County loses tons of soil

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Wayne County ranks sixth statewide in the percentage of topsoil lost because of inclement weather and poor conservation practices according to a recent report from the soil conservation service.

The report shows Wayne County losing 20 tons of soil erosion on 92,000 of the county's total 283,520 acres — a 32.4 percent figure. Only Colfax, Douglas, Sarpy, Johnson and Nemaha Counties in Nebraska have a greater percentage of erosion.

Other area county percentages of acres with 20 tons of soil loss include Pierce with 25.3 percent of total acres; Cedar with 19 percent of total acres; Dixon with 26.7 percent of total acres; and Thurston with 23.3 percent of total acres.

Larry Welterberg, district soil conservationist from the Wayne Soil Conservation Service office, said he wasn't completely surprised at Wayne County's alarming rate of topsoil loss.

The fact that most of the counties near the Missouri River have a lesser percentage of soil loss than Wayne County was also anticipated by Welterberg.

RIVER COUNTIES have more pasture and range land on steep slopes, Wayne County has more row crops.

"Most of our slopes are 10 to 15 percent, so it's not unusual to have more than 20 tons of soil lost yearly on these types of slopes," said Welterberg.

"This year was bad, but last year was also bad. This year there were some 100 tons of soil loss alone on grounds that had soybeans planted on soybeans or fields with heavy tillage," he said.

Welterberg mentioned an upcoming field tour which will demonstrate several conservation tillage techniques, scheduled for July 5 and July 11.

"The most acceptable conservation practice for most people in this area is conservation tillage. It doesn't require doing a whole lot [of fieldwork] and doesn't cost a lot of money," he said.

This Thursday's first field tour will take place at the Verlyn Stoltenberg farm a mile north and 1/8 mile west of Carroll starting at 1:30 p.m. The second tour at the Larry Bowers field three miles west and a mile south and 1/4 mile west of Winside begins at 6:30 p.m. the same day.

Also there will be a tour of the Mike Meierhenry farm five miles west of Winside and 1/2 mile north.

Then on Wednesday, July 11, an additional four will feature the Stan Baler farm located four miles south and 3/4 mile east of Wayne.

ON THESE farms will be shown fields of no-till corn planted in soybean residue, corn planted in heavy irrigated cornstalk residue, dry land corn on corn, and corn planted in sweet clover stubble and silage-corn stubble.

Extension agronomists will also be on hand to explain the latest information on crop and insect problems and some equipment will be available for viewing. Refreshments will also be served on all the tours.

Welterberg said there are other conservation practices that could be applied if the right type of land, such as contour farming and terracing. But he advised farmers to investigate the options thoroughly.

"Contour farming will work only 100 feet on a 300 foot slope. If the contour breaks, it could bring devastating erosions. Terracing would be needed beyond the 100 feet of the slope," Welterberg said.

Some general conservation practices, he said, are to keep more oats and alfalfa in plant rotation, have more residue between the rows and either practice contour and/or terracing.

HELEN BARNER and Darrin have a fireworks stand in the Pamida parking lot which catches the eyes of some young onlookers passing through Wayne. Barner, in stand with Darrin, has been selling fireworks for two decades.

Fireworks a blast for Barner

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Little Lady Fingers, Smoke Balls and Sparklers were selling well for the small fireworks stand on the east end of Wayne along Highway 35. Inside the stand, Helen Barner and her son, Darrin, look over the inventory. It's just a few days away from Independence Day and many of the items on the stocked shelves will disappear either on July 3rd or the Fourth of July.

It's better to have plenty than to run out or not have what the customer demands.

Helen has been selling her fireworks for the past two decades. This year her supply comes from Rich Brothers of South Dakota. Most of the sales have been where the stand is currently located — on the spacious parking lot of Pamida.

They have another booth located along Main Street in Wayne.

She opened up for business on June 25. Prices haven't changed much in past years at the fireworks stand. Twenty years ago, Helen could sell "snakes" fireworks for five cents a box and smoke balls for a nickel a pack. Now, snakes and smoke balls sell at a package price of 15 cents.

"When I first started, we got pop bottle rockets and sold them a dozen for a quarter. When we stopped selling the pop bottle rockets [which became illegal fireworks in Nebraska several years ago], the price was at 75 cents a dozen," Helen said.

RESTRICTIONS over the years have required her to alter supplies or relocate. "We used to be able to sell fireworks inside the stores [Kaup's TV and Andy's Pizza] but the state outlawed that," she said.

They now must stay away a certain footage from buildings and must certainly be out of the fire zone. Fireworks sold from the stands must "go only 50 feet in the air and what goes up has to be disintegrated by the time it hits the ground otherwise the firework is illegal," Darrin said.

"We did not have as much lawn displays as we now have," Helen mentioned. But she stresses that those purchasing fireworks should "practice safety and read the instructions on the package."

Helen recalled one time when a certain firecracker was "taken off the market because of its pink color. Apparently, small kids were eating the firework thinking it was candy.

Several years later, the product was added to the shelves of the firework stands, this time with an appearance not like anything but a firecracker.

After all those years at the firework stand, Helen recalls all those youngsters who dug deep in their piggy bank and presented those pennies to purchase a single remembrance of July 4th.

"I thoroughly enjoyed working in the fireworks stand. I liked talking to all the kids," she said.

The stand today serves as a means for Darrin to earn some spending money over the summer months, Helen said.

Still she takes time to work in the booth, to chat with the youngsters and see the gleam in their eyes when the stand's inventory is put on display.

Bon Ami Pane-ting contest renewed for Chicken Show

Bon Ami is again providing $250 prize money for artists participating in this year's "Window Pane-ting" contest during the 1984 Wayne Chicken Show scheduled for June 13 and 14.

Prizes will be offered in three age groups this year. For children under eight, prizes will be $15 for first place, $10 for second and $5 for third place.

Contestants eight to 14 will receive prizes of $35 for first, $25 for second and $10 for third place.

Winners in the adult category, ages 15 and over, will receive $75 for first, $50 for second and $25 for third place.

Glass of any type is acceptable for entry. Storm windows, mirrors or picture frames make good portable "canvases," according to contest coordinator Veronica Trezona.

Drinking glasses, glass dishes, etc. may also be used.

Bon Ami Cleaning Powder in the rectangular box is available at the First National Bank and State National Bank and Trust Co. lobbies.

The only restriction is that Bon Ami must be used with paint, chalk or whatever is used to achieve colors.

Entries may be brought to the auditorium from 8 a.m. until 10 a.m. on Saturday, July 14. Judging will be after the parade (around 11 a.m.).

Contestants must attach a card with their name, address, telephone number and age to the "pane-ting".

Below is the materials needed and how to work with Bon Ami Pane-ting.

Laurel native authors craft book

by Jackie Osten

"When you have a family, the things that you enjoy do you tend to relate to your children," says Laurel native Arlys Monson.

The mother of four has been able to do just that and begin a personal creative venture of her own through the writing and publication of a craft book entitled "What Now, Mom?", which is currently available in the Wayne area.

The book features a variety of craft ideas for children's items which have both play and practical value, including nurse's uniforms, wall hangings and stuffed toys.

MONSON, WHO received a degree in English and art from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, has always enjoyed sewing for her family, and the idea of a craft book which allowed her to combine her sewing talents with her educational background was a "natural consequence," a result which had to come about," according to Monson.

She enjoys a creative challenge, saying that "thinking about how to do it is the fun part." Craft items in kits held little appeal for Monson, because she likes to develop the original ideas and them move on to something else.

The entire process behind her craft book was a long one. She foyed around with different ideas and gave serious thought to a collage industry, one in which she could contribute to the developing craft ideas and have them reproduced by other individuals. "There are a lot of problems and complications surrounding that type of industry," said Monson, and she wasn't sure how it would work out in a home with four school-age children.

The representative then suggested to Monson that while some of her ideas were too specific for kits, etc., they would fit well into the scheme of a craft book, and "What Now, Mom?" was on its way.

THE BOOK took about a year to put together, but that doesn't include the time it took for her to develop the ideas featured in the book.

Along with the craft ideas themselves are detailed illustrations which Monson drew herself. Normally the drawings would have been done by the company publishing the book, but Monson wanted the chance to test her art as well as sewing skills, and the company accepted her artwork as part of the book.

Deciding what to put in the book was a personal process for Monson, who received input from the company but made most of the choices on her own. "I tried to be practical, choosing ideas which would be practical and receive the most use," she added. "She added that the craft items had to appeal to both mother and child, since both had a great influence on the purchase of the book.

In May, copies of the book were sent to 5,000 retailers, along with introductory letters. Monson said that it will be sometime this summer before she has an indication on how well the book was received.

"While the company bears the cost of publishing the book, the time and material cost can mount up," said Monson.

THE COVER of the book was designed by Yours Truly, but Monson also had some control over the final design.

There have been some added benefits for Monson after the publication of her book as she has been asked to do the illustrations for another craft book being published by the company.

Monson already has ideas for two more craft-related books, one specifically for girls and the other aimed at children in general.

For anyone interested in the possibility of publishing a similar book of their own, Monson has a couple of suggestions, including "knowing the people you are working with" and being careful, since it is a highly competitive field.

Her husband, Craig, an attorney, was very supportive and "supplied some good business advice when it came to contracts," she said.

Their four children, Jesse, 11, Travis, 9, Gina, 7, and Katie, 3, along with Monson with an in-home learning group as well as a source of ideas.

All eight of the craft items are featured in a window display at The Shepherdess in Wayne, currently the only local outlet for the book. Monson hopes to have it available in other area stores in the near future.

Pane-ting

Materials — one rectangular box of Bon Ami Cleaning Powder; one sponge; 1/4", 1/2", 3/4" paint brushes; typewriter eraser (brush at the end); measuring cups; plastic bowls with covers; tempera or colored chalk (artist pastels); stencils; small kitchen grater (not necessarily in tempera used); small cloth; and one plastic bottle with tapered tip.

1. Mix one box Bon Ami Cleaning Powder with 1 1/2 cups water into large clean plastic bowl. This amount will be enough for approximately 20 students (basic ratio 1/2 cup Bon Ami to 3/4 cup water).
2. Stir powder and water vigorously with 1/2" paint brush. The mixture will increase in volume, becoming thick and foamy. Squeezing a small sponge in the mix will also create the consistency.
3. Remove a portion of the mix to another bowl and thin with water (approximately 1 tsp. depending on how much is removed). Apply this thinned mixture to a clean window, mirror, or picture-sized glass with sponge or brush using straight even strokes. Allow to set 10 minutes until feels dry to the touch. A hair dryer can be used to reduce drying time. (Note: If stenciling use the original thick mix to brush or sponge on the image.)

The result is a white background or "sheer image" for the artwork. At this point, you're ready to try your hand at Pane-ting. With the typewriter brush, sketch a design on the "canvas" using the eraser end to sketch and the brush end to gently whisk away the powder. Practice will help you decide how much pressure is needed to brush away the excess. Any glass surface not covered by the picture image can be wiped clean with a cloth. The finished picture should be gently brushed with a clean, dry brush "V" or "I" to remove all excess powder from the drawing.

After a few tries on the white "sheer image", you'll be ready to try colors. Mix tempera into the master mix, stirring with a small brush until the desired shade of color is obtained. Be sure to add water if the mix becomes too thick. If chalk is to be used to create color, grate colored chalk onto master mix bowl. Be sure chalk is thoroughly powdered before adding to mix. (Powderize any lumps or chunks with the back of a spoon.) The addition of chalk will cause the mix to thicken, a few drops of water from the applicator will return it to the proper consistency. For more than one color, divide the master mix into additional bowls.

Pane-ting in colors — Brush or sponge colored mix on glass, top to bottom and let each area dry. Apply colors in thin layers. If spreads easier than thick coats. For deeper colors several coats will be required. When the color image is thoroughly dry, the typewriter eraser can be used to sketch the outline of the subject.

Follow the same procedure for each image and color; outline and brush. Wipe away excess before adding the next color. As each layer of the Bon Ami mix is applied, it should be done with a gentler touch (if the medium does shift, restroke back and forth lightly, allow to set and re-apply. (Note: When stenciling, wait for the "sheer image" to dry before adding colors to complete pane-ting.)

The Bon Ami mix is useable indefinitely. Powder brushed from the pane-ting can be returned to the bowl, mixed with a few drops of water and re-used. Pane-tings will hold color for up to three months in bright sunlight.

Finger Pane-ting — Brush or sponge a liberal amount of mix onto the window. Do not let the mix dry or set on the glass surface. Begin creating images immediately. Additional colors can be added immediately or after the first application dries.

Clean up — Wipe windows with dry cloth, sponge or chalk eraser. Sweep up dry residue with broom. Or wipe with dampened cloth, rinse until image is reduced to thin film and dry with clean cloth. Materials clean with a cold water rinse.

Additional suggestions — For detailed Pane-tings, designs or pictures can be sketched on 3x7, 8x10 or 9x12 pieces of glass with a felt tip pen. Turn the glass over and place a piece of white cardboard behind it. The sketch will be easy to see and to follow while working. When the Pane-ting is completed, wipe the sketch away with a damp cloth.

Preserve Pane-tings by spraying with a clear acrylic lacquer. Two or three light coats will secure the Pane-ting to the glass. Be sure to let each coat dry before applying the next. The final result will look like a frosted picture or glass etching. To remove the Pane-ting, use lacquer thinner.

He was immediately taken to the Laurel Medical Clinic. The Laurel Ambulance Rescue Unit took Wade to the Wayne Medical Center in Wayne, who in turn took him to the Children's Hospital in Omaha.

A portion of his left arm (below the elbow) was removed by surgical staff at the Children's Hospital. He is recovering well, according to sources, and will be requiring more surgery.

Deadline for signing petition nears

Capitol News
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

As the July 6 deadline for filing initiative petitions approaches, Taxpayers' Survival Committee chairman Ed Jaksha of Omaha is expressing optimism that his government spending tids will qualify for the November ballot.

"I think we're going to make it, but it's going to be a squeaker," Jaksha told reporters last week.

The Jaksha committee is attempting to place on the ballot constitutional amendments that would limit annual local tax bills to 1.5 percent of actual property value and limit annual state government spending increases to one-half the increase in the state's per capita income.

Jaksha said last week that his petition circulators had gathered more than the minimum number of required signatures in 27 counties.

If its initiative drives are to succeed, the committee needs signatures of registered voters totaling at least 5 percent of the number of voters in the 1982 gubernatorial election in at least 38 counties.

THE COMMITTEE ALSO needs to present to Secretary of State Allen Beermann signatures of 54,790 registered voters statewide to place the proposed amendments on the November ballot.

Jaksha declined to specify the total number of signatures his organization has collected. "I get the feeling if I give the figure, they (petition circulators) will reach their own conclusion that we've won or that we've lost, and, in either case, they're going to quit," Jaksha said.

Jaksha said circulators in Cass and Nance counties had returned the highest percentages of signatures. In each county, Jaksha said, workers have gathered signatures totaling about 17 percent of the number of people who voted in the 1982 gubernatorial election.

Lancaster County is not among those that have reached the 5 percent threshold.

Jaksha said. He characterized Lancaster, Hall and Buffalo counties as "tough territory" for the petitions. He speculated that a high concentration of government workers in those counties has created difficulties for petition circulators.

Douglas County, the state's most populous, has contributed significantly to the petition drive, he said.

The two initiative petitions have received roughly the same number of signatures, with the local property tax lid running slightly ahead of the state government spending lid.

Jaksha claims to have reached the minimum number of signatures in these counties:

Arthur, Blaine, Boone, Buffalo, Burt, Cass, Cherry, Colfax, Custer, Dodge, Douglas, Garfield, Gosper, Grant, Holt, Hooker, Howard, Knox, Loup, Morrill, Nance, Otoe, Platte, Richardson, Sherman, Thomas and Valley.

GOVERNOR BOB Kerrey has nixed a proposed highway funding formula which critics say would have favored more heavily populated areas of the state over rural areas.

Kerrey has told state Department of Roads Director Lou Lamberty to develop a new funding formula which takes into account deficiencies in the current allocation method, but still provides a reasonable share of funding for highway maintenance and repair in less populated areas.

In May, Lamberty proposed a change in the 30-year-old allocation formula, which he said fails in many cases to direct funds to areas of major highway deterioration.

Douglas and Lancaster counties would have been major beneficiaries of the proposed change, Kerrey said.

Lamberty's proposal has raised concerns in rural areas of the state, particularly in the Panhandle.

Kerrey said he told Lamberty that he wouldn't approve the proposal and instructed him to develop a new formula. Lamberty says he'll be developing a new formula in the coming weeks.

viewpoint

Preserving topsoil

This past spring has been a true indicator as to the amount of topsoil lost in Wayne County — either by uncooperating weather or through poor soil conservation practices.

This week we learned that Wayne County's erosion control has lagged behind a large share of counties in Nebraska.

Wayne County ranks sixth in the state in percentage of eroded soil. According to a recent report, soil erodes on 92,000 of the total 283,520 acres in the county.

A large percentage, 32.4 percent, is figured as lost topsoil in the county.

Perhaps these figures serve as a reminder to farmland owners of the severe consequences which occur when soil conservation practices are overlooked.

At least 20 tons per acre of topsoil has slipped away from nearly 3.6 million Nebraska farm acres this spring because of the heavy rains.

Conservation tillage appears to be the most acceptable method of soil conservation in this area. For all practical purposes, this method requires less fieldwork and the lesser of costs when choosing between other soil conservation practices such as contouring and terracing.

Several conservation tillage tours have been scheduled in this area for July 5 and July 11. The tours will feature fields of no-till corn and soybean planting methods. Information on these tours, which appeared in the June 27 edition of the Wayne Herald, can also be obtained from Don Spitzke, Wayne County extension agent.

Certainly there are limits as to what land can adapt to no-till, contour or terracing.

Perhaps the land's formation cannot adapt to the conservation practice. Or maybe the cost for installing conservation practices is unaffordable for the farmer.

A previous news release mentioned that money will be available this fall from the Agriculture and Stabilization Service, Lower Elkhorn Natural Resource District and the state soil and water conservation program to install conservation methods.

Farmers should consider the soil conservation options now, because experience is life's best teacher.

During recent years of low prices on commodities and livestock, the farmers have absorbed a beating on the market. But it would be a greater injustice to have the fertile topsoil snatched away by wind and water.

As the fertile topsoil becomes less and less each year, crop production from the soil will decrease and more fertilizer will need to be applied to replace the soil's lost nutrients. And that's not good news to farmers who are battling the current odds they face.

Independence observance almost premature

Independence Day

Two hundred years ago this week, on July 4, 1784, Americans celebrated the beginning of their ninth year of independence. That celebration was almost premature. The British army had finally been forced out of our country only one year earlier. Congress, under the Articles of Confederation, was unable to raise funds necessary for the government's operation, and some members thought the government would fail. Agriculture, the new nation's economic mainstay, was operating at a subsistence level in most areas.

Daschle of South Dakota and other Members of Congress whose districts were affected by the recent devastating floods in sending a letter to President Reagan. In that letter we ask the President to take two steps. In addition to the requested disaster declaration, that would provide additional help to farmers in the flooded areas.

Much has changed since 1784. But the belief that America can and will overcome its challenges has not changed. It was this spirit of American's promise and optimism that citizens celebrated two hundred years ago, and it is in the same spirit that we celebrate the Fourth of July this week.

Appeal to President

I have joined with Representative Tom

Small Business Administration for emergency disaster loans after they have applied to, and been rejected by, the Farmers Home Administration, be waived for cases involved in designated disaster areas.

There are two reasons for this request. First, the speed of processing is a paramount consideration. With all the best will in the world, FmHA personnel may not be able to complete the application process in a timely manner. The special personnel of the SBA, and its ability to hire temporary personnel for just such emergencies, would enable this agency to respond in a much more timely manner.

Second, the significant difference between the FmHA and SBA loan terms would provide a much needed advantage to farmers already facing a crushing debt service burden.

Disaster Assistance

The second request we have made is that the President direct the Department of Agriculture to implement an authority it possesses under the 1981 Farm Bill to grant disaster assistance cash payments to farmers in designated disaster areas.

This would provide cash payments of 50 percent of the target prices on wheat and feed grains for up to 60 percent of the normal yield in instances where flooding has either prevented planting or reduced normal yield.

We also requested a meeting with the president, to further explain our concerns. Failure to utilize fully the loan programs of the SBA and the disaster payment program could result in the elimination of a significant number of good, long-term family farmers — good managers, who, through a combination of short-sighted embargo policies, high interest rates, and a declining export market, all factors out of their control, simply cannot survive a disaster of this magnitude.

Youth wage bill is supported

The Reagan Administration's youth employment opportunity wage proposal offers the potential for providing summer-time employment experiences and training for youth on a large scale and should be enacted," Secretary of Labor Raymond J. Donovan said.

Testifying before the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, Secretary Donovan said the summertime youth wage bill would be a new approach to solving the "national tragedy" of high teenage unemployment and would complement other federal youth employment and training programs.

Jobless rates for youths aged 16-19 have increased steadily over the past 30 years, from 12.5 percent in 1954 to 19 percent in 1984; black teenage unemployment has soared from 17 percent to 44 percent during the same period, Donovan said.

"Clearly these statistics are unacceptable. They signify opportunities lost to our youth — opportunities for obtaining early and valuable employment experience, as well as income and the intangible benefits associated with honest work, such as enhanced pride and self-esteem," he said.

The Labor Secretary called the Youth Employment Opportunity Wage Act of 1984 "a non-bureaucratic and cost-effective proposal for helping to achieve our shared objective of youth employment." The bill would allow employers to hire youths 19 and under at a special wage of $2.50 an hour, or about 75 percent of the current $3.35-an-hour federal minimum wage, from May 1 through Sept. 30.

Donovan estimated that the bill, if enacted, would create 400,000 new summer jobs for teenagers. The bill would "sunset" in 1987, he said.

Noting that "young people need employment and work experience to secure adult employment," Donovan said the private sector "can and will provide valuable employment experience for more young people, especially those with fewer skills, if the artificial barrier of the minimum wage is lowered.

Claims that the youth opportunity wage would be used by employers to replace adult workers with youths are "unwarranted," he said. The bill prohibits employers from discharging, demoting or transferring current employees to hire youths at the lower wage rate and prohibits reducing the pay of any youth already employed at the full federal minimum wage during the 90 days before May 1.

Violations could bring fines of up to $10,000 and prison terms of up to six months.

Donovan said the youth opportunity wage would be a part of a package of programs aimed at the youth-employment problem. He said the Administration supported targeting the basic training funds available under Title II of the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) to economically disadvantaged persons under age 22 and is devoting about $2 billion of JTPA funds to youth programs.

He said the Administration also continues to provide jobs for disadvantaged youth under the Summer Youth Employment Program and residential training through the Job Corps, and has proposed to extend the availability of the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit to employers hiring youths and other specific groups.

Handicap not always that

To the editor:

We are the parents of Marla, who is the child with a handicap, who got to attend two weeks of park and recreation after a lot of controversy.

She enjoyed being at the program very much, was proud of the crafts she made and had lots of fun singing and playing games. There were no problems and it turned out to be a happy ending. Why weren't there any articles explaining how this situation ended?

We heard all the negative views and it seemed the situation looked worse than it really was. We had hired a 16 year old high schooler to be Marla's aid — at "our" expense. How could this close the program?

Kids with handicaps, who do need an aid — need one who can give a hug, give encouragement and maybe push a wheelchair — not necessarily have any special training. There are individuals out there who would even volunteer to do this — at no expense to the city.

The program does not have to be completely changed for kids with handicaps.

You see first, our kids are kids. Second, they are handicapped. They like to have fun, to laugh, to be with other kids. They like music, even if they can't sing — they like to listen. They like making things; although they may need some help (but a lot of "normal" children do, too).

They like to play games, if they can't play — they can do what their disability allows them.

These children don't want your sympathy, but just give a chance to do the things most people take for granted.

If you have never been around a person with a handicap, it can be rather scary. These individuals can look different and act different. Dr. Dobson, a well-known author, says we judge people, first on their looks and second on their intelligence.

That's really too bad, because some of the most beautiful people have their beauty from within and that's what counts.

We want to thank all the people who stood behind us, the park and recreation council for giving Marla a chance to attend the program, to Mrs. Karel and the girls who were teachers and aids. This is a great program for "all" kids and we want to see it continue. We are here to help in any way we can.

Wayne-Wakefield split at Lincoln Coaches tourney

A combined team of Wayne and Wakefield Ralph Bishop League baseball players competed in the 4th annual Lincoln Coaches Tournament held on June 29-July 1.

The team split in their four game schedule, winning a pair from Grand Island and Omaha Burke and losing to Papillion and Gerry's Sport and Ski.

A total of 16 teams from Nebraska and Kansas filled out the 32-game tourney schedule in the three day event.

WAYNE-WAKEFIELD opened play on Friday with a 2-0 loss to eventual champion Papillion in seven innings.

The locals could only muster three hits in the loss. Todd Dorcsey, Troy Greve and Don Larsen all rapped out singles in the losing effort. A total of 11 Wayne-Wakefield batters struck out at the plate.

Bob Utemark of Wakefield pitched in the loss, notching five strike outs and walked six.

The loss placed Wayne-Wakefield in the consolation bracket of the tournament.

and winning run in the top of the seventh. The team later went on to claim the consolation championship spot.

Wayne's Don Larsen was on the mound, allowing nine runs on eight hits and striking out three opposing batters.

THE WAYNE-Wakefield squad was able to even their tournament mark at 2-2 with a 1-0 victory over Omaha Burke in their final contest.

The tone run of the game came in the third inning when Wayne's Chris Wieseler reached base on a single and later scored on an Omaha Burke error.

Jeff Hausmann pitched in the win, recording six strike outs and giving up four hits. Coaches for the Wayne-Wakefield team were Hank Overin of Wayne and Joe Coble and Paul Eatos of Wakefield.

A total of 11 players from the area comprised the team which traveled to Lincoln.

Representing Wayne were Chris Wieseler, Todd Dorcsey, Don Larsen, Jeff Hausmann and Steve Overin. Kevin Maly was also selected as a team member but was unable to play due to an arm injury.

Wakefield players on the team included Brian Soderberg, Jeff Coble, Bob Utemark, Troy Greve, Mark Kubik and Wayne Guy.

According to Wayne Coach Hank Overin, this is the first time that a team such as this has participated in the Lincoln tourney, but "we plan to attend regularly from now on."

The two teams combined to allow the coaches to send their best talent down to the tourney, which exposed them to many of the metropolitan area coaches, who normally wouldn't see the team players any other way.

"Attending this tourney gave all of our players the chance to be exposed to the caliber of play in cities like Omaha and Lincoln, and give them some new personal goals to set and work for," said Overin.

Turning in strong performances were pitchers Bob Utemark, Brian Soderberg and Jeff Hausmann, said Overin, while Jeff Coble gave a fine defensive effort on the field.

Leading hitter for the team was Steve Overin, who batted .455 in the four game series.

The Wayne Town Team added two more wins to their record Sunday evening as they swept a doubleheader from Bloomfield by scores of 3-1 and 13-3.

In the first game of the twin bill, Wayne's Jerry Goeden tossed a nifty one-hitter, that one hit coming off of Steve True in the first inning which scored Bloomfield's lone run. Goeden pitched the full seven innings in picking up the win, walking only two and striking out eight Wayne batters.

Numerous Area Students Receive WS Scholarships

Nine high school graduates from Wayne, three from Wakefield and one from Winside were among 61 graduates of 22 Nebraska schools who have been awarded Cooperating School Scholarships for study at Wayne State College. The scholarships provide full tuition at WSC for the 1983-84 school year.

To each high school that cooperates in the Wayne State student-teaching program, the college offers one scholarship in exchange for every five college students who perform directed teaching. Selection of seniors to receive the scholarship is the privilege of each high school.

Wayne High graduates receiving the scholarships are Kathleen Dunklau, Daniel Roberts, Jean Mayer, Katherine Junch, Pamela Renner, Diana Ranky, Douglas Nelson, Karen Wax and Nancy Lamley. Rae Ann Johnson, Constance Roberts and Terry Baker, Wakefield High graduates, and Phyllis Prince, Winside High graduate, also received the scholarships.

Other area students who will have their tuition paid by the college if they attend Wayne State this year include Gary Katten and Roger Harbeck, Emerson; Robert Morse, Denver; Dianne Stigge, Wisner, and Betty Wood, Platteau.

No Council Quorum At Monday Meeting

Four members of the Wayne city council were absent from the council meeting Tuesday night and therefore the council was unable to conduct any official business because of lack of a quorum. Council met Monday because Tuesday was Veterans' Day.

The meeting was recessed until Wednesday evening. At that time the council planned on passing resolutions relating to the city's civil defense program. The public hearings which had been scheduled for Monday night, on a sanitary sewer district and a street improvement district, will have to be advertised again for a later date.

Although unable to take any action, the council did learn from the auditor who plans on developing an area on the west edge of the city limits that he has decided to withdraw his request for an R-2 (multiple family dwelling) zone in that subdivision.

The council members present unofficially approved the plat for a "forgiveness week" in the multiple family dwelling zoning in the whole subdivision, to be known as "The Nooks." The plat had been approved except for the zoning issue at an earlier council meeting. It will now be processed and presented for final approval to the city engineer.

'Forgiveness Week' Planned at Library

Prearranging readers with overdue library books stacked on their bookshelves will have a chance to return them to the Wayne library without being fined during all of next week.

The Wayne library will hold a "forgiveness week" all next week in observance of National Children's Book Week. There will be no fines for overdue books all week regardless of how long they have been kept.

Modela Wacker, librarian, noted that all parents are invited to visit the library and look over the display of nearly 100 new children's books, at the same time they may view motion pictures, "And Something More," which depicts the many ways children may be served in the library.

WS Players Will Present 3 One-Acts

The audience will join the cast on stage for "Tonight At Eight," Wayne State Players' collection of three one-act plays to be presented arena style at Ramsey Theatre next week.

Curtain time is eight o'clock Sunday, Monday and Tuesday evenings. Three senior drama students are directing.

In "The Web," one of Eugene O'Neill's "Ten Lost Plays," Carl Schaffer plays a street walker, Rose Thomas, Ron Larson portrays her brother, Steve, and Bill Everitt is a fugitive bank robber, Tim Moran. Richard Kuebler of Crete is director of the drama of cooperation.

"The Lottery," directed by Tom Marschick of Omaha, begins with a festive air, and builds swiftly to a shattering and moving climax. The cast is composed of Jerry Hill, Sharon Williams, Gordon Tolmayer, Myron Gander, Beverly Lamm Hoffmann, Charlene Hespe, Sue Smith, Terry Wendi, Pat Brown, Ann Schneider, Gary Elbert, Nancy Timperly and Donna Turner.

Brad Ford of Wayne brings about a change of mood with his direction of a heart-warming comedy, "The Private Bar," allowing the audience a refreshing release in tension. Mark Harum is Techaik, a shy sailor; Debbie Dear plays Dorreen, and Fred Fiddelle is Techaik's playboy friend in this "boy meets girl" story.

Admission will be $1.50 with group rates available. Early reservations are encouraged, as with arena seating, seats will be limited. Box office hours are 1 to 5 p.m., or phone 375-2200, extension 35, or 375-9885.

'Mousetrap' Is Baited To Lure Crowd Friday

A "recipe for intrigue" describes the mystery, murders and moving plot of "The Mousetrap," a two-act stage production scheduled for presentation Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Wayne High lecture hall.

Eight Wayne High Thespians, each with a lead part, are ready to help the audience take one old house where more than the furniture squeaks; stir in a haunting melody for murder; slip it up into a snowstorm; mix into a bowl of questions; and let the whole thing sell for approximately 40 minutes.

"The Mousetrap" was written by Agatha Christie. Directing the Thespian production is Sherman Frey, WHS art instructor. Cast members are Chris Peterson, Ron Seymour, Joe Merriman, Anna Fleck, Mike Raier, Elaine Lundstrom, Tom Karel and Dennis Ellermeyer.

Tickets are available through the Wayne High School office or may be purchased at the door either Friday or Saturday night. Tickets for adults are one dollar, 75 cents for students and 50 cents for children 12-years-old and under.

Scout Pack 172 Reorganized at Wakefield Meet

Cub Scout Pack 172 at Wakefield met Monday evening in the high school library with about 25 Scouts and parents in attendance.

Following the pledge to the flag, Cubmaster Paul Byers announced that the den meetings will be held in the old high school building. The monthly pack meeting was set for the second Monday each month and will be held in the multi-purpose room of the elementary school.

Tom Shellington was introduced as the new Webelos leader. Webelos will be meeting at 7 p.m. on Wednesdays.

Receiving awards Monday evening were Craig Yost, who became a Wolf Scout and received his PACK 172 sash.

WHS Plans Programs

Winside Public Schools have scheduled a concert Tuesday, at 12:30 p.m., featuring Victor Ostad, an artist under the management of the Division of Supervised Study, State University, Fargo, N. D., according to Ronald Kramer, principal.

With the aid of pastel chalks, humor and a "huge" show, the artist will coordinate background music, fluorescent chalk and black lighting to transform his drawing board into scenes such as in Hawaii or a sunlit farm in the west.

In other Winside school news, parent-teacher conferences are scheduled for today (Thursday) and tomorrow from 8:40 a.m. until noon and from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m. There will be no classes in either the elementary or secondary schools during the two days.

Challenge Accepted; Game Set for Tonight

About a dozen Wayne businessmen will don sweatshirts, shorts and tennis shoes tonight (Thursday) to take up the challenge of a "do-it-yourself" business festivity at Wayne State College.

The businessmen will meet the college students in a benefit basketball game tonight at 8:30 in the city auditorium. Proceeds of the donations which will be collected during the contest will go to the business festivity at Chestnut drive. The drive has been lagging behind expectations and needs several good boosts to reach the goal of $10,000. See "CHALLENGE," page 7.

Wayne-Pender Tie, 8-8

Disappointment filled the air in the Wayne High locker room late Tuesday afternoon after the Blue Devils had to settle for an 8-8 tie with a scrappy Pender squad in the play-off for the Husker Conference crown.

The game started out with long runs and quick scoring and it looked like both teams would tally several touchdowns before the afternoon drew to a close. But stout defense by both squads later halted every sustained drive.

The tie plays Coach Allen Hansen a slight mark for the season and ups his three-year record with a Wayne High to 26-2-1. His 1982 team also won the West Husker Conference crown but lost to West Point in the play-off, 19-0. But this year's crop of gridlers defeated Pender it would have brought the Husker Conference title to Wayne for the first time since 1958.

For a complete story on that oftentimes frustrating Tuesday, please turn to the sports section of this issue of "The Wayne Herald." Accompanying will be a full page of pictures taken by a Wayne Herald photographer.

County Christmas Seal Campaign Is Underway

Members and volunteers of the Wayne County tuberculosis and respiratory disease committee have been busily engaged in the process of getting appeal letters and Christmas Seals ready for families in the county, according to Mrs. Gerald Jackson of Wayne, 1983 Christmas Seal county chairman.

Over 200 letters with Christmas Seals and return envelopes to the Wayne post office for delivery. Helping staff these letters were Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Robert Pentack, Mrs. Don Kerl, Mrs. Cal Ward and Mrs. Richard Arnt.

"Many hands make light work," said Mrs. Jackson, "and we are happy to do this annual task in the interest of good health and happiness for all. It exemplifies the real spirit of Christmas and we hope that all those who receive letters will be as willing in their response."

Mrs. Pentack, county committee chairman, noted that over $1,200 was contributed by people in the county during the 1982 Seal campaign. Of that amount 51 per cent went to the state organization for state and national projects and 49 per cent remained in Wayne County. Some of the local money amount is sent to the two Nebraska medical schools for research and some of it is used for educational purposes, Mrs. Pentack pointed out.

Sufficient funds are left in the local treasury to take care of local emergencies, such as X-rays for families who are unable to meet this expense, she said, handling the local funds this year is Ted Bahr of Wayne.

The short 1983 Christmas Seal motion picture featuring Henry Fonda will be shown almost nightly at the Gay Theater in Wayne until the end of December.

The sale of Christmas Seals across the nation officially began Wednesday. It will end at the close of the holiday season.

A STRUGGLE TO LIVE. Who is the mysterious figure casting stark terror into the hearts of boarding house residents in "The Mousetrap"? Wayne High Thespians will present the two act play at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the WHS lecture hall. There is never a dull moment as the plot unravels and identity of the killer becomes obvious.

Collins on IBP

Eddie Collins, the inimitable and popular commentator on today's farm problems, has plenty to say about the strike at Dakota's low beef packers in his column this week. The column appears on the farm page in this issue of "The Wayne Herald."

Among other things, Collins predicts that the "World War I French" which surrounds that plant will become the grave for IBP, the striking Amalgamated Workers and the farm-federators of Siouxland.

Northeast Pork Producers Host to 200 at Banquet

Members and guests of the Northeast Pork Producers Association numbered near 200 Sunday night as they met in the Student Center on the Wayne State College campus for their fourth annual banquet. Lyle DeMoss, radio personality of KZON in Omaha, was guest speaker. Three area men were named recipients of annual show awards and three were named for marketing show awards.

DeMoss told his audience that he was going to "visit" rather than "speak" to the association which includes swine producers and interested non-producers in Cedar, Dakota, Dixon, Thurston and Wayne counties.

The Omaha radio personality described some of his early experiences in advertising and selling products via the radio and noted that he would like to see more research done in selling pork.

DeMoss pointed out the population increase in the future and the necessity of learning how to feed them.

Bob Fritschien, association secretary and area swine specialist at the Northeast Station near Concord, was toastmaster for the banquet's festivities which included a brief report from Thelma Poe of Madison, president of the National Porkettes. She announced a membership goal of 1,132 Porkette members by March of 1978 and said the national membership goal was 20,000 members. The women's organization, she said, has planned a "Pork Goes to School" promotion project for 1978.

Paul Everingham of Wakefield, association awards committee chairman, was in charge of presenting the Pork Chop Award, Pork Builder Award, Pork Booster Award, and market hog show awards.

The 1978 Pork Chop Award for excellence in commercial pork production was presented to Dennis and Bernad Nordhus of Randolph. In making the presentation Everingham noted, "The Nordhus Brothers have consistently made an endeavor to improve the quality in their swine herd. They have entered market pigs in the Northeast Market Swine Show each year and have consistently placed high in the live show and the carcass division. In their swine operation they have taken advantage of new management and nutrition information to increase their overall efficiency."

Edgar Everingham of Hartington was given the Pork Builder Award. Bruening owns and operates a livestock farm just south of Hartington. His special livestock interests include the raising of purebred Poland China hogs and purebred Hereford cattle.

Everingham pointed out that Bruening started in the purebred swine business in 1939 and is currently a member of both the National and Nebraska Pork Producers Associations.

Weather

A few days of dry sky have aided farmers in getting into fields to harvest crops. Periods of sunny skies with several days of overcast tell the week's weather story.

The U. S. Weather Bureau at Norfolk forecast temperatures to average five to ten degrees below normal this week. Normal high is 45, normal low is 25 degrees. The bureau anticipates a warming trend today and Friday with lower temperatures again Saturday. Precipitation is expected to average one tenth to one quarter inch occurring as rain or snow between now and Saturday.

Harry Young of Lincoln, field supervisor for the Selective Service, spent last week auditing in the local office. The four Wayne County men leaving for induction early Thursday morning were Larry Redel, Wayne; Keith McClary of Winside; Delmar Wacker of Carroll; and Roger Schwanke of Wayne. The men were sent to Fort Ord, Calif. for training.

Hailed Dance Group Booked by WS

One of the world's most celebrated folk spectacles, Fruita, will visit Wayne on its current cross-country tour when it comes to the Rice Auditorium stage at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 20, sponsored by the Wayne State College special program series.

This will mark the second North American tour within 18 months for the Yugoslav ensemble of 45 dancers, and instructor.

The Fruita program reflects Yugoslavia's vastly varied cultures, with its long history of influence by neighboring nations and countless invasions from all directions. The result is a rich montage of customs from which the Fruita troupe draws for its exuberant dances.

Founder and director of the company is Dragošlav Džadzević, the latter name pronounced dah-joo-vee-itch. He ranks as one of the Yugoslav's foremost champions playing on the national volleyball team.

critics promptly ranked Fruita with Mexico's Ballet Folklorico—which performed at Wayne State last year—and Russia's Moseyev Dancers.

Džadzević soared to the peaks in dance as he had in athletics, after becoming the solo dancer in two established Yugoslav troupes, he formed his own company in 1964, chose a score of highly talented young dancers and set about making Fruita into his own particular creation.

The Wayne State performance is open to the general public and will be sold at the door. Admission is free to college students and faculty.

Humorous Speakers Will Vie at Laurel

Speakers from across the state will vie at the farm side of life will be competing for honors during a humorous speech contest scheduled for Laurel Saturday evening, according to Bill Norvell of Laurel, officer in the group sponsoring the contest.

The contest, which is being sponsored by the farmmasters International District 25, will be held at the Wagon Wheel Steak House in Laurel Saturday at 6:30 p.m. There will be one speaker from each of the eight districts in the state. The public is invited to attend the affair.

Robert Pentack, Mrs. Don Kerl, Mrs. Cal Ward and Mrs. Richard Arnt.

"Many hands make light work," said Mrs. Jackson, "and we are happy to do this annual task in the interest of good health and happiness for all. It exemplifies the real spirit of Christmas and we hope that all those who receive letters will be as willing in their response."

Mrs. Pentack, county committee chairman, noted that over $1,200 was contributed by people in the county during the 1982 Seal campaign. Of that amount 51 per cent went to the state organization for state and national projects and 49 per cent remained in Wayne County. Some of the local money amount is sent to the two Nebraska medical schools for research and some of it is used for educational purposes, Mrs. Pentack pointed out.

Sufficient funds are left in the local treasury to take care of local emergencies, such as X-rays for families who are unable to meet this expense, she said, handling the local funds this year is Ted Bahr of Wayne.

The short 1983 Christmas Seal motion picture featuring Henry Fonda will be shown almost nightly at the Gay Theater in Wayne until the end of December.

The sale of Christmas Seals across the nation officially began Wednesday. It will end at the close of the holiday season.

Tomato mulch
Mulch can be applied around tomato plants about the time the first fruits are forming. (Mulching too early in the spring will keep the soil cool, resulting in slow growth and shallow rooting.)
Apply at least two inches of organic mulches such as straw, compost or dried grass clippings. Fresh grass clippings can be applied in shallow layers to encourage drying rather than heating.

Mowing heights for lawns
As temperatures get higher, it's time to raise your mower height also. Raise the cutting height to 2½ inches to 3 inches. The higher mowing heights will maintain more vegetation and insulate the crown of the grass plant from high temperature stress. The higher cutting heights should also be maintained in shaded areas. This maintains more leaf surface to catch the limited light energy in these areas.

Propagate shrubs
Now is a good time to propagate shrubs from softwood cuttings. Plants easily rooted from softwood cuttings are euonymus, forsythia, honeysuckle, viburnum and willow.
Stems can be collected from new growth that has turned from succulent green to brown and is average in size. Cuttings should be 3 to 5 inches long with at least two nodes.
The leaves need to be removed from the bottom half of the cutting and this part treated with a rooting compound to increase rooting. Insert the cutting in a well drained container, which is covered with a plastic tent to create a humid condition.
The container should be well watered, but not soggy and be placed in bright, indirect sunlight. The cuttings should root in 3 weeks to 3 months.

Flavor of carrots
Too much nitrogen as well as prolonged hot weather will cause poor flavor in carrots.
Newspapers for a garden mulch
Weigh the paper with clods of dirt. About eight layers of paper is adequate.

Cole crops
Now through the middle of July is the ideal time to start many cole crops from seed in your garden.
Cabbage, kohlrabi and broccoli (in that order) are the easiest to grow, cauliflower and brussels sprouts are more difficult. Later maturing strains of these cole crops are best suited for the fall garden.
Seed an entire area previously planted to lettuce, peas, spinach, or snap beans to one of the cole crops. Do not plant cole crops in areas where radishes or vine crops have been harvested.

ALTHOUGH FEW
Many cases of animal heatstroke are the result of human negligence, according to Duane Rice, University of Nebraska extension veterinarian.
Heatstroke is a condition characterized by disturbance in the body's heat-regulating mechanism that allows hyperthermia (elevated temperature) to occur. When an animal is confined and cannot seek relief, the incidence of heatstroke increases, Rice said. Confinement can occur in automobiles,

Wet conditions cause soybean stand damage

"It's not so much the flooding situation, but the fact that we've had almost continuous rain that is causing a lot of the poor stands of soybeans in the Midwest," says Dr. Leroy Svec, a technical services agronomist for the Agrisow and O's Gold Seed Companies.
Svec says the wet conditions have promoted the development of fungus diseases which have killed stands that were getting established, and prevented other soybean stands from getting started. A common name for either occurrence is "damping-off."
Soybean seedlings that have been in wet ground for an extended period, over 48 hours, are susceptible to damping-off. The fungi (the most prevalent is Pythium) attack the seedling and cause a disease which kills the plant. Other seedling fungi have developed this year which have attacked emerged plants.

Two of these fungi are Fusarium Root Rot and Rhizoctonia Root Rot. In some instances, this spring's continual rains and standing water have rotted the seed before it had a chance to grow.
IF THE SOYBEAN plants are up, and the field is submerged for more than 48 hours, the plants can also die from the water-logged conditions, Svec says. "This length-of-submergence in the water is just a general guideline, I don't know of any hard and fast rules. But within a day after the water recedes, you'll be able to assess the stand damage. It will be obvious there will be dead tissue on affected plants. Decomposition is a rapid process if plants have been under water too long."
Svec says damage to stands that have been under water for less than 48 hours is usually not severe, but he cautions that fields that have water moving across them will sustain more damage than fields where the water backs up and then recedes.

At this late date, Svec says soybean stands of 50 percent or more of the original population, with fairly uniform plant spacing, should be left in the field and not replanted.
"There's data to indicate that if you have greater than 50 percent of the stand left, you're better off leaving the stand and letting the remaining soybeans compensate by producing higher yields per plant."
"He says that in 30-inch rows, a 50 percent stand means four plants per foot of row. In 10-inch drilled rows it's 1½ plants per foot of row. Fields with stands which have large skips in the rows, or flooding damage that takes out whole areas of the field, need to be replanted, Svec says.

SVEC SAYS ONE of the critical areas to look at with a reduced stand is weed control. "If the stand is reduced, the thinner canopy won't help as much to restrict weed pressure. One of the keys to a replant decision is whether or not you will be able to control weeds in the reduced stands using either chemical or mechanical means.
"If the grower decides to replant, he probably won't have to go in and re-apply his pre-emergence herbicide, but will have to watch closely for developing weed problems and control them through cultivation and post-emergence sprays," he says.

Svec says until approximately June 27, growers will be better off planting mid-season, adapted varieties. After the first of July and on into July, they may need to go to earlier season varieties.
"There have been situations where farmers have planted as late as July 10 and received a fair yield from replanted fields," Svec says. "Yield will be reduced because of the lateness of planting, but they should have a chance at a reasonable crop."

Especially in late planting situations, narrow row spacings can increase yields to offset some of the yield loss. Svec says growers may want to go to narrower rows, skip-row planting or drilled soybeans. He says that higher planting populations are recommended for narrower rows: in the range of 180,000 to 200,000 plants per acre as opposed to 140,000 to 150,000 plants per acre in conventional rows.

ONE OF THE FACTORS in a replant situation is the availability of seed, especially with the short seed production last year, Svec says. There is seed available, but in limited amounts, and with a limited variety selection.
It is questionable whether replanted corn will recover the planting costs at this date. Svec says if replanting corn ground to soybeans, consider whether or not the herbicide used on corn is detrimental to soybeans. Also consider the herbicide's persistence. In certain areas in the western parts of the corn belt, grain sorghum can be considered for replanting in either drowned soybean or corn fields.
Svec says he's been answering several calls a day from growers with questions about replanting. He says he can offer advice on seed and soil questions, but the final replant decision is up to the individual. "The best thing to do is consider the options for your operation and base your decisions on them," he says.

the farmer's wife

Last Sunday, the World-Herald ran an article about a farmer who made money last year. He has his land paid for, and he didn't have to borrow to operate.
He's 68 years old, owns 160 acres, and "lives" in the hog barn with his farrowing operation. Again, we see the good old work ethic: seven days a week, up at night when the baby pigs arrive, no vacations; and he cleared $14,000 last year.
Our family of six could not live on $14,000; and we are not "high steppers." Plus, if you figure what should be earned on his investment at 12% interest, and/or, even a minimum wage for his time, $14,000 is not enough compensation.
"Nurses who work 40 hours a week and teachers who work nine months a year are striking for higher wages than that. I'm not putting him down. I wish we didn't have to borrow money. But we do, and we spent more on interest last year than we did for cost of living.
"Comes the governor with a plan to subsidize our interest bill at 5%. This would be a tremendous help, but who would benefit the most? Is he going to give this tax break to any individual, or business that owns farm land?
"What strikes me, as did the first story, is the bit about 16 hours a day, seven days a week, 52 weeks a year. Aren't farmers supposed to take days off? Are they expected to forego vacations?
Sure, I know some who raise grain exclusively who have taken long winter vacations, but they are not that common. Most are like my Big Farmer, who believes no one has any business leaving on vacation if he's having trouble paying his bills. Or—if his work's not done. When is the livestock man's work ever done?
I HEARD concerns last week about not being able to pass on land to sons and daughters; about men retirement age who cannot retire because the next generation would go under. I sympathize with the desire to keep land that's been "in the family" for three or four generations.
But I remember the German couple in the book about Nebraska pioneers written by a Nebraska pioneer, Bess Streeter Aldrich. I know the only granddaughter of Bess, and she has the original manuscript of "A Lantern In Her Hand." The couple I'm referring to work and do without in order to buy more land and hand it on to their children.
That German work ethic is still around. Harder to find, perhaps, but still in evidence.
Lorraine Carl says they should never have put lights on tractors. A friend from Florida writes that she has noticed that some farmers don't even relax when they do take a vacation.
It seems they don't plan for leisure time, and don't know what to do with it when they have some. Many don't tolerate retirement.
I FIND myself getting paranoid about vacations. Remember my snide comments last winter? It's even worse in the summer. Last week, on the way to work, I met a van with a camper behind it, and a pickup pulling a boat. I made a face at both of them.
I have a friend with a big front porch on her farmhouse who says she's never sat on it. The Big Farmer and I had our coffee on our porch the other morning, and I vowed we would do that more often. We talked and planned and communicated.
"Once upon a time, there was time." Time for reading, writing letters, thinking, visiting, making a resolution today to take time. Life is too short to spend every minute working. Amen. End of sermon.
Most farm wives in the area took the day off on Friday and attended the Farm Wife Luncheon. This unique, annual affair is hosted by the Wayne Chamber and is a huge success.
The speaker this year was Shirley Lueth from Aurora. I ached from laughing as she described the "joys" of motherhood. If you grocery men noticed a run on saran wrap over the weekend, it was for a good cause!

Help your trees to beat the weeds

If you have planted a new windbreak this spring, you should be aware that the job is just begun. The care you give the new seedlings for the first years will determine the success of the planting.
Trees are like any other plants, weed competition for available moisture puts stress on them. This stress can result in high mortality and slow growth rate for the trees that survive.
Several methods are available to landowners to control weeds in tree plantings:
• Hand hoeing or roto tilling around the trees is excellent but time consuming.
• Machine cultivating — probably will not control all weeds in the row.
• And herbicide banded over the free row.
Simply mowing around the trees will slightly reduce the moisture consumption by weeds, but is not nearly as effective as eliminating the weeds.
To use for weed control in trees is Pre-emergent herbicide controls most annual broadleaf weeds and grasses when applied in early spring or fall. It should be placed in the top 1-3 inches of soil before weed seed germination.
One-half to one and one-half (½ to 1½) inches of rain within seven days after application is needed to incorporate the herbicide.
Irrigation is recommended if rainfall does not come within the seven day period. Native sod (perennials) and bromes must be killed (plow or contact herbicide) in order for Pre-emergent 80W to give satisfactory results.
To control weeds between tree rows, you may want to plant milt or seed a warm season grass that does not compete for surface moisture.
For further information on weeds or any other problems on tree plantings, contact your local Natural Resource District or Soil Conservation Service office.

Roundup riders wanted
River City Roundup is looking for 500 riders to hit the trail on horseback or in the giant Omaha celebration next fall.
Rider recruiting posters have been spread across Iowa and Nebraska and the two "trail bosses," Gary Lewis of Ogallala for the Nebraska ride and Warren Bartels of Council Bluffs for the Iowa Pony Express Riders, said riders already are starting to report in for all or part of the rides.
The Nebraska ride will start Saturday, Sept. 15 as part of the Ogallala centennial celebration. Over the next nine days, it will wind its way eastward 325 miles to Omaha, picking up more riders as it goes. Along the way, public barbecues and community welcomes are scheduled at Gothenburg, Lexington, Kearney, Grand Island, Wahoo and Waterloo.
The Iowa ride will start Thursday, Sept. 20 at Atlantic, and follow Route 6 through Oakland and 92 into Omaha.
The two rides will meet Saturday morning, Sept. 22 at 16th and Leavenworth Streets to take part in a huge parade in downtown Omaha. Later that night they will make a grand entry at the Ak-Sar-Ben rodeo. Sunday, the riders will make a grand entrance at the River City Roundup barbecue at Ak-Sar-Ben Field.
There is no fee for entering and riders can stay with the group as long as they want. Each day's ride will be about 25 miles, plus a trailer haul to the night's stopover point. Prizes will be awarded for various categories of riders and vehicles. Feed and lodging will be provided for horses, the trail bosses should contact Gary Lewis at Cactus Jack's Western Wear, 221 North Spruce, Ogallala, NE 69153. Iowa riders should contact Warren Bartels through the River City Roundup office, PO Box 6253, Omaha, NE 68106.

Till-Age Field Day
The Conservation Till-Age Field Day, scheduled for July 12 near Walthill, will feature a variety of equipment designed for reduced tillage situations. "We want to give farmers a close look at these systems in a side-by-side field comparison," says Andrew Christiansen, Thurston County Extension Agent.
"In addition to the planters and grain drill, we will have three pieces of tillage equipment that can be used in conjunction with the planters and drill."
The program will begin with the equipment demonstration at 3 p.m., ½ mile north of Walthill. The second part of the field day will be a demonstration of the effects of residue, using the University of Nebraska rain simulator. "The simulator gives a graphic example of soil and water runoff and the importance of residue management," according to Christiansen.
A bus tour of plots will follow the demonstrations. Stops will include high residue cultivators, no-till corn in soybean and alfalfa residue, till planted corn in sweet clover residue, drilled beans in forage sorghum residue and parallel terrace systems.
"The recent rains demonstrated the need for a systems approach to erosion. The tour will highlight parts of the best systems we saw, including terraces, waterways and residue management," says Christiansen.
The tour will conclude with a meal sponsored by the equipment demonstrators. The project is part of a combined effort of the Cooperative Extension Service, Soil Conservation Service and Middle Missouri Natural Resource District. Thurston County is one of seven Nebraska Counties targeted for intensive educational efforts supported by Gov. Kerrey, the N.U. Foundation and Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Human negligence can cause animal heatstroke

Heatstroke can be prevented by providing shade, water, and fans. Heatstroke is a condition characterized by disturbance in the body's heat-regulating mechanism that allows hyperthermia (elevated temperature) to occur. When an animal is confined and cannot seek relief, the incidence of heatstroke increases, Rice said. Confinement can occur in automobiles, transport crates, swine confinement areas, cattle feedlots or calf housing.
An animal can also suffer heatstroke if chained or tethered in a shadeless area.
Other factors which contribute to heatstroke are deprivation of water, the breed and anatomy of the animal, sweating and panting, ability, physical condition and age. Rice said obese animals, those with long hair, and the very old and young are more susceptible to heatstroke.
To prevent heatstroke, farmers, ranchers and pet owners should take note of weather and animal conditions. Rice said heatstroke can occur anytime a temperature in the high 80s F is combined with high percent relative humidity.
"There is always danger at 100 F even when sometimes the humidity is down as low as 25 percent. To 30 percent," he said.
"Observe the Livestock Safety Index when animals may be exposed to undue stress and excitement — pay attention to the humidity and the temperature.
OTHER MEASURES THAT can be taken to prevent heatstroke in animals include:
• Provide a clean, shaded environment.
• Never leave animals in a confined area without supervision.
• Avoid any circumstances that inhibit the animal from seeking his own relief.
• And keep the animal clean and free of insects and discomfort.
Owners can recognize heatstroke in animals from excessive panting and uneasiness. As heatstroke progresses, rapid breathing, staring eyes, vomiting and collapse can occur.
If signs of heatstroke in animals should appear, a veterinarian should be called immediately, Rice said. The animal also should promptly be removed from the hot environment and be gradually cooled with water. Professional help is a must as body blood chemistry is changed considerably and may cause death if not corrected.

4-H members conclude citizenship trip to the east

By Cindy Berg
After two weeks of traveling all over the east coast on a chartered bus, it was good to be back home. But, the 4-H Citizenship Shortcourse Trip is something I'll never forget. I wouldn't have missed it for the world!

The first day was spent traveling. That day was filled with unfamiliar faces soon to be familiar, card games and lots of sleeping. That evening we were all glad to hear that we were in Joliet, Ill. and that we could stop traveling for the day.

The second day we traveled to Dearborn, Mich. where we saw the Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village. We spent all afternoon there. Greenfield Village was really interesting because it was like a huge version of the Sturh Museum and Pioneer Village put together. While I was there I got to ride on an old fashioned steamboat.

That night we went to the Detroit Tiger's stadium to see the Toronto Blue Jays baseball game. The Blue Jays won 8-4. The next day we toured the Cadillac factory in Detroit. It was fascinating how they lowered the body of the car from the ceiling onto the chassis which was on a conveyor belt near the floor and it fit perfectly every time.

Then it was on to Canada. First we went to a tobacco farm and saw a whole different way of life. The farm we visited did all of their work by hand, so they have a busy harvest season which is during July and August.

AFTER WE LEFT the tobacco farm we drove to Niagara Falls. I was impressed! The view was breathtaking. That evening we went back to the falls to have supper at the top of the elegant "Minto" tower. We enjoyed a four course meal, 26 floors in the air.

From the windows of the tower we had a perfect view of the lighted falls.

The next day we drove out of Canada and into New York state. We drove all day until we got to Boston, Mass. that evening.

On June 8, we toured Boston all morning and most of the afternoon. In the morning we went to the John F. Kennedy library and museum. There we saw many of Kennedy's original items and Kennedy memorabilia from his childhood on up to his presidency. The location of the library was right by the Atlantic Ocean, which also made it special.

IN THE AFTERNOON we

went to the Quincy Market Square. It was like a little town in itself. There were open-air markets and shops, big mall areas, and lots of restaurants. We even got to see some break dancers that were out trading dance steps with each other.

After we left the market we boarded the U.S.S. Constitution, better known as "Old Ironsides." It's the oldest fully commissioned warship in the world and it's still a part of the U.S. Navy. After touring the ship we went to the U.S.S. Constitution museum.

The rest of the day was spent traveling to New London, Conn.

The sixth day of the trip was spent in New York City. First we went through Harlem and the Bronx. I never thought that people actually washed their laundry out on the street with water from a fire hydrant, but they do. I've never seen so much graffiti and trash!

We also saw 5th Avenue and Hollywood.

After the driving tour we boarded a huge ship to go on a three hour tour of Manhattan Sound Island. It was really neat. We got to go up pretty close to the Statue of Liberty but you could hardly see her for all of the scaffolding.

WHEN WE GOT off the ship we went to the World Trade Towers. We went 110 floors up to the top. The elevators went so fast that it only took five seconds to get from one floor to another. At the top we had a birdseye view of all of New York.

From there we went to the United Nations building and got to see all the conference rooms and various gifts from other countries that were put on display.

That evening we ate supper at the hotel and learned that New York City has a 65% sales tax — the hard way. A small tossed salad and a glass of ice tea costs $7.25.

After supper we walked six blocks to Radio City Music Hall. The walking was worth it because the show was spectacular! We saw the musical "Gotta Getaway" featuring the Rockettes.

The next morning we all went to mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral. It was beautiful, every window was made of stained glass.

After the half hour mass we took a driving tour and saw Sac's Department Store, the Rockefeller Plaza and we also went in an underwater tunnel which is located under the same body of water in which we took the boat tour the previous day.

The next stop was in Philadelphia where we viewed and touched the Liberty Bell. Then we took a horsedrawn buggy ride/tour around some historical points in Philadelphia.

FROM THERE we traveled to the National 4-H Center near Washington, D.C. After we got settled into the campus' dorm rooms, ate and went to an orientation meeting, we took the bus and toured. We saw night views of the Lincoln Memorial, Washington Monument and the White House.

The morning of June 11, we had breakfast, went to workshops at the Center (our home for the next week) and took a field trip to the Kennedy Center for Performing Arts. There we got to see a girl that was a sophomore play two pieces of memorized music on the piano. She sounded fantastic! She said that she practiced two to three hours every day when she's going to school and four to five hours every day in the summer. No wonder she's so good!

Then we took a short lunch break on the roof of Kennedy Center. The man that was our tour guide said that 4-H members on the trip are the only people that are allowed to eat up there.

In the afternoon we visited Arlington National Cemetery and saw the changing of the guard.

THEN WE went to the Washington Cathedral. It was huge. There were many beautiful, smaller chapels within the church.

From there we went to the Vietnam Memorial and the two Jima Statue.

We then returned to the 4-H Center for supper and workshops.

The next morning all the Nebraska delegates from the 4-H Center got on their buses and went to the Nebraska Breakfast. There were met our senators and congressmen.

We returned to the 4-H Center, where we had free time for the rest of the afternoon. That evening we went to assemblies and a dance.

June 13 was the morning that we went to Capitol Hill. There we toured the capitol and saw the Supreme Court Building. We also went to legislative committee hearings.

In the evening we took the metro subway to the U.S. Navy summer music and slide festival.

The next day we went to Mount Vernon and saw where George and Martha Washington lived, entertained guests, died and where they're buried. It was especially interesting because a lot of the things there were the originals.

The 15th we went to the National Zoological Park and saw the famous giant Pandas Hsing-Hsing and Ling-Ling, along with many other unusual and amusing animals.

IN THE afternoon we went to the Smithsonian Institute and saw Fonzil's famous leather jacket, all the first ladies' dresses and much, much more. We also went to the Museum of Natural History and the Museum of American History.

That evening at the 4-H Center there was one last "going-away" dance.

The next morning we left the 4-H Center and traveled until we got to Pennsylvania. There we ate at an Amish Restaurant that had super good food. Then we took a driving tour around an Amish village. I've never seen so many horses and buggies, in my life!

We drove the rest of the day until we got to Washington, Pennsylvania. That evening we went to a dinner theater and saw the play, "Camelot."

June 17 we drove all morning and most of the afternoon until we got to Indianapolis, Ind. where we took one lap around the Indy 500 raceway. That night we stayed in Bloomington, Ill.

The last day was spent traveling. We arrived at the Wayne courthouse at 3:30 p.m. That afternoon there were many tearful goodbyes from many newfound friends.

Cockroach control is found

A spray-on birth control chemical for cockroaches is the latest weapon developed to fight this pest.

The new chemical, called hydroprene and made by a commercial firm, was found in tests to prevent the birth of offspring, a U.S. Department of Agriculture researcher said.

Hydroprene works by mimicking the hormone that governs the time when young roaches become adults, said Richard S. Patterson, an entomologist for USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

Patterson, based in Gainesville, Fla., said hydroprene locks roaches into a state of sexual immaturity. He and University of Florida entomologist Philip G. Koehler evaluated the commercially synthesized chemical.

WHEN ROACHES are sprayed during the nymph stage they will grow and live out their normal life spans, Patterson said, but their matings produce no offspring.

Besides thwarting reproduction, he said, hydroprene produces twisted wings, a phenomenon that visually marks roaches succumbing to spraying. "Hydroprene looks promising for controlling roaches in places where conventional spray programs have not worked well, particularly large apartments, warehouses and military complexes," Patterson said.

"Even under the best conditions, roach control is not a one-shot proposition," he said. "After spraying, some roaches pick up only sub-lethal doses; others manage to avoid contact with sprayed surfaces."

TO COMPLICATE MATTERS many roaches develop evolutionary resistance to a control chemical, while others become partially resistant to it, he said.

"A one-two punch to overcome such problems can be built into existing roach spray products by mixing them with hydroprene," Patterson said.

"The regular spray makes a heavy initial kill that brings the population down to an acceptable level," he said. "Hydroprene then works over the next six or seven months to curb the birth rate."

He said a single spraying throughout a 100-unit apartment complex was found eight months later to have cut the roach population by 95 percent. He tested the chemical for about a year at the research agency's Gainesville insect laboratories.

Hydroprene is classified by scientists as an insect growth regulator, Patterson said. The commercial chemical is in the final stages of processing for registration by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Insect treatment decision needs to be made now

It's decision-making time for European corn borer and greenbug control, according to Dave Keith, University of Nebraska extension entomologist.

Light trap date and field reports indicate that borer moth activity and egg laying are on the decline in most areas of the state. "Early planted fields should be carefully checked now since treatment time is short," he said. "Once most of the borers have entered the sides of plants, insecticides will be ineffective."

Worksheets to help farmers with treatment decisions are available from local Cooperative Extension Service offices.

Greenbugs will increase. Heavy greenbug infestations have been reported in Cass, Nemaha, Johnson, Seward, Otoe and Gage counties, and scattered light to moderate infestations are occurring west to McCook. Seeding sorghum (emergence to 4 inches) should probably be treated now if plants are beginning to yellow and greenbug colonies are present, Keith said.

"Farmers should keep an eye on the greenbug since they will be increasing," he said. Rescue treatments on seedling-stage milo may keep the plants relatively clean for some time, provided the flight was over at the time of treatment.

"Otherwise," Keith said, "the milo may need treatment again to prevent damage."

NU research has shown that mid-season buildup can be prevented by treating susceptible sorghums when greenbugs are at relatively low infestation levels, around July 10. The net result was increase yields.

"Also," Keith said, "we are now dealing with Blatye E, which can attack all lines, including those resistant to greenbugs."

Treatment information is available from local extension offices.

card of thanks

Those who hold so dear Never truly leave us... They live on in the kindness they showed, the comfort they shared, and the love they brought into our lives. The warmth and acts of kindness shown to Mark during his illness were a source of joy for him. He enjoyed every card and shared many of them with his nurses and his family. His spirits were always high, and his smile never faded. He was an inspiration to all he came in contact with. The tremendous support received from so many friends and relatives after his death is a tribute we will always cherish. He touched the lives of so many in such special ways. Thank you for the prayers, visits, memorials, and food brought to the home and furnished at the church. A special thank you to the American Legion for the impressive tribute paid to a special, honorable man. Your compassion, love and generosity have helped his family so much in this time of sorrow. The family of Mark Dendinger [5]

WE WISH TO express our sincere thank you to the many friends, relatives, and neighbors for their flowers, food, memorials and kind words of sympathy at the time of our loss. A special thank you to the staff of the Wayne Care Center, to Drs. Lindau and French and to Pastor Monson for his many visits and kind words. Thank you to Pastor VonSeggern and to the St. Pauls Lutheran Church of Emerson for allowing us to use their facilities and for the nice lunch following the services. Thank you to Steve Schumacker for his helpfulness in making all the arrangements. Mrs. Heenan Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford-Peters & Lisa, Mr. & Mrs. Norman Luschen & family, Mr. and Mrs. Manfred Peters and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Johnson and family. [5]

I WANT TO THANK all my friends, relatives and neighbors for the cards and visits while I was in the Lutheran Hospital in Norfolk, Gustav Han. [5]

In Wayne's early days, the center of community activities was the frame opera house. The structure was built on the corner of Fifth and Main streets. Entertainment at the hall included show troupes from eastern centers, home-talent plays, concerts by bands and other musical groups, campaign speeches and patriotic addresses.
