I to criticize dancing methods, even when it looks dangerous and looks like it could cause chronic back problems.

WHAT I fear greatly is:

When street signals flash at crossings 'walk', 'do not walk', and 'break dance across, please'.

When apartment rentals say 'no dogs or cats allowed, break dancing outlawed because the noise bothers people on the lower level'.

When youngsters ages 10 or under experiment with break dancing off the diving board at the local swimming pools.

When a child says she wants to throw away her 12 years of piano lessons after she finally starts liking practices, just so she can learn the techniques of break dancing.

When they combine the antics of punk rock with the more awful form of break dancing and call it "brunk rock."

There are symptoms which parents relate in depicting signs of break dancing mania.

DOES YOUR child come home with soiled or dusty clothes from spinning away on dirty dance floors?

Does your son walk the earth in a type of jerky motion, sometimes walking backwards while snapping his fingers and nodding his head continuously?

Does your child only hear you when you take out the stereo ear plugs which seem permanent in his ear?

There are cures for the symptoms, you know, which might be tried if all communication fails.

Hide the batteries on his stereo radio — the one which he holds to his ear constantly.

Tell the child that break dancing was what you did 50 years ago. If might seem old-fashioned and cut down on his/her enthusiasm.

My son is about 15 months old (almost has his walking perfected) and I think he's got a good start on break dancing techniques. He's got the same type of staggering steps, falls down a lot and rolls around on the floor often.

PROBABLY THE only wrong break dancing form he displays is that he either laughs too much or cries when he hits his head.

Break dancing could have its usefulness — particularly in the field of bug eradication. The dancers tip-toe across the floor and when they spot a bug or cockroach creeping across the room, they leap at it and "twist and turn" the bugs to bits. It could work better than a fly swatter.

Sarcasm isn't a true trait of mine and progress I usually don't knock. But from what I've seen, break dancing is more of a sport for the Olympics than what people would do for a night of dancing and entertaining.

When you think of it, young people really don't complain bitterly about the music and dancing of polkas and waltzes, rock and roll of the 50's and 60's and the once-popular disco. They just joined in the fad.

So I really shouldn't complain. There's no real harm in trying break dancing. Or is there?

I'm no Fred Astaire when it comes to dancing, but at least I can keep my feet on the floor without being airborne and on collision course with the dance floor.

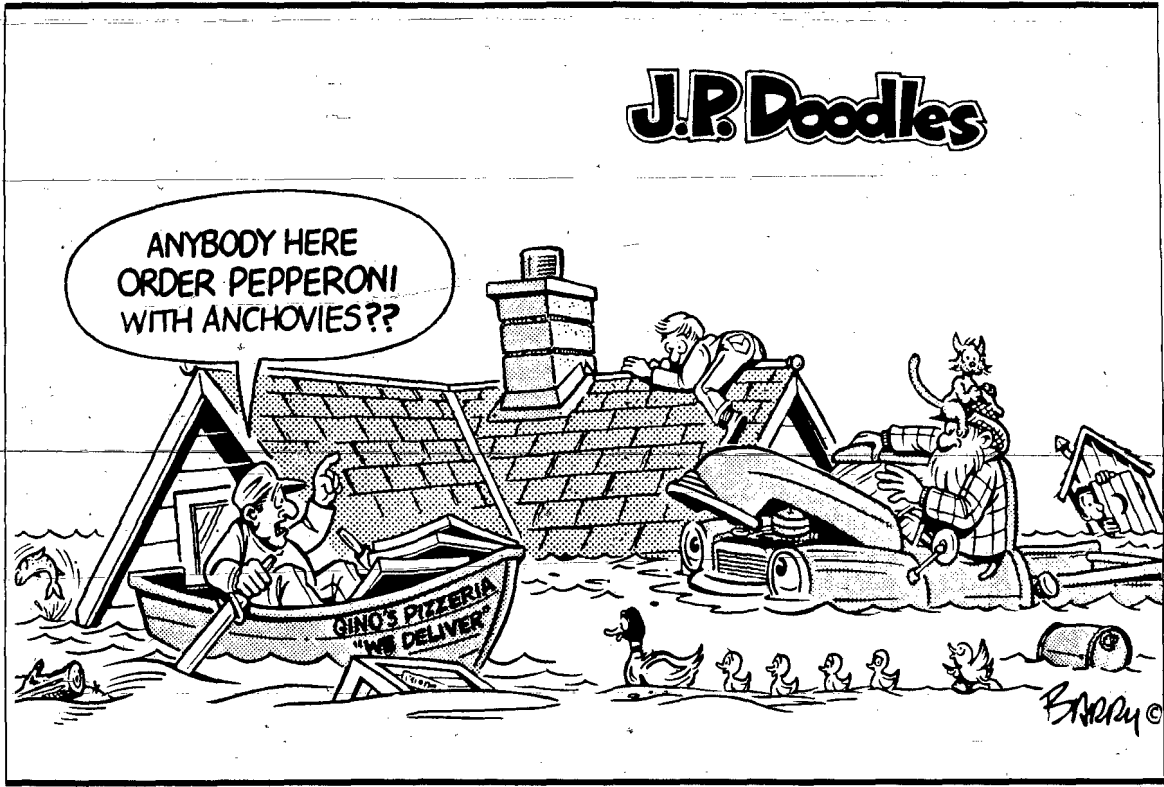

It worries me about what the next new dance fad will be. After all — where could one go after punk rock and break dancing. I'm afraid to ask.

Bad break down

Speaking of breaking down, our "Her-man" type processing trendsetter machine went on the blink, so this paper is being put together in the offices of the Wisner-News Chronicle.

We thank the Wisner-News Chronicle for allowing us to use their facilities.

Some items had to be "held off" for a week because of the machine equipment break-down — so if you had an article that should have been in this weekend's edition, this is probably the reason you didn't see it.

Reader questions column

To the editor:
I read Cheryl Stubbendieck's column in today's paper three times and still can't figure out two things: 1) What the Supreme Court's Grove City College versus Bell decision has to do with agriculture (her connections are loose, to say the least); and 2) Why the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation wishes to take a stand in favor of discrimination against women and other minorities. The 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution clearly protects their interests.
Ms. Stubbendieck's contention that the issue of one of power is clearly wrong. Congress would not need to exercise its power in the manner it is proposing if folks like Stubbendieck lived their lives according to the principles of a free democracy. Besides, the power of Congress is bestowed by voters, not assumed by villains. Were she willing to afford others the rights she prefers to reserve for her particular power cadre, congress wouldn't be the least bit interested in the issue.

—And you, Mr. Editor, who must assume responsibility for the headline ("New bills threaten free enterprise") should be ashamed of yourself for believing such papi. The success of our economic system literally hinges on the right of all persons to participate vigorously and without unfair advantage. Indeed, the usurpation of power by selfish individuals like Ms. Stubbendieck contributed to the collapse of our economy earlier in the century. The majority has an automatic advantage, and those who ratified the 14th Amendment were smart enough to realize that such an advantage could be exceedingly dangerous to the success of the new Republic.

I guess we've still got a long way to go in living up to the ideals of our founding fathers.

Correspondence courses are a possibility

To the editor:
The letter to the editor in Monday's edition of the Wayne Herald concerning the amount of free high school tuition prompts me to furnish your readers with the following information.
In the 1926-27 school year, 169 rural students from Wayne county attended 14 area high schools. Of these, 48 were at Wayne, 34 at Carroll, 26 at Winslow, 17 at Norfolk, 3 at Sholes, 15 at Wakefield, 7 at Hoskins, 1 at Laurel, 4 at Randolph, 1 at Coleridge, 2 at Pilger, 4 at Pender, 6 at Wisner and 1 at Dakota City.
At the time the rural districts paid $3 per week or $108 per year per pupil for the tuition.
In 1926, many rural children didn't go beyond the eighth grade as state law required that they must attend school until they completed the eighth grade or be 14 years old. Many of the boys stayed home to work, as human-labor was needed on the farm.

Most of the students stayed in town during the week and not every family could afford to pay the room and board.
About thirty years later — in 1954 — 340 rural students were in high school and in 1955 there were 350 so the number had doubled. The amount of free high school tuition had tripled from $3 per week to $9 per week or $324 per year.
Now another 30 years later in 1983 just 113 rural students were enrolled in area high schools for which free high school tuition was paid. This reflected the drop in the number of people living on farms and the increase in number of rural districts that had been joined to districts with high schools.

This year Wayne high proposes to charge $7,000 per year for tuition.
Perhaps there are some rural parents who would be interested in having their child take their high school studies by correspondence from the University of Nebraska. Here are some examples of what it would cost.
Assuming that a freshman would enroll for four standard courses here is the breakdown:
Algebra - 79.07; English - 79.58; Spanish - 84.38; health science - 75.28.
This totals to $328 per semester.

Chamber gets farmer's thanks

To the editor:
This is a letter to the Wayne Chamber of Commerce and all other businesses in the Wayne area. I commend you on your recent program of helping the farmers with volunteers from the local group. Mr. Van Meter was out and helped us for a day of planting, and was greatly appreciated.
Many other volunteers helped across the county and did a fine job.
But with all of your promotions and advertising to support the local business your school board has destroyed it all at one meeting.
When they can raise the high school tuition $1,000 at one crack and use the excuse that there is an estimate of fewer students — now that is practical reasoning. Why would this be a unanimous decision?
There must have been some discussion, if not you have very little representation at these meetings.
Maybe the real reason is to force closing all rural districts.
So I suggest at the next meeting a few business people attend and voice some opinions on these matters.

viewpoint

A history lesson

Earlier this January, former editor of The Wayne Herald Randy Hascall wrote a series of articles on the rural district schools, depicting the advantages, disadvantages and viewpoints from teachers and students concerning education in the area schoolhouses.

At the beginning of the upcoming school year, the number of rural district schools will be reduced from 11 to 10, according to County Superintendent Sheckler.

The latest of these casualties of one-room schools which will no longer be in operation next fall is School District 45, located approximately 3 miles northwest of Wayne. One reason the school closed is because the board of education felt it would not be feasible to tax the people if there were not enough students in the future to fill the classroom.

So Schoolhouse 45 will be up for auction on July 8. It would be ideal if the 98 year old schoolhouse could be snatched up to be placed on a historical pedestal as a reminder to the schools of past.

In Iowa, the operation of state-county funded one-room schoolhouses are virtually non-existent. The schoolhouses in some areas of the state, including this writer's home area in northeast Iowa, are either deteriorating or preserved as living history with federal dollars.

One old Iowa schoolhouse was taken from the country into the city, where it stood constantly on display at the county fairgrounds for people to gaze at and remember.

Youth competition on multiplication tables and other mathematical problems were scheduled at the old schoolhouse during the course of the annual fair.

These schoolhouses are an important part of America's education history. The classrooms will certainly be remembered by former students and teachers at upcoming reunions.

Even if the District 45 schoolhouse is remodeled, torn down or moved away for historical preservation reasons — the memories of the good times (and sad) for those that sat within the school's four walls has a special place.

It supplied a shelter where a growing child could work his way into the world and survive through the guidance of a teacher's helpful hand.

In a survey, a majority of students in Wayne's one-room schools said they enjoy country schools and are glad they attend them.

"The best thing about country school is that there aren't as many people. It's quieter and easier to get along with everyone and get good attention from the teacher," said one student from the District 45 schoolhouse.

Certainly, the schoolhouse will be missed by many who had the chance to learn, teach or have a part in the one-room school educational institution.

The schoolhouses shouldn't die a quiet death. Heritage of the learning institution should be preserved and displayed as an important part of Nebraska history.

Flat tax in '85?

The centerpiece of Ronald Reagan's campaign for the presidency in 1980 was the Kemp-Roth tax cut, a 30 percent reduction in individual income tax rates. President Reagan's landslide victory that year, combined with his party's winning control of the Senate and adding dozens of members in the House of Representatives, ensured that tax rates would indeed fall.

And true to his campaign promise, the administration drafted and passed through Congress the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. It wasn't Kemp-Roth verbatim — rates were cut by only 25 percent and the rate reductions were delayed — but it was pretty close.

Political observers, economists and, last but not least, American taxpayers are beginning to watch the 1984 presidential election for clues as to what changes in the tax code we can expect in 1985. In general, Republican candidates oppose raising federal taxes and argue that the deficit spending problem should be attacked with a combination of spending restraint and continued economic growth.

Democrats have tended to focus on increasing taxes. Voters in November will choose between these two contrasting approaches in the presidential election, as well as in Senate and House races.

IT IS NOT surprising that the two major parties in the United States would offer conflicting policies vis-a-vis the deficit. That is why we have two parties and not one.

What is surprising, however, is that this early in the 1984 campaign major figures in both political parties, representing liberals and conservatives, are building an uneasy consensus on a rather important tax issue. That is the concept of a flat tax.

Now the flat tax coalition is a rather broad one at the moment. There are more than a dozen separate bills before Congress all parading under the rubric of the flat tax. Most are not a true flat tax with one rate and no deductions. But all are attempts at gross simplification of the tax code.

Now, some flat taxes are flatter than other flat taxes, but they all make some movement toward three principles. A reformed federal income tax, they agree, should be simpler, more fair and economically efficient, i.e., it should provide greater incentives to work, save and invest.

In the interest of simplicity and fairness, each of these proposals reduces the number of exemptions and deductions in the tax code and also reduces the number of income tax brackets. This would be progress toward a tax code understandable to individuals without an advanced degree in accounting, and it would also increase confidence in the tax code by assuring Americans that other taxpayers are not getting away with paying "less than their fair share" through complex and costly loopholes.

TO PROMOTE ECONOMIC growth, the flat tax proposals reduce the top marginal tax rate from the present 50 percent in Representative Mark Sillander's (R-Mich.) legislation. Reducing the number of exemptions and deductions also begins to get the government out of the business of using the tax code for social engineering. ("Do what Uncle Sam wants you, to do and you get a nice tax deduction.")

I do not mean to exaggerate the degree of consensus surrounding the flat tax proposals. Very real differences remain.

The Kemp-Kasten flat tax proposal would establish a top marginal tax rate of 25 percent and, by doubling the personal and dependent exemptions, remove all federal taxes from the first $14,000 of income for a family of four.

The Bradley-Gephardt flat tax would establish rates of 14 percent, 26 percent and 30 percent. Unfortunately, this bill would also increase the capital gains tax and repeal indexing of tax brackets, bringing back the hidden tax of bracket creep.

SENATOR DENNIS DeConcini's (D-Ariz.) flat tax proposal would establish a 19 percent flat rate and fully integrate the corporate and individual income taxes.

And Republican Sillander's bill would establish a flat tax of 10 percent.

One danger posed by the movement toward the flat tax is that some politicians see the flat tax as a way to increase taxes under the guise of tax reform. We have been fooled by this strategy before. Thus, as the political campaigns of the fall heat up, we must be very careful to examine the various proposals and ensure that "broadening the tax base" does not become this year's euphemism for hiking taxes.

Still, despite the difference, it is heartening to see congressmen moving away from the idea of a graduated income tax designed to punish the work and savings. This movement toward a bipartisan understanding of the role of incentives in economic growth certainly shows that we have come a long way in the last few years.

And given the tremendous growth and job creation spurred by the 1981 reduction in income tax rates, just imagine the growth and progress possible in the last half of this decade if marginal rates were actually dropped to a maximum of 30 percent or 25 percent or 19 percent or even 10 percent. If the 1984 campaign brings such progress, hold onto your hats and get ready for an economic boom such as the world has never seen before.

Winside couple exchanges vows during June wedding

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Allen Schrant of Winside and Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Finn of Carroll.

REV. GAIL Axen officiated the 5 p.m. double ring rites. Vocal selections "I'll Be Home for Christmas" and "The Lord's Prayer" and "You and I" were performed by David Anderson of Hoskins. Organist was Elteen Weddingfield of Norfolk.

Baskets of blue, iris, yellow and greenery adorned the church altar, and ivory bows and aris marked the church pews. An iris

Their floor-length dresses of ivory satin featured a spring yellow georgette overlay with a pleated ruffle and lace trim. The gown's off-the-shoulder style was enhanced by a V-neckline. The fitted bodice fell to an empire waist which fell into a gathered skirt. The dresses were made by Mrs. Bill Holtgreve.

Hats fashioned by the bride in colors to match the dresses completed the ensemble, and they carried arm bouquets of irises and ivory bows.

The flower girl wore a dress identical to the bridesmaids, while the candlelighters wore gowns of moonlight blue in a similar style.

Best man was Alan Finn of Wayne. Ron Lundahl of Laurel, Kurt Schrant of Winside and Joe Finn of Carroll were groomsmen.

ADD CALCIUM TO YOUR DIET

Sometimes nutrition becomes a hot news item. That has been the case with calcium and its role in maintaining a healthy body. It seems that you see information everywhere. What is the truth and what is the advertisers exaggeration?

Our bodies need calcium from birth to death. Calcium is very important for growing children and pregnant women, but others need it also. Besides building strong bones and teeth, calcium is used for muscle contraction, nerve transmission, regulation of the heartbeat and blood clotting.

Long after your bones and teeth are fully developed, your body needs calcium. If you don't get enough calcium each day, your body may adapt by robbing the bones of their stores of calcium. This brings a risk of bone degenerative diseases later in life.

HOW MUCH calcium in your diet is enough? The Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDA) suggest that adults require about 800 milligrams per day. This is approximately equal to 2 1/2 cups of milk. Meal planning can be simplified by remembering that children require three servings per day from the dairy foods group. Teenagers need four servings, adults two servings and pregnant women four servings.

Milk and dairy foods are good sources of calcium, but other foods also contribute to your diet. Try to include dark green leafy vegetables or fish with bones, such as salmon in your meals.

You can use dairy foods in many recipes to increase the calcium content of your meals. Dilute cream soups with milk instead of water. If you family enjoys hot cereal, use milk to prepare the morning's oatmeal.

MAIN DISHES can also be calcium fortified. Accent casseroles with grated cheese or add nonfat dry milk in the preparation. Cheese goes well with many foods. Add it to your favorite egg dish and don't forget a slice in your sandwich.

Yogurt is becoming a popular dairy food. A cup of yogurt has as much calcium as a cup of milk. It's a treat by itself or use it to add a tart accent with salads or vegetables. Use yogurt instead of sour cream or mayonnaise in your salad dressings. You'll get more calcium and fewer calories.

Don't forget the pudding or ice cream for dessert. They may not have fewer calories than cake or pie, but they do have more calcium.

A little planning can insure that your family will receive the calcium necessary to build or maintain strong bones and teeth. Try supplementing your meals with dairy foods.

Honors and memories return

WSC choir entertains Europe

The members of the Wayne State College Concert Choir brought home almost as many honors as memories upon their return from the 1984 European Tour in May.

The choir, under the direction of Dr. Cornell Runestad, traveled to the Netherlands, Belgium, France and Switzerland during their two-week stay, from May 12-30.

The choir received the "Laurel Wreath with Gold" award at the Erfstfeld Festival in Switzerland, and was the only American choir to perform. Following the competition pieces, the choir also gave a special command performance.

The choir gave a total of eight full concert performances, according to Dr. Runestad, including a performance in the famed Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris. "It's unusual for a choir from a school the size of Wayne State to perform in the Notre Dame," said Runestad, "especially on a weekend." The Cathedral was also the largest location the choir performed in, with several thousand persons in attendance.

Following the performance at the Notre Dame, a member of the crowd presented Runestad with a gift for the choir, explaining that "this is for your beautiful singing and also to let you know we have not forgotten what you Americans did for us," making reference to the anniversary of the Normandy invasion during World War II.

commodations as well as booking concerts and travel plans. The concert bookings were made on the basis of tapes which were sent to the agency.

Plans were made for the recent tour after the successful completion of a tour in 1980 by the choir. "We realized that it was something which could be done on a regular basis," said Runestad. "It's worth the project to continue to become established so that more people become aware of the opportunity. He also feels that the four-year rotation is necessary because students pay for most of the expenses themselves.

All members of the Wayne State choir were eligible to take the tour, so it was a matter of individual choice whether to attend. Cost for this year's trip was approximately $1,350.

According to Runestad, Wayne State was the only Nebraska choir to travel to Europe this summer.

Since most choirs have a "club-like" status in Europe, the audiences were impressed with both the young age of Wayne State's choir and the fact that their performances were done from memory.

"People don't expect a choir as young as ours to sing so well or to perform from memory," said Runestad. The choir performed the national anthems of each country they visited in the native language, which was greeted with great enthusiasm.

cert which they performed was the longest one they had ever prepared, as it included over one hour and 20 minutes of music.

It was a new experience for almost all of the choir members, as only two had been on the 1980 tour. Lee Obermeyer and Connie Linder, both seniors, purposely extended their college career to include the 1984 trip to Europe.

The tour also served as a honeymoon for one couple, as Connie Linder and Ron Smith were married on May 10, just prior to leaving for the tour.

Students could also receive two hours of undergraduate and graduate credit for the trip. Upon arriving home, each student participating in the course "European Music Seminar" was required to write a 10 or 15 page paper on a certain aspect of the tour, using a journal which was kept during the trip.

Area students who participated in the tour were Deena Sharer, Thomas Fletcher, Lisa Remer and Nick Stier of Wayne, Marla Anderson of Hoskins, Mark Creamer and Layne Johnson of Concord.

Downtown beard display

A Centennial Beard Display attracted a number of stalwart Wayne citizens last Thursday evening. Approximately 20 beards and moustaches were present for measurement and evaluation.

Some were neat, others were not. Some were bushy, others were sparse.

Some were solid in colors, others were mottled. Some were regular, others were scraggly. The length of beards developed since Ground Hog Day varied from the 2 1/2" of Roy Sommerfeld to the 1 1/2" of Brent Pedersen. Most beards were in the 2" range.

A surprise feature of the display was the presence of the Wayne Centennial Surgeon

General, Dr. James Lindau.

Dr. Lindau stated that complaints had been received on the unsanitary conditions of some beards. In an effort to stamp out the problem, those who were suspected to be carriers of hog mange, scabbiness, cooties and other vermin were treated on the spot.

A surprise feature of the display was the presence of the Wayne Centennial Surgeon

THIS LAKE is actually one of the softball fields located on the Wayne State College campus. Heavy rains on Thursday turned the already soggy ball field into a impassable lake which would threaten even the heartiest softball player or fan.

Wayne downs Neligh 10-8 in close contest on Wednesday

It took extra innings before the Wayne Town Team could pull out a win last Wednesday night against a tough Neligh team.

Wayne was trailing Neligh by three runs going into the ninth inning. They had two outs and only one runner on base before Al Nissen and Doug Carroll slapped back to back singles. Both later scored to tie the game at 8-8.

Neligh then broke the deadlock in the 11th inning when his double scored Tim Pfeifer, who reached base on a walk and then stole second base. Bloom later scored on an error by the Neligh second baseman, making the final score 10-8.

Wayne scored first in the game when Todd Pfeifer reached base on an error by the Neligh shortstop. He stole second base and then scored on a double hit by Jeff Dion, the Wayne designated hitter.

Neligh scored five runs in the first three innings as pitcher Joel Ankeny came on the mound to relieve starter Jerry Godden with one out in the third inning.

Ankeny allowed eight hits in his eight innings of relief.

THREE RUNS were scored by Wayne in the sixth inning to close the Neligh lead to 7-4. The local town team got their runs when Todd Pfeifer drew a walk and Tim Pfeifer followed with a double.

One out later Dion laced a single and Bill Schwartz smacked a double.

After tying the score with three runs in the ninth inning, Wayne opened the top of the 10th inning with a run when Dion smacked his second double of the game and later scored after Schwartz and Mike Meyer each were walked.

In the bottom half of the inning, Neligh scored a run to stay in the game. Wayne came back with two runs in the 11th inning to clinch the game as Ankeny retired Neligh in order in the final half of the inning.

Wayne collected a total of 10 hits and tallied five errors in the game. Neligh had 13 hits in the game, with Ron Thompson getting three of those hits — including a double.

This Wednesday, Wayne plays Plainview before returning home on Sunday, July 1 to play against Bloomfield.

Second week of Wayne State basketball camp June 25-29

The second week of the Wayne State College Basketball Camp is scheduled to get underway beginning today, with boys and girls grades 9-12 participating.

The schedule for the week-long event includes 9 a.m. to noon, boys grades 9-12; 1-4 p.m., girls grades 9-12.

According to Wayne State head basketball Coach Rick Weaver, the camp's three-hour sessions are broken down into three parts, allowing for as much individual attention as possible.

"This camp is designed to help each participant improve on the fundamentals and individual skills," Weaver said, "and also to help point out personal weaknesses so that the player can make a special effort to correct the problem."

The camp sessions will include work on the basic fundamentals through the use of a station-to-station method. Campers will spend time working on skills such as shooting, passing, rebounding, ball handling and defensive moves.

Also included in the sessions will be one-on-one and full court team drills and a free throw competition throughout the week. A video tape recorder and playback unit will also be available, allowing both the players and coaches an opportunity to analyze styles and possible weaknesses. The college weight room facilities will be available for use and instruction on proper lifting techniques and guidance will be provided.

Campers will also be able to use the college swimming pool at the close of each session.

Camp t-shirts will be available to all participants. At the close of the week, awards such as best free throw shooter and hustler of the week will be given.

Weaver will be assisted by Wayne State head women's basketball Coach Lenny Klaver, member of the Wildcat basketball team and area coaches.
